The Coastal Delaware National Wildlife Refuge Complex, which includes Prime Hook and Bombay Hook National Wildlife Refuges (NWR), protects one of the largest remaining expanses of tidal salt marsh habitats in the mid-Atlantic region and is home to migratory birds, horseshoe crabs, and terrapins. Buildings at these locations had serious maintenance issues, including foundation issues, substantial energy inefficiencies, and poor conditions that required full replacement of all utility infrastructure. This project replaced the geographically dispersed deteriorating facilities at Bombay Hook NWR with a new Headquarters and Visitor Center facility. At Prime Hook NWR, this project replaced the visitor contact station and a multi-purpose building which includes office space, visitor orientation, exhibition space, and classrooms. These new facilities are safer, more efficient, and promote public engagement and natural resource education.

Rehabilitate Ramsey House

First State National Historical Park is made up of sites spread throughout Delaware and Pennsylvania that preserve and protect early Dutch, Swedish, and English settlements and commemorates the role Delaware played in the birth of the United States as the first State to ratify the Constitution. The historic 1830s Ramsey House and the Ramsey Barn in Brandywine Valley have deteriorated and are currently closed to the public. This project will restore the Ramsey House and the Ramsey Barn foundation ruins while rehabilitating the site's entrance drive and parking area. When the restored house and barn foundation ruins are open to the public, they will enable park staff to convey stories of the Brandywine Valley. Site rehabilitation efforts associated with the entrance drive and parking lot will protect and improve wildlife habitat.
