The New Orleans Times-Picayune (12/5, Pope) reports that a survey of scientists performed by the Associated Press shows that “the Gulf was less healthy than it was before” Transocean’s Deepwater Horizon “calamity, but scientists were mixed on the spill’s long-term impacts on the Gulf's ecosystem." The spill has spurred changes to drilling operations as "spill cams" are now being used on the ocean's seabed.

Fish And Wildlife Service

House Moderates Opposes Allowing Arctic Oil Drilling In Tax Bill.

McClatchy (12/5, Daugherty) reports that some moderate House of Representative Republicans sent "a letter to Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell urging the upper chamber to pass a tax bill without oil-drilling concessions in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge." The letter stated that "for decades, Congress has voted to prohibit oil and gas development in the Refuge, with the overwhelming support of the American public." The letter added, "support for this protection remains strong today. After years of debate, the Arctic Refuge stands as a symbol of our nation's strong and enduring natural legacy." The letter was not successful as the plan was passed by the Senate.

The Adirondack \(NY\) Daily Enterprise (12/5, Cerbone) reports that "Northern New York Congresswoman Elise Stefanik publicly opposed drilling for oil and gas in Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge on Friday after advertisements from the Wilderness Society targeted her and 12 other Republican congresspeople, asking them to vote against the Senate's GOP tax bill including a rider for Arctic drilling."

Wildlife Officials Say White-Tailed Prairie Dog In No Danger.

The AP (12/5) reports that U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials "say the white-tailed prairie dog does not need special protections under the Endangered Species Act because it's in no danger of extinction across the U.S. West." Tuesday's announcement "culminates a lengthy review of the squirrel-sized rodent's legal status." Reuters (12/5, Zuckerman) reports that "the decision was a victory for energy companies and ranchers who could have seen increased restrictions on lands that are open to oil and gas development and livestock grazing."

2018 Plan For Mexican Wolves Calls For Fostering Of Pups.

The AP (12/5, Bryan) reports that "U.S. wildlife officials have a plan for fostering as many as a dozen captive Mexican gray wolf pups with wild packs in Arizona and New Mexico in 2018." The aim of the proposal released by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is to boost genetic diversity among the endangered species." The Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (12/5, Hayden) adds that "the plan also provides for the translocation of wolves who stray outside the experimental range or which may be at risk of mating with closely-related wolves in the area."

Federal Wildlife Managers Clear Way For Walmart In Vanishing South Florida Forest.

The Miami Herald (12/5, Staletovich) reports that "federal wildlife managers on Tuesday cleared the way for a Walmart-anchored strip mall in one of the world's rarest forests, a tract of vanishing pine rockland inhabited by butterflies, bats, snakes and fragile wildflowers found no place else." According to the article, "in approving a conservation plan, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials said they do not expect the sprawling box store and mall, a parking lot or 900 apartments to threaten the survival of more than 20 endangered plants and animals — including the Miami tiger beetle — that live in the pineland." The plan "divides what was once about 90 acres of forest scattered across 138 acres near Zoo Miami into two 20-plus acre preserves connected by a pathway, with the mall and apartments at the center." The article notes that "the plan differs little from the proposal submitted by a Palm Beach County developer two years ago, despite more than 3,000 comments filed by critics with the agency during the review."

National Park Service

Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day 2017: What Happened On That Fateful Day 76 Years Ago?

USA Today (12/5, Diebel) reports that on Thursday, a ceremony will be held at the World War II Valor in the Pacific National Monument to mark the 76th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor. According to the article, "in attendance will be Pearl Harbor survivors, World War II veterans, family members and dignitaries."

NPS Predicts Annual Budget Around $1 Million For Ste. Genevieve Proposal.

The Ste. Genevieve \(MO\) Herald (12/6) reports that the National Park Service “still anticipates having six to 12 full-time employees on site of a national historical park proposed for Ste. Genevieve with operating costs of between $800,000 and $1.2 million per year, according to written testimony provided this month to the House Natural Resources Subcommittee on Federal Lands by Sue Masica, acting deputy director of the NPS in the U.S. Department of the Interior.” According to the article, “Masica made brief comments about the four bills that were on the agenda for the November 15 subcommittee hearing but a longer written statement was submitted to Congress.” Rep. Jason Smith, the bill’s sponsor in the House, “and city of Ste. Genevieve Mayor Paul Hassler spoke in support of the bill, H.R. 2888, to establish a national historical park in Ste. Genevieve.”

Work Begins At Carlsbad Caverns To Replace Elevators.

The AP (12/6) reports that “the primary elevators that take visitors below ground at Carlsbad Caverns National Park are being modernized as part of a project that began this week at the southern New Mexico tourist destination.” The National Park Service “announced the start of work Tuesday, saying it will include installing new motors and elevator cars as well as repairing and installing guide rails.” The work is “expected to be done by the end of May 2018 at a cost of about $4.7 million.”

Ioniq Hybrids Donated To National Park Service, Hyundai Says.

The Fountain Valley \(CA\) Patch (12/5, Ludwig) reports that “six Ioniq Hybrids by Hyundai were donated to the National Parks Service, it was announced on Tuesday by the Fountain Valley, CA automobile manufacturer.” According to the article, “two Ioniqs were given to each park—Blue Ridge Parkway in Virginia and North Carolina, Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area in California, and National Capital Parks (East) in Washington, D.C.” Reginald Chapple, division chief, Partnerships & Philanthropy, National Park Service, said, “The National Park Service is grateful to Hyundai for this donation, which reflects the long-standing tradition of private sector support for national parks and the National Park Service.”

Yosemite National Park To Deploy Proterra Electric Buses.

Next-Gen Transportation (12/5, Bebon) reports that “electric bus maker Proterra has announced that Yosemite National Park will add two Proterra Catalyst buses to its fleet.” Yosemite is the first national park to “permanently add zero-emission buses to its shuttle fleet, offering its visitors a modern, ecologically friendly transportation option, according to Proterra.”

Arches National Park Celebrates End Of Massive Road Project With Free Entry This Weekend.

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (12/5, Wharton) reports that Arches National Park will “waive entrance fees Saturday and Sunday to celebrate the recent completion of a monthslong road project that inconvenienced visitors and caused closures much of 2017.” The project took nine months to complete and “replaced roads that were built in the late 1950s and early 1960s.” According to the article, “the $16 million worth of road work included the resurfacing, restoration and rehabilitation of approximately 23 miles of roads and pullouts, including those along the entrance (U.S. 191) and main roads, in the campground and other spurs and loops.”

Plans To Rehab Old Negro League Baseball Park Taking Shape.

MLive \(MI\) (12/5, Burns) reports that “officials are making moves toward a plan to renovate the historic Hamtramck Stadium, a still-standing relic from a past when sports were segregated by race.” Hamtramck “hired Smith Group JJR for $76,900-plus to create a pre-development plan as a precursor to any construction, city planners announced Monday.” Hamtramck “received a $50,000 National Parks Service African American Civil Rights grant to offset the bulk of the cost.”

When ‘Star Wars’ Came To California: Documents Reveal History Behind Original Film.

MarketWatch (12/5, Cherney) reports that through the Freedom of Information Act, Marketwarch was able to “discover a bit about what the U.S. government knew about the original ‘Star Wars’ trilogy.” Director George Lucas received approval from the National Park Service to film in Death Valley National Park. Documents “include several photographs from production, as well as permit applications, a pamphlet that offers parkgoers a guided tour of the filming locations and a letter to the California Highway Patrol outlining how the production planned to film one of the scenes.”

Additional coverage was provided by the San Francisco Chronicle (12/5, Pereira).

Public Comment Sought On Refinery Proposed Near Theodore Roosevelt National Park.

The Bismarck \(ND\) Tribune (12/5, Dalrymple) reports that on Tuesday the North Dakota Department of Health said it will be accepting public comments over a proposed refinery near the Theodore Roosevelt National Park. The comments period starts Friday and a public hearing will be held in January. Meridian Energy Group has proposed the project and is likely to meet with the North Dakota PSC on the project's plans on December 19.

Office Of Insular Affairs

Interior Releases $14.9 M In Guam Compact Aid.

The Pacific News Center (12/6, Kaye) reports that the Office of Insular Affairs has "released close to 15-million in Guam Compact Aid, a bit more than mandatory funding last year for FAS migrant costs on Guam, but still not what Guam officials argue they're spending." According to the article, "the $14.9 million in mandatory Compact Impact funding will be split between GovGuam general operations and the Guam Department of Education School Leaseback Program."

US Senator Plans Legislation To Limit Trust Fund Spending.

Marianas Variety (12/5, Johnson) reports that "in response to appeals from Bikini Atoll leaders, the U.S. Interior Department disengaged from oversight of a dwindling U.S.-provided trust fund last month." On Friday, "just days after the Interior Department policy change," Sen. Lisa Murkowski "weighed in, saying spending from the trust fund must be controlled to ensure its longevity." In a letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, Murkowski "rebuked Interior for the unilateral decision to wash its hands of trust fund management that she said she learned of 'via a press release.'"

Congressional Delegation Tours St. Croix To Assess Hurricane Damage.

The Virgin Islands Consortium \(VIR\) (12/4) reports that "with more congresspeople visiting the USVI in an effort to determine the kind of aid that should be given the territory following Hurricanes Irma and Maria, Governor Kenneth Mapp continues to push for help, telling a U.S. House Committee on Energy and Commerce who visited St. Croix on Sunday that the territory requires the help of Congress in order to rebuild a stronger and more resilient infrastructure." Mapp "told the congressional leaders that more resources are required than provided for under current laws." He said, "If there is one thing I ask, it's that you seriously consider amending the Stafford Act. We don't just need to rebuild, we need more mitigation and to rebuild for the future."

Pallone Holds Roundtable After Trip To Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands. My Central Jersey (12/4) reports that Rep. Frank Pallone Jr. "met with local advocates and leaders Monday in the city to discuss his Energy and Commerce Committee Delegation weekend trip to Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands." Pallone sought comments "from the advocates on the ongoing post-Hurricane Maria recovery." According to the article, "Pallone's concerns include access to clean drinking water, the restoration of reliable power and the rebuilding of the electric grid, access to healthcare, and ensuring proper use of government funds."

Mapp Plans To Incinerate 35 Percent Of Debris. The Virgin Islands Daily News (12/5) reports that "in his hurricane recovery briefing Monday night, Gov. Kenneth Mapp said he is telling the Army Corps of Engineers to begin burning vegetation debris." Mapp said he is following "the advice of his debris management team — Agriculture Commissioner Carlos Robles; Waste Management Authority Director Roger Merritt; Planning and Natural Resources Commissioner Dawn Henry; and Public Works Acting Commissioner Nelson Petty." Mapp "said the first permit for incineration will be issued this week and he expects a second permit to be given by the end of the week."

House Panel: Proposal To 'gGet Back' American Memorial Park Requires Legal Review.

Marianas Variety (11/29, Villahermosa) reports that "the chairman of the House Committee on Federal and Foreign Affairs said the proposal that the CNMI should acquire the American Memorial Park will require a thorough legal review as it involves the islands' Covenant with the U.S." According to Rep. Gregorio Sablan Jr., chairman of the House committee, "there is a current agreement between the U.S. Department of the Interior and the CNMI government to lease the property to the federal government so it will be managed by the U.S. National Park Service." In a Tuesday meeting, "the committee decided not to take action on the resolution."

House OKs CW-1 Resolution.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (12/5, Sablan) reports that the House of Representatives has unanimously passed "a joint resolution that seeks to have the CW-1 program extended past its 2019 expiration." House Joint Resolution 20-07 now heads to the Senate for consideration.

UN Votes To Nullify Israeli Jurisdiction Over Jerusalem.

DAWN \(PAK\) (12/3, Haider) reports that "the United Nations General Assembly voted on Thursday to adopt the draft resolution 'Jerusalem' entailing 'that any actions by Israel, the occupying power, to impose its laws, jurisdiction and administration on the holy city of Jerusalem were illegal and therefore null and void'." The action "came after reports that the Trump administration was actively considering relocating its embassy to Jerusalem." The article notes that "an overwhelming 151 states voted in favour of adopting the resolution, while six states — Canada, Federated States of Micronesia, Israel, Marshall Islands, Nauru, the United States — voted against the resolution."

Additional coverage was provided by Egypt Today (12/6, Maguid).

President Moon Calls For Enhanced Ties With Pacific Island Nations.

The Korea Herald (12/5) reports that South Korean President Moon Jae-in "called for efforts to expand his country's cooperation with Pacific island countries Tuesday to jointly tackle climate change and other various global issues." Moon "had a brief meeting with foreign ministers from 13 Pacific island countries, including Papua New Guinea, Tuvalu, Nauru and Vanuatu, at the presidential office Cheong Wa Dae." The diplomats visiting "for the third South Korea-Pacific Islands Forum foreign ministers' dialogue."

Okeanos Marianas To Represent NMI At Yap Summit.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (12/1, Bautista) reports that "for the first time in eight years, the CNMI will be represented at the annual Yap Canoe Festival at the Yap Living History Museum in Colonia." According to Okeanos Sustainable Sea Transport LTD. managing director Emma Perez, "the Okeanos Marianas will represent the Commonwealth in this year's event."

Air Niugini To Upgrade Services To Cairns, Chuuk And Pohnpei.

Papua New Guinea Today (12/5) reports that "Papua New Guinea's Airline, Air Niugini will be upgrading its services to Cairns, Australia and Chuuk and Pohnpei in the Federated States of Micronesia (FSM) to cater for demand during the peak period." According to Air Niugini Chief Executive Officer Simon Foo, "ANG will be operating Boeing 737-800 series aircraft instead of the scheduled Fokker 100 and F70 aircraft." Foo explained, "This is to cater for passenger demand during the peak period as there are more seats on the B737, combined with an extra leg room for passenger convenience. There will also be upgraded business class seats on offer for passengers who wish to take those seats."

Australia's Coal-fired Diplomacy Burns Pacific Friends.

In a piece for the Interpreter \(AUS\) (11/25, Morgan), Wesley Morgan writes that Australia's "promotion of coal exports directly undermines the security of Pacific island countries." A new Foreign Policy White Paper "acknowledges climate change presents a serious threat to small island states and the coming decade will see an increased need for international disaster relief for Pacific island countries." However, "the paper also suggests Australia's economic interests remain tied to coal, the world's dirtiest fossil fuel and a chief driver of climate change."

Additional Coverage: U.S. 'Dome' Of Nuclear Waste In Enewetak Atoll Wreaking Havoc On Indigenous People.

Additional coverage of the threat posed by a nuclear waste site located in Enewetak Atoll, west of the Marshall Islands, was provided by teleSUR \(VEN\) (12/3).

Office Of Surface Mining

Interior Won't Say What It's Doing With Coal Health Study.

Bloomberg BNA (12/5, Lee) reports that the Trump Administration isn't "sharing any details about its review of a coal mining study it halted three months ago." According to the article, "Democrats and environmentalists are becoming increasingly concerned about why the Interior Department remains silent about the National Academy of Sciences study, initiated under President Barack Obama to look into the potential link between coal mining in Appalachia and the health of people living nearby." Critics "castigated Interior's ongoing silence as a notable example of poor government."

US Geological Survey

Agencies Working On Flood Warning Improvements In WV.

The Charleston \(WV\) Gazette-Mail (12/5, Ward) reports that "state and federal agencies are working on a proposal they hope will lead West Virginia lawmakers to better fund a network of stream gauges that are important links in the state's flood warning system, lawmakers were told Tuesday." According to the article, "officials from the state Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Management and the West Virginia Conservation Agency told a legislative interim committee that they would have a proposal prepared in time for the committee's next monthly meeting in January, just before the state of the 2018 regular session." The article notes that "the current year's cost of the stream gauge network is about $1.8 million, with more than three-quarters of that coming from the U.S. Geological Survey and other federal agencies."

Additional Reading.

- Researchers Trying To Determine How Much Hampton Roads Is Sinking. Hampton Roads \(VA\) Virginian-Pilot (12/5, Adhikusuma).
- ESPA Groundwater Users Face Flow Meter Deadline. Salem \(OR\) Capital Press (12/5, O'Connell).

Opinion Pieces

The Right Move On Monuments.

In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (12/5) welcoming President Trump's decision to reduce two national monuments in Utah. The Journal says the move brings an end to federal overreach and restores power to local citizens.,

Time For Trump To Follow Through On Coal Promises In Arizona.

In an op-ed for The Hill (12/5, Bearson), Darren Bearson, the president of Compass Point Strategies, supports keeping the Navajo Generating Station "open long into the future." Bearson argues that "in Arizona and around the nation, a diverse power grid is essential to energy reliability." Bearson points to an analysis released early last month by Quanta as "perhaps the most sobering perspective yet of the potential impact of closure." According to Bearson, "becoming overly reliant upon a fuel like natural gas weakens the grid because it removes the most reliable and available resource of all from the pool and opens the door to conditions like those outlined in the Quanta study: blackouts, brownouts and looming questions about the stability of the grid."

Additional Reading.

- Monuments Executive Order: Not The First Time. National Review (12/5, Regan).
- America's Worst Idea: Donald Trump's Dismantling Of Our Natural Heritage. Huffington Post (12/5, Sierra).
- Trump Admin Makes An Odd Argument While Giving Away Federal Land. MSNBC (12/5, Benen).
- Commentary: Trump's Action To Cut Bears Ears Is A Historic Injustice. Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (12/6, Bowekaty, Filfred).
- Editorial: Our Shrinking National Monuments. San Francisco Chronicle (12/6).
- Trump Gives Away Public Lands To Special Interests. Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (12/5, Morrill).
- A Monumental Mistake. Eugene \(OR\) Register-Guard (12/6).
- This Land Is Your Land Newport News \(VA\) Daily Press (12/5).
- Don't Count On A Utah Shale Oil Boom Despite President Trump Actions. USA Today.
- Selling This Cherished Arctic Landscape To The Highest Bidder Is A Grievous Mistake. The Guardian \(UK\) (12/5, Van Noppen).

- Upgrading The Indiana Dunes To A National Park Is A Horrible Idea. Chicago Tribune (12/6, Nagle).
- Trump's Criticism Of Big-Game Trophy Hunting Could Help Bring Real Change. U.S. News & World Report (12/5, Pacelle).
- Congress: Use Disaster Relief To Stop Megafires. Newton \(IA\) Daily News (11/30, Moats).
- Michelle Carr & Robert Littiken: Battling Megafires Across Our Country Takes A Toll Here In Illinois. Southern Illinoisan (12/6, Carr, Littiken).
- Connelly: A Settlement Signals Coal's Last Legs In Northwest. Seattle Post-Intelligencer (12/6, Connelly).

Top National News

Trump To Recognize Jerusalem As Israel's Capital.

Reports that President Trump is expected to announce Wednesday that the US will recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel cast the move as a major shift in US policy. Outlets also cast the President's decision as being made despite warnings by leaders in the region.

The New York Times (12/5, A1, Landler, Halbfinger) says the "symbolically fraught move... would upend decades of American policy and upset efforts to broker peace between Israel and the Palestinians." Palestinian officials said Trump told President Mahmoud Abbas that the US would move the embassy to Jerusalem, but American officials "said such a move could not occur immediately for logistical reasons." As a result, Trump is expected to sign a waiver that "would authorize the Administration to keep it in Tel Aviv for an additional six months."

Saying "many fear to inflame tensions in Middle East," NBC Nightly News (12/5, story 2, 2:20, Holt) reported the President told the leaders of Israel, Egypt, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, and the Palestinians on Tuesday he will recognize Jerusalem as Israel's capital. Andrea Mitchell said the move will pit the US and Israel "against most world leaders," and was made "despite warnings from Turkey, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and all NATO allies that this could kill hopes for peace in the Middle East."

Reuters (12/5) reports Abbas, Jordan's King Abdullah, Egyptian President Abdel Fattah al-Sisi and Saudi King Salman, "who all received phone calls from Trump, joined a mounting chorus of voices warning that unilateral US steps on Jerusalem would derail a fledgling US-led peace effort and unleash turmoil in the region." Israel, however, welcomed Trump's decision.

Bloomberg News (12/5, Jacobs) reports that while "many details about what Trump may announce remain vague," both Abbas and Abdullah warned Trump against it, with Abdullah saying it would "have serious implications for security and stability in the Middle East" and will "fuel the feelings of Muslims and Christians." Saudi Arabia's foreign ministry expressed its "deep concerns" about the potential move, while Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan threatened to cut off ties with Israel if Trump goes forward with the move.

The Jerusalem Post (12/5) reports Palestinian officials described Trump's move as a "death knell" to a two-state solution and "to any US role in its future diplomatic engagement with Israel." Reuters (12/5) reports state-run media quoted the Saudi king as saying "such a dangerous step is likely to inflame the passions of Muslims around the world."

Bret Baier began Fox News Special Report (12/5) by saying Trump is preparing to "pull the trigger on a move that allies warn could inflame an already volatile Middle East," and Wolf Blitzer said on CNN's Situation Room (12/5) that once Trump officially announces his decision on Jerusalem, there will be a "very real threat of potentially widespread violence."

The AP (12/5, Lee, Federman) reports Trump "forged ahead Tuesday with plans to recognize Jerusalem as Israel's capital despite intense Arab, Muslim and European opposition to a move that would upend decades of US policy and risk potentially violent protests." Administration officials Tuesday, however, were "still debating the particulars of the president's expected speech as they fielded a flood of warnings from allied governments." On the CBS Evening News (12/5, story 4, 2:25, Glor), Seth Doane said "officials in the Trump Administration have said some of these moves could jump start peace," but "it's unclear when this might happen, if at all."

Calling the move "a momentum shift in US foreign policy," ABC World News Tonight (12/5, story 4, 2:20, Muir) said "some world leaders are very concerned about this move and potential flare-up." Martha Raddatz said as President Trump called Arab leaders, "one after another prompting new alarm. ... Egypt's president saying a move could undermine peace opportunities. Jordan's king saying it will provoke Muslims and Christians alike, and the Palestinian President calling it unacceptable with various Palestinian factions calling for three days of rage." White House press secretary Sarah Sanders said the five leaders Trump spoke with Tuesday are "hardly indicative of everybody across the globe," but Raddatz noted that "there is no other country in the world that has its embassy in Jerusalem." The Washington Post (12/5, Morris, Eglash) likewise notes that "no other countries have their embassies in Jerusalem, with a long-standing international consensus that the city's status should be decided in a peace deal between Israelis and Palestinians."

The Los Angeles Times (12/5, Zavis, Bennett, King) reports that asked later in the day "whether Trump had made up his mind," Sanders said, "The President, I would say, is pretty solid in his thinking at this point." She declined, however, "to say what he had decided, but said the president would make a statement on the policy Wednesday." Politico (12/5, Restuccia, Toosi) says it is "unclear precisely when Trump intends to move the US Embassy," but "White House aides said the president is determined to eventually move" it.

USA Today (12/6, Korte) reports Administration officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity ahead of Trump's official announcement, said the President would portray the move "as an acknowledgment of a historical and political fact: That Jerusalem has always been Israel's capital city and seat of government." CNN (12/5, Diamond, Gaouette) likewise reports on its website that the Administration cast the move as a "recognition of reality" that Jerusalem has long been the seat of the Israeli government. The Washington Times (12/5, Boyer) quotes an Administration official as saying, "It doesn't change the status quo with respect to the holy sites. We are leaving space for the peace process to move forward."

The Wall Street Journal (12/5, Schwartz, Nissenbaum, Jones) says that by declaring Jerusalem the capital now, Trump can delay the embassy relocation while still fulfilling part of his campaign pledge. Barak Ravid Of Israel's Channel 10 News writes for Axios (12/5) that "White House officials think Trump's decision to follow through on his campaign promise – even if only partially – strengthens his credibility around the world as a someone who stands by his word, isn't intimidated by threats, and doesn't cave to international pressure."

The Washington Post (12/5, Morris, Eglash), however, reports European leaders also have urged Trump "not to make any radical changes" regarding the Jerusalem's status. French President Emmanuel Macron "told him in a telephone call that the city's status needed to be decided in peace talks between Israelis and Palestinians," and German Foreign Minister Sigmar Gabriel said in an address that such a decision would have "far-reaching consequences" and could prove "counterproductive."

In addition to world leaders, NBC Nightly News (12/5, story 2, 2:20, Holt) said the Secretaries of State and Defense also cautioned Trump against the move. Asked if Secretary of State Tillerson is "on board" with the decision, spokeswoman Heather Nauert said, "He has made his position clear to the White House, and the Department of Defense has as well. But it's ultimately the President's decision to make. He's in the charge." NBC said "multiple sources [indicate] that the Vice President and UN Ambassador Nikki Haley both support the decision."

Sen. Richard Blumenthal said on CNN's Situation Room (12/5), "Jerusalem is the capital of Israel, and I've long supported acknowledging that simple fact. So has Congress. ... But there have to be meaningful negotiations to advance the progress of peace." He added that "this issue is very fraught in the Middle East. ... I'm deeply concerned about the threat of terrorist reaction and more fundamentally the reaction on the street, the reaction of the people who compose the population of our allies. I think we need to be on the alert, both here and abroad."

On CNN's Situation Room (12/5), Rep. Denny Heck (D-WA) said, "I think it's going to both literally and figuratively blow up the peace process in the Middle East. We know it's a bad idea, because every ally and friend we have is telling us it's a bad idea. But it's specifically a bad idea for two reasons. Number one, it's going to engender violence in the short-term. ... But the second, and more important reason, why this is a terrifically bad idea is it is tantamount to the idea of the United States getting up from the bargaining table and walking away."

Kimberly Strassel of the Wall Street Journal said on Fox News Special Report (12/5), "One of the sticking points always when you get to an Israeli-Palestinian negotiation is this question of Jerusalem. What this does, in moving the capital and actually taking the step, it is an acknowledgment that that is something that the Israelis are never going to budge on and that the United States backs them in. It's also a way of highlighting that the Palestinian focus on this has been an obstruction to moving ahead in negotiations. So, there is an argument to be made that if you get it done and get it over with, you lay the groundwork to then move forward."

Mara Liasson of NPR said on Fox News Special Report (12/5), "The President will be fulfilling a campaign promise. He will be making his base very happy, conservative Christians, members of the Jewish community, but I don't know exactly how this increases the momentum for Middle East peace deal."

A New York Times (12/5) editorial says that while Trump insists he is committed to achieving the "ultimate" Middle East peace agreement, his decision "to tip the scales toward Israel on this critical matter...almost certainly will make an agreement harder to reach by inflaming doubts about America's honesty and fairness as a broker in negotiations, raising new tension in the region and perhaps inciting violence." Though "some optimists think that Mr. Trump could lessen the harm of a decision on Jerusalem by making clear he will not prejudge the future of East Jerusalem or other core questions like the borders of a Palestinian state," the Times says his "track record so far gives little evidence that he has the temperament or skill to navigate such a nuanced position."

Eliora Katz, a former Robert L. Bartley Fellow at the Wall Street Journal (12/5), writes that the symbolism of recognizing Jerusalem as the capital is not worth the instability it will likely cause in the region.

State Department Warns Embassies Of Violence. NBC Nightly News (12/5, story 2, 2:20, Holt) reported that the State Department is "warning embassies around the world to be alert for violence" in wake of the announcement, and the CBS Evening News (12/5, story 4, 2:25, Glor) said the State Department is "warning US diplomats and their families to avoid Jerusalem's Old City." amid "fears of violence." The CBS News (12/5, Shabad) website reports they are also banned from traveling to the West Bank, including Bethlehem and Jericho. The AP (12/5, Lee, Federman) says the "mere consideration of Trump changing the status quo sparked a renewed US security warning on Tuesday." Reuters (12/5) also reports the warning.

The Jerusalem Post (12/5) reports Israeli police and the military are "bracing for possible violence as a result of the developments."

Trump Expects Tax Bill Out Of Conference "Pretty Quickly."

Reuters (12/5, Rampton) reports in a brief item that President Trump said Tuesday that he "expected the conference committee hammering out tax legislation in Congress will work well and get the job done fast." Before meeting with a group of Senate Republicans, Trump told reporters, "I think something's going to be coming out of conference pretty quickly." The Washington Times (12/5, Boyer) reports that Trump also "referred to his lunch guests, who included frequent Trump critic Sen. Jeff Flake of Arizona, as 'this wonderful group of Republican senators.'" Politico (12/5, Cook, Lorenzo) reports that Trump told the senators that he would "like the final deal on tax reform to move even faster than the Dec. 22 goal they've set, according to White House officials."

Despite Trump's Claims, Polls Show That GOP Tax Bill Is Unpopular. CNBC (12/5, Pramuk) reports on its website that though Trump again said on Tuesday that the GOP tax bill is becoming "more popular," polls show little support for the measure. New polls from Gallup and Quinnipiac show just 29% of US adults in support of the bill; Gallup had 56% disapproving, while Quinnipiac had 53% disapproving. CNN (12/5, Lang) reports on the Quinnipiac poll.

White House Says A Government Shutdown Is Still Possible.

Reuters (12/5) reports that the White House on Tuesday left open the possibility that a government shutdown could still occur. White House press secretary Sarah Sanders told reporters, "It is always a possibility but it's certainly not what we hope for." The AP (12/5, Fram, Taylor) says Republican leaders along Senate Minority Leader Schumer and House Minority Leader Pelosi will meet with President Trump at the White House Thursday. Sanders said, "The President hopes to be able to have conversations with them to make sure that doesn't happen." Meanwhile, the AP reports that GOP leaders sought to address divisions within their party "over the budget and a partisan immigration clash simmered in the background." In a move that "underscored the clout conservatives wield within the House GOP," a planned House vote on the temporary spending measure was postponed from Wednesday to Thursday, "buying time to iron out disputes with conservatives seeking tighter budget curbs."

Bloomberg News (12/5, Wasson) describes "a rebellion" in the GOP over the stopgap measure that would expire Dec. 22, as the House Freedom Caucus threatened Monday "to block progress on President Donald Trump's tax bill unless the group gets support to extend the spending measure to Dec. 30" According to caucus member Jim Jordan, "doing so would give conservatives more leverage over senators who want to add legislation to the stopgap bill." The Hill (12/5, Marcos) says members of the Freedom Caucus "worry the Dec. 22 deadline would increase the possibility that lawmakers would accept a spending package with extraneous measures, such as immigration and ObamaCare, to end work and return home for the holidays." Reuters (12/5, Morgan) reports that House Speaker Ryan said the end date of the continuing resolution "would become known when it reaches the House floor." However, House Rules Chairman Pete Sessions "told reporters his panel would consider a continuing resolution that expires on Dec. 22." Other Republicans "said members were still debating whether the funding would expire on Dec. 22 or on Dec. 30, after the Dec. 25 Christmas holiday."

The AP (12/5, Taylor) reports that in a bid "to get the attention of House leaders," Freedom Caucus Chairman Mark Meadows and several members of the caucus "held back their support" during a "vote to send the all-important tax bill to a House-Senate conference committee." The Washington Post (12/5, Kane) says that as the Freedom Caucus was "looking for a hostage to grab and knew that this one would get everyone's attention." The "rebellion," the Post says, "was meant to remind...Ryan's leadership team how little faith the conservative wing has in it to negotiate a good deal."

The Washington Post (12/5, O'Keefe, Debonis) says that while Democrats "vowed to assert maximum leverage over talks to keep the federal government open," they "may not be in sync about what they're fighting for." While liberals in "urban districts and coastal states are vowing to withhold support for a must-pass spending bill if Republicans don't resolve the legal status of young immigrants," moderates "facing reelection in states President Trump won last year are more focused on boosting funding for children's health programs, government-backed pensions and programs to combat opioid abuse." While "Republicans control Congress and the White House," they "need Democrats to keep the government operating." However, "with different midterm election priorities in the House and Senate, Democrats are struggling to fight Republicans on a united front."

Schumer Downplays Possibility Of A Government Shutdown Over DACA. Schumer on Tuesday "batted down suggestions that a fight over" DACA would result in a government shutdown, The Hill (12/5, Carney) reports. Asked by reporters if Democrats will support the year-end spending bill, Schumer said, "We don't think we're going to get to that. There are good negotiations occurring between Democrats and Republicans to come up with a good DACA program, as well as some good border security."

House Republicans Debating Duration Of Continuing Resolution.

Reuters (12/5, Morgan) reports that on Tuesday, House Republicans discussed how long a continuing resolution to fund the government should last. The House Freedom Caucus "has pressed Republican leaders to consider a spending measure that expires on Dec. 30, eight days later than the Dec. 22 deadline that House and Senate Republicans have been discussing up to now."

Trump Wants Republicans To Address Welfare Reform After Tax Bill.

The Wall Street Journal (12/5, Radnofsky) reports that with Republicans about to complete work on tax reform legislation, President Trump wants them to tackle welfare reform next. Trump mentioned the issue during a speech in Missouri last week. While he didn't delve into specifics, the Journal says congressional Republicans have proposed work more stringent work requirements for food stamps and cash assistance.

UN Official's Visit To North Korea Sparks Hope Of Mediation.

Reuters (12/5, Nichols, Brunnstrom) reports UN political affairs chief Jeffrey Feltman arrived in North Korea Tuesday "for a rare visit that some analysts and diplomats hope could spark a UN-led effort to defuse rising tensions over Pyongyang's nuclear and missile programs." During his four-day visit, Feltman is due to meet Foreign Minister Ri Yong Ho to discuss "issues of mutual interest and concern." UN spokesman Stephane Dujarric said, "This is broadly a policy dialogue with (North Korea). I think we have to wait and see what comes out." Another Reuters (12/5) report says Feltman "is not carrying any message from the US government...the State Department said on Tuesday." Spokeswoman Heather Nauert told reporters, "He's not traveling on behalf of the US government and he's not traveling – I want to make this clear – with any kind of message from the US government."

David Ignatius writes in his Washington Post (12/5) column that the confrontation with North Korea is "nearing another tense inflection point, with North Korea signaling that it could be ready for negotiations with Washington soon, even as it moves toward becoming a full nuclear-weapons power." Pyongyang, he says, "seemingly wants negotiations with the United States, but on its own terms. Analysts speculate that to justify keeping its existing stockpile of several dozen nuclear weapons, North Korea might promise not to share its nuclear technology with others and not to attack the United States." Washington, he argues, should be "wary of such assurances, given Pyongyang's history of broken promises and proliferation."

B-1B Bombers To Join Exercise In South Korea. Bloomberg News (12/5, Sharp) reports the US will deploy B-1B Lancer bombers to the Korean Peninsula Wednesday as part of a joint exercise with South Korea, Yonhap News said, "citing an unidentified source." The US Pacific Air Forces spokeswoman Lori Hodge issued a statement "saying it wouldn't discuss future missions for operational security reasons."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Does President Trump Want To Negotiate Middle East Peace?" A New York Times (12/5) editorial says that while President Trump insists he is committed to achieving the "ultimate" Middle East peace agreement, his decision "to tip the scales toward Israel" by recognizing Jerusalem as Israel's capital and moving the US embassy there "almost certainly will make an agreement harder to reach by inflaming doubts about America's honesty and fairness as a broker in negotiations, raising new tension in the region and perhaps inciting violence." Though "some optimists think that Mr. Trump could lessen the harm of a decision on Jerusalem by making clear he will not prejudge the future of East Jerusalem or other core questions like the borders of a Palestinian state," the Times says his "track record so far gives little evidence that he has the temperament or skill to navigate such a nuanced position."

"Going National With Concealed Guns." The New York Times (12/5) criticizes a proposed House bill that "would require each state to recognize the 'concealed carry' gun permits of all other states." The Times opines that the bill "fits well with the fantasies of vigilante justice peddled by President Trump in last year's campaign and enthusiastically embraced by the N.R.A." The Times concludes by labeling the legislation as a "dangerous attempt to nationalize concealed-carry against the wishes of safety-minded states."

Washington Post.

"What A Presidential President Would Have Said About The FBI." The Washington Post (12/5) says in an editorial that "a more presidential president...might have said" that he has "greatest respect for the men and women of the FBI and the Justice Department." Such a president might have added, "Because I am a subject of [Special Counsel Robert Mueller]'s investigation into Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election, it would be improper for me to comment on the specifics of the special counsel's work. But in this heated political environment, I feel it's important to emphasize my faith in the honesty and integrity of federal law enforcement."

"Democrats Take A Hard Line On Harassment In Congress. Republicans, Not So Much." In an editorial, the Washington Post (12/5) says, "Some credit for" Rep. John Conyers' retirement "goes to the Democratic Party, which worked to force" him "out of office after determining" the sexual harassment allegations against him "had merit." The Post says that Democratic leaders have been similarly tough in their handling of claims of sexual harassment against Rep. Ruben Kihuen and Sen. Al Franken. However, says the Post, "Republicans, sad to say, are sending a very different message" with their reaction to the news that Rep. Blake Farenthold "used $84,000 in taxpayer money to settle a sexual harassment claim against him from his former spokeswoman. ... Where's the outrage? We gather it's in the same place Republicans parked their principles when they decided that helping elect an accused child sex predator to the Senate – or giving a pass to a president who boasted about assaulting women – was okay because it served their political purposes."

"Two Troubling Elections Threaten The Health Of Latin American Democracies." A Washington Post (12/5) editorial discusses the absence of a US ambassador in Honduras and lack of a State Department assistant secretary for Latin America as its president continues to erode state institutions by trying to claim victory in last week's elections, despite indications his opponent had won. The article also mentions Bolivian Supreme Court's ruling that President Evo Morales could run for a fourth term "despite a constitutional limitation of two terms that was upheld in a referendum last year." The Post writes that "State was quick to criticize the power grab by the leftist Mr. Morales, but on Honduras it has been circumspect, leading some to suspect the administration is content to see Mr. Hernández retain power by any means. That would only encourage the destabilization of Honduras, along with more attempts to subvert democracy in the Western hemisphere.”

Wall Street Journal.

“No Alternative, No Tax Problem.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (12/5) backs a repeal of the AMT, which it calls inefficient and punitive.

“The Right Move On Monuments.” A Wall Street Journal (12/5) editorial welcomes President Trump’s decision to reduce the size of two national monuments in Utah, saying it brings an end to federal overreach and restores power to local citizens.

“Judging Roy Moore.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (12/5) urges Alabama voters not to elect Republican Senate candidate Roy Moore, arguing that if he wins, Moore will be an albatross to GOP candidates running in the 2018 midterms. The Journal also maintains that a Moore loss would be a positive, in that it would serve as a discrediting blow to ex-White House chief strategist Steve Bannon, who is backing that candidate and has vowed to target most every GOP Senate incumbent in 2018.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

In Wedding-Cake Case, Justices Weigh Clash Between Gay Rights And Religion
Mueller Subpoenas Deutsche Bank Records Related To Trump
Russia Barred From 2018 Winter Olympics Due To Doping
Behind The Murdochs’ Sale Talks: Scale, Price And Family Dynamics

New York Times:

US To Recognize Jerusalem As Israel’s Capital, Trump Says, Alarming Middle East Leaders
Trump’s Endorsement Of Roy Moore Points Up A GOP Problem: Chaos
Russia Banned From Winter Olympics By IOC
Weinstein’s Complicity Machine
Justices Sharply Divided In Gay Rights Case
The CHIP Program Is Beloved. Why Is Its Funding In Danger?
Tens Of Thousands Evacuate As Southern California Fires Spread

Washington Post:

Border Arrests Drop To Historic Low, DHS Says
“Very Dangerous” Fires Explode In Southern Calif.
Trump’s Support For Moore Breaks Another Party Norm
Besieged Conyers Ends His Long Tenure
Russia Is Banned From Winter Olympics For Doping Program
Trump To Order Move Of Embassy To Jerusalem

Financial Times:

Saakashvili Freed From Ukraine Police Van Hours After Arrest
James Murdoch Tipped For Disney Role In Fox Deal
Abbas And Abdullah Warn Trump Against Moving Embassy To Jerusalem
Deutsche Bank Sends Trump Financial Details To Mueller Investigation

Washington Times:

Team Obama Attempted ‘Stealth Coup’ By Undermining Trump
Severe Flu Season Expected With Less-Effective Vaccine Nearly A Century After Deadliest Pandemic
How Trump Turned Tide Of Illegal Immigration In First Year: Border Crossing Hits 45-Year Low
Iran Nears Completion Of ‘Shiite Crescent’ Across Middle East: Land Bridge To Pose U.S. Challenges
Justice Kennedy Sees Merits From Both Sides, Likely To Swing Ruling In Case Of Same-Sex Wedding Cake
Roy Moore Gets Praise From Bannon After Endorsements From Trump, RNC

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: California Wildfires; Trump-Israel; Russia Meddling Investigation; Roy Moore Campaign; Conyers Resigns; IOC-Russia; JFK Airport Close Call; Weather Forecast; SCOTUS-Same-Sex Marriage; Baltimore Home Explosion; Jimmy Kimmel's Son; Police Rescue.

CBS: California Wildfires; JFK Airport Close Call; Trump-Israel; IOC-Russia; Conyers Resigns; SCOTUS-Same-Sex Marriage; Roy Moore Campaign; FBI Agent-Hillary Email Statement; Undocumented Immigrants Arrests; BitCoin Investment; Olaf Short Movie; Mars-Round Rocks; Photographer Historian.

NBC: California Wildfires; Trump-Israel; IOC-Russia; Russia Meddling Investigation; Conyers Resigns; Roy Moore Campaign; SCOTUS-Same-Sex Marriage; Holiday Toy Shopping; Weather Forecast; Baltimore Home Explosion; Space Pizza Delivery; Christmas Celebration.

Network TV At A Glance:

California Wildfires – 12 minutes, 55 seconds

Trump-Israel – 7 minutes, 5 seconds

Conyers Resigns – 5 minutes, 15 seconds

Russia Meddling Investigation – 4 minutes, 55 seconds

SCOTUS-Same-Sex Marriage – 4 minutes, 20 seconds

Roy Moore Campaign – 3 minutes, 30 seconds

IOC-Russia – 3 minutes, 20 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Trump-Israel; Russia Meddling Investigation; California Wildfires; Tax Reform Plan.

CBS: Trump-Israel; California Wildfires; Roy Moore Campaign; SCOTUS-Same-Sex Marriage; IOC-Russia; Obama-Climate Change.

FOX: Trump-Israel; UK-Attack Foiled; Roy Moore Campaign; IOC-Russia.

NPR: California Wildfires; Trump-Israel; Honduras Presidential Election; Wall Street News.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Holds a Cabinet Meeting; gives a statement on Jerusalem.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — No public schedule announced.

US Senate: 9:30 AM Senate Aging Committee hearing on the nation's aging workforce – Hearing on 'America's Aging Workforce: Opportunities and Challenges', with testimony from AARP Foundation Litigation Senior Attorney Laurie McCann; retrained manufacturing employee Ralph Jellison; and retrained human resources employee Lisa Motta Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 562, Washington, DC <http://aging.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on firearms and the National Instant Criminal Background Check System – Hearing on 'Firearm Accessory Regulation and Enforcing Federal and State Reporting to the National Instant Criminal Background Check System (NICS)' * Follows Las Vegas mass shooter Stephen Paddock's use of a 'bump stock' (which allows semi-automatic weapons to conduct automatic gunfire), and the U.S. Air Force's failure to report Sutherland Springs, TX, mass shooter Devin Kelley's 'bad conduct' discharge to the FBI Location: Rm 226, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Homeland Security Committee hearing on 'defending the homeland against the evolving international terrorist threat' – Hearing on 'Adapting to Defend the Homeland Against the Evolving International Terrorist Threat', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of Defense for Special Operations/Low-Intensity Conflict Mark Mitchell; National Counterterrorism Center Acting Director for Intelligence Lora Shiao; FBI Deputy Assistant Director for Counterterrorism Nikki Floris; and Acting Deputy Under Secretary of Homeland Security for Intelligence and Analysis Robin Taylor Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 342, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

10:00 AM Nominations hearing considers R.D. James to be Assistant Secretary of the Army for Civil Works Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

1:00 PM Bicameral Dems and families of gun violence victims speak out against 'Arm Anyone' concealed-carry legislation – Democrats Sens. Richard Blumenthal and Chris Murphy, along with Reps. Elizabeth Esty, Jerrold Nadler, Mike Thompson, and Sheila Lee join family members of gun violence victims from 20 states, and gun violence prevention advocates to speak out against the Concealed Carry Reciprocity Act of 2017, legislation that 'would allow more dangerous criminals and untrained individuals to carry loaded, hidden guns in public places by forcing states with strong concealed carry laws to honor permits from states with weak or non-existent standards'. Other attendees include Newtown Action Alliance Chair Po Murray, Moms Demand Action for Gun Sense in America founder Shannon Watts, States United to Prevent Gun Violence National Director Victoria Coy, and Brady Campaign to Prevent Gun Violence President Kris Brown * Press conference is held ahead of the Fifth Annual National Vigil for All Victims of Gun Violence at St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Washington, DC Location: House Triangle, Washington, DC <http://www.blumenthal.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenBlumenthal>

1:00 PM ITIF releases 'A Policymaker's Guide to Developing a National Competitiveness Strategy' – Information Technology and Innovation Foundation releases 'A Policymaker's Guide to Developing a National Competitiveness Strategy' at a Capitol Hill event, with speakers – Democratic Sen. Chris Coons, Brookings Institution Metropolitan Policy Program Policy Director Mark Muro, McKinsey Global Institute partner Sree Ramaswamy, and George Washington University Research Professor Andrew Reamer – examining the issue of competitiveness, explaining how conventional economic advice leads policymakers astray, and offering specific steps for the federal govt to stem the recent decline in U.S. economic competitiveness Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, SVC-209, Washington, DC www.itif.org #ITIFcompetitiveness

2:30 PM Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee hearing on countering terrorism in North Africa – Near East, South Asia, Central Asia, and Counterterrorism Subcommittee hearing on 'Beyond ISIS: Countering Terrorism, Radicalization, and Promoting Stability in North Africa', with testimony from State Department Ambassador-At-Large and Coordinator for Counterterrorism Amb. Nathan Sales; and Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs Joan Polaschik Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 419, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Business Meeting, to consider 'S. 1870, the Securing Urgent Resources Vital to Indian Victim Empowerment (SURVIVE) Act' Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 628, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

2:30 PM Senate Environment and Public Works subcommittee hearing on cleanup following natural disasters – Superfund, Waste Management, and Regulatory Oversight Subcommittee hearing on 'Challenges Facing Superfund and Waste Cleanup Efforts Following Natural Disasters', with testimony from Texas Commission on Environmental Quality Chairman Bryan Shaw; University of Houston Law Center Professor Tracy Hester; and California Environmental Protection Agency Secretary Matthew Rodriguez Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

2:30 PM Senate Indian Affairs Committee legislative hearing – Legislative hearing on 'S. 664 Navajo Utah Water Rights Settlement Act of 2017' and 'S. 1770 Hualapai Tribe Water Rights Settlement Act of 2017' Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 628, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

4:00 PM Annual Taste of Delaware celebration on Capitol Hill – Delaware State Chamber of Commerce Annual Taste of Delaware celebration (aka Delaware's 'Party on the Hill'), honorary co-hosted by Democratic Sen. Chris Coons, with 24 hospitality businesses (restaurants, bakeries, breweries, and wineries) from around the state slated to showcase their produce Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Kennedy Caucus Rm, Washington, DC www.dsc.com <https://twitter.com/destatechamber>

5:00 PM U.S. Capitol Christmas Tree lighting ceremony – 2017 U.S. Capitol Christmas Tree lit by House Speaker Paul Ryan * The Capitol Christmas Tree has been a tradition since 1964, and this year's tree was chosen from Kootenai National Forest in Montana Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://www.aoc.gov/> <https://twitter.com/uscapitol>

US House: 10:00 AM House Energy and Commerce Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H.R. 453, Relief from New Source Performance Standards Act of 2017', 'H.R. 350, Recognizing the Protection of Motorsports Act of 2017', 'H.R. 1119, Satisfying Energy Needs and Saving the Environment (SENSE) Act', 'H.R. 1733, To direct the Secretary of Energy to review and update a report on the energy and environmental benefits of the re-refining of used lubricating oil', 'H.R. 1917, Blocking Regulatory Interference from Closing Kilns (BRICK) Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2872, Promoting Hydropower Development at Existing Nonpowered Dams Act', 'H.R. 2880, Promoting Closed-Loop Pumped Storage Hydropower Act', and a resolution regarding subcommittee membership Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Science subcommittee hearing on NSF Innovation Corps – Research and Technology Subcommittee hearing on ‘From Lab to Market: A Review of NSF Innovation Corps’, with testimony from National Science Foundation Assistant Director for Engineering Dr Dawn Tilbury; Stanford University Adjunct Professor of Management Science and Engineering Steve Blank; University of Maryland Associate Vice President for Innovation and Entrepreneurship Dr Dean Chang; and University of California-Santa Cruz Center for Innovation and Entrepreneurial Development Director Dr Sue Carter Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2318, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Water, Power and Oceans Subcommittee legislative hearing on ‘H.R. 4465, Endangered Fish Recovery Programs Extension Act of 2017’, with testimony from Republican Rep. John Curtis; Utah Department of Natural Resources Director of Recovery Programs Henry Maddux; The Nature Conservancy Senior Water Policy Advisor Jimmy Hague; and Colorado Springs Utilities Government and Corporate Affairs Manager Andrew Colosimo Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1324, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM House Financial Services subcommittee latest hearing on housing finance reform – Housing and Insurance Subcommittee hearing on ‘Sustainable Housing Finance: Private Sector Perspectives on Housing Finance Reform, Part IV’, with testimony from Alliance Bernstein Director of US Multi-Sector and Securitized Assets Michael Canter; University of Pennsylvania Wharton School Professor of Real Estate and Finance Dr Susan Wachter; Guy Carpenter & Company Managing Director Jeffrey Krohn; Arch Capital Group Global Mortgage Group CEO Andrew Rippert; and Mortgage Guaranty Insurance Corporation CEO Patrick Sinks (on behalf of U.S. Mortgage Insurers) Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM House Workforce subcommittee hearing on workplace leave policies – Health, Employment, Labor, and Pensions Subcommittee hearing on ‘Workplace Leave Policies: Opportunities and Challenges for Employers and Working Families’, with testimony from IBM Corporation Vice President for Human Resources and Business Development Barbara Brickmeier (on behalf of U.S. Chamber of Commerce); Independent Women’s Forum President Carrie Lukas; Montgomery County Council (MD) Vice President Hans Riemer; and Safety National Vice President of Human Resources Angela Schaefer (on behalf of Society for Human Resource Management) Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2175, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

10:00 AM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on advancing human rights to combat extremism – Africa, Global Health, Global Human Rights, and International Organizations Subcommittee hearing on ‘Advancing Human Rights to Combat Extremism’, with testimony from Georgetown University Religious Freedom Research Project Director Dr Thomas Farr; The Institute of World Politics founder and President Dr John Lenczowski; and Islamic Society of North America Office of Interfaith and Community Alliances Senior Advisor Dr Sayyid Syeed Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

12:00 PM House expected to debate short-term govt funding extension – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include ‘H.J.Res. 123 – Continuing Appropriations Act, 2018’ and ‘H.R. 38 – Concealed Carry Reciprocity Act of 2017’ Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

1:00 PM Bicameral Dems and families of gun violence victims speak out against ‘Arm Anyone’ concealed-carry legislation – Democrats Sens. Richard Blumenthal and Chris Murphy, along with Reps. Elizabeth Esty, Jerrold Nadler, Mike Thompson, and Sheila Lee join family members of gun violence victims from 20 states, and gun violence prevention advocates to speak out against the Concealed Carry Reciprocity Act of 2017, legislation that ‘would allow more dangerous criminals and untrained individuals to carry loaded, hidden guns in public places by forcing states with strong concealed carry laws to honor permits from states with weak or non-existent standards’. Other attendees include Newtown Action Alliance Chair Po Murray, Moms Demand Action for Gun Sense in America founder Shannon Watts, States United to Prevent Gun Violence National Director Victoria Coy, and Brady Campaign to Prevent Gun Violence President Kris Brown * Press conference is held ahead of the Fifth Annual National Vigil for All Victims of Gun Violence at St. Mark’s Episcopal Church in Washington, DC Location: House Triangle, Washington, DC <http://www.blumenthal.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenBlumenthal>

2:00 PM Richard Gere testifies to House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Tibet – Asia and the Pacific Subcommittee hearing on ‘U.S. Policy Toward Tibet: Access, Religious Freedom, and Human Rights’, with testimony from International Campaign for Tibet Chair of the Board of Directors Richard Gere; Radio Free Asia Tibetan Service Director Tenzin Tethong; and National Endowment for Democracy President Carl Gershman Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov>

<https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Brexit – Europe, Eurasia, and Emerging Threats Subcommittee hearing on 'Brexit: A Negotiation Update', with testimony from Heritage Foundation Margaret Thatcher Center for Freedom Director Dr Nile Gardiner; U.S. Chamber of Commerce Vice President for European Affairs and U.S.-U.K. Business Council Executive Director Marjorie Chorlins; and Brookings Institution Center on the United States and Europe Director Dr Thomas Wright Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2200, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

2:00 PM House Space subcommittee hearing on NASA's next four large telescopes – Space Subcommittee hearing on 'NASA's Next Four Large Telescopes', with testimony from NASA Associate Administrator for the Science Mission Directorate Dr Thomas Zurbuchen; Government Accountability Office Director of Acquisition and Sourcing Management Cristina Chaplain; former NASA Goddard Space Flight Center Director / former Martin Marietta Corporation President and COO A. Thomas Young; Association of Universities for Research in Astronomy President Dr Matt Mountain; and University of California-Berkeley Professor Emeritus of Astronomy Dr Chris McKee (on behalf of National Academies of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine) Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2318, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov>
<https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

2:30 PM Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on Egypt – Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on 'Egypt: Human Rights Seven Years After the Revolution', with witnesses – Project on Middle East Democracy Deputy Director for Research Amy Hawthorne, Coptic Solidarity President George Gurguis, former Human Rights Watch Middle East and North Africa Division Deputy Director Joe Stork, and Carnegie Endowment for International Peace Middle East Program Director Michele Dunne – presenting testimony addressing the different aspects of the human rights situation in Egypt, and offering recommendations on how the U.S. Govt can more effectively engage the Egyptian Govt on the issues Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2255, Washington, DC <http://tlhrc.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/TLHRCommission>

3:00 PM Congressional Black Caucus presents 'Black Business Owners in the Green Economy' roundtable – Congressional Black Caucus presents 'Black Business Owners in the Green Economy' roundtable discussion, with participants including Democratic Rep. Donald McEachin, U.S. Black Chambers President and CEO Ron Busby, Volt Energy co-founder Gilbert Campbell, Windjammer Environmental CEO Damien Hammond, NspireGreen co-founder and partner Chancee Lundy, Aldelano Corporation COO Nicole Smith, and Bithenergy CEO Robert Wallace Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1539, Washington, DC <https://cbc.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/OfficialCBC>

3:00 PM House Rules Committee hearing – Hearing on 'H.R. 477, the Small Business Mergers, Acquisitions, Sales, and Brokerage Simplification Act of 2017' and 'H.R. 3971, the Community Institution Mortgage Relief Act of 2017' Location: U.S. Capitol, H-313, Washington, DC <http://www.rules.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/RulesReps>

3:00 PM Dem Rep. Nancy Pelosi's annual Holiday Reception for the Capitol Press Corps – House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi's annual Holiday Reception for the Capitol Press Corps * Invite only Location: U.S. Capitol, H-207, Washington, DC <http://www.democraticleader.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/NancyPelosi>

5:00 PM U.S. Capitol Christmas Tree lighting ceremony – 2017 U.S. Capitol Christmas Tree lit by House Speaker Paul Ryan * The Capitol Christmas Tree has been a tradition since 1964, and this year's tree was chosen from Kootenai National Forest in Montana Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://www.aoc.gov/> <https://twitter.com/uscapitol>

Other: 8:00 AM International Religious Freedom conference continues – Order of St. Andrew, Archons of the Ecumenical Patriarchate International Religious Freedom conference continues, with U.S. officials, Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of America, and other Christian groups addressing the persecution of Christians in the Middle East and North Africa. Day three speakers including former White House Chief of Staff Reince Priebus and Republican Sen. Marco Rubio, before Farewell Dinner with remarks from Republican Rep. Ed Royce Location: Trump International Hotel Washington, D.C., 1100 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC conference.archons.org
<https://twitter.com/OrderStAndrew>

8:15 AM GOP Sen. Thom Tillis keynotes CFR symposium on 'hacked elections' and the 'threat to democracy' – 'Hacked Elections, Online Influence Operations, and the Threat to Democracy' Council on Foreign Relations Symposium, with speakers discussing the problems facing election cybersecurity, recommendations to protect the integrity of elections from cyber threats, how the U.S. and the tech community can respond to foreign actors' use of online platforms to propagate disinformation and amplify specific viewpoints, and what foreign policy responses are at the U.S. disposal to respond to Russia's interference in the 2016 U.S. election. Includes keynote from Republican Sen. Thom Tillis Location: Council on Foreign Relations, 1777 F St NW, Washington, DC www.cfr.org https://twitter.com/CFR_org #CFRLive

9:00 AM Feminist Majority 'Women Money Power' summit and luncheon – Feminist Majority / Feminist Majority Foundation 'Women Money Power' summit and 30th anniversary luncheon, honoring Democrats Sens. Dianne Feinstein and Mazie Hirono and Reps. Niki Tsongas and Maxine Waters Location: National Press Club, 529 14th St NW, Washington, DC www.feministmajority.org <https://twitter.com/FemMajority>

2:00 PM Bicameral Dems call on FCC to 'rescind plan to eviscerate net neutrality' – Democrats Sen. Ed Markey and Rep. Anna Eshoo call on Federal Communications Commission Chairman Ajit Pai to 'rescind his proposal to eviscerate the net neutrality protections before the Commission's vote on 14 Dec', via press conference with former FCC General Counsel Jon Sallet Location: TBD www.markey.senate.gov <https://twitter.com/MarkeyMemo>

3:00 PM Global Forum on Asset Recovery Closing Session – Global Forum on Asset Recovery Closing Session and press conference, hosted by the U.S. and the UK with support from the Stolen Asset Recovery Initiative. Participants during event include Attorney General Jeff Sessions, UK Minister for Countering Extremism Baroness Williams of Trafford, Nigerian Attorney General and Minister of Justice Abubakar Malami, Sri Lankan Attorney General Jayantha Jayasuriya, Tunisian Minister of State Domains and Land Affairs Mabrouk Korchid, and Ukrainian Prosecutor General Yuriy Vitaliyovych Lutsenko Location: World Bank IFC, 2121 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC star.worldbank.org/star/about-us/global-forum-asset-recovery-gfar <https://twitter.com/returningassets> #GFAR2017

6:00 PM International LGBTQ Leaders Conference opening reception – International LGBTQ Leaders Conference opening reception, with speakers including Democratic Reps. Jared Polis and Maxine Waters, Florida State Rep. Carlos Guillermo Smith, and Victory Fund and Institute President and CEO Aisha Moodie-Mills Location: AJAX, 1011 4th St NW, Washington, DC www.lgbtleaders.org <https://twitter.com/VictoryFund>

First Lady Melania Trump and Second Lady Karen Pence to Visit Texas for Continued Hurricane Relief – First Lady Melania Trump and Second Lady Karen Pence to Visit Texas for Continued Hurricane Relief. Upon arrival to Corpus Christi, the two will participate in a meet-and-greet with first responders who are part of the Hurricane Harvey recovery effort. They will then travel to Rockport, Texas to meet with a family whose home was destroyed in the hurricane, and tour the home's remains; see the family's new Manufactured Housing Unit, provided by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which will serve as the family's temporary residence until they can move into a new, rebuilt home; and then visit a local elementary school, touring classrooms and speaking with faculty and students about the hurricane. The two women will conclude their day in Texas with a stop at a local food bank to meet with volunteers and help sort boxes of donations. Location: TBDc

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Stephen Colbert: "But not every Republican is throwing their support behind Moore. GOP Senator Jeff Flake just tweeted out a photo of a check for $100 to Roy Moore's opponent, Doug Jones, with a memo line that reads, 'Country over party.' Wow! I can't believe that someone still uses checks. Remind me not to get behind Jeff Flake at the grocery store."

Stephen Colbert: "Of course, it hasn't been all defending pedophiles for Donald Trump. He's also been assaulting Mother Nature. Yesterday, he signed an order slashing the size of Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monuments. It's reasonable that he doesn't care about them. They're just national monuments. They're not Confederate monuments. ... But on the bright side, 'Escalante' is the first time he's ever spoken Spanish."

Stephen Colbert: "Several Native American tribes are suing, in part because it's estimated that Bears Ears alone holds more than 100,000 native American cultural and archaeological sites. You know, if Trump goes ahead with this plan, I'm worried that Native Americans will stop trusting the federal government.”

James Corden: “Russia has been banned from the upcoming Winter Olympics for the use of performance-enhancing drugs. And this is nice. Russia was also banned from participating in the next presidential election.”

James Corden: “In other news, yesterday, Donald Trump went to Utah and signed proclamations to reduce the size of two protected areas, which are basically like national parks. How dare Donald Trump steal this land from the American people, after they rightfully stole it from the Native American people!”

James Corden: “Trump lost out on Twitter’s list of the year’s most popular re-tweets. But today, he claimed he still won in the re-tweet electoral college.”

Jimmy Fallon: “Russia was banned from the Olympics. But Russia doesn’t mind – they said they’ll just invade some other teams.”

Seth Meyers: “Following multiple allegations of sexual harassment, Representative John Conyers announced today that he would not seek re-election, and endorsed his son to replace him in Congress, while President Trump has endorsed his son to replace him in the Russia investigation.”

Conan O’Brien: “Russia has been banned from the Winter Olympics. Yeah. But don’t feel bad, Russia, even though you won’t win any gold medals, you did win the US presidential election.”

Conan O’Brien: “A new report says that Mike Pence’s wife thinks that Donald Trump is totally vile. Yeah. Coincidentally, Donald Trump’s wife thinks Donald Trump is totally vile.”

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform’s terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva’s terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website’s information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, December 13, 2017
Date: Wednesday, December 13, 2017 6:01:54 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 2017 6:00 AM EST

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Associated Press: Protesters Call National Park Plan For Utah Monument A Ploy.
- Arizona Republic: Court Upholds Obama-Era Ban On Uranium Mining Near Grand Canyon.
- Houston Chronicle: Trump Delays Offshore Drilling Announcement.
- E&E Publishing: Questions Hover Over Zinke's Defense Of Helicopter Trip .
- Huffington Post: Top Interior Official Stayed At Montana Resort That Secretary Zinke's Billionaire Friend And Donor Owns.
- Washington Post: Patagonia Is Suing The President – And Drawing Ire From Republicans In Congress.
- Bangor (ME) Daily News: Maine Has A Stake In Another National Monument Due For Big Changes

Under Zinke.

- Bloomberg News: Acting Trump Brass Who've Stuck Around Too Long May Draw Rebuke.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Pueblos, County, Feds Agree On Rights Of Way.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Law360: Calif., NM Urge Judge To Nix Challenges To BLM Flaring Rule.
- Las Vegas Sun: 2 New Solar Plants Boost Switch Operations, State's Clean Energy Outlook.
- Associated Press: Agency Consents To Coal Lease Expansions In Western Colorado.
- KOLO-TV Reno (NV): BLM Approves Sun Valley School Campus Project.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Reclamation To Lower Lake Moovalya In January 2018 For Annual Maintenance Activities.

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

- Angelle Touts Trump's Six-Step Approach For Jump-Starting Gulf Of Mexico Oil Drilling.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- The Hill: Butterfly Group Sues Trump Administration Over Border Wall.
- Law360: Enviros Waiting On DOJ To OK Bison Range Agreement.
- KPAX-TV Missoula (MT): Grizzly Bear Management Meeting Held In Missoula.
- Associated Press: Prescribed Burn Starts In Marsh North Of New Orleans.

National Park Service

- Associated Press: National Parks In The U.S. Will Sharply Drop The Number Of Days They Allow Visitors To Get In For Free.
- New York Times: St. Louis Reconnects With The Gateway Arch And Its Pioneer Spirit.
- KUTV-TV Salt Lake City: Intense Bighorn Operation Underway In Zion To Replenish Utah Herds.
- Baton Rouge (LA) Advocate: 'Dream Big': Denham Springs Residents Weigh In On What They'd Like City Parks To Provide.
- Associated Press: Camping Fee At Chiricahua National Monument Rising.
- Asheville (NC) Citizen-Times: Great Smoky Mountains National Park Cabins Damaged By Arson.
- Salem (MA) Gazette: Salem Custom House Gets $130K Facelift.
- Pensacola (FL) News Journal: Escambia Likely To OK $1.6M Bid For Dock.
- New Jersey Herald: Acting Superintendent Named For Water Gap Park Recreation Area.
- Associated Press: Wells County Village Of Manfred Recognized For Its History.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Saipan (MNP) Tribune: World-Class Training For Robotics Students In Yap.

Office Of Surface Mining

- Trump's Mining Regulator Nominee Was Once Dropped By The Agency For Doing "Junk" Work.

US Geological Survey

- KNOX-FM Thompson (ND): ND Oil Assessment.
- Vice: 2 Million Snakes Have Taken Over The Island Of Guam.
- Additional Reading.

Opinion Pieces

- Rep. Andy Barr: Trump Should Follow Through On Camp Nelson Designation.
- In Our Opinion: A New Utah National Park Leaves Too Many Questions Unanswered.
- Protect Antiquities, But Stop Government Overreach: Paher And Cobb.
- Say No To Seismic Blasting And Drilling In The Atlantic.
- EDITORIAL: The Bureau Of Land Management Should Stop Dragging Its Feet On Ash Springs.
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- The Hill: Media Analyses: Jones' Win A Rebuke To Trump, Bannon.
- Washington Times: White House: Must Have Mind "In The Gutter" To See Sexism In Trump Tweet.

- New York Times: FBI Agent In Russia Probe Called Trump An "Idiot," Told Colleague Clinton "Just Has To Win."
- Associated Press: Tax Reform Negotiators Closing In On Agreement.
- Reuters: Tillerson Offers To Begin Talks With North Korea Without Pre-Conditions.
- Wall Street Journal: WSJournal A1: Investigation Reveals Thousands Of Fake Comments On Regulations.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Roy Moore Loses, Sanity Reins."
 - "Who Bought That $50 Million Leonardo After All?"
 - "Fox News v. Robert Mueller."
- Washington Post.
 - "Vote On The 'Dreamers.' Now."
 - "There's A Deadly New Threat From North Korea."
 - "At The Supreme Court, The Cake Baker's Reasoning Falls Flat."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "A Google vs. Amazon Antitrust Lesson."
 - "Canada's Healthcare Queues."
 - "Illinois Drives People Away."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Protesters Call National Park Plan For Utah Monument A Ploy.

The AP (12/12, McCOMBS) reports that environmental organizations on Tuesday slammed a legislative proposal by Rep. Chris Stewart "that would create a small national park within the recently downsized Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument, calling it nothing more than a ruse to try to appease conservationists and open more land for mining and grazing." David Nimkin of the National Parks Conservation Association, said, "This proposal is really an insidious, cynical ploy to undo the protections that we feel are critical." However, Stewart "scoffed at the notion that his proposal is a ploy and said he doesn't understand how anyone would object to creating a sixth national park in Utah."

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (12/13, Maffly) reports that environmentalists are opposing Stewart's "Grand Staircase Escalante Enhancement Act" because "it seeks to write into law President Donald Trump's recent proclamation slicing the former national monument by half — and puts Kane and Garfield county commissioners in charge of what's left."

Additional coverage was provided by KSL-TV Salt Lake City (12/12, Romboy).

Court Upholds Obama-Era Ban On Uranium Mining Near Grand Canyon.

The Arizona Republic (12/12, Bowling) reports that the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals on Tuesday "upheld a 20-year ban on new uranium mining on public land near the Grand Canyon, while also striking down a challenge to an existing uranium mine south of Grand Canyon National Park." The court "ruled that the ban, imposed in 2012 under former president Obama, lines up with the Constitution and federal environmental laws." The Republic notes, however, that the court "ruled that a mine 6 miles south of the national park had a right to operate. 'We upheld the decision of the secretary of the Interior to withdraw, for 20 years, more than 1 million acres of public lands around Grand Canyon National Park from new mining claims,' the opinion states." The ban "was put in place by the U.S. Department of the Interior under former secretary Ken Salazar," and "it came as mining operations were renewing their interest in uranium deposits near the canyon."

The AP (12/12, Fonseca) reports that the National Mining Association, "among those challenging the ban, said it was disappointed with the ruling and is exploring its options." Meanwhile, "conservationists say the ban is crucial for protecting water and the Grand Canyon, a national park visited by more than 5 million people a year."

Also reporting are the Washington Post (12/12, Eilperin), the Casa Grande \(AZ\) Dispatch (12/12, Fischer), Courthouse News (12/12, Ross), The Guardian \(UK\) (12/12, Walters), and KNAU-FM Flagstaff \(AZ\) Flagstaff, AZ (12/12, Heinsius).

Mining Officials Urge Congress To Open Federal Lands. The Duluth \(MN\) News Tribune (12/13, Myers) reports that "U.S. mining industry officials testified in House and Senate committees in Washington Tuesday, telling lawmakers that withdrawing federal land from mining is bad domestic policy." The article notes that "the testimony comes after the U.S. House last week passed a bill that would undo an Obama administration dictate that closed 234,000 acres of the Superior National Forest to mining activities because of the potential negative impact to the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness." It also "came just as the 9th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals announced its decision upholding a federal withdrawal of nearly 1 million acres from uranium mining near Grand Canyon National Park."

Trump Delays Offshore Drilling Announcement.

The Houston Chronicle (12/12, Osborne) reports the release of the Trump Administration's five year offshore drilling plan will be rescheduled to a future date due to unspecified reasons. The plan, which was scheduled to be released today, is expected to allow for drilling in the Atlantic Ocean.

Nelson Pushes Legislation Blocking Drilling In Atlantic. USA Today (12/12, King) reports Florida Sen. Bill Nelson is pushing legislation to block oil drilling off the East Coast through 2020 despite suggestions the Trump Administration is looking to open the Atlantic to drilling as early as 2019. Nelson said, "Why is the Department of Interior in such a rush. ... The answer is because the oil industry wants to start drilling in these areas now, and the Trump administration is going to let them do it."

Questions Hover Over Zinke's Defense Of Helicopter Trip .

E&E Publishing (12/12, Doyle) reports Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Saturday defended his use of government helicopters for travel, writing on Twitter that his helicopter usage included "an aerial survey of power line project which was under scrutiny for possible compensation mitigation corruption from the previous administration." The trip and tweet in question relate to Dominion Energy's Surry-Skiffes Creek transmission line. Dominion Energy spokeswoman Bonita Billingsley Harris said, "We received all the permits and have begun building this urgently needed transmission project in the best interest of bringing cleaner, more reliable energy to the Peninsula and the people who depend on it." Billingsley Harris added, "We were informed about Secretary Zinke's helicopter tour over the Surry-Skiffes Creek transmission line project as a courtesy, but we were not involved in coordinating the visit."

Top Interior Official Stayed At Montana Resort That Secretary Zinke's Billionaire Friend And Donor Owns.

The Huffington Post (12/12, Vardi) reports that acting director of the Bureau of Land Management Michael Nedd in June attended a Western Governors' Association in Whitefish, Montana and stayed at the Whitefish Mountain Resort, which is owned by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's "friend and donor William Foley." A BLM spokesperson has "confirmed that Nedd paid out of pocket the difference between the government authorized per diem expense and the actual resort rate." According to the article, "asked about arrangements for the lodging and why staff stayed at a resort owned by Zinke's friend and donor, a spokesperson for the Interior Department referred HuffPost to BLM, adding that Zinke did not stay at the Whitefish Mountain Resort on that trip."

Patagonia Is Suing The President – And Drawing Ire From Republicans In Congress.

The Washington Post (12/12, Bhattarai) reports that "a group of House Republicans took to social media last week to attack the outdoor goods retailer Patagonia in what amounted to a public rebuke for the company's decision to speak out against President Trump's policies." The attacks, "from a congressional committee's official Twitter and email accounts, triggered complaints that the elected officials were improperly using government resources to squelch free speech." Ethics experts and attorneys "said the tweets and email appeared to walk a fine line."

Also reporting is the Washington Free Beacon (12/13, Harrington).

Maine Has A Stake In Another National Monument Due For Big Changes Under Zinke.

The Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (12/13, Trotter) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “may have decided Katahdin Woods & Waters National Monument in northern Maine should be left as it is, but he’s proposing major changes” to the Northeast Canyons and Seamounts Marine National Monument. Zinke has recommended that commercial fishing activity resume in there and two other marine monuments in the Pacific. Zinke said the New England Fishery Management Council should be allowed “to make fishery-management decisions as authorized by the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Mount Desert \(ME\) Islander (12/12, Rappaport).

Acting Trump Brass Who’ve Stuck Around Too Long May Draw Rebuke.

Bloomberg News (12/12, Eidelson) reports that President Trump’s “slow pace of hiring for key government jobs has left stand-ins occupying positions for so long that it may violate time limits on acting appointments, potentially resulting in decisions being overturned in court.” Enforcement actions, “as well as policy decisions on a variety of topics,” could be challenged in court “on the grounds that they were enacted by officials who had been in acting roles too long or were improperly delegated authority.” Under the 1998 Federal Vacancies Reform Act, a position vacated by a presidential transition “cannot be filled by acting officials for more than 300 days unless a permanent nominee has been named and is awaiting Senate confirmation.” Bloomberg notes that Trump “has yet to name permanent appointees for about 250 of the roughly 620 key government positions that require Senate confirmation.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Pueblos, County, Feds Agree On Rights Of Way.

The Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (12/13, Last) reports that “agreements in principle have been reached between the federal government, Santa Fe County, and the pueblos of Nambé, Pojoaque, Tesuque and San Ildefonso over rights of way for roads near the pueblos, which would not only resolve access issues for non-tribal people living within the ‘exterior boundaries’ of the pueblos, but also help close the book on the long-running Aamodt water rights case.” According to the article, “there will be separate agreements with all four pueblos, but in general the roads in question will legally become public roads and neither the pueblos nor the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs will be able to close the roads, except temporarily for ‘cultural purposes.’” The article says that “while there will be four separate agreements, the agreements with Pojoaque and Tesuque will be similar in that the pueblos consent, and the BIA will grant, the county right of way for county-maintained roads.” Additionally, “the agreements with Nambé and San Ildefonso are similar, granting the BIA rights of way on county-maintained roads that will be placed in the Tribal Transportation Program.”

Bureau Of Land Management

Calif., NM Urge Judge To Nix Challenges To BLM Flaring Rule.

Law360 (12/12, Rodriguez) reports that “California and New Mexico on Monday urged a Wyoming federal judge to deny a bid by several other states and industry groups to undo the U.S. Bureau of Land Management’s rule aimed at limiting the release of methane from drilling operations on federal and Native American lands.”

2 New Solar Plants Boost Switch Operations, State’s Clean Energy Outlook.

The Las Vegas Sun (12/12, Akers) reports that “Switch Stations 1 and 2, at the Apex industrial park north of Las Vegas, were dedicated” Monday by “a group that included former U.S. Sen. Harry Reid, Clark County Commissioner Steve Sisolak, the Bureau of Land Management’s Nevada director, John Ruhs, and others in a ceremony.” The two facilities are “the first to be built in a BLM-owned solar energy zone, which recognizes areas that are prime for solar development.” Ruhs said, “This is a great example of the federal government and private industry collaborating on improving our nation’s energy independence and infrastructure. You can’t begin to emphasize the importance of that partnership.”

Agency Consents To Coal Lease Expansions In Western Colorado.

The AP (12/12) reports that the U.S. Forest Service has “given consent to expansions of two federal coal leases that would allow a mine to access land beneath the Sunset Roadless Area in western Colorado.” The Bureau of Land Management is “now considering whether to allow modification of the leases following the Monday decision.” The BLM “would then consider allowing coal exploration on the leases following approval.”

BLM Approves Sun Valley School Campus Project.

KOLO-TV Reno, NV (12/12) reports that the Bureau of Land Management, Carson City District has approved the Washoe County School District Sun Valley School Campus Project. The school district “plans to build a middle school and other future school facilities within an 80-acre parcel in Sun Valley.” Sierra Front Field Manager Bryant Smith said, “The decision to approve the project supports administration priorities of facilitating opportunities for development on public lands that create jobs and help local economies grow and being a good neighbor to the communities we serve.”

Bureau Of Reclamation

Reclamation To Lower Lake Moovalya In January 2018 For Annual Maintenance Activities.

The Parker \(AZ\) Pioneer (12/12) reports that the Bureau of Reclamation announced Tuesday that “it will lower the level of Lake Moovalya by approximately one-foot in elevation for about two weeks beginning in early January 2018.” The BOR is “coordinating this activity with the Bureau of Indian Affairs to allow the Colorado River Indian Tribes a window of opportunity to perform annual maintenance on their canals.”

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

Angelle Touts Trump’s Six-Step Approach For Jump-Starting Gulf Of Mexico Oil Drilling.

The Baton Rouge \(LA\) Business Report (12/12) reports that Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement Director Scott Angelle was “back in his native Louisiana on Monday touting the Trump administration’s six-step approach for revitalizing the nation’s offshore oil industry in the Gulf of Mexico.” Addressing a joint meeting of the Bayou Industrial Group and the South Central Industrial Association, Angelle “described the administration’s ‘six-step path’ to revitalizing the nation’s offshore oil industry through a mix of streamlining regulations and creating a partnership between the federal government and the industry.” Angelle said, “We’ve gone from an era of scarcity to an era of abundance pretty quick like for any generation of Americans. We have to move from the 1980s goal of energy independence to the 2017 goal and beyond of something called energy dominance. We’ve got to follow the path toward that goal.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

Butterfly Group Sues Trump Administration Over Border Wall.

The Hill (12/12, Wheeler) reports the North American Butterfly Association (NABA) filed a lawsuit against the Trump Administration “over its plans to build a border wall through its Butterfly Center in South Texas.” The wildlife center “abuts the Rio Grande and is part of the Fish and Wildlife Service’s Lower Rio Grande Valley Wildlife Corridor.” In its complaint, NABA “said construction of the proposed wall along the southern border would cut off two-thirds of its property, effectively destroying the Butterfly Center and leaving behind a 70-acre no man’s land between the proposed border wall and the Rio Grande.” The group accused DHS and its agencies of “flouting the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act, the Endangered Species Act and the 5th Amendment by threatening to take NABA’s property without just compensation.” Courthouse News (12/12, Eakin) reports the complaint “says Homeland Security officials have already damaged and destroyed part of the property for purposes unrelated to patrolling the border.” The Guardian \(UK\) (12/12, Carpenter) reports on some of the potential effects on wildlife from border wall construction.

Enviros Waiting On DOJ To OK Bison Range Agreement.

Law360 (12/12, Phillis) reports that the Public Employees for Environmental Responsibility and “a group of retired federal employees filed a joint status report on Monday with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service saying that a tentative agreement in a suit over the management of the National Bison Range still needs to be approved by government staff."

Grizzly Bear Management Meeting Held In Missoula.

KPAX-TV Missoula, MT (12/12, Bragg) reports that "with a growing number of bears, and a growing discussion over eventually not treating grizzlies as a 'threatened species', managers from local, state and federal agencies will meet in Missoula this week to discuss the next steps in grizzly bear management." The discussion will center on the possibility of "reducing federal protection for grizzlies on the Northern Continental Divide Ecosystem."

Meanwhile, the Daily Inter Lake \(MT\) (12/12, Reilly) reports that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is seeking comments on "draft criteria for the eventual recovery of the Northern Continental Divide Ecosystem grizzly bear." Spokeswoman Roya Mogadam explained, "The proposed objective and measurable habitat-based recovery criteria, once finalized, will help inform our recovery efforts as well as any future evaluations regarding the status of these bears under the ESA."

Prescribed Burn Starts In Marsh North Of New Orleans.

The AP (12/12) reports that federal crews are conducting a prescribed burn in Big Branch Marsh National Wildlife Refuge to kill invasive plants. The burn will allow native marsh grasses to return. WGNO-TV New Orleans (12/12) reports that 75 acres were burned on Tuesday.

National Park Service

National Parks In The U.S. Will Sharply Drop The Number Of Days They Allow Visitors To Get In For Free.

The AP (12/12, Gruver) reports that national parks will "sharply drop the number of days they allow visitors to get in for free, a move that was criticized by opponents of the parks' plan to raise entrance costs at other times of the year." After having 16 free-access days in 2016 and 10 days in 2017, the National Park Service announced Tuesday that "it will have four no-cost days next year. They will be Martin Luther King Jr. Day (Jan. 15), the first day of National Park Week (April 21), National Public Lands Day (Sept. 22) and Veterans Day (Nov. 11)."

Also reporting are the Denver Post (12/12, Blevins), the Sonora \(CA\) Union Democrat (12/12, McCarthy), the New Baltimore \(MI\) Voice News (12/12, Kessler), KTVX-TV Salt Lake City Salt Lake City (12/12, Francis), KXLY-TV Spokane \(WA\) Spokane, WA (12/12, Gardner), and KNXV-TV Phoenix Phoenix (12/12, Frigerio).

St. Louis Reconnects With The Gateway Arch And Its Pioneer Spirit.

The New York Times (12/12, Schneider) reports that "a $380 million project to expand the grounds and visitor center at the Gateway Arch" is bringing the people of St. Louis together. According to the article, "the project to beautify the arch grounds, redesign entrances and enlarge the underground visitor center drew such robust public support here that voters approved a 2013 local ballot proposition to finance the restoration with $85 million in sales tax revenue." The Gateway Arch Park Foundation "led the capital campaign, producing the largest amount in private gifts for a National Park Service unit in history."

Intense Bighorn Operation Underway In Zion To Replenish Utah Herds.

KUTV-TV Salt Lake City (12/12, Bolerjack) reports that a three-day "intense, complex operation that will hopefully replenish the desert bighorn sheep species in the southern Utah region" commenced on Tuesday. KSL-TV Salt Lake City (12/12, Witham) reports, The sheep will be "transplanted to the San Juan County area to bolster the sheep herd there, while also reducing density of the Zion herd and promoting genetic diversity of animals throughout the state."

'Dream Big': Denham Springs Residents Weigh In On What They'd Like City Parks To Provide.

The Baton Rouge \(LA\) Advocate (12/12, Couvillion) reports that "about 20 residents met with representatives of the National Park Service at City Hall on Tuesday to discuss their visions of what the city's parks could look like." The NPS has "been invited by the city to study its parks and ascertain from residents any improvements they'd like to see." Russell Clark, the park service's Rivers, Trails and Conservation assistance programmer, encouraged residents to “dream large. ... There are no bad ideas. We will not talk about costs tonight. I didn’t come here with a check book. However, once you decide what you want in your parks, we can later make suggestions on how to fund the improvements to your parks.”

Camping Fee At Chiricahua National Monument Rising.

The AP (12/13) reports that the National Park Service says it will hike camping fees at the Chiricahua National Monument “from $12 a day to $20 per day starting Jan. 1.” Park superintendent Allen Etheridge said “in a statement Tuesday that the increase was needed to fund maintenance and improvements at the park.” The Chiricahua National Monument southeast conducted “community outreach and accepted public comments,” and “it received no opposition to the boost in campsite fees.”

Great Smoky Mountains National Park Cabins Damaged By Arson.

The Asheville \(NC\) Citizen-Times (12/12, Chávez) reports that the National Park Service Investigative Services Branch is “seeking witnesses who may have information regarding a recent human-caused fire that caused damage to cabins in the Elkmont Historic District.” National Park Rangers responded to an initial report of the fire Nov. 29. According to the article, “the damaged cabins are in the area known as Daisy Town, on the Tennessee side of the park, southwest of Gatlinburg.” Rangers were “able to keep damages to the structures to a minimum.”

Salem Custom House Gets $130K Facelift.

The Salem \(MA\) Gazette (12/12, Giardina) reports that “the Salem Maritime National Historic Site facelift to Derby Street’s iconic and historical Custom House is nearly finished.” The repairs, which began in the beginning of November, are expected to be completed after the start of 2018.

Escambia Likely To OK $1.6M Bid For Dock.

The Pensacola \(FL\) News Journal (12/12, Little) reports that the Escambia County Commission will “likely approve a $1.6 million bid Thursday to build a dock at Quietwater Beach for the Pensacola Bay Ferry.” Gulf Islands National Seashore “plans to bring ferry service for Pensacola Bay in the spring, and on Tuesday, the County Commission heard an update on its portion of the project at the Committee of the Whole meeting.”

Acting Superintendent Named For Water Gap Park Recreation Area.

The New Jersey Herald (12/13, Scruton) reports that Kirsten Talken-Spaulling, currently superintendent at Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park, will “become the acting superintendent of Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area later this month, filling the position until a permanent replacement is named later next year.” Talken-Spaulling said, “I am really looking forward to learning more about Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area and helping with the transition to a new superintendent. There are a lot of exciting projects going on in the park right now, and I want to maintain that positive momentum moving forward.”

Wells County Village Of Manfred Recognized For Its History.

The AP (12/12) reports that the village of Manfred in Wells County has been added to the National Register of Historic Places.

Office Of Insular Affairs

World-Class Training For Robotics Students In Yap.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (12/13) reports that Yap students have “been receiving high tech training in the design and construction of robots as the five high schools of the Yap Robo League work toward their goal of a statewide robotics competition next spring.” A technical assistance program grant from the Office of Insular Affairs is helping with the initiative.

Office Of Surface Mining

Trump’s Mining Regulator Nominee Was Once Dropped By The Agency For Doing “Junk” Work.

ProPublica (12/12, MacDougall) reports that President Trump's pick to head the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, "like more than one of his nominees, is a vocal critic of the very agency he's being asked to lead." Notably, Steven Gardner "runs an engineering firm that produced a report as part of the process of preparing" the stream protection rule, "and the agency deemed it so shoddy that it cut ties with Gardner's company." Gardner said in an emailed statement, "It has been said that one of my biggest challenges will be winning the support of OSM staff I will oversee due to the past controversies. While there may be some in OSM that differed with my opinions, many others sent me messages of support noting they did not agree with OSM management during that controversial period."

US Geological Survey

ND Oil Assessment.

KNOX-FM Thompson, ND (12/12, Barrett) reports that the U.S. Geological Survey announced it will reevaluate the amount of recoverable crude oil North Dakota. Sen. John Hoeven and industry officials had been pushing for a new assessment that takes into account 17 other formations in western North Dakota's oil path "that could be exploited using technology developed for the Bakken and Three Forks directly beneath it." North Dakota Petroleum Council President Ron Ness says the new assessment should "provide a much clearer picture of the resources we have in North Dakota."

The Williston \(ND\) Herald (12/13, Jean) reports that Bakken oil wells are producing nearly double of what was produced in 2011, which is a "strong indicator that a new estimate will be much higher than the 2013 estimate" of 7.38 billion barrels of technically recoverable oil and gas in the Bakken and Three Forks shale layers.

2 Million Snakes Have Taken Over The Island Of Guam.

Vice (12/12) reports that "brown tree snakes are taking over Guam – in fact, they outnumber humans on the island 10 to 1, and they've taken a major toll on its ecosystem." The U.S. Geological Survey has deployed "groups of researchers to monitor traps and catch the snakes by hand." According to the article, "catching them is a tedious process, but it's crucial that the snakes be studied, and tracked, in order to develop effective control methods."

Additional Reading.

- Google Earth Engine Is A Time-lapse Tool That Shows World Changes. Business Insider (12/12, Dangerfield).
- Wildfire Season 2017 Has Been Terrible. Is Climate Change To Blame? Vox (12/12, Irfan).

Opinion Pieces

Rep. Andy Barr: Trump Should Follow Through On Camp Nelson Designation.

In an op-ed for the State Journal \(KY\) (12/12, Barr), Rep. Andy Barr urges President Trump to follow Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's recommendation that Camp Nelson Civil War Heritage Park receive a National Monument designation. Barr advocates for bringing attention to "a site that has the ability to unite the community and inspire a greater understanding and appreciation for this period in our nation's history." He also expresses appreciation for "the consideration Secretary Zinke and the Department of Interior have given this request and the process they have undertaken to ensure that sites given this designation have national historic significance and local support, unlike the abuses of this designation undertaken by the previous administration."

In Our Opinion: A New Utah National Park Leaves Too Many Questions Unanswered.

The Deseret \(UT\) News (12/12) editorializes that a proposal by Rep. Chris Stewart to create a new national park within the newly designated Escalante Canyons Monument leaves "too many questions" unanswered. The paper says that "the largest of these concerns is funding," noting the Park Service's $12 billion maintenance backlog. The editorial board also believes the issues surrounding national monuments has "become so politicized we doubt such congressional action would bring an end to the controversies or the protests."

Protect Antiquities, But Stop Government Overreach: Paher And Cobb.

In an op-ed for the Reno \(NV\) Gazette-Journal (12/12, Paher, Cobb), Stanley Paher, a field researcher for Benchmark Maps, and Dr. Tyrus W. Cobb, who served as special assistant to President Reagan for National Security Affairs, support Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's recommendation to reduce national monuments in Utah and Nevada. They acknowledge that "there are pockets of antiquities in these three designations that deserve protection," but "maintain that setting aside areas of this magnitude and prohibiting any mineral exploitation there represents serious government overreach." The authors conclude that they are advocates "for responsible and reasonable designations for protection, not for oversized 'monuments' whose boundaries extend well beyond the valuable sites."

Say No To Seismic Blasting And Drilling In The Atlantic.

For the "Congress" blog of The Hill (12/12, Savitz, Colley), Jacqueline Savitz, senior vice president of Oceana, and Ann Colley, executive director and vice president of The Moore Charitable Foundation and its North Carolina Affiliate, the Orton Foundation, warn that under the Trump Administration's "plan to rollback existing protections against offshore drilling in the Atlantic," seismic airgun blasting could begin. The authors argue that "seismic airguns harm marine life and are the precursor to an industry that could devastate our environment and coastal economies." They urge political leaders to "say no to any proposals for blasting and drilling in the Atlantic to protect our vibrant coastal industries and jobs that rely on a healthy ocean."

EDITORIAL: The Bureau Of Land Management Should Stop Dragging Its Feet On Ash Springs.

In an editorial, the Las Vegas Review-Journal (12/13) urges the Bureau of Land Management to act on Ash Springs. It notes that Ash Springs has remained closed for over four years, "and locals are growing impatient as the issue becomes a symbol for bureaucratic indifference and inertia." The paper concludes that "if the agency hopes to quash such skepticism, it will stop the foot dragging and get on with the business of reopening Ash Springs."

Additional Reading.

- After Bears Ears, No One's Public Lands Are Safe. Crosscut \(WA\) (12/11, Martini).
- Drastic Cuts To National Monuments. Steamboat \(CO\) Magazine (12/12, Damerville).
- Trump's Monumental Mistake In The Pacific. Honolulu Civil Beat \(HI\) (12/13, Wegmann).
- Nancy Working: Help Fight A Monumental Mistake. Steamboat \(CO\) Pilot & Today (12/12, Working).
- Outdoors: The Wilderness Is Worth Protecting. Gloucester \(MA\) Times (12/12, Sartwell).
- How State Should Shift Fire Prevention Strategy. San Jose \(CA\) Mercury News (12/12, Clendaniel).
- Guest Column: It's Official: NGS Will Continue To Operate Until The End Of 2019. Navajo-Hopi Observer \(AZ\) (12/12, Frazier).
- Lee Orr: Capito Should Defend Public Lands, Hunting Heritage. Williamson \(WV\) Daily News (12/13, Orr).
- Treat Wildfires Like Disasters. Bismarck \(ND\) Tribune (12/13, Rosenquist).
- Guest Opinion: The Nature Fix. Utah Policy (12/12, Livermore).
- 'Civil War Was For States Rights' Debunked At Antietam Battlefield National Park. Huffington Post (12/12, Peterman).
- Wayne Pacelle: National Park Service Plan To Kill Bison In Grand Canyon Unneeded, Unwarranted. YubaNet \(CA\) (12/12, Pacelle).
- Loyal Mehrhoff: Protect The Endangered Species Act. Topeka \(KS\) Capital-Journal (12/12, Mehrhoff).
- John Colson: Trumping The BLM For Colorado Oil And Gas. Aspen \(CO\) Times (12/12, Colson).
- COLUMN: Overcooked Steak With Ketchup. Anchorage \(AK\) Press (12/12, Fields).

Top National News

Media Analyses: Jones' Win A Rebuke To Trump, Bannon.

Doug Jones on Tuesday defeated Roy Moore in Alabama's closely watched Senate special election. Coverage casts Jones' win as a rebuke of President Trump, who backed Moore in the contest, despite the ex-state Supreme Court justice facing allegations of sexual misconduct with teenagers while in his 30s. Coverage also frames the outcome as a blow to former White House strategist Steve Bannon, who supported and stumped for Moore during the GOP primary and general election. In addition, reports and analyses indicate that Democrats are likely to use Trump's support of Moore as a cudgel to hammer GOP candidates in the 2018 midterm elections, and that the election outcome complicates congressional Republicans' efforts to implement Trump's legislative agenda.

The Hill (12/12, Smilowitz) reported that in a Tuesday night tweet, Trump offered congratulations to Jones. Said Trump, "Congratulations to Doug Jones on a hard fought victory. The write-in votes played a very big factor, but a win is a win. The people of Alabama are great, and the Republicans will have another shot at this seat in a very short period of time. It never ends!"

Under the headline "Democrat Doug Jones Wins Stunning Upset Over Roy Moore In Alabama Senate Race," the Montgomery \(AL\) Advertiser (12/12, Lyman) reports that Jones' win "isn't good news for Trump, whose favored candidates have now twice lost in Alabama. Trump initially endorsed Sen. Luther Strange, who was appointed in February to fill the seat left vacant when Sessions became Trump's attorney general but then lost to Moore in the summer's primaries. Trump's former chief strategist Steve Bannon had backed Moore from the beginning, and urged Trump to do the same." The Los Angeles Times (12/12, Barabak) reports that Jones win "sliced the GOP's already thin Senate majority to a bare 51-49."

The Washington Post (12/12, Debonis) reports that Jones' win "scrambles President Trump's legislative agenda for the coming year, threatens to heighten Republican infighting and sounds an alarm for the GOP's prospects in November's midterm elections." The New York Times (12/12, Burns, Martin) reports that Jones' win "could have drastic consequences on the national level, snarling Republicans' legislative agenda in Washington and opening, for the first time, a realistic but still difficult path for Democrats to capture the Senate next year. It amounted to a stinging snub of...Trump, who broke with much of his party and fully embraced Mr. Moore's candidacy, seeking to rally support for him in the closing days of the campaign."

The AP (12/12, Chandler, Peoples) reports that in scoring his "stunning victory," Jones beat "back history," the "embattled" Moore "and President Donald Trump, who urgently endorsed" the Republican candidate "despite a litany of sexual misconduct allegations." The AP adds that Moore's win "imperils already-uncertain Republican tax, budget and health proposals and injects tremendous energy into the Democratic Party's early push to reclaim House and Senate majorities in 2018." Even so, "many Washington Republicans viewed the defeat of Moore as perhaps the best outcome for the party nationally despite the short-term sting."

Bloomberg News (12/12, John) reports that with Trump and Bannon having backed Moore, Tuesday's outcome "is sure to lead to finger-pointing among Republicans," as Senate Majority Leader McConnell of Kentucky and other GOP lawmakers "opposed" the GOP nominee. Even so, "Moore's defeat means the party won't be tagged with his reputation" during the 2018 midterms. In addition, "McConnell will have a slightly easier time running the Senate, given that Moore had promised to try to oust him from his leadership position."

Reuters (12/12, Sullivan) reports that Jones' "stunning upset" win dealt "a political blow to...Trump," who "endorsed Moore even as other party leaders in Washington walked away from him." The Washington Times (12/12, McLaughlin) reports that Jones' victory "is a major blow both politically and policy-wise for...Trump, who went all-in for Mr. Moore, saying his agenda was on the line in the race." The Times adds, "Washington Republicans had deemed Mr. Moore a flawed candidate from the start and had tried to derail" his bid, "but GOP voters in Alabama, prodded by...Bannon, made Mr. Moore their nominee."

Ahead of Tuesday's results, John Dickerson reported on the CBS Evening News (12/12, story 3, 1:55, Glor), "When the RNC...and the President supported Roy Moore, a number of Republican office holders felt that went too far – that the party was just supporting someone because they had an 'R' next to their name and there were no other standards. So how does that get argued after the results come in?"

The Wall Street Journal (12/12, Hook, Jamerson) reports that Jones' win came in a contest that divided the GOP provided Democrats with momentum heading into next year's elections. Ahead of Tuesday's election results, Lester Holt reported on NBC Nightly News (12/12, lead story, 2:45, Holt) that the contest "has divided Republicans, tested moral convictions, and painted Moore to his supporters as a martyr against a liberal assault."

Under the heading "Roy Moore Loses, Sanity Reigns," the New York Times (12/12) editorializes, "That Alabama's voters" elected Jones "is cause for celebration. A triumph for decency and common sense in a state that seemed for a time at risk of abandoning both," his "win narrows the Republicans' Senate majority and delivers a deeply deserved rebuke to...Trump."

In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (12/12) blasts Bannon for having helped boost Moore to his primary win and for having backed him in the general election, saying Tuesday's outcome demonstrates that Bannon cares more about a king-maker role than he does about scoring wins on conservative policies.

McClatchy (12/12, Clark) reports that Jones' victory "complicates – and could all but doom – Republican efforts to score any big wins for...Trump. The narrowing of the Senate Republicans' already-slim majority represents a huge loss to the GOP, which failed this year to deliver on a campaign promise to repeal Obamacare and has struggled to pass spending legislation." Democrat Doug Jones's Win In Alabama Senate Likely Won't Affect GOP Tax Overhaul. However, the Wall Street Journal (12/12, Hook, Peterson) reports that Jones' win is unlikely to have any impact on the GOP's push for tax reform, because Republican congressional leaders are working to complete the legislation before the Democrat is sworn in.

The Washington Post (12/12, Sullivan) reports that in the case of Jones, "he was in the right place at the right time – a candidate who was lifted to victory in large measure by a series of twists and turns on the GOP side." The Post says that after Moore defeated GOP establishment-backed Sen. Luther Strange (R) in the primary, Moore "came up against accusations first reported by The Washington Post in November that he made unwanted sexual advances to teenage girls as young as 14 when he was in his 30s." Jones, adds the Post, now "will become perhaps the most unexpected member of the Senate in recent history."

The Washington Post (12/11, Sullivan, Weigel, Scherer) reports that Jones' win "followed a pattern set earlier this year in Virginia's gubernatorial election: a wave of enthusiasm among the Democratic party's traditional base, which was aided by a swing from Republicans to Democrats among well-educated suburban voters."

Under the headline "Many GOP Blunders Put Seat At Risk, Even Before Scandal," the New York Times (12/12, Burns) examines what it describes as "the improbable – and improbably ill-fated – decisions Republican leaders made" that led to Moore winning the GOP nomination and continuing his bid, even in the wake of allegations of sexual misconduct.

Writing for Vox (12/12, Matthews), Dylan Matthews says that Jones "could not have won without overwhelming support from Alabama's black community, and his victory suggests that Democratic coalitions in Southern states where the nonwhite share of the population is rising can be tenable, if enough white voters can be persuaded to defect from the Republicans."

The Los Angeles Times (12/12, Finnegan) reports, "In 2020, when Jones will be up for reelection, he will probably be challenged by a Republican more viable than the politically wounded Moore, so he will face pressure in the Senate to resist his party's most liberal impulses. Jones has promised to seek common ground with Republicans." The Times adds, "Analysts expect Jones to fit the mold of Sen. Joe Manchin III of West Virginia, another Democrat who was elected to the Senate in a deep-red state and votes accordingly."

In a profile piece the New York Times (12/12, Burns, Robertson) reports, "Before the special election on Tuesday, the largest of Mr. Jones's historical moments, and perhaps still the most consequential, were the successful prosecutions of two of the Klansmen involved in the bombing of the 16th Street Baptist Church in Birmingham, nearly 40 years after the crime. Mr. Jones served as lead prosecutor."

Moore Declines To Concede, Suggests Possibility Of Recount. The Washington Examiner (12/12, Correll) reports that Moore on Tuesday "declined to concede the" election, despite Jones having been "declared the victor in a close contest. 'When the vote is this close, it is not over,' Moore said at his election night rally." Moore campaign chair Bill Armistead "came on stage ahead of Moore and announced that his candidate is not conceding the election and floated a possible recount. Moore echoed the possibility of a recount."

Media Analyses: Jones Win Boosts Democrats' Odds Of Retaking Senate In 2018. Writing for Vox (12/12, Prokop), Andrew Prokop says that Jones' "shocking upset" win provides Democrats with "their first realistic chance of retaking the US Senate in 2018. And if they manage to pull that off, the consequences for the future of Donald Trump's presidency will be enormous." Prokop says that with Jones' victory having narrowed the GOP's Senate majority from to just 51-49, "defending all their incumbents plus winning just Nevada and Arizona [in 2018] would give Democrats a 51-49 majority in the Senate."

McClatchy (12/12, Glueck, Roarty) reports that the "most immediate impact" of Jones' "stunning" victory "is on the simple arithmetic of next year's midterm election: Democrats now need to gain only two – instead of three – Senate seats to win a majority. That's a huge change, especially in an election where the party might only have a chance at two other Republican-held seats. And suddenly, a Democratic Party that less than a year ago just wanted to keep its losses to a minimum in 2018 can make a run at a much bigger prize – all thanks to a once-inconceivable victory in one of the country's most conservative states." Ahead of Tuesday's election results, NBC's Steve Kornacki said on NBC Nightly News (12/12, story 2, 1:00, Holt) reported, "Alabama's a state Democrats are never in a million years supposed to win. If they pick it off tonight, the math next year for winning back the Senate becomes potentially doable for them."

NRSC Chief Says He Hopes Jones Will Vote With Republicans. The Hill (12/12, Samuels) reported that National Republican Senate Committee chief Sen. Cory Gardner on Tuesday said "that Alabama voters determined Roy Moore is 'unfit to serve,' adding that he hopes Democrat Doug Jones will vote with Republicans. 'I hope Senator-elect Doug Jones will do the right thing and truly represent AL by choosing to vote with the Senate Repub Majority,' Gardner said in a statement." The Hill added that Gardner "had called for Moore's expulsion if he won."

Exit Polls Show Voters Were Divided On Moore Accusations. Ahead of Tuesday's election results, ABC World News Tonight (12/12, lead story, 3:50, Muir) reported that "preliminary exit polls" showed "voters are almost evenly split on the allegations against Roy Moore. Forty-nine percent called them definitely or probably true, 45 percent definitely or probably false. Did it factor into their decision? Forty percent say they were one of several factors in their decision. Fifty-five percent say they were minor or no factor at all. And when asked which candidate shares voters values, 49 percent say Doug Jones shares share values. Forty-six percent say Roy Moore." ABC's Tom Llamas added that Trump on Tuesday morning tweeted, "The people of Alabama will do the right thing. Vote Roy Moore."

On the CBS Evening News (12/12, story 2, 2:15, Glor), Manuel Bojorquez similarly reported, "Exit polls out tonight show voters here are largely split on whether they believe the allegations against Roy Moore are true. Less than half said they believe the allegations. Forty-five percent called them false." David Muir reported on ABC World News Tonight (12/12, story 2, 0:45) that "in these preliminary exit polls tonight, for some voters, President Trump's opinion on this did make a difference." ABC's Tom Llamas added, "That's right, David. The President looms large in Alabama. This was one of his biggest victories last November, and according to our exit polls, nearly 30 percent of voters said one of the reasons they came out to vote today was to support President Trump. That's great news for Roy Moore. And today, I asked Roy Moore what he thought of the President and what his message was to President Trump for standing by his side? He told me, 'Thank you.'"

WPost Thanks Alabama Voters For Not Electing "An Accused Child Molester." Under the heading "Thank You, Alabama," the Washington Post (12/12) offers thanks to Alabama for choosing "to spare the nation the indignity of seating an accused child molester in the US Senate." The Post adds, "If Americans should feel grateful to Alabama voters, so should the" GOP, "much of which debased itself by following...Trump into the gutter of support for Mr. Moore. Its majority in the Senate will be slightly narrower, but the dignity of the Senate GOP caucus will be at least partially salvaged."

White House: Must Have Mind "In The Gutter" To See Sexism In Trump Tweet.

A day after Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand called for President Trump's resignation, citing allegations of sexual misconduct, President Trump fired back on Twitter with a post media reports and Democrats are casting as "sexually suggestive." Trump tweeted, "Lightweight Senator Kirsten Gillibrand, a total flunky for Chuck Schumer and someone who would come to my office 'begging' for campaign contributions not so long ago (and would do anything for them), is now in the ring fighting against Trump. Very disloyal to Bill & Crooked-USED!" While the tweet was almost immediately condemned by Democrats, including Gillibrand herself, White House press secretary Sarah Sanders defended it, arguing it was not sexist and only someone whose mind is "in the gutter" would interpret it that way.

The Washington Times (12/12, Boyer) reports that Sanders said, "There's no way that this is sexist at all. ... Only if your mind is in the gutter would you have read it that way. He's obviously talking about political partisan games." Politico (12/12, Nelson) quotes Sanders as saying, "This is simply talking about a system that we have that is broken in which special interests control our government. ... And I don't think that there's probably many people that are more controlled by political contributions than the senator that the president referenced." Politico (12/12, Karni), meanwhile, says White House aides "went on the defensive...sifting through vintage Trump tweets, looking for similar attacks on male politicians like New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman, to prove that Trump's attack of Gillibrand was not sexist." Sanders said Democrats were misinterpreting the comments. The Washington Examiner (12/12, Morrongiello) says Sanders "said the president did not owe Gillibrand an apology for his critical words."

To the New York Post (12/12, Jaeger, Fredericks), however, Trump's tweet was "sexually suggestive," and a Washington Post (12/12, Parker) headline calls it "sexually suggestive and demeaning." The Post reports that the "backlash and criticism was near instantaneous." The Hill (12/12, Fabian) says the tweet "triggered controversy in Washington, with many Democratic lawmakers rushing to Gillibrand's defense," while the Los Angeles Times (12/12, Bennett) says, "Social media and cable television talk shows quickly ignited with bipartisan outrage."

The New York Times (12/12, Tackett, Sullivan) says Trump "forcefully entered the national debate about sexual harassment on Tuesday, again dismissing his own accusers as fabricating their stories and saying that a prominent Democratic senator, a woman, 'would do anything' for campaign contributions." Trump "also blamed Democrats for the resurgence of accusations against him from women in the past." The Times adds that Trump's comments "ensured that calls for revived scrutiny over the women's allegations would gain new energy and prominence." Trump's "broadside against Gillibrand," The Hill (12/12, Shelbourne) reports, came a day after she said that the accusations of sexual misconduct against him are "credible," and told CNN that he should resign.

Nancy Cordes reported on the CBS Evening News (12/12, lead story, 2:55, Glor) that Gillibrand "was attending a bipartisan Bible study" when Trump "sent his suggestive tweet." USA Today (12/12, Jackson) says she called Trump's tweet a "sexist smear attempting to silence my voice." Bloomberg News (12/12, Olorunnipa) reports that Gillibrand tweeted, "You cannot silence me or the millions of women who have gotten off the sidelines to speak out about the unfitness and shame you have brought to the Oval Office."

On NBC Nightly News (12/12, story 3, 2:25, Holt), Kristen Welker said there is "increasing speculation" that Gillibrand "is eyeing her own bid for the White House in 2020." Highlighting the potential political benefits Gillibrand could reap from Trump's comments, the Washington Post (12/12, O'Keefe) reports that she "has been notably persistent on issues of equal rights – for gay men and lesbians, transgender people and women." Trump's "sexually suggestive attack...plays right into her portfolio." With "no serious GOP opponent" coming forward to challenge her next year and "speculation that she will renege on her vow not to run for president in 2020, the attack may do more political good than harm." The Wall Street Journal (12/12, Ballhaus) reports that Gillibrand sent a fundraising email a half-hour after Trump's tweet, saying, "Kirsten's always believed that if she's not standing up for what she believes in and fighting for her principles, she shouldn't be in public service."

Politico (12/12, Karni) says Democrats, "who had left Gillibrand in the wilderness after" she said that former President Bill Clinton should have resigned over his affair with Monica Lewinsky "rushed to her defense." Reuters (12/12, Brice) says Democrats "rallied behind Gillibrand," and the AP (12/12, Lucey) reports that they called Trump's comments "crude and worse."

USA Today (12/12, Przybyla) says "a number of her female Senate colleagues took to Twitter to lambaste the president." Sen. Mazie Hirono tweeted that Trump is a "misogynist, compulsive liar, and admitted sexual predator," and Sen. Elizabeth Warren tweeted, "Are you really trying to bully, intimidate and slut-shame @SenGillibrand? Do you know who you're picking a fight with? Good luck with that." Breitbart (12/12, Nash) says Warren "faced criticism" for the tweet as "numerous users point[ed] out how she had insinuated that Gillibrand is a 'slut.'" The Breitbart piece includes several examples of the critical tweets.

The Washington Times (12/12, Dinan) reports that Senate Minority Leader Schumer called Trump's tweet "nasty" and "unbecoming of a president." However, while "dozens of congressional Democrats" have called for an investigation into the harassment allegations against the President, Schumer declined to join those calls, "saying he didn't want to weigh in right now." Schumer "said he respected the rights of other Democrats to demand a probe, but said he wouldn't delve into the matter at his press conference Tuesday."

Roll Call (12/12, Bennett) reports that Rep. Eric Swalwell told CNN, "That was an ugly and suggestive tweet, and we all know what he was trying to say there, and it is beneath the office of the presidency." Senior White House correspondent Cecilia Vega reported on ABC World News Tonight (12/12, story 3, 2:50, Muir) that Tuesday, "the number of Democratic senators calling for his resignation grew to six, and in the House, more than 50 Democratic congresswomen came forward to call for a congressional investigation." Rep. Jackie Speier: "What took place this morning when the President tweeted about our colleague Senator Kirsten Gillibrand is grotesque. It took my breath away." Vega added that "more than 100 Democratic representatives, including men, all sign[ed] on to a letter saying, 'We cannot ignore the multitude of women who have come forward with accusations against Mr. Trump.'" Vega also said on ABC World News Tonight (12/12, story 4, 0:25, Muir) that Rep. Trey Gowdy "says his House Oversight Committee will not investigate these claims against the President, but he said he will refer this request for investigation to the Justice Department, which...is controlled by the President's Attorney General Jeff Sessions." Cordes said on the CBS Evening News (12/12, lead story, 2:55, Glor) that "the party that controls Congress...does not want to touch the issue." GOP leaders, Cordes added, "have been reluctant to even acknowledge the allegations against President Trump."

In an op-ed for USA Today (12/12, McDaniel), RNC Chairwoman Ronna McDaniel calls the responses from Gillibrand and Warren "laughable and ironic, considering they benefited from their previous relationships – until they became politically inconvenient." Citing Trump's efforts on coal exports, healthcare for veterans, immigration, and tax cuts, McDaniel says Trump "is delivering on exactly what matters" and "the rest is noise."

Other commentary is decidedly negative for the President. A USA Today (12/12) editorial argues that with this tweet, Trump "has shown he is not fit for office." USA Today says Trump is "uniquely awful," and calls his "sickening behavior...corrosive to the enterprise of a shared governance based on common values and the consent of the governed." USA Today opines, "A president who would all but call Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand a whore is not fit to clean the toilets in the Barack Obama Presidential Library or to shine the shoes of George W. Bush."

Mary Katherine Ham of The Federalist said on CNN's The Lead (12/12), "If you're going to play ball this way, just own that you're playing ball that way. That's what he's doing. I think it's pretty clear in the tweet. He is a guy who has a reputation for equal opportunity for meanness regardless of race or gender, that is true. But he often does include an extra sexist flourish for women and I think that is clearly what happened here." Kirsten Powers of USA Today said on CNN's The Lead (12/12) that "it's like what a 14-year-old does. You know, say something kind of inappropriate and then act like, 'What, I don't know what you're talking about,' and everybody knows what he's talking about."

NHL Hall Of Famer's Wife Tweets That Trump Was "Aggressive" In Elevator. USA Today (12/12, Schad) reports that Stacia Robitaille, wife of NHL Hall of Famer and Los Angeles Kings president Luc Robitaille tweeted Monday, "I was once on a elevator alone with @realDonaldTrump (& a man w/him) at Madison Square Gardens. He was aggressive & told me I was coming home with him. I laughed, stating I was married to a Ranger. He guaranteed me my husband didn't make as much money as him. #ThisIsOurPresident." In a second tweet, she wrote, "I'm not a liberal lefty and I'm not looking for attention. Just felt bad keeping it to myself."

People Magazine Tweets Photo Of Trump Meeting Accuser. The Washington Examiner (12/12, Mayfield) reports that in a tweet Tuesday, People magazine published "a photo of President Trump meeting one of the women accusing him of sexual misconduct." People photographer Natasha Stoyoff "was at Mar-a-Lago in late 2005 for an interview and photo shoot with Trump and his wife, Melania." The photo tweeted by People "featur[es] President Trump, Melania, Natasha Stoyoff, and the People staffers." People's tweet followed a claim by the President on Twitter decrying "the false accusations and fabricated stories of women who I don't know and/or have never met. FAKE NEWS!" Sanders responded to People's tweet, saying Trump was referring to the three Trump accusers who held a press conference on Monday.

FBI Agent In Russia Probe Called Trump An "Idiot," Told Colleague Clinton "Just Has To Win."

Coverage of the various investigations into Russian interference in the 2016 election focuses on the release of text messages sent by FBI officials who investigated both Donald Trump and Hillary Clinton. The New York Times (12/12, Schmidt, Apuzzo, Goldman) reports, "Senior F.B.I. officials who helped investigate" Trump's 2016 campaign told a colleague that Clinton "just has to win" and described a potential Trump victory as 'terrifying,'" according to text messages that have been turned over to Congress. Counterintelligence agent Peter Strzok exchanged the messages with FBI attorney Lisa Page. While "some messages criticized Mrs. Clinton's team," the Obama Administration, and other Democrats, "the two appeared appalled at some of Mr. Trump's comments during the campaign and feared that he would politicize the F.B.I."

The New York Post (12/12, Tacopino) reports that Strzok called Trump "an 'idiot' and an 'enormous douche'" in his messages, which are also briefly covered by Politico (12/12, Gerstein). The Washington Post (12/12, Barrett) reports, "Strzok and Page were key players in the investigation into Clinton's use of a private email server to do government work as secretary of state, as well as the probe into possible coordination between the Trump campaign and Russia in the 2016 election.”

The Washington Examiner (12/12, Westwood) reports that White House Press Secretary Sarah Sanders said on Tuesday that Trump “has ‘great concern’ about allegations of bias that face several current or former members” of special counsel Robert Mueller’s team. Sanders said, “If we’re going to continue to investigate things, let’s look at it when there’s some real evidence and some real proof of wrongdoing.” ABC World News (12/12, story 5, 1:45, Muir) reported that Trump’s “team is now pushing the Attorney General to appoint a second special counsel to investigate the FBI agents who are working on the Russia probe.” Unidentified speaker: “Would [the President] support the appointment of a special prosecutor to look into this?” Sanders: “I haven’t asked him that directly, but I know he has great concern about some of the conduct that’s taken place, and something that we certainly would like to see looked at.”

USA Today (12/12, Jackson, Johnson) reports that Trump attorney Jay Sekulow “called for a new special counsel to investigate any links between the Justice Department” and Fusion GPS, the “private firm that commissioned its own investigation of Trump’s ties to Russia.” However, Sekulow said on Fox News’ Hannity (12/12) that he “never said a word” about a special counsel to investigate Mueller’s probe.

Politico (12/12, Cheney) reports that freshman Rep. Matt Gaetz (R-FL), “who has said that the country is at risk of a ‘coup d’etat’” by Mueller, says that he warned Trump “personally last week that Mueller’s Russia investigation is ‘infected with bias’ against the president.” Gaetz said on Fox News Special Report (12/12), “I would say there’s a heck of a lot of evidence of collusion between the Democrats and Russia. ... The question is whether or not this entire narrative about President Trump and Russia was made up to cover up the collusion between Democrats and Russia.”

The New York Times (12/12) editorializes, “If only we could dismiss Sean Hannity, Jeanine Pirro, Laura Ingraham and the other well-paid propagandists at Fox News as though they were harmless drunks at the end of the bar, ticking off their conspiracy theories to anyone who will listen.” But “the guy sitting on the next stool” is Trump, “and he’s all ears. ... In Fox’s alternate universe, the investigation is ‘illegitimate and corrupt,’ or so says Gregg Jarrett, a legal analyst who appears regularly on [Sean] Hannity’s nightly exercise in presidential ego-stroking.” The Times writes, “The primary purpose of Mr. Mueller’s investigation is not to take down Mr. Trump. It’s to protect America’s national security and the integrity of its elections. ... When the propagandists say, ‘Get rid of Mueller,’ it’s not the truth they’re trying to protect; it’s Mr. Trump himself.”

Cobb Says Mueller Has Completed Interviews He Requested. Politico (12/12, Samuelsohn) reports that White House attorney Ty Cobb said on Tuesday that Mueller has “completed interviews with the last in a slate of about two dozen current and former White House witnesses he’s initially requested” as part of his investigation. Mueller’s office declined to comment.

Brit Hume said on Fox News Special Report (12/12), “There are a couple ways to look at that. One is that it is self-serving of the Administration to say this is all now coming to an end. ... The problem is of course that these are the people that are actually in touch more than anybody with the special counsel’s office, setting up interviews and the rest of it. So, they may indeed have a better sense of how far along this investigation is than anybody else.”

Trump Jr. Seeks House Intelligence Committee Leak Probe. The New York Times (12/12, Haberman, Fandos) reports that Donald Trump Jr. “has asked the House Intelligence Committee to open an investigation into leaked information related to his closed interview with the committee last week.” The New York Post (12/12, Fredericks) reports that his attorney Alan Futerfas sent a letter to Rep. Mike Conaway (R-TX), “who is heading up the committee’s probe of Russian interference in the election and possible collusion by the Trump campaign.” The letter “states that Trump Jr. and his lawyers were told that the interview would be ‘kept strictly confidential and not discussed publicly unless and until the full committee voted to release the transcript.’”

Politico (12/12, Watkins) reports that Trump Jr. “will meet behind closed doors with Senate Intelligence Committee investigators on Wednesday morning as part of their investigation.”

Chutkan Recuses Herself From A Second Fusion GPS Case. The Daily Caller (12/12, Ross) reports that US District Court Judge Tanya S. Chutkan “has recused herself from a second case involving Trump dossier firm Fusion GPS.” Russian technology executive Aleksey Gubarev “has sought to subpoena Fusion GPS records and to depose its employees to find out more about the research firm’s work on the dossier” as part of his defamation suit against BuzzFeed, which published the dossier. Chutkan last month recused herself last month from another case involving Fusion GPS.

Flynn Faced "Emotional Toll" Of Pressure In Days Before Plea. The AP (12/12, Tucker, McDermott, Smith) writes that "in the days before he pleaded guilty to lying to the FBI," Michael Flynn "was reveling in the pleasures of a new grandchild" but "also was lamenting the emotional toll of the criminal investigation he was facing. ... People close to Flynn" described the pressures as Mueller's investigators "not only zeroed in on him but also intensely examined the dealings of one of his sons, Michael G. Flynn."

Reuters (12/12, Lynch) reports that US District Court Judge Emmet Sullivan has ordered Mueller "to turn over any potential evidence that could be material for when he sentences" Flynn.

Trump Lawyer Dowd Famously Investigated Pete Rose. The Washington Post (12/12, Hendrix, Jackman) looks at the 1989 "crusade" that attorney John Dowd, now "President Trump's chief defense lawyer," pursued against "baseball pariah Pete Rose." It was Dowd "who investigated allegations that the Cincinnati Reds superstar had routinely gambled on baseball games."

Trump Signs Legislation Banning Federal Use Of Kaspersky Lab Software. Reuters (12/12, Volz) reports that Trump has signed legislation "that bans the use of Kaspersky Lab within the US government, capping a months-long effort to purge the Moscow-based antivirus firm from federal agencies amid concerns it was vulnerable to Kremlin influence." Sen. Jeanne Shaheen said, "The case against Kaspersky is well-documented and deeply concerning. This law is long overdue."

Tax Reform Negotiators Closing In On Agreement.

The AP (12/12, Ohlemacher, Gordon) reports, "Congressional Republicans on Tuesday rushed toward a deal on a massive tax package" that would reduce the top tax rate to 37% "and slash the corporate rate to a level slightly higher than what businesses and conservatives wanted." The AP adds that in a "flurry of last-minute changes that could profoundly affect the pocketbooks of millions of Americans, House and Senate negotiators agreed to expand a deduction for state and local taxes to allow individuals to deduct income taxes as well as property taxes."

Ylan Mui said on CNBC's Closing Bell (12/12), "Two people who have been briefed on this plan tell me that [the] details include a 21% corporate rate." The Wall Street Journal (12/12, Francis) writes that though both versions have a 20% corporate tax rate, a slightly higher percentage has been floated in order to find money for a variety of interests and alterations. CNBC's Mui continued, "The mortgage interest deduction would now go up to loans worth $750,000, and the pass-through deduction would go to 20%." The New York Times (12/12, Rappeport, Kaplan) reports that the House version has a $500,000 cap on the amount of deductible mortgage debt, which currently stands at $1 million. Politico (12/12, Kim, Becker) has a brief item on the mortgage debt compromise.

The Hill (12/12, Carney) reports that Senate Majority Whip Cornyn told reporters that negotiators "are still ironing out the details but are 'getting closer' to an agreement," and the Washington Post (12/12, Werner, Paletta) reports that House Ways and Means Chairman Kevin Brady "said numerous details remained in play." Brady said, "In the House we feel very strongly about fully repealing the estate tax. We're having those discussions with the Senate that took a different approach."

Trump To Lunch With Negotiators Before Speech. Reuters (12/12, Holland) reports that President Trump "will host congressional negotiators for lunch to discuss their progress" today, and then deliver what the Washington Times (12/12, Miller) calls "a major speech...to close the deal on tax cuts" from the White House at 3:00 p.m.

Ignatius: Tax Legislation The Result Of "Political Desperation." In his Washington Post (12/12) column, David Ignatius writes, "Of all the follies of 2017, the most tawdry may be the GOP's headlong rush to pass a tax bill that even its proponents don't understand. What's especially sad is that otherwise sensible Republicans seem to be capitulating to the tax-cut frenzy." Ignatius says the legislation is the result of "political desperation" after the Trump Administration "has failed in its first year to enact legislation that deals with major problems, such as health care and immigration."

Economist: Tax Bills Would Hurt Public Schools. In a New York Times (12/12) op-ed, economist Nora Gordon writes that the tax bills "would significantly cut the deduction of state and local taxes," which would hurt schools because the deduction makes taxpayers "more likely to support higher spending on programs funded by those taxes, including public schools."

Tillerson Offers To Begin Talks With North Korea Without Pre-Conditions.

Reuters (12/12, Spetalnick, Brunnstrom) reports Secretary of State Tillerson offered Tuesday to begin talks with North Korea "without pre-conditions, appearing to back away from US demands that Pyongyang must first accept that any negotiations would have to be based on North Korean nuclear disarmament." In an address to the Atlantic Council, Tillerson said, "Let's just meet." While "reiterating Washington's long-standing position that it cannot tolerate a nuclear-armed North Korea," Tillerson said the US was "ready to talk any time they're ready to talk," but stressed that Pyongyang must come to the table willing to change its course. "We can begin to lay out a map, a road map, of what we might be willing to work toward," Tillerson said, "suggesting that any initial contacts would be about setting the ground rules for formal negotiations." The AP (12/12, Pennington) says Tillerson's remarks represent a "soften[ing]" of the US' position on holding talks. Tillerson, it reports, called it "unrealistic" for the US to demand that North Korea come to the negotiating table ready to give up its nuclear program as they have "too much invested in it."

White House Says Trump Views Unchanged. The Washington Times (12/12, Miller), however, says the White House "walked back...Tillerson's comment," and Politico (12/12, Lima) reports the White House said later Tuesday that President Trump's position on North Korea remains unchanged. "The President's views on North Korea have not changed. North Korea is acting in an unsafe way not only toward Japan, China, and South Korea, but the entire world," White House press secretary Sarah Sanders said in a statement. "North Korea's actions are not good for anyone and certainly not good for North Korea."

Study: North Korea Business Transactions Evade Sanctions. The Wall Street Journal (12/12, O'Keefe, Talley) reports that US and South Korean researchers have identified business transactions that they say show North Korea is still able to evade international sanctions. The Journal says their findings are expected to be cited by advocates for toughening sanctions.

WPost: Biological Weapons Development One More Reason Kim Should Be Deposed. The Washington Post (12/12) editorializes that new reports that North Korea "has been acquiring the essential machinery and seeking the know-how to produce large amounts of germ-warfare agents rather quickly." The Post argues that "if Mr. Kim is creating the foundations for a biological weapons program, it should serve as one more warning of the escalating threat he poses. ... Through sanctions, diplomatic pressure and other means, the burden of Mr. Kim's despotic and reckless reign must be brought to an end."

WSJournal A1: Investigation Reveals Thousands Of Fake Comments On Regulations.

The Wall Street Journal (12/12, A1, Grimaldi, Overberg) reports in a front-page story that an investigation revealed that thousands of comments on federal agencies' regulatory dockets are fraudulent. The comments use apparently stolen identities and are posted by computers that are programmed to flood the dockets with comments. Fake comments have been posted on both sides of several hot-button issues, such as payday lending and net neutrality.

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Roy Moore Loses, Sanity Reins." The New York Times (12/12) editorializes, "That Alabama's voters" elected Doug Jones "is cause for celebration. A triumph for decency and common sense in a state that seemed for a time at risk of abandoning both," his "win narrows the Republicans' Senate majority and delivers a deeply deserved rebuke to...Trump."

"Who Bought That $50 Million Leonardo After All?" The New York Times (12/12) editorializes, "The big news in the art world the other day – and it was big – was the disclosure that [Saudi] Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman...was the mysterious buyer who paid a fortune for a distinctly non-Islamic Leonardo at an auction at Christie's in New York City last month." Doubts, however, "have now arisen as to whether the crown prince was the true buyer." The Times questions "why would the Saudis move so quickly to say the crown prince was not the moneyman?"

"Fox News v. Robert Mueller." The New York Times (12/12) editorializes, "If only we could dismiss Sean Hannity, Jeanine Pirro, Laura Ingraham and the other well-paid propagandists at Fox News as though they were harmless drunks at the end of the bar, ticking off their conspiracy theories to anyone who will listen." But "the guy sitting on the next stool" is President Trump, "and he's all ears. ... In Fox's alternate universe, the investigation is 'illegitimate and corrupt,' or so says Gregg Jarrett, a legal analyst who appears regularly on Mr. Hannity's nightly exercise in presidential ego-stroking." The Times writes, "The primary purpose of [special counsel Robert] Mueller's investigation is not to take down Mr. Trump. It's to protect America's national security and the integrity of its elections. ... When the propagandists say, 'Get rid of Mueller,' it's not the truth they're trying to protect; it's Mr. Trump himself."

Washington Post.

"Vote On The 'Dreamers.' Now." A Washington Post (12/12) editorial calls on Congress to "act now" on a measure permitting Dreamers to stay in the US, pointing to bipartisan support.

"There's A Deadly New Threat From North Korea." The Washington Post (12/12) editorializes that new reports that North Korea "has been acquiring the essential machinery and seeking the know-how to produce large amounts of germ-warfare agents rather quickly." The Post argues that "if Mr. Kim is creating the foundations for a biological weapons program, it should serve as one more warning of the escalating threat he poses. ... Through sanctions, diplomatic pressure and other means, the burden of Mr. Kim's despotic and reckless reign must be brought to an end."

"At The Supreme Court, The Cake Baker's Reasoning Falls Flat." The Washington Post (12/12) editorializes that the Supreme Court should reject the proposition that cakebaker Jack C. Phillips "had a constitutional right" under the First Amendment "to refuse the request" of a gay couple "who entered his bakery." The Post says "by all accounts, the happy couple did not ask Mr. Phillips for a cake bearing a message with which the baker might disagree. ... Instead, the would-be customers stated only that they were seeking a wedding cake before Mr. Phillips said he could not serve them." Because the laws of Colorado, where Mr. Phillips' bakery is based, "prohibit public accommodations — such as bakeries — from discriminating on the basis of sexual orientation," when a bakery opens it "commits to serving all customers equally."

Wall Street Journal.

"A Google vs. Amazon Antitrust Lesson." A Wall Street Journal (12/12) editorial argues that Google's tit-for-tat with Amazon, as each blocks the other's products from its online services, is evidence that the Justice Department's antitrust lawsuit to block AT&T's merger with Time Warner is unjustified. The Journal says the playing field between Google and Amazon is level, and increased competition in content production and distribution is making it harder for either company to win the battle. Thus, AT&T's acquisition of Time Warner would help resolve their dispute, rather than allow Time Warner to withhold content, as the Justice Department claims.

"Canada's Healthcare Queues." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (12/12) argues that the Canada's single-payer model is not a solution for the US healthcare system, citing a report from the Vancouver-based Fraser Institute, which found that Canadian patients face long waits to see specialists.

"Illinois Drives People Away." A Wall Street Journal (12/12) editorial attributes an acceleration in out-migration from Illinois to excessive property and business taxes that have hindered economic growth.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Democrat Doug Jones Wins Alabama Senate Seat With Alabama Loss, Trump, GOP Face Political Reckoning
Millions Of People Post Comments On Federal Regulations. Many Are Fake
Mall Operator Westfield Agrees To Takeover Bid Valued At \$16 Billion
Oil Prices Hit High, Before Sliding, Amid Disrupted Supply

New York Times:

Once A Long Shot, Democrat Doug Jones Wins Alabama Senate Race
Trump's Combative Denials Again Draw Him Into The Sexual Harassment Debate
Republicans, Closing In On Final Tax Bill, Aim For A Vote Next Week
Ken Friedman, Power Restaurateur, Is Accused Of Sexual Harassment
Quakes And Fires? It's The Cost Of Living That Californians Can't Stomach
"Fake News," Trump's Obsession, Is Now A Cudgel For Strongmen

Washington Post:

Jubilant Democrats Freshly Confident About Midterms

GOP Nears Deal To Cut Top Tax Rate For Wealthy
Trump Attacks Gillibrand In Tweet
Jones Wins In Democratic Upset
Results Scrambles GOP Legislative Agenda, Security In Senate
A Lousy Night For Republicans And A Big Defeat For Trump

Financial Times:

Disney Poised To Shake Up Media Industry With \$60bn Deal For Fox
Bitcoin Surge Prompts Legal Bid To Remove Mt Gox From Bankruptcy

Washington Times:

Half Of Americans Approve Of Banning Nazi Speech On Campus, With Definition Of 'Nazi' Expanding
Democratic Women Raise Voices For Trump Sex Misconduct Investigation After Tweet About Gillibrand
Republicans Scoff At One Of Economy's Fastest-Growing Sectors: Renewable energy
Iraqi Shiite Militia Leader Carries Iran's Proxy Battle To Israel's Border
Pregnant Ugandan Women Abandoned By Chinese Expatriates They Love
Acclaimed Film Of Boy-Man Love Raises Hackles In Hollywood

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Alabama Senate Race; Alabama Senate Race-Trump; WH-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; Sexual Misconduct Allegations-Gowdy; Russia Investigation; NYC Terror Attack; Iowa-School Bus Fire; Weather Forecast; California Wildfires; Holiday Delivery Delays; San Francisco Mayor Dies; NFL Network-Sexual Misconduct; UK Royal Family-Star Wars Premier.

CBS: WH-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; Alabama Senate Race; Alabama Senate Race-Analysis; Paris-One Planet Summit; Arizona-2016 Police Shooting; NYC Terror Attack; San Francisco Mayor Dies; California Wildfires; Facebook's Influence On Teens; Holiday Delivery Delays-UPS; AAA-Premium Gas; Health-3D Printed Robotic Hands.

NBC: Alabama Senate Race; Alabama Senate Race-Analysis; WH-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; Healthcare-Jimmy Kimmel; NYC Terror Attack; California Wildfires; Weather Forecast; Teens-Mental Health; Transportation-Dynamic Pricing; San Francisco Mayor Dies; Flu Season-Men; UK Royal Family-Star Wars Premier.

Network TV At A Glance:

Alabama Senate Race – 12 minutes, 30 seconds
WH-Sexual Misconduct Allegations – 6 minutes, 10 seconds
NYC Terror Attack – 4 minutes, 50 seconds
Holiday Delivery Delays – 1 minute, 35 seconds
California Wildfires – 1 minute, 10 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Alabama Senate Race-Jones Wins; Alabama Senate Race-Analysis; NYC Terror Attack; Russia Investigation.

CBS: Alabama Senate Race-Jones Wins; Russia Investigation; NYC Terror Attack; San Francisco Mayor Dies; Minnesota-Al Franken Successor Named.

FOX: Alabama Senate Race-Jones Wins; Alabama Senate Race-Trump; WH-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; NYC Terror Attack; California Wildfires; LAPD-Roman Polanski Investigation.

NPR: Alabama Senate Race-Jones Wins; Alabama Senate Race-Analysis; WH-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; California Wildfires; NYC Terror Attack; Trump Israel Decision-Netanyahu Comments; Wall Street.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Delivers remarks on tax reform, to an audience featuring young people and middle-class families.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — No public events scheduled

FIRST LADY MELANIA TRUMP — Visits Joint Base Anacostia-Bolling to deliver brief remarks and help sort and box toys for the Marine Corps Reserve Toys for Tots Campaign.

US Senate: 9:30 AM Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing on use of force – Hearing on ‘Using Force: Strategic, Political, and Legal Considerations’, with testimony from former President’s Assistant Stephen Hadley; former Under Secretary of Defense for Policy Christine Wormuth; and former National Security Council Legal Advisor John Bellinger III.

9:30 AM Senate Agriculture Committee hearing on ‘Safeguarding American Agriculture in a Globalized World’ – Hearing on ‘Safeguarding American Agriculture in a Globalized World’, with testimony from Blue Ribbon Study on Biodefense Co-Chair Joseph Lieberman; Kansas State University President Gen. (Ret.) Richard Myers; Michigan State University Professor of Plant, Soil and Microbial Sciences Dr Raymond Hammerschmidt; and North Carolina State Veterinarian Dr R.D. Meckes.

9:50 AM Senate Public Works Committee Business Meeting, hearing on NRC oversight – Business Meeting, to consider the nomination of R.D. James to be Assistant Secretary of the Army for Civil Works * Immediately followed by hearing on ‘Oversight of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission’, with testimony from NRC Chairman Kristine Svinicki and Commissioners Jeffery Baran and Stephen Burns.

10:00 AM Senate Armed Services CLOSED hearing – CLOSED: Department of Defense Global Counterterrorism Operations with Mark E. Mitchell, Acting Assistant Secretary of Defense for Special Operations / Low-Intensity Conflict; Major General Albert M. Elton III, USAF, Deputy Director for Special Operations and Counterterrorism, Joint Staff. <https://www.armed-services.senate.gov/hearings/17-12-13-department-of-defense-global-counterterrorism-operations>.

10:00 AM Senate HELP Committee hearing on 21st Century Cures Act implementation – Hearing on ‘Implementation of the 21st Century Cures Act: Responding to Mental Health Needs’, with testimony from Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration Assistant Secretary for Mental Health and Substance Use Dr Elinore McCance-Katz.

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Elizabeth Branch to be U.S. Circuit Judge for the Eleventh Circuit; R. Stan Baker to be U.S. District Judge for the Southern District of Georgia; Charles Barnes Goodwin to be U.S. District Judge for the Western District of Oklahoma; Matthew Kacsmayk to be U.S. District Judge for the Northern District of Texas; Matthew Spencer Petersen to be U.S. District Judge for the District of Columbia; and Eli Jeremy Richardson to be U.S. District Judge for the Middle District of Tennessee.

10:00 AM Senate Commerce, Science, & Transportation Committee Executive Session – Executive Session, to consider ‘S. 2202, National Transportation Safety Board Reauthorization Act’, ‘S. 2200, National Integrated Drought Information System Reauthorization Act of 2018’, ‘S. 1768, National Earthquake Hazards Reduction Program Reauthorization Act of 2017’, the nomination of Barry Lee Myers to be Under Secretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere, and Coast Guard promotions.

11:00 AM Independent Sen. Bernie Sanders and Dem Reps. Rosa DeLauro and Keith Ellison at NAFTA Day of Action press event – Press event as part of NAFTA Day of Action, held amid renegotiation talks in Washington, DC. Speakers include Independent Sen. Bernie Sanders, Democratic Reps. Rosa DeLauro and Keith Ellison, American Federation of Teachers President Randi Weingarten, NETWORK Lobby Executive Director Sister Simon Campbell, and National Farmers Union President Roger Johnson * Day of Action includes Americans nationwide calling and tweeting at Congress to demand a successful renegotiation of NAFTA to eliminate its outsourcing incentives and add strong labor and environmental terms.

1:15 PM Senators, Patients on Children’s Health Insurance and Community Health Centers – U.S. Senators Debbie Stabenow (D-MI), Bob Casey (D-PA), and Mazie Hirono (D-HI) will urge Congress to immediately act and extend funding for the Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP), which serves nine million children across the country, and funding for community health centers, which serve 26 million patients. Federal funding for both of these programs ran out on September 30th. Participants: Senator Debbie Stabenow (D-MI); Senator Bob Casey (D-PA); Senator Mazie Hirono (D-HI); Connie Cavara, MomsRising member and nurse from Pittsburgh, PA, whose children receive medical care through CHIP; Kymberly Renee Grafton, veteran who receives health care at DC-based community health center.

2:00 PM Rally, civil disobedience, and sit-ins at Congressional offices in opposition to GOP tax bill – Center for Popular Democracy, Housing Works, Women’s March, Hedge Clippers, People for Bernie, and Strong Economy for All Coalition lead rally, civil disobedience, and sit-ins at Congressional offices in opposition to the Republican tax bill. Rally, on the Capitol Lawn, headlined by Ady Barkan – an activist who became famous last week for confronting Republican Sen. Jeff Flake mid-flight over his vote on the bill.

2:00 PM 'Tax Cuts and Jobs Act' House-Senate Conference meeting – 'H.R. 1, Tax Cuts and Jobs Act' House-Senate Conference meeting * Conferees include Republicans Reps. Kevin Brady, Devin Nunes, Peter Roskam, Diane Black, Kristi Noem, Rob Bishop, Don Young, Fred Upton, and John Shimkus and Sens. Orrin Hatch, John Cornyn, John Thune, Rob Portman, Tim Scott, Pat Toomey, Mike Enzi, and Lisa Murkowski and Democrats Reps. Richard Neal, Sander Levin, Lloyd Doggett, Raul Grijalva, and Kathy Castor and Sens. Ron Wyden, Debbie Stabenow, Robert Menendez, Tom Carper, Bernie Sanders, Patty Murray, and Maria Cantwell.

2:30 PM Senate Judiciary subcommittee hearing on consumer welfare and antitrust – Antitrust, Competition and Consumer Rights Subcommittee hearing on 'The Consumer Welfare Standard in Antitrust: Outdated or a Harbor in a Sea of Doubt?', with testimony from former Federal Trade Commission Bureau of Competition Acting Director Tad Lipsky; Open Markets Institute Executive Director Barry Lynn; American Antitrust Institute President Dr Diana Moss; former Deputy Assistant Attorney General Carl Shapiro; and Global Antitrust Institute Executive Director (and former FTC Commissioner) Joshua Wright.

2:30 PM Senate Foreign Relations Committee treaties hearing – Treaties hearing on 'Extradition Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Kosovo', 'Extradition Treaty between the United States of America and the Republic of Serbia', 'The Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Kiribati on the Delimitation of Maritime Boundaries', and 'The United Nations Convention on the Assignment of Receivables in International Trade', with testimony from State Department Acting Legal Adviser Richard Visek; and Deputy Assistant Attorney General Bruce Swartz.

3:00 PM Helsinki Commission briefing on the Global Magnitsky Act – Helsinki Commission briefing on 'Combating Kleptocracy with the Global Magnitsky Act', seeking to provide an overview of 'the scourge of corruption in the OSCE region and how the Global Magnitsky Act can be employed to combat it', including discussion of 'the types of individuals and groups that should come under consideration for placement on the sanctions list and the ramifications of any such placement'. Panelists include Open Society Policy Center Senior Policy Advisor for Europe and Eurasia Alex Johnson, Hudson Institute Kleptocracy Initiative Executive Director Charles Davidson, and Human Rights First Senior Vice President Rob Berschinski.

Senate HELP Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Kenneth Marcus to be Assistant Secretary of Education for Civil Rights; Johnny Collett to be Assistant Secretary of Education for Special Education and Rehabilitative Services; Scott Mugno to be Assistant Secretary of Labor for Occupational Safety and Health; and Dr William Beach to be Commissioner of Labor Statistics.

US House: 9:30 AM House Homeland Security Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H.R. 1486, the Securing American Non-Profit Organizations Against Terrorism Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4433, the Securing Department of Homeland Security Firearms Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4553, the Terrorist Screening and Targeting Review Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4555, the DHS Interagency Counterterrorism Task Force Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4559, the Global Aviation System Security Reform Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4561, the Security Assessment Feasibility for Equipment Testing and Evaluation of Capabilities for our Homeland Act', 'H.R. 4564, the Post-Caliphate Threat Assessment Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4567, the DHS Overseas Personnel Enhancement Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4569, the Counterterrorism Information Sharing Improvement Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4577, the Domestic Explosives Detection Canine Capacity Building Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4578, the Counter Terrorist Network Act', and 'H.R. 4581, the Screening and Vetting Passenger Exchange Act of 2017'.

10:00 AM House Committee on the Judiciary oversight hearing with Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein.

10:00 AM House Natural Resources Committee markup hearing concludes – Markup hearing concludes on legislation including 'H.R. 200, Strengthening Fishing Communities and Increasing Flexibility in Fisheries Management Act', 'H.R. 1349, To amend the Wilderness Act to ensure that the use of bicycles, wheelchairs, strollers, and game carts is not prohibited in Wilderness Areas, and for other purposes', 'H.R. 1675, National Landslide Preparedness Act', 'H.R. 2888, Ste. Genevieve National Historical Park Establishment Act', 'H.R. 3588, RED SNAPPER Act', 'H.R. 4033, National Geologic Mapping Act Reauthorization Act', 'H.R. 4264, Hyde Park Land Conveyance Act', 'H.R. 4266, Acadia National Park Boundary Clarification Act', 'H.R. 4465, Endangered Fish Recovery Programs Extension Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4475, National Volcano Early Warning and Monitoring System Act', 'H.R. 4568, Enhancing Geothermal Production on Federal Lands Act', 'S. 825, Southeast Alaska Regional Health Consortium Land Transfer Act of 2017', and 'S. 1285, Oregon Tribal Economic Development Act' * Began yesterday.

10:00 AM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on the drug supply chain – Health Subcommittee hearing on ‘Examining the Drug Supply Chain’, with testimony from Association for Accessible Medicines President and CEO Chip Davis; Biotechnology Innovation Organization President of Advocacy, Law, and Public Policy Tom DiLenge; America’s Health Insurance Plans Senior Executive Vice President and COO for Policy and Regulatory Affairs Matt Eyles; Healthcare Distribution Alliance Senior Vice President for Government Affairs and General Counsel Elizabeth Gallenagh; American Medical Association Chair of the Board of Trustees Gerald Harmon; National Community Pharmacists Association CEO B. Douglas Hoey; Pharmaceutical Care Management Association President and CEO Mark Merritt; Patients for Affordable Drugs founder and President David Mitchell; American Hospital Association Executive Vice President for Government Relations and Public Policy Tom Nickels; and Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America Executive Vice President for Policy, Research and Membership Lori Reilly.

10:00 AM House Science subcommittee hearing on preventing head trauma – Research and Technology Subcommittee hearing on ‘Head Health Challenge: Preventing Head Trauma from Football Field to Shop Floor to Battlefield’, with testimony from NIST Material Measurement Lab Acting Director Dr Michael Fasolka; Dynamic Research Vice President and Technical Director Scott Keschull; Conservation X Labs CEO and founder Dr Alex Dehgan; and Windpact CEO Shawn Springs.

10:00 AM House Oversight Committee hearing on the Bureau of Prisons and inmate reentry – Hearing on ‘Oversight of the Bureau of Prisons and Inmate Reentry’, with testimony from Federal Bureau of Prisons Director Mark Inch; Department of Justice Inspector General Michael Horowitz; Government Accountability Office Director of Homeland Security and Justice Diana Maurer; and University of Virginia Justice Tech Lab Director Jennifer Doleac.

10:00 AM House Veterans’ Affairs subcommittee oversight hearing on pre-discharge claims programs – Disability Assistance and Memorial Affairs Subcommittee oversight hearing on ‘Pre-Discharge Claims Programs: Are VA and DOD Effectively Serving Separating Military Personnel?’

10:00 AM Oversight Subcommittee hearing on ‘IRS Reform: The Taxpayer Experience’.

10:15 AM House Energy subcommittee hearing on North American energy trade – Energy Subcommittee hearing on ‘The Impacts and Future of North American Energy Trade’, with testimony from ABB Global Head of Strategic Projects Allen Burchett (on behalf of The National Association of Manufacturers); U.S. Chamber of Commerce Global Energy Institute President and CEO Karen Harbert; Resources for the Future Senior Fellow Dr Alan Krupnick; and American Fuel and Petrochemical Manufacturers President and CEO Chet Thompson.

11:00 AM Independent Sen. Bernie Sanders and Dem Reps. Rosa DeLauro and Keith Ellison at NAFTA Day of Action press event – Press event as part of NAFTA Day of Action, held amid renegotiation talks in Washington, DC. Speakers include Independent Sen. Bernie Sanders, Democratic Reps. Rosa DeLauro and Keith Ellison, American Federation of Teachers President Randi Weingarten, NETWORK Lobby Executive Director Sister Simon Campbell, and National Farmers Union President Roger Johnson * Day of Action includes Americans nationwide calling and tweeting at Congress to demand a successful renegotiation of NAFTA to eliminate its outsourcing incentives and add strong labor and environmental terms.

11:30 AM House Administration Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on ‘H.R. 4009: Smithsonian National Zoological Park Central Parking Facility Authorization Act’ and ‘Committee Resolution. XXX: Updating the Advertisement Regulations found in the Members’ Congressional Handbook’.

12:00 PM House Democrats hold forum on the GOP tax bill – House Minority Whip Steny Hoyer, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi and House Ways and Means Committee hold forum on Republican tax legislation and the potential impacts of the proposals on middle-class families and the U.S. economy. Participants include: Moody’s Analytics Chief Economist Mark Zandi, former Council of Economic Advisers Chairman Jason Furman, University of Pennsylvania PhD Candidate Brenda Salantes, and Union Veterans Council Executive Director Will Attig. Original press advisory indicated that U.S. Treasury Secretary Mnuchin was “invited”.

12:00 PM ‘The Many Faces of Copyright’ event – ‘The Many Faces of Copyright’ event, hosted by the Copyright Alliance and SIIA in conjunction with the Creative Rights Caucus, discussing ‘the importance of copyright to technical, software, and publishing industries’, featuring a panel of Kiplinger Washington Editors Senior Vice President and COO Denise Elliott, RELX Group’s Karen Marangi, and SAS Institute Patents Director Timothy Wilson.

12:00 PM House debates bills on Iran – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda including ‘H.R. 1638 – Iranian Leadership Asset Transparency Act’ and ‘H.R. 4324 – Strengthening Oversight of Iran’s Access to Finance Act’.

2:00 PM Rally, civil disobedience, and sit-ins at Congressional offices in opposition to GOP tax bill – Center for Popular Democracy, Housing Works, Women's March, Hedge Clippers, People for Bernie, and Strong Economy for All Coalition lead rally, civil disobedience, and sit-ins at Congressional offices in opposition to the Republican tax bill. Rally, on the Capitol Lawn, headlined by Ady Barkan – an activist who became famous last week for confronting Republican Sen. Jeff Flake mid-flight over his vote on the bill.

2:00 PM 'Tax Cuts and Jobs Act' House-Senate Conference meeting – 'H.R. 1, Tax Cuts and Jobs Act' House-Senate Conference meeting * Conferees include Republicans Reps. Kevin Brady, Devin Nunes, Peter Roskam, Diane Black, Kristi Noem, Rob Bishop, Don Young, Fred Upton, and John Shimkus and Sens. Orrin Hatch, John Cornyn, John Thune, Rob Portman, Tim Scott, Pat Toomey, Mike Enzi, and Lisa Murkowski and Democrats Reps. Richard Neal, Sander Levin, Lloyd Doggett, Raul Grijalva, and Kathy Castor and Sens. Ron Wyden, Debbie Stabenow, Robert Menendez, Tom Carper, Bernie Sanders, Patty Murray, and Maria Cantwell.

2:00 PM House Technology subcommittee hearing on solar energy – Energy Subcommittee hearing on 'Advancing Solar Energy Technology: Research Trumps Deployment', with testimony from Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of Energy for Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy Daniel Simmons; National Renewable Energy Laboratory Director Dr Martin Keller; Stanford University Computer Science Executive Director of Strategic Research Initiatives Dr Steve Eglash; and Institute for Energy Research Director of Policy Kenny Stein

3:00 PM Helsinki Commission briefing on the Global Magnitsky Act – Helsinki Commission briefing on 'Combating Kleptocracy with the Global Magnitsky Act', seeking to provide an overview of 'the scourge of corruption in the OSCE region and how the Global Magnitsky Act can be employed to combat it', including discussion of 'the types of individuals and groups that should come under consideration for placement on the sanctions list and the ramifications of any such placement'. Panelists include Open Society Policy Center Senior Policy Advisor for Europe and Eurasia Alex Johnson, Hudson Institute Kleptocracy Initiative Executive Director Charles Davidson, and Human Rights First Senior Vice President Rob Berschinski.

3:30 PM House Armed Services subcommittee hearing on physiological episodes in aircraft – Tactical Air and Land Forces Subcommittee hearing on 'Addressing Physiological Episodes in Fighter, Attack, and Training Aircraft', with testimony from NASA Engineering and Safety Center Principal Engineer Clinton Cragg; U.S. Air Force Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations Lt. Gen. Mark Nowland; Naval Air Systems Command Commander Vice Adm. Paul Grosklags; and U.S. Navy Physiological Events Action Team Lead Rear Adm. Sara Joyner.

Other: 8:30 AM DC Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting – DC Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting and Chairman's Inaugural Breakfast, with speakers including U.S. Chamber of Commerce President and CEO Thomas Donohue, Washington, DC, Mayor Muriel Bowser, and DC Chamber of Commerce President and CEO Vincent Orange. Location: Walter E. Washington Convention Center, 801 Mount Vernon PI NW, Washington, DC www.dcchamber.org <https://twitter.com/dcchamber>.

8:55 AM Jamestown Foundation Annual Terrorism Conference – Jamestown Foundation Eleventh Annual Terrorism Conference, including keynote from National Security Advisor Lt. Gen. H.R. McMaster, and other speakers including former CIA Director / former National Security Agency Director Gen. (Ret.) Michael Hayden, Georgetown University Edmund A. Walsh School of Foreign Service Center for Security Studies and Security Studies Program Director Bruce Hoffman, and former Under Secretary of Defense for Intelligence and Defense Intelligence Enterprise CEO Dr Michael Vickers. Location: National Press Club, 529 14th St NW, Washington, DC www.jamestown.org #JTFterror.

9:00 AM HHS Innovation Day – HHS Innovation Day, hosted by the Department of Health and Human Services, featuring 'stellar employees at HHS who are working to improve how their office or agency delivers on their mission – and who perform #HHSInnovation'. Speakers include HHS CTO Bruce Greenstein, University of Pittsburgh Medical Center (UPMC) Chief Innovation Officer Dr Rasu Shrestha, and Defense Innovation Board Executive Director Joshua Marcuse. Location: Hubert H. Humphrey Building, Washington, DC www.hhs.gov #HHSInnovation.

11:00 AM Washington FPC media roundtable on the latest 'To Walk the Earth in Safety' report – Washington Foreign Press Center On-The-Record Media Roundtable with State Department Bureau of Political-Military Affairs, Weapons Removal and Abatement Office Director Stanley Brown discussing yesterday's release of the 16th edition of 'To Walk the Earth in Safety (TWEIS)' – a report on the U.S. Govt's conventional weapons destruction programs. Location: National Press Building, 529 14th St NW, Washington, DC www.fpc.state.gov
<https://twitter.com/ForeignPressCtr>.

1:30 PM Dem Sen. Maria Cantwell speaks at BPC on 'Low-Income Housing Tax Credit and Health' – 'Building the Case: Low-Income Housing Tax Credit and Health' Bipartisan Policy Center discussion, exploring ways to leverage LIHTC policy to improve health, research on the linkages between affordable housing and health, critical research gaps, and the implications for federal policy moving forward. Speakers include Democratic Sen. Maria Cantwell, UnitedHealthcare Senior Vice President for Policy and Strategy Catherine Anderson, Georgia Health Policy Center Policy Impact Specialist Michelle Rushing, and Enterprise Community Partners Knowledge, Impact & Strategy Senior Director Stephany De Scisciolo. Location: Bipartisan Policy Center, 1225 I St NW, Washington, DC www.bipartisanpolicy.org https://twitter.com/BPC_Bipartisan #BPCLive.

1:45 PM DHS Deputy Secretary Elaine Duke speaks at Hudson Institute on combating terrorism and WMDs – Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security Elaine Duke speaks at the Hudson Institute on 'The Future of Combating Terrorism and Countering the Use of WMD', including discussion on the creation of the Department's new Countering Weapons of Mass Destruction. Followed by panel discussion with Deputy Secretary Duke and Acting Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security for Countering Weapons of Mass Destruction Jim McDonnell. Location: Hudson Institute, 1201 Pennsylvania Ave. NW, Washington, DC <http://www.hudson.org> <https://twitter.com/HudsonInstitute>.

5:30 PM INSA Leadership Dinner – INSA Leadership Dinner, with honored guest and keynote speaker U.S. Special Operations Command Commander General Raymond Thomas III. Location: Hilton McLean Tysons Corner, 7920 Jones Branch Dr, McLean, VA <http://www.insaonline.org/> <https://twitter.com/INSAAlliance>.

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: "The state of Alabama had a special election to decide whether or not an alleged sexual predator of young girls would be their senator. Remember when we used to find out senators were dirtbags after we elected them?"

Jimmy Kimmel: "I don't know the results yet. The polls just closed. I do know that Roy Moore, he shouldn't even be in. I'm not talking about the Senate race. I mean the human race."

Jimmy Kimmel: "There's been plenty of opposition to Roy Moore even within his own party. The other Republican senator from Alabama spoke out against him and said he did not vote for him. President Trump's daughter Ivanka spoke out against him. She said there's a special place in hell for people who prey on children. And their dad was like, 'Yes, but before that, there's a special place for him in the Senate, by me.'"

Jimmy Kimmel: "So there are rumblings – if he wins, Republican leaders might not even put Roy Moore on any committees. ... Roy Moore could become the first person to be banned from the Senate Budget Committee and the mall."

Harry Styles: "Yesterday, President Trump announced that he wants to send astronauts back to the moon for the first time in 45 years. And then the President was startled when Melania yelled, 'I'll go!'"

Jimmy Fallon: "Today was the big Alabama Senate election, and as promised, Roy Moore rode his horse to the polls. It got weird when people said, 'Can we vote for the horse?'"

Jimmy Fallon: "Listen to this, guys. I read that Vladimir Putin gets daily reports of Trump's tweets. Every day Putin reads them and goes, 'My God, what have I done?'"

Jimmy Fallon: "Speaking of tweets, Trump got in a Twitter fight with Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand over his sexual assault allegations. Just this week, he insulted a senator, endorsed Roy Moore, and called 20 women liars. It's like he saw his approval rating was 32 and said, 'I bet I can get it under 30 by the weekend.'"

Seth Meyers: "Alabama Senate candidate Roy Moore rode on horseback today to his polling place to vote in the special election. Look at that. What a majestic picture of two animals not allowed in the mall."

Seth Meyers: "That's right, Roy Moore rode his horse to vote in the special election. Because when Roy Moore is choosing a mode of transportation, he always asks himself, 'What do 14-year-old girls like?'"

Seth Meyers: "Former White House chief strategist Steve Bannon said at a campaign rally yesterday that there was a special place in hell for Republicans who didn't support Roy Moore. A special place? Is it the exit?"

Seth Meyers: "President Trump signed a $700 billion defense bill today, and said, quote, 'We need our military. It's got to be perfect.' Of course, it's hard to be perfect when the guy in charge is suspecto."

Seth Meyers: "President Trump is reportedly furious with UN Ambassador Nikki Haley after she recently said the women who have accused Trump of sexual misconduct have a right to be heard. He's so mad his face turned red 20 years ago."

Seth Meyers: "Former White House press secretary Sean Spicer announced yesterday that he is writing a book about his time at the White House, called 'The Briefing,' not to be confused with Anthony Scaramucci's book about his time at the White House, called 'The Briefest'."

Seth Meyers: "Ivanka Trump tweeted photos yesterday with the caption 'Happy Holidays.' Even weirder, Eric Trump tweeted, 'Happy Fourth of July.'"

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, December 20, 2017
Date: Wednesday, December 20, 2017 6:01:08 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 20, 2017 6:00 AM EST

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Reuters: U.S. Sees Foreign Reliance For 'Critical' Minerals As Security Concern.
- The Hill: Patagonia Founder Rejects 'Disingenuous' Invitation To Testify.
- Law360: NY Times Sues DOI Over Utah Monument Doc Request.
- Associated Press: Official: North Cascades Grizzly Bear Recovery Work Halted.
- Grand Junction (CO) Business Times: Colorado Gets $92 Million In Federal Disbursements.
- Associated Press: Texas Company To Pay $2.25 Million In Gas Royalties Dispute.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Ho-Chunk Nation Committed To Off-Reservation Casino Despite Uncertainty In Trump Era.
- Oneida Nation Eyes More Green Bay Land.
- Ex-BIA Police Officer In Montana Pleads Guilty In Sex Case.

Bureau Of Indian Education

- Document Reveals Federal Government Paid $13K To Settle Haskell Student's Lawsuit.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Reuters: Green Groups Sue Trump Administration Over Delay Of Methane Rule.
- San Francisco Chronicle: California, New Mexico AGs File Lawsuit Over Delayed BLM Methane Regulations.
- Oregonian: Prosecutors In NV Standoff Case Urge Judge To Limit Defense Theories.
- Las Vegas Review-Journal: BLM Launches Roundup Of Problem Wild Burros North Of Pahrump.
- Las Vegas Review-Journal: Thrill-Seeker Gets OK To Try For Land-Speed Record In Nevada.
- KTVB-TV Boise (ID): WATCH: BLM Pulls Large Appliances From Oregon River After Truck Crash.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Prize Competition Seeks To Eradicate Mussels In U.S. Waters.
- Washington Delegation Meets With White House About Columbia Basin Project.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Bloomberg News: Tax Bill Opens Arctic Refuge For Oil, But Years Of Delay May Follow.
- Deseret (UT) News: Feds Propose Modifications To Prairie Dog Management In Utah.
- Alabama Live: Alabama Snail, Bat A Step Closer To Endangered Species Protection.
- Sheboygan (WI) Press: $4.5 Million Settlement Reached In Sheboygan River Pollution Case.
- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Update: Utah Man Denies Plans To Hunt Elephants, Claims He Sought Permit To Import African Trophies For A Filmmaking Project.

National Park Service

- Washington Post: Rock Creek National Park? Norton Wants A New Name For Nation's Oldest Urban Park.
- WTOP-FM Washington: Section Of Beach Drive Set To Reopen In January.
- Associated Press: Company Denies Skirting Law With Refinery Near National Park.
- Knoxville (TN) News Sentinel: Late Notice Cost Time, Lives In Gatlinburg Wildfire.
- Newsday (NY): NPS: Fire Island Breach Made By Sandy In Mother Nature's Hands.
- Associated Press: Rat Poison Found In Body Of California Mountain Lion.
- Associated Press: Elk Herd To Be Thinned In Wind Cave National Park.
- Flathead (MT) Beacon: Glacier Superintendent On Temporary Detail In Denver.
- KSJR-FM Collegeville (MN): Study Shows Isle Royale Moose Shrinking While Their Population Booms.
- WIBW-TV Topeka (KS): Topeka Sites Surveyed For Potential United Nations Designations.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Saipan (MNP) Tribune: Interior Provides $6.3M For Water Infrastructure In FSM.
- Correctional News: Feds Celebrate Groundbreaking For U.S. Courthouse In Saipan.
- Military Technologies (POL): U.S. Secretary Of Labor Visits Puerto Rico And U.S. Virgin Islands.
- New York Times: Recovering What Was Lost In The U.S. Virgin Islands, One Boat At A Time.
- Hawaii Free Press: Defense Department To Investigate Chinese Aid To Micronesia.

US Geological Survey

- Associated Press: Four Earthquakes Hit Oklahoma Tuesday.

Opinion Pieces

- You're Not Allowed To Talk Climate Change In Zinke's Interior Department.
- Stop Trying To Militarize Interior, Ryan Zinke.
- NM Keeping A Close Eye On Trump's Pick For New BLM Boss.
- It's Five Minutes To Midnight: The Wild Horse And Burro Tragedy.
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- New York Times: Congress Expected To Pass Tax Reform Bill Wednesday After “Procedural Hiccup.”
- Washington Post: Democrats Back Away From Pledge To Block Spending Bill Over Dreamers.
- Washington Post: House Republicans Propose $81 Billion Disaster Funding Measure.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - “There Is Common Ground On Guns.”
 - “Austria’s Welcome To A Party With A Nazi Past.”
 - “A Tentative Move Toward South African Reform.”
- Washington Post.
 - “A Blueprint For Saving Metro – At Last.”
 - “Ousting Peru’s President Would Do More Harm Than Good.”
 - “Trump’s National Security Strategy Isn’t Much Of A Strategy At All.”
- Wall Street Journal.
 - “The Tax Reform Promise.”
 - “A Win For Crony Capitalism.”
 - “Closing The Sanctions Net On North Korea.”

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today’s Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

U.S. Sees Foreign Reliance For ‘Critical’ Minerals As Security Concern.

Reuters (12/19, Volcovici) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said Tuesday that America “needs to encourage domestic production of a handful of minerals critical for the technology and defense industries, and stem reliance on China.” Zinke spoke at the unveiling of a report by the US Geological Survey “which detailed the extent to which the United States is dependent upon foreign competitors for its supply of certain minerals.” It identified “23 out of 88 minerals that are priorities for US national defense and the economy because they are components in products ranging from batteries to military equipment,” and, it “found that the United States was 100 percent net import reliant on 20 mineral commodities in 2016, including manganese, niobium, tantalum and others.” Zinke said, “We have the minerals here and likely we have enough to provide our needs and be a world trader in them, but we have to go forward and identify where they are at.” Reuters adds that this survey “is the first update of a 1973 USGS report that catalogued the production of minerals worldwide.”

The Washington Post (12/19, Eilperin) reports that “Zinke did not launch a specific new policy initiative, but Heather Swift, his spokeswoman, said the secretary had discussed the issue with the president, and the administration would act on the matter in the coming months.”

The AP (12/19, Daly) reports that Lawrence Meinert, deputy associate director of the USGS, “said the U.S. has ‘deposits of every element in the periodic table’ but faces economic and regulatory hurdles to production.” Sen. Lisa Murkowski, chairs of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, “called development of critical minerals crucial to U.S. national security.” She said, “We have to pay greater attention to this threat, and we have to take steps to resolve it now.”

Also reporting are ResourceClips (12/19, Klein) and The Hill (12/19, Wheeler).

Patagonia Founder Rejects ‘Disingenuous’ Invitation To Testify.

The Hill (12/19, Thomsen) reports that Patagonia founder Yvon Chouinard on Tuesday rejected an invitation to testify from House Natural Resources Committee Chairman Rob Bishop. Chouinard had been invited to testify “about the Antiquities Act, after Patagonia criticized President Trump’s decision to shrink the size of two national monuments in Utah.”

The Washington Examiner (12/19, Siegel) reports that, in a letter to the Bishop, Chouinard

“called the invite ‘disingenuous’ and pointless and accused the Natural Resources Committee of acting in cahoots with an ‘Orwellian government’ at the behest of the energy industry.” He added, “It is clear the House Committee on Natural Resources, like many committees in this Orwellian government, is shackled to special interests of oil, gas, and mining, and will seek to sell off our public lands at every turn and continue to weaken or denigrate Theodore Roosevelt’s Antiquities Act, which has preserved our treasured public lands for over 100 years.”

Also reporting are GrindTV (12/19, Brower) and the Gear Junkie (12/19, Ruggiero).

NY Times Sues DOI Over Utah Monument Doc Request.

Law360 (12/19, Posses) reports that “the New York Times Co. hit the U.S. Department of the Interior with a Freedom of Information Act suit Monday in New York federal court, alleging that the agency has failed to fork over documents related to a national monument in Utah that the federal government plans to shrink dramatically.” The complaint claims “that the agency has yet to respond to Times reporter Julie Turkewitz’s request for information” related to President Trump’s decision.

Official: North Cascades Grizzly Bear Recovery Work Halted.

The AP (12/19) reports that North Cascades National Park Superintendent Karen Taylor-Goodrich “says work to restore grizzly bears to the North Cascades Ecosystem has been stopped by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke’s office.” Taylor-Goodrich last week told the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee “that her staff had been asked to halt work on its environmental review.” Zinke spokeswoman Heather Swift told the AP on Tuesday “that Zinke did not direct a stop work order on the environmental impact statement but she didn’t provide details.”

Colorado Gets $92 Million In Federal Disbursements.

The Grand Junction \(CO\) Business Times (12/19) reports that “Colorado received a total of more than $92 million in federal energy and mineral production disbursements, according to figures from the Interior Department for the 2017 fiscal year.” The number “constitutes an increase of more than $8 million from the previous fiscal year.” In all, Office of Natural Resources Revenue disbursements “totaled $7.11 billion, an increase of nearly $1 billion from the previous year.”

Texas Company To Pay $2.25 Million In Gas Royalties Dispute.

The AP (12/19) reports Colorado US Attorney Bob Troyer says that Citation Oil & Gas Corp. “will pay $2.25 million to settle allegations that it underpaid royalties for natural gas produced on federal land in Wyoming.” The company has been “accused of breaking federal law requiring companies to make royalty payments for natural gas produced on leased federal lands.” The company “was accused of deducting the cost of making natural gas into a marketable product from its royalties, which isn’t permitted.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Ho-Chunk Nation Committed To Off-Reservation Casino Despite Uncertainty In Trump Era.

The Nation Sun News (12/19) reports that “the Ho-Chunk Nation remains committed to an off-reservation casino in Wisconsin despite uncertainty created by the Trump administration.” Tribal leaders will provide “an ‘update’ on the long-sought project in Beloit on Thursday.” The tribe “officially sought approval for the casino more five years ago.” However, “there’s been little movement on the federal level – the Bureau of Indian Affairs failed to meet its self-imposed schedule years ago and never issued a draft environmental impact statement, the first major step in the process.”

Oneida Nation Eyes More Green Bay Land.

The Green Bay \(WI\) Press-Gazette (12/19, Anderson) reports that the Oneida Nation is “seeking to transfer more than $2 million of land on Green Bay’s west side into a tax-exempt federal trust, an action that is drawing opposition from City Hall.” The move would “help the tribe further its goal of reclaiming its original 65,400-acre reservation.” However, “it also would exempt the tribal-owned properties from municipal ordinances and taxes, meaning other taxpayers would have to pay more to cover the lost revenue, according to Green Bay Mayor Jim Schmitt.” Schmitt wrote to the Bureau of Indian Affairs “twice this year objecting to the tribe’s applications to put 17 properties into federal trust, newly released documents show.”

Ex-BIA Police Officer In Montana Pleads Guilty In Sex Case.

The AP (12/19) reports that a former law enforcement officer for the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Montana has “pleaded guilty in a case in which he was accused of coercing a woman into having sex.” Dana Michael Bullcoming, 43, “pleaded guilty in Billings to deprivation of rights under color of law during a hearing Tuesday before U.S. Magistrate Judge Timothy Cavan.” KTVH-TV Helena, MT (12/19) reports that “two counts of making a false statement to a federal officer were dismissed as part of a plea agreement.”

Bureau Of Indian Education

Document Reveals Federal Government Paid $13K To Settle Haskell Student’s Lawsuit.

The Lawrence \(KS\) Journal World (12/19, Shepherd) reports that the federal government “paid a former Haskell Indian Nations University student $13,000 to drop what remained of her lawsuit against the school and the federal government, according to a settlement agreement obtained by the Journal-World.” The settlement “stipulated that, after receiving the money, the woman must dismiss her suit with prejudice.”

Bureau Of Land Management

Green Groups Sue Trump Administration Over Delay Of Methane Rule.

Reuters (12/19, Gardner) reports that on Tuesday, a collection of almost “20 environmental and Native American tribal groups sued the Trump administration...challenging its delay of a rule limiting emissions of the powerful greenhouse gas methane from oil and gas drilling operations on federal lands.” This month, the Department of the Interior’s Bureau of Land Management suspended the rule’s effective date for one year. However, some expect the Administration “to announce a new draft rule in coming weeks, in line with its policy of maximizing output of oil, gas and coal and dismantling regulations it says prevent job growth.”

The Washington Examiner (12/19, Siegel) reports that the BLM “announced a two-year delay in implementing the Obama administration’s rule.” Attorney with Wilderness Society Bruce Pendery said, “no matter how many special interests the Trump administration has on its side in its mindless pursuit of energy dominance, it cannot avoid the Interior Department’s legal obligations to protect taxpayers and the planet.”

Also reporting are the San Francisco Chronicle (12/19, Alexander), the Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (12/19, Hart), the New Mexico Political Report (12/19, Paskus), the Grand Forks \(ND\) Herald (12/19), the Brainerd \(MN\) Daily Dispatch (12/19), RT (12/20), Greenwire (12/19), and Law360 (12/19, Phillis).

California, New Mexico AGs File Lawsuit Over Delayed BLM Methane Regulations.

The San Francisco Chronicle (12/19, Alexander) reports that on Tuesday, California Attorney General Xavier Becerra sued the Trump administration for suspending the Bureau of Land Management’s methane regulations for the oil and gas industry on federal and tribal lands. Becerra’s lawsuit, filed along with New Mexico Attorney General Hector Balderas, claims the delay was “arbitrary” and “capricious.” Administration officials, on the other hand, claimed the rule was unnecessarily burdensome and costly, and that the rule’s implementation should be halted until it could be amended.

Prosecutors In NV Standoff Case Urge Judge To Limit Defense Theories.

The Oregonian (12/19, Bernstein) reports that “prosecutors have asked the judge in the Nevada ranch standoff case to limit defense theories and not allow Cliven Bundy, his two sons and Ryan Payne to claim federal officers provoked the armed confrontation in April 2014.” In a motion filed late Monday, Acting U.S. Attorney Steven Myhre said the defendants are relying on “theories of defenses that are not legally cognizable.” Myhre argued that “they shouldn’t be able to argue that they were entrapped or acted in self-defense when federal officers tried to impound the Bundy cattle.”

BLM Launches Roundup Of Problem Wild Burros North Of Pahrump.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal (12/19, Brean) reports that the Bureau of Land Management “launched a roundup Tuesday of burros causing problems at the northern edge of Pahrump, about 70 miles west of Las Vegas." Over the course of several weeks, the BLM "hopes to capture and remove about 75 burros from the area by luring the animals into corrals set up on private land and baited with food and water." According to the bureau, "burros from the Johnnie herd management area north of Pahrump have been roaming into town, damaging fences, water lines and vegetation on private property and causing a safety hazard on state Route 160."

Additional coverage was provided by the AP (12/20).

Thrill-Seeker Gets OK To Try For Land-Speed Record In Nevada.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal (12/19, Brean) reports that "a 76-year-old thrill-seeker is headed to Nevada next year in hopes of breaking the world land-speed record – and the sound barrier – in a car built from the husk of an old fighter jet." On Monday, the Bureau of Land Management granted Ed Shadle and "his Parkland, Washington-based team permission to set up a temporary, 16-mile-long test track on Diamond Valley Playa, a dry lake bed in Eureka County, about 350 miles north of Las Vegas." According to the article, "to set the record, Shadle's jet-powered North American Eagle will need to top 763 mph and maintain that speed for at least one mile."

WATCH: BLM Pulls Large Appliances From Oregon River After Truck Crash.

KTVB-TV Boise, ID (12/19) reports that "workers for the Bureau of Land Management have been patrolling a section of the Deschutes River in Central Oregon looking for large household appliances deposited into the river during a truck crash last month." The bureau "says a delivery truck crashed Nov. 21 at Sherars Bridge, northwest of the town of Maupin, and plummeted more than 20 feet into the river." According to the article, "the driver and passenger survived, but the contents of the truck, including at least two refrigerators and a large amount of packaging material, were sent floating downstream."

Bureau Of Reclamation

Prize Competition Seeks To Eradicate Mussels In U.S. Waters.

Hydroworld (12/19, Ingram) reports that the Bureau of Reclamation has "launched a prize competition seeking 'innovative solutions for the 100-percent eradication of invasive quagga and zebra mussels from large reservoirs, lakes and rivers in a cost-effective and environmentally sound manner.'" The bureau "says invasive mussel infestations pose significant logistical challenges for local communities, recreationists and water managers by potentially disrupting water deliveries, increasing facility maintenance cost, and impacting the local ecology." According to the article, "the $100,000 prize purse will be divided among a maximum of five winners."

Washington Delegation Meets With White House About Columbia Basin Project.

The Salem \(OR\) Capital Press (12/19, Weaver) reports that "a delegation of officials, farmers and lawmakers from Washington state met with White House and Department of Interior officials last week to educate them about the need for funding to replace shrinking groundwater supplies in the Odessa subarea with Columbia River water." The Washington delegation is "seeking $5 million to $10 million in federal funding for 10 to 15 years, and for the project to be included in the president's infrastructure package."

Fish And Wildlife Service

Tax Bill Opens Arctic Refuge For Oil, But Years Of Delay May Follow.

Bloomberg News (12/19, Dlouhy) reports Congress is close to lifting the ban on energy development in Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, but drilling may take years as companies face lengthy environmental reviews and probable lawsuits. It could take more than 10 years before any well is drilled, as companies have to face environmental scrutiny and permit reviews. Senior fellow at the Center for American Progress Matt Lee-Ashley said, "It's still an open question about whether drilling will ever happen there. ... It's hard to image that drilling will occur in the next 10 years – or ever." However, consultant Robert Dillon said, "You need to be looking 10, 20, 30 years out to know where your supply is going to come from for the future of the country."

The Washington Examiner (12/19, Siciliano) reports Sen. Lisa Murkowski said the GOP will claim a victory in their "multigenerational fight" to open the ANWR to drilling. She said the provision in the tax reform bill is the “single most important step” for energy independence and wealth creation in the US.

Additional coverage was provided by the Huffington Post (12/19, D'Angelo), Vox (11/28, Irfan), and National Geographic (12/19, Bourne, Jr.).

Feds Propose Modifications To Prairie Dog Management In Utah.

The Deseret \(UT\) News (12/19, O'Donoghue) reports that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is “proposing some modifications on how it oversees the management of the imperiled Utah prairie dog, seeking to institute a 10-year plan that governs when the animals may be ‘taken’ if they are interfering with property development.” The FWS “released a draft conservation plan Tuesday saying it will issue permits to property owners, developers or government entities such as counties in a streamlined process to mitigate impacts to the animals while allowing for economic development.” Under the plan, “industry and private individuals can apply for permits for a limited amount of ‘incidental take’ if they demonstrate they are taking appropriate steps.”

Alabama Snail, Bat A Step Closer To Endangered Species Protection.

Alabama Live (12/19, Pillion) reports that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service “announced Tuesday the agency has determined further study and research is warranted to decide whether the oblong rocksnail and tricolored bat should be listed as threatened or endangered species and afforded federal protections” under the Endangered Species Act. The “90-day finding” by the FWS “kicks off a one-year scientific status review for the tricolored bat, oblong rocksnail and the Venus fly-trap, a carnivorous plant found in the Carolinas, which the FWS also found warrants more study.”

$4.5 Million Settlement Reached In Sheboygan River Pollution Case.

The Sheboygan \(WI\) Press (12/19, Bock) reports that “three companies will pay more than $4.5 million in settlement payments to resolve claims they polluted the Sheboygan River.” Tecumseh Products Co., Thomas Industries, Inc. and Wisconsin Public Service Corp “agreed to the settlements long after a multi-million dredging and cleanup effort of the Sheboygan River has finished.” Charlie Wooley, deputy midwest regional director for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said, “The Sheboygan River and its wetlands provide important habitats for migratory birds and fish, and support hunting and fishing activities for local residents. (The) settlement means we can help natural resources affected by PCBs and other contaminants, and at the same time, benefit local communities.”

Update: Utah Man Denies Plans To Hunt Elephants, Claims He Sought Permit To Import African Trophies For A Filmmaking Project.

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (12/19, Maffly) reports that “a Utah hunter appears to have been caught up in a contentious debate over whether trophy hunting of elephants and other endangered wildlife improves species’ chances of survival, or instead ushers them toward extinction.” Cliff Graham was “among 16 U.S. hunters awarded permits by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) this year to import elephant trophies from the African county of Zimbabwe – even though there was a short-lived ban on such imports in place at the time, according to recently filed court papers.” In response to a Salt Lake Tribune query, Graham “said Tuesday he is not planning to hunt an elephant.” Rather, “he said he instead sought the permit as part of film project about trophy hunting.”

Additional coverage was provided by KUTV-TV Salt Lake City (12/19).

National Park Service

Rock Creek National Park? Norton Wants A New Name For Nation’s Oldest Urban Park.

The Washington Post (12/19, Chason) reports that D.C. Del. Eleanor Holmes Norton is asking Congress to rename Rock Creek Park to “Rock Creek National Park.” Norton claims that “redesignating and renaming the park would make its historical significance clear to visitors and members of Congress,” and “that might help her when she lobbies for funding to maintain the park, which has a nearly $53 million maintenance backlog.” Norton “said she is ‘not naive’ and does not believe the name change and new designation will automatically come with increased funding.” However, “she said increased recognition of the significance of Rock Creek will help her make her case to Congress.”

Section Of Beach Drive Set To Reopen In January.

WTOP-FM Washington (12/19, Basch) reports that "a section of Beach Drive that closed in August is scheduled to reopen in January." Jenny Anzelmo-Sarles with the National Park Service, said, "Weather dependent, we're expecting the road to reopen between Tilden (Street) and Blagden (Avenue) on or about Jan. 8." As the second of a four part rehabilitation project on Beach Drive, the "work included completely rebuilding the roadway from the ground up, planting 30 new native trees along the road and totally retrofitting the storm drainage system," according to Anzelmo-Sarles.

Company Denies Skirting Law With Refinery Near National Park.

The AP (12/19, Nicholson) reports that on Tuesday, Meridian Energy Group told the North Dakota Public Service Commission that it was not skirting the state's permitting laws for the company's proposed oil refinery close to the Theodore Roosevelt National Park. The PSC sought answers from company officials over why "the Davis Refinery is listed at 49,500 barrels per day," which is "just under the 50,000-barrel threshold that triggers a PSC siting review." Some argue that Meridian listed 49,500 barrels to avoid a PSC review since it could impact the project or cost time and money.

Additional coverage was provided by the Forum of Fargo-Moorhead \(ND\) (12/19, Hageman).

Commission Urges Refinery Developers To Apply For Siting Permit. The Bismarck \(ND\) Tribune (12/19, Dalrymple) reports that the North Dakota PSC strongly suggested Meridian to "apply for a siting permit Wednesday, cautioning that proceeding without one could delay construction if someone files a legal challenge." North Dakota law requires a refinery producing more than 50,000 barrels of oil each day to apply for the permit. The company originally "promoted the Davis Refinery as expanding up to 55,000 barrels per day, but recently changed the figure on its website to 49,500 barrels."

Late Notice Cost Time, Lives In Gatlinburg Wildfire.

The Knoxville \(TN\) News Sentinel (12/19, Lakin) reports that "poor communication by Great Smoky Mountains National Park rangers with Gatlinburg authorities undermined the initial response to last year's deadly wildfire and cost lives, a report released Tuesday found." The review by outside consultants concluded, "Insufficient warning by (the park) contributed to a dramatically reduced time frame to conduct needed evacuations." The review by ABS Consulting, "conducted for about $100,000, examined the response by Gatlinburg and Sevier County agencies to the Nov. 28, 2016, wildfire after the flames left the park, where the fire had begun five days earlier."

NPS: Fire Island Breach Made By Sandy In Mother Nature's Hands.

Newsday \(NY\) (12/19, Dooley) reports that "the fate of the breach that Superstorm Sandy cut through a remote stretch of Fire Island National Seashore will likely be left to Mother Nature, under a draft plan by the National Park Service." According to the document published Tuesday, "should the breach close on its own, the Park Service will not seek to open it back up, despite evidence it has improved water quality in parts of the Great South Bay." Kaetlyn Jackson, a park planner for the National Seashore, explained, "The National Park Service wants these areas to evolve as naturally as possible."

Rat Poison Found In Body Of California Mountain Lion.

The AP (12/19) reports that "authorities say a mountain lion that managed to cross a Southern California freeway and make its home in the mountains north of Los Angeles had rat poison in his system when he was found dead." The lion known as P-41 was "found in October after a wildfire burned part of his range." The Santa Monica Mountains National Recreation Area "announced Tuesday that P-41 had six compounds of a rodenticide in his system," but "it's unclear if that caused his death."

Also reporting are the Los Angeles Times (12/19, Serna) and KTLA-TV Los Angeles Los Angeles (12/19).

Elk Herd To Be Thinned In Wind Cave National Park.

The AP (12/19) reports that the National Park Service and the South Dakota Game, Fish and Parks Department are "seeking skilled volunteers to help thin out the elk herd in Wind Cave National Park." According to the article, "eight volunteer shooters will be selected through a lottery system, to help park staff reduce the herd in February." The hope is that "the effort will reduce the rate of chronic wasting disease among the herd."

Glacier Superintendent On Temporary Detail In Denver.

The Flathead \(MT\) Beacon (12/19, Scott) reports that Glacier National Park Superintendent Jeff Mow has "taken a 120-day detail assignment as the National Park Service's acting Intermountain regional director in Denver, according to Glacier Park Spokesperson Lauren Alley." Deputy Superintendent Eric Smith is acting as Glacier's superintendent during Mow's absence. Alley explained that "the need for Mow at the National Park Service's regional office stems from vacancies at a number of administrative positions higher up the pecking order, which has created a domino effect."

Study Shows Isle Royale Moose Shrinking While Their Population Booms.

KSJR-FM Collegeville, MN (12/19, Kraker) reports that after examining "the skulls of 662 moose killed by wolves over the past four decades at Isle Royale National Park," scientists discovered that "the size of those skulls had shrunk by 16 percent, even as the moose population on the Lake Superior island flourished, tripling in the past decade to about 1,600 this year." According to the article, "the biggest reason researchers attributed to the decline in moose size is the increasing density of moose on the island, as the wolf population has collapsed." The findings by scientists at Michigan Tech University, "published recently in the journal Global Change Biology, are part of a long-running study on the predator-prey dynamics between moose and wolves on the remote island."

Topeka Sites Surveyed For Potential United Nations Designations.

WIBW-TV Topeka, KS (12/19, Wheat) reports that "a group of surveyors with ties to the United Nations toured Topeka's historic Brown vs Board of Education sites over the past two days." According to the article, "their visit was just the first step for UNESCO, the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization, surveyors to possibly include Topeka in what they call a batch nomination to the U.N."

Office Of Insular Affairs

Interior Provides $6.3M For Water Infrastructure In FSM.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (12/20) reports that Assistant Secretary for Insular Areas Doug Domenech "provided a $6.3 million Compact of Free Association grant to support the Federated States of Micronesia's (FSM) Sekere Water Project on the island of Pohnpei." According to the article, "funding for this project will assist the Pohnpei Utilities Corporation in expanding its island-wide water distribution system and connecting to water wells drilled by the United States Navy in 2007 under a Compact-funded humanitarian assistance project." Domenech said, "Infrastructure projects such as the Sekere Water Project align with the goals of the Compact of Free Association to help increase the FSM's self-reliance. I look forward to supporting the FSM as it continues to develop its infrastructure management program and begins to take full advantage of infrastructure assistance provided through the Compact."

Feds Celebrate Groundbreaking For U.S. Courthouse In Saipan.

Correctional News (12/18, Howell) reports that a new U.S. Courthouse broke ground in Saipan this week. According to the article, "the 35,696-square-foot, three-story courthouse will accommodate the U.S. District Court of the Northern Mariana Islands, a U.S. Probation Office, the U.S. Marshals Service and the U.S. Attorney's Office as well as the Federal Protective Service." U.S. General Services Administration Acting Pacific Rim Regional Administrator Dan Brown in a statement, "We are very excited to see construction beginning for this new courthouse. Today's event is a major step forward in fulfilling the judiciary's requirement for a new courthouse in Saipan. The new facility will address long-standing security and space needs on the island. Through a lease arrangement, the Marianas Management Corporation is providing a modern facility with functional space and innovative technology to meet the operational requirements of the U.S. District Court in the Northern Mariana Islands."

U.S. Secretary Of Labor Visits Puerto Rico And U.S. Virgin Islands.

Military Technologies \(POL\) (12/18, Donimirski) reports that Secretary of Labor Alexander Acosta

“visited Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands this past weekend to meet with senior officials managing the recovery efforts and to inspect Job Corps centers damaged during hurricanes Irma and Maria.” Acosta said, “My visit to Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands allowed me to see firsthand the resilience of our fellow Americans who are recovering from the devastation of this year’s hurricanes. We will continue to support the workforce as local communities continue to rebuild.”

Recovering What Was Lost In The U.S. Virgin Islands, One Boat At A Time.

The New York Times (12/18, Pérez-Peña) reports that “the hurricanes that raged through the United States Virgin Islands in September damaged or destroyed not only thousands of buildings, but also hundreds of boats, from tiny sailboats to 50-foot luxury yachts.” Three months after the Category 5 Hurricanes Irma and Maria hit the islands, “among the many arduous tasks that remain in their early stages are identifying the owners of lost boats, recovering the vessels, salvaging those that can be fixed and disposing of the rest.” The Coast Guard has “identified 459 boats in the United States Virgin Islands, population 106,000, that were left derelict by the storms – more than in nearby Puerto Rico, which has more than 30 times as many residents.”

Defense Department To Investigate Chinese Aid To Micronesia.

The Hawaii Free Press (12/17) reports that “the $700 billion 2018 National Defense Authorization Act, signed by President Trump in mid December, calls on the Department of Defense (DOD) to investigate the growing role of China in former US territories in the Pacific.” According to the article, “that is a recognition both of the islands’ importance to US global strategy, as well as the latest indicator that America’s decades long relationship with its former dependencies is a partnership under stress.” Neil Mellen, founder of Habele, a US educational nonprofit operating across Micronesia, said, “Congress and the Administration are to be commended. America is best served when her allies’ support comes from a position of strength, sovereignty, and real partnership, rather than mere dependency. Careful examination of our nation’s track record in the post-war Pacific, as well as the increasingly caustic role played by others, is long overdue.”

US Geological Survey

Four Earthquakes Hit Oklahoma Tuesday.

The AP (12/19) reports that a four earthquakes struck northern and western Oklahoma on Tuesday. The US Geological Survey said the earthquakes hit Garfield, Woodward, and Grady counties. One of the earthquakes registered a magnitude of 4.0 and was “at a depth of 2 miles.” In recent years, thousands of earthquakes in Oklahoma have been attributed to oil and gas production operations and underground wastewater injection.

Opinion Pieces

You’re Not Allowed To Talk Climate Change In Zinke’s Interior Department.

In an op-ed for The Hill (12/19, Curtis), Kevin S. Curtis, executive director of the Natural Resources Defense Council Action Fund, criticizes Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke’s “apparent mandate to stop talking about the impacts of climate change on our national parks” as “an outright abdication of his duty to protect and manage the irreplaceable public lands and historical sites in his care – places that belong to all of us.” Curtis writes that “Zinke’s silly Twitter restrictions won’t be able to hide the fact that climate change is a threat to our national parks.” He concludes, however, that “they will highlight that he has thrown his lot in with the science-deniers and oil lobbyists who are working against common-sense efforts to fight for our future, and that he is out of step with most Montanans and the rest of the country.”

Stop Trying To Militarize Interior, Ryan Zinke.

In an op-ed for the High Country \(CO\) News (12/19, Grijalva), Rep. Raúl M. Grijalva urges Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to reconsider his plan to reorganize the Interior Department “along the lines of a ‘military command.’” According to Grijalva, “Zinke insists on seeing our nation’s conservation and wildlife management agencies as military branches, which sometimes combine forces on particular missions, and himself as a general leading the fight.” But Grijalva writes that “the fundamental difference in structures, purposes and operating cultures between Interior, which manages our national parks and natural resources, and the Pentagon, which fights terrorism and conducts military operations overseas, is lost on him.”

NM Keeping A Close Eye On Trump’s Pick For New BLM Boss.

In an op-ed for the Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (12/20, Smith, Martinez, Jones), ranchers Wayne Smith, Erminio Martinez, and David Jones, write about the importance of the Bureau of Land Management “for all users of public lands in New Mexico.” As President Trump considers the next leader for the BLM, they urge him to pick someone who is “committed to preserving the balanced policies that all New Mexicans count on.” The ranchers write that “the BLM needs a director who will support its staff in the field, make sure they have the resources they need to be good land stewards and adhere to our public land laws.”

It’s Five Minutes To Midnight: The Wild Horse And Burro Tragedy.

In an op-ed for the Daily Caller (12/19, Perryman), Barry L. Perryman, Ph.D., a professor of rangeland ecology at the University of Nevada, Reno, urges Congress to act on the issue of wild horses. He writes that “despite some efficacy of contraception, at current population levels, horse and burro numbers can only be managed effectively through the gather process.” Perryman argues that “anything that inhibits the application of horse and burro management tools authorized by law jeopardizes the habitats that support a myriad of different wildlife species and land uses in the Intermountain West.”

Additional Reading.

- 5 Ways Energy Dominance Can Bolster Trump’s National Security Strategy. Daily Signal (12/19, Loris).
- Public Lands Rollback Bad For Veterans. Helena \(MT\) Independent Record (12/19, Evans, Door, Gence, Person).
- Our National Parks Belong To Us All. Seattle Times (12/19, Zacarias).
- National Parks Belong To Americans. They Should Remain Accessible To All. Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (12/19, MacKenzie).
- I Found Out Why Our National Parks Are Quiet. Huffington Post (12/19, Peterman).
- Op-ed: On The Contrary, Monuments Are Examples Of Multiple-use Lands. Deseret \(UT\) News (12/19, Jones, Robinson).
- Trump’s Reversal Jeopardizes U.S. National Monuments. Albany \(NY\) Times Union (12/19, Corbin).
- Protect Cascade-Siskiyou With Park Designation. Eugene \(OR\) Register-Guard (12/19, Wuerthner).
- Resistance Isn’t Just For The Young. Just Ask These Self-described ‘old Broads’ Who Are Suing Trump. Seattle Times (12/19, Westneat).
- A Better Future For The Holidays. Juneau \(AK\) Empire (12/19, Phillips).
- John Berrey: Politico Got It Wrong On Tar Creek. Joplin \(MO\) Globe (12/19, Berrey).
- To Deregulate America, Send D.C. Bureaucrats To The Heartland. Investor’s Business Daily (12/20, McCaughey).
- To Deregulate America, Dump DC Bureaucrats. Townhall (12/20, McCaughey).

Top National News

Congress Expected To Pass Tax Reform Bill Wednesday After “Procedural Hiccup.”

Media reports cast a delay Tuesday in the passage of the tax bill as a “procedural hiccup” unlikely to impact the measure’s passage, which is now expected on Wednesday after the Senate approved it after midnight. As the New York Times (12/19, Kaplan, Rappeport) reports, the Senate voted 51 to 48, “with no Republican defections and no Democratic support.”

All three networks reported on the development last night. NBC Nightly News (12/19, lead story, 2:35, Holt) opened its broadcast reporting, “Just as it appeared that Republicans were on track to deliver a tax bill to President as early as this evening, a procedural hiccup in the rush to passage has forced a delay, requiring the House to hold a redo vote tomorrow.” NBC’s Casey Hunt called it “an embarrassing stumbling block,” but said the bill “is still on track to become law." On the CBS Evening News (12/19, story 4, 2:25, Glor), Nancy Cordes likewise said the delay is "essentially a formality and shouldn't prevent the President from signing his first major legislative accomplishment into law tomorrow, if he wishes."

On ABC World News Tonight (12/19, lead story, 4:50, Muir), Mary Bruce said House Speaker Ryan "excitedly gavelled in the first major legislative win of the Trump Administration. ... But tonight, a procedural snag will force them to vote again tomorrow." The Washington Times (12/19, Sherfinski) reports that despite the revote, "Republicans said they had finally scored a legacy-defining bill under Mr. Trump." Reuters (12/19), meanwhile, reports White House Legislative Affairs Director Marc Short, commenting on the need for a House revote, said: "I don't think it's that uncommon for a big piece of legislation like this."

Bloomberg News (12/19) reports House Majority Leader McCarthy said the House will "have to take another vote on the tax bill Wednesday morning, after the Senate removes or changes relatively minor provisions that don't comply with the chamber's budget rules." Bloomberg calls the issue "a procedural hiccup, rather than anything that could jeopardize the legislation's passage."

The Washington Post (12/19, A1, Stein), meanwhile, says the plan "hit a snag," and the New York Times (12/19, Kaplan, Rappeport) observes that "the day was not without hiccups." The AP (12/19, Ohlemacher, Gordon) similarly refers to "one last hiccup." After Ryan "gleefully pounded the gavel on the final House vote," Democrats "noted that three provisions violated Senate rules. So the massive bill will be hauled back across the Capitol for the House to re-vote on Wednesday." Calling it a "last-minute snag," Reuters (12/19) reports the plan was for the Senate "to delete the three offending provisions and vote on the bill."

The Washington Times (12/19, Sherfinski) reports Sens. Bernie Sanders and Ron Wyden "said the provisions in question deal with the title of the bill, the use of savings accounts for home-school expenses, and the criteria under which private universities could be subjected to a new excise tax." Breitbart (12/19, Carney) calls the provisions "minor," and says they are "not expected to put the tax overhaul in peril."

Politico (12/19, Faler) reports that earlier Tuesday, the House passed the bill in a 227-203 vote, and passage "appears assured in the Senate, though the absence of Sen. John McCain – who is battling brain cancer – will only give Republicans a single vote to spare." The New York Post (12/19, Fredericks) reports that after the House vote, Ryan "hailed the GOP tax package," saying, "Today, we give the people of this country their money back." Writing in the Wall Street Journal (12/19), Ryan says the bill will provide real relief to middle-income families, create jobs, and drive up wages.

White House press secretary Sarah Sanders said on Fox News' Fox & Friends (12/19) that passage of the tax bill is "a huge deal. But not just for the White House. It's a huge deal for America. This is something that we've seen just talking about it has been a major boost to our economy. Consumer confidence is at an all-time high. We're breaking stock market record after stock market record. And I think a lot of it has to do with the deregulation process that this President has put in place. And then the second part of that is the fact that we've been pushing this tax cut package, this tax reform package. And you're really seeing that reflected in our economy, the booming economy."

Senate Majority Leader McConnell said on Fox News' Special Report (12/19), "The theme behind this bill is to get middle-class tax relief for most people in the middle class, demonstrably the case. ... And then couple that with making American business more competitive. We have had eight years in a row of stagnant growth. The country is significantly under-performing. We think a combination of the regulatory changes that the President has already made plus this tax reform gives us a chance to get growing again."

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Kevin Brady said on MSNBC's Morning Joe (12/19), "It's about growing paychecks for middle class families. It's about growing jobs in America. And about our jobs stopping leaving the United States and that's why there's so much support in Congress for this."

Rep. Tom Cole, asked on MSNBC's Morning Joe (12/19) if he is comfortable with the fact that the tax bill will add to the national debt, said, "I'm not comfortable with adding to the national debt ever. ... Eventually it pays for itself. Under every estimate, it varies which one you read, it speeds up growth." Cole added, "The debt – forget the tax bill for a minute – is going up regardless unless you deal with entitlement reform."

A Wall Street Journal (12/19) editorial welcomes the bill's expected passage, which it says will fulfill a major Republican campaign promise, but will also lead to economic growth and higher wages.

Several Democrats, meanwhile, spoke out against the bill. Sen. Chris Coons said on CNN's Situation Room (12/19), "This did not have to be a one-party-only bill. I worked hard across the aisle to propose alternative paths that would have led us to a significant middle class tax cut, the sort of thing the President ran on, but that is not what this bill is. This is a huge giveaway to the very wealthiest Americans and the most profitable corporations. I think there's no doubt that it specifically benefits real estate investors and those who earn their income from real estate. And in many cases, the modest tax cuts for the middle class are temporary and the big tax cuts for shareholders of corporations and for the wealthiest families, those will go on long-term."

Sen. Brian Schatz said on CNN's Situation Room (12/19), "They didn't even consult with the Senate. They didn't consult with the parliamentarian to make sure it complies with the rules they're using to avoid working with Democrats. They're doing something called reconciliation, which allows them to do this on a party-line vote, but they're in such a rush that they made several mistakes, and so we're actually going to have to excise those offending provisions and then they are going to have to take a re-vote. But to me, it's emblematic of what happens when you take major legislation, conceive of it in the dark, and rush it through. Lots of things are going to come out, not just over the next several days, but months and years, we are going to learn how awful this tax bill is."

House Minority Whip Steny Hoyer said on Fox News' Special Report (12/19), "It is a bad bill for our country. It's going to create great debt. And it's perverse in the sense that it gives some 83 percent of the tax cuts to the wealthiest in America. Sen. McConnell said substantial tax cuts. Obviously, 17 percent of $1.5 trillion is a substantial sum of money. But when you see that the wealthiest in America get a huge tax cut and the middle class not only doesn't get a huge tax cut, they get a minimal tax cut that it is phased out in about eight years."

USA Today (12/19, Shesgreen) reports that Republicans have "dismissed questions about whether the bill was skewed toward the wealthy," and Speaker Ryan told reporters Tuesday that "he had 'no concerns whatsoever' that the tax bill would turn into a political liability for the GOP as they head into the 2018 elections." The Washington Times (12/19, Sherfinski) notes Republicans "say they anticipate that future Congresses will simply extend the individual cuts."

A New York Times (12/19, Tankersley, Rappeport) analysis writes that "in many ways, the bill represents a political and economic gamble for Republicans. A majority of Americans oppose it, and relatively few believe they will benefit personally from it, polls show." In addition, economic analyses "predict it will add more than $1 trillion to budget deficits over the next decade, an amount that would betray the party's longstanding messaging that mounting federal debt will sap economic growth." Republicans, however, have "spurned those concerns, rallying around what has been the animating ideology of their party since the Reagan era: that tax cuts will drive faster growth and national prosperity."

A Washington Post (12/19, Long) analysis says that while the President and Republicans in Congress are "celebrating the $1.5 trillion legislation as a big tax cut for workers and businesses," the "short-term gains come with a cost: the legislation also makes the country's debt problem even worse, in all likelihood forcing policymakers in coming years to make difficult decisions about spending cuts, tax increases or both."

Trump May Not Be Able To Sign Bill Until New Year. On ABC World News Tonight (12/19, lead story, 4:50, Muir), Mary Bruce said the White House "is now suggesting that the President may not sign this until the New Year, saying that the process to get the paperwork to the President's desk may actually take some time. The President has promised Americans tax reform for Christmas, and now they're suggesting that might not happen." The Wall Street Journal (12/19, A1, Rubin) reports that while the White House is planning for the President to mark the bill's passage, no date has been set for its signing.

In a second segment on ABC World News Tonight (12/19, story 2, 2:25, Muir), Cecilia Vega said the President "recently promised a tax code so simple you could file on a postcard," but "that postcard is not happening either. The 503-page tax bill still means a lot of paperwork for taxpayers." And while the President insisted, "time and time again, he's going to pay" under the plan, that "also, not true. ... Income taxes for the ultra rich will drop. Business owners, including those in commercial real estate like the Trumps, get a big break from what's known as a pass-through deduction. And his family stands to save millions on inheritance taxes."

The Washington Post (12/19, Paletta, Rucker), meanwhile, reports that Trump is "poised to achieve what has eluded him throughout his tumultuous first year in office – a major legislative victory." With Wednesday's expected passage of "a tax-code overhaul that also dismantles part of the Affordable Care Act, Trump hopes to shed the label of legislative loser." However, the Post says that "whether the probable win could help him pass other agenda items in 2018 and catapult him onto firmer political ground ahead of the midterm election is an open question.”

Cabinet To Discuss Next Priority Following Tax Reform. Citing “two Administration officials,” Bloomberg News (12/19, Jacobs) reports the President is scheduled to meet with his Cabinet Wednesday. One official indicated the Cabinet is “likely to discuss the President’s priorities following the tax overhaul,” including “an overhaul of federal welfare programs and a $1 trillion infrastructure initiative.”

Corker Denies Involvement In Provision Expected To Benefit Him. Sen. Bob Corker, asked on CNN’s Situation Room (12/19) about criticism that he decided to support the tax bill because of a provision that will benefit him personally, said, “First of all, I knew nothing about the provision. I’ve had no involvement. It actually came out of the House. It was part of their House bill. When they did the reconciliation, it was merged in and altered slightly to make it conform.” Corker added, “I’ve had someone check into it, it has a very nominal impact on anything that would be involving me. ... When I decided to vote for the bill, I had gone through a two-page summary that noted the changes between the Senate bill and the House bill. It was a summary and that wasn’t even mentioned. I didn’t even know it was a part of the changes that took place. So absolutely false.”

Collins Decries “Unbelievably Sexist” Coverage Of Her Tax Bill Support. Politico (12/19, Cancryn) reports Sen. Susan Collins on Tuesday “blasted” media coverage of her support for the GOP tax bill as “extremely discouraging” and “unbelievably sexist.” The Maine Republican, “a key swing vote on the tax package, accused reporters of ignoring her influence” over the legislation and “unfairly criticizing her efforts to pass a pair of Obamacare stabilization bills.” Speaking to reporters, Collins said, “I believe that the coverage has been unbelievably sexist, and I cannot believe that the press would have treated another senator with 20 years of experience as they have treated me. They’ve ignored everything that I’ve gotten and written story after story about how I’m duped.”

Bloomberg News (12/19, Dennis) says Collins also “criticized a reporter, whom she didn’t identify, who covered her meeting with people suffering from serious health conditions.” Said the Senator, “The reporter actually wrote that I didn’t cry.” The same group met with Sen. Jeff Flake, Collins said, but there was no mention of his lack of tears. “I can’t imagine a reporter writing that about a male senator,” she said.

WSJournal/NBC News Poll: 41% Say GOP Tax Plan Is A Bad Idea. NBC Nightly News (12/19, lead story, 2:35, Holt) reported that a new NBC News/WSJ poll “taken before the vote shows 41 percent of Americans say” the Republican tax bill “is a bad idea while just 24 percent support it.” The Wall Street Journal (12/19, Hook) reports that the poll found that 17% of those surveyed said their family’s taxes will be lower under the Republican tax bill, while 32% said they will be higher. The poll also found that the bill has become more unpopular in the two months it has been working through Congress. According to the poll, 41% said the plan it a bad idea, which is an increase from 35% in October.

WPost Calculator Provides Estimate Of GOP Bill’s Impact On Taxes. A calculator on the Washington Post (12/18) website provides “a simple estimate of your tax cut or hike.” The Post says many of the cuts “are not permanent” and the GOP bill “would adjust how inflation is calculated in the tax code, which would cause many taxpayers getting a cut now to get a hike after 2025.”

Bill’s Impacts On Home Owners Examined. On the CBS Evening News (12/19, story 5, 1:35, Glor), business analyst Jill Schlesinger said, “Under the old law, you can deduct mortgage interest up to $1 million. That amount is going down next year to $750,000.” However, “existing loans...will be grandfathered in.” CBS said “there are other impacts on homeowners” as well: interest on home equity lines and home equity loans can no longer be deducted.

WSJournal Analysis: History Shows Tax Cuts Do Not Guarantee Growth. The Wall Street Journal (12/19, Timiraos, Davidson) reports that while President Trump and Republicans believe their tax plan will provide a boost to the economy, history suggests that tax cuts will not guarantee faster growth.

Changes To Deductibility Of Interest Payments Could Impact Profits Of Some Businesses. The Wall Street Journal (12/19, Lahart) reports that the Republican tax bill’s changes to the rules on the deductibility of interest payments could impact the profits of some businesses.

AP Analysis: Tea Party Shelved Deficit Reduction In Favor Of Tax Cuts. An AP (12/19, Taylor) analysis says that while members of “the tea party class of 2010 vowed to usher in a new era for the Republican Party, one where conservatives clamoring for fiscal discipline would roll back government spending to rein in trillion-plus budget deficits,” deficit concerns “have been shelved as Republicans controlling Washington focus instead on delivering tax breaks along with spending increases for the military." Although House Speaker Ryan "has raised the prospect of tackling runaway benefit programs," congressional Republicans "haven't made a serious run at cutting spending since a failed 2011 budget deal delivered automatic cuts known as sequestration to Washington. Those too have unraveled."

Milbank: Tax Bill Is Republicans' Obamacare. Dana Milbank writes in the Washington Post (12/19) that with the tax bill, Republicans have their "own Obamacare." Milbank describes "eerie" parallels between the two measures, writing that in 2010, "lawmakers who drafted the legislation were confident it would be transformational," and "as now, the legislation passed on an entirely partisan basis, with the opposition complaining about a hurried process and side deals." Milbank adds that Republicans "now have claimed ownership of health care," since their tax bill "kills the individual mandate that underpinned Obamacare, which will leave 13 million additional people without coverage."

Democrats Back Away From Pledge To Block Spending Bill Over Dreamers.

The Washington Post (12/19, O'Keefe) reports that while dozens of Democrats "had vowed to withhold support" for spending legislation if Republicans did not allow a vote on the Dream Act to address "the fate of thousands of undocumented immigrants brought to this country as children," with the midnight Friday deadline to pass the spending bill approaching, they are "backing away" from the pledge, "angering activists but likely averting the threat of a government shutdown." According to the Post, "a group of vulnerable Democratic senators facing reelection in conservative states next year aren't willing to go that far – meaning the party is unlikely to muster the votes to block the spending bill." This "reluctance to enact legislation protecting 'Dreamers' has exposed a rift among Democrats, with immigration advocates staging protests this week and accusing some Democrats of taking the party's Latino supporters for granted."

Axios (12/19, Pandey) reports that Senate Majority Leader McConnell told Fox News' Special Report that Democrats will not force a government shutdown over DACA legislation. McConnell said, "Senator Schumer and I have discussed it. No, we'll not be doing DACA. ... That's a matter to be discussed next year. The president has given us until March to address that issue."

Politico (12/19, Kim, Caygle, Schor) says "top senators and White House officials are laying the groundwork for a major immigration deal in January" to settle the fate of the Dreamers. During a meeting Tuesday with "nearly a dozen senators," White House chief of staff John Kelly "pledged that the administration will soon present a list of border security and other policy changes it wants as part of a broader deal on so-called Dreamers, according to people who attended the meeting. The plan could come in a matter of days, senators said."

Push To Pass Spending Bill Complicated By Infighting On Other Issues. Reuters (12/19) says the push to pass a spending bill by the deadline is being complicated by "infighting over defense spending, healthcare and other matters." While Republicans "showed little appetite for a government shutdown at week's end," they "sounded resigned to having to navigate through at least some drama over a package that includes so many disparate components, which could make for a messy process until the end." Reuters adds that "leading Republicans" in both chambers were optimistic that a bill "ultimately would pass by Friday's deadline," some "were predicting that lawmakers will bump right up against the cutoff."

Ryan, McConnell About To Square Off Over ACA. Politico (12/19, Bade, Haberkorn) reports that House Speaker Ryan and Senate Majority Leader McConnell are headed toward a clash over the ACA "that needs to be resolved by Friday to avert a government shutdown." To push the GOP tax bill across the finish line in the Senate, McConnell "promised moderate GOP Sen. Susan Collins of Maine that he would prop up President Barack Obama's signature health law in a must-pass, year-end spending bill," but "Ryan's more conservative conference is flatly rejecting that idea and urging the Wisconsin Republican to stand firm against his Senate counterpart." Politico describes an "awkward dynamic" in which "the two most powerful men in Congress," after working "side by side for months on the biggest rewrite of the tax code in three decades," will be "squaring off over whether to fund Obamacare subsidies."

House Republicans Propose $81 Billion Disaster Funding Measure.

The Washington Post (12/19, Debonis) reports that House Republicans have proposed an $81 billion disaster funding package in response to this year's hurricanes and wildfires. House Appropriations Committee Chairman Rodney Frelinghuysen has proposed a measure that "includes $28 billion for the Federal Emergency Management Agency programs, $26 billion in disaster recovery block grants and $12 billion for infrastructure repairs, as well as billions of dollars in funding for agriculture, education and small-business loans." The measure, if passed,

"would be the third installment of federal disaster aid aimed at victims of hurricanes Harvey, Irma and Maria and more recent wildfires in California and other western states," and would be "the single largest emergency spending bill since 2009."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"There Is Common Ground On Guns." The New York Times (12/19) editorializes that the Lautenberg Amendment, a law that prohibits "those convicted in the assault of a spouse or a child or under a permanent protective order from owning or buying firearms," should be strengthened in order to stop the increasing prevalence of mass shootings in America. The Times opines that the law's protections should be expanded "to include dating partners and family members beyond spouses and children, as well as those under a temporary protective order." Additionally, "the range of criminals barred from gun purchases should include anyone convicted of the crime of stalking." Lastly, "the police ought to be able to seize firearms when they know they're likely to be turned on loved ones."

"Austria's Welcome To A Party With A Nazi Past." The New York Times (12/20, Board) editorializes that the new chancellor of Austria, Sebastian Kurz, "dashed hopes that he and his conservative People's Party would reject an alliance with the extremist Freedom Party" by granting the "anti-immigrant, anti-Muslim party founded by ex-Nazis key posts in his coalition government" in "a generous political bargain." The Times says the "alarming" move could "help define a new normal in Europe," particularly because Poland, Hungary, and several other European Union nations "are already governed by anti-migrant, right-wing governments." The Times warns German Chancellor Angela Merkel, along with "everyone else committed to human rights and democracy, should be wary," because this "return of the far right into Austria's government is a sign of Europe's vulnerability to xenophobia and authoritarianism after having failed to address citizens' concerns about security and economic fairness."

"A Tentative Move Toward South African Reform." In an editorial, the New York Times (12/20, Board) says Cyril Ramaphosa's electoral win Monday as the leader of South Africa's ruling African National Congress leader almost certainly positions him as the nation's next president. While Ramaphosa "was distinctly the better of the two available choices," the Times says, "whether he can live up to the hopes of his late mentor," Nelson Mandela, "is a far different question." The Times says Ramaphosa's selection was effectively "a rejection of President Jacob Zuma," but the ANC "must be held equally responsible for the culture of corruption, cynicism and patronage." As long as ANC is South Africa's "dominant political force," the Times concludes, "Ramaphosa represents the best chance of cleaning up the party and the government," although "South Africans will be keen to see whether he is worthy of the hopes his mentor placed in him."

Washington Post.

"A Blueprint For Saving Metro – At Last." The Washington Post (12/19) editorializes that Virginia Gov. Terry McAuliffe's proposed funding formula for Washington's Metro is "an adequate, sustainable and realistic means of assuring a healthy future for the transit system," and leaders in Maryland and the District should "offer similarly serious plans of their own." The Post asserts that McAuliffe "did not pretend that raiding other transportation and transit projects for the next few years, on its own, was a sufficient strategy for rescuing Metro, as did Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan," nor did he "try to shift the burden of cost-sharing, as District officials have in proposing a regional sales tax that would reduce the city's contribution but nearly double Northern Virginia's." The publication opines that McAuliffe's plan of "a limited menu of new taxes on Northern Virginia, coupled with substantial cost-shifting from other regional transportation priorities...recognizes that without a no-nonsense rescue plan, the consequences for Metro, and for the national capital region, are dire."

"Ousting Peru's President Would Do More Harm Than Good." The Washington Post (12/19) argues that the recent corruption charges in Peru have caused the most damage of all corruption scandals "spreading across Latin America" in recent years. The Post argues that populist leader Keiko Fujimori is attempting to push out her rival, President Pedro Pablo Kuczynski, from power over his misleading of the public, rather than actual wrongdoing. This would be damaging to Peru's fragile democracy because, "having been fairly elected, [Kuczynski] would be ousted at the initiative of his defeated opponent on vague grounds after a week-long process."

"Trump's National Security Strategy Isn't Much Of A Strategy At All." The Washington Post

(12/19) editorializes that the Trump Administration's "new National Security Strategy is less a coherent policy framework than a strained justification of some of the president's prejudices and an attempt to wish away others." The Post mentions differences between the strategy and those of the Obama and Bush Administrations, including the absence of a mention of threats from climate change and "no impetus to seek the reduction, much less the elimination, of nuclear weapons," as well as the threat it sees from international trade. In terms of contradictions, the Post asserts that the document "calls the growing national debt a 'grave threat' to national security, even as Mr. Trump prepares to sign a tax bill that will add at least $1 trillion to that debt." It also argues that while "the document portrays China and Russia as dangerous rivals. ... Mr. Trump so far has done little but heap praise on autocratic rulers Xi Jinping and Vladimir Putin."

Wall Street Journal.

"The Tax Reform Promise." A Wall Street Journal (12/19) editorial welcomes the Republican tax bill's expected passage, which it says will fulfill a major Republican campaign promise, but will also lead to economic growth and higher wages.

"A Win For Crony Capitalism." The Wall Street Journal (12/19) editorializes that the Senate Banking Committee's rejection of Scott Garrett, President Trump's nominee to lead the Export-Import Bank, represented a victory for special interests over taxpayers. The Journal asserts that the Ex-Im is fundamentally based on crony capitalism, and that companies such as General Electric and Boeing have benefited from this reality while conducting major operations in Sen. Tim Scott's home state of South Carolina. The Journal opines that Sens. Richard Shelby's and Pat Toomey's threat to block confirmations of other nominees who have been labeled as more favorable to the bank is reasonable.

"Closing The Sanctions Net On North Korea." The Wall Street Journal (12/19) editorializes that the US cannot afford not to harshly punish countries which permit violations of the UN sanctions on North Korea if it expects that country to be forced to the negotiating table. The Journal cites examples of such violations occurring among US allies, including Australia, Germany, France, and Japan. Countries which are not close allies will take longer to implement sanctions, the Journal writes, including China. The piece cites US Ambassador to the UN Nikki Haley's mention in a recent speech of "reports of the regime continuing to smuggle coal into neighboring Asian countries using deceptive tactics to mask the coal's origins," and says secondary sanctions imposed by Treasury last month on four Chinese companies represents an important, if belated, step.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Congress On Brink Of Tax Overhaul

Tax Cuts To Test GOP's Economic Pledges

FDA Blesses Blindness Treatment That Could Cost \$1 Million

New York Times:

How Republicans Rallied Together To Deliver A Tax Cut

How Tough Is It To Change A Culture Of Harassment? Ask Women At Ford

Amtrak Inquiry Will Focus On Driver Distraction And Excessive Speed

Espionage Bills In Australia Stir Fears Of Anti-Chinese Backlash

Bernard Law, Powerful Cardinal Disgraced By Priest Abuse Scandal, Dies At 86

'Porch Pirates' Steal Holiday Packages As They Pile Up At Homes

Washington Post:

Tax Overhaul All But Done Despite Hitch

Even With A Legislative Victory Nearing In Present, Trump's Future Still In Flux

The GOP Tax Bill Was The Easy Part. The Next Debate Could Be Much Uglier.

Democrats Are Unlikely To Force Vote On DACA

Rare Setbacks In President's Effort To Alter The Judiciary

One Vote Shifts Power In The Virginia Legislature

Financial Times:

Blue Chips Drive Borrowing Binge To Record \$6.8tn In 2017
US Tax Bill Heads To Senate Vote Tonight Despite House Hitch
Brussels Signals Tough Stance On UK Bank Bonuses After Brexit

Washington Times:

Greenpeace Accepts Bitcoin Payments Despite 'Mining' Cost From Fossil Fuels With Single Bill, Republicans Get Wins On Taxes, Obamacare Mandate, Oil Drilling
Ryan, McConnell Lead Congress To Finish Line Of Legacy-Defining Tax Bill For Trump
Global Warming? Record Snow On Alaska Mountain Peak Linked To Climate Change
32 Planned Parenthood Centers Shut Down In 2017
As 'Star Wars' Fans Cheer, Conservative Film Critics Point Out Problems With 'Last Jedi'

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: House Tax Reform Vote; Tax Reform-Trump; Mexico-Bus Crash; Seattle Train Crash; Weather Forecast; Weinstein Sexual Allegations; Holiday Shopping Deals; Florida Escapees Manhunt; Small Plane Crash; Frozen Embryo Birth; 2017 Eclipse Recap; Christmas Gift.

CBS: Mexico-Bus Crash; Seattle Train Crash; Seattle Train Crash-Safety Device; House Tax Reform Vote; Tax Reform-Analysis; WH-North Korea Cyber Attacks; Atlanta Airport Power Outage; Blindness Treatment; Common Passwords; Spam Robo-Calls; Disney World-Trump Robot; Christmas Trees; LA Art Scene.

NBC: House Tax Reform Vote; Seattle Train Crash; Seattle Train Crash-Safety Device; Mexico-Bus Crash; NK Hacking-South Korean President Interview; Prescription Drug Shopping Tips; Amazon Key-Concerns; Flu Vaccine; Volcano Formation; Gift Thief Captured.

Network TV At A Glance:

House Tax Reform Vote – 13 minutes, 50 seconds
Seattle-Train Crash – 11 minutes, 30 seconds
Mexico-Bus Crash – 4 minutes, 40 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Tax Reform Bill; Seattle-Train Crash; California Wildfires; Mexico-Bus Crash.

CBS: Tax Reform Bill; Seattle-Train Crash; Mexico-Bus Crash; Catholic Priests Abuse.

FOX: Tax Reform Bill; Seattle-Train Crash; California Wildfires.

NPR: Tax Reform Bill; Seattle-Train Crash; UN-Syria Negotiation; Wall Street News.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Holds a Cabinet Meeting.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — No public schedule announced.

US Senate: 10:30 AM Senate Public Works Committee subcommittee oversight hearing on freight movement – Transportation & Infrastructure Subcommittee oversight hearing on 'Freight Movement: Assessing Where We Are Now And Where We Need To Go', with testimony from Parker Towing Company Chairman Tim Parker Jr.; American Trucking Associations President and CEO Chris Spear; Ohio-Kentucky-Indiana Regional Council of Governments CEO Mark Policinski; and Maryland Department of Transportation Deputy Executive Director of Logistics and Port Operations David Thomas Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

US House: 2:00 PM Education Secretary DeVos testifies to House Education and Workforce Committee – Hearing on 'Examining the Policies and Priorities of the U.S. Department of Education', with testimony from Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2175, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

House expected to debate short-term govt funding bill – House of Representatives convenes for legislative business, with agenda expected to include House Amendment to Senate Amendment to 'H.R. 1370' – the legislative vehicle for the continuing resolution Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

Other: No relevant event scheduled.

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Fallon: "Disney finally added a Donald Trump robot to the Hall of Presidents. Yeah, he's really making an impact at Disney. Today he deported Aladdin and gave Scrooge McDuck a tax break."

Jimmy Fallon: "[Disney] added Trump to the Hall of Presidents. You can tell it's Trump's robot, because Putin's backstage controlling it."

Jimmy Fallon: [Referring to the Republican tax bill] "I read that a majority of Americans would end up paying more in taxes by the year 2027. Trump said it's payback for the majority of Americans who voted for Hillary Clinton."

Jimmy Fallon: "I saw that Russia's presidential election just began with Putin ahead in the polls. Supporters were chanting 'four more years, four more years,' while his opponents were chanting, 'let me out of trunk, let me out of trunk. Untie me!'"

Seth Meyers: "Tonight was the eighth night of Hanukkah. 'It's a miracle,' said Jared Kushner, about not being indicted yet."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, December 27, 2017
Date: Wednesday, December 27, 2017 6:03:58 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 27, 2017 6:00 AM EST

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Albuquerque (NM) Journal: Zinke Undaunted After Busy, Divisive 2017.
- Natural Gas Intelligence: New Interior Survey Shows Huge Increase In Alaska Onshore, Offshore Reserves.
- Associated Press: Feds Keep Proposed Minnesota Copper Mine Plan Alive.
- Wall Street Journal: Regulators Propose Rollbacks To Offshore Drilling Safety Measures.
- Bloomberg News: Trump Administration Reverses Obama-Era Policy On Accidental Bird Deaths.
- Associated Press: US Approves 60 Million Ton Expansion Of Montana Coal Mine.
- Daily Caller: Obama Fast-Trackd Elephant Trophy Ban Without Following Rules.

- Associated Press: US Asks To Combine Lawsuits Over Cuts To National Monuments.
- Washington Examiner: Trump's Energy Agenda Hits Its Stride in 2018, But Pitfalls Lurk.
- Bloomberg News: Even With Trump Minerals Order, U.S. Miners Face Uphill Battle With China.
- FEDweek: Retaliation, Not Just Harassment, A Problem At Interior, Group Says.
- Eureka (CA) Times Standard: Feds Decline To Provide Info On Decision To Disband Trinity River Restoration Watchdog Group.
- Associated Press: US Senate Approves New Mexico Wilderness Proposal.
- Wyoming Public Radio: Barrasso Calls On Zinke To View Wyoming As Leader On Sage Grouse Management.
- CBS: California's Thomas Fire Now 86 Percent Contained.
- Politico: Where Is Trump's Cabinet? It's Anybody's Guess.
- The Hill: 5 Ways The Trump Administration Is Celebrating Christmas.
- Politico: Former Zinke PAC Blames Software For $200,000 Accounting Discrepancy.
- Washington Post: Most Federal Employees In D.C.-Baltimore Area To Receive 2.3 Percent Raise In January.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Senate Approves Restoring Land To Cow Creek Band Of Umpqua Tribe Of Indians.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Associated Press: Western Colorado Eyes Potential BLM Move.
- Associated Press: US Launches Ambitious Plan To Battle Rangeland Wildfires.
- Associated Press: Bundy Mistrial Draws Sessions Probe, Calls For Broad Review.
- Washington Times: Wild Horse Population Control Methods Divide Lawmakers, Advocates.
- Associated Press: Appeal Seeking Idaho Horse Herd Sterilization Is Dismissed.
- KBSC-FM Boise (ID): BLM Cancels Challis Herd Roundup Following Lawsuit.

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

- Winds Of Worry: US Fishermen Fear Forests Of Power Turbines.
- Cape Wind Opponent Plans To Refocus On Original Mission.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Project Reopens Sacramento River Habitat For Young Salmon.

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

- Former Louisiana Political Warrior Scott Angelle Now Shaping U.S. Energy Policy.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Dallas Morning News: Other Sports: Bill Would Redirect 1.3 Billion In Funds To Wildlife Conservation.
- Associated Press: Biologists: Counts Of Florida Grasshopper Sparrows Are Low.
- Baltimore Sun: Bird-tracking Study Reveals Some Migration Paths Cross Areas Slated For Offshore Wind Farms.
- Florence (AL) Courier Journal: Carp Species Potential Threats To Alabama Waterways.

National Park Service

- Associated Press: City Sends Resolve To Congress Over Park Maintenance Backlog.
- Motherboard: The National Park Service Promises To Reinstate 92 Climate Change Documents Removed From Website.
- Atlanta Journal-Constitution: Senate Passes John Lewis Bid To Make MLK Site A National Historic Park.
- CBS News: Part Of Jackson Magnolia On South Lawn Coming Down, White House Says.
- Associated Press: Alaska Man Again To Appeal Hovercraft Ban To Supreme Court.
- Associated Press: Last Native American Village In Yosemite Being Rebuilt.
- Associated Press: National Park Service Looking For 5 Death Valley Trespassers.
- Associated Press: Officials Add 127 Homes To Historic Moscow Neighborhood.
- Missoulian (MT): Glacier National Park Boats Placed On National Register Of Historic Places.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Saipan (MNP) Tribune: Interior Funds Health Program For Four RMI Communities.
- Guam Daily Post: DOI Awards $1.5M For New Playgrounds At Island Schools.

US Geological Survey

- Washington Post: Government Scientists Blocked From The Biggest Meeting In Their Field.
- Brunswick (GA) News: USGS And JWSC Looking For Ways To Counter Saltwater Intrusion Into Groundwater.
- Additional Reading.

Opinion Pieces

- The Great Rules Rollback.
- Recalling The Monumental Tradition.
- Sizing Them Up: Utah Rep, Not Trump Or Obama, Meets Navajo Needs On Bears Ears.
- The Hard Truth About The West's Wild Horse Problem.
- Why Not Move The BLM Headquarters West?
- Bundy Mistrial Highlights Federal Failures To Bring Criminals To Justice.
- EDITORIAL: Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke Seeks To Rebuild Public Trust In The Rural West.
- California's Political Fires.
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- ABC News: Trump Blasts Russia Dossier As A "Crooked Hillary Pile Of Garbage."
- Associated Press: Trump Celebrates Christmas With Family, Honored Troops On Christmas Eve.
- New York Times: Trump Signs "Tremendous" Tax Reform Legislation, Short-Term Spending Bill.
- Washington Post: Trump Suggests Willingness To Work With Democrats On Infrastructure Bill.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 -
- Washington Post.
 - "Putin May Be In More Trouble Than We Know."
 - "America's Opioid Epidemic Saps Life Expectancy While The White House Sleepwalks."
 - "Is Prince Georges Getting Serious About Questionable Graduations?"
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Stopping A Student Loan Scam."
 - "Democracy, Putin-Style."
 - "Why The Haitians Should Stay."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Zinke Undaunted After Busy, Divisive 2017.

In an interview with the Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (12/24, Coleman), Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke discussed "the issues that dominated his first year leading the department." Zinke explained the reasoning behind "his contentious and controversial review of 27 national monuments for possible downsizing or other changes" and the proposal "to double entrance fees at some national parks during peak visitation times." Zinke also talked about his "positions on climate change" and energy development.

New Interior Survey Shows Huge Increase In Alaska Onshore, Offshore Reserves.

Natural Gas Intelligence (12/26, Passut) reports that between the onshore and offshore, Alaska collectively holds roughly "17.6 billion bbl of oil and more than 50 Tcf of natural gas, according to an updated assessment conducted by Department of Interior (DOI) agencies, which also reported a nearly six-fold increase in onshore oil resources.” The leader of the offshore survey was the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management as the Bureau of Land Management contributed data. In regards to the offshore, the “BOEM revised the estimated mean of undiscovered, technically recoverable resources in the Beaufort Sea Outer Continental Shelf Planning Area to 8.9 billion bbl of oil and 27.7 Tcf of natural gas.” Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said, “new discoveries have changed our geologic knowledge of the area...and these assessments show that the North Slope will remain an important energy hub for decades to come in order to meet the energy needs of our nation.”

Also reporting are the Westerner (12/26, DuBois), SteelGuru (12/26), the World Oil (12/25), Science Daily (12/23), and KTOO-FM Juneau \(AK\) Juneau, AK (12/22, Ruskin).

Feds Keep Proposed Minnesota Copper Mine Plan Alive.

The AP (12/22) reports that the Trump Administration has “resurrected an effort to build a proposed copper-nickel mine near the Boundary Waters Canoe Wilderness Area in northeastern Minnesota.” The Wall Street Journal (12/22, Grimaldi, Maremont) reports Daniel Jorjani, the principal deputy solicitor of the Department of Interior, announced Friday that the Administration will renew copper and nickel mining leases for a company controlled by the family of Andrés Luksic, a Chilean billionaire who is renting a mansion in Washington, DC to Ivanka Trump and Jared Kushner. Jorjani also said that the Obama Administration acted improperly to block the Minnesota mining leases. However, the Journal adds the White House denied Ivanka Trump or Jared Kushner were aware of the announcement and stated that neither had ever met Luksic.

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington Post (12/23, Eilperin), Reuters (12/23, Sherwood), the Minneapolis Star Tribune (12/23, Marcotty), the Cook-Orr \(MN\) Timberjay (12/22, Helmberger), the Minneapolis-St. Paul \(MN\) Business Journal (12/26, Rehkamp), and BusinessNorth \(MN\) (12/23).

Regulators Propose Rollbacks To Offshore Drilling Safety Measures.

In a front-page article, the Wall Street Journal (12/25, A1, Mann) reports that the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement is proposing to roll back some offshore drilling safety measures imposed following the 2010 Deepwater Horizon oil spill in order to save the industry more than $900 million over the next decade. The Journal adds that the proposed policy change fits with the promise of Interior Secretary Zinke and BSEE Director Scott Angelle to reverse overly burdensome regulations.

Also reporting are The Hill (12/26, Anapol), CBS News (12/26), Reuters (12/25, Brettell), Newsweek (12/25, Kwong), MarketWatch (12/26, Mann), Marine Link (12/26, Keefe), Axios (12/25, Britzky), Newsmax (12/26, Bunker), and The Week (12/26, Weber).

Trump Administration Reverses Obama-Era Policy On Accidental Bird Deaths.

Bloomberg News (12/22, Dlouhy) reports the Interior Department on Friday “said it won’t prosecute oil drillers, wind-farm developers and others who accidentally kill migratory birds,” a reversal from the Obama Administration’s interpretation “of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, which makes it illegal to ‘pursue, hunt, take, capture’ or kill any migratory bird except with a valid permit.” In announcing the new policy, the Interior Department’s solicitor “asserts that intent matters – and accidental migratory bird deaths don’t violate the law.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington Post (12/26, Eilperin), Reuters (12/23, Zuckerman), the Huffington Post (12/22, D’Angelo), the Wisconsin Gazette (12/23, Neff), and the Casper \(WY\) Star-Tribune (12/22, Richards).

US Approves 60 Million Ton Expansion Of Montana Coal Mine.

The AP (12/22, Brown) reported “U.S. officials have approved a 60-million ton expansion of a southeastern Montana coal mine that serves one of the largest power plants in the western United States,” according to the office of Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke. The approval “will extend the life of Westmoreland Coal Company’s Rosebud Mine by 19 years and adds 10.5 square miles (27 square kilometers) to the 40-square-mile (104-square kilometer) strip mine, Zinke spokeswoman Heather Swift said.” The news comes as the company “has seen its stock price plummet over the past year, prompting speculation the Englewood, Colorado-based company could be headed for bankruptcy.”

Also reporting is Bloomberg News (12/26, Loh).

Obama Fast-Track Elephant Trophy Ban Without Following Rules.

The Daily Caller (12/22, White) reports a federal appeals court ruled Friday that the Obama Administration "did not follow proper rule-making procedures when he banned the transport of elephant trophies from Zimbabwe to the U.S." The Daily Caller calls the decision "ironic," given that President Trump initially approved the Fish and Wildlife Service's decision to put an end to the ban "but flinched following backlash from several conservationist groups. He has not addressed the topic since." However, the Daily Caller says, "If Trump does decide to roll back the ban, then he will have to follow, in lock step, the process Obama should have taken before initiating the ban."

Additional coverage was provided by The Hill (12/22, Cama).

US Asks To Combine Lawsuits Over Cuts To National Monuments.

The AP (12/22) reports that "the federal government wants to combine legal challenges to President Donald Trump's decision to drastically shrink two national monuments in Utah." The U.S. Department of Justice "filed court documents Friday in five lawsuits whose plaintiffs included the outdoor retailer Patagonia, several environmental groups and a coalition of Native American tribes." The federal lawyers "say lawsuits filed over each monument should be heard together because they deal with the same legal questions."

Congress Must Cement Trump's Public Lands Agenda Into Law In an interview with the Washington Examiner (12/26, Siegel), Rep. Rob Bishop "said Congress needs to work quickly to make sure President Trump's decisions to roll back national monument designations are locked into place, so a future president can't reverse those moves." He said, "What they are doing has go to be put into some type of statutory language to actually give some finality to it. Otherwise, everything Trump is doing now can be changed by the next president." Bishop "said the issue is a challenge, however, because he argues that environmentalists and other opponents are misrepresenting the intent of the monument reforms, and the broader Trump public lands agenda."

The Daughter Of An Ex-Coal Executive Helped Lead Trump's National Monuments Review. The Huffington Post (12/23, D'Angelo) reports that the review of recently designated national monuments was "overseen by the daughter of Frederick Palmer, the former executive of coal giant Peabody Energy and a current senior fellow at the conservative Heartland Institute." Downey Magallanes "serves as Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's deputy chief of staff for policy." The article notes that "her personal calendar shows she had several one-on-one meetings with Zinke to discuss the review in the days before Aug. 24, when Zinke submitted his draft report to the White House."

Will Giving The State Control Of Historic Hole In The Rock Road Pave The Way For Crowds And Development? The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (12/23, Alberty) reports that "a proposal in Congress to transfer Hole in the Rock Road to the state of Utah has ignited both hopes and worries that development and tributes to the area's Mormon heritage could one day draw crowds to this remote and historic tract of land, which lost protections when President Donald Trump dismantled Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument earlier this month." The article notes that "one day after Trump's proclamation on Dec. 4, Utah Republican Rep. Chris Stewart introduced a bill that would create Escalante Canyons National Park," and "one of its provisions would transfer Hole in the Rock Road to the state of Utah." However, "it's not yet clear what being excluded from the new monuments will mean for the road."

Trump's Energy Agenda Hits Its Stride in 2018, But Pitfalls Lurk.

The Washington Examiner (12/25, Siciliano, Siegel) reported that the Trump administration's "energy dominance agenda and overthrow of the Obama administration's environmental regulations" will gain momentum in 2018 with new efforts by Interior and Energy departments to rollback regulations. The article highlights efforts to relax National Environmental Policy Act rules to make it harder for the public to protest oil and natural gas leases; the push to expand offshore drilling in the Gulf Mexico, Atlantic Ocean and Arctic; proposed revisions for rules that cover the blowout preventer device on deepwater oil rigs; the repeal of the Obama administration's hydraulic fracturing rule on federal and tribal lands; and support for new overseas markets for U.S. energy exports.

Additional coverage was provided by Forbes (12/24, Silverstein).

Even With Trump Minerals Order, U.S. Miners Face Uphill Battle With China.

Bloomberg News (12/22, Barton) reports President Trump "signed an executive order this week to identify new U.S. sources of minerals deemed critical to the country and to streamline the leasing and permitting process to expedite their domestic production, according to Bloomberg Intelligence." While the move is expected to strengthen the US mining industry, "domestic companies would still struggle to compete with low-cost Chinese competitors." Said Bloomberg Intelligence senior analyst Richard Bourke, "Without further details on how the U.S. can actually compete with China on a cost basis, the current cost structure for someone in the U.S. is so much higher that the economics don't work." He added, "The U.S. is not a low-cost producer, so companies need better pricing to be profitable." Still, Bloomberg says, "miners were positive about Trump's executive order."

Retaliation, Not Just Harassment, A Problem At Interior, Group Says.

FEDweek (12/22) reports that "in calling attention to harassment in its ranks, the Interior Department failed to emphasize what happens to employees who complain about it, an advocacy group has said, saying that in many cases the result is either no action or retaliation against the victim." The Public Employees for Environmental Responsibility "stressed" that a recent survey "found that when employees complained, no action was taken in 64 percent of the cases and an official career action was taken against the persons responsible in only 5 percent." Moreover, "38 percent of complaining employees 'were encouraged to drop the issue' and nearly as many, 32 percent, were discouraged from filing a formal complaint or report." In addition, "29 percent of employees 'indicated leadership punished them for bringing the experience up' with 15 percent saying they were threatened with loss of employment."

Feds Decline To Provide Info On Decision To Disband Trinity River Restoration Watchdog Group.

The Eureka \(CA\) Times Standard (12/22, Houston) reports that the Trump Administration "as of Friday has refused to provide more information behind its decision to disband a public watchdog group tasked with overseeing a multi-million dollar, publicly funded Trinity River restoration program." The group's chairman Tom Stokely said, "I sent a letter to the [Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke's] office and I haven't heard anything back. I don't expect to ... I really don't think they care." Also, in a letter to the Interior Department, Rep. Congressman Jared Huffman "requested similar information to be provided to his office by Friday," but "Huffman said Friday that he has not received a response."

US Senate Approves New Mexico Wilderness Proposal.

The AP (12/25) reports that "a measure that would further protect thousands of acres within the Rio Grande del Norte National Monument in northern New Mexico has won approval from the U.S. Senate." The Cerro del Yuta and Rio San Antonio Wilderness Act passed the Senate "late last week with unanimous support." The legislation "now heads to the House for consideration."

Also reporting are the Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (12/22, Coleman) and the Taos \(NM\) News (12/22, Hooks).

Barrasso Calls On Zinke To View Wyoming As Leader On Sage Grouse Management.

Wyoming Public Radio (12/22, Kudelska) reports that Sen. John Barrasso is advising the Interior Department "to focus on Wyoming as a prime example for sage grouse management." In a letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, Barrasso noted "that Wyoming is a leader in sage grouse management." Barrasso "said Wyoming showcases the best management of sage grouse by exploring novel and creative approaches."

California's Thomas Fire Now 86 Percent Contained.

"There is no Christmas break for crews battling the Thomas Fire in Southern California," which the CBS Evening News (12/25, story 5, 2:15, Duthiers) reported has grown to become the largest wildfire on record in the state history. The fire "is 86 percent contained," but correspondent Jamie Yuccas said the nearly 1,600 firefighters "could still be here for New Year's" as the flames are "not expected to be put out until first week of January."

ABC World News Tonight (12/23, story 5, 0:25, Llamas) reported the Thomas Fire, which continues to rage northwest of Los Angeles, has become "the largest blaze ever recorded in the state, burning for close to three weeks now." While the fire is now 65 percent contained, so far two people have been killed, 700 homes have been lost, and 437 square miles are "scorched. That's bigger than the area of New York City, San Francisco, and Washington, DC combined." According to the CBS Weekend News (12/23, story 9, 0:25, Ninan), the fire has "destroyed more than 1,000 structures." The Los Angeles Times (12/22, Panzar, Livingston) reports that "the fire eclipsed the 2003 Cedar fire in San Diego County, which burned 273,246 acres," and "reaffirmed 2017 as the most destructive fire season ever in the state."

Where Is Trump's Cabinet? It's Anybody's Guess.

Politico (12/26, Holden) reports that President Trump's Cabinet members are "often shielding their schedules from public view, keeping their travels under wraps and refusing to identify the people and groups they're meeting." The piece discusses the practices of 17 Cabinet heads, including Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke. The article says, "While the Interior Department readily provides calendars after the fact for Secretary Ryan Zinke, it doesn't publish his schedule ahead of time for events."

5 Ways The Trump Administration Is Celebrating Christmas.

In its "In The Know" blog, The Hill (12/24, Cohn) highlighted the ways the Trump Administration celebrated Christmas. The article said that the Interior Department is "reindeer spotting in the national parks." The department tweeted a picture of a reindeer: "Reindeer warm up: Looks like this one is getting ready for tonight's big ride! @BeringLandNPS #Alaska pic.twitter.com/JPZagphBlv— US Department of the Interior (@Interior) December 24, 2017."

Former Zinke PAC Blames Software For $200,000 Accounting Discrepancy.

Politico (12/22, Lefebvre) reports that "Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's former PAC blamed a technical glitch for a nearly $200,000 discrepancy in its campaign finance reports and said it is working to fix problems identified by the FEC." SEAL PAC "told the FEC on Friday that faulty software led it to report having more cash on hand at the beginning of 2017 than at the beginning of last year." According to the article, "Zinke launched the leadership PAC when he was elected to the House as a Republican from Montana and stepped away from the group after joining President Donald Trump's Cabinet in March."

Most Federal Employees In D.C.-Baltimore Area To Receive 2.3 Percent Raise In January.

"Most federal employees in the Washington area will receive a raise just shy of 2.3 percent in early January, under an order President Trump issued Friday," the Washington Post (12/23, Yoder) reports, although the raise "was expected because Trump in August said if Congress did not act by the end of the year, he would allow the General Schedule's default raise to go through. The GS is the pay system for most white-collar employees below the senior levels." However, the Post warns the President "may stand in the way of future pay raises," according to documents released by Sen. Claire McCaskill, which "indicate that the Trump administration plans to recommend no federal employee pay raise for 2019."

Federal Workers Poised To Overtake Salaries Of Senators, DC Gets Highest Pay Raise. The Washington Examiner (12/26, Bedard) reports that the cap on top pay for most General Service bureaucrats will rise to $164,000 next year, while the maximum pay for senior executive employees will rise to $189,600. Federal workers in the Washington area will see the biggest raise; "there, the increase for General Service workers will be 2.29 percent." Top salaries for federal workers will rival "the $174,000 salaries of America's 535 House and Senate members."

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Senate Approves Restoring Land To Cow Creek Band Of Umpqua Tribe Of Indians.

The Roseburg \(OR\) News-Review (12/22, Cegavske) reports that "the Cow Creek Band of Umpqua Tribe of Indians will have 17,519 acres of land returned to them if President Donald Trump signs a bill that passed the U.S. Senate Thursday night." The Western Oregon Tribal Fairness Act, H.R. 2791, "would place land currently managed by the Bureau of Land Management into a trust for the Cow Creek Tribe."

KOBI-TV Medford, OR (12/22) adds that "over 14,700 acres would be put into trust for the Confederated Tribes of Coos, Lower Umpqua, and Siuslaw Indians." Also, "the legislation would amend the Coquille Restoration Act to require the Interior Department to manage Coquille Indian Tribes' forest lands in the same manner as other tribal forests."

Bureau Of Land Management

Western Colorado Eyes Potential BLM Move.

The AP (12/25) reports that Mesa County officials in Colorado “say they have the perfect place if the federal Bureau of Land Management decides to move its Washington, D.C. headquarters closer to the vast lands it administers.” The article notes that “some 45 percent of Mesa County is managed by the federal agency.”

US Launches Ambitious Plan To Battle Rangeland Wildfires.

The AP (12/22, Ridler) reports that “federal officials have launched a two-pronged plan to stop a vicious cycle of rangeland wildfires in a wide swath of sagebrush country in the West that supports cattle ranching, recreation and is home to an imperiled bird.” The Bureau of Land Management on Friday “said it will create an Environmental Impact Statement concerning fuel breaks and another on fuels reduction and restoration for Idaho, Oregon, Nevada, California, Utah, and Washington.” The BLM “said the documents when finished will help speed the process for future landscape-scale projects in the Great Basin by providing a blanket approval for similar areas that will likely just need minor additional environmental reviews to proceed.”

Additional coverage was provided by the St. George \(UT\) News (12/26).

Bundy Mistrial Draws Sessions Probe, Calls For Broad Review.

The AP (12/22, Ritter) reports that “a mistrial in the federal prosecution of a family of ranchers who led an armed standoff against government agents prompted Attorney General Jeff Sessions to launch an investigation into the case and renewed calls for a broad review of U.S. attorneys in Las Vegas.” The article notes that “Nevada has been without a top federal prosecutor since March, when Sessions, President Donald Trump’s appointee, sought the resignations of 46 U.S. attorneys remaining from Barack Obama’s administration.” The case has “local defense lawyers urging a review of the U.S. attorney’s office in Nevada.”

Wild Horse Population Control Methods Divide Lawmakers, Advocates.

The Washington Times (12/26, Sherfinski) reports that “after a years-long battle over an effective ban on horse slaughter in the U.S., advocates on both sides are grappling with how the federal government should handle the tens of thousands of excess wild horses, largely on western lands.” According to the article, “some, including top voices on Capitol Hill and in the Trump administration, say the most humane thing to do is for Congress to pass a law clearing the way for excess horses to be sold or euthanized.” However, “others are urging the Interior Department to look to alternative measures of population control, such as experimentation with birth control methods.”

Appeal Seeking Idaho Horse Herd Sterilization Is Dismissed.

The AP (12/26, Ridler) reports that “a federal appeals court has dismissed an effort to allow the sterilization of a herd of wild horses in Idaho.” The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals “earlier this month granted a request by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management to stop the effort.”

BLM Cancels Challis Herd Roundup Following Lawsuit.

KBSC-FM Boise, ID (12/22, Dawson) reports that the Bureau of Land Management will “cancel a plan to round up more than 100 wild horses near Challis after a lawsuit filed by an animal rights group.” The Friends of Animals “filed suit against BLM in November, alleging they took no public comment for their plan to remove dozens of wild horses and give some of the mares birth control.” The group “dropped its suit after BLM recently withdrew its plan.”

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

Winds Of Worry: US Fishermen Fear Forests Of Power Turbines.

The AP (12/26, Marcelo) reports fishermen on the East Coast “are turning a wary eye toward an emerging upstart: the offshore wind industry.” Fishermen in New Bedford, Massachusetts “dread the possibility of navigating a forest of turbines as they make their way to the fishing grounds that have made it the nation’s most lucrative fishing port for 17 years running. The state envisions hundreds of wind turbines spinning off the city’s shores in about a decade, enough to power more than 1 million homes.” Off the coast of Long Island, “an organization representing East Coast scallopers has sued the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management to try to halt a proposal for a nearly 200-turbine wind farm.” In addition, “commercial fishermen in Maryland’s Ocean City and North Carolina's Outer Banks have...sounded the alarm about losing access to fishing grounds." Offshore wind supporters "say they have learned from Europe's long experience with it...as evidence the actual impact to U.S. fishermen will be less than feared."

Cape Wind Opponent Plans To Refocus On Original Mission.

The Cape Cod \(MA\) Times (12/26, Bragg) reports that the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management "still needs to approve Cape Wind's Nov. 29 request to relinquish its lease of 46 square miles of federal waters." BOEM is "reviewing Cape Wind's request for completeness and proper filing protocol, bureau spokesman Stephen Boutwell said."

Bureau Of Reclamation

Project Reopens Sacramento River Habitat For Young Salmon.

The Chico \(CA\) Enterprise-Record (12/22, Thompson) reports that "young salmon in the Sacramento River have a new place to grow strong before heading to sea, thanks to a project completed this week to reopen a clogged side channel near Lake California in Tehama County." According to Rob Irwin of the Sacramento River Forum, "the channel, which had become blocked naturally over the years, will provide rearing habitat for juvenile salmon and is expected to improve the fishery." The objective of the project, implemented by the Interior Department as part of the Central Valley Project Improvement Act, is "to replenish spawning and resting areas lost due to construction of dams." The article notes that "the roughly $300,000 project was a combined effort of multiple state and federal agencies, local water districts and conservation groups and paid for through a grant from the Bureau of Reclamation tied to the Central Valley Project."

Additional coverage was provided by KHSL-TV Chico, CA (12/22, Rene).

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

Former Louisiana Political Warrior Scott Angelle Now Shaping U.S. Energy Policy.

In an interview with the Baton Rouge \(LA\) Advocate (12/24, Ballard), Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement director Scott Angelle talked about how he is helping President Trump to push American "energy dominance." Angelle said, "We've gone from an era of scarcity to an era of abundance pretty quickly. We have to move from the 1980s goal of energy independence to the 2017 goal of energy dominance." In furtherance of that goal, Angelle and the Trump Administration "want to provide access to more reserves offshore and to work with the industry."

Fish And Wildlife Service

Other Sports: Bill Would Redirect 1.3 Billion In Funds To Wildlife Conservation.

The Dallas Morning News (12/23, Sasser) reports that a recently introduced Congressional bill would "redirect $1.3 billion per year in existing royalties from energy and mineral development of federal lands and waters and invest the money in fish and wildlife conservation." H.R. 4647, the "Recovering America's Wildlife Act," is "a bipartisan bill introduced by Representatives Jeff Fortenberry, a Nebraska Republican, and Debbie Dingell, a Michigan Democrat."

Biologists: Counts Of Florida Grasshopper Sparrows Are Low.

The AP (12/25) reports that "biologists say surveys of endangered Florida grasshopper sparrows in the wild have been discouraging." According to the article, "40 females and 74 males were counted last year," but this year, "only 22 females and 53 males were counted." U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officials "say the bird could disappear from its native habitat within two years, despite conservation efforts."

Bird-tracking Study Reveals Some Migration Paths Cross Areas Slated For Offshore Wind Farms.

The Baltimore Sun (12/22, Dance) reported that according to a study that tracks birds, "if wind farms are built off Maryland's coast, turbines will be spinning in areas where many seabirds cross

– but few linger – during annual migrations.” Researchers have “spent the past five years tagging more than 400 birds with tiny transmitters and watching their movements.” The maps “will inform decisions on whether and where to permit construction of wind turbines from North Carolina to New York.”

Carp Species Potential Threats To Alabama Waterways.

In a contribution to the Florence \(AL\) Courier Journal (12/22, Rainer), David Rainer from the Alabama Department of Conservation and Natural Resources discusses the state’s efforts to halt the spread of invasive Asian carp. Rainer mentioned that Alabama is a member of the “Mississippi Interstate Cooperative Resources Association,” a coalition which includes “the 28 states in the Mississippi basin” and federal agencies.

National Park Service

City Sends Resolve To Congress Over Park Maintenance Backlog.

The AP (12/26) reports that “officials in a Maine city are asking the federal government to solve the National Park System’s $11.33 billion maintenance backlog.” The Ellsworth City Council “approved issuing a resolve to Congress this week asking for an income and payment plan.” Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has proposed new fees for visitors at several national parks, “which he says could raise $70 million in revenue.”

Additional coverage of fee hikes was provided by the Peninsula \(WA\) Daily News (12/25), the Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (12/22, Maffly), the Southwest Colorado Journal (12/25, Langlois), the Pensacola \(FL\) News Journal (12/26, Gabriel), the Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (12/24, Sambides), the Denver Post (12/22, Worthington), the Clark County \(WA\) Columbian (12/25, Vogt), and the Pagosa \(CO\) Daily Post (12/26, Faz).

The National Park Service Promises To Reinstate 92 Climate Change Documents Removed From Website.

Motherboard (12/22, Emerson) reports that the National Park Service has “removed 92 documents on climate change from its website.” according to the Environmental Data and Governance Initiative, an investigative journalism nonprofit, “PDFs describing the agency’s ‘Climate Friendly Parks Program’ were taken down this month.” A spokesperson for the National Park Service explained: “Under Section 508 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the National Park Service, like all federal agencies, has a January 18, 2018, deadline to make electronic information and technology accessible to people with disabilities. As part of that process we are updating PDF documents on NPS.gov that are not yet accessible to all, including climate action plans for nearly 100 parks that were listed on a nps.gov webpage. Those non-compliant PDF documents are temporarily unavailable for download while we work to make them compliant with the revised accessibility standards. In the meantime the PDF documents will be provided by email upon request.”

Also reporting are the New Republic (12/21, Zhang) and Mashable (12/22, Kaufman).

Senate Passes John Lewis Bid To Make MLK Site A National Historic Park.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution (12/22, Godwin) reports that the Senate on Thursday passed Rep. John Lewis’ bill that “would create Georgia’s first national historic park at the Martin Luther King Jr. National Historic Site in downtown Atlanta.” The bill, now headed to President Trump, “would also add the Prince Hall Masonic Building to the campus that houses King’s birth home, the Ebenezer Baptist Church and a visitor center.” The article adds that “another bill passed by the Senate Thursday would establish a U.S. Civil Rights Network within the National Park Service.”

Part Of Jackson Magnolia On South Lawn Coming Down, White House Says.

CBS News (12/26, Tillett) reports that “a ‘large portion’ of the Jackson Magnolia, a tree that has been a South Lawn fixture since the 1800s, is being removed, the White House says” because of safety reasons. According to the article, “a substantial portion of the Jackson Magnolia will be removed Wednesday morning, including one tree limb which will be conducted by the National Park Service.” The NPS “assessed that the tree was decaying and a potential safety hazard.”

Also reporting are the Washington Post (12/26, Kaplan) and Newsweek (12/26, Pereira).

Alaska Man Again To Appeal Hovercraft Ban To Supreme Court.

The AP (12/24) reports that “an Anchorage moose hunter plans to put his lawsuit about federal authority on the state’s rivers before the U.S. Supreme Court again.” John Sturgeon “said Friday in Fairbanks he plans to file a petition pushing the Supreme Court to review his case for a second time.” According to the article, “Sturgeon says he feels more confident the court will take his case than when he filed his first petition to the court in 2015.”

Last Native American Village In Yosemite Being Rebuilt.

The AP (12/23) reports that “the last Native American village in Yosemite Valley, destroyed 40 years ago, is being rebuilt in the same spot so that Miwuk Indian youths can learn about their culture.” According to the article, “reconstruction of the village started in 2009 and so far a roundhouse foundation has been built.” The project was “halted in 2011 because of safety concerns but construction resumed last year after the native community proved the traditional roundhouse met building codes.”

National Park Service Looking For 5 Death Valley Trespassers.

The AP (12/22) reports that “authorities are looking for five people who entered a closed area at Death Valley National Park and damaged government property.” The National Park Service on Friday “said surveillance video shows the people trespassing the area known as Devils Hole on the evening of Nov. 5.”

Officials Add 127 Homes To Historic Moscow Neighborhood.

The AP (12/26) reports that “the boundaries marking a historic neighborhood in a northern Idaho town were changed, adding more than double the number of prewar homes to the historic district.” The National Register of Historic Places has “expanded the boundaries of the Fort Russell neighborhood in Moscow, pushing the number of historic sites in the district to 243.”

Glacier National Park Boats Placed On National Register Of Historic Places.

The Missoulian \(MT\) (12/24, Backus) reports that “for the second time in two years, historic boats operated by the Glacier Park Boat Company have been added to the National Park Service’s National Register of Historic Places.” Last year, “the 1920s-era tour boat originally named the Rising Wolf was added to the national register.” In December, “its sisters, the 45-foot-long Little Chief and the 56-foot DeSmet, were accepted.”

Office Of Insular Affairs

Interior Funds Health Program For Four RMI Communities.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (12/27) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has “directed the Office of Insular Affairs to authorize a partial funding amount of $721,320, to the Ministry of Health in the Republic of the Marshall Islands for the Four Atoll Health Care Program for the people of Bikini, Enewetak, Rongelap, and Utrok. Zinke is concerned about the threat to the continuity of services under this program.” Zinke said, “The Marshall Islands played an important role in American and world history, and remains a key component of our military readiness in the Pacific. Looking after the health and wellness of our extended American family is a key component of upholding commitments to one another.” Assistant Secretary Douglas Domenech said, “We look to Congress to help us meet these important commitments on behalf of the U.S. government for the people of Bikini, Enewetak, Rongelap, and Utrok.”

DOI Awards $1.5M For New Playgrounds At Island Schools.

The Guam Daily Post (12/25) reports that “thousands of the island’s elementary and middle school students received a Christmas gift from the Department of Interior as the Calvo administration announced securing a $1.5 million grant.” The money will be “used to purchase new playground and gym equipment and improve multipurpose courts and fields.” According to the article, “roughly $1.3 million will go to fund elementary school playground upgrades, while $200,000 will go to middle schools for field improvements and equipment.”

US Geological Survey

Government Scientists Blocked From The Biggest Meeting In Their Field.

The Washington Post (12/22, Kaplan) reports "some 450 researchers" from the US Geological Survey typically attend the American Geophysical Union's annual conference, "the largest gathering of Earth, space and climate scientists in the world," but in advance of the summit, "the Interior Department – which oversees the USGS – issued a new cap on attendance: No more than 199 employees across the department could travel to the meeting, and expenditures could not exceed $399,000." According to the Post, "as a result, just 178 USGS researchers were present at the AGU conference in New Orleans last week – a 60 percent drop from last year." A USGS spokeswoman said the agency "was not given a rationale for the policy shift," although an Interior Department spokeswoman "said the decision to limit the number of employees saved hundreds of thousands of tax dollars."

Additional coverage was provided by The Hill (12/22, Greenwood).

USGS And JWSC Looking For Ways To Counter Saltwater Intrusion Into Groundwater.

The Brunswick \(GA\) News (12/26, Cooper) reports that "a plume of saltwater intrusion into Glynn County's groundwater, first discovered in the 1950s, has been spreading under Brunswick and is beginning to push saltwater under multiple wells close to the point where salt can be tasted." The article says that "Hercules chemical resin plant opened in the early part of the 20th century and the Georgia-Pacific pulp mill opened in 1937." According to Greg Cherry, a hydrologist with the United States Geological Survey, "the pair sucked a lot of water out of the Floridan aquifer, peaking at more than 80 million gallons per day in 1980." But "Cherry said it would likely be best for them to continue pumping the same amount they have been." He explained, "The problem is there because they over-pump the upper Floridan (aquifer), but now they're keeping it in place. One of the things controlling the plume is the hydraulic gradient."

Additional Reading.

- What Is Snake Fungal Disease? Understanding The Potentially Devastating Fungus That Could Be A Global Threat. Newsweek (12/22, Hugo).
- Why Americans Are Using A Lot Less Water. Christian Science Monitor (12/26, Hinckley).

Opinion Pieces

The Great Rules Rollback.

In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (12/25) hails the Trump Administration for reducing overly burdensome regulations, which the Journal says ranks third among President Trump's top achievements of the year, following his judicial confirmations and tax reform.

Recalling The Monumental Tradition.

In an op-ed for the Washington Times (12/24, Walcher), Greg Walcher, president of the Natural Resources Group, defends the move to change the borders of the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante national monuments. He argues that "Native American artifacts and other objects of historic or scientific interest will remain protected, while in the 2 million acres released from the monuments, traditional uses and public access will be restored." Walcher also points out that "not one acre is being sold, privatized, transferred to states, or 'stolen' by anyone." Rather, it is "a change in the management structure, nothing more."

Sizing Them Up: Utah Rep, Not Trump Or Obama, Meets Navajo Needs On Bears Ears.

In an op-ed for The Hill (12/26, Ben), Alfred Ben, vice president of Aneth Chapter, notes that "when President Obama designated more than 1.3 million acres in San Juan County as Bears Ears National Monument in December 2016, my chapter of the Navajo Nation, Aneth Chapter, closest to Bears Ears, passed resolutions requesting that the president reverse his designation." He points out that "there already are 11 wilderness areas protecting this area; therefore, a monument designation doesn't come with anything more than the paper it was written on." Also, "the idea was sold to the public as though it was a 'celebrated,' tribally-managed monument, with decision-making at the offices of each tribal chairman/president," but "the committee status of the Bears Ears Commission so far has not included much, if any, input from Native Americans."

The Hard Truth About The West's Wild Horse Problem.

In an op-ed for the New York Times (12/25, Stewart), Rep. Chris Stewart calls attention to the “broken” Wild Horse and Burro Program. Stewart writes that “although the finger is routinely pointed at the B.L.M. for mismanagement, the bulk of the blame lies with shortsighted decision-making by misinformed but well-meaning members of Congress.” He urges Congress to support his “proposal to remove language from the Interior Department’s budget that bars the B.L.M. from euthanizing captured healthy horses it is holding.”

Why Not Move The BLM Headquarters West?

In an editorial, the Denver Post (12/25) argues that the proposal to move the Bureau of Land Management headquarters to the West deserves consideration. The paper is “eager to see if it makes sense to move the rest of those employees closer to the lands and natural resources they manage.” It concludes that “if careful examination of the BLM leads to a bigger vision of taking bureaucracy out of Washington, D.C., and bringing it closer to the people it serves, the whole nation could benefit.”

Bundy Mistrial Highlights Federal Failures To Bring Criminals To Justice.

In an op-ed for The Hill (12/26, Molvar), Erik Molvar, executive director of Western Watersheds Project, calls the mistrial in the Cliven Bundy case an “outrage.” Molvar argues that “federal agencies have been patient and cautious to a fault in their prosecution of the Bundys and their accomplices.” In conclusion, he hopes that “prosecutorial missteps won’t get in the way of justice.”

Additional commentary on the case appeared in the Las Vegas Review-Journal (12/24, Saunders), the Eugene \(OR\) Register-Guard (12/26), the Everett \(WA\) Herald (12/26, Saunders), Townhall (12/27, Barr), and the St. George \(UT\) News (12/25, Hyde).

EDITORIAL: Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke Seeks To Rebuild Public Trust In The Rural West.

In an editorial, the Las Vegas Review-Journal (12/24) lauds Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke for pledging that “Ash Springs will again be open for use” and rebuking the BLM “for taking so long to resolve the issue.” The paper sees this as reflecting Zinke’s “mission of mending fences with rural residents throughout the West, many of whom have long regarded federal land managers as arrogant and dismissive of their concerns.”

California’s Political Fires.

The Wall Street Journal (12/22) editorializes that while California officials are using the wildfires burning across the state to promote their policies on fighting climate change, they should instead prioritize fire prevention.

Additional Reading.

- Under Cover Of Tax Bill, Congress Gives Away The Arctic National Wildlife Refuge — To Drillers. Los Angeles Times (12/22).
- A Phony Green ‘Watchdog’ Group Is Attacking Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke. Washington Examiner (12/22, Mooney).
- Tribal Sovereignty: Good For Indian Country’s Economy, Good For America’s Economy. The Hill (12/22).
- Is The Trump Administration Making Oil Drilling Less ‘Safe’?. Newsweek (12/25, Kwong) .
- Secretary Zinke: Time To Withdraw Proposal To Raise Fees In Parks. Huffington Post (12/22, Ostfeld).
- Trump’s Offshore Oil Rush A Disaster For Oceans And Climate. Huffington Post (12/25, Steiner).
- U.S. Mining Reforms Are Crucial To Energy Security. Forbes (12/25, Clemente).
- Alaskan Oil Zombie Roams The Capitol. Forbes (12/26, Lovins).
- Our Opinion: Keeping An Eye On Oilfield Safety. Thibodaux \(LA\) Daily Comet (12/24).
- Offshore Tests A Risk For Whales. Charleston \(SC\) Post and Courier (12/22, Gilbert).
- Op-ed: How To Forever Resolve National Monument Controversies. Deseret \(UT\) News (12/23, Poulson).
- Public Lands Are Economic Drivers. Missoula Current \(MT\) (12/24, Welch, Carr, Bardwell, Kreillick, Doherty)

- Tester, Zinke And The End Of History. Missoula Current \(MT\) (12/22, Crisp)
- Fighting Devastating Wildfires With Science Requires Research, Funding. Missoula Current \(MT\) (12/26, Simeoni).
- Time For Montana Women To Stand Up For Public Land. Bozeman \(MT\) Daily Chronicle (12/23, Edwards).
- Pullman National Monument Under Federal Review, Too. Huffington Post (12/26, Cassello).
- Make Indiana Dunes A National Park. Chicago Tribune (12/26).
- Giving Rural Colorado The Same Opportunity For Financial Success. Alamosa \(CO\) Valley Courier (12/26, Tipton).
- Good Riddance, Not 'Au Revoir' To The Mandate. Grand Junction \(CO\) Daily Sentinel (12/26).
- Restraint The Key To Keeping Wilderness Wild. Falmouth \(MA\) Enterprise (12/22, Neill).
- Community Voices: We Need To Fight For Our Land. Bakersfield \(CA\) Californian (12/26, Wong).
- Fishing Report: Developer Sets High Bar For Ocean Wind Farms. Providence \(RI\) Journal (12/23, Journal).
- Government's Mismanagement Of National Parks Means Problems And Maintenance Bills Are Piling Up. Orange County \(CA\) Register (12/26, Pusok).
- The Value Of Biodiversity Is Unknown, But We Must Conserve It. The Hill (12/26, Rodewald).
- H. Sterling Burnett: Frog Case Highlights Dangers Of And Need To Reform The Endangered Species Act. Breitbart (12/23, Burnett).
- Outdoors: Niagara River Lake Trout Need Respect. Buffalo \(NY\) News (12/22, Hilts).
- Canada Geese, Though Now Common, Still Evoke Wildness With Their Echoing Honks And Soaring Flocks. Milwaukee Journal Sentinel (12/23, Smith).
- I'm Worried: We're Devaluing Innovation In Government. Huffington Post (12/26, Gross).
- Schools Need To Bring Back Physical Education: Our View. Pacific \(GUM\) Daily News (12/26)
- Cutler: Tell Your Congressman To Back These Four Nature Bills. Roanoke \(VA\) Times (12/27, Cutler).
- Governor's Washington Post Op-ed On Public Land Is Misleading. Helena \(MT\) Independent Record (12/25, Jones).

Top National News

Trump Blasts Russia Dossier As A "Crooked Hillary Pile Of Garbage."

President Trump blasted the Russia dossier Tuesday, writing in a tweet, "WOW, @foxandfrinds 'Dossier is bogus. Clinton Campaign, DNC funded Dossier. FBI CANNOT (after all of this time) VERIFY CLAIMS IN DOSSIER OF RUSSIA/TRUMP COLLUSION. FBI TAINTED.' And they used this Crooked Hillary pile of garbage as the basis for going after the Trump Campaign!" The coverage, while somewhat limited, is negative, casting Tuesday's tweet as the latest in an escalating series of attacks on the FBI by the President and congressional Republicans in an effort to discredit special counsel Robert Mueller's investigation.

ABC News (12/26) reports on its website that Trump was referring to comments made Tuesday on Fox News' Fox & Friends "by both a Fox News reporter who was hosting the morning show, Todd Piro, and former congressman and current Fox News contributor Jason Chaffetz." Piro asked, "Why would you brief members of the FBI before verifying the existence of collusion and really taint the entire FBI in the process," to which Chaffetz "responded at length," saying at one point that "the dossier, we have long known, is bogus."

USA Today (12/26, Jackson) describes a "loud denunciation" of the dossier from Trump and says the issue of Russian interference in the 2016 election, along with healthcare, is "likely to dominate his second year in office." The Washington Times (12/26, Miller) cites its own reporting which said that while the FBI "has declined to repudiate" the dossier, it "has conceded the document's major core charges of election collusion remain unsubstantiated." WND (12/26, Unruh) also cites the Times' report, which said that according to sources familiar with House and Senate investigations, "during a closed hearing of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence last week, Deputy FBI Director Andrew McCabe declined to criticize the dossier's 35 pages of charges against Trump and his aides while admitting the document remains largely unverified.”

The Hill (12/26, Delk) reported in its “Blog Briefing Room” blog that the dossier “included several incendiary claims against Trump and his campaign that have loomed over his presidency,” and citing the tweet, Breitbart (12/26, Spiering) describes Trump as “amazed that the dossier was used to accuse his campaign of colluding with Russia.”

Newsweek (12/26, Price) says on its website that Trump’s tweet came “after he spent the holiday weekend lobbing similar accusations about corruption at the FBI and the Clinton team.”

Politico (12/26, Morin) says Trump’s weekend tweets “bash[ed] the FBI and its leadership.”

Kenneth Moton said on ABC World News Tonight (12/26, story 3, 2:40, Llamas) that Trump “has been attacking the FBI” for weeks, and over the weekend, he targeted McCabe, “accusing him of bias during the Hillary Clinton email investigation, after an ally of Clinton’s donated to McCabe’s wife’s political campaign.” In a tweet, Trump asked, how McCabe could be “given $700,000 for wife’s campaign by Clinton Puppets.”

The Washington Examiner (12/26, Cohen) reports that Trump’s “attacks on the FBI have intensified in recent months, questioning bias in its leadership and if it let Clinton off easily in its investigation into her private email server.” The Washington Post (12/26, Lee) says Trump and some Republicans in Congress “are ramping up their criticism of the FBI, in an apparent effort to discredit special counsel Robert S. Mueller III and his investigation.”

In his column for the Washington Post (12/26), Dana Milbank writes that President Trump is either “trying to undermine democracy,” or “irredeemably vain.” Milbank cites Trump’s commemorative “Challenge Coin,” on which his name appears four times and the national motto, “E pluribus unum,” is replaced with Trump’s campaign motto, “Make America Great Again.” Milbank adds that Trump “managed to find division” in his Christmas message, highlighting “the belief that the Old Testament prophet Isaiah prophesied that Jesus would be the Messiah. Jews dispute that interpretation.” The next morning, Milbank adds, Trump “resumed attacks on Obamacare and a ‘Crooked Hillary pile of garbage.’”

Flynn’s Brother Calls On Trump To Pardon Him. The New York Post (12/26, Tacopino) reports that former National Security Adviser Michael Flynn’s brother, Joseph, called on President Trump “in a tweet he sent to the president and deleted minutes later.” In response to Trump’s tweet criticizing the FBI investigation, Joseph Flynn, tweeted, “About time you pardoned General Flynn who has taken the biggest fall for all of you given the illegitimacy of this confessed crime in the wake of all this corruption.”

Joseph Flynn told Newsweek (12/26, Kutner) “that he found Trump’s tweet interesting and so,” and responded. He added, “I said it, and maybe he’s listening.” In a tweet to Newsweek hours later, he wrote, “I stand by my tweet. This is all my personal opinion and I stand by it.” Moments later, in another tweet to Trump, he wrote, “Mr. President, I personally believe that a pardon is due to General Flynn, given the apparent and obvious illegitimacy of the manner in which the so called ‘crimes’ he plead (sic) guilty to were extracted from him. ... I ask for quick action on this. Thank you and keep up the good work!”

Mueller Could Indict Manafort, Gates Again. The Daily Beast (12/26) reports that there is a “broad expectation” that Mueller will file a superseding indictment against former Trump campaign manager Paul Manafort and his business partner Rick Gates. Mueller’s team hinted in the initial indictment that more charges could be coming.

House, Senate Panels Question Businessman About Trump Tower Meeting. Reuters (12/26) cites “four sources familiar with the matter” who said that congressional investigators have questioned Irakly Kaveladze, “a Georgian-American businessman who met then-Miss Universe pageant owner Donald Trump in 2013,” about “whether he helped organize a meeting between Russians and Trump’s eldest son during the 2016 election campaign” The Senate and House intelligence committees “knew Kaveladze was at the June 9, 2016 meeting but became more interested in him after learning he also attended a private dinner in Las Vegas in 2013 with Trump and [Azerbaijani oligarch Aras] Agalarov as they celebrated an agreement to hold that year’s Miss Universe pageant in Moscow, the sources said.” Members of the panels “want to know more about the extent of Kaveladze’s contacts with the Trump family and whether he had a bigger role than previously believed in setting up the Trump Tower meeting when Trump was a Republican candidate for president.”

GOP Lawmakers Criticize Mueller, “Deep State.” Rep. Louie Gohmert said on Fox News’ Fox & Friends (12/26) that Mueller is “bad news. He is out for a scalp. He would love to get Trump’s scalp. He would love to be the hero of the left to take out Donald Trump. He will do everything he can to do that. Mueller is not going to be deterred by these people falling around him. He wants a scalp and he would love to get POTUS. If he can not get the President he will , like we’ve seen, he will take a mike Flynn and it was kind of sad the way that all happened." Gohmert added that "since the day Mueller went in, he has not been the upstanding, fair guy that people painted him as being. He did more destruction to the FBI, he weakened the FBI more so than J. Edgar Hoover or anybody ever did."

USA Today (12/26, King) reports that Rep. Francis Rooney told MSNBC Live Tuesday that "he wants leaders at the Department of Justice and the FBI to 'purge' officials he says are politically biased against President Trump." Rooney said, "People need a good, clean government." Rooney "mentioned FBI agent Peter Strzok, whom Mueller removed from the Russia investigation after learning about texts he sent disparaging Trump," and "raised concern about Justice Department official Bruce Ohr, who was reportedly demoted for hiding ties to Fusion GPS." Rooney said, "I would like to see the directors of these agencies purge it and say 'look, we have a lot of great agents, a lot of great lawyers here.' ... Those are the people that I want the American people to see and know the good work being done, not these people that are kind of the deep state." The Washington Times (12/26, Persons) also reports on Rooney's comments.

In an op-ed for USA Today (12/26), Rep. Andy Biggs writes that Mueller's investigation "is clearly careening far beyond the scope of his original charge." Biggs argues that Mueller has shown that he is "incapable of leading a focused, unbiased review of his initial assignment," and if he "truly cared for justice, he would voluntarily step aside from his post."

In an editorial, USA Today (12/26) contrasts the current criticism of Mueller with early May, when he "was universally praised as the perfect choice" to oversee the Russia investigation. As the investigation "gathered steam with charges brought against four former Trump campaign officials in recent months, a coterie of Republican congressmen, joined by commentators on Fox News and other Trump-friendly media outlets, have started calling for Mueller's head." USA Today adds that the critics "are laying the groundwork for either undermining Mueller's conclusions or firing him," and to pre-empt that, "Congress should promptly pass bipartisan legislation to provide greater protections for the special counsel."

Kristol: Trump "Fears" Russia Investigation And Is Trying To "Shut It Down." The Daily Caller (12/26, Givas) reports that in an appearance on MSNBC's Andrea Mitchell Reports, Weekly Standard Editor-at-Large Bill Kristol accused Trump of trying to "shut down" the Russia investigation. Kristol said, "The president hates the investigation. He fears it, and he wants to shut it down or curb it as much as he can. ... It may be that he intends to fire Mueller. ... Trump is trying systematically to discredit the FBI...and he's doing so by attacking individuals, by attacking the whole organization, by saying the whole thing is a witch hunt. I think he fears it and wants to end it as much as he can." Of Republicans who defend the President on the issue, Kristol said, "They're being used by the president. ... They're playing into the president's hands. They're being allies to the president in something that I think will do a lot of damage to the country. ... I think the president knows he has something to worry about and is doing his best to fight back."

Stone: Members Of Trump's Cabinet Are Plotting To Remove Him. The Washington Times (12/26, Blake) reports that former Trump campaign adviser Roger Stone said in a recent interview aired on C-SPAN that members of the President's cabinet "have discussed plans to remove him from the White House." Stone said he has heard that members of the Administration have considered whether they can invoke the 25th Amendment to remove Trump from office. Said Stone, "I have sources, and I work my sources, and yes, I believe there are some who have had this discussion. This is both outside the Cabinet and in. I think it's the fallback plan for the establishment. That's why I'm trying to sound the clarion call. ... I cannot reveal those sources, and I'm not prepared to do so, but this is not a conspiracy theory. ... There are members of the Cabinet who have had this discussion. Let me just leave it at that."

Trump Celebrates Christmas With Family, Honored Troops On Christmas Eve.

President Trump spent Christmas Day with his family at his Mar-a-Lago club in Palm Beach, Florida and released a video with First Lady Melania Trump wishing "America and the entire world a very Merry Christmas." On Christmas Eve, the President called US troops to express his gratitude for their service. He and the first lady also spoke with children as part of NORAD's annual efforts to track Santa Claus before attending a midnight church service at the Episcopal Church of Bethesda-by-the-sea. While limited, media coverage was mostly positive of the Trumps' Christmas events.

The AP (12/25, Superville) reports the President celebrated Christmas how "millions of Americans do: surrounded by family," although "unlike most Americans, he released a brief video in which his wife, Melania, joined him to 'wish America and the entire world a very Merry Christmas.'" The AP adds that "the day was not without work. White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders said the president had been briefed on Monday's suicide bombing in Kabul, Afghanistan. The Islamic State group claimed responsibility for the attack, which killed at least six people."

Breitbart (12/25, Spiering) reports that in his Christmas message to Americans, the President said he and the First Lady "are delighted to wish America and the rest of the world a very Merry Christmas." Melania Trump added Christmas is the time to "see the best of America and the soul of the American people," and Breitbart states that they also "paid tribute to the Armed Forces." The Daily Caller (12/25, Enjeti) reports they "highlighted the sacrifice of U.S. service-members deployed abroad for Christmas and recited bible verse Isaiah 9:6."

The CBS Weekend News (12/24, story 2, 2:00, Morgan) reported that on Sunday, the President "praised the American servicemen and women stationed around the world." NBC Nightly News (12/24, story 4, 2:25, Alexander) said Trump "connected with service members from each branch around the world" and ABC World News Tonight (12/24, story 4, 2:40, Llamas) reported that Trump "kept busy on Christmas eve, thanking troops." Trump: "We're grateful for each of you, who spend this Christmas away from your families."

The Washington Post (12/24, Lee) reported "Trump appeared in a cheerful mood as he greeted troops located in Kuwait, Qatar and Guantanamo Bay." The Post added that the President "thanked service members from each of the five branches of the military and their 'always underappreciated military families, the greatest people on earth.'" The AP (12/24, Superville) said Trump "seemed to reserve the most praise for the Coast Guard, which impressed the president with its rescue operations during a devastating hurricane season in Florida, Texas, Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands."

The Daily Caller (12/24, Johnson) reported the President also "complimented the military on 'winning' the fight against terrorism, noting that many on the call were active participants in the ongoing fight against ISIS and the Taliban." USA Today (12/24, Daprile) reported Trump "lavished the troops with praise on 'how well we're doing' in the fight against terrorism and declared, 'We're winning.'" The Hill (12/24, Samuels) reported that Trump's call came days after Vice President Pence made a surprise visit to Afghanistan to meet US troops and Afghan leaders. Pence told soldiers that "victory is closer than ever before."

Meanwhile, Politico (12/24, Griffiths, Goldberg) reports that the President and First Lady "also participated in NORAD's annual efforts to track Santa Claus." Reuters (12/25, Rampton) reports they "took calls from children, asking them what they wanted most from Santa, and revealing what was on his own wish list." According to Reuters, "One boy wanted building blocks. Another wished for his grandma to get out of the hospital. And as for Trump – who has sent a series of combative tweets since arriving at his Florida vacation home – he said he wants 'peace for the country.'" Bloomberg News (12/24, Epstein) states that the President "made classically big, Trumpian promises to the kids, telling one 'you'll wake up and have the greatest gifts.' To another, Trump said: 'I'll make sure that Santa is going to treat you well. Really well. The best he's ever treated you.'"

The Hill (12/24, Anapol) "Briefing Room" blog reports "the president took six calls and the first lady took nine, according to the first lady's office." The AP (12/24) reported the Trumps joined hundreds of volunteers speaking with "eager children" as part of the joint US-Canadian North American Aerospace Defense Command's "wildly popular program." Politico (12/24, Bender) describes "interactive NORAD Tracks Santa" program as "the largest single public outreach program for the Defense Department. It's also, you might say, the Pentagon's most elaborate propaganda operation."

In addition, The Hill (12/24, Beavers) reported the President and First Lady later attended midnight mass at the Episcopal Church of Bethesda-by-the-Sea in Palm Beach on Sunday, "arriving after the service had already started, according to a White House pool report." The Hill noted that the Trumps "attended the church's midnight services last year, about a month before Trump took office. The church is where the couple had their wedding."

The Washington Times (12/25, Boyer) reports "the Rev. James Harlan, the church's rector, gave a homily focused on themes of the power of words and God's light. He began by quoting Nelson Mandela, whom he noted rebelled against his government for its systemic oppression." Breitbart (12/25, Spiering) reports "a crowd of about 100 people stood on the street to watch the motorcade – even a protester who held an "impeach" sign on Christmas Eve."

The Hill (12/24, Beavers) reported the President on Sunday evening also "touted that people are saying 'Merry Christmas again,' asserting that he stood up to an 'assault' on Christmas hours before the holiday." He tweeted, "People are proud to be saying Merry Christmas again. I am proud to have led the charge against the assault of our cherished and beautiful phrase."

MERRY CHRISTMAS!!!!!"

The Daily Caller (12/25, White) reports that according to a new Axios poll, "a strong majority of President Donald Trump's supporters and detractors are united on one thing: they both want to be greeted with 'Merry Christmas' over 'Happy Holidays.'" The Daily Caller says the new poll finds that "nearly 65 percent of Americans want to be greeted with 'Merry Christmas,' while a much smaller 28 percent prefer 'Happy Holidays,'" which "give[s] conservatives a big victory in their longstanding promise to end the so-called 'War on Christmas.'" The poll also finds 86 percent of the President's supporters "want store greeters to say 'Merry Christmas,' while only 11 percent prefer the alternative," and even his "haters prefer it, albeit by a narrower margin."

However, while Trump's "meaning is unmistakable when he declares, as he has done since long before the holiday season, that's he making it OK to talk about Christmas again," whereas former President Obama "did not," an AP (12/25, Woodward, Rugaber) fact check asserts "that's not what the record shows." According to the AP, "the White House holidays under the Obamas had plenty of Christmas trappings and cheer. Obama offered a more general holiday message on the official greeting card, but wished 'Merry Christmas' at the National Tree lighting, on his Twitter account and in his weekly address." On the CBS Evening News (12/25, story 3, 2:00, Duthiers), Chip Reid similarly reported "all recent Presidents used the phrase frequently." Reid added Trump is scheduled to remain in Florida until early January for what White House labeled "a working vacation, but if the President's recent history here is any guide, there will also be a lot of golf."

First Lady Tweets Christmas Greeting With Santa Selfie. USA Today (12/25, Levin) reports First Lady Melania Trump on Monday "cheekily tweeted a selfie taken with a Santa filter as @FLOTUS wished all a Merry Christmas." Breitbart (12/25, Pollak) says the "sultry Santa Selfie" shows the first lady "wearing a Santa hat and blowing a kiss to the camera as golden reindeer dance in the foreground." According to the Daily Caller (12/25, Caruso), her Snapchat selfie "will make your Christmas complete."

Security "Ramped Up" Across The Country For Christmas. ABC World News Tonight (12/24, story 3, 2:00, Llamas) reported law enforcement authorities are "on edge after recent terror attacks." Homeland Security officials are "urging vigilance as Christmas eve celebrations get under way," and security is "ramped up across the country at soft targets like churches including the National Cathedral."

WPost A1 Profiles Pro-Trump Tennessee Town Backing His "Merry Christmas" Campaign. In a front-page profile of the "rural Trump-supporting town" of Linden, Tennessee, the Washington Post (12/24, A1, Johnson) reported "the word 'holiday' doesn't seem to exist" while "Merry Christmas" is everywhere. The Post added that "in Tennessee's Perry County, where Trump won 76 percent of the vote, many locals said they don't consider the president one of them but they are glad he's speaking up for them." According to the Post, "It's difficult to tell if the president's campaign for Christmas has changed the national culture; here in Linden, everyone has always said 'Merry Christmas.'"

WSJournal A1: Retailers Record Strong Holiday Shopping. The Wall Street Journal (12/25, A1, Kapner) in a front-page article reports Mastercard SpendingPulse data reveals US retail sales, excluding automobiles, from Nov. 1 through Christmas Eve rose by 4.9 percent, up from 3.7 percent last year and their strongest performance since 2011.

Christmas Storms Disrupt Travel Across Northeast, Midwest. "The good news for many in the Northeast and Midwest was that it has been a white Christmas," the AP (12/25) reports, but "the bad news was that a blizzard swept into parts of New England and bitter cold enveloped much of the Midwest." The AP adds "even the usually rainy Pacific Northwest got the white stuff." The lead CBS Evening News (12/25, lead story, 1:35, Duthiers) broadcast said the storm delayed more than 8,000 flights and led to the cancellation of over 260 others. Anna Werner also reported "areas from Maine to Massachusetts still could receive up to a foot of snow."

Trump Signs "Tremendous" Tax Reform Legislation, Short-Term Spending Bill.

President Trump on Friday signed tax reform legislation that he hailed would be "a tremendous thing for the American people" and "fantastic for the economy" as well as a stopgap spending bill that passed on Thursday to avert a government shutdown. The network newscasts allocated just under four and a half minutes combined to the signing of the legislation, but coverage was more extensive in print and online. While conceding the President delivered on his promise to sign the tax cuts into law before Christmas, reporting highlighted that Trump declined to clarify how he intends to improve the perception of the first major legislative achievement of his Administration to the American people.

The New York Times (12/22, Sullivan, Tackett) reports the President "signed the most consequential tax legislation in three decades on Friday, even as he complained that he has not been given credit for his administration's accomplishments during a turbulent first year." The Times says Trump "decided against doing a formal signing ceremony early next year" after watching television coverage that morning "and hastily called his staff to say that the legislation needed to be signed 'now,' prompting a last-minute Oval Office ceremony for the president's greatest achievement in his first year in office." The Times adds that the event "marked another improvisational moment in a presidency already known for abandoning the norms of the office."

The Wall Street Journal (12/22, Radnofsky) reports the President explained, "We were going to wait until Jan. 7 or 8 and do a big formal ceremony, but every one of the [TV] networks was saying, 'Will he keep his promise? Will he sign it for Christmas – before Christmas?' And so I immediately called [staff], I said, 'Let's get it ready.'" Trump added, "I said that the [tax] bill would be on my desk before Christmas, and you are holding me literally to that, so we did a rush job today. ... It's not fancy, but it's the Oval Office. It's the great Oval Office."

Meanwhile, the Washington Post (12/22, Wagner) reports Trump "walked through various provisions of the bill, which he touted as 'a bill for the middle class and a bill for jobs,' adding that 'corporations are literally going wild.'" He also hailed the legislation as "a tremendous thing for the American people" and asserted, "It's going to be fantastic for the economy." The Hill (12/22, Jagoda) similarly reports that the President "spoke at length during the signing, thanking Republicans in Congress for getting the legislation to his desk and predicting it would help the economy." The Hill says Trump "touted various aspects of the plan, including the larger standard deduction, the increase in the amount exempt from the estate tax and the repatriation of earnings that companies currently have held overseas."

The Wall Street Journal (12/22, A1, Radnofsky, Peterson) reports in a front-page article that Trump also hailed Republican lawmakers for coming together to support the bill. The President called his new friendships with numerous lawmakers "a huge factor" behind the legislation's passage. He added, "I can call anybody now." ABC World News Tonight's (12/22, story 5, 2:25, Llamas) David Wright reported that Trump at the ceremony acted "like someone who can't wait to open his Christmas present."

USA Today (12/22, Przybyla) similarly reports that the President "was enthusiastic about the prospects of more legislative victories next year" and he "challenged Democrats to work with him to secure infrastructure funding next year." Trump said, "The Democrats very much regret [opposing the bill]. They wanted to be a part of it. ... But I really do believe we're going to have a lot of bipartisan work done. ... I really believe infrastructure can be bipartisan." The CBS Evening News (12/22, story 3, 0:30, Glor) in a brief report noted the tax reform bill "was passed with no Democratic support."

In addition, Reuters (12/22, Heavey, Lambert) reports Trump "praised several companies that have announced employee bonuses in the wake of the bill's passage, naming AT&T, Boeing, Wells Fargo, Comcast and Sinclair Broadcast Group." Politico (12/22, Nelson) reports the President "said he had received a call from New England Patriots owner Robert Kraft, who Trump said told him he planned to purchase and build a 'tremendous paper mill or paper products plant' in North Carolina because of the tax cut legislation." Trump added that he had "had many calls such as that" and asserted, "A lot of things are going to be happening in the USA. We're going to bring back our companies. They've already started coming back. I think they had certain confidence in me. They figured we were going to get this done. They have already started." He continued, "Corporations are literally going wild over this, I think even beyond my expectations, so far beyond my expectations."

The Washington Times (12/22, Boyer) reports Trump additionally signed "a temporary funding bill to keep the government open and a $4 billion missile defense bill." Townhall (12/22, Pavlich) says Trump, who "delivered his promise of tax cuts for working class Americans by Christmas and signed The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act into law," also signed other bills "on a number of issues, including defense authorization and the continuing resolution to keep the government open." NBC Nightly News (12/22, story 5, 1:30, Alexander) Hallie Jackson said the Administration is facing "a real spending fight in January, which is not the only big battle coming up." Jackson added "Congress will need to cut a deal on immigration" and "eventually the White House wants to tackle welfare reform but before that infrastructure."

However, the AP (12/22, Kellman, Lemire) reports "none of the members of Congress who muscled through the biggest tax overhaul in 30 years were in the Oval Office on Friday as Trump signed the measure into law" due to how "spur-of-the-moment" the signing event was, so "with no legislators on hand, he offered to distribute pens from his signing event to reporters assembled in the Oval Office." The AP adds that although Trump "loves to decry 'fake news,'" the President was "clearly feeling some end-of-year cheer," as he also "gave reporters and camera crews credit for 'working very hard' and said, 'We really appreciate that.'"

According to Breitbart (12/22, Spiering), the President "spent most of the morning praising the tax bill and his year-end accomplishments but appeared frustrated that the media was not giving him enough credit." He tweeted, "With all my Administration has done on Legislative Approvals (broke Harry Truman's Record), Regulation Cutting, Judicial Appointments, Building Military, VA, TAX CUTS & REFORM, Record Economy/Stock Market and so much more, I am sure great credit will be given by mainstream news?" Breitbart reports Trump announced the signing ceremony in a tweet. Trump said, "Will be signing the biggest ever Tax Cut and Reform Bill in 30 minutes in Oval Office. Will also be signing a much needed 4 billion dollar missile defense bill." The Washington Examiner (12/22, Correll) says Trump tweeted, "Our big and very popular Tax Cut and Reform Bill has taken on an unexpected new source of 'love' – that is big companies and corporations showering their workers with bonuses. This is a phenomenon that nobody even thought of, and now it is the rage. Merry Christmas!"

Nonetheless, Bloomberg News (12/22, Pettypiece) concedes "the legislation hasn't scored well in national polls, in part because of concerns about its benefits for corporations and top earners" Bloomberg adds "the legislation – and public perceptions of it – are expected to play a major role in 2018 elections that will determine whether Republicans retain control of Congress." While hailing Trump for signing the "massive tax relief into law," the Daily Caller (12/22, Donachie) acknowledges "one caveat is that the Republican plan barely touches a loophole in the tax code that exclusively benefits billionaire investors" and the bill "is expected to raise the federal deficit roughly $1.46 trillion over the next decade, a figure that has caused a great deal of backlash from Democrats and the public." The Daily Caller adds that "another feature of the legislation that is drawing flack from Democrats is the repeal of Obamacare's individual mandate," which "is one of the least popular features of the Affordable Care Act and nearly every Republican push to repeal and replace Obamacare in 2017 included a full repeal."

A Wall Street Journal (12/22, Rubin) analysis speculates Democrats will likely oppose efforts to fix the law in the future if problems emerge. The Journal suggests Democrats may adopt similar tactics to those that Republicans employed in opposition to the Affordable Care Act

More Companies Announce Bonuses, Hiring As Tax Bill Signed. The Boston Globe (12/22, Chesto) reports the President's "long friendship with New England Patriots owner Robert Kraft paid off with a choice talking point for the new federal tax legislation the president signed Friday" because "Trump said Kraft called him Thursday night to tell him the tax bill would pay immediate dividends." The President stated that Kraft "said based on this tax bill, he just wanted to let me know that he's going to buy a big plant in the great state of North Carolina and he's going to build a tremendous paper mill there or paper products plant."

The Hill (12/22, Carter) reports Sinclair Broadcast Group also "announced Friday it would pay a $1,000 bonus to almost 9,000 of its full-time and part-time employees after the recent passage of the GOP tax bill." In a statement, Sinclair President and CEO Chris Ripley said that the company is "grateful" for the passage of the bill. The Hill notes Sinclair "is awaiting approval from the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) for its proposed $3.9 billion purchase of Tribune Media."

In addition, Bloomberg News (12/22, Carmiel) reports New York developer Steven Witkoff announced that "he's plowing ahead with his plan to develop the stalled Fontainebleau resort in Las Vegas." In an interview, Witkoff said, "Now, we're not going to be patient. ... We've basically pressed the 'go' button to do everything necessary to finish design on the project and take down a construction loan."

Meanwhile, Reuters (12/22, Sheahan) reports Daimler "said on Friday the U.S. tax reform would result in an income tax benefit of around 1.7 billion euros ($2.01 billion) in its 2017 results."

In another article, Reuters (12/22, Somerville) reports startups also "came away with a significant victory in the U.S. tax overhaul – a chance to defer the often-onerous tax bill that is attached to company stock options." According to Reuters, by requiring companies to provide stock options to at least 80 percent of their workforce in order to access the benefit, the law "could prompt startups to spread the option wealth more widely."

However, Bloomberg News (12/22, Kochkodin) acknowledges "the most immediate effect of the new law could be a one-time accounting headache." Bloomberg says that within hours of Trump signing the bill, a number of companies announced "spectacular" losses, with Amgen Inc. predicting "a $6 billion to $6.5 billion charge," Bank of America Corp. forecasting "a $3 billion hit," and Credit Suisse Group AG expecting "a writedown of 2.3 billion Swiss francs ($2.32 billion)."

Mnuchin's Support Helped Lobbyists Preserve Carried Interest Deduction, Sources Say. The New York Times (12/22, Rappeport) reports that despite achieving "his most important legislative achievement to date," Trump broke "a signature promise that helped propel his populist presidential campaign" because the legislation "fail[ed] to close the so-called carried interest 'loophole' that benefits wealthy hedge fund managers and private equity executives." The Times states that "despite Mr. Trump's vows to eliminate" the rule, the President "in this case was no match for the powerful lobbyists protecting the status quo." Bloomberg News (12/22, Kapur, Jacobs, Mohsin) reports sources say White House National Economic Council Director Cohn "wanted to end the carried interest break, while Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin successfully urged keeping it with new limits." According to Bloomberg, "Mnuchin's support proved helpful for lobbyists seeking to preserve the preferential rate," and congressional tax writers ended up leaving the break "in place, but limited it to gains on assets held for at least three years." However, the sources said that the "disagreement between Cohn and Mnuchin...wasn't a pitched battle. ... It was merely a disagreement that went Mnuchin's way."

Accountants, Analysts Scramble To Break Down Tax Changes. The New York Times (12/22, Hsu, Creswell) reports the signing of the tax reform legislation came "just as the accounting industry would normally be shifting into holiday mode," leaving accountants and analysts in "a frantic hyperdrive" as they attempt to "dissect" the law's new provisions. Meanwhile, Bloomberg News (12/22, Kapur) reports "inconsistent dates" in the bill have also "stirred debate over whether some people might be able to get an extra break on their state and local income taxes by filing early." Bloomberg adds that "the debate illustrates the confusion that could result over potential drafting errors in the bill – which Congress passed into law roughly seven weeks after releasing the first legislative text."

Bloomberg News (12/22, Steverman) says the law "will be anything but simple for many affluent Americans, who are now inundating their accountants for advice." Bloomberg reports wealthy Americans have already begun "asking how to exploit the changes, according to certified public accountants, lawyers and financial advisers." Bloomberg adds that "tax experts are scrambling to understand the full implications of the 500-page law" upon business owners.

NYTimes Analysis: Trump Would Save Over $11 Million Under Tax Plan. "President Trump would save about $11 million on his taxes, if the new Republican tax overhaul were applied to his 2005 tax return," according to a New York Times (12/22, Drucker, Carlsen) analysis that projected "the savings would be a roughly 30 percent cut. He would also save another $4.4 million on his eventual estate tax bill." The Times says its findings contrast with claims by White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders, who on Tuesday predicted the President "will likely take a big hit," and Trump, who last month "said he would be a 'big loser' under the tax bill."

JCT: Tax Cuts Will Cost $1 Trillion Over 10 Years After Considering Growth. Bloomberg News (12/22, Voskuhl) reports the tax cuts newly signed into law "will reduce federal revenue by more than $1 trillion over the next decade, even after accounting for their beneficial effects on the U.S. economy," according to the nonpartisan Joint Committee on Taxation, which "runs counter to arguments advanced by the Trump administration and by congressional Republicans, who've argued that their package of tax cuts would stimulate enough economic growth to pay for itself." Bloomberg adds that "the estimate is roughly in line with previous findings from independent analysts."

Experts Warn Expanded Child Tax Credit Will "Provide Little Relief" For Lowest-Income Families. The AP (12/22, Sell) reports that although "the expansion of a child tax credit helped seal Congress' approval of the Republican tax overhaul," experts "say the expanded child credit will actually provide little relief for some of the lowest-income families." The AP says Chye-Ching Huang of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities "expects about 10 million children among the lowest-income working families to receive a token increase of up to $75 per family – or no increase at all" because "the refundable portion of the credit doesn't kick in until a family has income of $2,500. For each additional dollar earned, a family receives a refundable credit worth 15 cents until it reaches its maximum credit of $1,400. But some families won't come close to that threshold, Huang said."

Experts Warn Tax Changes May Depress US Home Sales Next Year. Reuters (12/22, Banerjee) reports, "U.S. home sales will likely take a hit next year as middle-class Americans receive fewer perks under an overhaul of U.S. taxes and face rising home prices and interest rates, industry experts said." Reuters adds the bill "slashes the amount of mortgage interest that home buyers can deduct to $750,000 from $1 million, potentially hurting buyers in California and other costly markets." According to Reuters, the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) is forecasting sales of new single-family homes will "rise 5 percent in 2018 – only about half the growth estimated for 2017 and the slowest pace since 2014."

Private Universities "Reeling" As Reality Of 1.4 Percent Endowment Tax Sets In. Politico (12/22, Stratford, Wermund) reports "the most well-to-do private universities" now have to "pay a 1.4 percent tax on earnings from their endowments, which are largely built on donations from prosperous alumni and enhanced by investments," and "the reality of the new tax has left higher-education leaders reeling." Politico adds that the "colleges and universities in the GOP line of sight are hurrying to make sense of exactly how the new tax code would hit their campuses beginning just weeks from now."

US Tax Reform Expected To Prompt Global Cuts, Exacerbate Trade Tensions. The New York Times (12/22, Stevenson, Ewing) reports that "to the rest of the world," the tax reform law "has the potential to challenge the global economic order, creating an uneven playing field and setting off a race among countries to cut corporate taxes." According to the Times, "The overhaul is already threatening economic relations, adding to concerns that Mr. Trump is advancing a nationalistic agenda at the expense of other countries."

"Mexico's finance ministry will evaluate whether to make fiscal changes in response to the U.S. tax reform, according to a document seen by" Reuters (12/22, Angulo), which reports "the ministry said Mexico would not make changes that left it with a higher public sector deficit."

Stephens: "Hysteria" Over Tax Bill Benefits GOP. In his New York Times (12/22, Stephens) column, Bret Stephens contends the Democratic "hysteria" over the passage of the Republican tax bill is likely to benefit GOP candidates in 2018. He says that while "there are things genuinely to dislike in the tax bill," there are "two things to know: Slashing corporate rates – the bill's central achievement --is good economics. And wailing against the bill as an American Armageddon is dumb politics, at least for Democrats." Stephens concludes "for now, the G.O.P.'s legislative triumph is only being sweetened by the wildly overblown reaction to it."

Trump Suggests Willingness To Work With Democrats On Infrastructure Bill.

The Washington Post (12/22, Wagner) reports that "still celebrating passage of a tax bill with only Republican votes, President Trump on Friday took to Twitter to" say he is willing to work with Democrats to develop legislation on infrastructure. He tweeted, "At some point, and for the good of the country, I predict we will start working with the Democrats in a Bipartisan fashion. Infrastructure would be a perfect place to start. After having foolishly spent $7 trillion in the Middle East, it is time to start rebuilding our country!" According to the Post, the President was "referring to an initiative the White House is preparing to unveil as early as mid-January that is designed to spur $1 trillion in new spending over the coming decade on the nation's ailing roads, bridges, airports and waterways."

Short: Administration To Begin 2018 With Focus On Infrastructure. The Wall Street Journal (12/24, Gordon) reported Marc Short, the White House director of legislative affairs, on Fox News Sunday said the Administration plans to begin 2018 with a focus on infrastructure spending. Short said, "There's no doubt there's a pathway forward on this." Short added, "I'm very confident. We've had conversations with Democrats. I think there's a willingness on the policy to get there. The question remains will politics prevent it." Short also said President Trump has invited Senate Majority Leader McConnell and House Speaker Ryan to Camp David in January "to make sure we're all on the same page about where our priorities are for 2018."

NYTimes: Deficient Infrastructure Partly To Blame For Amtrak Derailment. The New York Times (12/24, A20) editorialized that last week's Amtrak derailment near Tacoma, Washington may in part have been due to excessive speed on a turn, but, "It was also...yet another demonstration of this country's collective, continuing failure to invest in infrastructure." The train could have been slowed automatically by a positive train control system, but train was one of many nationwide that lacks this system, despite Congress mandating in 2008 that all railroads install one by the end of 2015. The Times blames the delays on the railroad industry, but also "federal and state governments, which have not only failed to push the industry harder but have never appropriated enough money to allow public transit agencies to upgrade their systems." Furthermore, President Trump has shown little willingness to act on his promises to make major investments in infrastructure, the Times added.

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

The New York Times did not publish editorials on Wednesday.

Washington Post.

“Putin May Be In More Trouble Than We Know.” A Washington Post (12/26) editorial says Vladimir Putin “boasts of popularity ratings...85 percent and above since Russia’s invasion and annexation of Crimea in 2014. Yet Mr. Putin remains unwilling to test those numbers against real competition” after the state election commission banned opposition leader Alexei Navalny from running in March’s presidential election. The Post argues that “it may be that Mr. Putin has more reason to fear Mr. Navalny than the poll numbers suggest.”

“America’s Opioid Epidemic Saps Life Expectancy While The White House Sleepwalks.” The Washington Post (12/26) editorializes that the US, “in the grip of an escalating opioid addiction and overdose crisis, has now recorded its second straight year of declining life expectancy, a nearly unheard-of event for a rich Western nation and its first such downturn in nearly 60 years.” The Post says it “should be a wake-up call for the Trump administration, which has talked a fine game about the opioid epidemic but done too little to address it.” It argues that a “far greater sense of urgency is needed to address what has become one of the gravest public-health threats to the United States in living memory.”

“Is Prince Georges Getting Serious About Questionable Graduations?” The Washington Post (12/26) editorializes that “revelations of irregularities in high school grading practices in” Prince George’s County, MD public schools “have shaken the county,” and “the controversy has cast a cloud over the jump in graduation rates, a source of pride for county officials who cite the increase from 74.1 percent in 2013 to 81.4 percent in 2016 as a sign of an improving school system.” The Post adds that “more troubling is that some students might have graduated without the skills or knowledge needed to succeed.” The Post lauds county school officials for “taking the matter seriously with plans to tighten procedures and improve accountability.”

Wall Street Journal.

“Stopping A Student Loan Scam.” The Wall Street Journal (12/26, Journal) editorializes that the Obama Administration had sought to reduce the government’s $1.3 trillion student loan portfolio by allowing borrowers to discharge their debt, but earlier this year, Education Secretary DeVos ended this practice, suspending claim approvals while the department’s Inspector General reviewed departmental procedures for discharged debt. According to the Journal, a new directive from DeVos scales student loan relief based on college employment data. Borrowers who enrolled in programs whose graduates earn less than the average of peer institutions will receive 100% debt relief, while those who attended programs with higher earnings will only be able to discharge some debt. The Journal praises the Administration for restoring due process and protecting taxpayers.

“Democracy, Putin-Style.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (12/26) criticizes opposition leader Alexei Navalny’s ban from running Russia’s upcoming presidential election, and says Moscow’s moves against him signal that Putin fears Navalny could pose a serious threat if he were permitted to run.

“Why The Haitians Should Stay.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (12/26) is critical of a decision last month by the Administration announced to rescind the visas of almost 59,000 Haitians who are legally documented under the Temporary Protected Status (TPS) program. The Journal argues that Haiti is far from recovered from the 2010 earthquake or recurring outbreaks of cholera, so they should be allowed to stay.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Homeowners Rush To Prepay 2018 Property-Tax Bills

Latest Entrants Into Electric Car Race: Makers Of Post-Its, Paint

Can Central Banks Keep Control Of Interest Rates?

China Snares Innocent And Guilty Alike to Build World’s Biggest DNA Database

New York Times:

Years Of Attack Leave Obamacare A More Government-Focused Health Law

Homeland Security Increasingly Means Putting Agents Outside The Homeland
Thousands Once Spoke His Language In The Amazon. Now, He's The Only One.
Barred From Running, Barred From Boycotting: A Russian Candidate's Quandary
Your Uber Car Creates Congestion. Should You Pay A Fee To Ride?
Patch Of Bamboo Creates New Legal Thicket For Connecticut City

Washington Post:

Justice Roiled By Improper Behavior
N. Korea's Leader Has Had A Very Good Year
Bitcoin Boom Is A Boon For Far-Right Extremists
How U-Md. Sifts Through 30,000-Plus Applications
An Obstacle To Hope Blocked From Seeking Treatment

Financial Times:

Philippines Fears Typhoon Toll Set To Rise
Traditional US Retailers Gain On Holiday Sales Hopes
Kremlin Warns Alexei Navalny Against Russian Election Protest

Washington Times:

Law Enforcement Leaders Say Trump's Strong Support For Police Saves Lives
Trump Having Trouble Appointing Swamp-Drainers
Military Refuses To Speculate On Islamic State Leader's Fate
Electoral Wins Give Perez A Foothold In Struggle To Rebuild Democratic Party
Threat Of 'Blood Diamonds' Returns As Exports Flow From Central African Republic

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Winter Weather; Weather Forecast; Trump-Tweet Attacks; WH-UN Budget; Holiday Shopping Surge; DoD Gun Control Failure; Family Suicide; Virginia Double Murder; Falcon-9 Rocket Launch; Flu Season Warning; Toy Recall; Fireworks Gone Wrong; Lost Brothers Reunited; Serenade On Flight; Police Mediation Usage.

CBS: Winter Weather; DoD Gun Control Failure; Trump-Obamacare; Flu Season Warning; Texas-Hurricane Recovery; Holiday Retail Sales; Vitamin D Benefits Disputed; Newspaper Criticizes Orrin Hatch; FDA-Food Recalls; Ballet For Elderly.

NBC: Winter Weather; Weather Forecast; Holiday Shopping>Returns; Highway Overpass Prank Murder; Tax Reform Law-Tips; Russia-North Korea Threats; White House Tree; Cannabis Legalization Careers; Disney World Security Policy Change; Gaming Disorder; Marriage Proposal Gone Wrong; Father Son Relations.

Network TV At A Glance:

Winter Weather – 10 minutes, 30 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Cleveland-Power Outages; Winter Weather; Flu Season Warning; Trump-Obamacare; Virginia-House Election Tie.

CBS: Winter Weather; Holiday Shopping Surge; Flu Season Warning; Police-Saving Drowning Boy.

FOX: Virginia-House Election Tie; FIFA Corruption Scandal; Washington-Suspicious Box Scare.

NPR: WH-UN Budget; DoD Gun Control Failure; Holiday Shopping Surge; Romania-Corruption Law Change.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — No public events scheduled.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — No public schedule announced.

US Senate: 10:00 AM Senate convenes in a pro forma session Location: TBD

<http://www.senate.gov/>

On recess until 3 January.

US House: No scheduled events

Other: No relevant events scheduled.

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

All late-night talk shows were re-runs.

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, July 5, 2017
Date: Wednesday, July 05, 2017 6:59:24 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Washington Times: Presidents Have Changed National Monuments 18 Times Before Bears Ears Controversy.
- The Hill: Interior Opens Public Review Of Offshore Drilling Plan.
- Missoulain (MT): BLM Reopens Public Input On Rule-making.
- Flathead (MT) Beacon: The Voice Of Rural America.
- Law360: Zinke And Indian Country: The First 4 Months.
- The Hill: The Hill's 12:30 Report.
- KGMB-TV Honolulu: Additional Coverage: Man Who Jumped To Rescue In Pearl Harbor Helicopter Crash

To Be.

- High Country (CO) News: Wild Spaces Define Who We Are As Americans.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Red Lake, Other Tribes Alarmed By Trump's Proposed Cuts To BIA Programs.
- 9th Circ. Urged To Halt Off-Reservation Casino Plans.

Bureau Of Land Management

- U.S. News & World Report: Drone Pilot Could Face Charges For Flying Near Wildfire.
- Elko (NV) Daily Free Press: BLM Seeks Comments On Geothermal Land.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- U.S. Senate Bill Includes Klamath Measures.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- NPR: Restoring The Great Dismal Swamp Comes After Centuries Of Draining It.
- Casper (WY) Star-Tribune: Barrasso Backs Bipartisan Bill To Solidify Gray Wolf Delisting, Promote Hunting And Fishing.
- Kingman (AZ) Daily Miner: Feds Post Plan For Endangered Cactus, But Recovery Still A Long Way Off.
- U.S. News & World Report: Oregon Silverspot Butterflies Get New Places To Grow.
- Tacoma (WA) News Tribune: Free Nisqually Lecture Series Kicks Off Amid Fears Of Refuge Budget Cuts.
- Topeka (KS) Capital-Journal: Aerial Surveys Reveal 'Stable' Population Trend For Lesser Prairie Chicken.
- South Florida Sun Sentinel: South Florida Men In Key West Jail After Taking Endangered Key Deer, Authorities Say.
- Daily Caller: Additional Coverage: Environmentalists Say Grizzly Population Isn't Recovered, Sue For Re-Listing.
- Fairbanks (AK) News-Miner: King Cove Road About Fish, Not Patients.
- East Bay (CA) Times: Must Stop Brown's Twin-tunnels Water Boondoggle.

National Park Service

- WTTG-TV Washington: Security Measures For The Capitol Fourth.
- Minneapolis Star Tribune: US-Cuba Sea Mission Finds Healthy Reefs, Invasive Lionfish.
- U.S. News & World Report: Acadia Carriage Paths Are Getting Upgraded.
- U.S. News & World Report: June Climbing Up Despite Voluntary Ban At Devils Tower.
- Sacramento (CA) Bee: Bear Encounters Double At Yosemite Over 2016.
- U.S. News & World Report: Restored Flag Returns To Gettysburg 154 Years After Battle.
- St. Paul (MN) Pioneer Press: Paddle Share Expands To St. Paul: Kayaking The Mississippi Is Getting Really Easy.
- Albuquerque (NM) Journal: Caverns' Bat Flight Program Attracts 1,000 Visitors.
- WMAR-TV Baltimore: Additional Coverage: Lawsuit Dropped After Grand Canyon Allows Creationist To Collect Rocks.
- Philly (PA): Independence Hall Is Not Falling Down, But It Needs Our Support.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Hawaii Free Press: US Officials Lift Suspension On Compact Public Infrastructure Grant Funding.
- Radio New Zealand: Tuvaluans And I-Kiribati Promised A Home In Fiji.
- Radio New Zealand: Marshall Islands, FSM, Seek Answers After Citizens Shot By US Police.
- Guam Daily Post: Maternity Tourism Rates Consistent For Korean Visitors.
- DVIDS Hub: Seabees Build Relationships In Micronesia With A School Renovation.
- Virgin Islands Consortium (VIR): Seven Coral Reef Management Fellowships Available To Virgin Islanders.
- Pacific (GUM) Daily News: OPA's Hernandez Completes Executive Program.

Top National News

- Reuters: White House: Trump To Hold Bilateral Meeting With Putin Friday.
- ABC: Media Analyses: North Korean ICBM Launch Poses Test To Trump.
- Washington Post: Appeals Court Rules EPA Cannot Delay Enforcement Of Rule On Oil And Gas Emissions.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Turkey's 250-Mile Protest."
 - "Who Can Reform The Chicago Police?"
 - "The Way Forward On North Korea."
- Washington Post.
 - "If Trump Takes A Protectionist Approach On Steel, It Could Backfire."
 - "The Supreme Court's Modest Decision On A Controversial Church-State Question."
 - "The Washington Football Team's Legal Victory Isn't A Win Worth Celebrating."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Blue State Budget Breakdowns."
 - "The North Korean Missile Crisis."
 - "The Tory Policy Retreat."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Presidents Have Changed National Monuments 18 Times Before Bears Ears Controversy.

A Washington Times (7/4, Wolfgang) analysis says that while environmentalists and congressional Democrats are casting the Interior Department proposal to resize the Bears Ears National Monument in Utah as "a first-of-its-kind expansion of executive power," an "effort to break up and shrink a national monument has been done at least 18 times before, with presidents of both parties exercising power to significantly reduce the size of US landmarks established by their predecessors."

EDITORIAL: Donald Trump And The Antiquities Act. The Las Vegas Review-Journal (7/5) editorializes that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke will be "in Nevada later this month to tour two new national monuments, Gold Butte and Basin and Range." The paper says that's "a welcome departure from the previous administration, which simply waved a magic wand from 2,400 miles away to restrict land use across wide swaths of the state." Arguing in "for repealing the Antiquities Act," the paper asserts that "major decisions about federal land designations should be in the hands of legislative branch, not the purview of an imperial president or the bureaucracy."

Maine's New Monument Offers Chance For Rustic Adventures. The AP (7/3, Whittle) reports that "Maine's new Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument is now welcoming guests for its first full summer as a monument." The article provides "a guide to what awaits at Katahdin Woods and Waters, and what the future might have in store."

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by ABC News (7/3, Whittle), the Annapolis \(MD\) Capital Gazette (7/3, Whittle), Boston \(MA\) (7/3, Whittle), the Bristol \(VA\) Herald Courier (7/3, Whittle), the Red Bluff \(CA\) Daily News (7/3, Whittle), the Daily Mail (7/3), Philly \(PA\) (7/3, Whittle), the Washington \(DC\) Times (7/3, Whittle), and the Washington \(DC\) Post (7/3, Whittle).

Instead Of A Monument, How About A North Woods National Park. In an op-ed for the Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (7/4, Watkins), Tate Watkins, a research fellow at the Property and Environment Research Center, suggests that "a more creative framework could be used to protect Katahdin Woods and Waters without a full-fledged federal takeover – and in a way that avoids more acrimony." Watkins argues that if Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "thinks the area warrants national park status," then Zinke "should insist that it be done with a stipulation: St. Clair and his family's nonprofit agree to run it as a park franchise — and with no appropriations from taxpayer coffers." Watkins notes that "during his confirmation hearing, Zinke said he recognizes 'that there is distrust, anger, and even hatred against some federal management policies.'" Watkins concludes that if Zinke “wants an innovative, ‘made-in-Maine’ solution that could foster collaboration instead of ill will, a national park franchise for Katahdin Woods and Waters just might fit the bill.”

Additional Coverage. Additional coverage of the review of national monuments was provided by the Helena \(MT\) Independent Record (7/4, Busse), the Missoulian \(MT\) (7/4, Busse), the Billings \(MT\) Gazette (7/3, Byrne, Downey), the Montana Standard (7/3, Byrne, Downey), Courthouse News (7/3, Reese), the Tucson \(AZ\) Sentinel (7/4, Smith), the San Juan \(UT\) Record (7/4, Laws), the Cape Cod \(MA\) News (7/3), the Visalia \(CA\) Times-Delta (7/4, Merriman), KCBX-FM San Luis Obispo \(CA\) San Luis Obispo, CA (7/3, Zender), and KFOX-TV El Paso \(TX\) El Paso, TX (7/4, Purvis).

Interior Opens Public Review Of Offshore Drilling Plan.

The Hill (7/3, Henry) reports that the Interior Department on Monday “began accepting public comments on a new five-year offshore drilling plan, an early step toward rewriting the blueprint for drilling in federal waters.” According to the article, “the 45-day comment period is the first step in the lengthy, years-long process of rewriting the program.”

Additional coverage was provided by NPR (7/3, Phillips).

Trump’s Risky Offshore Oil Strategy. In an op-ed for the New York Times (7/5, Graham, Reilly), Bob Graham and William K. Reilly, co-chairmen of the National Commission on the BP Deepwater Horizon Oil Spill and Offshore Drilling, write that they “investigated the causes of the disaster and examined the offshore drilling industry to identify ways to reduce the risks it poses to workers, the public and the environment.” The Interior Department “adopted many of them after extensive input from industry, government and the public.” However, “President Trump’s April 28 executive order on offshore energy threatens to abolish these safety improvements,” and Trump “took a further step last week to expand oil and gas extraction in the environmentally sensitive outer continental shelf.” The commission members are “unanimous in their view that the actions proposed in the president’s executive order are unwise.” According to the authors, Trump’s executive order “fails to account for the vulnerabilities of the ocean’s frontier regions, a lack of adequate federal investment in safety measures for Arctic conditions, or the danger to coastal economies.” They conclude that “it will put workers’ lives as well as ecologically rich and economically important waters and coastlines at needless additional risk.”

BLM Reopens Public Input On Rule-making.

The Missoulian \(MT\) (7/3, Chaney) reports that “after interrupting its ‘Planning 2.0’ process just as it was getting started, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management has announced a new round of public ideas to shape its decision-making system.” Acting BLM Director Michael Nedd wrote in a press release on Monday, “Our goal is to identify inefficiencies and redundancies that should be eliminated from our land use planning and NEPA (National Environmental Policy Act) processes, while ensuring that we fulfill our legal and resource stewardship responsibilities.” He continued, “By doing this, we will be able to dedicate more time and resources to completing the important on-the-ground work on our public lands.” Nedd specifically asked for ideas on “how we can make the BLM’s planning procedures and environmental reviews timelier and less costly, as well as responsive to local needs.” The 21-day comment period ends July 24.

The Elko \(NV\) Daily Free Press (7/4) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said, “The decisions made in land use plans and environmental reviews are fundamental to how public lands and resources are used for the benefit of all Americans. The Trump Administration and the Department of the Interior are committed to working with state and local governments, communities, Indian tribes, and other stakeholders as true partners to determine the best ways to accomplish this, now and into the future.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Deseret \(UT\) News (7/3, O’Donoghue).

The Voice Of Rural America.

The Flathead \(MT\) Beacon (7/4, Scott) reports that “speaking before a cadre of Western governors in his hometown of Whitefish, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke described his approach to overseeing the nation’s sprawling tracts of public land in terms of centuries, a visionary planning strategy he likened to Teddy Roosevelt’s ‘passion for protection into perpetuity.’” Zinke’s “plan to build revenue and make up for a staggering shortfall stemming from the National Park Service’s maintenance backlog includes privatizing campgrounds and removing roadblocks that hinder development, while restoring trust between government agencies and the nation’s Western citizens stands as a top priority.” Zinke said, “It’s time to look at what the Department of the Interior should be 100 years from now.”

Struggling U.S. National Parks Flooded With Visitors. Environment News Service (7/3) reports that national parks are “experiencing some of the heaviest traffic of the year this Independence Day weekend, as millions of visitors stream into the country’s 59 parks to explore the 52.2 million acres they cover.” However, President Trump’s budget request to Congress “would cut $378 million from the National Park Service and eliminate some 1,200 park employees, without addressing the $12.5 billion maintenance backlog.” Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “defends these cuts and plans to privatize the National Park campgrounds.” But “conservation groups worry that his plan is to sell off public lands to the highest bidder, despite his declaration to Congress at his confirmation hearing that he is ‘absolutely against transfer or sale of public land.’”

Additional coverage was provided by the Sharon \(PA\) Herald (7/4, Murakami), the Daily Caller (7/3, Pearce), and the Woodward \(OK\) News (7/3, Murakami).

Zinke And Indian Country: The First 4 Months.

Law360 (7/3, Westney) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has “recently built on his largely positive record with Native American tribes by touting tribal energy projects, but he has also defended the Trump administration’s proposed budget cuts and called for the reduction of a national monument on sacred tribal land.” Law360 takes a look “at Zinke’s first four months at the Department of the Interior and the impact he’s having on tribes.”

The Hill’s 12:30 Report.

The Hill (7/3, Martel) noted that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke tweeted a photo of himself in his running attire.

Additional Coverage: Man Who Jumped To Rescue In Pearl Harbor Helicopter Crash To Be.

Additional coverage that National Park Ranger Bryan Eisenberg, “who helped rescue a family from a helicopter crash last year at Pearl Harbor,” will be awarded a Gold Medal of Valor in Washington, D.C. was provided by KGMB-TV Honolulu (7/4, Mumphrey).

Wild Spaces Define Who We Are As Americans.

In a piece for the High Country \(CO\) News (7/3, Vessels), Rob Vessels, program manager for the Sierra Club’s Military Outdoors Program and an Army veteran, writes that “peace is at risk as President Donald Trump and Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke advance an agenda that puts drilling and development before places, people and wildlife.” According to Vessels, “wilderness offers some of the most transformative and healing opportunities anyone can experience.” Vessels sees the Arctic Refuge and other public lands as “a physical representation of the democracy I fought to protect.” Vessels writes that “these unique spaces are the land we defend, and their protection ensures that all people can explore and enjoy the beauty of our shared lands.” He calls on Secretary Zinke “to stand up for our public lands, not just in word but in deed. We need to ensure that they remain places for healing and for hope.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Red Lake, Other Tribes Alarmed By Trump’s Proposed Cuts To BIA Programs.

The Minneapolis Star Tribune (7/3, Rao) reports that leaders of the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians credit efforts part of the Tiwahe Initiative “for a 16-month stretch with no suicides among its youth, bucking a persistent crisis that has plagued Indian reservations across the country.” The initiative has “provided Red Lake and three other tribes, including Spirit Lake Nation in North Dakota, with more financial support to combat domestic violence, promote child welfare, reduce recidivism and create alternatives to incarceration.” However, the federal pilot program “faces elimination under President Donald Trump’s proposed cuts to the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA).”

9th Circ. Urged To Halt Off-Reservation Casino Plans.

Law360 (7/3, Sieniuc) reports that “a group of citizens has asked the Ninth Circuit to reverse a lower court victory for the federal government that greenlighted a tribe’s proposed casino hotel in Yuba County, California, saying the U.S. Department of the Interior has no concrete plans to mitigate the environmental impacts of the project.”

Bureau Of Land Management

Drone Pilot Could Face Charges For Flying Near Wildfire.

The AP (7/4) reports that “a drone flying illegally created a problem for crews fighting a wildfire south of Twin Falls, Idaho.” Bureau of Land Management Twin Falls District spokeswoman Kelsey Brizendine “says they had a drone intrusion on the fire, and it was a huge concern.” Brizendine “says that person could receive a citation for interfering with firefighting efforts.”

BLM Seeks Comments On Geothermal Land.

The Elko \(NV\) Daily Free Press (7/3) reports that the Bureau of Land Management’s Elko District is “seeking public review of an Environmental Assessment for parcels of public land nominated this year for a competitive geothermal lease sale.” According to the bureau, “these parcels have the potential for future geothermal exploration and development.” The Northern Nevada Business Weekly (7/3) reports that “the 15-day public review period concludes July 15.”

Bureau Of Reclamation

U.S. Senate Bill Includes Klamath Measures.

The Klamath Falls \(OR\) Herald And News (7/4, Dillemoth) reports that “a U.S. Senate bill introduced Sunday in Washington, D.C. includes an amendment with a number of measures pushed by Klamath Water Users Association (KWUA) that are designed to assist Klamath Project irrigators.” The article notes that “key elements of an amendment to the bill include direction provided to the U.S. Department of the Interior to develop a plan and then make actions to reduce power costs for irrigators in the Klamath Project.” The amendment also “includes eliminating contracts or permits for conveyance of non-Klamath Project groundwater, a designation of C-Flume Emergency and Extraordinary Operation and Maintenance (EEOM) that could save millions of dollars for project irrigators, and clear and permanent authorization for locally supported water bank activities.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

Restoring The Great Dismal Swamp Comes After Centuries Of Draining It.

NPR (7/3, Mccammon) reports that the Great Dismal Swamp National Wildlife Refuge has been “dramatically altered over the past few centuries by human development, creating an environment more vulnerable to both floods and wildfires.” Now, “a federal project is trying to restore some of the swamp’s natural habitat and other characteristics through a $3 million effort that aims to reverse some of that damage.” Refuge Manager Chris Lowie said, “The ultimate goal for us is to slow the drainage of the swamp. These ditches — 150 miles of ditches — have been dug throughout the swamp for the specific purpose of draining it.”

Barrasso Backs Bipartisan Bill To Solidify Gray Wolf Delisting, Promote Hunting And Fishing.

The Casper \(WY\) Star-Tribune (7/4, Rosenfeld) reports that a bipartisan bill sponsored by Sen. John Barrasso “would solidify the delisting of gray wolves in the state and expand protections for sportsmen while also reauthorizing several environmental protection acts.” Barrasso said in a statement last week, “The HELP Wildlife Act promotes conservation based on sound science and provides needed protections for America’s sportsmen.” However, the Center for Biological Diversity “harshly criticized the legislation, suggesting that the Democratic senators had effectively traded symbolic support for the wildlife acts for damaging changes to environmental protections.”

Feds Post Plan For Endangered Cactus, But Recovery Still A Long Way Off.

The Kingman \(AZ\) Daily Miner (7/4, Fish) reports that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service “this week released a draft recovery plan for the Pima pineapple cactus that has been on the endangered species list since 1993.” However, “even as they welcomed the announcement, conservation advocates said there is ‘a lot of work still to be done’ to save the plant.” The draft recovery plan released Monday is “broken into three parts: a threat-based objective to reduce or mitigate habitat loss and degradation; a habitat-based objective to conserve, restore, and properly manage the quantity and quality of habitat; and a population-based objective to conserve, protect and restore existing and newly discovered Pima pineapple cacti.”

Oregon Silverspot Butterflies Get New Places To Grow.

The AP (7/3, Frankowicz) reports that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service “recently announced it will release hundreds” of Oregon silverspot butterfly caterpillars “at two new sites this summer and next: the Nestucca Bay National Wildlife Refuge in southern Tillamook County and the Saddle Mountain area in central Clatsop County.” According to the article, “the small reddish-orange butterflies with their distinctive silver spots were once found on coastal grasslands from Northern California to southern Washington, but development, changes to the forest and invasive weeds and grasses reduced the silverspots’ preferred habitat.” The FWS says that “the decline is linked primarily to a lack of early blue violets, normally the only plant on which the Oregon silverspot can successfully feed and develop as larva.”

Free Nisqually Lecture Series Kicks Off Amid Fears Of Refuge Budget Cuts.

The Tacoma \(WA\) News Tribune (7/3, Saylor) reports that summer visitors to the Nisqually National Wildlife refuge for the last 30 years have been able to attend the annual Summer Lecture Series, “free weekly lectures by prominent guest speakers on a wide range of environmental topics.” However, “this summer, the excitement about the well-loved lecture series is undercut by a sense of worry across the Department of the Interior, which faces an approximately 13 percent cut under President Donald Trump’s proposed 2018 budget.” The article says that “if the proposed budget is realized, the refuge would assess its priorities to determine which of its programs needed to be cut back.”

Aerial Surveys Reveal ‘Stable’ Population Trend For Lesser Prairie Chicken.

The Topeka \(KS\) Capital-Journal (7/4, Carpenter) reports that “the latest aerial surveys point to stability in the breeding population of lesser prairie chickens at a time when numbers of the expressive birds concentrated in parts of five U.S. states expanded most notably in northwest Kansas’ short-grass prairie region.” The sixth year of annual assessments by the Western Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies “estimated the breeding population in Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado, Texas and New Mexico climbed to 33,200 birds this year.” Roger Wolfe, the association’s lesser prairie chicken program manager, said, “The survey results indicate a 32 percent increase in the number of birds over last year, but we don’t read too much into short-term population fluctuations. The bottom line is that the population trend over the last six years indicates a stable population.”

South Florida Men In Key West Jail After Taking Endangered Key Deer, Authorities Say.

The South Florida Sun Sentinel (7/3, Trischitta) reports that “two South Florida men are jailed in Key West and the three endangered Key deer they are accused of taking and injuring were released back to the wild, authorities said.” According to state investigators, “Tumani Anthony Younge, 23, with ties to Tamarac and Port St. Lucie, and Erik Yosmany Damas Acosta, 18, of Miami Gardens, were on their way to camp in the Florida Keys on Sunday and wanted to take pictures with the creatures, which were found tied, bleeding and distressed in the trunk and back seat of a Hyundai Sonata.” The Atlanta Journal-Constitution (7/3) reports that U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service officers “came for backup and safely untied the animals.”

Additional coverage was provided by WGHP-TV Greensboro, NC (7/3).

Additional Coverage: Environmentalists Say Grizzly Population Isn’t Recovered, Sue For Re-Listing.

Additional coverage that several environmental groups have filed a lawsuit against the Fish and Wildlife Service over “the agency’s decision to remove the grizzly bear from the Endangered Species List” was provide by the Daily Caller (7/3, Pearce), the Cody \(WY\) Enterprise (7/3, Freedman), and Wyoming Public Radio (7/3).

King Cove Road About Fish, Not Patients.

The Fairbanks \(AK\) News-Miner (7/4, Raskin), David Raskin, the president of Friends of Alaska National Wildlife Refuges, argues that the claim is that the proposed King Cove-Izembek road is “the only way to reach Cold Bay’s all-weather airport for emergency medical evacuations, but a long paper trail reveals that the proposed Izembek road has always been to haul fish and cannery workers:” Raskin further argues that “this environmentally destructive road would waste our tax dollars and transfer $10 million of state highway funds from a long-needed, approved project in your own city of Fairbanks." Raskin concludes that "the state of Alaska, politicians and others should abandon their misleading campaign for an ill-conceived, unnecessary and destructive road and, in doing so, ensure that our precious resources are utilized for wise investments that meet legitimate state needs, including the long-awaited Fairbanks road project."

Additional coverage of the road was provided by Alaska Public Radio Network (7/3, Ruskin).

Must Stop Brown's Twin-tunnels Water Boondoggle.

The East Bay \(CA\) Times (7/4) editorializes that that "two federal agencies' decision last week to green-light construction of Gov. Jerry Brown's Delta twin-tunnels plan is an unwelcome setback for opponents of the project." However, the paper says that "it's not the huge milestone that proponents claim" because the National Marine Fisheries Service and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service opinion "merely said that building the tunnels 'doesn't deepen any harm' to several endangered species." According to the paper, "in effect, they're saying that the impact of taking too much water out of the Delta in recent years has been so detrimental that building the tunnels won't make much difference." The paper asserts that "the tunnels must not be built at the expense of the health of the Delta."

National Park Service

Security Measures For The Capitol Fourth.

WTTG-TV Washington (7/4, Hemphil) reports that "to ensure the safety of revelers taking part in Capitol Fourth festivities, officials are taking additional security measures." National Park Service spokesperson Mike Litterest said, "We are continuing to monitor the situation and tweak our plans. There are no credible threats against this event, but the United States Park Police and their law enforcement partners continue to monitor throughout the day and beyond."

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington \(DC\) Post (7/4, Chason, Silverman, Hui).

US-Cuba Sea Mission Finds Healthy Reefs, Invasive Lionfish.

The AP (7/4, Rodriguez) reports that "a joint U.S.-Cuban expedition to explore the island's coral reefs uncovered a surprisingly healthy ecosystem and large schools of mackerel with significant commercial value, scientists involved in the mission said Tuesday." Scientists said "the mission was made possible by the restoration of diplomatic relations between Havana and Washington two years ago under then-President Barack Obama and his Cuban counterpart, Raul Castro." The article notes that "it was a result of an agreement signed in 2015 between the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, the U.S. National Park Service and Cuba's Ministry of Science, Technology and Environment."

Acadia Carriage Paths Are Getting Upgraded.

The AP (7/4) reports that the National Park Service "says it's completed the resurfacing of 13 miles of carriage roads in time for the Fourth of July holiday." According to officials, "the completed sections include carriage roads in the vicinity of Jordan Pond, Wildwood Stables and Bubble Pond." The NPS has "allotted $400,000 for the work this summer."

June Climbing Up Despite Voluntary Ban At Devils Tower.

The AP (7/3) reports that "the number of people who climb an unusual rock formation in northeast Wyoming during June is on the rise despite the concerns of American Indian tribes who hold the place sacred." The number of people reached 373 in June 2016. According to monument superintendent Tim Reid said, "a steady increase in June climbing over the past five years isn't tied to the growing number of people visiting Devils Tower." Reid said, "It's safe to say that largely, the bulk of June climbing is done by relatively local or regional climbers who for whatever reasons find it personally acceptable to climb in June."

Bear Encounters Double At Yosemite Over 2016.

The Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (7/3, Sweeney) reports that "encounters with bears rose 100 percent at Yosemite National Park in early June compared to the same period in 2016, and a trail has been closed to overnight camping as a result." Yosemite National Park rangers have "recorded 16 incidents involving bears so far in 2017, compared to 38 in all of 2016." But park rangers "note in the official Yosemite Bear Facts blog that 2016 was a record low year for bear encounters." Also,

"incidents involving bears in the park are down 96 percent from a record high in 1998."

Restored Flag Returns To Gettysburg 154 Years After Battle.

The AP (7/3, Bock) reports that "the battle flag carried by Company M of the 62nd Infantry Regiment of the Pennsylvania Volunteers during the Civil War" was "returned Sunday to the Gettysburg battlefield where it was carried into the chaos of the Wheatfield 154 years ago." At a dedication ceremony, Sam Dunkle, Commander of American Legion Post 516, told the crowd, "We have completed the mission, the flag is yours." The article says that "it was the second ceremony of the day, with the first taking place Sunday morning on the Gettysburg battlefield, at the Wheatfield, where the flag was carried by the men from Company M before its return to Hollidaysburg for the 4 p.m. rededication ceremony."

Paddle Share Expands To St. Paul: Kayaking The Mississippi Is Getting Really Easy.

The St. Paul \(MN\) Pioneer Press (7/4, Orrick) reports that Paddle Share, "a National Park Service-led kayak-rental operation that opened last summer in Minneapolis, will expand into St. Paul in late July or early August." Susan Overson, project manager for Paddle Share for the Mississippi National River and Recreation Area, said, "We're trying to connect people to the river, even without a car."

Caverns' Bat Flight Program Attracts 1,000 Visitors.

The Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (7/5, Booth) reports that "the bat flight program at Carlsbad Caverns National Park attracts about 1,000 people during its peak summer season." Park spokeswoman Valerie Gohlke said, "People want to see the bats, and lots of visitors come here because of the bats."

Additional Coverage: Lawsuit Dropped After Grand Canyon Allows Creationist To Collect Rocks.

Additional coverage that a geologist has dropped his lawsuit that the Grand Canyon denied him a permit to collect rocks because of his religious beliefs was provided by WMAR-TV Baltimore (7/3, Weston, Stephenson), The Atlantic (7/4, Zhang), Forbes (7/3, Nace), and Laboratory Equipment (7/3, Augenstein).

Independence Hall Is Not Falling Down, But It Needs Our Support.

In an op-ed for Philly \(PA\) (7/4, Steinke, Smith), Paul Steinke, executive director of the Preservation Alliance, and John F. Smith III, board chair of the Global Philadelphia Association, writes that Independence National Historical Park has "accumulated a $49 million backlog of deferred maintenance items spanning the park's 55 acres on some 20 city blocks." The "good news" is that , the National Park Service Legacy Act of 2017 was "introduced in the House and Senate." According to the authors, "these companion bills would create a dedicated fund that would direct needed resources toward the maintenance backlog at our national parks over the next 30 years, including INHP."

Office Of Insular Affairs

US Officials Lift Suspension On Compact Public Infrastructure Grant Funding.

The Hawaii Free Press (7/4) reports that "delegations representing the Federated States of Micronesia (FSM) and the United States of America (U.S.) reached an agreement that enables $150 million of public infrastructure assistance to be used for projects across the four FSM states of Chuuk, Pohnpei, Yap, and Kosrae, as provided for under U.S. Public Law 108-188 or the Compact of Free Association, as amended." Interior Acting Assistant Secretary for Insular Areas Nikolao Pula said, "It is fair to say that both the FSM and the U.S. delegates are eager to see the FSM move forward and utilize this funding. As Compact grant funding was intended to provide a very real and tangible benefit for the people of the Federated States of Micronesia, we don't want to see any further delay."

Additional coverage was provided by Marianas Variety (7/3).

Tuvaluans And I-Kiribati Promised A Home In Fiji.

Radio New Zealand (7/2) reports that "Fiji's prime minister Frank Bainimarama says people who leave Tuvalu and Kiribati because of climate change will be allowed to settle permanently in Fiji."

In a speech at climate action talks in Suva, Bainimarama "said he expected the United States to do the same for Marshall Islanders because of their historical ties." Bainimarama "said the i-Kiribati and Tuvaluans 'will not be refugees' and he promised that Fijians would take them into their homes and hearts." He added, "And we ask other countries to offer the same hospitality to anyone who is displaced by climate change. Because ultimately, we are one world, one people."

Marshall Islands, FSM, Seek Answers After Citizens Shot By US Police.

Radio New Zealand (7/1, Johnson) reports that "ambassadors from the Federated States of Micronesia and the Marshall Islands are seeking information about their citizens who were shot by police officers in the United States in recent weeks." The FSM's ambassador in Washington, Akillino Susaia, has "asked the US State Department for help in accessing information on the shooting deaths of two Micronesians in Tulsa, Oklahoma in early June, while Marshall Islands Ambassador Gerald Zackios is seeking information from the family of Marshall Islander Isaiah Obet, who was shot and killed by police in Auburn, Washington on 17 June." According to the article, "to follow up the 2 June shooting deaths of Micronesians Naway Willy, 18, and Rabson Robert, 36, Mr Susaia sent a diplomatic note to the State Department last week requesting the federal government's aid to obtain information from local law enforcement about the incidents."

Maternity Tourism Rates Consistent For Korean Visitors.

The Guam Daily Post (7/1, Cruz) reports that Guam's public hospital "delivers a steady number of non-resident newborns, recently collected data reveals." According to the article, "a majority of the babies are born to South Korean visitors." The article notes that "last fiscal year, Guam Memorial Hospital delivered 116 babies to non-U.S. mothers, 77 of whom were from South Korea," and "so far in fiscal 2017, the number of infants born to non-U.S. mothers is 77, of whom 54 were born to travelers from Korea." James Gillan, director of the Department of Public Health and Social Services, said, "I think typically what you'll find is that mothers coming from Korea give birth here and obtain a Social Security number and a passport for their child — and then return to Korea. They're thinking that 20 or 30 years later, their child can return to the U.S. and go to school, or what have you."

Seabees Build Relationships In Micronesia With A School Renovation.

DVIDS Hub (6/29, Trafton) reports that "in February, Naval Mobile Construction Battalion (NMCB) 1 began renovation of the facility that was condemned in 2016 because of a collapsing roof." The article says that "upon completion, the renovation will allow 210 students to return to a more conducive learning environment while reducing overcrowding in another school on the island."

Seven Coral Reef Management Fellowships Available To Virgin Islanders.

The Virgin Islands Consortium \(VIR\) (7/1) reports that "Virgin Islanders are eligible to apply for fellowships with Nova Southeastern University's National Coral Reef Management Fellowship Program. The program aims to build excellent next generation leaders with the capacity to effectively manage local coral reef ecosystems." The program is "a partnership between Nova Southeastern University (NSU), the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's (NOAA) Coral Reef Conservation Program, the Department of the Interior Office of Insular Affairs and the U.S. All Islands Coral Reef Committee."

OPA's Hernandez Completes Executive Program.

The Pacific \(GUM\) Daily News (7/4) reports that Executive Leadership Development Program "graduation ceremonies were held on June 9, 2017 at the East-West Center in Honolulu, Hawaii." The article notes that "since the program's inception in 2008, 103 participants from across the Pacific have completed the ELDP." The ELDP is funded by the Office of Insular Affairs and administered by the Graduate School USA's Pacific Islands Training Initiative.

Top National News

White House: Trump To Hold Bilateral Meeting With Putin Friday.

Media reports, including stories on all three network newscasts, cast the President's meeting Friday with Russia's Vladimir Putin as one fraught with political pressure due to the ongoing election-meddling investigation. Reuters (7/4, Rampton) reports that "as Trump heads to his first face-to-face meeting as president with Putin...he is under pressure at home to take a tough line with the Kremlin" amid allegations stemming from last year's US elections. Likewise, the Washington Post (7/4, Phillip, Morello) reports that the President will find himself "severely constrained and facing few good options that would leave him politically unscathed." If Trump attempts to loosen sanctions against Russia, Congress "could defy him by pursuing even stronger penalties. And if he offers platitudes for Putin without addressing Russia's election meddling, it will renew questions about whether Trump accepts the findings of his own intelligence officials that Russia intended to disrupt the democratic process on his behalf."

NBC Nightly News (7/4, story 2, 2:25, Alexander) reported their first meeting is "being billed as an official event, instead of an informal meeting, sending a signal the White House wants warmer relations despite revelations Russia meddled in the 2016 US election." Along similar lines, the Los Angeles Times (7/4, Bennett) notes White House spokeswoman Lindsay Walters said in a statement that the encounter will be a "normal bilateral meeting," which "implies," for example, "a longer and more formal meeting than the brief conversation with German Chancellor Angela Merkel that Trump also has on his schedule." The Wall Street Journal (7/4, Nicholas, Hodge) too says the "bilateral" meeting will be more formal than impromptu encounters that sometimes take place at world summits, and RT (7/4) notes that Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov "specified" the meeting "will not merely be a brief contact on the sidelines."

ABC World News Tonight's (7/4, story 3, 2:30, Llamas) Gloria Riviera, however, said last night, "For more than a year, Trump has sung Putin's praises. ... But with just days to go, the White House is downplaying the meeting, calling it a 'normal' bilateral discussion and saying little else. In contrast, Russia is billing it as a 'full-fledged,' 'seated' meeting."

ABC News (7/4, Faulders) reported on its website that the meeting will be "the most crucial diplomatic test" of Trump's presidency, and it "couldn't come at a more politically or diplomatically sensitive moment for both leaders." The CBS Evening News (7/4, story 4, 0:20, Quijano) said the two leaders will discuss North Korea and Syria, but there "is no indication that Russian meddling in the 2016 US election will be discussed." Saying the meeting "will be brimming with global intrigue," meanwhile, the AP (7/4, Lederman, Lee) reports that Trump, "who prefers to have neatly packaged achievements to pair with high-profile meetings, may be looking for some concessions from Russia to show he's delivering progress and helping restore a productive relationship."

Newsmax (7/4, Fitzgerald) reports former Ambassador John Bolton "said he'd be happy if they just use the meeting to 'take each others' measure.'" Bolton told Fox News on Tuesday, "I think the most important from the US perspective is for Trump and Putin just to have a conversation where they exchange views across the whole ranges of differences that we have with Russia."

Washington Post (7/4) columnist David Ignatius writes that what Trump and Putin "should discuss...is whether" a "recent agreement on the separation line is a model for wider US-Russian cooperation in Syria. This broader effort would seek to defeat the Islamic State; stabilize a battered, fragmented Syria; and, eventually, discuss a political future." But Ignatius warns that Russian-American cooperation on Syria "would legitimize a Russian regime that invaded Ukraine and meddled in US and European elections, in addition to its intervention in Syria." He argues that "there's only one positive argument: Working with Russia may be the only way to reduce the level of violence in Syria and to create a foundation for a calmer, more decentralized nation that can eventually recover from its tragic war."

The Washington Times (7/4, Boyer) reports that on his trip this week, the President will also visit Poland, where he will deliver "a major foreign policy speech in Warsaw's Krasinski Square." The Times says Trump's decision to visit Poland "gives him opportunities to promote US business and to poke a symbolic finger in the eyes of Russia and Germany, traditional European powers and historic tormentors of Warsaw on its eastern and western flanks." He is also expected to "praise...Poland's status as a rising power in Europe" and "applaud Poland's strong support of NATO." Kristin Fisher reported on Fox News' Special Report (7/4) that in Poland, Trump "will find an audience that's open to his brand of politics." However, Fisher said the Polish government will want Trump "to take a very hard line" when he meets Putin on Friday.

Democratic Lawmakers Concerned About Trump-Putin Meeting. Breitbart (7/4, Key) reports Rep. Gregory Meeks (D-NY) said Tuesday on CNN when asked about Trump's meeting with Putin that he had "real concerns" about Trump's "lack of seriousness." Said Meeks, "I think President Trump needs to confront him about Russia's involvement in our democratic process. ... There's got to be a confrontation. ... He cannot kowtow to him."

Rep. Adam Smith was asked on CNN's Situation Room (7/4) about reports that Trump has asked his staff to give him "options that he can have at his disposal when he goes into this meeting, and part of that is possible concessions." Smith said that would send a "very bad" message, because "Putin takes advantage of weakness, and it's very ironic that for someone with as much bluster as Donald Trump throws around every day. Certainly...I wish he treated Vladimir Putin more like he treats CNN."

Rep. Gerald Connolly said on CNN's The Lead (7/4), "This long-range bromance puzzles all of us. I think it's highly irresponsible for the President of the United States, who takes an oath to defend the Constitution of the United States, to not defend the electoral process of the United States that allows that Constitution to continue with lead hacker who did interfere with our election and attempted to influence its outcome. Of course, Trump was the beneficiary. Maybe that's why."

Former Federal Prosecutor Joins Mueller's Team. The Washington Times (7/4, Noble) reports former federal prosecutor Andrew Weissmann, who convicted members of the Genovese crime family and later headed the Justice Department's Enron task force, has joined "the all-star team that former FBI Director Robert Mueller has put together as the special counsel." Ten of the 12 lawyers on Mueller's team have been revealed, and "analysts say the team is full of legal stars...who have the skills and experience to handle the investigation fairly — wherever it leads."

The AP (7/4, Tucker) reports that "it's not clear how much the probe by...Mueller will center on the criminal underbelly of Moscow, but he's already picked some lawyers with experience fighting organized crime." The AP says that as the team "looks for any financial entanglements of Trump associates and relationships with Russian officials, its focus could land again on the intertwining of Russia's criminal operatives and its intelligence services."

Clinton Attorney: Firing Mueller Would Be Difficult. David E. Kendall, an attorney who represents former President Bill Clinton and former secretary of state Hillary Clinton, writes in the Washington Post (7/4) that if President Trump "decides he wants to get rid" of Mueller, "Justice Department regulations will make it difficult, legally as well as politically, to abruptly short-circuit the pending investigation." Kendall argues, "It boils down to this: When you're the target or subject of an investigation, even if you're the president of the United States, you don't get to call the balls and strikes as to whether there has been criminal conduct or the investigation is necessary."

Media Analyses: North Korean ICBM Launch Poses Test To Trump.

North Korea's latest missile test is generating significant media coverage, including over 16 minutes of network airtime. In its lead story, ABC World News Tonight (7/4, lead story, 3:00, Llamas) called the test North Korea's "most dangerous yet," and NBC Nightly News (7/4, lead story, 2:30, Alexander) likewise warned of "an escalating showdown with North Korea" after it crossed "a dangerous threshold for the first time." Reuters (7/4, Kim, Kim) reports North Korea said Wednesday it had conducted a test of a newly developed intercontinental ballistic missile "that can carry a large and heavy nuclear warhead, triggering a call by Washington for global action to hold Pyongyang accountable for its pursuit of nuclear weapons." A Pentagon spokeswoman confirmed that Tuesday's launch was in fact an ICBM. The Washington Post (7/4, Warrick) warns North Korea's "apparent accomplishment puts it well ahead of schedule in its years-long quest to develop a true ICBM."

The AP (7/4, Lucey, Lederman) reports as the US confirmed the latest launch was indeed an ICBM, Secretary of State Tillerson called it a "new escalation of the threat" to the US. In a statement, Tillerson said, "Global action is required to stop a global threat. Any country that hosts North Korean guest workers, provides any economic or military benefits, or fails to fully implement UN Security Council resolutions is aiding and abetting a dangerous regime." The AP notes Tillerson's statement "notably did not mention China." USA Today (7/4, Bacon) also reports Tillerson "vowed to bring additional international pressure on the regime," as does the Washington Examiner (7/4, Tritten).

Media reports universally say the latest launch poses a test to the Administration. The Washington Post (7/4, Gearan, Rauhala), for example, says Tuesday's launch "marks a direct challenge to President Trump" just before he "will see key Asian leaders and Russian President Vladimir Putin later this week." While North Korea was "already expected to be a main subject" during meetings on the sidelines of the G20 summit, the test "adds urgency."

In its lead story, the CBS Evening News (7/4, lead story, 2:50, Quijano) also called the launch Trump's "greatest foreign policy test to date," and the Wall Street Journal (7/4, Cheng, Gale) too says the launch escalates tensions and presents Trump with his biggest foreign-policy challenge yet. A front-page story in the Los Angeles Times (7/4, A1, Stiles, Kaiman) says the development "means an already intractable problem posed by Pyongyang's advancing nuclear and missile programs just became more difficult for the United States and its regional allies.”

A USA Today (7/4, Hughes) analysis says Tuesday’s launch “ratchets up the pressure on President Trump and other world leaders to resolve a growing nuclear crisis with no easy solution.” Coming just days ahead of the G20, the “timing is almost certainly not coincidental,” and USA Today notes that North Korea “uses such occasions to call attention to its provocative acts – and its test elevates the urgency with which Trump and US allies may feel compelled to respond.”

In an analysis, the New York Times (7/4, Sanger) says Kim Jong-un’s “repeated tests show that a more definitive demonstration that he can reach the American mainland cannot be far away, even if it may be a few years before he can fit a nuclear warhead onto his increasingly powerful missiles.” For Trump and his national security team, the Times says “Tuesday’s technical milestone simply underscores tomorrow’s strategic dilemma.”

NBC Nightly News’s (7/4, lead story, 2:30, Alexander) Hans Nichols reported “Pentagon officials say that a functioning ICBM is only one-half of the nuclear threat. The other is a miniaturized nuclear warhead that can survive re-entry. But they have long said that by the time North Korea has achieved both, it may be too late.” On ABC World News Tonight (7/4, story 2, 1:20, Llamas), military analyst Stephen Ganyard said Kim Jong-un “is on a deliberate course to develop a nuclear weapon that can hit the continental United States, and today’s launch shows that the plan remains on track.”

NBC Nightly News (7/4, story 2, 2:25, Alexander) said “the White House is weighing options, including more sanctions,” and the CBS Evening News (7/4, lead story, 2:50, Quijano) reported that the Pentagon “has prepared options which involve military shows of force, such as long-range nuclear bomber flights over the Korean Peninsula and test firings of US missiles based in South Korea.” In what the AP (7/4, Lucey, Lederman) calls “a show of force directly responding to North Korea’s provocation,” US and South Korean soldiers fired “deep strike” precision missiles into South Korean territorial waters on Tuesday, US military officials in Seoul said. USA Today (7/5, Hughes) likewise reports Tuesday’s launch by North Korea “drew a swift reaction from the US Army and South Korean military, which in turn launched at least two surface-to-surface missiles as a demonstration of their attack capability.” The Washington Post (7/4, Lamothe) says it was “unclear how Pyongyang might react to the exercise.”

ABC World News Tonight (7/4, lead story, 3:00, Llamas) reported that with “the pressure mounting...the Trump Administration is requesting an emergency meeting” at the UN Security Council on Wednesday “to address the North Korean threat.” The AP (7/4) reports the US Mission said Ambassador Haley requested the meeting on Tuesday afternoon.

The CBS Evening News (7/4, story 2, 1:45, Quijano) reported China “urged restraint...but in an apparent reference to the United States, said all relevant sides should bring things back to the track of peaceful settlement via dialogue.” Fox News’ Special Report (7/4) reports Tillerson said the White House is “continuing to assess the situation in close coordination with our allies and partners,” but CNN’s Situation Room (7/4) reported Russian President Vladimir Putin and Chinese President Xi Jinping on Tuesday announced after talks in Moscow that “they will work together to freeze the North Korean program, but demand[ed] the stop to US-South Korean military exercises and an end to the THAAD defense deployment to South Korea, both non-starters for the US.”

Former State Department spokesman John Kirby said on CNN’s Situation Room (7/4) that he doesn’t think the joint statement from Russia and China “means anything in effect. I think this is a chance for Russia and China sitting down together to find a way to sort of tweak everybody.” Charles Krauthammer said on Fox News’ Special Report (7/4), “China and Russia together want to see an end to the US-South Korean alliance. They want to use the issue as a kind of exchange in order to do that.”

Former Ambassador Bill Richardson said on the CBS Evening News (7/4, story 3, 2:35, Quijano) that “the President should be very careful. The first thing you should do is not tweet out his foreign policy. I think so far he’s been restrained, but, at the same time, going it alone...that’s not going to work. ... I think eventually we have to make a deal, but we need China, and China’s not stepping up.”

Politico (7/4, Karni) reports lawmakers on both sides of the aisle on Tuesday called on the President to “increase pressure on North Korea and China.” Politico says Trump’s tweets Tuesday “didn’t cut it for lawmakers of both parties...who on Tuesday demanded a more fulsome reaction from the White House.” Sen. Edward Markey said, “Instead of vague Twitter bluster, President Trump should answer North Korea’s dangerous test with a coherent strategy.”

Rep. Gerald Connolly said on CNN's The Lead (7/4), "I think Donald Trump's modus operandi of threats and tweets is backfiring. If you're Kim Jong-un and North Korea, you're going to accelerate your nuclear program because this guy is threatening you, and there's no stepping down to impeding that capability. Whatever the intentions of the Trump Administration, the results are counterproductive."

Rep. Tom Suozzi said on CNN's Situation Room (7/4) that "we've seen more and more tests every single week. The President has always told us that his philosophy is that he doesn't want to share his strategy and he's going to be tough. We need to know what the strategy is as to how we're going to deal with this, not only as the United States but in the community of nations."

Meanwhile, South Korean President Moon Jae-in, the New York Post (7/4, Moore) reports, called a national security council meeting and Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe "said he would ask China and Russia to intervene to curb North Korea's weapons program."

Townhall (7/4, Barkoukis) reports that "if the US decides the threat posed by North Korea is too great, the nation has options," noting that "for the first time since the 1990s," two US aircraft carrier strike groups are positioned off the Korean Peninsula.

WSJournal Urges Regime Change; NYTimes Calls For Talks. A Wall Street Journal (7/4) editorial says only a strategy aimed at toppling the Kim regime has a chance of eliminating a threat posed by North Korea. On its editorial page, the New York Times (7/4) says Trump "hasn't grasped...that a solution will eventually require direct dialogue with the North." The Times notes that "some of America's most experienced nuclear experts, like George Shultz, former secretary of state; William Perry, former defense secretary; and Siegfried Hecker, former director of Los Alamos National Laboratory, recently wrote to Mr. Trump urging him to begin talks as the 'only realistic option' to prevent North Korea's potential use of nuclear weapons." The Times argues that "there is no indication that Mr. Trump has a better strategy."

Appeals Court Rules EPA Cannot Delay Enforcement Of Rule On Oil And Gas Emissions.

The Washington Post (7/3, Eilperin, Mufson) reports a three-judge panel of the US Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in a 2-1 decision, ruled that the Environmental Protection Agency's "two-year suspension of new emission standards on oil and gas wells," is "tantamount to amending or revoking a rule." The court ruled that the EPA may "reconsider" the rule developed under the Obama Administration, but may not delay the rule for two years while it does so. EPA spokeswoman Amy Graham said that the agency is "reviewing the opinion." The New York Times (7/3, Friedman) calls the ruling "another legal blow to the Trump administration" and "the first major legal setback for" EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt. The court found that the delay was "unreasonable," "arbitrary" and "capricious" and that changing the rule would require "a new rule-making process."

The AP (7/3, Biesecker) reports the court "ordered the EPA to move forward" with the rule as is. The Washington Times (7/3, Wolfgang) reports the decision "dealt a blow to President Trump." The Washington Examiner (7/3, Siciliano) reports it "slammed the brakes" on the Administration's "attempt to kill the Environmental Protection Agency's methane regulations on oil and gas frackers instituted under former President Barack Obama." Pruitt had argued the Obama Administration did not allow for adequate industry comment on the, but the court "disagreed."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Turkey's 250-Mile Protest." In an editorial, the New York Times (7/4) says Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan "has used emergency powers to purge and arrest tens of thousands of leftists, liberals, Kurds and others," and now "thousands of protesters...are trudging through the heat on blistered feet from Ankara to Istanbul on a March for Justice" that is "expected to reach Istanbul on Sunday." Erdogan has so far "not tried to block the marchers, but he has accused the main opposition party, the Republican People's Party, better known as the C.H.P. and the prime organizer of the march, of abusing the concept of justice and serving as the mouthpiece of traitors." The Times adds that while the marchers "expect that many thousands more will join them for the entry into Istanbul," it is "not likely to stop Mr. Erdogan." However, "it is certain to unite ever more Turks in the fight to save their democracy."

"Who Can Reform The Chicago Police?" The New York Times (7/4) writes in an editorial that the more than two-year Chicago police scandal “that has dogged Mayor Rahm Emanuel...heated up last week when three veteran officers were indicted on charges that they lied about the circumstances in which a white officer fatally shot a black teenager named Laquan McDonald on a South Side street in the fall of 2014.” The Times says the case “lends considerable weight to a new lawsuit filed by civil rights groups arguing that Chicago is incapable of bringing constitutional policing to the city unless the process is overseen by the federal courts.” The Times says “whole phalanx of officials disagrees” with Emanuel’s renunciation of support for federal court oversight since President Trump took office in favor of a “less stringent” arrangement featuring an independent monitor.

“The Way Forward On North Korea.” The New York Times (7/4) says President Trump “hasn’t grasped...that a solution will eventually require direct dialogue with” North Korea. The Times notes that “some of America’s most experienced nuclear experts, like George Shultz, former secretary of state; William Perry, former defense secretary; and Siegfried Hecker, former director of Los Alamos National Laboratory, recently wrote to Mr. Trump urging him to begin talks as the ‘only realistic option’ to prevent North Korea’s potential use of nuclear weapons.” The Times argues that “there is no indication that Mr. Trump has a better strategy.”

Washington Post.

“If Trump Takes A Protectionist Approach On Steel, It Could Backfire.” The Washington Post (7/4) argues in an editorial that with the results of a review ordered by President Trump of “how steel imports affect American national security” due “any day now,” US trading partners “are right to fret about where it might lead,” but “Americans should be nervous, too.” To the Post, “a unilateral American invocation of the president’s rarely used power to create national security exceptions to normal trade law” is “probably not” the “right way to deal with this situation.” It is “intellectually dishonest” to assert that “steel imports pose a threat to US national security” and it “could be internationally destabilizing” as “other countries will be tempted to follow suit, potentially setting off spiraling global protectionism.”

“The Supreme Court’s Modest Decision On A Controversial Church-State Question.” The Washington Post (7/4) editorializes that the Supreme Court’s decision last week that Mississippi couldn’t deny state funds to a church-run preschool for playground updates purely because it was religiously affiliated could have wide-reaching implications, for instance on the issue of school choice. Some would say the “broad language...suggests a wide new legal avenue has opened for religious groups to demand a share of taxpayer money.” However, the Post insists that “the court sent no such clear signal,” so “the threat to the separation of church and state will remain relatively contained so long as the justices live up to some limits embedded in their reasoning.” The Post encourages courts in future cases to follow the line of reasoning that “the government cannot deny churches public funding merely because they are churches, but the government may deny them funding if they would use it for religious endeavors.”

“The Washington Football Team’s Legal Victory Isn’t A Win Worth Celebrating.” The Washington Post (7/4) editorializes that while Washington Redskins NFL team owner Daniel Snyder has won the right to retain patent protection for the team’s name, he “would do well to reflect on what exactly it is that he has ‘won,’” because the name “is still as hurtful and offensive as ever, and the controversy it stirs will likely only intensify, not go away.” The Post says the Supreme Court “was right to affirm the bedrock principle of the First Amendment” in a June 19 ruling that precipitated Snyder’s win. However, Snyder’s having the right to use a “racial slur” as a team name doesn’t mean he should use it. As such the legal victory isn’t worth celebrating.

Wall Street Journal.

“Blue State Budget Breakdowns.” The Wall Street Journal (7/4) argues that the budget impasse-induced government shutdowns over the weekend in Connecticut, Illinois, and New Jersey reflect heightened political dysfunction in blue states. Under progressive governance, the government eventually runs out of other people’s money. In Illinois, the Journal says Democratic lawmakers likely will override GOP Gov. Bruce Rauner’s veto of a budget plan that raises taxes but ultimately fails to address a deficit, unpaid bills, and a $130 billion unfunded pension liability. Meanwhile, Connecticut already has raised income taxes and property taxes, but pension liabilities still have risen as revenue and economic growth have dropped and wealthy residents have fled to other states. Finally, the Journal warns that the deal New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie brokered with a Democrat-controlled legislature portends further tax hikes for the wealthy and property owners in the future.

“The North Korean Missile Crisis.” A Wall Street Journal (7/4) editorial says only a strategy aimed at toppling the Kim Jong-un regime has a chance of eliminating a threat posed by North Korea.

"The Tory Policy Retreat." A Wall Street Journal (7/4) editorial says British Prime Minister Theresa May successfully obstructed the opposition Labour Party's call to end the one percent annual public-pay cap last week, but she will not as easily resist pressure to lift the cap from her Conservative party and cabinet members. The Journal says if May gives in to this demand, she will go against not only voters' wishes because it will cost $8.18 billion annually – to be financed by either tax raises or more borrowing – but also her party's reputation as one of economic growth.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

North Korea Missile Launch Threatens US Strategy In Asia
JP Morgan Returns To Dealmaking With Approach For Worldpay
Ill-Funded Police Pensions Put Cities In A Bind
Disney's Channels: Children Are Tuning Out

New York Times:

What Can Trump Do About North Korea? His Options Are Few And Risky
After Backing Trump, Christians Who Fled Iraq Fall Into His Dragnet
Senate Republicans Lay Low On The Fourth, Or Face Single-Minded Pressure
After Years Of Growth, Automakers Are Cutting US Jobs
What \$1.2 Billion Buys In Miami: For Baseball, A Major Distraction
Bronx-Lebanon, Site Of Shooting, Is More Than A Hospital To Neighbors
New Jersey Beaches Reopen, But Christie Catches More Heat

Washington Post:

N. Korea Launch Challenges Trump
Political Backlash Looms Ahead Of Putin Meeting
Dam May Muddy Plan To Clean Up Chesapeake
Amid Parades, Healthcare Queries
'Out Of Our Comfort Zone'

Financial Times:

China And Russia Strike \$11bn Funding Deal
US Urges Global Action After North Korea Missile Launch
Qatar Open To Talks With Rivals As Deadline Passes
JPMorgan And Vantiv Make Moves On Worldpay

Washington Times:

North Korea's Surprise Launch Of ICBM Has Power To Reach Alaska, Upset East Asia Power Balance
Presidents Have Reduced National Monuments 18 Times Before Bears Ears Controversy
Immigration Agency Won't Commit To Giving Noncitizen Data To Voter Fraud Commission
Mueller's All-Star Legal Team In Russia Probe Signals Direction Of Investigation
Fantasy Meets Reality As FTC Puts DraftKings, FanDuel Sports Merger On Ice
Evangelical Christians, Catholics Increasingly Rely On Federal Courts To Protect Religious Liberties

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: North Korea ICBM Test; North Korea ICBM Test-Expert Opinion; Trump-Putin Meeting; Raqqa Assault; Voter Fraud Investigation; Fireworks Danger; Weather Forecast; Fourth Of July-Security; New Jersey-Budget Settled; Michigan Airport Attack-Officer Recovered; Fourth Of July-Shopping; Philadelphia Highway Accident; San Francisco Airport Accident Video; Friendly Police; Fourth Of July Celebration.

CBS: North Korea ICBM Test; North Korea ICBM Test-China; North Korea ICBM Test-Expert Opinion; Trump-Putin Meeting; New Jersey-Budget Settled; Google-Air Pollution Research; Deported Undocumented Parents; Grizzly Bear Product Testing; Tour De France; Fireworks Danger; New York-Eating Contest; Founding Fathers-Descendants.

NBC: North Korea ICBM Test; North Korea ICBM Test-WH; Fourth Of July-Security; New Jersey-Budget Settled; Missouri-Home Explosion; Drone Dangers; British Baby-US Treatment; Cruise-Sexual Assaults; Zika Virus Warning; New York-Eating Contest; Veteran-Warrior Games.

Network TV At A Glance:

North Korea ICBM Test – 16 minutes, 25 seconds
Fourth Of July-Security – 3 minutes, 20 seconds
Trump-Putin Meeting – 2 minutes, 50 seconds
New Jersey-Budget Settled – 1 minute, 10 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: North Korea ICBM Test; Trump-Putin Meeting; WH-Fourth Of July Celebration.
CBS: North Korea ICBM Test; Fourth Of July Celebration; Heat Wave-Wildfires; Microsoft-Layoffs.

FOX: North Korea ICBM Test; Fourth Of July Celebration.

NPR: North Korea ICBM Test; Montana Wildfire; WH-Fourth Of July Celebration; Trump-G20 Visit.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Arrives in Warsaw, Poland.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Participates in a phone call with President Ashraf Ghani of Afghanistan; participates in a phone call with EU High Representative and Vice President Federica Mogherini.

US Senate: On recess until 10 July.

US House: On recess until 10 July.

Other: No notable public event scheduled.

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

All late-night talk shows were in re-runs or did not run.

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC. Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, July 12, 2017
Date: Wednesday, July 12, 2017 7:01:06 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Reuters: U.S. Interior Department Receives Over 2 Million Comments On Monument Review.
- The Hill: House Bill Would Cut EPA Funding By $528M.
- U.S. News & World Report: The Latest: Zinke Says Glacier Boat Restrictions To Continue.
- American Farm Bureau: Pruitt, Zinke Visit State Farm Bureau Presidents.
- KRCR-TV Redding (CA): Congressman LaMalfa Asks Interior Secretary To Stop Marijuana Grows.
- Miami Herald: Official Who Cut Everglades From UN List Gets Trump Job.
- Durango (CO) Herald: Real-Time Wild Fire Location Data Seeks To Reduce Drone Disruptions.
- Washington Post: Trump Administration Wants To Boost Value Of Federal Employee Buyouts.

- Santa Fe New Mexican: Closed County Commission Meetings On Road Disputes Draw Criticism.
- Dallas Morning News: Additional Coverage: Former Texas Comptroller Susan Combs Nominated By Trump For Assistant Interior Secretary.
- Deseret (UT) News: Op-Ed: Shrinking Bears Ears Is Shortsighted And Wrong.
- Albuquerque (NM) Journal: Editorial: Feds Are Right To Require BLM Permit Efficiencies.
- U.S. News & World Report: The U.S. Is Too Dependent On Foreign Mineral Imports.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- High-Profile Attorneys Join Wyoming Boundary Dispute.
- Lake Superior Tribes Return Lands To Reservations Through Federal Programs.
- Arizona Irrigation District Sues Feds, Claiming Inflated Fees.
- NM Says 10th Circ. Needn't Revisit Tribal Gaming Ruling.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Reno (NV) Gazette-Journal: Trump Budget Sets Up Wild Horse Showdown.
- U.S. News & World Report: BLM: Fire In Little Rockies Suspected To Be Human Caused.
- Natural Gas Intelligence: Additional Coverage: Environmental, Tribal Groups Sue Over BLM's Stay Of NatGas Venting/Flaring Rules.
- Wyoming Business Report: Additional Coverage: BLM Releases Plan For Massive Nat Gas Development.

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

- Air Force Backs Continued Oil Drilling Moratorium.
- Seafloor Survey Done For Potential Offshore Renewable Energy Projects.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Millerton Lake To Be Kept Filled For A Week.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- U.S. News & World Report: Monk Seal Bites, Injures US Wildlife Staffer On Midway Atoll.
- Citrus County (FL) Chronicle: Crystal River, USFWS Work Toward Refuge Agreement.
- ABC News: Virginia Man Pleads Guilty To Killing A Bald Eagle By Shooting, Running It Over With An ATV.
- USA Today: King Cobras, Lizards Seized In Express Mail Package At JFK Airport.

National Park Service

- Farmington (NM) Daily Times: Lifetime Public Lands Passes For Seniors Will Increase In Cost.
- Southern California Public Radio: How Offshore Oil Could Fuel Urban Parks If A New Bill Passes.
- Beaufort (SC) Gazette: Want To Help Shape Beaufort County's National Monument Sites? Here's How.
- Bangor (ME) Daily News: Dirt Roads To Maine's Monument Intended For Loggers, Not Visitors.
- DCist: Roosevelt Island Reopens After NPS Removed Infected Ash Trees: DCist.
- U.S. News & World Report: Park Service Says California Man Died At Hawaii Volcano.
- U.S. News & World Report: Alaska Hiker Recovering After Bison Attack In North Dakota.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Saipan (MNP) Tribune: Interior Provides Nearly $ 1M Grant To CNMI.
- Marianas Variety: Official: Regional Group Aims To Improve Fisheries Observer Safety.
- Honolulu Civil Beat (HI): Sen. Glenn Wakai Talks About His Outreach To Micronesia.
- Loop Pacific: People's Republic Of China Continues To Support The Pacific Islands Forum.

US Geological Survey

- Los Angeles Times: Defying Trump, House Panel Is Expected To Propose Restoring Funding For Earthquake Early Warning System.

Top National News

- CBS: Media Analyses: Trump Jr. Emails May Be "Smoking Gun" In Russia Investigation.
- Associated Press: Lavrov Threatens "Counter Actions" Against US Over Seized Compounds.
- Washington Post: McConnell Delays Senate Recess To Work On Healthcare, Other GOP Agenda Items.
- Associated Press: House Committee Unveils Plan To Build Border Wall.
- New York Times: NYTimes A1 Analysis: Trump Deregulation Teams Have "Deep Industry Ties And Potential Conflicts.”

- Reuters: Pruitt Proposes Televised Climate Science Debate.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - “Donald Trump Jr., Makes The Russian Connection.”
 - “The Challenges After Mosul.”
- Washington Post.
 - “The Russia Meddling Story Is No Longer Just Smoke. It’s Fire.”
 - “The Cancellation Of A New FBI Headquarters Is Illogical And Embarrassing.”
 - “The Pentagon Sends A Dispiriting Message To Its Transgender Troops.”
- Wall Street Journal.
 - “Keystone Kops Collusion.”
 - “Why Xi Jinping Fears Liu Xiaobo.”
 - “After Victory In Mosul.”

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today’s Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

U.S. Interior Department Receives Over 2 Million Comments On Monument Review.

Reuters (7/11, Volcovici) reports that the public comment period for the review of national monuments and marine sanctuaries “drew more than 2 million public comments ahead of a report to be issued by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to President Donald Trump next month.” Zinke said on Tuesday “that more than 1.2 million comments were received on the Regulations.gov website and thousands more were received via traditional mail.” Zinke said in a statement, “After hearing some feedback, I’d like to remind and reassure folks that even if a monument is modified, the land will remain under federal ownership.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Emery County \(UT\) Progress (7/11), the Las Cruces \(NM\) Sun-News (7/11), and the Santa Clarita Valley \(CA\) Signal (7/11, Ender).

Senators To Trump: Hands Off America’s National Monuments. The Huffington Post (7/11, D’angelo) reports that “six Democratic senators joined conservation and public lands advocates outside the U.S. Capitol on Tuesday to warn the Trump administration against stripping protections for America’s national monuments.” Sen. Maria Cantwell “said it’s clear President Donald Trump is ‘trying a sneak attack’ on national monuments with executive orders for reviews of certain sites.” She said Trump is plotting to take important recreational, spiritual and economic areas from the public in order to exploit them for oil, gas and other natural resources. Also participating in the event were Sens. Brian Schatz, Martin Heinrich, Michael Bennet, Catherine Cortez Masto, and Tom Udall. The event, “hosted by the League of Conservation Voters, drew approximately 100 people.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Las Vegas \(NV\) Review-Journal (7/11, Martin) and the Highland \(CA\) Community News (7/11).

Public Overwhelmingly Supports Keeping Monuments Intact. Courthouse News (7/11, Renda) reports that “environmental organizations say the public overwhelmingly opposes any reductions or eliminations of the protected areas.” The League of Conservation Voters “said 2.7 million Americans submitted comments in support of public lands during the 60-day comment period.” The league’s president Gene Karpinski said, “It’s no wonder communities across the country mobilized to submit over 2.7 million comments so quickly when people overwhelmingly disapprove of the Trump administration’s extreme anti-environmental policies.”

Thousands Comment On Nevada’s Gold Butte National Monument. The AP (7/11) reports that the Interior Department has “received thousands comments about whether President Donald Trump should keep the scenic, ecologically fragile and artifact-rich Gold Butte area in southern Nevada protected as a national monument." According to the article, "at least 35,000 comments mention Gold Butte but some only mention it as a monument under review."

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by the Washington \(DC\) Times (7/11), the San Luis Obispo \(CA\) Tribune (7/11), the San Francisco \(CA\) Chronicle (7/11), and KTNV-TV Las Vegas \(NV\) Las Vegas (7/11).

More Than 400,000 Comments On Utah's Bears Ears Monument. The AP (7/11) reports that "hundreds of thousands of people have weighed in on whether Utah's new Bears Ears National Monument should be preserved, downsized or rescinded." According to the article, "about 430,000 comments on the Interior Department's website mention Bears Ears, including submissions compiled by conservation groups that include thousands of individual comments in one submission."

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by the Washington \(DC\) Times (7/11) and the Deseret \(UT\) News (7/11).

Thousands Comment On Upper Missouri River Breaks For National Monument Review. The Billings \(MT\) Gazette (7/11, Lutey) reports that "Montanans submitted thousands of letters" to the Interior Department concerning the Upper Missouri Breaks National Monument. According to the article, "most comments submitted supported preserving the monument."

Overwhelming Support For Craters. The Idaho Falls \(ID\) Post Register (7/11, Clark) reports that "nearly 38,000 public comments sent in electronic form to the Department of the Interior make mention of Craters of the Moon National Monument and Preserve." The article says that "a review of a sample of those comments finds no evidence of public support for changing the boundaries of Craters."

Additional Coverage. Additional coverage was provided by the Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (7/11) and the Spokane \(WA\) Spokesman-Review (7/11, Landers).

House Bill Would Cut EPA Funding By $528M.

The Hill (7/11, Henry) reports that House appropriators released a spending bill Tuesday that includes funding for the Interior Department, the Environmental Protection Agency, the Forest Service and related agencies. According to the article, "it's a $31.4 billion bill, which is $824 million less than current levels and $4.3 billion higher than Trump's budget." The article says that "appropriators aim to pass on small cuts to the National Park Service, Bureau of Land Management, Fish and Wildlife Service, and the U.S. Geological Survey." Also, the Land and Water Conservation Fund would "absorb a $125 million cut from its current $400 million budget."

Additional coverage was provided by the Duluth \(MN\) News Tribune (7/11, Myers) and MLive \(MI\) (7/11, Ellison).

The Latest: Zinke Says Glacier Boat Restrictions To Continue.

The AP (7/11) reports that "a spokeswoman says Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has canceled plans by Glacier National Park to ease restrictions on the use of motorized boats from outside the park." Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift "said Tuesday that the park had mistakenly moved to ease restrictions for all boats after Zinke urged lifting them for the boats of private landowners within the park's boundaries." After Swift spoke, Glacier "issued a press release retracting its Monday announcement that restrictions would be eased on all boats in coming weeks."

Additional coverage was provided by KPAX-TV Missoula \(MT\) Missoula, MT (7/11) and KTVH-TV Helena \(MT\) Helena, MT (7/11).

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by U.S. News & World Report (7/11), the Bozeman \(MT\) Daily Chronicle (7/11), the Chippewa \(WI\) Herald (7/11), the Hilton Head Island \(SC\) Packet (7/11), the Houston \(TX\) Chronicle (7/11), the San Francisco \(CA\) Chronicle (7/11), and the Washington \(DC\) Times (7/11).

Pruitt, Zinke Visit State Farm Bureau Presidents.

The American Farm Bureau (7/11, Thornton) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt "made guest appearances Tuesday morning in Washington during the American Farm Bureau Federation's Council of Presidents meeting." During his remarks, "Zinke outlined the importance of supporting multiple uses of the nation's public lands." He also "spoke briefly about the challenges presented by wild horse overpopulation on public lands."

Congressman LaMalfa Asks Interior Secretary To Stop Marijuana Grows.

KRCR-TV Redding, CA (7/11, Gardner) reports that Rep. Doug LaMalfa "wrote letters to the Department of the Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and Department of Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue asking them to prevent marijuana grows on public lands." In the letters LaMalfa wrote, "Drug cartels have created large-scale operations on federal lands which illegally divert stream water, dump tons of illegal toxicants and pollutants, and harm the local wildlife. These sites are often protected by heavily armed cartel members which pose a serious safety risk to those who utilize our public lands for hunting, fishing, and recreational activities – as well as the Forest Service and BLM staff who patrol the forests. It is imperative that the federal government address this problem in order to make our forests safe again for the public to enjoy."

Official Who Cut Everglades From UN List Gets Trump Job.

The Miami Herald (7/11, Daugherty) reports that the Interior Department "announced last week that Todd Willens, a longtime Washington-based lobbyist and congressional staffer, will take an assistant deputy secretary job under Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke." The article notes that in 2007, Willens "urged the United Nations World Heritage Committee to remove Everglades National Park from the list of endangered natural and cultural sites over the objections of the committee's scientific advisory group." Sen. Bill Nelson said, "Is this the same guy coming back to the Department of Interior? He might try to take it off the list again. Anybody who has a disregard for the importance of the Everglades like this fella has indicated...shouldn't be in the Department of Interior in a high and influential position." During the presidential campaign, then-candidate Donald Trump "pledged to protect the Everglades while campaigning in South Florida."

Real-Time Wild Fire Location Data Seeks To Reduce Drone Disruptions.

The Durango \(CO\) Herald (7/11, Romeo) reports that "in an effort to prevent drones from interfering with firefighting activity," the Interior Department "recently enhanced a service that provides access to near real-time wildfire locations in select areas around the country." Mark Bathrick, Director of Interior's Office of Aviation Services, said in a prepared statement, "As the 2017 wildland fire season gets underway, this improved service should greatly reduce the incidents of drone incursions on wildfires and enhance the safety of our firefighters and the communities they work so hard to protect."

Additional coverage was provided by the Alamosa \(CO\) Valley Courier (7/11).

Trump Administration Wants To Boost Value Of Federal Employee Buyouts.

The Washington Post (7/11, Yoder) reports, "The carrot half of the carrot-and-stick formula for cutting federal jobs would be sweetened under a proposal the Trump administration has sent to Congress, seeking to increase the maximum value of buyout payments from $25,000 to $40,000 government-wide." Employee buyouts have been $25,000 since agencies began offering the packages during the Clinton Administration. The piece says that "relatively few buyouts — about 2,000 to 3,000 a year — have been paid in recent years, but interest in them has increased as the Trump administration has pushed several initiatives to downsize the federal workforce, starting with imposing a general hiring freeze soon after taking office." The Interior Department "has said it would 'rely on a combination of attrition, reassignments, and separation incentives' to carry out its plan to shed some 4,000 jobs, about 8 percent of its workforce."

Government Executive (7/11, Wagner) reports the story as well.

Closed County Commission Meetings On Road Disputes Draw Criticism.

The Santa Fe New Mexican (7/12, Stelnicki) reports that Santa Fe County commissioners will "meet with federal, state and tribal representatives this week at the Capitol to discuss road disputes with four pueblos, but the meetings will not be open to the public, a move criticized Tuesday by an open-government advocate and a top state legislator." The president of the New Mexico Foundation for Open Government claimed "barring the public from the meetings will violate the state Open Meetings Act, which requires meetings of government bodies like the Santa Fe County Commission be open except under limited circumstances." According to the article, "in excluding the public from the meetings, the County Commission is citing state statutes that authorize closed-door meetings to discuss litigation or threatened litigation, as well as acquisition or disposal of water rights or other property."

Additional Coverage: Former Texas Comptroller Susan Combs Nominated By Trump For Assistant Interior Secretary.

Additional coverage that "former Texas state comptroller Susan Combs has been nominated as Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Policy, Management and Budget by President Donald Trump” was provided by the Dallas \(TX\) Morning News (7/11, Kelly, Correspondent), the Austin \(TX\) American Statesman (7/11, Tilove), the San Antonio \(TX\) Express-News (7/11, Diaz), the Houston \(TX\) Chronicle (7/11, Diaz), Houston \(TX\) Public Media (7/11, Svitek), and the Texas Observer (7/11).

Op-Ed: Shrinking Bears Ears Is Shortsighted And Wrong.

In an op-ed for the Deseret \(UT\) News (7/11, Yarnold), David Yarnold, president and CEO of the National Audubon Society, raises concerns after Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has “indicated he will recommend that the government dramatically shrink” the Bears Ears National Monument, “which could open the landscape to oil and gas drilling and other potentially damaging activities.” Yarnold blasts the decision as “shortsighted and just plain wrong.” In response, the National Audubon Society is “bringing together 400 leaders from across its state and chapter network this weekend in Park City to support the protection of Bears Ears.”

Editorial: Feds Are Right To Require BLM Permit Efficiencies.

In an editorial, the Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (7/12) argues that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke’s order last week to accelerate the permitting process has “everything to do with efficient government and nothing to do with being pro-extractive industries/anti-environment.” According to the paper, “because his vow to follow federal law and process oil and gas drilling permits within the 30-day window is not about where you drill or how you drill or whether or not you drill or how much you will get from consumers if you drill – it is about expecting the U.S. Bureau of Land Management to comply with the law.” The paper asserts that “the secretary is right to expect BLM to follow federal law.”

The U.S. Is Too Dependent On Foreign Mineral Imports.

In an op-ed for U.S. News & World Report (7/11), Ned Mamula, an associate fellow with the R Street Institute, and Catrina Rorke, a senior fellow with the R Street Institute, write that the Trump Administration is “driving a massive pivot on public-lands policy” and it’s “a firm step toward righting the ship on our national approach to mineral resources on federal lands” They note that “earlier this year, the U.S. Geological Survey reported that, of 88 important minerals they track, the United States is more than 25 percent import-dependent for 62 of them.” The authors warn that “the risk to the United States comes not just from its import-dependency, but its dependency on imports from countries known to use domestic resource wealth as a diplomatic and trade weapon.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

High-Profile Attorneys Join Wyoming Boundary Dispute.

The AP (7/11) reports that “a lawsuit over the boundaries of the Wind River Reservation in central Wyoming is attracting some high-profile attorneys, including former U.S. Interior Secretary Ken Salazar.” Salazar, who served in the Obama Administration, is “among several high-profile attorneys brought in by the Eastern Shoshone and Northern Arapaho tribes in their lawsuit against the state of Wyoming.” Salazar is “representing the Shoshone along with former Solicitor General Seth Waxman, who served under President Bill Clinton, and the Arapaho also have hired Paul Clement, who was a solicitor general under President George W. Bush.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Casper \(WY\) Star-Tribune (7/11, Rosenfeld).

Lake Superior Tribes Return Lands To Reservations Through Federal Programs.

Wisconsin Public Radio (7/11, Kaeding) reports that “Northern Wisconsin tribes on Lake Superior have purchased land that will be added to their reservations using money from federal programs.” In the past year, the Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa has “restored 3,492 acres on the reservation to tribal ownership.” The tribe has “secured primary ownership in the land by making purchase offers to individual landowners using money through the Land Buy-Back Program.”

Arizona Irrigation District Sues Feds, Claiming Inflated Fees.

KJZZ-FM Phoenix (7/11, Kuhn) reports that “an irrigation district that helps supply water to Pinal County landowners outside of the Gila River Indian Reservation is suing the federal government for what it says are unfair rates and filed this month.” The San Carlos Irrigation and Drainage

District “filed a complaint accusing the Bureau of Indian Affairs of charging unfairly high operation and maintenance rates to landowners the district manages.” The district is seeking “about $2 million in damages.”

NM Says 10th Circ. Needn't Revisit Tribal Gaming Ruling.

Law360 (7/11, Powell) reports that “New Mexico pressed the Tenth Circuit on Monday to stay firm on its recent conclusion that the head of the U.S. Department of the Interior lacks the authority to approve procedures allowing the Pueblo of Pojoaque to continue its casino operations there in the absence of a state gaming compact.”

Bureau Of Land Management

Trump Budget Sets Up Wild Horse Showdown.

The Reno \(NV\) Gazette-Journal (7/11, Spillma) reports that wild horses “could be killed in greater numbers under a budget proposal from President Donald Trump.” The article notes that “the changes are included in Trump’s proposed budget for the Bureau of Land Management, which seeks an 11 percent cut to the agency’s $1.1 billion budget.” Moreover, “in addition to the overall cut the agency’s budget justification document proposes cutting $10 million and 29 jobs from the Wild Horse and Burro management program, a reduction of 12 percent.”

BLM: Fire In Little Rockies Suspected To Be Human Caused.

The AP (7/11) reports that “Bureau of Land Management law enforcement officers are investigating the July fire burning south of Fort Belknap Indian Reservation as a suspected human-caused fire.” According to Fire Information officer Hailey Graf, “the fire, which started on July 3, is 60 percent contained after burning 17 square miles (45 square kilometers) and a small cabin in the Little Rocky Mountains.” The National Interagency Coordination Center “says it has cost $3.2 million to fight so far.”

Additional Coverage: Environmental, Tribal Groups Sue Over BLM’s Stay Of NatGas Venting/Flaring Rules.

Additional coverage that “a coalition of environmental and tribal organizations filed a lawsuit Monday over the Trump administration’s decision to indefinitely postpone an Obama-era rule governing associated natural gas flaring and venting on public and tribal lands” was provided by Natural Gas Intelligence (7/11, Passut) and Law360 (7/11, Westney).

Additional Coverage: BLM Releases Plan For Massive Nat Gas Development.

Additional coverage that the Bureau of Land Management “released an environmental impact study along with supporting documents and maps” for a project proposed by developer Jonah Energy that “could unlock 5.25 trillion cubic feet of natural gas” was provided by the Wyoming Business Report (7/11, Clark) and the Casper \(WY\) Star-Tribune (7/11, Richards).

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

Air Force Backs Continued Oil Drilling Moratorium.

The Tampa Bay \(FL\) Times (7/11, Pittman) reports in its Buzz Florida Politics blog that the US Air Force agreed with a bipartisan group of Florida politicians that the existing moratorium on offshore drilling in the eastern Gulf of Mexico should be extended. General David L. Goldfein, the Air Force chief of staff, wrote to Sen. Bill Nelson saying the Air Force “needs the certainty of the proposed extension” to ensure that it can continue testing and training flights in the area.

Seafloor Survey Done For Potential Offshore Renewable Energy Projects.

The Coos Bay \(OR\) World (7/11, Harrell) reports that “a recently- published research paper based off of a study conducted by Oregon State University researchers on sediment and animals on the ocean floor in the Pacific Northwest could aid future renewable energy projects off the coast.” The study “found that relationships between the sediment and the animal life was consistent across several sample sites along the coast.” The research was funded by the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management and the Oregon Wave Energy Trust.

Bureau Of Reclamation

Millerton Lake To Be Kept Filled For A Week.

The Fresno \(CA\) Bee (7/11, Rodriguez-Delgado) reports that “melting snow from the Sierra is sending more water into the Millerton Lake reservoir than it can handle, but officials say the lake will be kept filled to capacity for at least a week to make the most use of the water.” Duane Stroup, deputy area manager for the south-central California area of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, “said about 30 cubic feet per second of water is spilling over the gates of Friant Dam as about 2,000 cubic feet per second of water is being released down the spillway into the San Joaquin River.”

Additional coverage was provided by KGPE-TV Fresno, CA (7/11, Mendes).

Fish And Wildlife Service

Monk Seal Bites, Injures US Wildlife Staffer On Midway Atoll.

The AP (7/11, Jones) reports that “a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service employee has been bitten by an endangered Hawaiian monk seal while swimming at Midway Atoll in the Northwestern Hawaiian Islands.” FWS spokeswoman Megan Nagel “said Tuesday that the incident happened on July 6 on Midway’s North Beach in the Papahānaumokuākea Marine National Monument.” The article says that “staff access to all beaches has been closed until the end of the pupping season in response to the attack.”

Crystal River, USFWS Work Toward Refuge Agreement.

The Citrus County \(FL\) Chronicle (7/11, Thompson) reports that Crystal River officials on Monday considered the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service’s “proposed alternatives for the Three Sisters Springs property.” City council members discussed the federal agency’s draft environment assessment, “which was released in June and proposes two options for public comment on how to develop the 57-acre refuge in the city.”

Virginia Man Pleads Guilty To Killing A Bald Eagle By Shooting, Running It Over With An ATV.

ABC News (7/11, Jacobo, Beni) reports that “a Virginia man faces up to a year in prison and a $100,000 fine after he pleaded guilty to killing a bald eagle today, first by shooting the bird of prey and then running it over with an all-terrain vehicle, the U.S. Department of Justice said in a statement.” The Justice Department “said the 62-year-old Smithfield resident Allen H. Thacker shot the eagle, according to a statement of facts filed with his plea agreement, because ‘he was upset it had been hunting and taking fish from a pond located on his property.’”

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington \(DC\) Post (7/11, Weiner), the Richmond \(VA\) Times-Dispatch (7/11, Lukitsch), the Daily Caller (7/11, Lieberman), and WHAS-TV Louisville \(KY\) Louisville, KY (7/11).

King Cobras, Lizards Seized In Express Mail Package At JFK Airport.

USA Today (7/12, Alvarado) reports that “live King Cobras and lizards shipped express from Hong Kong were intercepted at John F. Kennedy Airport by customs agents.” According to the article, “the five slithering juvenile cobras, which are poisonous, and three geckos were found in a Styrofoam package that was labelled as containing a ‘plastic tray,’ by U.S. Customs and Border Protection workers doing a mail inspection.” CBP officers, “working in the airport’s International Mail Facility, seized the package and turned it over to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service for further investigation, according to the statement.”

National Park Service

Lifetime Public Lands Passes For Seniors Will Increase In Cost.

The Farmington \(NM\) Daily Times (7/12) reports that “people 62 years old or older who want to purchase lifetime public lands access passes will have to pay more starting in late August, according to a press release from the National Park Service.” The passes currently “cost $10, but changes in legislation required the National Park Service to increase the price to $80, which is the same price people pay for an Interagency Annual Pass." The $10 passes will be sold through Aug. 28.

Additional coverage was provided by the Atlanta \(GA\) Journal-Constitution (7/11, Brasch) and WCAV-TV Charlottesville \(VA\) Charlottesville, VA (7/11).

How Offshore Oil Could Fuel Urban Parks If A New Bill Passes.

Southern California Public Radio (7/11, Beggin) reports that "a proposal to use funds drawn from offshore oil and gas leases to help build urban parks is the first bill introduced" by Rep. Nanette Diaz Barragán. The Outdoor Recreation Legacy Partnership Program Act, "introduced late last month, aims to increase the number of green spaces in cities in order to 'improve the lives overall of the community, primarily in underserved communities,' Barragán said during a press conference Monday." The proposed legislation "would legally secure funding for a National Park Service program that was originally funded by Congress in 2014."

Want To Help Shape Beaufort County's National Monument Sites? Here's How.

The Beaufort \(SC\) Gazette (7/11, Fastenau) reports that "planning is underway for the Reconstruction Era National Monument at sites in Beaufort, Port Royal and St. Helena Island." A series of meetings will be held this month to allow "residents to offer thoughts on how the sites should be set up and operated as National Park Service officials craft what they call the monument's foundation document." Reconstruction Era National Monument superintendent Melissa English-Rias said in a statement, "The foundation document will be critical to helping the National Park Service map out management plans and priorities for the new park. We are inviting the public to play a role in shaping the park's future operations."

Dirt Roads To Maine's Monument Intended For Loggers, Not Visitors.

The Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (7/11, Sambides) reports that "the seven private roads on the National Park Service map of Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument" were "never meant for tourists." The article says that "a dozen representatives of the loggers, landowners, truckers and National Park Service officials are working to prevent crashes on the roads that lead to the 87,562-acre Katahdin Woods, which critics say are unfit for tourist traffic." According to the article, "the loggers plan to install more right of way signs and work at times when tourist traffic is minimal, while the park service plans to spot-grade the road leading to the monument's main entrance."

Roosevelt Island Reopens After NPS Removed Infected Ash Trees: DCist.

DCist (7/11) reports that Theodore Roosevelt Island reopened Tuesday "after closing at the end of June for diseased tree removal," the National Park Service said yesterday. According NPS spokesperson Aaron LaRocca, "a recent survey of the island park found extensive damage to some trees caused by an invasive beetle known as the emerald ash borer." The article says that "about 200 diseased trees, most of which were ashes, were removed."

Park Service Says California Man Died At Hawaii Volcano.

The AP (7/11) reports that "authorities have released the name of the 38-year-old man who was found dead in Volcanos National Park on Hawaii's Big Island." The NPS "identified the man found on the Kilauea Volcano caldera floor as Gregory Michael Ure, also known as Leo Michael Adonis." Officials "also say a note was found in Ure's backpack, but they said they won't discuss details of the note or the death until after an investigation has been completed."

Alaska Hiker Recovering After Bison Attack In North Dakota.

The AP (7/11) reports that "an Alaska man is recovering after being attacked by a bison while hiking in western North Dakota's Theodore Roosevelt National Park." According to park official Eileen Andes, "the 65-year-old hiker encountered the large animal on a trail after taking photos of a sunset."

Office Of Insular Affairs

Interior Provides Nearly $ 1M Grant To CNMI.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (7/10) reports that Acting Interior assistant secretary Nikolao Pula "made available last week $994,711 to the CNMI to improve water distribution, waste management, and hospital billing services." Another grant was "provided for a joint government/non-profit partnership to improve efforts in addressing and prosecuting sexual violence cases." Pula said, "Requests submitted to the Office of Insular Affairs for grant assistance always outweigh the available resources. We are pleased that we can support some of the worthy projects prioritized by Gov. Ralph [DLG] Torres as they will have a direct impact toward improving lives for our fellow Americans living in the CNMI."

Official: Regional Group Aims To Improve Fisheries Observer Safety.

Marianas Variety (7/10, Johnson) reports that "the recent loss of a fisheries observer from a purse seine vessel in Nauru waters is a tragic development that confirms the importance of action taken by the Parties to the Nauru Agreement or PNA to protect observers, said its CEO."

According to the article, "although Nauru police said review of video from the Chinese flagged Feng Xiang 818 did not suggest foul play in the death of fisheries observer James Junior Numbaru of Papua New Guinea, PNA CEO Ludwig Kumoru said in Majuro PNA has been stepping up action to improve the safety of these independent observers who monitor fish catches on all 300 purse seiners operating in PNA waters."

Sen. Glenn Wakai Talks About His Outreach To Micronesia.

The Honolulu Civil Beat \(HI\) (7/10, Estrellon) reports that Glenn Wakai joined Pod Squad host Chad Blair "to talk about his special relationship with the Republic of Palau, how he views the ongoing assimilation of Micronesian immigrants in Hawaii and a special event coming up July 23 in connection with the Friends of the Library of Hawaii annual book sale at McKinley High School."

People's Republic Of China Continues To Support The Pacific Islands Forum.

The Loop Pacific (7/10, Prasad) reports that "the People's Republic of China has handed over USD$1.05 million to Pacific Islands Forum through its Pacific Islands Forum Cooperation Fund. "The money was given to Forum's Secretary General, Dame Meg Taylor last week. According to the article, "during the handover, the SG thanked China for their ongoing support through the fund and strong relationship between China and Pacific."

US Geological Survey

Defying Trump, House Panel Is Expected To Propose Restoring Funding For Earthquake Early Warning System.

The Los Angeles Times (7/11, Lin) reports that "members of Congress on Wednesday are expected to approve a new budget plan that would maintain funding for a West Coast earthquake early warning system that President Trump's budget sought to slash." A House of Representatives subcommittee is "proposing that $10.2 million be allocated to the early warning system — the same amount as the network received in the last budget." Rep. Ken Calvert, chairman of the subcommittee, said, "We have made too much progress on the earthquake warning system to stop now. I don't think there is any appetite, at least from the House in Congress, to remove it."

Top National News

Media Analyses: Trump Jr. Emails May Be "Smoking Gun" In Russia Investigation.

Donald Trump Jr.'s Twitter release of a series of emails from June 2016 about setting up a Trump Tower meeting with Russian attorney Natalia Veselnitskaya dominated all media on Tuesday, with the three broadcast networks offering more than 31 minutes of coverage combined, blanket coverage and analysis on cable, front-page stories and analyses in all major newspapers, and heavy volume of commentary on social media. While the surprise 11:00 a.m. release was intended to get ahead of the New York Times' expected publication of the emails, coverage is excruciatingly negative toward the Trumps and the Administration, with analysts saying Trump Jr. may have provided evidence of criminal activity and a "smoking gun" that had so far been absent from inquiries into Russian election meddling.

The CBS Evening News (7/11, lead story, 3:15, Mason) reported that the Russia investigation that the President "calls fake" has "just become a very real problem for his son." CBS' Jeff Pegues: "The first email on June 3 [2016] was blunt: Music publicist Rob Goldstone wrote Donald Trump Jr. that a Russian official had offered to provide the Trump campaign with some official documents and information that would incriminate Hillary and her dealings with Russia. 2013. ... Four days after the initial email, Goldstone sent another message. This one said a Russian government attorney was flying over from Moscow." Pegues noted that "less than a week after the meeting, the Democratic National Committee accused Russia of hacking into its computer servers. The following month, WikiLeaks began releasing stolen DNC emails." ABC World News Tonight (7/11, lead story, 4:40, Muir) noted Trump Jr. said he released the emails to be "totally transparent." However, "the New York Times says Trump only released the emails after they told him they were about to publish them."

NBC Nightly News (7/11, lead story, 3:25, Holt) reported the emails make it "clear that the Russian government was supporting Trump," and that "within a week" of the Trump Tower meeting, "the first in a flood of leaks believed to be the result of Russian hackers," although there's "no evidence the information Trump Jr. was promised was connected to that."

Major Garrett reported on the CBS Evening News (7/11, story 2, 2:50, Mason) that "no one knows what Mr. Trump meant" when he said during the campaign, "We're going to be discussing all of the things that have taken place with the Clintons. I think you're going to find it very informative and very, very interesting." However, Garrett continued, "what followed was a steady diet of denials about contacts or cooperation with Russians."

The AP (7/11, Day, Tucker) reports that Trump Jr. "defended his actions in an interview with Fox News, blaming the decision to take the meeting on the 'million miles per hour' pace of a presidential campaign and his suspicion that the lawyer might have information about 'underreported' scandals involving [Hillary] Clinton." Trump Jr. said in his interview on Fox News' Hannity (7/11), "My take away when all this was going on was that someone has information on our opponent. ... I've heard about all these things but maybe this is something, I should hear him out." Trump Jr. added, "This is pre-Russia fever. The is pre-Russia mania. ... I don't even think my sirens went up...because of it because it wasn't the issue that is has been made out to be over the last nine months, 10 months. ... I think there is an element of context to that. At the time, it wasn't this big news story."

Politico (7/11, Lima) reports that Trump Jr. also told "outspoken Trump supporter...Hannity" that he "'probably would have done things a little differently' regarding his controversial meeting." He said, "I didn't know if there was any credibility, I didn't know if there was anything behind it, I can't vouch for the information. ... It was literally just a wasted 20 minutes, which was a shame." Breitbart (7/11, Hanchett) reports that Trump Jr. also said he would turned over any "information that he felt was illegal or compromising...to the authorities." USA Today (7/11, Jackson) reports that "the younger Trump said he saw the offer only as 'opposition research.'"

Jake Tapper said on CNN's The Lead (7/11), "This is clear evidence that the highest level members of the Trump campaign were willing to sit with individuals who had been billed, at the very least, as representing the Russian government in order to get damaging information about Hillary Clinton." Gloria Borger said on CNN's Situation Room (7/11) that the emails are "very damaging." They make it "very clear" that "the Russian government tried to aid Donald Trump's campaign, period, end of sentence." Ron Brownstein said on CNN's Situation Room (7/11) that in the email, Trump Jr., "seems very nonplussed by the idea that the Russian government wants to support his father in the campaign. It doesn't seem in the email that this is the first time that notion crossed his desk."

The AP (7/11, Pace) writes, "The president's son connected the dots. Until Tuesday, the questions about whether Donald Trump's campaign colluded with Russia have largely centered on revelations from secret sources and suspicious connections that may ultimately be just eyebrow-raising coincidences. There's been plenty of smoke, but no fire." But "the type of coordination with Russia that Trump has long denied, the emails seem to show, was being embraced by his namesake." The AP calls it a "stunning email exchange." Reuters (7/11, Chiacu, Mohammed) says the emails "could provide ammunition for investigators who are probing whether there was collusion between the Kremlin and Trump's presidential campaign."

USA Today (7/11, Korte) reports that the emails show that Trump Jr. "knew the damaging information he was seeking about Hillary Clinton was being peddled by the highest levels of the Russian government." While he "said he was releasing the emails via Twitter 'in order to be totally transparent,'" they "appear to back up the most damning revelation" the New York Times has reported that the President's top associates "and family members actively sought out information they knew was part of a high-level Russian government effort to support Trump's campaign."

The New York Times (7/11, Becker, Goldman, Apuzzo) reports under the headline "Russian Dirt On Clinton? 'I Love It,' Donald Trump Jr. Said" that "if the future president's eldest son was surprised or disturbed by the provenance of the promised material – or the notion that it was part of a continuing effort by the Russian government to aid his father's campaign – he gave no indication." The Washington Post (7/11, Helderman, Wagner) reports that the email exchange "showed clearly that Trump Jr. understood he was taking the meeting as a way of channeling information directly from the government of a nation hostile to the United States to his father's campaign." The Los Angeles Times (7/11, Savage) reports that the emails "may offer the clearest sign to date of possible criminal violations arising from Russia's meddling" in the election, with "several campaign funding experts" saying that the emails "strongly suggest" that Trump Jr. violated federal election laws.

The New York Post (7/11, Marsh) reports that Trump Jr.'s attorney Alan Futerfas said in an interview, "I think it appeared pretty clear to us that one or more news organizations had them and basically what they were doing, it was kind of like a drip, drip, drip, a death by a thousand cuts. We were like, you know what, it's silly. We're going to be totally transparent. We'll get it all out there."

USA Today (7/11) editorializes, "Americans have seen through the smoke surrounding Russian interference in the 2016 election and there is fire, leaping flames that President Trump and his minions can no longer extinguish with their denials." The email chain "provides evidence that the Russian government wanted to sway the election to Trump and that some in Trump's inner circle were willing to accept that help. We do not yet know what the president knew about their efforts," but "we do, however, have a perfectly clear picture of Trump family priorities: Winning – at business and politics – beats patriotism every time."

The Washington Post (7/11) similarly writes, "There can now be no doubt: The Russia meddling story is not just smoke but fire. ... How long can the rest of the Republican Party prioritize partisanship and agenda over decency and patriotism?" Are Senate Majority Leader McConnell and House Speaker Ryan "really prepared to debase themselves in defense of a president whose closest advisers may have welcomed underhanded interference in America's election from a hostile foreign power?"

The New York Times (7/11) editorializes, "In language so blunt and obvious it would make a Hollywood screenwriter blush, the emails confirm what the president, his son and others have denied repeatedly for more than a year." The President "was uncharacteristically subdued on social media," but praised his son's transparency. However, "transparency is one of the many things, along with credibility, that this administration lacks. So when Donald Trump Jr. claims that he's released the 'full email chain,' the question has to be, what else are you hiding?"

The Wall Street Journal (7/11) says in an editorial that the emails show farcical ineptitude, but that the main effect of the Russian hacking so far has been to hurt the Trump presidency. But the Los Angeles Times (7/11) says in an editorial that "no one can pretend that the various investigations into possible contacts between Russia and the Trump campaign are frivolous or politically motivated. That includes President Trump, who should take a belated vow of silence on this subject and let the investigations take their course."

David French of the National Review (7/11) writes, "There now exists evidence that senior members of the Trump campaign tried unsuccessfully to facilitate Russian government efforts to defeat Hillary Clinton. ... At long last we can now put to bed the notion that the Russia investigation is little more than frivolous partisan harassment." The Russian investigation "isn't a witch hunt anymore, if it ever was. It's a national necessity."

Kathleen Parker writes in the Washington Post (7/11), "More shock waves are doubtless coming. ... It's hard to say the Trump campaign had nothing to do with Russia. For now: Collusion." Dana Milbank writes in his Washington Post (7/11) column that "rookie mistake" is "the all-purpose defense of the Trump White House," but these "aren't rookie mistakes. This is a team that never should have taken the field." However, Holman Jenkins Jr. writes in his Wall Street Journal (7/11) column that the main thing exposed by the emails is that the President ran a chaotic and inept, but not an intentionally corrupt, campaign – much as he has run his Administration.

Steve Hayes of the Weekly Standard said on Fox News Special Report (7/11), "The story here is not President Obama. It's not the 'deep state.' It's not the media. It's not the Democrats. It's Donald Trump, Jr. and these emails. This doesn't require interpretation. This isn't coming through the filter of the New York Times. The emails say what they say. ... Are we really having a debate in this country in Washington about the propriety of the son of a presidential candidate, a leading presidential candidate, meeting with representatives who he thought were of a hostile foreign power for the purposes of winning the election, and we have to have a debate about whether that's proper or not? That's an incredible moment in our history that we are having this debate."

Nicholas Kristof tweeted, "Remember, this astonishing email outlines a meeting that the Trump campaign denied at least eight times had ever happened." Ezra Klein tweeted, "Oh my god. This literally says the meeting is part of 'is part of Russia and its government's support for Mr. Trump.'" Politico's Ali Watkins tweeted, "For as many lawyers as this White House has hired it sure doesn't look like they're using them."

Stuart Rothenberg tweeted, "So, one day into Donald, Jr., we still have Manafort, Jared and other family members to go. Just at the beginning. Don't forget that." MSNBC justice analyst Matthew Miller tweeted, "I for one completely underestimated the Trump campaign's stupidity. I actually never thought they would have done something this brazen."

Brendan Nyhan of the New York Times "The Upshot" tweeted, "We've veered back from Veep into Homeland – unbelievable. How can this be real? Reads like villain's exposition of his plan in a bad movie." Noah Rothman of Commentary tweeted, "Anyone still think Trump's campaign manger, first born son, and son-in-law kept him in the dark about this meeting?"

The New York Times (7/11, Becker) has an online timeline of how it "unraveled the story of Donald Trump Jr.'s decision to meet with a Russian lawyer who supposedly had compromising information on Hillary Clinton," starting with a March 27 report on Kushner's meeting with Russian Ambassador Sergey Kislyak, and leading up to Tuesday's revelations.

WPost, Politico, NYTimes Analyses: White House "In Chaos," Top Aides "Feel Blindsided." The Washington Post (7/11, A1, Rucker, Parker) reports on its front page that "the White House has been thrust into chaos after days of ever-worsening revelations." The President, "who has been hidden from public view since returning last weekend from a divisive international summit, is enraged that the Russia cloud still hangs over his presidency and is exasperated that his oldest son and namesake has become engulfed by it," according to "people who have spoken with him this week," and "even Vice President Pence sought to distance himself from the controversy, with his spokesman noting that Trump Jr.'s meeting occurred before Pence joined the ticket."

Politico (7/11, Palmeri, Dawsey) reports, "White House aides feel blindsided by the bombshell revelations...while the president is using his relatively light schedule to watch TV and fume about the latest scandal, according to interviews with half a dozen White House officials and advisers." Top aides "are exasperated by their limited ability to steer the damage control and the risk that more damaging news has yet to emerge." One adviser said that "many of the White House aides had previously dismissed the Russia stories as 'conspiracy bull[----],' this person said, but that this development was not being dismissed as that."

The New York Times (7/11, A1, Baker, Haberman) writes on its front page, "The Russia story has become the brier patch from which the president seemingly cannot escape. It dominated his trip to Europe last week and, after he leaves on Wednesday night for a couple of days in France, it may dominate that trip as well. Every time Mr. Trump tries to put the furor behind him, more disclosures thrust it back onto the Washington agenda."

Prosecutors Say Emails May Be "Smoking Gun" For Mueller. Politico (7/11, Samuelsohn) reports that Trump Jr. may have given special counsel Robert Mueller "'smoking gun' evidence...according to veteran prosecutors and white-collar defense attorneys experienced in Washington scandals." CNN (7/11, Prokupecz, Perez, Brown) reports on its website that Mueller's investigators plan to examine the meeting and email exchanges, according to "a US official briefed on the matter."

Savanna Guthrie said on NBC Nightly News (7/11, story 3, 1:50, Holt), "The special counsel who's looking into this now has an incredibly compelling piece of evidence." Manu Raju reported on CNN's Situation Room (7/11) reported that Mueller plans to examine the meeting, and "it should be noted that the FBI has in the past year taken a look at Don Jr.'s finances, his associations, as part of the broader look at whether or not there was any collusion or whether or not there was any ties to Russia that crossed over into criminal territory."

Randall Eliason, who "teaches white-collar criminal law" at George Washington University Law School, writes in a Washington Post (7/11) op-ed that "the emails establish that the entire purpose of the meeting was to share potentially compromising information about Clinton." Prosecutors are "building a wall of evidence, brick by brick, to establish proof beyond a reasonable doubt of a possible conspiracy. With these emails, Donald Trump Jr. just delivered a wheelbarrow full of bricks to the special counsel's office."

Breitbart (7/11, Hayward) writes under the headline "Bob Mueller Is Assembling A Team Of Ambitious Democratic Hit Men Against Trump" that according to LawNewz contributor Robert Barnes, "Mueller has 'hired people that do very politicized cases, that have had a history of ethics allegations being raised against them, constitutional violations being raised against them.'"

Assange Says He Suggested Trump Jr. Release Emails. USA Today (7/11, Estepa) reports,

"WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange on Tuesday claimed that Donald Trump Jr. releasing his own emails was the result of a conversation they had." Assange said via Twitter that he contacted Trump Jr. "to make the case that he should release the emails" through WikiLeaks, but "two hours later, Trump Jr. did it himself, Assange said."

Republicans Seek Answers, But Generally Avoid Comment. USA Today (7/11, Collins, Shesgreen) reports, "Lawmakers in both parties called on President Trump's son and other Trump campaign officials to testify about Russian meddling" in the election in the wake of the email release. The Wall Street Journal (7/11, Sonne, Ballhaus) reports that Senate Majority Whip Cornyn said Tuesday that Trump Jr. should testify before the Senate Intelligence Committee.

The New York Times (7/11, Flegenheimer, Huetteman) reports that Senate Republicans, questioned about the emails, "generally retreated to form." Sen. Bob Corker, "typically more willing than most Republicans to tweak the administration," said, "Talk to others about politics," while Sen. Orrin Hatch said of Trump Jr., "He's a very nice young man." The Washington Post (7/11, Phillips) reports that Senate Intelligence Chairman Richard Burr "walked straight through a wall of reporters, stone-faced, and refused to answer questions."

The Wall Street Journal (7/11, Tau) reports that some Republicans deferred to investigators. McConnell said, "What I have a lot of confidence in is the Intelligence Committee handling this whole investigation." Sen. John Kennedy said, "The President fired the FBI director, he didn't fire the FBI. He didn't fire the Senate Intelligence Committee. The FBI's going to get to the bottom of all of this."

However, McClatchy (7/11, Douglas, Murphy) reports under the headline "Outraged Republicans Want Answers From Trump Jr." that GOP senators are "demand[ing] more answers, and fast." Sen. John McCain said, "Other shoes will drop before this thing is over." The Washington Post (7/11, Helderman, Wagner) reports that Sen. Lindsey Graham told reporters, "Anytime you're in a campaign and you get an offer from a foreign government to help your campaign, the answer is 'no.' ... That email was disturbing. On its face, this is very problematic."

Rep. Lee Zeldin (R-NY) tweeted, "I voted for @POTUS last Nov. & want him & USA to succeed, but that meeting, given that email chain just released, is a big no-no."

Democrats Invoke "Treason" And "Collusion." Nancy Cordes reported on the CBS Evening News (7/11, story 3, 2:00, Mason) that Democrats "describe the email chain today as a game-changer." Senate Minority Leader Schumer: "The emails are the end of the idea pushed by the Administration and the President that there is absolutely no evidence of intent to coordinate or collude." Likewise, ABC World News Tonight (7/11, story 4, 2:20, Muir) reported, "A growing chorus of Democrats saying there is no question, this is a game-changer." Sen. Chris Murphy: "Donald Trump Jr. was openly salivating about the prospect of getting damaging information from the Russians. It is certainly evidence of collusion." Sen. Ron Wyden: "This was an attempt at collusion." Wolf Blitzer said on CNN's Situation Room (7/11), "Hillary Clinton's former running mate, Sen. Tim Kaine, said Trump Jr. may have even committed treason." Fox News Special Report (7/11) showed Kaine saying, "This is moving into perjury, false statements, and even potentially treason."

Sen. Mark Warner, ranking member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said on the CBS Evening News (7/11, story 5, 2:55, Mason) that the revelations serve as "evidence that Trump officials actually were willing to accept information that was part of a Russian government effort to hurt Hillary Clinton and promote Donald Trump." Sen. Richard Blumenthal, a member of the Intelligence Committee, said on CNN's Situation Room (7/11) that "as a former prosecutor, my reaction was these emails are a textbook example and evidence of criminal intent." Blumenthal says Trump's actions "potentially" constitute "treason."

Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse said on CNN's Situation Room (7/11), "Going in, they knew that this was Russian information, that a Russian attorney was flying over to deliver it, that it was intended for political purposes, that the campaign was going to be involved. They even talked about the timing of it, that it would be better to come out later in the summer." So, he continued, this "shows clearly an intent by the leadership of the Trump campaign to try to collude with Russians." Sen. Joe Manchin said on MSNBC's Morning Joe (7/11), "I have been thinking a lot about how could you ever do something, or how could you even think that that was a proper meeting to have?"

The Washington Times (7/11, Boyer) reports, "Democrats quickly seized on" the emails. Rep. Eliot Engel (D-NY), ranking member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said, "[Trump Jr.] has made clear that his father's campaign was willing to work with an adversary of the United States in order to defeat Hillary Clinton. He also revealed that the Trump Administration's numerous and vehement denials of contact between the campaign and Russia weren't truthful."

Rep. Elijah Cummings (D-MD), ranking member of the House Oversight and Government Reform Committee, similarly said, "The email chain confirms that the President's son was both aware of and supported the Russian government's efforts to help the President get elected. ... We must investigate. And we must act on our findings."

Politico (7/11, Wright) reports that House Intelligence Committee ranking member Rep. Adam Schiff (D-CA) said, "The most serious risk to the country, I think, is that the Russians possess compromising information, which they call kompromat, that can influence this President's conduct of American policy. ... If there are other meetings that the Russians know about, if there are other interactions with the Trump campaign that the Russian are aware of, that is something they can hold over the head of the President of the United States."

Rep. Eric Swalwell (D-CA) said on CNN's The Lead (7/11), "This is what working with Russians look like. It's being offered information damaging to your opponent by the Russian government for a meeting at trump tower with senior officials, the President's son right at the peak of the interference campaign.. ... It fits the pattern with what we've seen as far as the personal, political, and financial ties that the President has had with Russia." The Boston Globe (7/11, Reiss) reports that Rep. Seth Moulton (D-MA) "implied that Trump Jr.'s responses [to the emails] were 'treasonous,'" while Rep. Joe Kennedy III (D-MA) "tweeted out the definition of 'collusion.'"

The Washington Examiner (7/11, Antle) reports that some Democrats called on Kushner "to surrender his security clearance and resign." Rep. Carol Shea-Porter (D-NH) tweeted, "Back in May we urged WH to revoke Jared Kushner's security clearance because of Russia meetings." Rep. Jamie Raskin (D-MD) tweeted, "Kushner's security clearance should have been revoked long ago, as we urged."

Veselnitskaya Denies Connection To Kremlin. The Washington Post (7/11, Filipov) reports that Russian attorney Natalia Veselnitskaya told the Post Tuesday "that no one assigned her to talk with" Trump Jr., Kushner, and Manafort. The Post says that while "she has been identified by some American news organizations as 'Kremlin-connected,'" she "does not work for the Russian government." Veselnitskaya said, "I'm just an ordinary person. A regional prosecutor is not the Kremlin. ... I did not have an assignment from the Kremlin, there were no orders from the government."

ABC World News Tonight (7/11, story 2, 2:15, Muir) reported that Veselnitskaya is "well connected to the Kremlin, and a familiar figure in Washington, lobbying against Russian sanctions." But speaking to NBC Nightly News (7/11, story 2, 2:35, Holt), Veselnitskaya denied she works for the Russian government, saying, "I'm certainly flattered by being called as a government attorney. But I've never worked for the government in the first place."

In an interview that aired on NBC's Today Show (7/11), Veselnitskaya said through a translator, "I never knew who else would be attending the meeting. All I knew was that Mr. Donald Trump Jr. was willing to meet with me. I could recognize the young gentleman who was only present in the meeting for only the first seven to 10 minutes. And then, he stood up and left the room. It was Mr. Jared Kushner. And he never came back, by the way."

The New York Times (7/11, Macfarquhar, Kramer) describes Veselnitskaya on its front page as a "fearsome Moscow insider" who "earned her status as the go-to lawyer for the Moscow regional government." The Washington Post (7/11, Kranish, Hamburger, Filipov, Helderman) reports, "Veselnitskaya, while familiar to those who follow the issue of US sanctions against Russia, was otherwise little known until revelations this week that she played a pivotal role at the Trump Tower meeting."

The Wall Street Journal (7/11, Stokols, Douglas) profiles Rob Goldstone, the publicist and music promoter who arranged the meeting between Trump Jr. and Veselnitskaya.

Agalarov Selling New Jersey Mansion. The New York Post (7/11, Keil) reports that Aras Agalarov, the Russian billionaire whose pop star son asked Goldstone to set up the meeting, is selling his New Jersey mansion.

Trump Jr.'s Attorney Previously Represented Russian Hacker. The Washington Times (7/11, Blake) reports that Fufefas previously "represented Russian hacker Nikita Kuzmin in a high-stake cybercrime case centered around the Gozi virus, a malicious computer program that caused millions of dollars in damages by siphoning banking credentials from computers across the globe." Kuzmin was arrested while visiting the US in 2010 and "was sentenced in 2016 to three years' time served and ordered to pay nearly $7 million in restitution."

NYPost: Trump Jr. "An Idiot." The New York Post (7/11) editorializes, "We see one truly solid takeaway from the story of the day: Donald Trump Jr. is an idiot. ... Democrats and the media are frothing to find something criminal in it all, with the most unhinged talking treason."

What it clearly was, was criminally stupid.”

McCain Alleged To Have Had Copy Of Russian Dossier. McClatchy (7/11, Hall) reports that a court document in a British lawsuit regarding “the now-infamous dossier that alleged Donald Trump’s campaign had connections to Russian operatives” alleges that McCain was one of the “handful of people known to have had copies of the full document before it circulated among journalists and was published by BuzzFeed.” A McCain spokesperson declined to comment.

DeSantis Seeks Formal DOJ Investigation Of Comey. The Washington Free Beacon (7/11, Kredo) reports that Rep. Ron DeSantis (R-FL), who chairs the House Oversight Committee’s National Security subcommittee, is calling on the Justice Department to launch a formal investigation into ex-FBI Director James Comey’s alleged leak of classified information. DeSantis “also called on the Trump administration to purge all former Obama administration officials still working in the government,” claiming that they are responsible for leaks.

Lavrov Threatens “Counter Actions” Against US Over Seized Compounds.

The AP (7/11) reports Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov on Tuesday threatened “counter actions” against the US over a dispute centering on a pair of Russian diplomatic compounds seized last year. President Trump and Russian President Vladimir Putin discussed the issue at the G20 summit last week, and Lavrov said Moscow was “still hopeful that the US, as a proponent of the rule of law, will finally respect the international obligations.” However, he warned that “if this is not the case, if Washington decides not to solve this issue, we will have to take counter actions.” He did not elaborate.

Reuters (7/11, Solovyov, Macdonald) says Russia “toughened its rhetoric,” quoting Lavrov as saying, “The situation is outrageous. I believe that for such a great country like the United States of America, this advocate of international law, it’s just shameful to leave the situation in mid-air.”

US, Russian Envoys To Meet In Washington Next Week. Reuters (7/11) reports Undersecretary of State Thomas Shannon will meet with Russian Deputy Foreign Minister Sergei Ryabkov in Washington on Monday, State Department spokeswoman Heather Nauert said Tuesday. The AP (7/11, Lederman, Casert) notes that Russia “abruptly canceled the last scheduled meeting” between Shannon and Ryabkov in response to new sanctions imposed by the Administration announced last month. “Shannon has been hard at work as we have been trying to find areas that we could deal with some of these so-called irritants,” Nauert said. “And that meeting is set to happen here in Washington on Monday.” The Washington Post (7/11, DeYoung) reports the “high-level” meeting will be to discuss “so-called irritants” in the relationship, a term that “has been used in the past to describe diplomatic differences and sanctions.”

Antonov Expected To Become Next Russian Ambassador To US. Bloomberg News (7/11, Meyer, Arkhipov, Pismennaya) reports that Russia is planning to send Anatoly Antonov, “a veteran diplomat who’s blacklisted by the European Union over the Ukrainian crisis,” to be its new US ambassador, replacing Sergey Kislyak, according to “three officials familiar with the planning.”

House, Senate Democrats Exchange Blame Over Stalled Sanctions Bill. Politico (7/11, Schor, Caygle) reports Democrats “veered into internal sniping” on Tuesday over a stalled Russia sanctions bill. As House leaders “continued bipartisan talks over how to resolve concerns that are holding up the popular Senate-passed sanctions bill,” Democrats from both chambers “pointed fingers at each other over how they managed to miss an alteration that limited the power of the House minority to tie Trump’s hands on relations with Russia.”

McConnell Delays Senate Recess To Work On Healthcare, Other GOP Agenda Items.

Senate Majority Leader McConnell said Monday that he will cut the Senate’s August recess in half, delaying its start until the third week of August to give Republicans more time to pursue their legislative agenda, particularly healthcare. Coverage of McConnell’s decision is fairly pessimistic, however, with many reports highlighting the difficulty GOP leaders are having winning votes from the moderate and conservative wings of the caucus – and casting doubt on whether the GOP plan can ultimately pass.

The Washington Post (7/11, Snell, Sullivan, Eilperin) reports that while McConnell said Republicans need “more time to achieve its legislative goals given the protracted negotiations over health-care legislation and continued opposition from Democrats on several fronts,” the Post says work on the healthcare bill “remained uncertain Tuesday.” USA Today (7/11, Berry) says the Senate “has been under pressure to cancel recess to do more work.”

The Washington Times (7/11, Sherfinski) calls the cancellation “a seismic shift for lawmakers who treasure their time away from Washington,” adding that the decision came “after rank-and-file Republicans said they would be embarrassed to return home and face constituents without having made a bigger dent in their agenda." Roll Call (7/11, Lesniewski) reports that McConnell "criticized Democrats for slow-walking the pace of nominations and other legislative business." He said that "the fiscal 2018 defense authorization bill will be on the floor agenda after finishing up work on efforts to roll back the 2010 health care law. He also pointed to nomination votes."

The New York Post (7/11, Morrongiello) says the move, which "quickly drew praise from conservatives who had urged the GOP leader to delay the break until Republicans fulfill their promise to repeal and replace ObamaCare." Praise for the move was not universal among Republicans, however. Bloomberg News (7/11, Dennis, Litvan) reports that Sen. Lisa Murkowski "expressed frustration, though, saying she needs the time at home to meet with constituents and learn their priorities."

Reuters (7/11, Abutaleb, Cornwell) reports that McConnell said Tuesday "he would unveil a revised version" of the healthcare bill on Thursday, and "said he hoped to have a fresh analysis of the bill from the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office at the start of the week." McConnell "did not disclose any of the changes to legislation that some Republican moderates and hard-line conservatives have opposed."

The Hill (7/11, Sullivan) reports that senators "said the Medicaid sections of the bill would remain largely unchanged from the initial draft, a blow to moderates who had pushed for easing cuts to Medicaid." The Hill adds that while revisions to the Senate bill "are aimed at winning over additional support...it remains deeply in doubt whether the bill can get 50 votes."

The AP (7/11, Fram) reports that Senate Majority Whip Cornyn said Tuesday that the revised bill "will likely retain a pair of tax" increases – "one on investment income and another on the payroll tax that helps finance" Medicare – that former President Obama "imposed on wealthier Americans that have helped finance his law's expansion of coverage." Cornyn told reporters that preserving those taxes "seems to be where we're headed." Bloomberg News (7/11, Litvan, Dennis) says the two tax increases "generate nearly $231 billion in revenue over a decade, according to the Joint Committee on Taxation," and keeping them "could create a way to cover the costs of expanded Medicaid coverage for the poor or other programs demanded by holdout moderate Republicans." Bloomberg adds that the "reversal on tax cuts [is] aimed at winning over moderate holdouts," while the Wall Street Journal (7/11, A1, Peterson, Rubin) says that Republicans currently need at least eight more votes and are having difficulty winning over conservative and moderate members, whose concerns extend well beyond the tax cuts.

According to the New York Times (7/11, Kaplan, Pear), Republicans "appeared to be well short of the support needed to pass the legislation." To the Times, "a sense of pessimism was apparent among Senate Republicans after their return from break," and "deep divisions in their ranks...still posed a big obstacle to finding the votes to pass a revised bill." On MSNBC's Morning Joe (7/11), Sen. Bill Cassidy described "a continued divide," and added, "Hopefully the new bill will bridge that divide, If not, there may be another solution yet."

A New York Times (7/11, Singhvi, Parlapiano) analysis lays out "several major issues in the current draft" about which "at least a dozen senators have expressed concerns," while the Washington Post (7/11, Kane) says that "Republican after Republican outlines the reasons that they stand opposed to the legislation, as currently written, with almost no one taking up the mantle of defending a proposal that was unpopular from day one." Part of their "hesitation to directly promote their own health proposal is its uncertain fate, its unpopularity in repeated public polling and the sense that it might die on the Senate floor in what will be a politically embarrassing defeat for a party that promised to repeal the ACA the moment that Democrats approved it seven years ago." An AP (7/11, Werner) analysis says Republicans are in "a no-win situation" as success on healthcare legislation "could alienate a majority of the population," and "failure could anger the crucial group of GOP base voters the party relies on to build election victories."

Politico (7/11, Everett, Haberkorn) meanwhile, sees "a renewed sense of pessimism creeping into the Senate GOP's efforts to repeal Obamacare," as "tensions are rising" between McConnell's leadership team and the "ideological factions" of the GOP caucus. According to Politico, an amendment from Sens. Ted Cruz and Mike Lee "to allow the sale of cheap, deregulated insurance plans" is "fracturing the conference, with the measure taking center stage at the party's first caucus lunch in nearly two weeks on Tuesday." Kasie Hunt said on NBC Nightly News (7/11, story 5, 2:05, Holt) that "negotiations to get 50 GOP votes are still at a fever pitch." Republicans "can only lose two votes and the Cruz amendment is quickly splintering the party, alienating the moderates who worry it could drive up prices for sicker Americans."

□

Discussing the Senate efforts on Fox News' Fox & Friends (7/11), House Majority Leader McCarthy said, "I have high hopes that they get it done, send it over to this House, and let's solve this problem once and for all. Because every day that goes by, we have a new story. Just in the short amount of time since the House passed the bill, one more of those co-ops have collapsed. Nineteen out of 23 co-ops that were given $2 billion under Obamacare have now collapsed."

Pence Endorses Cruz's Amendment. Breitbart (7/10, Moran) reported that in an interview with radio host Rush Limbaugh, Vice President Pence "endorsed" the Cruz amendment. Pence said, "We're talking about people being able to go to a marketplace and to say, 'Look, if I want all the benefits that are listed here, some of which are certified by the state or even the federal government, I'll pay for that. If I don't want all of those benefits, I ought to be able to buy that as well.' That's ultimately a free market principle." Pence also "said that if the Senate cannot pass their healthcare bill, Republicans should push for a straight repeal and replace bill."

Graham Working On Alternative Healthcare Plan. The New York Post (7/11, Morrongiello) says that in a "stunning announcement," Sen. Lindsey Graham discussed "a parallel push by some Republicans to introduce a separate ObamaCare replacement bill with bipartisan appeal." Graham said details of the plan would likely be released in the "next 24 to 48 hours," which, the Post notes is "around the same time McConnell is set to unveil his own bill." Hunt said on NBC Nightly News (7/11, story 5, 2:05, Holt) that Graham is "talking about cracking a deal with Democrats."

Lee "Impressed" By Trump's Knowledge Of Healthcare. The Hill (7/11, Beavers) reports that on Tuesday, Sen. Mike Lee said during an interview that "he felt 'fairly impressed' by President Trump's knowledge of healthcare." Lee stated, "I was actually fairly impressed with how many details he did know." According to The Hill, Lee is opposed to the Senate's ACA repeal bill, and said "it is still not 'sufficiently conservative' to get his support."

House Committee Unveils Plan To Build Border Wall.

The AP (7/11, Taylor) reports that in a move that "again puts the Trump administration and its allies on Capitol Hill on a collision course with Democrats," the House Appropriations Committee on Tuesday "unveiled legislation to begin building President Donald Trump's long-promised wall along the US-Mexico border." But, Mexico "will not be footing the bill" and "the $1.6 billion down payment...will be added to the government's almost $20 trillion debt." The funding "is embedded in a $44 billion homeland security funding bill" released by the panel on Tuesday. An Appropriations subcommittee is expected to approve the measure Wednesday and "GOP leaders hope to pass [it] before adjourning for the August break."

The Washington Times (7/11, Dinan) reports that Democrats "have vowed to block any wall funding – even if it means sending the government into a partial shutdown." Politico (7/11, Bade, Kim) says that while Democrats "successfully pressured Republicans to keep out wall money from a funding bill earlier this year." Trump and OMB Director Mulvaney "have said they won't cave so readily this time – even if it means shutting down the government." Politico adds that "conservatives in the House are urging the administration to embrace the hardball strategy."

NYTimes A1 Analysis: Trump Deregulation Teams Have "Deep Industry Ties And Potential Conflicts."

A front-page analysis in the New York Times (7/11, A1, Ivory, Faturechi) reports that while President Trump "ordered his administration to assemble teams to aggressively scale back government regulations" within weeks of taking office, "the effort...is being conducted in large part out of public view and often by political appointees with deep industry ties and potential conflicts." The Times "and ProPublica identified 71 appointees, including 28 with potential conflicts, through interviews, public records and documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act." Appointees "include lawyers who have represented businesses in cases against government regulators, staff members of political dark money groups, employees of industry-funded organizations opposed to environmental rules and at least three people who were registered to lobby the agencies they now work for."

Pruitt Proposes Televised Climate Science Debate.

EPA Administrator Pruitt told Reuters (7/11, Volcovici) Monday in an interview that he would like to see climate scientists hold a televised debate, saying Americans would be "very interested in" it and that they "deserve" a "robust discussion." While acknowledging that the planet is warming, Pruitt said, "It is a question about how much we contribute to it," how to precisely measure it, whether humans are on an unsustainable path, and whether it is causing an existential threat. Regarding the US withdrawal from the Paris climate accord, Pruitt called it “a decision of courage and fortitude” that “truly represented an America First strategy.”

Coalition Of Cities And States Pledge To Uphold Paris Climate Agreement. The New York Times (7/11, Tabuchi, Friedman) reports that a coalition of 227 cities and counties, nine states, and 1,650 businesses and investors led by California Gov. Jerry Brown and former New York mayor Michael Bloomberg has pledged “to move forward collectively” to uphold the United States’ commitments to reduce the nation’s greenhouse gas emissions by 26 to 28 percent by 2025 under the 2015 Paris climate accord. The group, which “plans to work with outside experts to measure the effects of their pledges, and to announce an early tally at a United Nations climate conference this year,” is scheduled to outline further steps Wednesday. White House spokeswoman Kelly Love said the Administration “believes in cooperative federalism and therefore are supportive of states and cities making their own choices within their respective borders on climate change policy.”

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

“Donald Trump Jr., Makes The Russian Connection.” The New York Times (7/11) editorializes, “In language so blunt and obvious it would make a Hollywood screenwriter blush, the emails confirm what the president, his son and others have denied repeatedly for more than a year.” The President “was uncharacteristically subdued on social media,” but praised his son’s transparency. However, “transparency is one of the many things, along with credibility, that this administration lacks. So when Donald Trump Jr. claims that he’s released the ‘full email chain,’ the question has to be, what else are you hiding?”

“The Challenges After Mosul.” A New York Times (7/12, Board) editorial says Iraqi Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi and Iraqi security forces deserve “to celebrate after re-establishing control over Mosul,” but the “celebration should be brief” because stabilizing “Iraq and Syria while also working to counter ISIS’ insidious ideology” still demands “plenty of urgent work.” The Administration has not yet “put forward a comprehensive strategy to deal with postwar reconstruction in Mosul and other challenges,” in part because the White House is reportedly still “debating whether to get involved in Iraq’s long-term recovery,” and President Trump’s “proposal to greatly reduce the State Department aid budget would limit what America could do.” Ultimately, “Iraqis bear the primary responsibility for stabilizing their country,” the Times says, and it has already “squandered one opportunity to remake itself into a stable and pluralistic country.” Thus, the Times concludes, Iraq “should seize this second chance.”

Washington Post.

“The Russia Meddling Story Is No Longer Just Smoke. It’s Fire.” The Washington Post (7/11) editorializes, “There can now be no doubt: The Russia meddling story is not just smoke but fire. ... How long can the rest of the Republican Party prioritize partisanship and agenda over decency and patriotism?” Are Senate Majority Leader McConnell and House Speaker Ryan “really prepared to debase themselves in defense of a president whose closest advisers may have welcomed underhanded interference in America’s election from a hostile foreign power?”

“The Cancellation Of A New FBI Headquarters Is Illogical And Embarrassing.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (7/11) writes that the federal government’s decision Tuesday to cancel the project of a new FBI headquarters was “inexplicable, illogical and irresponsible” and “a colossal embarrassment for the United States to waste so much time, effort and money.” The Post argues that canceling the new headquarters merely postpones a necessary project that will only become more expensive. The Post concludes, “Blame Congress for playing games on appropriating funds for the project, rescinding $200 million in funding last month after having already appropriated less than half the agency’s 2017 budget request of $1.4 billion for the project. Blame the GSA for acting with next to no consultation with Congress, and with unconvincing explanations. ... And blame President Trump ... for heaping contempt on the agency, fueling suspicion of its motives and undercutting its political and public support.”

“The Pentagon Sends A Dispiriting Message To Its Transgender Troops.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (7/11, Board) writes that Defense Secretary Jim Mattis’ announcement late last month of a six-month delay to beginning processing openly transgender recruits in the military “sends a dispiriting message to the estimated 12,800 transgender personnel who currently serve the country." By questioning the effect of transgender soldiers on the "readiness and lethality of the force," Mattis' memorandum "undermines the service of thousands of veterans and current service members," "discourages potential recruits," and "leaves transgender troops who have come out of the closet in the past year unsure of their future."

Wall Street Journal.

"Keystone Kops Collusion." The Wall Street Journal (7/11) says in an editorial that the emails released by Donald Trump Jr. show farcical ineptitude, but that the main effect of the Russian hacking so far has been to hurt the Trump presidency.

"Why Xi Jinping Fears Liu Xiaobo." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (7/11) argues that Chinese President Xi Jinping's refusal to release imprisoned pro-democracy activist and Nobel Laureate Liu Xiaobo in order for him to seek treatment for late-stage liver cancer in Germany illustrates the Chinese government's fear that its most prominent dissident will tell the world of his abuse at the hands of his government during his 11 years in prison. This abuse included authorities' refusal to provide him follow-up treatment for his hepatitis, which very likely led to his liver cancer. The Journal concludes that Xiaobo deserves an opportunity before he dies to deliver his testimony.

"After Victory In Mosul." A Wall Street Journal (7/11) editorial calls the victory in Mosul a milestone in the fight against ISIS, and similarly warns that the hard-fought victory will be short-lived if Baghdad and the US repeat the mistakes they made after the "surge" of 2007-2008. The Journal urges the Administration to negotiate a modest US military presence that will remain in Iraq.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Email To Trump Jr. Says Clinton Info Was Part Of Moscow's Trump Support
Senate Delays August Recess As Health Bill's Fate Hangs In Balance
Google Pays Professors To Boost Washington Influence
One Game Warren Buffett Doesn't Play: Chicken

New York Times:

Russian Dirt On Clinton? 'I Love It,' Donald Trump Jr. Said
Rancor At White House As Russia Story Refuses To Let The Page Turn
Natalia Veselnitskaya, Lawyer Who Met Trump Jr., Seen As Fearsome Moscow Insider
The Deep Industry Ties Of Trump's Deregulation Teams
North Koreans In Russia Work 'Basically In The Situation Of Slaves'
Police Mourn Slain Officer, As Do The Bronx Residents She Served

Washington Post:

Backpage Contractor Created And Lured Sex Ads
Iraq Hails A Bitter Victory In Mosul
FDA Nod Could Clear Path For 'Living Drug'
Trump Jr. Emails Contradict Denials
A Russia Revelation Unlike Any Other
A Staff Under 'Category 5' Siege

Financial Times:

Paris And LA To Hold 2024 And 2028 Olympics
Trump Jr Welcomed Russian Offer To Damage Clinton
US Oil Exports Forecast To Top Most In OPEC By 2020
Snap Downgraded By Lead IPO Underwriter As Shares Fall

Washington Times:

Donald Trump Jr.'s Disclosure Of Emails Reignites Questions About Russian Dealings
Democrats Intentionally Used Disinformation From Russia To Attack Trump, Campaign Aides
McConnell Cancels Two Weeks Of Senate Recess, Blames Democrats' Obstruction Of Agenda
House Funding Bill Sets Up Shutdown Showdown Over Trump's Border Wall

Social Security Reform Grinds To A Halt On Capitol Hill After Trump's Pledge Not To Touch It
Maryland Attorney General Pushes Republican Bounds Of Lawsuits Against Trump

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Russia Meddling Investigation-Trump Jr Email; Russia Meddling Investigation-Russian Lawyer; Russia Meddling Investigation-Legality; Russia Meddling Investigation-Congress; Marine Cargo Plane Crash; San Francisco Airport-Close Call; NYC Fallen Officer; Philadelphia-Men Missing; Takata Airbag Recall; Florida-Water Rescue; MLB News; Cincinnati Zoo.

CBS: Russia Meddling Investigation-Trump Jr Email; Russia Meddling Investigation-WH; Russia Meddling Investigation-Congress; Russia Meddling Investigation-Legality; Russia Meddling Investigation-Sen. Warner Interview; Marine Cargo Plane Crash; USA Gymnastics-Sex Abuse Trial; Florida-Water Rescue.

NBC: Russia Meddling Investigation-Trump Jr Email; Russia Meddling Investigation-Russian Lawyer; Russia Meddling Investigation-Legality; Marine Cargo Plane Crash; Healthcare Reform Bill; NYC Fallen Officer; San Francisco Airport-Close Call; Olympic-Host Cities Announced; Florida-Water Rescue; Kermit The Frog-New Voice Actor; Lottery Winner Family Charity.

Network TV At A Glance:

Russia Meddling Investigation-Trump Jr Email – 31 minutes, 35 seconds

Marine Cargo Plane Crash – 5 minutes, 45 seconds

San Francisco Airport-Close Call – 3 minutes, 30 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Russia Meddling Investigation-Trump Jr Email; Marine Cargo Plane Crash; Healthcare Reform Bill.

CBS: Russia Meddling Investigation-Trump Jr Email; Joe Scarborough Leaves Republican Party; Marine Cargo Plane Crash; Wall Street News.

FOX: Russia Meddling Investigation-Trump Jr Email; Healthcare Reform Bill; Joe Scarborough Leaves Republican Party; Marine Cargo Plane Crash.

NPR: Russia Meddling Investigation-Trump Jr Email; Marine Cargo Plane Crash; Gaza-Living Conditions; Minor League News.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — No public schedule announced.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Delivers remarks at the National Student Leadership Conference; delivers remarks at Bryant's Rent-All.

US Senate: 9:30 AM Senate Aging Committee hearing on nutrition – Hearing on 'Nourishing our Golden Years: How Proper and Adequate Nutrition Promotes Healthy Aging and Positive Outcomes', with testimony from Duke University School of Medicine Professor Dr Connie Bales; Harvard Medical School Assistant Professor of Medicine Seth Berkowitz; Maine SNAP-Ed at the University of New England Program Manager Elizabeth Pratt; and retired healthcare worker Pat Taylor Location: Rm 562, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://aging.senate.gov/>

9:30 AM Senate Judiciary Committee considers FBI director nominee – Nominations hearing considers Christopher Wray to be FBI Director * President Donald Trump nominated the former Department of Justice official last month, having fired James Comey as director the month before – a move that led to controversy after the DoJ cited Comey's handling of a probe into former Secretary of State and Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton's use of a private email server, only for his termination letter to mention the agency's probe into contacts between Russia and the Trump campaign * Wray previously worked as personal attorney for New Jersey Governor Chris Christie during his 'Bridgagate' scandal Location: Rm 226, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

9:30 AM Senate Appropriations subcommittee hearing on FY'18 Indian Health Service budget – Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies Subcommittee hearing 'To review the FY2018 budget request for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Indian Health Service', with testimony from IHS Acting Director Rear Adm. Michael Weahkee, Deputy Director Rear Adm. Chris Buchanan, Medical Director Capt. Michael Toedt, and Deputy Director for Management Operations Elizabeth Fowler Location: Rm 124, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg,

Washington, DC <http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

9:30 AM Senate Armed Services Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers David Trachtenberg to be Principal Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Policy; Owen West to be Assistant Secretary of Defense for Special Operations and Low-Intensity Conflict; Ryan McCarthy to be Under Secretary of the Army; and Charles Stimson to be Department of the Navy General Counsel Location: Rm G50, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://armed-services.senate.gov/>

9:45 AM Senate Environment and Public Works Committee Business Meeting – Business Meeting, with agenda including nominations of Annie Caputo and David Wright to be Nuclear Regulatory Commission members; and Susan Parker Bodine to be Environmental Protection Agency Assistant Administrator for Enforcement and Compliance Assurance, plus consideration of 'S. 1447, the Diesel Emissions Reduction Act of 2017', 'S. 1359, John F. Kennedy Center Reauthorization Act of 2017', 'S. 1395, a bill to revise the boundaries of certain John H. Chafee Coastal Barrier Resources System units in Delaware', five General Services Administration resolutions, and substitute amendments to 'S. 822, the Brownfields Utilization, Investment, and Local Development Act of 2017' and to 'S. 810, a bill to facilitate construction of a bridge on certain property in Christian County, Missouri, and for other purposes' * Held immediately before the later hearing Location: Rm 406, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

10:00 AM Senate Foreign Relations Committee Business Meeting, hearing on the Taylor Force Act – Business Meeting, with agenda including consideration of nomination of Mark Andrew Green to be USAID Administrator * Immediately followed by Hearing on 'Consideration of the Taylor Force Act', with testimony from Council on Foreign Relations Senior Fellow for Middle Eastern Studies Elliott Abrams * Taylor Force Act would stop U.S. aid payments to the Palestinian Authority until the PM has 'terminated payments for acts of terrorism against U.S. and Israeli citizens to any individual who has been convicted and imprisoned for such acts, to any individual who died committing such acts, and to family members of such an individual', as is named after a former U.S. Army officer killed in March 2016 Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM POSTPONED: Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing on security sector assistance and foreign policy – POSTPONED: Hearing on 'Managing Security Sector Assistance to Support Foreign Policy', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of State for Political-Military Affairs Tina Kaidanow; and Defense Security Cooperation Agency Director Vice Adm. Joseph Rixey Location: S-216, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Public Works Committee hearing on infrastructure financing – Hearing on 'The Use of TIFIA and Innovative Financing in Improving Infrastructure to Enhance Safety, Mobility, and Economic Opportunity', with testimony from Riverside County Transportation Commission (CA) Executive Director Anne Mayer; Transurban North America Group General Manager Jennifer Aument; and Smart Growth America Vice President for Real Estate Policy and External Affairs Christopher Coes * Held immediately after the earlier business meeting Location: Rm 406, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

10:00 AM Joint Economic Committee hearing on job vacancies – Hearing on 'A Record Six Million U.S. Job Vacancies: Reasons and Remedies', with testimony from Manhattan Institute Economics21 Program Director Diana Furchtgott-Roth; Columbus State Community College President Dr David Harrison; Honda North America Technical Workforce Development Manager Scot McLemore; and University of Michigan Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy Associate Professor Dr Betsey Stevenson Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC www.jec.senate.gov <https://twitter.com/JointEconCmte>

10:00 AM Senate Transportation Committee hearing on 'how transportation stakeholders are combating human trafficking' – Hearing on 'Force Multipliers: How Transportation and Supply Chain Stakeholders are Combatting Human Trafficking', with testimony from Truckers Against Trafficking Coalition Building Specialist Esther Goetsch; Issara Institute Technology Solutions to Trafficking in Global Supply Chains Technical Consultant Samir Goswami; and Polaris Director of Government Relations and Public Policy Keeli Sorensen Location: Rm 253, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

2:15 PM Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee third hearing on U.S. leadership in the Asia-Pacific – East Asia, The Pacific, and International Cybersecurity Policy Subcommittee hearing on 'American Leadership in the Asia Pacific, Part 3: Promoting Democracy, Human Rights, and the Rule of Law', with testimony from Center for Strategic and International Studies Korea Chair Robert King, and Southeast Asia Program Deputy Director Murray Hiebert; and U.S. Institute of Peace Asia Center Senior Advisor Derek Mitchell Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg,

Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Senate Appropriations subcommittee marks up FY'18 Military Construction / Veterans Affairs bill – Military Construction, Veteran Affairs, and Related Agencies Subcommittee markup hearing on Fiscal Year 2018 appropriations bill Location: Rm 124, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

2:30 PM Senate Judiciary subcommittee hearing on visa overstays – Border Security and Immigration Subcommittee hearing on 'Examining the Problem of Visa Overstays: A Need for Better Tracking and Accountability', with testimony from Department of Homeland Security Inspector General John Roth; Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security for Border, Immigration, and Trade Michael Dougherty; Customs and Border Protection Office of Field Operations Deputy Executive Assistant Commissioner John Wagner; and Immigrations and Customs Enforcement Homeland Security Investigations National Security Investigations Division Deputy Assistant Director Louis Rodi Location: Rm 226, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Senate Indian Affairs Committee legislative hearing – Legislative hearing on 'S. 943, A bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior to conduct an accurate comprehensive student count for the purposes of calculating formula allocations for programs under the Johnson-O'Malley Act, and for other purposes', 'S. 1223, A bill to repeal the Klamath Tribe Judgment Fund Act', and 'S. 1285, A bill to allow the Confederated Tribes of Coos, Lower Umpqua, and Siuslaw Indians, the Confederated Tribes of the Grand Ronde Community of Oregon, the Confederated Tribes of Siletz Indians of Oregon, the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, and the Cow Creek Band of Umpqua Tribe of Indians to lease or transfer certain lands', with testimony from Bureau of Indian Education Director Tony Dearman; Confederated Tribes of Coos, Lower Umpqua and Siuslaw Indians Chief Warren Brainard; Native American Rights Fund Senior Attorney Don Wharton; and National Johnson-O'Malley Association President Carla Mann Location: Rm 628, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

US House: 8:30 AM Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on Tibet – Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on 'Tibet: Freedom of Religion', with witnesses – U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom Commissioner Dr Tenzin Dorjee, Tibetan Mongolian Buddhist Cultural Center Director Arjia Rinpoche, deceased monk Tenzin Delek Rinpoche's niece and family spokeswoman Nyima Lhamo, and former Under Secretary of State for Civilian Security, Democracy and Human Rights and Special Coordinator for Tibetan Issues' Senior Advisor Todd Stein – describing the conditions of religious life for Tibetans, sharing their experiences with restrictions on religious freedom and related human rights, analyzing the potential political and strategic consequences of continued repression of Tibetans, and offering recommendations for U.S. Govt policy Location: Rm 2255, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://tlhrc.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/TLHRCommission>

10:00 AM House Judiciary Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H.R. 469, Sunshine for Regulations and Regulatory Decrees and Settlements Act' and 'H.R. 2851, Stop the Importation and Trafficking of Synthetic Analogues Act' Location: Rm 2141, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

10:00 AM Fed Chair Yellen presents Monetary Policy Report to House Financial Services Committee – House Committee on Financial Services hearing on 'Monetary Policy and the State of the Economy', with testimony from Federal Reserve Board Chair Janet Yellen, presenting her semi-annual Monetary Policy Report to Congress and discussing the state of the economy Location: Rm 2128, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.federalreserve.gov> <https://twitter.com/federalreserve>

10:00 AM Oversight hearing on 'Care Where It Counts: Assessing VA's Capital Asset Needs' Location: Rm 334, Cannon House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources subcommittee oversight hearing on federal offshore oil and gas development on the OCS – Energy and Mineral Resources Subcommittee oversight hearing on 'Evaluating Federal Offshore Oil and Gas Development on the Outer Continental Shelf', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Land and Minerals Management Katharine MacGregor; University of South Carolina School of the Earth, Ocean, & Environment Professor Dr James Knapp; Consumer Energy Alliance Executive Vice President Michael Whatley; Stop Offshore Drilling in the Atlantic founder Margaret Howell; and Louisiana Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association Offshore Committee Director Lori LeBlanc Location: Rm 1324, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on combating the opioid crisis –

Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee hearing on 'Combating the Opioid Crisis: Battles in the States', with testimony from Rhode Island Department of Behavioral Healthcare, Developmental Disabilities and Hospitals Director Rebecca Boss; Virginia Secretary of Public Safety and Homeland Security Brian Moran; Maryland Lieutenant Governor Boyd Rutherford; and Kentucky Secretary of the Justice and Public Safety Cabinet John Tilley Location: Rm 2123, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM Hearing on 'The Next Farm Bill: Technology & Innovation in Specialty Crops' Location: Rm 1300, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://agriculture.house.gov/>

10:00 AM House Technology subcommittee hearing on 'fire grant programs' – Research and Technology Subcommittee hearing on 'U.S. Fire Administration and Fire Grant Programs Reauthorization: Examining Effectiveness and Priorities', with testimony from U.S. Fire Administration Acting Administrator Dr Denis Onieal; International Association of Fire Chiefs President and Chair of the Board John Sinclair; Fairfax County (VA) Professional Fire Fighters and Paramedics – International Association of Fire Fighters Local 2068 President John Niemiec; National Volunteer Fire Council First Vice Chair Steve Hirsch; Illinois Fire Service Institute Research Program Director Dr Gavin Horn; and National Association of State Fire Marshalls President Butch Browning, Jr. Location: Rm 2318, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM Joint Economic Committee hearing on job vacancies – Hearing on 'A Record Six Million U.S. Job Vacancies: Reasons and Remedies', with testimony from Manhattan Institute Economics21 Program Director Diana Furchtgott-Roth; Columbus State Community College President Dr David Harrison; Honda North America Technical Workforce Development Manager Scot McLemore; and University of Michigan Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy Associate Professor Dr Betsey Stevenson Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC www.jec.senate.gov
<https://twitter.com/JointEconCmte>

10:00 AM House Infrastructure subcommittee hearing on FASTA implementation – Economic Development, Public Buildings, and Emergency Management Subcommittee hearing on 'Implementing the Federal Assets Sale and Transfer Act (FASTA): Maximizing Taxpayer Returns and Reducing Waste in Real Estate', with testimony from General Services Administration Acting Administrator Tim Horne; Department of Veterans Affairs Capital Asset Management Service Director Brett Simms; Office of Pittsburgh Mayor William Peduto Chief of Staff Kevin Acklin; and Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington Vice-Chair Richard Painter Location: Rm 2167, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://transportation.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/Transport>

10:00 AM House Foreign Affairs Committee hearing on 'Beyond Microfinance: Empowering Women in the Developing World' – Hearing on 'Beyond Microfinance: Empowering Women in the Developing World', with testimony from Women's World Banking President and CEO Mary Ellen Iskenderian; Massachusetts Institute of Technology Sloan School of Management Associate Professor of Applied Economics Dr Tavneet Suri; and Georgetown University Institute for Women, Peace and Security Executive Director Melanne Vermeer Location: Rm 2172, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

10:15 AM House Workforce Committee hearing on redefining joint employer standards – Hearing on 'Redefining Joint Employer Standards: Barriers to Job Creation and Entrepreneurship', with testimony from Boston University School of Law Professor Michael Harper; FedEx Ground Vice President Richard Heiser; HR Policy Association Senior Labor and Employment Counsel Roger King; DD Franchise Director of Franchise Development Jerry Reese II (on behalf of International Franchise Association); National Employment Law Project General Counsel and Program Director Catherine Ruckelshaus; and Dwyer Group COO Mary Kennedy Thompson (on behalf of International Franchise Association) Location: Rm 2175, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

10:15 AM Health Subcommittee hearing on 'Examining Medical Product Manufacturer Communications' Location: Rm 2322, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:30 AM House Appropriations Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'FY 2018 Agriculture Appropriations Bill' and 'FY 2018 Energy and Water Development Appropriations Bill' Location: Rm 2359, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee hearing on SBA Office of the CIO – Hearing on 'Help or Hindrance? A Review of SBA's Office of the Chief Information Officer', with testimony from SBA CIO Maria Roat Location: Rm 2360, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC

<http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

12:00 PM House meets for legislative business – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda for the week including ‘H.R. 23 – Gaining Responsibility on Water Act of 2017’, ‘H.R. 2810 – National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2018’, and consideration of ‘H.R. 2664 – Enhancing Detection of Human Trafficking Act’, ‘H.R. 2200 – Frederick Douglass Trafficking Victims Prevention and Protection Reauthorization Act of 2017’, as amended, and ‘H.R. 2480 – Empowering Law Enforcement to Fight Sex Trafficking Demand Act’ under suspension of the rules Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

1:00 PM House Veterans’ Affairs subcommittee markup hearing – Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee markup hearing on ‘H.R. 2006, VA Procurement Efficiency and Transparency Act’, ‘H.R. 2749, Protecting Business Opportunities for Veterans Act of 2017’, ‘H.R. 2781, Ensuring Veteran Enterprise Participation in Strategic Sourcing Act’, and ‘H.R. 3169, VA Acquisition Workforce Improvement and Streamlining Act’ Location: Rm 334, Cannon House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

2:00 PM House Veterans’ Affairs subcommittee markup hearing – Economic Opportunity Subcommittee markup hearing on ‘H.R. 282, Military Residency Choice Act’, ‘H.R. 1690, Department of Veterans Affairs Bonus Transparency Act’, and ‘H.R. 2772, VA Senior Executive Accountability Act’ (‘SEA Act’) Location: Rm 334, Cannon House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on FY’18 budget for ‘advancing U.S. interests in the Western Hemisphere’ – Western Hemisphere Subcommittee hearing on ‘Advancing U.S. Interests in the Western Hemisphere: The FY 2018 Budget Request’, with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of State for Western Hemisphere Affairs Francisco Palmieri; and USAID Acting Assistant Administrator for Latin America and the Caribbean Sarah-Ann Lynch Location: Rm 2172, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

2:00 PM House Government Reform subcommittees joint hearing on GSA acquisition – Government Operations Subcommittee and Information Technology Subcommittee joint hearing on ‘General Services Administration – Acquisition Oversight and Reform’ Location: Rm 2154, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

2:00 PM House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on regulatory relief for community financial institutions – Financial Institutions and Consumer Credit Subcommittee hearing on ‘Examining Legislative Proposals to Provide Targeted Regulatory Relief to Community Financial Institutions’, with testimony from Tioga State Bank President and CEO Robert Fisher (on behalf of Independent Community Bankers of America); River Region Credit Union President and CEO Rick Nichols (on behalf of Missouri Credit Union Association); Center for Responsible Lending Director of Federal Advocacy Scott Astrada; and George Mason University School of Law Associate Professor J.W. Verret Location: Rm 2128, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

2:30 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on terrorism in Southeast Asia – Asia and the Pacific Subcommittee hearing on ‘Black Flags over Mindanao: Terrorism in Southeast Asia’, with testimony from Center for Strategic and International Studies Transnational Threats Project Director Thomas Sanderson; Counter Extremism Project Research Analyst Supna Zaidi Peery; University of Missouri Assistant Professor Dr Sheena Greitens; and Center for American Progress Senior Fellow Michael Fuchs Location: Rm 2200, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

3:00 PM Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies Subcommittee markup hearing on FY 2018 Appropriations Bill Location: Rm 2008, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

3:00 PM House Rules Committee hearing – Hearing on ‘H.R. 2810, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2018’ (amendment consideration) Location: H-313, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://www.rules.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/RulesReps>

3:00 PM Dem Reps. Eddie Bernice Johnson and Don Beyer host ‘National Security Implications of Climate Change’ roundtable – House Committee on Science, Space, and Technology Ranking Member Eddie Bernice Johnson and Vice-Ranking Member Don Beyer host roundtable on ‘Science and Policy Perspectives: National Security Implications of Climate Change’, featuring Pennsylvania State University Center for Solutions to Weather and Climate Risk Director (and former U.S. Navy Chief Oceanographer) Rear Adm. (Ret.) Dr David Titley, former Chief of Naval Operations’ Climate Change Task Force member Rear Adm. (Ret.) Ann Phillips, American Security Project CEO Brig. Gen. (Ret.) Stephen Cheney, former U.S.

Ambassador to Nigeria John Campbell, George Washington University Associate Professor of International Affairs Dr Marcus King, and former Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Environmental Security Sherri Goodman Location: Rm 340, Cannon House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://democrats.science.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SciCmteDems>

4:30 PM Homeland Security Subcommittee markup hearing on FY 2018 Appropriations Bill Location: Rm 2008, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

Other: 8:30 AM GOP Sen. Mike Lee speaks at AEI on federalism – Republican Sen. Mike Lee speaks at the American Enterprise Institute on localism and social capital, discussing why ‘federalism is key to restoring civic connectedness and faith in the American government’ Location: AEI, 1789 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.aei.org/> <https://twitter.com/AEI>

8:30 AM ‘The U.S. Global Food Security Strategy’ CSIS discussion – ‘The U.S. Global Food Security Strategy: Progress, Setbacks, and Forward Momentum’ Center for Strategic and International Studies discussion, with speakers including Democratic Sen. Bob Casey and The Lugar Center President (and former Sen.) Richard Lugar, followed by panel discussion featuring Overseas Private Investment Corporation Ag and Project Finance Director Bruce Cameron, Millennium Challenge Corporation Department of Compact Operations Sector Operations Deputy Vice President Lona Stoll, and USAID Bureau for Food Security Chief Scientist Robert Bertram Location: CSIS, 1616 Rhode Island Ave, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

9:30 AM Bipartisan Sens Tim Kaine and Jeff Flake speak on Congressional authorization at Wilson Center – ‘The War on ISIS: The Forgotten Need for Congressional Authorization’ Wilson Center Director’s Forum discussion, on ‘whether Congress is abdicating authority to authorize wars to the executive branch and the practical implications of the situation’. Participants include Democratic Sen. Tim Kaine and Republican Sen. Jeff Flake Location: Wilson Center, Ronald Reagan Bldg, 1300 Pennsylvania Ave, Washington, DC <http://www.wilsoncenter.org/> <https://twitter.com/TheWilsonCenter>

10:00 AM NPC Newsmaker on movement to elect more independents to public office – National Press Club Newsmaker news conference with Alaska Governor Bill Walker and elected officials from Alaska, Iowa, and Maine who were elected as independent candidates without the support of a political party, to discuss the movement to elect more independents to public office in 2018 and beyond. Participants include Iowa State Sen. David Johnson, Alaska State Rep. Jason Grenn, and Maine State Rep. Owen Casas Location: National Press Club, 529 14th St NW, Washington, DC <http://press.org/> <https://twitter.com/PressClubDC>

WITA/WITF Awards Dinner, aka ‘The Trade Prom’ – WITA/WITF Annual Awards Dinner, aka ‘The Trade Prom’ – joint event of the Washington International Trade Association and the Washington International Trade Foundation. Honorees include Democratic Rep. Rick Larsen and Republican Sen. Jeff Flake Location: Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center, 1300 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC www.wita.org #TradeProm

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: “Maybe the most interesting thing about the Trumps is anytime there’s a weird story, if you dig just a little bit deeper, it gets weirder.”

Jimmy Kimmel: “After Donald spent a year hammering Hillary about emails, he may finally get brought down by an email.”

Jimmy Kimmel: “And did you see Hillary Clinton today? So this afternoon Hillary Clinton made a short statement in front of a group of her supporters in upstate New York. ‘Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha.’”

Stephen Colbert: “Who could have predicted an email scandal would taint a presidential campaign?”

Stephen Colbert: “Sorry. I got a little cough because of this smoking gun. ... And just a reminder, these emails were leaked by Donald Trump Jr. He is his own Deep Throat. He is deep-throating himself. "

Stephen Colbert: "Naturally, when Don, Jr. learned that a hostile foreign power was trying to undermine our democracy, he immediately reported it to the FBI. Just kidding."

Stephen Colbert: "As a lawyer close to the case said, 'They're in the soup too.' Yup, they're all sharing a big old cup o' colludles."

Trevor Noah: "For a whole year, we have been wondering did the Trump campaign collude with the Russia to affect the US presidential election, and finally we have an answer. And I don't care which side you're on, we all wanted an answer for so long. For so long, everyone was, like, 'There is so much smoke but no fire. We're on the ground dying from smoke inhalation.'"

Trevor Noah: "Like it or not, people, this is a big blow to the President and his Administration because the question has changed now. It's no longer 'Was there collusion?' It's now 'How much collusion was there?' And all because of his own son. Donald Trump Jr. It's the first thing Trump regrets putting his name on. I bet you now he's going to have the name removed. Sorry, Jr., your new name is the 60 Riverside Drive."

Conan O'Brien: "Donald Trump Jr. released a series of emails showing he tried to collaborate with the Russians before the election. When he heard this, Donald Trump said, 'Good luck trying to connect me to Donald Trump Jr. because there's no way that's happening.'"

Conan O'Brien: "White House Chief of Staff Reince Priebus has dismissed the latest Trump-Russia story as, quote, 'a nothing burger.' When requested about his strange choice of words, he explained, 'My name is Reince Priebus, okay?'"

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, July 19, 2017
Date: Wednesday, July 19, 2017 7:00:19 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, JULY 19, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Fox News: Secretary Zinke On The All-American Outdoor Experience.
- The Hill: Committee Approves $31.4B Interior, EPA Spending Bill.
- WUSA-TV Washington: Secretary Of The Interior Ryan Zinke Addresses Chesapeake Bay Crabbing Concerns.
- Roseburg (OR) News-Review: Freeman, O&C Commissioners Meet With Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke.
- E&E Publishing: Deputy Nominee Still Advising Calif. Water District.
- Denver Post: ALEC, Western Conservatives Summit Converge On Downtown Denver This Week.
- Law360: Wyoming Looks To Defend Lift Of Federal Coal Moratorium.

- Yellowstone Insider: Hearing Scheduled For Yellowstone Gateway Protection Act.
- The Hill: Additional Coverage: Interior Department Canceled Climate Expert Meeting With Zuckerberg: Report.
- The Hill: Will Interior Secretary Zinke Live Up To Expectation On Oil And Gas?.
- Portland (ME) Press Herald: Maine Voices: Administration Needs To Heed Katahdin Woods And Waters Supporters.
- Huffington Post: Good Public-Lands Policies = Good Politics, Good Business.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Beloit Ho-Chunk Casino Proposal Gets A Boost.
- Feds' Assurances On Puget Sound Tribe's Reach Pleases Farm Group.
- Court Tosses Title IX Lawsuit Brought By Ex-Haskell Indian Nations Student.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Virginia (MN) Mesabi Daily Tribune: Land Withdrawal Battle Visits St. Paul, Without The Range.
- U.S. News & World Report: Skeletal Remains Found In Idaho Hundreds Of Years Old.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- McNerney Offers Delta Tunnels Alternative.
- Feds Work To Get Scoggins Dam Ready For The Big One.
- WaterFix Twin Tunnel Delta Plan Is The Only Answer.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- KYUK-TV Yukon-Kuskokwim Delta (AK): Proposal For Expanded Takeover Of Kuskokwim Fishery Fails.
- Arkansas Democrat Gazette: City, Groups Seek Dam Solution.

National Park Service

- Ste. Genevieve (MO) Herald: National Park Proposal In Senate Attached To Energy Bill.
- Reuters: Small U.S. Towns Brace For Rare Solar Eclipse, And Crowds, In August.
- Grand Canyon (AZ) News: Grand Canyon To Celebrate Latino Conservation Week With Free Event.
- Minneapolis Star Tribune: California Blaze Destroys 8 Structures Near Yosemite.
- Curbed Washington: Additional Coverage: D.C.'s Proposed WWI Memorial Gets Redesign.
- U.S. News & World Report: Additional Coverage: Nebraska Park Rangers Connect With Afghan Students.
- U.S. News & World Report: Additional Coverage: Tractor Belonging To Last Homesteader Finds Home In Nebraska.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- KUAM-TV Dededo (GUM): Federal Grant OK'd To Prevent Brown Tree Snake From Spreading.
- Breaking Defense: Senate OKs 'Indispensable' Palau Compact In NDAA.

US Geological Survey

- KDLT-TV Sioux Falls (SD): USGS Helps Create New Drought Monitor, Looks At Faster Moving Conditions.
- Big Island (HI) Now: USGS Map Reveals Geologic History Of Mauna Loa Volcano's NE Flank.

Top National News

- ABC: Media Analyses: Trump Frustrated And Angry Over Failure Of ACA Repeal Effort.
- Reuters: Trump Had Second Meeting With Putin At G20 Summit.
- ABC: Russian Developer Identified As Eighth Attendee At Trump Jr. Meeting.
- Wall Street Journal: Media Analyses: After Healthcare Defeat, Republicans Looking For Legislative Win With Tax Cut Plan.
- Associated Press: House Passes Bill Delaying Obama-Era Pollution Standards.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "The Trumpcare Bonfire."
 - "Louisiana's Big Step On Justice Reform."
 - "Chris Christie's No. 1 Fan."

- Washington Post.
 - "Liu Xiaobo's Widow Has Suffered More Than Enough. China Should Release Her From House Arrest."
 - "Trump's Voter-Fraud Commission Itself Is A Fraud."
 - "Republicans, Ignore Trump's Call To 'Let Obamacare Fail.' Do This Instead."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "The ObamaCare Republicans."
 - "California's Climate Cap And Spend."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Secretary Zinke On The All-American Outdoor Experience.

During an interview Tuesday on Fox News (7/18), Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said that he wants the country to "vacation American." Zinke said he is looking at "expanding opportunities in our parks." He wants "public/private partnerships to utilize innovation in the private market...to make sure we have a great experience."

Meanwhile, Alabama Live (7/18, Thornton) reports that the Interior Department on Tuesday was set to hold a "Made in America Outdoor Recreation Event." The event was to "display recreation products by American outdoor companies."

Committee Approves $31.4B Interior, EPA Spending Bill.

The Hill (7/18, Henry) reports that the House Appropriations Committee has "approved a bill to cut the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) funding by $528 million but reject several deep cuts sought by President Trump." The panel "voted 30-21 on Tuesday to send to the House floor its $31.4 billion funding bill for the EPA, the Interior Department and other programs." The article notes that "on the whole, the funding bill is worth $824 million less than current levels but $4.3 billion more than Trump's budget request."

House Budget Could Lead To Alaska Refuge Drilling. The Hill (7/18, Cama) reports the GOP budget proposal released by the House on Tuesday could result in oil and natural gas drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. The House Budget Committee is asking the Natural Resources Committee to reduce the government deficit by $5 billion over five years, which Democrats and environmentalists say would come from drilling revenues. Rep. John Yarmuth, the top Democrat on the Budget Committee, said Democrats may propose an amendment removing the ANWR provision.

Federal Spending Proposal Calls For Review Of Wolf Genetics. The AP (7/19) reports that "environmentalists are concerned that a proposed spending plan for the U.S. Interior Department calls for a study to determine whether Mexican gray wolves are a genetically distinct subspecies." According to the article, "a report accompanying the legislation suggests federal wildlife officials would be required to determine the validity of the Mexican wolves' designation as a subspecies of the gray wolf." Red wolves also would be reviewed.

Secretary Of The Interior Ryan Zinke Addresses Chesapeake Bay Crabbing Concerns.

In an interview with WUSA-TV Washington (7/18), Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke addressed environmental issues in the Chesapeake Bay. Zinke talked about the quality of water and crabbing concerns.

Freeman, O&C Commissioners Meet With Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke.

The Roseburg \(OR\) News-Review (7/18, Cegavske) reports that Douglas County Commissioner Tim Freeman met Sunday in Medford with Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "to discuss the future of O&C timberlands." Freeman, the president of the Association of O&C Counties, "and other members of that association met with Zinke to discuss the impact on their counties of the loss of shared revenue from federal timberlands formerly owned by the Oregon & California Railroad." According to Freeman, "their message was focused on what would happen to those counties if 40,000 acres of O&C lands were included in an expansion of the Cascade Siskiyou Monument."

Deputy Nominee Still Advising Calif. Water District.

E&E Publishing (7/18, Doyle) reports that "Interior Department nominee David Bernhardt has kept advising California's politically active Westlands Water District even after he withdrew his formal registration as a lobbyist last year." As the Senate "prepares for its first vote" Wednesday afternoon on "Bernhardt's nomination to serve as the department's deputy secretary, opponents are scrambling to uncover more documentary evidence of his ongoing private-sector work." According to the article, "through a series of state Public Records Act requests, environmental activists in California have already picked up some of Bernhardt's trail."

The Interior Department Is About To Become A Front Group For Oil And Gas. For the "Pundits" blog of The Hill (7/18, Mitchell, Contributor), Kelly Mitchell, the Climate Campaign director of Greenpeace USA, writes that "in its latest brazen move to give the middle finger to ethical standards, the Trump administration is trying to push through a nominee for deputy secretary at the Interior Department with enough conflicts of interest concerns to make ethics watchdogs short circuit." Mitchell warns that David Bernhardt, "darling lobbyist of the oil and gas industry who regularly sues the Interior Department on behalf of corporate clients, could be number two in command of protecting public lands and waters." Mitchell claims that "Bernhardt's career proves that his allegiance will remain with his extractive energy clients, not with everyday people." Mitchell calls on "every Senator who cares about protecting public lands and public waters for their communities and saving species that could disappear forever" to "reject David Bernhardt's nomination as deputy secretary of the Interior Department."

ALEC, Western Conservatives Summit Converge On Downtown Denver This Week.

The Denver Post (7/18, Eason) reports that Denver will host "a pair of high-powered political conferences at the Colorado Convention Center" this week. The bigger of "the two is the Centennial Institute's Western Conservative Summit, an annual gathering of conservative Christians from across the region," and "the other is the annual meeting of the American Legislative Exchange Council." The article notes that "the two events feature a star-studded cast of Colorado Republicans and national political figures, including former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, U.S. Education Secretary Betsy DeVos, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and U.S. Sen. Cory Gardner."

Wyoming Looks To Defend Lift Of Federal Coal Moratorium.

Law360 (7/18, Powell) reports that "the state of Wyoming pushed Tuesday to step into a challenge to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's decision to lift the moratorium on the federal coal-leasing program imposed last year so that it can defend against seeing the freeze reinstated." Wyoming "moved to intervene in a case in which the states of California, New York, New Mexico and Washington allege that the federal government flouted the National Environmental Policy Act."

Hearing Scheduled For Yellowstone Gateway Protection Act.

Yellowstone Insider (7/18, Reichard) reports that "officials have scheduled a hearing for the Yellowstone Gateway Protection Act," sponsored by Sen. Jon Tester." The legislation "aims to ban new mining claims on 30,000 acres of public land in the Paradise Valley, just north of Yellowstone National Park. The hearing will be held "next Wednesday and be heard by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Subcommittee on Public Lands, Forests and Mining."

Additional Coerage: Interior Department Canceled Climate Expert Meeting With Zuckerberg: Report.

Additional coverage that the Interior Department "canceled plans for a climate change expert from the United States Geological Survey to join Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg during his visit to Montana's Glacier National Park last weekend" was provided by The Hill (7/18, Greenwood), the Washington \(DC\) Post (7/18, Rein), the New York Daily News (7/18, Hensley), and Raw Story (7/18, Brigham).

Will Interior Secretary Zinke Live Up To Expectation On Oil And Gas?.

In a column for The Hill (7/18, Alexander, Contributor), Taxpayers For Common Sense President

Ryan Alexander writes that “after only four months,” Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “has not wasted any time issuing 10 secretarial orders, considering more than a dozen rule changes and posting almost 300 notices.” However, Alexander argues, “the challenge and opportunity at the Department of Interior is tackling the well-documented shortcomings of our nation’s energy and mineral management programs.” Alexander points out that the Government Accountability Office “has issued dozens of reports on the department’s oil and gas portfolio alone, detailing problems with general oversight of onshore and offshore oil and gas production, production volume verification, liabilities, permit processing, bonding, royalty rates, general revenue, natural gas emissions and more.” Alexander writes that “Zinke has voiced support for managing oil, gas, coal and other natural resources with taxpayers in mind.”

Maine Voices: Administration Needs To Heed Katahdin Woods And Waters Supporters.

In a piece for the Portland \(ME\) Press Herald (7/19, Pohlmann), Lisa Pohlmann writes that public comments on the review of national monuments “reveal nearly unanimous endorsement of Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument.” According to Pohlmann, “reading the comments, it is clear that the vast majority of people see Katahdin Woods and Waters as good news for the region, for Maine and for the nation.” Pohlmann hopes that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and President Trump will “acknowledge the overwhelming support and heed the wishes of the vast majority of Americans and protect this gift to our nation forever.”

Good Public-Lands Policies = Good Politics, Good Business.

In a piece for the Huffington Post (7/18, Kurzel, Contributor), Brian Kurzel, Executive director of the National Wildlife Federation Rocky Mountain Regional Center, writes that Utah lost the “prestigious Outdoor Retailer shows to Colorado from Utah after attempts by a vocal minority to dismantle our country’s public-lands heritage.” Kurzel says “the outdoor recreation industry understandably sees hostility toward public lands as bad business.” According to Kurzel, “Colorado leaders understand that public lands, wildlife and outdoor recreation are integral to the state’s prosperity and quality of life.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Beloit Ho-Chunk Casino Proposal Gets A Boost.

The Beloit \(WI\) Daily News (7/18, Montgomery) reports that “interests from the federal, state and local level to bring a Ho-Chunk Nation casino to Beloit are hailing progress on the plan following a meeting last week” with the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Officials on Monday said “the project is set to be decided by the BIA within two years, and if approved would head to Gov. Scott Walker for final approval or denial.” According to the article, “parties involved in the process believe Beloit’s plan could get favorable BIA review due to strong support in the city and public need due to Beloit’s high unemployment and poverty rates.”

Feds’ Assurances On Puget Sound Tribe’s Reach Pleases Farm Group.

The Salem \(OR\) Capital Press (7/18, Jenkins) reports that “a Washington farm group says it’s relieved federal officials have made clear that a north Puget Sound tribe’s new constitution doesn’t expand the tribe’s jurisdiction to privately owned farmland, a concern that the tribe’s chairman says was overblown.” The Interior Department “approved July 7 a proposal by the Swinomish Indian tribe to delete references in its constitution to reservation boundaries set in 1873.” Bureau of Indian Affairs Northwest director Stanley Speaks “told the tribe in a letter that the constitutional amendment won’t expand the tribe’s territory.” The letter “responded to concerns of farmers, homeowners, businesses and Skagit County commissioners that the tribe would use the new description of its authority to gain control over land outside its 7,000-acre reservation.”

Court Tosses Title IX Lawsuit Brought By Ex-Haskell Indian Nations Student.

KCUR-FM Kansas City, MO (7/18, Margolies) reports that “a federal judge has dismissed the lawsuit of a former Haskell Indian Nations University student who says she was raped by two of the school’s football players.” The order by U.S. District Judge J. Thomas Marten held “that the government and university were immune from damages under the doctrine of sovereign immunity and that the ex-student had other remedies against the employees.” Marten did, however, “allow her to amend her lawsuit to sue the government for violating the Privacy Act, which regulates the collection and use of personal information by federal agencies.”

Bureau Of Land Management

Land Withdrawal Battle Visits St. Paul, Without The Range.

The Virginia \(MN\) Mesabi Daily Tribune (7/18, Burnes) reports that “Iron Range business, labor and community groups followed through of their boycott of a U.S. Forest Service hearing on a federal land mining moratorium near the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness on Tuesday in St. Paul.” Instead, they “focused their energy toward the second Forest Service hearing, which is slated for July 25 in Virginia.” Also, “in boycotting, a group of 17 organizations wrote an open letter to the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management, published online and in a full page ad in the Star Tribune on Tuesday.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Minneapolis Star Tribune (7/18, Smith) and the Duluth \(MN\) News Tribune (7/18, Davis).

Skeletal Remains Found In Idaho Hundreds Of Years Old.

The AP (7/18) reports that “authorities say human bones found protruding from a badger hole in southwestern Idaho are hundreds of years old and not connected to a crime.” The remains were found “in April in high desert sagebrush steppe by state fish and game workers who stumbled across the bones while out on a routine patrol.” The remains have been turned over to the Bureau of Land Management. Lara Douglas, the bureau’s regional manager, “says BLM will work with Indian tribes claiming the bones to determine what the next appropriate steps would be.”

Bureau Of Reclamation

McNerney Offers Delta Tunnels Alternative.

The Lodi \(CA\) News-Sentinel (7/18, Bays) reports that Rep. Jerry McNerney is wasset to bring a bill before Congress Tuesday “to propose an alternative to the California WaterFix tunnels, also known as the Twin Tunnels, proposed in the Delta.” McNerney “voiced his opposition to WaterFix, stating that the environmental risks associated with construction of the project outweigh the predicted benefits, stressing the need for an alternative that encourages different regions in California to supply their own water.” His bill, “which he estimates will cost around $12 million, will be largely funded by reducing tax breaks for the oil and natural gas industries, specifically for expenses incurred at wells that do not produce oil or gas.”

Feds Work To Get Scoggins Dam Ready For The Big One.

KOIN-TV Portland, OR (7/18, Becker) reports that “the federal government will begin work next week to determine the best way to improve the earthquake resistance of Scoggins Dam in Washington County.” The dam was “built in the 1970s, and so not designed to withstand intense earthquakes.”

WaterFix Twin Tunnel Delta Plan Is The Only Answer.

In an op-ed for the San Jose \(CA\) Mercury News (7/18, Gordon), Dan Gordon, CEO of Gordon Biersch warns that “without upgrades to improve our water delivery infrastructure and to better protect the Delta environment, our region’s water supply is at risk.” Biersch argues that the California WaterFix is “the only viable plan to upgrade the water delivery infrastructure that is so vital to our region.” He adds that California WaterFix is “the only plan supported by leading environmental scientists and water experts, in addition to farmers, community groups, businesses, labor unions, water agencies, engineers and public safety leaders.” Biersch concludes that “it’s time to move WaterFix from planning to construction.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

Proposal For Expanded Takeover Of Kuskokwim Fishery Fails.

KYUK-TV Yukon-Kuskokwim Delta, AK (7/18, Eurich) reports that the Federal Subsistence Board has “turned down a proposal to take over fisheries management authority on the Kuskokwim River.” According to the article, “board members cited two reasons for opposing the proposal from Dave Cannon, a former biologist from Aniak." The article says that "in a vote of seven to one, the Federal Subsistence Board asserted its support of existing management."

City, Groups Seek Dam Solution.

The Arkansas Democrat Gazette (7/18, Gute) reports that "removing the Lake Bella Vista dam would improve water quality, restore the ecological system and cost less than rebuilding it, according to a biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service." Melissa Lombardi "spoke Monday with David Wright, Bentonville Parks and Recreation director; Erin Rushing, executive director of NWA Trailblazers; and six members of the Friends of Little Sugar Creek." According to the article, "Lombardi's presentation included seven possible government funding sources for dam removal."

National Park Service

National Park Proposal In Senate Attached To Energy Bill.

The Ste. Genevieve \(MO\) Herald (7/18) reports that "the proposal that would allow the National Park Service to designate a national historical park in Ste. Genevieve has become part of an 891-page bill known as the Energy and Natural Resources Act of 2017." The proposal would "eventually allow the National Park Service to manage two historic properties on St. Mary's Road — the Bauvais-Amoureux House, owned by the Missouri Department of Natural Resources and operated by Missouri State Parks, and the Bequette-Ribault House, which is owned by Chaumette, Inc. — as well as the Kern-Delassus House on Highway 61."

Small U.S. Towns Brace For Rare Solar Eclipse, And Crowds, In August.

Reuters (7/18, Saphir) reports that Grand Teton National Park is preparing "the first total solar eclipse in the lower 48 U.S. states since 1979" as "kind of like a fire," according to Denise Germann, a public information officer at Grand Teton National Park. The article says that "the 480-square-mile park's campsites are completely booked, and it expects visitors to pour in from all over, including the bigger Yellowstone National Park, just north of the path of totality." The park will "waive its $30 entry fee to keep traffic from backing up."

Grand Canyon To Celebrate Latino Conservation Week With Free Event.

Grand Canyon \(AZ\) News (7/18) reports that Grand Canyon National Park is "inviting Latino families and youth to visit the park and explore their public lands during Latino Conservation Week July 17-21." Grand Canyon's Latino Heritage Intern Aileen Palma "said hosting an event to encourage the Latino community to engage with National Parks and public lands is an important step in promoting preservation and stewardship." She said, "By providing ranger programs in Spanish, we are not only increasing Grand Canyon's educational outreach but also creating an environment where Latinos feel welcomed and engaged."

California Blaze Destroys 8 Structures Near Yosemite.

The AP (7/18, SMITH, SONNER) reports that "as wildfires rage throughout the western U.S., one California blaze in the rugged mountains outside of Yosemite National Park destroyed eight structures and forced thousands of nearby residents to flee their homes." The Northern California blaze is "threatening at least 1,500 homes as well as powerlines that provide electricity to the park, officials said." The park was "open Tuesday but several roads frequented by tourists were closed."

Additional Coverage: D.C.'s Proposed WWI Memorial Gets Redesign.

Additional coverage that the National Capital Planning Commission last Friday "reviewed the most updated proposal for the planned WWI Memorial at Downtown's 1.75-acre Pershing Park" was provided by the Curbed Washington (7/18, Goldchain).

Additional Coverage: Nebraska Park Rangers Connect With Afghan Students.

Additional coverage that rangers in Scotts Bluff National Monument are "connecting with students in Afghanistan via the internet as a learning opportunity" was provided by the AP (7/18).

Additional Coverage: Tractor Belonging To Last Homesteader Finds Home In Nebraska.

Additional coverage that "a tractor that belonged to the last homesteader under the Homestead Act of 1862 has found a new home in Nebraska at the Homestead National Monument of America near Beatrice" was provided by the AP (7/18).

Office Of Insular Affairs

Federal Grant OK'd To Prevent Brown Tree Snake From Spreading.

KUAM-TV Dededo, GUM (7/17, Licanto) reports that the Office of Insular Affairs will distribute "$3.5 million to prevent" the brown tree snake "from spreading to Hawaii, the Northern Marianas and Micronesia." The money is "part of a broader DOI effort to combat invasive species in the region." Interior "says the brown tree snake is one of the most widely-known damaging pests."

Senate OKs 'Indispensable' Palau Compact In NDAA.

In a piece for Breaking Defense (7/17, Clark), Colin Clark writes that Sen. John McCain's Senate Armed Services Committee has approved the Palau Compact language in the 2018 National Defense Authorization Act. Clark supports making payments to Palau, because "if the Pacific is the most important theater, then the islands of Palau are surely among the most important pieces of real estate for the US."

US Geological Survey

USGS Helps Create New Drought Monitor, Looks At Faster Moving Conditions.

KDLT-TV Sioux Falls, SD (7/18, Johnson) reports that "South Dakota and much of the Northern Great Plains are going through a drought," and "while federal and state agencies rely on the U.S. Drought Monitor to manage those conditions, the US. Geological Survey's Center is developing a new system to help them see and respond to changes faster." The center has been "working with the University of Nebraska to develop a new drought monitoring system." According to the article, "the 'Quick Drought Response Index' or 'QuickDRI' became operational in June."

USGS Map Reveals Geologic History Of Mauna Loa Volcano's NE Flank.

Big Island \(HI\) Now (7/18) reports that "the new 'Geologic map of the northeast flank of Mauna Loa volcano, Island of Hawai'i,' the culmination of many years of work by Hawaiian Volcano Observatory (HVO) geologists, was recently published by the U.S. Geological Survey."

Top National News

Media Analyses: Trump Frustrated And Angry Over Failure Of ACA Repeal Effort.

Coverage of what multiple reports call the "collapse" of Republican efforts to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act, and of President Trump's frustration over the failure, portray the GOP as in disarray over its inability to act on a longtime priority. Several analyses contrast Trump's campaign assertion that killing the ACA would be easy, and his portrayal of himself as a deal-maker, with the difficulties he has faced in advancing the legislation. On Capitol Hill, Senate Majority Leader McConnell's plan for a clean repeal vote is already being called "dead" due to opposition from several Republicans.

David Muir said in the lead story on ABC World News Tonight (7/18, lead story, 3:50) that the President was "visibly frustrated and disappointed," with "one of his major campaign promises...dead after members of his own party blindsided him. He is lashing out tonight, saying he's heard for seven years that his party vowed to repeal and replace Obamacare, and they didn't; and his newest salvo: Let Obamacare fail." On the CBS Evening News (7/18, story 2, 1:50, Mason), Chip Reid reported, "President Trump interrupted a lunch with Afghan war veterans to vent his frustration over the failed Republican healthcare bill. ... He pointed the finger of blame primarily at Democrats. But that's a difficult argument to make when Republicans control the White House and both houses of Congress, and after he promised again and again that he would get it done." Lester Holt said on NBC Nightly News (7/18, story 2, 2:10), "The collapse of the GOP healthcare plan is highlighting the failing to deliver on a key campaign promise, with other items on the agenda stalled, and the fights don't get any easier from here."

The AP (7/18, Werner, Fram) reports that Trump "declared Tuesday it's time to 'let Obamacare fail' after the latest GOP health care plan crashed and burned in the Senate, a stunning failure" for Trump, McConnell, "and a party that has vowed for years to abolish the law."

The Washington Post (7/18, Johnson) writes that Trump's promise to repeal and replace the ACA "is nowhere close to being fulfilled, despite his repeated, confident assertions on the campaign trail that it could be done in just a day."

The New York Times (7/18, Sullivan) reports that Trump "said early Tuesday that Democrats and 'a few' Republicans were at fault for the collapse of health care legislation in the Senate, and restated his strategy to let the Affordable Care Act 'fail.'" On Twitter, the President "said, 'We will return,' but he provided no specifics." The Washington Post (7/18, A1, Sullivan, Eilperin) says that the President's "latest comments appeared likely to intensify the current political uncertainty on Capitol Hill, where GOP leaders were debating what to do next." McClatchy (7/18, Kumar, Clark) says Capitol Hill Republicans "are in a state of political paralysis, saddled with a White House that doesn't know how to win votes" but afraid to break with Trump "because the base is still overwhelmingly behind" him.

The AP (7/18, Lemire) writes, "It was a far cry from 'The buck stops here.'" Trump "flipped the script from Harry Truman's famous declaration of presidential responsibility and declared Tuesday, 'I am not going to own it.'" But he "can't now avoid a share of the blame for the stall-out of that repeal effort." Hallie Jackson said on NBC Nightly News (7/18, story 2, 2:10), "For President Trump in the healthcare blame game, the buck stops somewhere else." Trump: "We're not going to own it. I'm not going to own it." Jackson: "That's despite GOP control of the White House and both chambers of Congress, and despite the President's 2013 tweet on leadership: 'Whatever happens, you're responsible. If it doesn't happen, you're responsible.'"

Sen. Chris Coons said on CNN's Situation Room (7/18) that Trump's comments were "heartless. We're talking about real people here, literally tens of millions of people. ... To simply throw his hands up and say, 'I'm not responsible, I have nothing to do with this, we'll simply let the insurance markets fail and then begin to work toward some sort of replacement plan,' that's just callous." Sen. Bernie Sanders said on CNN's Anderson Cooper 360 (7/18), "It's really beyond belief that we have a president of the United States who is working overtime to sabotage the healthcare that millions of Americans receive." Sen. Jeff Merkley tweeted, "With #TrumpCare dead, @realDonaldTrump is actively rooting for insurers to leave markets & raise premiums. Cynical, immoral & destructive."

The New York Times (7/18) editorializes, "So far, Mr. Trump is viewing health care policy through the same narrow lens he uses for everything: his political standing." He said the GOP "should 'let Obamacare fail' in order to have another shot at replacing it, as if the health of millions of Americans wasn't at stake." Gloria Borger said on CNN's Situation Room (7/18), "It's a very cynical statement for a president to make. This isn't leadership. This is the President saying, 'Let it fail.' You know what happens if it fails? People lose insurance."

Several analyses look at Trump's determination to reverse President Obama's achievements. The Los Angeles Times (7/18, Lauter) writes, "Rarely has a president taken office so focused on undoing his predecessor's works as Donald Trump." But "six months in, he has little to show." Peter Baker of the New York Times (7/18, A1) writes in a front-page story, "President Trump's demolition project just got shut down, at least for now. ... The art-of-the-deal negotiating skills he boasted about on the campaign trail last year have not closed the deal." Philip Bump of the Washington Post (7/18) writes, "Trump's central pitch...was a simple one: I am a dealmaker, and I will make deals." But Trump "can't close the deals."

The New York Times (7/18, Badger, Quealy) writes that Trump, "the master brander, has never found quite the right selling point for his party's health care plan," promising "'great healthcare,' 'truly great healthcare,' 'a great plan' and health care that 'will soon be great.'" But for a politician who has shown remarkable skill distilling his arguments into compact slogans, those "pitches have fallen far short of the kind of sharp, memorable refrain that can influence how millions of Americans interpret news in Washington."

On its front page, the Washington Post (7/18, A1, Costa, Snell, Sullivan) runs a 1,700-word account of "how Trump and Republicans failed," writing that the "dramatic collapse of the GOP proposal in the Senate was hardly a shock to most, especially those intimately involved in a venture that has been deeply troubled since the House passed its version in May." While "nearly every GOP senator was eager to check the box of repealing and replacing" the ACA, "many were also distressed by the possible costs of upending a law that has grown deep roots in states, risen in popularity and is relied upon by some Republican governors."

Trump could take some action on healthcare in the near term. Politico (7/18, Demko) reports that the President "has toyed for months with the idea" of cutting off ACA subsidy payments "to force Democrats to the negotiating table," and he may still do so. Politico says that an immediate halt of the approximately $7 billion in subsidies "would likely tip the already shaky Obamacare markets into chaos." The New York Times (7/18) writes that a halting of subsidies, or an Administration refusal to enforce the ACA's individual mandate, would "tend to raise prices, discourage insurer participation and make Obamacare shakier than it would be otherwise." The Washington Post (7/18, Goldstein, Cunningham) reports that the President has yet to decide on his course, which "creates worrisome unpredictability for the 10 million Americans who buy health plans through the law's insurance marketplaces." The Wall Street Journal (7/18, Mathews, Evans) and Bloomberg News (7/18, Tracer) also report on the current uncertainty.

McConnell Says Stand-Alone Repeal Vote Will Take Place. ABC World News Tonight (7/18, story 2, 2:10, Muir) reported that McConnell said he "will hold that next week to repeal Obamacare and worry about the fix sometime later." But ABC's Mary Bruce reported, "Already, this last-ditch effort to save their promise to repeal seems dead on arrival. Are you seeing any kind of consensus around a 'Plan D'?" Sen. Lindsey Graham: "You can go all the way to 'Z,' right?" Nancy Cordes reported on the CBS Evening News (7/18, lead story, 2:50, Mason), "Senate Republicans were reeling today after their hail Mary pass fell short. Three moderate Republican women" – Sens. Shelly Moore Capito, Susan Collins, and Lisa Murkowski – "announced they would not vote to repeal Obamacare without a replacement," leaving it short of the votes needed to advance.

The New York Times (7/18, A1, Kaplan) reports that Capito said in a statement, "I did not come to Washington to hurt people. I cannot vote to repeal Obamacare without a replacement plan that addresses my concerns and the needs of West Virginians." The Wall Street Journal (7/18, A1, Peterson) and McClatchy (7/18, Pugh) also report that the announcements by the three senators has essentially blocked repeal, while The Hill (7/18, Carney) reports that Sen. Rob Portman has also indicated he opposes stand-alone repeal. Lester Holt said in opening NBC Nightly News (7/18, lead story, 2:40) that the "Republican effort to start anew on healthcare suffered what appears to be a fatal blow today, leaving Obamacare the law of the land."

Susan Page of USA Today (7/18) writes, "Never mind. The GOP's seven-year promise to repeal the Affordable Care Act appeared to end Tuesday, at least for the time being, with Obamacare intact and Republicans in disarray." McConnell said he will bring stand-alone repeal to "a vote next week anyway, but other Republicans – even Trump – seemed ready to give up." Dan Balz of the Washington Post (7/18) writes, "By any measure, the collapse of the Senate health-care bill represents an epic failure for the Republican Party and a major embarrassment" for the President. Charles Krauthammer said on Fox News Special Report (7/18), "This is an epic fail. This is historic. This is seven years of arguing gone down the drain. And I think they're at the end of the road."

USA Today (7/18) editorializes, "So much for repeal-and-replace. Republicans did not have a viable alternative to the ACA when they staged their first repeal vote seven years ago. They don't now, and in all probability would not in two years even if the repeal measure were to pass." USA Today calls for "a bipartisan effort on the best approach, retain and repair." The Washington Post (7/18) similarly editorializes, "If enough people in each of the two parties accept that Obamacare is here to stay and that it requires fixes, the next agreements would come fairly easily. ... Democrats and Republicans should be able to support reinsurance programs," and "should fully fund a program that helps low-income people pay out-of-pocket health-care costs." Sen. Mark Warner tweeted, "We saw democracy work today with #Trumpcare's failure. It's time to abandon the partisan repeal effort & fix healthcare in a bipartisan way."

In his Washington Post (7/18) column, Hugh Hewitt also calls for "a bipartisan approach – if Democrats will have it. A health-care deal could be done, leaving the fringes of both party caucuses on the outside looking in." Neera Tanden and Topher Spiro of the Center for American Progress write in the Washington Post (7/18), "There's a better path forward. The American people have voiced an undeniable desire to see leaders from both parties come together and forge a stronger health-care system for all." They call for guaranteed continued payment of ACA subsidies, and reimbursement of insurers "for covering high-cost patients who need more expensive medical treatments." Holman Jenkins writes in his Wall Street Journal (7/18) column that though the ACA is a confusing mishmash of policies, it could be overhauled into a workable program that could replace Medicaid.

William Galston of the Brookings Institution writes in the Wall Street Journal (7/18) that the GOP had seven years to come up with a workable ACA alternative, and did not do so, and the Senate GOP is now too divided to come up with something. A contrary view comes from Marc Thiessen, who writes in his Washington Post (7/18) column, "McConnell is now trying to get on to the bill indirectly by forcing a vote on the Republicans' 2015 clean repeal bill, letting it fail, and then moving to the repeal-and-replace legislation. This is a shift in tactics, not a concession of defeat.”

Roll Call (7/18, Stewart) reports that McConnell “is facing mounting criticism from politicians and pundits on both sides of the aisle,” and David Faris of The Week (7/18) writes that “thus far these GOP legislators are on track to be the least productive group since at least the Civil War,” despite control of both houses.

Pence: “Congress Needs To Do Their Job Now.” The New York Post (7/18, Fredericks) reports, “Vice President Pence on Tuesday praised his boss and slammed Congress after the stunning failure of the GOP-led Senate to even hold a vote” on the replacement bill. Pence, addressing the National Retail Federation annual summit, said, “Inaction is not an option. Congress needs to step up. Congress needs to do their job, and Congress needs to do their job now.”

Paul: Senators Who Backed Repeal In 2015 Should Vote For It Now. Breitbart (7/18, Boyle) reports that Capito and Murkowski both voted for repeal in 2015, and Sen. Rand Paul said that if all senators who have backed repeal in the past vote for it now, it will pass. Paul said, “I think everyone who promised a vote to repeal Obamacare ought to do it, particularly those who voted for an identical bill two years ago.” Paul writes in USA Today (7/18), “I watched my colleagues campaign on repeal. I watched them vote on it in 2015. Now I’m calling for them to keep their promises, stick to the principles they ran on and voted on, and end the harm Obamacare has done to our health care system.”

The Wall Street Journal (7/18) says in an editorial that Paul and other conservative opponents of McConnell’s replacement bill like Sens. Mike Lee and Jerry Moran will claim ideological purity without having to bear responsibility for the consequences, and for keeping in place a law that they abhor.

Schumer Suggests Three “Easy” Fixes To ACA. The Washington Post (7/18, O’Keefe, Sullivan) reports that Senate Minority Leader Schumer on Tuesday “cited three ‘easy’ fixes to quickly stabilize the insurance markets.” Schumer “believes there’s bipartisan support to ensure that the Trump administration will continue making the Affordable Care Act’s cost-sharing reduction payments,” and also urged the Senate to adopt a proposal from Sens. Tom Carper and Tim Kaine “that would create a permanent reinsurance program for the individual health insurance market.” He also touted a bill by Sen. Claire McCaskill “that would enable people living in predominantly rural counties that lack health insurers to buy insurance from the health insurance exchange in D.C., where most lawmakers and their staff members buy coverage.”

Kasich Says ACA Exchanges Need To Be Improved. Gov. John Kasich writes in the New York Times (7/18), “Despite weeks of hard effort, the Senate plan was rejected by governors in both parties because of its unsustainable reductions to Medicaid.” But “just taking up the fatally flawed House plan is not an answer,” and “simply repealing Obamacare without having a workable replacement is just as bad.” Kasich writes that the ACA exchanges “need immediate improvements,” and “one vital improvement would be to provide adequate tax credits. ... Companies should also be required to continue following reasonable guardrails like ensuring minimum coverage that is genuinely useful and covers pre-existing conditions.” Kasich also says that increasing the quality of care through better pay and training would ultimately reduce costs.

Kasich said on CNN’s The Lead (7/18), “We know that the insurance exchanges need to be fixed. Democrats will tell you that, Republicans will tell you that. I suggested a long time ago that that ought to be the focus and that’s where I think it ought to be now.”

Media Analyses: Failure Could Hinder 2018 GOP Senate Campaigns. The Washington Times (7/18, Boyer) reports that Trump said Tuesday that the collapse of the effort “has motivated him to campaign to get more Republicans elected next year.” Trump told reporters, “The majority margin is so small, we’re going to have to go out and get more Republicans elected in ‘18. And I’ll be working very hard for that to happen.” However, the Wall Street Journal (7/18, Hook, Radnofsky) reports that some in the GOP think the failure of the healthcare push will hurt Republican efforts at expanding the party’s Senate majority.

Dave Weigel of the Washington Post (7/18) writes that 10 Democratic senators are up for reelection next year in states carried by Trump, “a factor that Republicans once thought would scare incumbents into making deals. Instead, Democrats have grown more confident about their 2018 chances, with few top-tier candidates jumping into ‘Trump state’ races, and credible Democrats running for seats in Nevada and Texas.” And “in all of those races, it’s not clear how ‘Obamacare’ will play, or how Republicans will play it.”

Trump Had Second Meeting With Putin At G20 Summit.

Word that President Trump and Russian President Vladimir spoke privately for a second time at the G20 summit in Germany earlier this month was met with generally negative media coverage and commentary, with many reports and pundits calling the meeting unusual and inappropriate, particularly since Trump was not accompanied by an American interpreter. Coverage of the previously undisclosed meeting between the two leaders prompted several tweets from Trump Tuesday evening in which he said the “fake news” story of the “secret dinner” was “sick,” and that the “press knew” the dinner was taking place.

Reuters (7/18) reports that according to “a White House official,” Trump and Putin “held a second, previously undisclosed meeting at the G20 summit earlier this month in Germany.” The official “did not say how long the second meeting took place or what was discussed.” The Washington Post (7/18, Deyoung, Rucker) says the conversation, which is “likely to stoke further criticism, including perhaps from some fellow Republicans in Congress, that he is too cozy with the leader of a major US adversary,” took place “at a dinner for G20 leaders, a senior administration official said.” Trump, who “left his own seat to occupy a chair next to Putin,” was “alone, and Putin was attended only by his official interpreter.” The Post says it “underscores the extent to which Trump was eager throughout the summit to cultivate a friendship with Putin.”

The AP (7/18) reports that press secretary Sean Spicer and NSC spokesman Michael Anton confirmed that the two leaders “spoke privately” at the dinner. Anton “said the discussion was casual and should not be characterized as a ‘meeting’ or even a less formal, but official, ‘pull-aside.’” USA Today (7/19, Eversley) reports that the White House acknowledged that Trump “spoke briefly” with Putin, but “insisted it was just a normal part of presidential duties and denied news reports surfacing Tuesday that it was a second private meeting.” The Washington Times (7/18, Boyer) says the White House “hit back” at the media reports and quotes “a White House official” as saying, “There was no ‘second meeting’ between President Trump and President Putin, just a brief conversation at the end of a dinner. ... The insinuation that the White House has tried to ‘hide’ a second meeting is false, malicious and absurd.”

However, the Wall Street Journal (7/18, Ballhaus) reports that the White House disclosed the second conversation only after Ian Bremmer, president of the Eurasia Group, reported it earlier Tuesday, and the New York Times (7/18, Davis) says it “rais[es] new questions about [Trump and Putin’s] relationship as the cloud of Russia investigations continues to shadow the Trump administration.” The Times adds that the “intimate dinner conversation, of which there is no official United States government record is the latest to raise eyebrows,” adding that “foreign leaders who witnessed it later commented privately on the oddity of an American president flaunting such a close rapport with his Russian counterpart.”

Sen. Chris Coons said on CNN’s Situation Room (7/18) that Trump’s reliance on Putin’s translator is “a basic failure in terms of national security protocol” because there was no one there “who could help him understand from an American perspective what was being said.” Sen. Richard Blumenthal said on CNN’s Anderson Cooper 360 (7/18) that the meeting, which lasted a “full hour,” “certainly merits a read out” for the American people. However, he said the only source would be “the President himself, and he may not remember everything that was said, which is why staff always accompanies” the President for such a meeting.

Axios (7/18) also says it is “highly unusual for a US president to meet with a Russian leader with only Russian staff present and violates national security protocol (though Trump might not have been aware of that).” Axios adds that a statement from the White House says that “all the leaders circulated throughout the room during the dinner and Trump spoke ‘briefly’ with Putin and they used the Russian translator since Trump was with a translator who only spoke Japanese.” The statement adds that claiming the meeting “was hidden is ‘false, malicious and absurd.’”

Trump reacted to media coverage of the meeting in a tweet Tuesday evening, writing, “Fake News story of secret dinner with Putin is ‘sick.’ All G 20 leaders, and spouses, were invited by the Chancellor of Germany. Press knew!” Trump followed that tweet with another saying, “The Fake News is becoming more and more dishonest! Even a dinner arranged for top 20 leaders in Germany is made to look sinister!” Reacting to the tweets on CNN’s Anderson Cooper 360 (7/18), correspondent Pamela Brown said, “Trump seems to have a misunderstanding of what is now being reported today. ... We knew the actual dinner was going on, but apparently this is a conversation after the dinner, and a senior White House official told CNN this discussion was nearly an hour and only included President trump, Putin and a Russian translator.”

David Gergen said on CNN’s Anderson Cooper 360 (7/18), “It is the President’s duty to circulate and meet foreign leaders in an informal pull-aside way,” but it is “entirely inappropriate for a president to sit down in the way Donald Trump did with Putin.” Ryan Lizza of The New Yorker said on CNN’s Situation Room (7/18) this was “a massive failure of President Trump’s staff. ... To not have staff work that would make sure that they had someone there so that...the American side had a true account or frankly a translator who might mistranslate something, you would at least want an American translator there so you know you're getting an honest translation of the meeting." Lizza added, "It's puzzling they didn't disclose it. ... Why is it that every time a senior administration official meets with a Russian it doesn't get disclosed until it leaks out?"

Russian Developer Identified As Eighth Attendee At Trump Jr. Meeting.

A lawyer for Russian developer Ike Kaveladze said Tuesday that his client was the eighth person to attend the June 2016 meeting at Trump Tower arranged by Donald Trump Jr. Coverage is largely negative, depicting the news as the latest rendition of, as ABC World News Tonight's (7/18, story 3, 2:05, Muir) chief investigative correspondent Brian Ross called it, an "ever-changing story" about the meeting, which has become a focus for special counsel Robert Mueller.

The AP (7/18, Braun) reports that Attorney Scott Balber told the Washington Post and CNN that Kaveladze attended the meeting "to help translate." According to Balber, "Kaveladze works for developers Emin and Aras Agalarov and was there to represent them." The New York Times (7/18, Lafraniere, Goldman) says Balber "described Mr. Kaveladze as a longtime American citizen who is fluent in Russian and nearly fluent in English." Said Balber, "They had somebody show up at the meeting to make sure the favor was executed, that they carried through on it. And now they are in the middle of this tremendous storm." Jeff Pegues reported on the CBS Evening News (7/18, story 3, 2:20, Mason) that Balber "said Kaveladze doesn't remember saying a single word, left scratching his head, and wondering, why am I here?"

Politico (7/18, Cheney, Samuelsohn) reports that Kaveladze "was once identified as a key figure in a Congressional money laundering probe." Kaveladze was mentioned in "news stories in 2000, when Congress was examining Russian money laundering through US financial institutions." His identity, Politico adds, "is among many facts about the 2016 meeting that Trump Jr. has failed to disclose in multiple public statements," and "his background may add to the questions members of Congress and investigators have about the meeting, which Trump officials say was brief and inconsequential but which Democrats call evidence of collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia."

Ross reported on ABC World News Tonight (7/18, story 3, 2:05, Muir) that while Trump Jr. "says he's been transparent," with word of Kaveladze's attendance at the meeting, "the ever changing story changes again." Ross added that "it really has been a slow drip, and it helps explain why this meeting has become such a focus" for Mueller whose "team wants to talk with each of the eight people in the room." The Washington Post (7/18, Helderman, Hamburger) also says the Trump Tower meeting "has emerged as a key focus of the investigation of the Trump campaign's interactions with Russians." In "the first public indication that Mueller's team is investigating the meeting," Balber said that he received a call from a Mueller representative over the weekend "asking if Kaveladze would agree to be interviewed. Balber said his client would cooperate." USA Today (7/19, Johnson, Estepa) quotes Balber as saying, "Mr. Kaveladze intends to fully cooperate."

According to Sen. Dianne Feinstein, Mueller has also given the Senate Judiciary Committee approval to publicly interview Trump Jr. and former Trump campaign manager Paul Manafort, the Washington Post (7/18, Demirjian) reports. Feinstein said the panel plans to call both men, but "it remains unclear if either will appear." The Post says their testimony would be lawmakers' "first chance to publicly question both men about the alleged ties between President Trump's campaign and Russia." Meanwhile, Reuters (7/18) reports that leaders of the Senate Intelligence Committee said Tuesday that they want to interview Trump Jr., former Trump campaign chairman Paul Manafort, "and everyone else" who was at the meeting. Asked by reporters "if he wanted the committee to call in the attendees," Chairman Richard Burr said, "Sure, sure." Ranking Democrat Mark Warner "also said the committee wanted to see everyone who had been at the meeting."

Sen. Joe Manchin, a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee said on CNN's Situation Room (7/18), "We know it's illegal to take any contribution – financial contribution – from any...foreign country. ... It just tells you common sense" that "if that is not legal, shouldn't it be illegal for us to have meetings with people for those same purposes?" Asked if he was suggesting that the Trump campaign committed an illegal act, Manchin said, "I think the facts will come out and someone will have to make that determination."

Carlson: Based On Current Collusion Standards, Clinton Colluded With Russia In 2010. On Fox News Tucker Carlson Tonight (7/18), Tucker Carlson said "this Russian narrative has changed the rules here in Washington maybe forever. ... Americans who have contact with them, any contact at all, are committing treason." Carlson asked what that means for Hillary Clinton who in 2010, while Secretary of State, "publicly opposed sanctions" on the Russian government. "At the very say time," Carlson continued, Bill Clinton "was paid half a million dollars to deliver a speech in Moscow to financial firms set to benefit from the removal of the sanctions his wife opposed. ... Since we're doing the math, the Clintons payday was ten times greater than what General Michael Flynn received for speech in 2015. Does that mean that Bill Clinton colluded ten times as much as General Flynn colluded?"

Media Analyses: After Healthcare Defeat, Republicans Looking For Legislative Win With Tax Cut Plan.

House Republicans released a blueprint for their 2018 budget resolution that includes calls for cutting individual and business taxes to largely negative media coverage. Reports cast the measure as an effort score a legislative win in the wake of the Republican healthcare bill's failure in the Senate, and many question whether it can pass the House amid divisions inside the GOP, including many of the same issues that stalled Republican healthcare efforts.

The Wall Street Journal (7/18, Rubin) says Republicans are turning to tax reform as they look for a legislative victory in the wake of their apparent defeat on healthcare. Rep. Tom MacArthur said, "It ratchets up pressure on us to get something done. It also makes it difficult to move forward with anything controversial because of a fear of it falling apart. ... We have to get things done that matter to the American people, and tax reform is one of them." Similarly, the New York Times (7/18, Rappeport) describes Republicans as "reeling" from the failure of their efforts to repeal the ACA and are seeking "to secure a signature achievement in President Trump's first year in office." The Times says Republicans "trying to move on quickly to the next big thing: tax legislation." A plan released Tuesday as part of the House Budget Committee's 2018 budget resolution blueprint "calls for reducing tax rates for businesses and individuals." The plan "calls for consolidating tax brackets and cutting rates, repealing the alternative minimum tax and switching the United States from a worldwide tax system to a territorial tax system, which would tax only the domestic income of corporations."

The Washington Times (7/18, McLaughlin) reports that the budget plan "sets 2018 discretionary spending levels at $1.13 trillion, with $621 billion in defense spending and $511 billion in non-defense programs." In addition, it "includes more than $200 billion in spending cuts to mandatory spending programs." The measure "also includes instructions for a 'reconciliation' process that would pave the way for a party-line vote in the Senate on reshaping the federal tax code." However, according to the Times, "members of the House Freedom Caucus signal that they don't believe the budget resolution can pass the lower chamber — raising questions about whether the budget blueprint is basically dead on arrival."

While House Budget Committee Chairwoman Diane Black "assured reporters Tuesday that the blueprint would emerge from her committee," the Washington Post (7/18, Debonis) says "action on the House floor remains in doubt" as intraparty fighting "over spending, health care and other matters continues to cast doubt on whether the budget blueprint can survive a House vote." The AP (7/18, Taylor) says the plan "is crucial because its passage would pave the way to pass a tax overhaul this fall without the fear of a filibuster by Senate Democrats." However, the measure "proposes trillions of dollars in cuts to the social safety net and other domestic programs and puts congressional Republicans at odds with Trump over cutting Medicare." The AP says it is unclear "whether GOP leaders can get the budget measure through the House." While conservatives "want a larger package of spending cuts to accompany this fall's tax overhaul bill," moderates "are concerned cuts to programs such as food stamps could go too far."

Another Wall Street Journal (7/18, Rubin, Davidson) says there are political and procedural hurdles confronting the GOP effort, including many of the same issues that led to the defeat of their healthcare bill, and Reuters (7/18, Morgan) says GOP leaders are facing "the same divisions between conservatives and moderates that helped killed their efforts to replace Obamacare." Politico (7/18, Scholtes, Ferris, Bade) reports that a House GOP whipping operation Monday night found "dozens of Republican lawmakers who say they can't commit right now — as well as several hard 'no's' — to voting for the partisan bundle of federal funding measures, according to Republican lawmakers and aides." That result, Politico said, "underscores GOP leadership's ongoing difficulty in appeasing the party's most fiscally conservative wing while still holding onto support from moderates, and serves as a reminder that ideological differences within the House Republican conference are likely to force the majority to continue making deals with Democrats to keep the government funded."

Administration Discussing 20% To 25% Corporate Tax Rate. Politico (7/18, Dawsey, Becker, Lorenzo) cites "administration officials and other advisers" who say the Administration "is privately discussing a corporate tax rate in the 20 percent to 25 percent range." While an outline released by the Administration in April mirrored Trump's "campaign pledge to cut the corporate rate to 15 percent from 35 percent," Politico says the Administration is now "aiming for a more realistic goal to notch a major policy win after its health care struggles." Trump "has been peppering CEOs, aides and others in the business world with questions about how low the rate would need to be to help companies grow," and some executives and lobbyists "have cited a rate in the 20s, one White House official." That "has become a prevailing view among a number of senior officials and advisers."

House Passes Bill Delaying Obama-Era Pollution Standards.

The AP (7/18, Biesecker) reports that the House voted 229 to 199 on Tuesday to pass the Ozone Standards Implementation Act of 2017, which "delays by another eight years the implementation of 2015 air pollution standards" and "makes key technical changes that environmentalists say will weaken the Clean Air Act, including switching the EPA's mandated review of air quality standards from every five years to every ten."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"The Trumpcare Bonfire." The New York Times (7/18) editorializes, "So far, Mr. Trump is viewing health care policy through the same narrow lens he uses for everything: his political standing." He said the GOP "should 'let Obamacare fail' in order to have another shot at replacing it, as if the health of millions of Americans wasn't at stake."

"Louisiana's Big Step On Justice Reform." In an editorial, the New York Times (7/19, Board) recalls that in June, "Louisiana passed one of the most ambitious criminal-justice reform packages in the country." The Times says the move "would have been remarkable coming from any state," but it is "historic coming from Louisiana," which "has long held the dubious distinction of locking up the most people per capita in America." The Times says the move is "also a rebuke to Attorney General Jeff Sessions and his retrograde mind-set on criminal justice, which clings to the notion that locking more people up for more time is the best way to deal with crime." If Sessions could abandon "his outdated worldview long enough," the Times concludes, "he might see that across America – and particularly in the deep-red South from which he hails – new approaches to justice reform are rightly winning the day."

"Chris Christie's No. 1 Fan." A New York Times (7/19, Board) editorial says opinion surveys indicate that New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie is state's "the most unpopular" governor "in modern history," in part because of his ability to transform every issue so it is "about himself." The Times says the governor "even spent two days last week auditioning for a host job on WFAN, the sports talk radio station," although among the "more substantive reasons for New Jerseyans to be upset with Mr. Christie" was "his 2010 decision to block a desperately needed train tunnel under the Hudson River to Manhattan." He has now voiced support for Gateway, a proposed tunnel project, the future of which is uncertain because Christie cannot "even be sure he will make it as a radio host." Nonetheless, the Times argues, Christie's constituents are "tired of feeling like the backdrop to his ambition" and "have obviously wearied of it."

Washington Post.

"Liu Xiaobo's Widow Has Suffered More Than Enough. China Should Release Her From House Arrest." As the mental and physical health of Liu Xia – the wife of recently deceased Chinese dissident and Nobel Peace Prize laureate Liu Xiaobo – deteriorates due to her seven-year unofficial house arrest, the Washington Post (7/18) wonders in an editorial, "Is there no limit to the cruelty China's rulers are willing to deploy in their unending quest to squelch and punish free speech and free thought?" The Post insists that China must stop "hounding" Liu and the rest of her "innocent family." Agreeing with Liu's 2012 statement that "Kafka could not have written anything more absurd and unbelievable than this," the Post urges Secretary Tillerson, President Trump, and Congress to continue their pressure on Beijing to leave Ms. Liu in peace.

"Trump's Voter-Fraud Commission Itself Is A Fraud." In an editorial, the Washington Post (7/18) says that it is President Trump's "voter fraud commission" that's "the real fraud," adding, "If ever a federal commission embarked on a 'study' with a predetermined outcome, this is it." The Post says, "In contrast with its members' unwarranted obsession with fraud, the panel shows no inclination to examine the huge spike in reported attempts to penetrate voter-registration systems ahead of the 2016 elections in more than 20 states. ... And while the commission is also charged with studying voter suppression, it includes no members who have focused on that problem, despite the fact that federal courts have repeatedly intervened in recent years to slap down efforts at suppression in states, mainly led by Republicans."

"Republicans, Ignore Trump's Call To 'Let Obamacare Fail.' Do This Instead." The Washington Post (7/18) editorializes, "If enough people in each of the two parties accept that Obamacare is here to stay and that it requires fixes, the next agreements would come fairly easily. ... Democrats and Republicans should be able to support reinsurance programs," and "should fully fund a program that helps low-income people pay out-of-pocket health-care costs."

Wall Street Journal.

"The ObamaCare Republicans." The Wall Street Journal (7/18) says in an editorial that Sen. Rand Paul and other conservative opponents of Senate Majority Leader McConnell's replacement healthcare bill, like Sens. Mike Lee and Jerry Moran, will claim ideological purity without having to bear responsibility for the consequences, and for keeping in place a law that they abhor.

"California's Climate Cap And Spend." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (7/18) argues that the seven California state Republican lawmakers who recently joined 48 Democrats to reauthorize the state's carbon cap-and-trade program from 2020 through 2030 delivered Gov. Jerry Brown the biggest legislative victory of his tenure, sabotaged their own political fortunes, and betrayed their constituents. The Journal contends that the legislation will have a minimal effect on reducing emissions and adds that California Republicans will now face greater difficulty using carbon tax opposition as part of their 2018 campaign platforms.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

GOP Stares Down Loss On Healthcare Push
Health Insurers Brace For New Uncertainty After GOP Bill's Collapse
Discovery Communications And Scripps Networks In Merger Talks
Foreign Buyers Pump Up US Home Prices
America's Farmers Turn To Bank Of John Deere

New York Times:

"Let Obamacare Fail," Trump Says As GOP Health Bill Collapses
Trump Finds That Demolishing Obama's Legacy Is Not So Simple
Trump And Putin Held A Second, Undisclosed, Private Conversation Behind A Chinese Powerhouse, A Web Of Family Financial Ties
Saudi King's Son Plotted Effort To Oust His Rival
Frances Gabe, Creator Of The Only Self-Cleaning Home, Dies At 101

Washington Post:

Iran's President, Hard-Liners Face Off
8th Person Identified In Meeting At Trump Tower
A Party At War With Itself Hits A Wall On Healthcare
"It's An Insane Process": How Trump And The GOP Failed
Health Bill Collapse Roils Republicans
Trump Had 2nd Sit-Down With Putin

Financial Times:

Oil Industry Warns US Over New Russia Sanctions
Goldman Sachs Trading Woes Expose Bank Weakness
Irish Economy Smaller Using "De-Globalised" Data
Netflix Executives Keep Hitting Bonus Bullseyes

Washington Times:

On Obamacare Plan B, Republican Opponents Say Insurance Markets Can't Count On Hope
Trump: 'Let Obamacare Fail'
House Republican Budget Proposal Paves Way For Tax Reform, Another Intraparty Battle

D.C. Metro System Replaces All Old Rail Cars With Safer Series
Manchin's Vulnerability Sets Up West Virginia's First Competitive GOP Primary In Modern History

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Healthcare Reform Bill Dead-WH; Healthcare Reform Bill Dead-Congress; Russia Meddling Investigation; Minneapolis-Police Violence; Meningitis-Baby Death; OJ Simpson Parole Hearing; Iran-Nuclear Deal; Out Of State Car Buying; Long Island-Boating Accident; Diabetes Statistics; Airfare Savings; Airport Worker.

CBS: Healthcare Reform Bill Dead-Congress; Healthcare Reform Bill Dead-WH; Russia Meddling Investigation; Minneapolis-Police Violence; Cincinnati-Police Violence Trial; Vatican-Embezzling Trial; Iran-Nuclear Deal; Opioid Epidemic; Dennis Hastert Release; West Coast-Wildfires; Oldest Track Athlete; First Lunar Landing Artifact.

NBC: Healthcare Reform Bill Dead-Congress; Healthcare Reform Bill Dead-WH; Healthcare Reform Bill Dead-Impact; Minneapolis-Police Violence; Opioid Epidemic; Dennis Hastert Release; Alzheimer-Sleep Quality; Travel Savings; Rome-Metro Accident Scare; OJ Simpson Parole Hearing; Afghan Teens-International Robot Competition.

Network TV At A Glance:

Healthcare Reform Bill Dead – 16 minutes, 20 seconds
Minneapolis-Police Violence – 7 minutes, 5 seconds
Russia Meddling Investigation – 4 minutes, 25 seconds
Opioid Epidemic – 3 minutes, 35 seconds
Iran-Nuclear Deal – 2 minutes, 35 seconds
Dennis Hastert Release – 45 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Healthcare Reform Bill Dead; Minneapolis-Police Violence; West Coast Wildfires.

CBS: Healthcare Reform Bill Dead; Trump-Putin Meeting; Minneapolis-Police Violence; Car Heat-Child Death; Diabetes Statistics.

FOX: Healthcare Reform Bill Dead; Trump-Putin Meeting; US Russia Diplomat Appointment; House Budget Plan.

NPR: Healthcare Reform Bill Dead; House Budget Plan; Minneapolis-Police Violence.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Meets with US Ambassador to the People's Republic of China Terry Branstad; has lunch with members of Congress; leads a Made in America roundtable.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Participates in the first meeting of the Presidential Advisory Commission on Election Integrity; has lunch with the President and members of Congress; joins the President to participate in a Made in America roundtable; participates in a meeting with Indiana Governor Eric Holcomb.

US Senate: 9:00 AM Senate Intelligence Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Robert Storch to be National Security Agency Inspector General; Isabela Patelas to be Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Intelligence and Analysis; and Susan Gordon to be Principal Deputy Director of National Intelligence Location: Hart Senate Office Building, Rm 216, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.senate.gov>

10:00 AM Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee Business Meeting, hearing on USPS actions during the 2016 campaign season – Business Meeting, to consider nomination of David Pekoske to be Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security for the Transportation Security Administration * Immediately followed by hearing on 'The Postal Service's Actions During the 2016 Campaign Season: Implications for the Hatch Act', with testimony from U.S. Postal Service letter carrier Timm Kopp, Acting Deputy Inspector General William Siemer, and Postmaster General and CEO Megan Brennan; and Office of Special Counsel Acting Special Counsel Adam Miles Location: Rm 342, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

10:00 AM Senate Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – National Parks Subcommittee legislative hearing, with testimony from National Park Service Acting Deputy Director for Operations Robert Vogel Location: Rm 366, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://energy.senate.gov/public/>

10:00 AM Senate Commerce Committee considers FCC nominees – Nominations hearing considers Ajit Varadaraj Pai (reappointment), Jessica Rosenworcel (reappointment), and Brendan Carr to be Federal Communications Commission members Location: Rm G50, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on the Foreign Agents Registration Act – Hearing on 'Oversight of the Justice Department's (Non) Enforcement of the Foreign Agents Registration Act: Lessons from the Obama Administration and Current Compliance Practices', with testimony from Fusion GPS' Glenn Simpson; Deputy Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division Adam Hickey; FBI Counterintelligence Division Assistant Director Bill Priestap; Department Of Justice Inspector General Michael Horowitz; and Hermitage Capital Management (UK) CEO William Browder * Fusion GPS was previously behind the 'Steele dossier' of allegations against then-president-elect Donald Trump's alleged activities and connections in Russia that emerged in January, while a spokesman for President Trump has recently accused the firm of being involved in attempting to set up Donald Trump, Jr. Location: Rm 226, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate HELP Committee Executive Session – Executive Session, with agenda including consideration of nominations of Marvin Kaplan and William Emanuel to be National Labor Relations Board members Location: Rm 430, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://help.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Environment Committee legislative hearing on 'HELP for Wildlife Act' – Legislative hearing on 'S. 1514, the Hunting Heritage and Environmental Legacy Preservation (HELP) for Wildlife Act', with testimony from Wyoming Game and Fish Department Chief Game Warden Brian Nesvik; Arkansas Game and Fish Commission Director Jeff Crow; Ducks Unlimited CEO (and former U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Director) Dale Hall; The Chesapeake Bay Foundation Vice President for Environmental Protection & Restoration Kim Coble; and Michigan Technological University School of Forest Resources and Environmental Science Associate Professor Dr John Vucetich Location: Rm 406, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

1:30 PM AFT president and Congressional Dems rally to 'oppose education budget cuts' – American Federation of Teachers President Randi Weingarten, AFSCME President Lee Saunders, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi and Minority Whip Steny Hoyer, and fellow Democrats Sen. Bob Casey and Reps. Bobby Scott, Keith Ellison, Mark Pocan, and Mark Takano participate in a rally with educators to 'oppose education budget cuts and efforts to repeal the Affordable Care Act' Location: East Lawn, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC www.aft.org <https://twitter.com/AFTUnion>

1:30 PM Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Thomas Bowman to be Deputy Secretary of Veterans Affairs; Brooks Tucker to be Assistant Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Congressional and Legislative Affairs; James Byrne to be Department of Veterans Affairs General Counsel; and Michael Allen, Amanda Meredith, and Joseph Toth to be U.S. Court of Appeals for Veterans Claims Judges Location: Rm 418, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://veterans.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/VACHair>

2:00 PM Closed Hearing: Intelligence Matters Location: Rm 219, Hart Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.senate.gov>

2:00 PM Senate Foreign Relations Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Luis Arreaga to be U.S. Ambassador to Guatemala; and Sharon Day to be U.S. Ambassador to Costa Rica Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

4:00 PM Senate Dems hold hearing on influence of foreign money on U.S. elections – Democratic Policy and Communications Committee holds hearing on 'Democracy For Sale: How Our Broken Campaign Finance System Allows Foreign Governments to Buy Influence in Our Elections and What We Can Do About It', chaired by Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse and with participants including DPCC Chair Debbie Stabenow and other senators. Witnesses are experts in election law and the influence of foreign money: Federal Election Commission Commissioner Ellen Weintraub, American Enterprise Institute Resident Scholar Norm Ornstein, Campaign Legal Center Senior Director and General Counsel Larry Noble, Center for Responsive Politics Executive Director Sheila Krumholz, and Center for American Progress Director of Government & Democratic Reform Liz Kennedy Location: SVC 208-209, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC dpcc.senate.gov

4:15 PM OAS secretary general testifies to Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on Venezuela – Western Hemisphere, Transnational Crime, Civilian Security, Democracy, Human Rights, and Global Women's Issues Subcommittee hearing on 'The Collapse of the Rule of Law in

Venezuela: What the United States and the International Community Can Do to Restore Democracy', with testimony from Organization of American States Secretary General Luis Almagro Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://foreign.senate.gov/>

US House: 9:30 AM Helsinki Commission hearing on cigarette smuggling – Helsinki Commission hearing on 'A Hazy Crisis: Illicit Cigarette Smuggling in the OSCE Region', with witnesses Phillip Morris International Senior Vice President and General Counsel Marc Firestone, George Mason University Terrorism, Transnational Crime, and Corruption Center Director Louise Shelley, and University of Ottawa Adjunct Professor of Law David Sweanor Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 106, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

9:30 AM House Appropriations Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'FY 2018 State, Foreign Operations Appropriations Bill', 'FY 2018 Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education Appropriations Bill', and 'Interim Suballocation of Budget Allocations for FY2018' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2359, Washington, DC
<http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:00 AM House Veterans' Affairs Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on legislation including 'H.R. 95, Veterans' Access to Child Care Act', 'H.R. 282, the Military Residency Choice Act', 'H.R. 918, the Veteran Urgent Access to Mental Healthcare Act', 'H.R. 1058, the VA Provider Equity Act', 'H.R. 1690, the Department of Veterans Affairs Bonus Transparency Act', as amended, 'H.R. 2006, the VA Procurement Efficiency and Transparency Act', 'H.R. 2749, the Protecting Business Opportunities for Veterans Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2772, the VA Senior Executive Accountability Act' ('SEA Act'), 'H.R. 3218, H.R. 3218, the Harry W. Colmery Veterans Educational Assistance Act of 2017', and 'H.R. XXX, To require the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to carry out a pilot program to provide educational assistance to certain former members of the Armed Forces for education and training as physician assistants of the Department of Veterans Affairs, to establish pay grades and require competitive pay for physician assistants of the Department, and for other purposes' Location: Rm 334, Cannon House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

10:00 AM POSTPONED: Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee hearing on 'Congressional Oversight of Independent Regulatory Agencies' Location: Rm 2128, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov>
<https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM Oversight Subcommittee hearing on 'Efforts to Combat Waste, Fraud, and Abuse in the Medicare Program' Location: Rm 1100, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources Committee legislative hearing – Legislative hearing on 'H.R. 1274, State, Tribal, and Local Species Transparency and Recovery Act', 'H.R. 2603, Saving America's Endangered Species Act' ('SAVES Act'), 'H.R. 3131, Endangered Species Litigation Reasonableness Act', 'H.R. 424, Gray Wolf State Management Act of 2017', and 'H.R. 717, Listing Reform Act', with testimony from bipartisan Reps. Dan Newhouse, Collin Peterson, Pete Olson, Louie Gohmert, and Bill Huizenga; biologist and TV host Jeff Corwin; Texas Comptroller of Public Accounts Glenn Hegar; Holsinger Law Manager Kent Holsinger; U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Deputy Director Greg Sheehan; and Wyoming Governor's Policy Advisor David Willms Location: Rm 1324, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov>
<https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM Hearing on 'The State of Infrastructure in Rural America' Location: Rm 1300, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://agriculture.house.gov/>

10:00 AM House Infrastructure subcommittee hearing on implementation of water resources development acts – Water Resources and Environment Subcommittee hearing on 'Building a 21st Century Infrastructure for America: Implementation of the Water Resources Reform and Development Act of 2014 and the Water Resources Development Act of 2016', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of the Army for Civil Works Douglas Lamont; and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Commanding General and Chief of Engineers Lt. Gen. Todd Semonite Location: Rm 2167, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://transportation.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/Transport>

10:00 AM House Technology Committee hearing on energy innovation – Hearing on 'Energy Innovation: Letting Technology Lead', with testimony from Oklo President and CEO Dr Jacob DeWitte; University of California-Los Angeles (UCLA) Henry Samueli School of Engineering and Applied Science Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering Associate Professor Dr Gaurav Sant; Harvard University John A. Paulson School of Engineering and Applied Sciences Research Professor of Technology and Public Policy Dr Venky Narayanamurti; and AES Energy

Storage Market Development Director Kiran Kumaraswamy Location: Rm 2318, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM House Oversight and Government Reform Committee Business Meeting – Business Meeting, to mark up legislation including ‘H.R. 378, To amend title 5, United States Code, to enhance the authority under which Federal agencies may pay cash awards to employees for making cost saving disclosures, and for other purposes’, ‘H.R. 1132, To amend title 5, to provide for a 2-year prohibition on employment in a career civil service position for any former political appointee, and for other purposes’, ‘H.R. 2989, To establish the Frederick Douglass Bicentennial Commission’, ‘H.R. 3210, To require the Director of the National Background Investigation Bureau to submit a report on the backlog of personnel security clearance investigations, and for other purposes’, and ‘H.R. 3244, To amend title 5, United States Code, to provide for annual surveys of Federal employees, and for other purposes’ Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2154, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

10:00 AM House Commerce subcommittee markup hearing – Digital Commerce and Consumer Protection Subcommittee markup hearing on ‘H.R. XXX, Staff Draft on Highly Automated Vehicle Testing and Deployment’ Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM Markup hearing on the Concurrent Resolution on the Budget for Fiscal Year 2018 Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://budget.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/housebudgetGOP>

10:00 AM Pratt & Whitney engine on Capitol Hill, including photo op with bipartisan Reps. John Larson and Thomas Rooney – Geared Turbofan (GTF) jet engine manufactured by Pratt & Whitney, designed to reduce noise, improve fuel efficiency, and lower emissions, stops on Capitol Hill, with Pratt & Whitney President Bob Leduc. Includes photo opportunity with Democratic Rep. John Larson and Republican Rep. Tom Rooney Location: South Capitol Street Southwest, Washington, DC www.pw.utc.com <https://twitter.com/prattandwhitney>

11:00 AM Larry Kudlow testifies to House Small Business Committee – Hearing on ‘Reversing the Entrepreneurship Decline’, with testimony from CNBC Senior Contributor Larry Kudlow; Miami University President Dr Gregory Crawford; Small Business & Entrepreneurship Council President and CEO Karen Kerrigan; and Broadmark Capital CEO Joe Schocken Location: Rm 2360, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

11:30 AM North American Meat Institute Annual Hot Dog Lunch – North American Meat Institute Annual Hot Dog Lunch in celebration National Hot Dog Day and National Hot Dog Month. Eight vendors are expected to serve over 3,500 hot dog and sausage products. Event is hosted by North American Meat Institute and Honorary Congressional Co-Chairs Republican Rep. Michael Conaway and Democratic Rep. Collin Peterson. Attendees include former baseball players Jim Palmer and Al Hrabosky and U.S. Olympic Softball Gold Medalist Jennie Finch Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Courtyard, Washington, DC www.meatinstitute.org <https://twitter.com/MeatAMI>

12:00 PM House debates bills on natural gas pipelines and cross-border energy infrastructure – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda including ‘H.R. 2910 – Promoting Interagency Coordination for Review of Natural Gas Pipelines Act’ and ‘H.R. 2883 – Promoting Cross-Border Energy Infrastructure Act’ Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

1:00 PM House Democratic Caucus Chairman Joe Crowley and Vice Chair Linda Sanchez hold pen and pad Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1416, Washington, DC <http://www.dems.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseDemocrats>

1:30 PM AFT president and Congressional Dems rally to ‘oppose education budget cuts’ – American Federation of Teachers President Randi Weingarten, AFSCME President Lee Saunders, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi and Minority Whip Steny Hoyer, and fellow Democrats Sen. Bob Casey and Reps. Bobby Scott, Keith Ellison, Mark Pocan, and Mark Takano participate in a rally with educators to ‘oppose education budget cuts and efforts to repeal the Affordable Care Act’ Location: East Lawn, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC www.aft.org <https://twitter.com/AFTUnion>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee markup hearing – Terrorism, Nonproliferation, and Trade Subcommittee markup hearing on ‘H.R. 425, FTO Passport Revocation Act of 2017’ and ‘H.R. 1196, Counterterrorism Screening and Assistance Act of 2017’ Location: Rm 2200, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

2:00 PM House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on North Korea – Monetary Policy and Trade Subcommittee hearing on 'Restricting North Korea's Access to Finance', with testimony from SAIS U.S.-Korea Institute Visiting Scholar William Newcomb; Foundation for Defense of Democracies Senior Fellow Anthony Ruggiero; Center for a New American Security Senior Fellow Elizabeth Rosenberg; and Harvard Kennedy School Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs Korea Working Group Director Dr John Park Location: Rm 2128, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

2:00 PM House Natural Resources subcommittee oversight hearing on the Magnuson-Stevens Act – Water, Power and Oceans Subcommittee oversight hearing on 'Exploring the Successes and Challenges of the Magnuson-Stevens Act', with testimony from Lund's Fisheries' Jeff Kaelin; Hawaii Longline Association President Sean Martin; Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission Executive Director Nick Wiley; and recreational angler and outdoor writer Charles Witek Location: Rm 1324, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

2:00 PM Tax Policy Subcommittee hearing on 'How Tax Reform Will Simplify Our Broken Tax Code and Help Individuals and Families' Location: Rm 1100, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

2:00 PM House Judiciary subcommittee hearing on agricultural guestworkers – Immigration and Border Security Subcommittee hearing on 'Agricultural Guestworkers: Meeting the Growing Needs of American Agriculture', with testimony from Republican Rep. David Valadao; Frey Farms President and CEO Sarah Frey; Gebbers Farms orchard owner Jon Wyss; and United Farm Workers Vice President Giev Kashkooli Location: Rm 2141, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on the U.S.-Caribbean Strategic Engagement Act – Western Hemisphere Subcommittee hearing on 'Implementing the U.S.-Caribbean Strategic Engagement Act', with testimony from Acting Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Western Hemisphere Affairs and U.S. Special Coordinator for Haiti Kenneth Merten Location: Rm 2172, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

2:15 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Saudi Arabia's 'troubling' educational curriculum – Terrorism, Nonproliferation, and Trade Subcommittee hearing on 'Saudi Arabia's Troubling Educational Curriculum', with testimony from Hudson Institute Center for Religious Freedom Director Nina Shea; Foundation for Defense of Democracy Senior Fellow Dr David Weinberg; former Rep. Frank Wolf; and International Center for Religion and Diplomacy President Emeritus Dr Douglas Johnston Location: Rm 2200, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

2:30 PM Markup hearing on 'H.R. 2823, Affordable Retirement Advice for Savers Act' Location: Rm 2175, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

Other: 8:15 AM Elon Musk and NASA Acting Administrator Lightfoot speak at ISS R&D Conference – Annual International Space Station Research and Development Conference continues, with speakers today including Tesla and SpaceX CEO Elon Musk, NASA Acting Administrator Robert Lightfoot and Bigelow Aerospace Founder and President Robert Bigelow Location: Omni Shoreham Hotel, 2500 Calvert St NW, Washington, DC <http://www.astronautical.org/> <https://twitter.com/astrosociety>

8:30 AM 'America's Arctic Economic Ambitions' CSIS discussion – 'America's Arctic Economic Ambitions: Opportunities and Limitations' Center for Strategic and International Studies and Senate Arctic Caucus discussion. Speakers include Republican Sen. Lisa Murkowski, and Independent Sen. Angus King Location: CSIS, 1616 Rhode Island Ave, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

8:30 AM Bipartisan lawmakers speak at 'Stand for Free Speech' event – 'Stand for Free Speech' event at Sheridan Circle, the site of a 16 May clash between protesters and security guards for visiting Turkish President Recep Erdogan. Speakers include Republican Reps. Dana Rohrabacher and Dave Trott and Democratic Rep. Jim McGovern Location: Sheridan Circle Northwest, Washington, DC <https://anca.org/> https://twitter.com/ANCA_DC

8:30 AM GOP Sen. Tom Cotton at U.S. Chamber of Commerce event – U.S. Chamber of Commerce Institute for Legal Reform (ILR) and Center for Capital Markets Competitiveness (CCMC) host Republican Sen. Tom Cotton for an event focused on the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's final arbitration rule, including its implications for the business community and next steps Location: U.S. Chamber of Commerce, 1615 H St NW, Washington, DC www.uschamber.com <https://twitter.com/USChamber>

9:00 AM Dem Sen. Tim Kaine speaks on U.S. foreign policy at Brookings – Democratic Sen.

Tim Kaine speaks on 'A 21st Century Truman Doctrine?' at Brookings Institution, discussing U.S. foreign policy and the themes from his new article in Foreign Affairs, 'A new Truman Doctrine: Grand Strategy in a hyperconnected world' Location: The Brookings Institution, 1775 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.brookings.edu>
<https://twitter.com/BrookingsInst> #NatSec

9:00 AM CAP discussion on 'Attacks and Advances in Voter Registration' – 'Attacks and Advances in Voter Registration' Center for American Progress discussion, with Center for American Progress President and CEO Neera Tanden, Secretaries of State Alex Padilla (California) and Nellie Gorbea (Rhode Island), Alliance for Youth Action Executive Director Sarah Audelo, Generation Progress Executive Director Maggie Thompson, and Chicago Votes Executive Director Stevie Valles Location: Center For American Progress, 1333 H St NW, Washington, DC www.americanprogress.org <https://twitter.com/amprog>

9:00 AM '2017 Congressional Pig Book' released – Citizens Against Government Waste release '2017 Congressional Pig Book', a database of pork projects identified by CAGW, and the 2017 Pig Book Summary, profiling 'the most egregious examples' from the fiscal year (FY) 2017 appropriations bills. Speakers at press conference include Republicans Sens. Jeff Flake and Joni Ernst and Reps. Mark Walker, Bill Fores, Ron DeSantis and Jim Banks, who discuss 'the current state of earmark reform, the earmark moratorium, and what must be done to permanently stop members of Congress from practicing their swinish ways' * GOP Sen. John McCain had also been scheduled to speak, but is recovering from surgery for a blood clot * This year marks CAGW's 25th edition of the Pig Book Location: Phoenix Park Hotel, 520 North Capitol Street Northwest, Washington, DC www.cagw.org <https://twitter.com/GovWaste>

7:30 PM Former Vice President Al Gore attends special screening of 'An Inconvenient Sequel' in Washington, DC – Special screening of environmental documentary 'An Inconvenient Sequel: Truth to Power', attended by former Vice President Al Gore, directors Bonni Cohen and Jon Shenk, and producers Jeff Skoll, Diane Weyermann and Richard Berge. The movie is a follow-up to Davis Guggenheim's 2006 documentary 'An Inconvenient Truth', with Gore returning to front an investigation into how close we are to a real energy revolution. Released in select theaters 28 Jul and expanding to theaters nationwide 4 Aug Location: Newseum, 555 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC <https://twitter.com/aitruthfilm> #AnInconvenientSequel

DNC voting rights commission press conference as the Commission on Election Integrity meets for first time – Democratic National Committee Commission on Protecting American Democracy from the Trump Administration press conference, as the Presidential Commission on Election Integrity – formed by President Donald Trump in May – meets for the first time * Members of the DNC Commission include Let America Vote President Jason Kander, Democratic Sen. Cory Booker and Reps. Terri Sewell, Joaquin Castro, Grace Meng and Gwen Moore, Kentucky Secretary of State Alison Lundergan Grimes, Massachusetts Attorney General Maura Healey, California Secretary of State Alex Padilla, Colorado House Speakers Crisanta Duran, Maricopa County Recorder Adrian Fontes, DNC Vice Chair Louisiana state Sen. Karen Carter Peterson, and District of Columbia Attorney General Karl Racine * The Presidential Commission is due to issue a report next year, 'reviewing ways to strengthen the integrity of elections in order to protect and preserve the principle of one person, one vote' Location: Washington, DC <http://www.democrats.org/> <https://twitter.com/TheDemocrats>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: "According to the Weather Channel, tropical storm Don is not a threat to the United States unless it runs for President. Then it will be a disaster. The funny thing about it is the name of the storm; there's no connection to the President. They come up with these names for these storms way ahead of time. This just happened to be the next name in the rotation. What makes it even weirder is the name may have set for the next big storm in the Pacific Ocean, and I'm not making this up, will be Hillary."

Jimmy Kimmel: "Meanwhile, tropical storm Don Jr. is headed toward Russia right now. No one knows why."

Jimmy Kimmel: "I do want to say, to be fair, it was hard for DJTJ and for Jared Kushner and Paul Manafort to know how many Russians would be in the meeting because sometimes they hide the smaller Russians inside the bigger Russians."

Jimmy Kimmel: "Forty-one percent of Americans support impeachment for Donald Trump. That includes President Trump himself. He cannot wait to get the hell out of there."

Jimmy Kimmel: "Trump said today the Senate should just move on and let Obamacare fail without replacing it, which I have to say, it's refreshing to have a President who's okay with letting his fellow Americans die just to prove his point."

Stephen Colbert: "I have some sad news tonight. As of 10:48 p.m. Eastern last night, the GOP healthcare bill was pronounced dead of terminal sucking. Yeah. I clap when I'm heartbroken, too."

Stephen Colbert: "It was always a long-shot because the Republicans control only all three branches of government. Can't be expected to do everything."

Stephen Colbert: "But the Republicans have a great backup plan. Senate Majority Leader...Mitch McConnell can introduce a bill simply repealing Obamacare with no replacement. You know, just take it away and don't fix it. You know how when your car gets a flat tire, you remove it, then cut the brakes and let it roll into a crowd of uninsured old people."

Trevor Noah: "No! Trumpcare no more! Now I have no idea how I'm going to die! I don't know why we're surprised. The words 'Trump' and 'care' were never destined to be together."

Trevor Noah: "Republicans have been saying forever that Obamacare is going to fail. It's in a death spiral! But after years of them trying to kill it, it is somehow the only thing that's still around. All of their healthcare plans collapsed immediately. They're like, 'Obamacare is dead. Check out our plan. Oh, my God, plan? Wake up, plan. Wake up!'"

Trevor Noah: "While the GOP's healthcare dreams were crumbling, Trump was hosting a play party at the White House celebrating something called 'Made in America Week' where the President checked out guitars, wrestled with baseball bats, and his favorite activity, fake driving a truck. Yeah, and everyone was like, 'The fire is behind you in the White House!'"

Trevor Noah: "Even though this is 'Made in America Week,' let's turn to something that wasn't made in America. Donald Trump's presidency."

Jimmy Fallon: "The big story is that the Republican bill to repeal and replace Obamacare has officially fallen apart. But Republicans say they're just going to let Obamacare fail while they regroup and figure out a new plan. And Democrats said, 'Hey, that's the same thing we're doing with Trump.'"

Seth Meyers: "Republicans announced last night that the latest GOP healthcare plan will not be moving forward, making this the second draft of the bill to fail in the Senate. Though when it comes to President Trump, the third time's the charm."

Seth Meyers: "That's right. It's the second draft of the Republican healthcare bill to fail in the Senate. 'What's a second draft?' asked the writer of 'Transformers.'"

Seth Meyers: "After the failure of the GOP healthcare plan, Majority Leader Mitch McConnell outlined plans to repeal Obamacare without a bill to replace it. The same way we got rid of Obama without a good plan to replace him."

Seth Meyers: "Scott Pruitt being the head of the EPA is the same as New York's food inspector being a rat with a clipboard."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, July 26, 2017
Date: Wednesday, July 26, 2017 7:00:02 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, JULY 26, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- New York Times: As Interior Secretary Swaggers Through Parks, His Staff Rolls Back Regulations.
- Columbus (OH) Dispatch: Packed House Expected For Trump In Youngstown.
- Bitterroot (MT) Star: New Deputy Assistant Secretary For Fish, Wildlife and Parks Visits Montana.
- Daily Caller: Gov't Scientist Claims He's A Victim Of Retaliation From Trump.
- Deseret (UT) News: Outdoor Retailer Brings Products, Politics For Last Utah Show.
- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Report: Utah's Coal Industry Fading While More Eco-friendly Outdoor Recreation Surges.
- Reuters: Battle Intensifies To Contain Montana Wildfire, Largest In U.S.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Federal Official Works To Promote 'Robust' Tribal Economies.
- Under Trump, Tribal Land Ownership Is Not A Priority.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Craig (CO) Daily Press: BLM: Coal Lease In Routt County Part Of 'Make America Safe Through Energy Independence'.
- Las Vegas Review-Journal: Red Spring Boardwalk At Red Rock Closed For Safety Reasons.

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

- W&T, Otto Set To Drill In US Gulf.
- Delaware Senators Oppose Atlantic Ocean Seismic Testing.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Delta Tunnels Project Reaches Key Milestone As Opponents May Sue.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- San Francisco Chronicle: Fish Killed In Nebraska After Water Diversion Stops.
- Minneapolis Star Tribune: Man Accused Of Smuggling King Cobras In Potato Chip Cans.
- Hilton Head Island (SC) Packet: Hilton Head Is Having A Closed Meeting With U.S. Fish And Wildlife To Discuss A Piping Plover Protection Area.
- Washington (NC) Daily News: Comments Show Good And Bad Of Red Wolf Plan.
- Grand Island (NE) Independent: Former Fish And Wildlife Service Employee Charged With Burglary, Theft From Office.
- Juneau (AK) Empire: Proposed Izembek Road Would Be Massive Expense For Budget-strapped State.
- Prescott (AZ) Daily Courier: Column: Mexican Gray Wolf Plan Doesn't Work For Rural Arizona.

National Park Service

- U.S. News & World Report: Wild Horse Dies After Eating Dog Food In Maryland.
- Associated Press: Zion Trail Closed By Mudslide To Be Repaired With $1M Grant.
- KWTX-TV Waco (TX): NPS Designation Pays Off For Waco Mammoth Site.
- Tri-City Herald (WA): Richland National Park Visitor Center Dedicated.
- KLKN-TV Lincoln (NE): UNL Student Teams Up With National Park Service For Eclipse Plan.
- Associated Press: Lightning Sparks Wildfire In Dinosaur National Monument.
- Tap Into New Jersey: Thomas Edison National Historical Park Displays "The Origins Of Sound Recording" Exhibit.
- Rochester (NY) Democrat & Chronicle: Time To Give The Finger Lakes Region Its Due.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Saipan (MNP) Tribune: Interior Provides $409,885 To Guam.
- Virgin Islands Daily News: Trump Official Signals Willingness To Reconsider Independent Oversight For V.I. Education Funds.
- Loop Pacific: China Takes More Of A Lead With Climate Change Efforts In The Pacific.

Office Of Surface Mining

- DOI Mining Decision Can Be Challenged, 10th Circ. Says.

Top National News

- Wall Street Journal: Trump Says He's "Very Disappointed" In Sessions, Won't Say If He'll Fire Him.
- Youngstown (OH) Vindicator: Trump Rallies Supporters In Youngstown, Ohio.
- Associated Press: Kushner, Manafort Meet With Congressional Investigators.
- Reuters: Senate Rejects First GOP Healthcare Bill After Narrowly Approving Motion To Proceed.
- Wall Street Journal: Trump Says He May Reappoint Yellen Or Name Cohn To Lead Fed.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "The Senate's Healthcare Travesty."
 - "Fixing Blame Won't Fix The Subways."
 - "Britain Sees Brexit's Threats More Clearly."

- Washington Post.
 - "This Is Not Okay."
 - "The Migrants Who Died In Misery Last Weekend Won't Be The Last."
 - "Change J.E.B. Stuart High School's Name."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Trump's Sessions Abuse."
 - "Repealing The Arbitration Rule."
 - "A GOP Gallows Reprieve."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

As Interior Secretary Swaggers Through Parks, His Staff Rolls Back Regulations.

In an analysis, the New York Times (7/25, Davenport, Fandos) reports that as Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, who professes his admiration of Teddy Roosevelt, visits public lands in the West to gather input on his department's review of recent national monument designations, "a crew of political appointees in Washington has begun rolling back the conservation efforts" put in place during the Obama Administration. The Times highlights that Interior staff filed a legal proposal on Tuesday "to rescind the nation's first safety regulation on hydraulic fracturing," "are exploring a proposal to loosen safety rules on underwater drilling equipment put in place after the 2010 BP oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico," "have rolled back an Obama-era order to block coal mining on public lands and delayed carrying out a regulation controlling emissions of methane...from oil and gas wells," and is conducting "a review of federal protections of the sage grouse." The Times adds that Zinke's cultivation of his "rugged image" is said to "getting old" to conservationists, while "the oil and gas lobby says it is delighted" with the policy moves.

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington Times (7/25, Wolfgang).

Secretary Zinke Expected To Visit Las Cruces This Week. The Las Cruces \(NM\) Sun-News (7/25) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is "expected to travel to New Mexico this week as part of a review of two national monuments in the state." U.S. Sen. Tom Udall expects Zinke will "be coming to New Mexico this week to evaluate" the Organ Mountains Desert Peaks National Monument and Rio Grande del Norte National Monument. The article says that "the mayors of Las Cruces, Mesilla, Anthony, and Sunland Park as well as Doña Ana County Commission Chairwoman Isabella Solis announced Tuesday that they have scheduled a meeting at 6 p.m. Thursday to talk about the OMDP national monument."

The AP (7/26) reports that Zinke is "slated Thursday to take part in a public meeting at the Las Cruces Convention Center with the mayors of Las Cruces, Mesilla, Anthony and Sunland Park."

Additional coverage was provided by KRWG-FM Las Cruces, NM (7/25) and KRWG-FM Las Cruces, NM (7/25).

Our View: Monument Review Is Chance To Make Areas Better For Recreation. The Havasu \(AZ\) News-Herald (7/26) editorializes that "Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's review of national monuments in the West offers an opportunity to rights some wrongs and, if done properly, to actually make those large parcels of federal land even better." The paper thinks there is an opportunity for "the business-oriented administration" to "figure out a model to convert the recreational demand at national parks to recreational use at national monuments."

Packed House Expected For Trump In Youngstown.

In coverage of President Trump's address in Youngstown, Ohio on Tuesday evening, the Columbus \(OH\) Dispatch (7/25, Ludlow) reported before the rally that "prior to his Youngstown remarks, Trump and First Lady Melania Trump are scheduled to attend a ceremony to honor about 150 area veterans and their families as part of 'American Heroes Week.'" Secretary of Energy Rick Perry, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, and Veterans Affairs Secretary David Shulkin “also are to attend the event at AMVETS Post 44 in suburban Strothers.”

New Deputy Assistant Secretary For Fish, Wildlife and Parks Visits Montana.

The Bitterroot \(MT\) Star (7/25) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “recently announced the appointment of two Deputy Assistant Secretaries to serve as leaders at the Department.” According to the article, “Aurelia Skipwith will serve as Deputy Assistant Secretary for Fish, Wildlife and Parks and former House Natural Resources senior staffer Katharine MacGregor will serve as a Deputy Assistant Secretary for Land and Minerals Management.” Skipwith recently visited the Lee Metcalf National Wildlife Refuge. She “said that she is visiting places across the country to get a feel for the land she will be managing and get a sense of the local needs and priorities.”

Gov’t Scientist Claims He’s A Victim Of Retaliation From Trump.

The Daily Caller (7/25, Pearce) reports that an Interior Department official “appeared on National Public Radio and MSNBC’s “Morning Joe” Monday, accusing the Trump administration of demoting him because of his political beliefs.” Joel Clement, the DOI’s Office of Natural Resources Revenue senior advisor, “wrote an op-ed in The Washington Post last week claiming that his reassignment was retaliation for speaking ‘truth to power.’”

Has Trump Sidelined, Restricted Government Scientists? Yes. Joe Davidson writes in the Washington Post (7/25) that the Trump Administration is hostile toward science, saying scientists are restricted from providing advice to government officials and from using terms such as “climate change.” According to the Union of Concerned Scientists, the Administration is creating a “hostile environment for scientific staff” contributing to “a culture of fear” that is “undermining scientific research and communication.” Davidson references the case of “outspoken Interior Department scientist” Joel Clement, who “said his forced reassignment was Trump administration retribution” for speaking out against climate change in Alaska Native communities.

Outdoor Retailer Brings Products, Politics For Last Utah Show.

The Deseret \(UT\) News (7/25, O’Donoghue) reports that “the political and emotional tug-of-war over the destiny of Utah’s public lands is on center stage this week as Outdoor Retailer Summer Market begins its four-day run in Salt Lake City beginning Wednesday.” The article notes that “this year’s event features former Interior Secretary Sally Jewell, who will keynote an industry breakfast on Wednesday with remarks also offered by Montana Gov. Steve Bullock.” Organizers are also planning “a Wednesday release of a state-by-state look at the economic impacts of outdoor recreation and will host a march from 4-6:30 p.m. Thursday from the Salt Palace Convention Center to the state Capitol.”

Report: Utah’s Coal Industry Fading While More Eco-friendly Outdoor Recreation Surges.

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (7/25, Maffly) reports that “nearly $400 billion worth of high-quality coal lies under lands protected by the Grand Staircase Escalante National Monument, but the best thing for Utah would to leave this black bounty where it is – in favor of embracing cleaner energy sources and outdoor recreation, both of which abound in the Beehive State,” according to a new report. The report from the group Alliance for a Better Utah “highlights the coal industry’s ever-dimming future and rising prospects of eco-based tourism.” Jonathan Ruga, an Alliance for a Better Utah board member, said, “Outdoor recreation provides 76 times as many jobs in Utah as coal – 1220,000 versus 1,600 – and 27 times as much in salary and wages – $3.6 billion versus $132.8 million.”

Battle Intensifies To Contain Montana Wildfire, Largest In U.S.

Reuters (7/25) reports that “more than 600 firefighters in Montana battled on Tuesday to halt the spread of the biggest wildfire in the United States after it torched buildings, seared grasslands and drove scores of people from their homes.” The Lodgepole Complex fire was “20 percent contained after laying waste to 250,000 acres (101,171 hectares) of timber, brush and range land near the Missouri River, according to the National Interagency Coordination Center.” The blaze has “forced 50 people from their homes and destroyed 22 structures, it said.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Federal Official Works To Promote ‘Robust’ Tribal Economies.

The Bismarck \(ND\) Tribune (7/25, Dalrymple) reports that an Interior Department official “visited the Mandan, Hidatsa and Arikara Nation Tuesday, outlining his goals for improving economic development of Indian Country.” Gavin Clarkson, deputy assistant secretary of Indian Affairs for policy and economic development, “told attendees of the MHA Energy Symposium how he wants to change federal policies to empower tribes economically.” Clarkson “said energy development is critical for tribal economic development and his goal is to remove hurdles, such as burdensome regulations, that slow down development on reservations.”

Under Trump, Tribal Land Ownership Is Not A Priority.

In an analysis for the High Country \(CO\) News (7/25, Smith), Anna V. Smith writes that “during President Barack Obama’s eight-year tenure, tribal sovereignty, the power by which tribes govern themselves, was a prime concern.” However, Smith expects a shift under the Trump Administration, pointing to “proposed budget cuts to the Interior Department’s Bureau of Indian Affairs and the de-prioritization of major land initiatives.” She notes that “within the first six months of President Donald Trump’s administration, the Department of Interior has renewed its interest of energy development and tribal land privatization.” Smith says “that differs starkly from Obama policies, which focused on both acquiring and consolidating land for tribal nations.” She also notes that “one of the most ambitious efforts to that end, the Land Buy-Back Program, will not continue under Trump.”

Bureau Of Land Management

BLM: Coal Lease In Routt County Part Of ‘Make America Safe Through Energy Independence’.

The Craig \(CO\) Daily Press (7/25) reports that Peabody Energy is seeking a new coal lease in Routt County that would allow it to access “640 acres and, potentially, 4.1 million tons of federally-owned coal.” The Bureau of Land Management is “characterized their evaluation” of Peabody’s lease request as “part of the Trump Administration’s ‘priority to make America safe through energy independence.’”

Red Spring Boardwalk At Red Rock Closed For Safety Reasons.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal (7/25, Brean) reports that “a portion of the Red Spring boardwalk at Red Rock Canyon National Conservation Area has been closed indefinitely due to safety concerns.” The Bureau of Land Management “blocked access to the lower portion of the walkway at the Red Spring picnic area on July 19 because the wood was deteriorating and had become unsafe, said spokesman John Asselin.” He said that “the closed portions of the boardwalk eventually will be replaced, but the BLM does not yet have a timeline for the work.”

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

W&T, Otto Set To Drill In US Gulf.

Upstream Online (7/25) reports that W&T Offshore and Otto Energy have “contracted a rig to drill at the South Timbalier (ST) 224 prospect in the Gulf of Mexico.” According to Otto, “the initial exploration plan for the ST 224 gas prospect has been submitted and approved by the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management.”

Additional coverage was provided by Offshore Energy Today (7/25).

Delaware Senators Oppose Atlantic Ocean Seismic Testing.

The AP (7/25) reports the two US senators from Delaware, Tom Carper and Chris Coons, “are asking the Trump administration to reject applications from companies seeking to conduct seismic surveys in the Atlantic Ocean, a first step toward offshore drilling.” The senators “said in a joint statement Tuesday that they and leaders in Delaware coastal communities oppose the surveys, which help map potential drilling sites for oil and natural gas.” The AP adds “many other East Coast lawmakers and environmental groups also oppose such surveying, saying loud sounds from seismic air guns could hurt marine life.”

Bureau Of Reclamation

Delta Tunnels Project Reaches Key Milestone As Opponents May Sue.

The Salem \(OR\) Capital Press (7/25, Hearden) reports that California has “reached a key milestone in its $15.7 billion proposal to build tunnel bypasses around the Sacramento-San Joaquin River Delta as an environmental group is threatening to sue to stop it.” California’s Department of Water Resources on July 21 “certified that environmental reviews for the project, dubbed California WaterFix, meets all requirements under the state’s Environmental Quality Act.” However, Barbara Barrigan-Parilla, executive director of the organization Restore the Delta, “said the plan is ‘deeply flawed’ in that it would not create water supply reliability amid a period of increased and prolonged droughts but will saddle ratepayers with up to 75 years of debt.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

Fish Killed In Nebraska After Water Diversion Stops.

The AP (7/25) reports that “officials say thousands of fish have died since a utility company was forced to stop diverting water from an eastern Nebraska river into its power canal.” The fish were “killed after water flow from the Loup River to the Loup Public Power District’s canal shut off July 15.” Jeff Schuckman, a regional fisheries manager at the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission’s Norfolk office, “estimated the number of dead fish is in the ‘tens of thousands.’”

Man Accused Of Smuggling King Cobras In Potato Chip Cans.

The AP (7/25, Balsamo) reports that “a man was arrested on federal smuggling charges Tuesday after customs officers intercepted a shipment with three live king cobras hidden inside potato chip canisters that were being mailed to his California home, U.S. prosecutors said.” Rodrigo Franco was “scheduled to be arraigned Tuesday afternoon in Los Angeles on a charge of illegally importing merchandise.” He “faces up to 20 years in prison.”

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by the Chattanooga \(TN\) Times Free Press (7/25), the Daily Mail (7/25, Balsamo), Newsday \(NY\) (7/25, Balsamo), Philly \(PA\) (7/25, Balsamo), the Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (7/25, Balsamo), the Washington \(DC\) Post (7/25, Michael Balsamo |, Ap), and WTVR-TV Richmond \(VA\) Richmond, VA (7/25).

Additional coverage was provided by CNN (7/25, Moshtaghian, McKirdy), the Washington Post (7/25, Horton), the Sand Hills \(NE\) Express (7/25) and KMBC-TV Kansas City \(MO\) Kansas City, MO (7/25).

Hilton Head Is Having A Closed Meeting With U.S. Fish And Wildlife To Discuss A Piping Plover Protection Area.

The Hilton Head Island \(SC\) Packet (7/25, Kincaid) reports that “Port Royal Plantation residents should soon have an easier way to access the beach after a federally protected shorebird caused a half-mile stretch to be closed earlier this month.” The article says that “after about 90 minutes of closed-door discussion Tuesday afternoon, representatives of the plantation, town of Hilton Head, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agreed to create an access point for residents and several other changes, according to Scott Liggett, director of public projects and facilities and chief engineer for the town.” He said “the town was given the authority by the Fish and Wildlife Service to create an access point at beach marker 125 so that Port Royal Plantation residents can enter the beach through the Ocean Point South entrance.”

Comments Show Good And Bad Of Red Wolf Plan.

The Washington \(NC\) Daily News (7/25, Hudson) reports that “a 60-day public comments period for the Red Wolf Recovery Program came to an end Monday.” According to Lilibeth Serrano, public affairs specialist, “between written and verbal comments submitted, USFWS received a total of 12,265 comments.” Serrano said, “As we develop a Draft Environmental Assessment and a proposed 10(j) rule, we will consider all comments received. We are still sorting through the nature of all the comments, so it is hard to describe in absolute terms. In general, I can say that we’ve seen a mix of criticism and support.”

Former Fish And Wildlife Service Employee Charged With Burglary, Theft From Office.

The Grand Island \(NE\) Independent (7/25, Bahr) reports that “a former employee of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is being charged with burglarizing the office, which is in the Crane Trust Nature and Visitor Center along Interstate 80." John Cochnar "used to work at the Fish and Wildlife Service's Ecological Services field office." Cochnar is "also accused of stealing money from the Crane Trust."

Proposed Izembek Road Would Be Massive Expense For Budget-strapped State.

In an op-ed for the Juneau \(AK\) Empire (7/25, Epstein), Lois Epstein, the Arctic program director for The Wilderness Society, argues that the proposed road through the Izembek National Wildlife Refuge is "a huge new expense" that the state of Alaska can't afford. Epstein, "roughly one out of 10 state road construction dollars for one year would go to the wilderness segment of the Izembek road, trading off road safety and capacity upgrades throughout the rest of the state, with potentially significant, adverse safety impacts to the state's population." Epstein urges state legislators to "show fiscal leadership and choose not to include funds in the FY18 capital budget for the proposed Izembek road."

Column: Mexican Gray Wolf Plan Doesn't Work For Rural Arizona.

In an op-ed for the Prescott \(AZ\) Daily Courier (7/25, Flake), Sen. Jeff Flake claims that "the recovery process for the Mexican gray wolf has proved to be another example of the federal government's disregard for local concerns." Flake argues that the revised recovery plan that was released last month "does not reflect an honest attempt on behalf of the federal government to work with those most directly impacted by wolves on the landscape." Flake vows to "intend to make it clear the most recent draft has substantial flaws and that the agency must better take into account the voices of Arizona's ranchers and rural residents."

National Park Service

Wild Horse Dies After Eating Dog Food In Maryland.

The AP (7/25) reports that "officials say a wild horse had been found dead after eating dog food that someone improperly stored at Assateague Island National Seashore." The National Park Service "said in a statement that the body of the 7-year-old mare called Chama Wingapo was found dead in a campground on Thursday." According to the statement, "an investigation found the horse had ingested a 'large quantity' of dog food days earlier on July 17." A necropsy concluded "the dog food caused a blockage and resulted in a ruptured intestine, causing death."

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by ABC News (7/25), the Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (7/25), the Daily Mail (7/25), Philly \(PA\) (7/25), the San Francisco \(CA\) Chronicle (7/25), the Washington \(DC\) Post (7/25, Press), and the Washington \(DC\) Times (7/25).

Additional coverage was provided by USA Today (7/25, The (salisbury) and Horse (7/25, Raia).

Zion Trail Closed By Mudslide To Be Repaired With $1M Grant.

The AP (7/25) reports that "a popular Zion National Park trail closed by a large mudslide several years ago will get be repaired with a $1 million grant." The Eccles Foundation is "giving the grant to the National Park Foundation Tuesday to repair the Middle Emerald Pools Trail, which has been closed since December 2010 after severe rain storms caused a large mud slide." The Las Vegas Review-Journal (7/25, Brean) reports that "he donation also is expected to fund national park adventures for up to 20,000 Utah schoolchildren through such National Park Foundation programs as Concrete to Canyons and the Open OutDoors for Kids initiative."

NPS Designation Pays Off For Waco Mammoth Site.

KWTX-TV Waco, TX (7/25, Lopez) reports that the Waco Mammoth National Monument is "seeing some benefit from its National Park Service designation." According to Waco city spokesman Larry Holze, "during the first three months of 2017, a report from the finance department shows a bump in revenue from the site." The city was "expecting to make about $195,000 during the first quarter," but "the report shows the city made $325,000 during that time."

Richland National Park Visitor Center Dedicated.

The Tri-City Herald \(WA\) (7/25, Cary) reports that a dedication ceremony was held Tuesday for the Richland visitor center at the Manhattan Project National Historical Park. The center "that has served as a gateway for tours of Hanford's historic B Reactor since 2009 has had $127,000 of improvements made by the Port of Benton." Kris Kirby, superintendent of the Manhattan Project National Historical Park, said at the dedication, "This is probably the most developed tour operation of the three parks."

UNL Student Teams Up With National Park Service For Eclipse Plan.

KLKN-TV Lincoln, NE (7/25, Petersen) reports that "for the last several months, UNL student Austin Arens has created maps for the solar eclipse event on August 21st, planned at Homestead National Monument of America." The maps of site will be "used to show areas for parking, tents, bathrooms, and vendors." Park Superintendent Mark Engler said, "With the help from all those external groups like the University of Nebraska–Lincoln, we're going to be putting on, hosting a number of special programs and activities that people are not only going to be able to enjoy on eclipse Monday."

Lightning Sparks Wildfire In Dinosaur National Monument.

The AP (7/25) reports that "a wildfire has sparked in Dinosaur National Monument after lightning struck a tree in windy and dry conditions." The blaze "had burned about half a square mile (1 square kilometer) as of Monday afternoon." According to Monument spokesman Dan Johnson, "crews closed the Canyon Overlook to use it as a base for fire operations, but no structures have been threatened and no campers have been evacuated."

Thomas Edison National Historical Park Displays "The Origins Of Sound Recording" Exhibit.

Tap Into New Jersey (7/23) reports that "in commemoration of the 200th anniversary of French inventor Édouard-Léon Scott de Martinville's birth, West Orange's Thomas Edison National Historical Park (TENHP) hosted an international symposium entitled 'The Origins of Sound Recording: Edouard-Léon Scott de Martinville Bicentennial Symposium.'" The National Park Service "recently announced the release of an online exhibit and videos that share the latest historical research into the beginnings of recorded sound technology." According to the article "a physical version of the exhibit, which includes a full-scale replica 1859 Scott phonograph, is on display at TENHP this summer through Aug. 27."

Time To Give The Finger Lakes Region Its Due.

In an editorial, the Rochester \(NY\) Democrat & Chronicle (7/25) supports "legislation that would authorize the National Parks Service to take step one toward designating the Finger Lakes region as a National Heritage Area." The bill, introduced by Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand and sponsored in the House by Rep. Tom Reed, "would require the National parks Service to conduct a feasibility study in Monroe, Ontario, Wayne, Livingston, Cayuga, Chemung, Cortland, Onondaga, Schuyler, Seneca, Steuben, Tioga, Tompkins, and Yates counties." The paper argues that "the Finger Lakes region is a jewel worthy of national attention."

In an editorial, the Auburn \(NY\) Citizen (7/26) urges both Democrats and Republicans to support the bill. The editorial argues that "at very least, it seems like a no-brainer to get this bill, which simply calls for a feasibility study, passed to see what the potential could be."

Office Of Insular Affairs

Interior Provides $409,885 To Guam.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (7/25) reports that Acting Interior assistant secretary for Insular Areas Nikolao Pula "made available $409,885 to preserve natural and cultural resources and protect against invasive species in Guam." Pula said, "We are especially pleased that Congress was able to provide some extra funding in [fiscal year] 2017 to mitigate and control the coconut rhinoceros beetle and little fire ant in Guam. All funding supports Gov. Eddie Calvo's efforts in protecting Guam's natural resources now and for the future."

Trump Official Signals Willingness To Reconsider Independent Oversight For V.I. Education Funds.

The Virgin Islands Daily News (7/25, O'CONNOR) reports that the Virgin Islands' education officials are "hopeful a $3 million financial requirement by the federal government could soon be reduced." At a press conference Monday at Government House in Charlotte Amalie, Gov. Kenneth Mapp said that "U.S. Education Department officials, including U.S. Education Secretary Betsy DeVos, have pledged to look into the situation.” According to the article, “federally mandated third-party fiduciary responsibilities — independent accountants hired to oversee the department’s expenditures — cost the V.I. Education Department about $3 million per year,” and “ending the oversight requirement has been a goal of the Mapp administration, as well as the previous administration of Gov. John deJongh.”

China Takes More Of A Lead With Climate Change Efforts In The Pacific.

Loop Pacific (7/25) reports that “small island states are turning to other nations like China to garner more support for climate change efforts in the region.” Joseph Veramu, a policy analyst and consultant for the Fiji government, “said its Prime Minister Frank Bainimarama is on a mission to get developed nations to reduce emissions and China seems committed to do more to support.” Interestingly, “Pacific nations have grown closer not only to China, but also the European Union and India.”

Office Of Surface Mining

DOI Mining Decision Can Be Challenged, 10th Circ. Says.

Law360 (7/25, Goldberg) reports that “the Tenth Circuit on Tuesday reversed a lower court’s dismissal of a coal miner’s challenge of an enforcement decision by a U.S. Department of the Interior administrative law judge, saying such decisions are final and subject to judicial review once the agency’s appeals board declines to stay them.”

Top National News

Trump Says He’s “Very Disappointed” In Sessions, Won’t Say If He’ll Fire Him.

President Trump’s continued public criticism of Attorney General Sessions receives heavy media coverage including more than 10 minutes of reporting on the network news broadcasts – two of which led with the story – as well extensive print coverage and cable commentary. The coverage is largely negative for Trump, casting him as trying to precipitate Sessions’ resignation rather than firing him and highlighting criticism of his comments and tweets from conservative groups, former Justice Department officials, and Republican lawmakers as well as Democrats who believe Trump is trying to install a new attorney general who will put a stop to special counsel Robert Mueller’s investigation.

In an interview with the Wall Street Journal (7/25, Bender), Trump expressed disappointment in Sessions, but would not say whether he plans to fire him. Trump told the Journal, “I’m very disappointed in Jeff Sessions.” Asked how long he could continue criticizing his Attorney General without firing him Trump said, “I’m just looking at it. ... I’ll just see. It’s a very important thing.” The Washington Times (7/25, Miller) reports that Trump said in a Rose Garden press conference Tuesday that “time will tell” what is in Sessions’ future.

The Hill (7/25, Fabian) quotes Trump as saying during the press conference, “If he was going to recuse himself, he should have told me before taking office. ... I think that’s a bad thing not for the president, but for the presidency.” Reuters (7/25) says that in comments which fed speculation that Sessions will not last long in his job, Trump said in the news conference, “I want the attorney general to be much tougher. ... I want the leaks from intelligence agencies, which are leaking like rarely have they ever leaked before, at a very important level. These are intelligence agencies we cannot have that happen.”

Anthony Mason said in the lead story for the CBS Evening News (7/25, lead story, 3:45) that Trump gave Sessions “a very public, very humiliating thrashing” Tuesday. On NBC Nightly News (7/25, story 3, 2:55), anchor Lester Holt described Trump as “publicly belittling” Sessions, and Kristen Welker said that Trump “has been scathing, calling Sessions beleaguered and weak.” Bloomberg News (7/25, Olorunnipa, Talev) says Trump has “unleashed a torrent of public criticism against” Sessions in “an apparent campaign to pressure Sessions to quit,” and the Washington Post (7/25, Johnson, Branigin) says Trump’s “onslaught raised questions about Sessions’s tenure as attorney general.”

On Tuesday morning, Trump tweeted, “Attorney General Jeff Sessions has taken a VERY weak position on Hillary Clinton crimes (where are E-mails & DNC server) & Intel leakers!” The Wall Street Journal (7/25, Stokols) says Trump’s tweet seemed to be urging Sessions to launch a criminal investigation of Clinton. In another tweet Tuesday, Trump suggested that people in control at the FBI are Clinton sympathizers. Trump wrote, "Problem is that the acting head of the FBI & the person in charge of the Hillary investigation, Andrew McCabe, got $700,000 from H for wife!" Newsweek (7/25, Kutner) reports that the FBI "has defended McCabe, saying he did not help his wife fundraise and did not begin overseeing the Clinton investigation until after his wife's campaign was over."

Reuters (7/25) reports that Trump "raised questions, without offering evidence, about Ukrainian support for his Democratic presidential rival, Hillary Clinton," writing in a tweet, "Ukrainian efforts to sabotage Trump campaign – 'quietly working to boost Clinton.' So where is the investigation A.G." He "did not elaborate or offer evidence about any role Ukraine may have played in the 2016 election." Ukraine's Embassy in Washington "denied Kiev had tried to influence the US election," tweeting, "We stand by our words that the government of Ukraine didn't help any candidate in (the) election. Ukraine is proud of bipartisan support in the US."

Citing Trump's tweets, the Los Angeles Times (7/25) says Trump is "keeping up pressure" on Sessions, while The Hill (7/25, Balluck) says Trump's tweets "underlin[ed] the sense that he wants to be rid of his attorney general." The New York Times (7/25, Sullivan, Shear) says the tweets "were the latest in a string of attacks on Mr. Sessions," which Jake Tapper described on CNN's The Lead (7/25) as an "escalating campaign of public humiliation to push out" the Attorney General. CNN senior White House correspondent Jeff Zeleny said on CNN's The Lead (7/25) that Trump is "indeed shaming him, he's humiliating him, but he's not saying if he intends to fire him. There is a bit of mystery at the White House over how long this will go on."

In the lead story for ABC World News Tonight (7/25, lead story, 3:55, Muir), Jonathan Karl described the President as "publicly seething" over Sessions' decision to recuse himself and added that White House aides say Trump "exploded in anger" when Sessions announced his decision, and did so again "following the announcement of Special Counsel Robert Mueller." Tucker Carlson said on Fox News Tucker Carlson Tonight (7/25) that the Russia investigation itself is "unfair to the presidency," but "publicly attacking Jeff Sessions for all of that – that is nuts."

The AP (7/25, Lemire, Colvin) reports that White House communications director Anthony Scaramucci said in an interview with radio host Hugh Hewitt that Trump is "obviously frustrated" and that he and Sessions "need to work this thing out." When Hewitt said it is clear that Trump wants Sessions gone, Scaramucci replied, "you're probably right." White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders said on Fox News' Fox & Friends (7/25) that Trump is "certainly frustrated and disappointed in the Attorney General for recusing himself. ... That frustration certainly hasn't gone away."

Meanwhile, Politico (7/25, Nelson, McCaskill) says "conservatives and some White House advisers are cautioning Trump against seeking his ouster." According to Politico, chief strategist Steve Bannon "has emphasized that firing Sessions is a risky move that would cast the White House in a negative light and potentially unleash a political disaster, according to a senior White House aide." Politico adds that "conservative outside groups and leaders came to Sessions' defense on Tuesday." Major Garrett said in the lead story for CBS Evening News (7/25, lead story, 3:45) that "conservative groups rushed to Sessions' defense...after learning he wanted to stay in the job. Their message to President Trump: You're playing with fire, and continued roughing up of Sessions could promote a first genuine backlash from the President's conservative activist base."

CNN's Situation Room (7/25) reported Trump's "public flogging" of Sessions "isn't sitting well" with some "Republican senators." McClatchy (7/25, Clark) reports that Trump is learning "a bitter Washington lesson" that "you don't pick a fight with one of the Senate's guys," and it "could cost him politically in a Senate where he badly needs Republican support for his lengthy agenda." The AP (7/25, Lemire, Colvin) says Trump's "ongoing criticism...drew a fiery response" from Sen. Lindsey Graham, who said, "Jeff Sessions is one of the most decent people I've ever met in my political life. ... President Trump's tweet today suggesting Attorney General Sessions pursue prosecution of a former political rival is highly inappropriate." Sens. Richard Shelby and Thom Tillis "also voiced support of their former colleague. But the White House only turned up the heat further." Reuters (7/25) also reports on Graham's comments.

The Wall Street Journal (7/25, Wilber, Viswanatha, Reinhard) reports that former Justice Department officials also defended Sessions and expressed concern that if Trump were to fire him, it could result in the resignations of other top DOJ officials and trigger a constitutional crisis.

A Wall Street Journal (7/25) editorial is highly critical, likening Trump's suggestion that Sessions prosecute Clinton to something one would see from the Erdogan government in Turkey or the Duterte government in the Philippines. A Washington Post (7/25) editorial similarly says that "there is a serious point to be made about the difference between the United States of America and a state ruled by personal whim." The US "has been the envy of the world because certain norms have been accepted." The Post argues that the stakes are higher than "the careers of a particular attorney general or special counsel." When Trump "attacks that process and seeks revenge on his opponents," he "betrays bedrock American values. It's crucial that other political leaders say so."

In what it sees as a sign of "the potential political danger ahead," USA Today (7/25, Przybyla) says "the diversity of conservatives rallying behind Sessions is significant," ranging from "the alt-right Breitbart News and conservative talk host Rush Limbaugh to family values and anti-immigration groups." CNN White House correspondent Sara Murray said on CNN's Situation Room (7/25) that "some Administration officials are making the case to President Trump to keep Sessions on board and they're pointing to that outpouring of support that Sessions is getting from Republican senators, but even they acknowledge this rift may be too far gone for these men to mend fences." In the lead story for ABC World News Tonight (7/25, lead story, 3:55, Muir), Karl cited "people close to the President" who believed "he was on the verge of firing Sessions. One person who intervened was close Trump friend and adviser, Newt Gingrich." While "the firing didn't happen...Gingrich afterwards cautioned the story is not over."

However, the defense of Sessions from Republicans was not universal. The Washington Times (7/25, Persons) reports that reacting to the idea that Sessions might be dismissed, House Speaker Ryan said during his weekly press briefing that Trump "gets to decide what his personnel is." Ryan added, "He's the executive branch, we're the legislative branch, he determines who gets hired and fired in the executive branch, that's his prerogative." Politico (7/25, Wright, Kim, Cheney) reports that some Republicans "sought to both praise Sessions while also rationalizing Trump's tweets attacking him." Sen. John Kennedy said, "I think Jeff Sessions is a good man. ... But he works for the president of the United States." Rep. Dave Brat "said Trump's broadsides against Sessions were a reflection of the president's frustration with Democratic opponents and perceived media bias," and Rep. Trent Franks "called Sessions a 'noble public servant and a valued human being,'" and "said he believes the president thinks so too, despite the criticism."

Meanwhile, in another story, Politico (7/25, Wright, Kim, Cheney) says Democrats "suggested an ulterior motive...saying the president could be laying the groundwork to install a new attorney general who would rein in special counsel Robert Mueller's Russia probe." For example, Senate Minority Leader Schumer said, "Many Americans must be wondering if the president is trying to pry open the office of attorney general to appoint someone during the August recess who will fire Special Counsel Mueller and shut down the Russia investigation." Reuters (7/25) quotes Schumer as saying, "Democrats will never go along with the recess appointment if that situation arises. ... We have some tools in our toolbox to stymie such action. We're ready to use every single one of them."

Sen. Joe Manchin said on MSNBC's Morning Joe (7/25), "I just would say that the next person, if Jeff's not going to be there, the next person's going to have a much more strenuous time coming through confirmation process because we want to make sure people in the Justice Department put the rule of law above any one human being or any one party."

Sen. Mazie Hirono said on CNN's The Lead (7/25), "I think it's outrageous that the President is now going after the senator who was the first out of the chute to endorse him and who the President called the smartest person in Washington, DC and now because I think he's very afraid of where the Russian investigation is heading that he's going after Jeff Sessions."

Sen. Chris Coons said on CNN's Situation Room (7/25), "I'll remind you that the reason [Trump is] disappointed" is that Sessions "appropriately recused himself from an ongoing investigation into the potential collusion between the Russians and the Trump campaign." Coons said his concern is that Trump's true intention is to get Sessions to resign "so he can appoint someone to attorney general who will be willing to take decisive action against Bob Mueller."

Appearing on CNN's Situation Room (7/25), Rep. Adam Schiff, ranking Democrat on the House Intelligence Committee, said Trump "wants to fire...Sessions, but he would rather not have to do it, so he's trying to force him to resign. And he wants to do that so that he can bring in a new attorney general that will limit the scope of what" special counsel Mueller can investigate. Schiff added, "We cannot allow that to happen."

Rep. Joaquin Castro said on MSNBC's Morning Joe (7/25), "I was somebody who said that Jeff Sessions should not have gotten the job. I've said previously he should resign. So I'm in a very weird position. ... On the one hand, I don't want to allow Donald Trump to dictate the terms of the Russia investigation because him forcing out Jeff Sessions to me seems like a prelude to essentially do away with Bob Mueller and the country cannot allow him to do that. On the other hand, I also think that Jeff Sessions has a lot of conflicts of interest and for that reason, he shouldn't be in that job." Castro added, "In the next few days, I think we will probably see Jeff Sessions gone."

Rep. Eric Swalwell said on MSNBC's Morning Joe (7/25), "I believe that Jeff Sessions has to go for different reasons than Donald Trump. He wasn't forthcoming with the Senate and the American people about his Russian ties, and he was a part of the James Comey firing. For those reasons, I don't think he can remain the top law enforcement officer. Donald Trump, his reasons are he's not loyal and that he won't attack and go after and prosecute Donald Trump's political opponents."

Allies Say Sessions Does Not Intend To Resign. Reuters (7/25, Ainsley) reports that while Sessions' allies say Trump is trying to pressure the Attorney General to quit, rather than fire him, he does not intend to resign. Reuters cites "two people close to Sessions" who say he "has been deeply offended by the public berating from his boss, but his resolve to stay is strong." The Washington Post (7/25, Barrett, Rucker, Horwitz) says Sessions' chief of staff Jody Hunt recently told White House Chief of Staff Reince Priebus that Sessions "had no intention of stepping down." The Post cites "people familiar with the conversation" who said that Hunt "made it clear to Priebus that Sessions 'plans to move forward with his agenda in the department and he has no plans for resigning.'" These people also said that Priebus "did not say Trump planned to fire Sessions if he did not leave."

Charles Hurt of the Washington Times said on Fox News' Special Report (7/25), "What is the endgame here? If he is trying to humiliate Sessions into quitting, he's going to be left with [Deputy Attorney General] Rod Rosenstein, and do you think that the Senate...is going to give him a new attorney general? I don't think that they are. I don't really understand what the endgame here is except to just humiliate Jeff Sessions." Kathleen Parker writes in her Washington Post (7/25) column that while Trump expects loyalty from others, he "offers little" in return. In early 2016, Sessions "bet the farm on this reality-show celebrity," but now that he has "recused himself from involvement in the FBI's Trump-Russia investigation – and, therefore, from defending the president, as Trump sees it – Sessions is no longer useful."

Rosenstein Cites Trump Inaugural Address In Speech To NAACP. Politico (7/25, Gerstein) reports that Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein "demonstrated his loyalty to Trump" Tuesday, using an address to the NAACP's annual convention "to pay homage to Trump by citing one of his most polarizing speeches: the inaugural address where he railed against 'carnage' in the streets of America." Rosenstein said, "In President Trump's inaugural address, he said that Americans want great schools for their children, safe neighborhoods for their families and good jobs for themselves. These are just and reasonable demands." Rosenstein did not mention "Trump's extraordinary public taunting of Sessions," but "did draw attention to Sessions' anti-crime efforts." Politico describes the reaction to Rosenstein's speech as "tepid" and "chilly."

Cruz Denies He Is Under Consideration To Replace Sessions. The Washington Times (7/25, Boyer) reports that Sen. Ted Cruz denied reports that Trump is considering him to replace Sessions, calling them "false" and saying that "he considers Mr. Sessions a friend and a 'strong conservative.'" Cruz said, "I was proud to vote to confirm Jeff and to vigorously defend his confirmation, and I'm deeply gratified that we have a principled conservative like a Jeff Sessions serving as attorney general. ... My focus is and will remain on fighting every day to defend 28 million Texans in the US Senate."

Trump Rallies Supporters In Youngstown, Ohio.

President Trump on Tuesday evening held a campaign-style rally in Youngstown, Ohio, where he touted the Senate's vote earlier in the day to open debate on the repeal and replacement of the Affordable Care Act, hailed his Administration's efforts to combat the immigration policies of so-called "sanctuary cities," vowed to continue focusing heavily on job creation, railed against the media, and generally revved up an audience of supporters.

The Youngstown \(OH\) Vindicator (7/26, Skolnick) reports that Trump "was in full campaign mode speaking to a full house at the Covelli Centre," and the audience "of close to 7,000 – not including a few who were turned away – at Tuesday's presidential rally loved it." Trump "spoke of campaign promises he says he will keep, including building a wall along the Mexican border, repealing then replacing Obamacare, and bringing back jobs that are long gone, including those at steel mills that closed in the 1970s." And Trump "was quick to blame the media for not highlighting his accomplishments, criticizing the 'fake news filter' and saying he had Tuesday's rally so he could 'speak directly to the American people.'"

Reporting from Youngstown, the Toledo \(OH\) Blade (7/25, Troy) says that Trump, during the "campaign-style rally with enthusiastic supporters," reiterated "promises to bring back jobs and put America's economic interests first as he vowed in his political campaign here last year. The Covelli Centre's capacity of about 7,000 people was filled as the hall thundered with cheers for Mr. Trump's assertions, including boasts of having pulled the US out of the Pacific trade and Paris climate change agreements negotiated by his predecessor."

On its website, WFMJ-TV Youngstown, OH (7/25, Manion) quoted Trump as telling the crowd, "Finally, I am back in the heartland, away from the swamp of Washington DC." WFMJ-TV added that in reaction to Trump's assertion that he was in Youngstown "to stop the 'fake news media' and talk straight to the voters," the crowd responded "with chants of 'CNN sucks.'" Said Trump, "This has been a difficult week for the media, because I force them to travel around the country and cover tens of thousands of proud Americans who want to defend our country, our culture, our values." The Washington Free Beacon (7/25, Cawthorne) also briefly reported on the crowd's chant of "CNN sucks."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer (7/25, Richardson) reports that during the rally, Trump "issued a warning to senators who might oppose the Senate plan to overhaul the" ACA, telling the crowd, "Any senator who votes against repeal and replace is telling America that they are fine with the Obamacare nightmare." The Plain Dealer adds, "You couldn't tell by the crowd that Trump's approval rating isn't great, hovering in the mid-30s to low-40s. Trump has courted controversy after controversy since taking over in January, but the throng of supporters decked out in his signature red 'Make America Great Again' trucker caps were unfazed at the Youngstown rally."

On its website, WKBN-TV Youngstown, OH (7/25) reported that Trump promised "that under his presidency, the state of Ohio would thrive," vowing "that he would bring jobs back to the area, telling Valley residents, 'Don't sell your house.' 'I'll tell ya what, I rode through your beautiful roads coming up from the [Youngstown Warren Regional] Airport and I was looking at some those big, once-incredible job-producing factories,' Trump said," adding, "And my wife Melania said, 'What happened?' I said, 'Those jobs have left Ohio.' They're all coming back. They're all coming back."

The Columbus \(OH\) Dispatch (7/25, Ludlow) reports that Trump "faces a challenge to bring industry back to the Youngstown-Warren area," where "there are 1,300 fewer manufacturing jobs than a year ago, federal figures show. And, about 1,000 GM workers recently were laid off at plants than make the Chevrolet Cruze." Even so, "the crowd of Trump enthusiasts found hope in his words. 'Industry is so stagnant in the Valley. My kids had to move to Cleveland,' said Anna Pera, 65, of Canfield. 'But, it's time to make America great, it really is. I believe in what he wants to do for America.'"

The Washington Times (7/25, Miller) reports that at the rally, Trump "rekindled the energy from his campaign," pledging "that he would continue to defy the 'fake news' and keep fulfilling the promises he made to the American people. 'Tonight we are going to set aside the cynics and the critics because we know exactly why they are so bitter. Because day after day,' he said, 'we are keeping our promises to the people and we are putting – finally, finally, finally – finally we are putting America first.'"

On its website, Fox News (7/25, Pappas) reported that while Trump "celebrated the Senate's procedural vote earlier in the day on repealing ObamaCare," he "avoided discussing his frustration with Attorney General Jeff Sessions." Fox News added that Trump "delivered a freewheeling speech, reminiscent of those given during the 2016 campaign, on a variety of topics. 'I'm here this evening to cut through the fake-news filter and speak straight to the American people,' he said."

The AP (7/25, Salama) reports Trump "arrived in Ohio for a victory lap on Tuesday night with the very voters who helped put him in office. 'We're now one step closer to liberating our citizens from this Obamacare nightmare and delivering great health care for the American people,' Trump" said. The AP says that the visit "to Youngstown, a staunchly working-class, union-heavy enclave that has long helped anchor Democrats in Ohio, served as a welcome distraction from Washington for a president who loves to relive his once-unlikely Election Day win."

Similarly, CNN (7/25, Merica) reported on its website, "For Trump, returning to the campaign trail for his sixth campaign rally as president marked a reprieve from the conflict in Washington." In his speech, the President "confronted criticism of his unprecedented style, saying his unconventional approach is necessary to change the country for the better." Said Trump, "Sometimes they say he doesn't act presidential. And I say, 'hey look, great schools, smart guy, it's so easy to act presidential but that's not going to get it done. In fact, I said, it is much easier to act presidential than what we are doing here tonight, believe me."

The New York Times (7/25, Baker) reports that Trump "was in his element and bathing in the adulation of the crowd" at Tuesday's rally, as audience members "shouted and cheered and whistled and jumped up on chairs to see him. Finally, the president even invited one of them to take the microphone for a minute. 'Every one of these people love you, sir,' said the man, wearing a T-shirt that said 'TRUMP WON – Deal With It.'" The Times adds, "For a president who has not gotten a lot of love lately inside" Washington, "hitting the road in recent days has been a political booster shot. Three out of the last four days, the famously homebody president with the low approval ratings has escaped the Washington free-fire zone to seek more appreciative audiences."

In an analysis for Roll Call (7/25), John Bennett says, "As he delivered parts of his" speech, "it well could have been July 2016 with then-Republican nominee Trump at the podium. The world is more unsafe than ever. The United States has been run for too long by 'stupid' politicians. People who wish to Americans harm are pouring over the southern border. Other countries are taking advantage of US workers and consumers. And there is only one person capable of change all of that: Donald J. Trump."

On its website, CNN (7/25, Kopan) reported that in his speech, Trump "railed against sanctuary cities," drawing "out a long and graphic description of violent gang members torturing and killing young women. 'These are the animals that we've been protecting for so long,' Trump said. 'Well, they're not being protected any longer folks. And that is why my administration is launching a nationwide crackdown on sanctuary cities.'"

Politico (7/25, Karni) reported that returning to the "longtime Democratic stronghold" of Youngstown, Trump sounded "almost unchanged from the candidate who campaigned [t]here last year, as he confidently doubled down on promises he has yet to keep." However, "what was ostensibly the biggest good news of Trump's day – the Senate vote to move ahead on repealing Obamacare – appeared in his speech only as an afterthought," as the President "appeared more animated when he spoke about cracking down on undocumented immigration, sanctuary cities, and 'radical Islamic terrorism' than when he touched on the legislative victory that puts him one step closer to fulfilling a campaign promise."

The Hill (7/25, Beavers) reported that Trump "mocked a protester demonstrating at" yesterday's event, "telling the crowd that 'he's going back home to mommy.' 'Boy, he's a young one. He's going back home to mommy. Oh is he in trouble. He's in trouble,' Trump said, appearing unfazed by the disruption. 'And I'll bet his mommy voted for us, right?' he added."

Writing for the Washington Examiner (7/25), Tom Rogan says that Trump "was in his favorite place" during yesterday's event: "At the center of an adoring crowd of fans, delivering punches to his many enemies seen and unseen. ... The crowd loved it." Rogan adds, "Whatever one thinks of Trump, he knows how to please his supporters. When we in the media consider Trump's very real political difficulties, we sometimes ignore the strength of his base in consolidating their chosen leader."

YSU Political Scientist Explains Why Youngstown Gave Trump "Hero's Welcome." Salena Zito – writing for the New York Post (7/25, Zito) – says that Trump "received a hero's welcome in" Youngstown, which "is a good representation of the towns that feel left behind in America for the past few decades. Trump has punctuated that in the three previous visits he has done in Mahoning County since announcing his" White House run. Youngstown State University political scientist Paul Sracic told Zito, "Coming here is not just about Youngstown. This is a small city, but Youngstown symbolizes sort of that blue-collar working-class community that has seen better days. When Trump comes here he's not only talking to voters here. He's talking to similarly situated voters across the country." Sracic added, "The Youngstown community has been falling apart because there aren't enough jobs here to keep the kids here; in Trump, they finally got somebody who seems to get the fact that this is a problem."

In an online article for TIME (7/25, Elliott), Philip Elliott writes about speaking with Trump supporters in Youngstown, such as "70-year-old former salesman" Bruce Logan, who "had been a registered independent who usually voted for Democratic candidates. Then, along came Trump," and Logan "registered last year as a Republican so that he could support Trump in his primary, and then worked to help him" defeat "Hillary Clinton last year. 'He shoots straight from the gut. He's not your typical politician,' Logan" said "as he spent hours waiting in line to hear from the President directly at a rally. 'He is exactly what this country needs right now.' Adds his wife, 68-year-old, Carol: 'He's the first politician with rocks.' They are hardly alone here in this corner of northeast Ohio, a one-time Democratic stronghold that also once was a hub of the American steel industry."

WPost Analysis: Trump's "Simplistic View Of" Youngstown "Is Stuck In Time." Under the headline "Steel Valley's Youngstown Is Much More Complicated Than Trump Portrays," the Washington Post (7/25, Johnson) reports that Trump on Tuesday "escaped the roiling turmoil of Washington," traveling to Youngstown "to rally with his supporters in [the] former steel town." The Post says that Trump's "simplistic view of" Youngstown, "located in what was once known as 'Steel Valley,' is stuck in time. Youngstown suffered closures of steel mills in the 1970s and '80s that laid off thousands, tanked the local economy and led to a mass exodus of residents. But the region has evolved significantly since then, and few say they expect Trump to revive the steel industry here as he has promised. Instead, those living in Youngstown and its suburbs are worried about health care, the schools their children and grandchildren attend, the opioid crisis that now kills more Ohioans than car crashes, the care of military veterans, and the region's overall economy."

Politico Analysis: Trump Faces Challenge In Retaining Support Of Ohio Democrats. Under the headline "Trump Tests The Loyalty Of The Ohio Democrats He Won," Politico (7/25, Karni) reported ahead of Trump's Tuesday address, "Down-and-out Youngstown, Ohio, last year became emblematic of the power of...Trump's campaign. With his populist message targeting white working-class voters, he outperformed every GOP nominee since Richard Nixon won the Democratic stronghold of Mahoning County. Today, the blue-collar town represents one of the looming challenges of Trump's presidency, six months in: how to keep the support he won as a populist candidate, when he flipped disgruntled Democrats and independents to his side of the ledger, while in many cases governing like a plutocrat who has so far failed to deliver on many of his campaign promises."

AP Analysis: As President, Trump Has Largely Traveled To States He Won. The AP (7/25, Bykowicz, Lemire) reported on a "review" it conducted of President Trump's travels since being inaugurated, saying, "Of his 33 domestic trips out of Washington, he's set foot in non-Trump voting states only seven times other than to stay at his own golf property in Bedminster, New Jersey. The AP's count does not include the president's frequent day trips to his nearby Virginia golf course. He also has not journeyed too far, traveling west of the Mississippi River only once and so far dodging the Mountain and Pacific time zones."

Kushner, Manafort Meet With Congressional Investigators.

President Trump's son-in-law and senior adviser Jared Kushner, and his former campaign chairman Paul Manafort were on Capitol Hill Tuesday to meet with congressional investigators looking into Russian interference in the 2016 election.

The AP (7/25, Jalonick, Day) reports that Kushner spent about three hours in a closed-door meeting with member of the House Intelligence Committee. Bloomberg News (7/25, House, Pettypiece) reports that lawmakers described Kushner as "cooperative and forthcoming" during the meeting. According to ranking committee Democrat Adam Schiff, it was "a very productive session – an opportunity to ask about a range of issues the committee was concerned about," and Kushner "was receptive to returning to the committee for more questioning, he said." However, Schiff said on CNN's Situation Room (7/25) that "we can't accept any representation on its face," because "we have seen, unfortunately, with other members of the Trump family and organization that they will say one thing and then the truth will prove to be something quite different."

Politico (7/25, Cheney) quotes Rep. Mike Conaway, who is leading the panel's investigation, as saying, "His answers were forthcoming and complete. He satisfied all my questions." According to Rep. Peter King, "a staunch Trump defender," Democrats "struggled to extract new information out of Kushner despite insinuating – in what he described as repetitive lines of questioning – that he wasn't revealing everything." King said, "Obviously, they were trying to prove a point, which they couldn't prove. ... The whole tone of the questions was that there was more there and they couldn't find it." The CBS Evening News (7/25, story 4, 0:25, Mason) briefly mentioned Kushner's meeting with the panel.

The AP (7/25, Jalonick, Day) reports that Manafort "met with bipartisan staff of the Senate intelligence committee," in a discussion that was "confined to his recollection of a June 2016 meeting with a Russian lawyer at Trump Tower, according to two people familiar with the interview." One of the people said Manafort "also turned over his contemporaneous notes documenting the meeting," and the other "said Manafort has agreed to additional interviews with the Senate intelligence committee staff on other topics." The Washington Post (7/25, Helderman, Demirjian) says Manafort's notes "could provide a key contemporaneous account of a meeting that has emerged as a focus of investigations into Russia's interference in the 2016 campaign by both Congress and Special Counsel Robert Mueller."

Senate Panel Rescinds Subpoena For Manafort. The New York Times (7/25, Sullivan, Goldman, Haberman) reports that Manafort's meeting with the House committee came as the Senate Judiciary Committee, which is conducting its own investigation, “announced that it issued a subpoena for Mr. Manafort to appear at a hearing on Wednesday.” However, the panel “later rescinded the subpoena and canceled his appearance.” Manafort’s lawyers are “working out how and when he will be interviewed by the committee.” The Wall Street Journal (7/25, Tau) says Manafort and investigators came to an agreement that will allow Manafort to avoid testifying publicly about Russian interference in the 2016 election. A Reuters (7/25) story posted Tuesday evening cites “a source familiar with the issue” who said Manafort “is going to ‘continue discussions’ with Senate investigators.”

In a story posted before the subpoena was rescinded, the Washington Times (7/25, Dinan) reported that Chairman Charles Grassley and ranking Democrat Dianne Feinstein “said they were fed up with delays and restrictions Mr. Manafort was trying to impose on their investigation, so they will compel him to appear.” A Reuters (7/25, Zengerle, Becker) story posted before the subpoena was rescinded said the subpoena “was a sign lawmakers are willing to push hard as they probe Russia’s role and potential collusion by the Republican’s campaign.”

USA Today (7/25, Johnson, Kelly) reports that Donald Trump Jr., “who had been expected to meet with investigators, was also no longer scheduled to appear.” Feinstein told Fox News that both Manafort and Trump Jr. “would appear before the committee ‘hopefully in September.’” Feinstein said, “The staffs are negotiating and it just got too close and members need to prepare and they need to get documents to be able to prepare, so that’s what we’ve set upon now.”

Fusion GPS Founder To Meet Privately With Senate Judiciary Committee. The Hill (7/25, Greenwood) reports that Grassley and Feinstein said Tuesday that Glenn Simpson, co-founder of Fusion GPS, “the firm tied to the controversial opposition research dossier” on Trump “has agreed to speak to the Senate Judiciary Committee behind closed doors,” in return for the panel dropping the subpoena issued last week after he “declined the committee’s request to appear before lawmakers in a public hearing.”

Justice Department IG To Discuss His 2016 Election Probe Before Senate Panel. Politico (7/25, Gerstein) reports that the Justice Department’s Office of Inspector General has been investigating “several issues key to the Russia saga since before President Donald Trump’s inauguration.” Inspector General Michael Horowitz, who “has offered few public indications of the status of his probe,” is “likely to make his first public statements at a hearing in front of the Senate Judiciary Committee about the status of his inquiry – and whether he’ll acquiesce to any of the many requests from Republicans and Democrats to expand his review to include the firing of former FBI director James Comey or other developments.”

Republicans Reject Measure To Force Treasury To Turn Over Trump-Russia Documents. Bloomberg News (7/25, Dexheimer) reports that Republicans on the House Financial Services Committee “rejected an attempt by Democrats to force the Treasury Department to turn over any documents it has that show financial ties between President Donald Trump and Russia.” Rep. Maxine Waters’ measure, which “would have compelled the Treasury to provide any records detailing connections that Trump, his family and his closest advisers have with Russian banks and Deutsche Bank AG,” was “dealt...a major setback on Tuesday,” as Republicans voted “to report it unfavorably to the full House.” Reuters (7/25, Schroeder) says committee Chairman Jeb Hensarling “said the panel would not be spending any time exploring Trump’s financial network,” and cited “open investigations by congressional committees and a special counsel into conclusions by US intelligence agencies that Russia interfered in the 2016 election campaign to help New York businessman Trump win.”

Putin Spokesman: Kremlin Did Not Order Kushner-Gorkov Meeting. The AP (7/25) reports that Russian President Vladimir Putin’s spokesman, Dmitri Peskov, said Tuesday the Kremlin did not order the meeting between Kushner and Vneshekonombank head Sergei Gorkov, which Kushner included in his statement to Congress on Monday. Kushner “said he had been asked to meet with Gorkov by Sergei Kislyak, then the Russian ambassador.” Peskov told reporters, “These contacts do not require any authorization from the Kremlin and they were not carried out on behalf of the Kremlin.”

Benczkowski Defends His Work For Alfa Bank. The Wall Street Journal (7/25, Wilber, Viswanatha) reports that Brian Benczkowski, Trump’s nominee to run the Justice Department’s criminal division, defended his work for the Russian bank Alfa Bank during testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee and said he would recuse himself for two years from overseeing any investigations involving the bank. The Washington Post (7/25, Zapotosky) reports that Benczkowski “defended working for the institution, saying it was in line with the work he had done throughout his career in the private sector.”

Applebaum: Rise Of Trump And Rise Of Putin Are Connected. In her Washington Post (7/25)

column, Anne Applebaum cites Donald Trump Jr.'s claim in 2008 that "Russians make up a pretty disproportionate cross-section of a lot of our assets," as evidence that "Russian money...enriched Trump and his family. ... In that sense the rise of Trump and the rise of Putin are connected." To Applebaum, this explains the President Trump's "affinity for the Russian president" and why Mueller's "investigation has reportedly decided to look closely at past Trump family real estate transactions."

Jenkins: Comey Accidentally Helped Trump Win Election. Holman Jenkins Jr. writes in his Wall Street Journal (7/25) column that while former FBI Director Comey intended his interventions into the 2016 election to aid Hillary Clinton, they inadvertently resulted in a Trump victory.

Senate Rejects First GOP Healthcare Bill After Narrowly Approving Motion To Proceed.

Coverage of the Senate's vote to proceed to debate on measures to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act focuses on how close the vote was, with only the return of Sen. John McCain and a tie-breaking vote from Vice President Pence making it possible. Most of the coverage of the vote is centered on McCain's dramatic return, as well as his speech criticizing the process and warning that he does not support the legislation itself as it stands. The early coverage of the close vote is superseded by the first vote on new legislation itself, which failed by a wide margin.

Reuters (7/25, Oliphant) reports, "In a first vote of the many likely to come this week, the plan to repeal and replace Obamacare that Senate Republicans have been working on for months failed" on a vote of 43-57. It would have needed 60 votes to advance. The Los Angeles Times (7/25, Mascaro, Bennett) reports that Republicans "quickly shot down what was once their leading proposal for repealing and replacing" the ACA. Roll Call (7/25, Williams) reports that the measure included an amendment from Sen. Ted Cruz "that would have allowed insurers to offer plans that are noncompliant with the current requirements in the health care law, so long as they offer a compliant option," as well as an amendment from Sen. Rob Portman "that would have, among other things, poured an additional $100 billion into a state stability fund."

The Hill (7/25, Carney) reports that the bill "was widely expected to fail." Bloomberg News (7/25, Litvan, Dennis) reports that the Senate is now expected to vote Wednesday "on an amendment similar to an Obamacare repeal bill passed in 2015 by the Senate" but vetoed by President Obama. That proposal "is also expected to fail, and it will be followed by a number of other proposals."

Politico (7/25, Diamond) reports that Senate Majority Leader McConnell may instead push "a 'skinny repeal' plan that would leave major parts [of the ACA] intact while knocking out its mandates, but also allow the Senate to move a repeal bill to conference with the House if they can't agree on a more comprehensive measure." However, the New York Times (7/25, Sanger-Katz) writes, "many independent analysts have concluded that, without a mandate, health insurance would become more expensive and cover fewer people." And while GOP leaders "have assailed the health law's large tax increases" and "complained about Obamacare's burdensome insurance regulations," this option would repeal just one tax and leave the regulations in place.

Politico (7/25, Shepard) reports that a new Politico/Morning Consult poll finds that "just 36 percent of voters support repealing Obamacare without a replacement," while 50 percent are opposed.

Motion To Proceed Passes, With Pence Breaking Tie. Much of the earlier coverage of the passage of the motion to proceed focused on the return of McCain to the Senate. In the lead story on NBC Nightly News (7/25, lead story, 2:50), Lester Holt called it "an emotional and remarkable moment" when McCain's return "brought Republicans and Democrats to their feet in a thundering ovation." McCain "cast his critical vote, and then deliver[ed] a stunning rebuke on the state of politics in America and what's been lost in the process." McCain: "Stop listening to the bombastic loud mouths on the radio, television, and Internet. To hell with them. We're getting nothing done, my friends. We're getting nothing done." Though he voted for the motion to proceed, McCain said, "I will not vote for this bill as it is today. It's a shell of a bill right now. We all know that."

On ABC World News Tonight (7/25, story 2, 3:00, Muir), Mary Bruce reported, "Less than a week after being diagnosed with brain cancer, McCain swoop[ed] in to cast a critical vote on healthcare. ... McCain cast his vote, and then he spoke his mind. For 15 minutes, he railed against the dysfunction in Washington." The CBS Evening News (7/25, story 2, 2:40, Mason) reported that "it took a tie-breaking vote from the Vice President and the return of John McCain" to approve the motion to proceed. The New York Times (7/25, Steinhauer) headlines a report "McCain Returns To Washington To Cast A Vote To Help The President Who Derided Him." The Washington Post (7/25, Viebeck) reports that McCain “received a hero’s welcome on Capitol Hill.”

The New York Times (7/25, A1, Pear, Kaplan) reports that “the victory could be fleeting: Senate Republicans still have no agreement on a repeal bill.” USA Today (7/25, Collins) reports, “The Senate launched into an uncertain legislative adventure” as McConnell “cajoled enough of his Republican colleagues to begin consideration of legislation to repeal Obamacare despite having no idea what the final bill will look like.” McCain “voted in favor of debating the bill but then gave a speech excoriating the process the Senate is using to craft the legislation and suggesting it was likely to fail anyway.”

The Washington Post (7/25, A1, Sullivan, Eilperin, O’Keefe, Snell) reports that the Senate “embarked on a freewheeling process to rewrite” the ACA, but “schisms” within the GOP “threatened to leave the party far short in the coming days of its ambitious goal to undo major parts” of the law. Still, the Wall Street Journal (7/25, A1, Armour) calls the vote a victory for McConnell, who had delayed any vote three times due to GOP divisions. On CNBC’s Closing Bell (7/25), John Harwood called the vote “very impressive and a surprise, especially since Mitch McConnell had seemed to indicate that the process had reached a dead end just a few days ago.”

The Washington Times (7/25, Howell) reports, “As the Senate clerk called the voting roll, Democrats sat in their chairs refusing to vote and glared at Republicans,” and “protesters in the gallery shouted, ‘Kill the bill! Don’t kill us!’ Their cries could still be heard once they were shoed into the hallway.”

USA Today (7/25) editorializes, “McConnell bypassed the normal process of Congress, the committee system,” and “has come up with two partial repeals of the ACA and one total repeal. All have elicited significant opposition, largely because they would result in 23 million to 32 million fewer people having health insurance. Now McConnell has cajoled all but two Republican senators to begin debate on a mystery bill that not only has not gone through committee, it does not even exist.”

The New York Times (7/25) similarly editorializes that McConnell “browbeat and cajoled 50 members of his caucus to vote to begin a debate on health care without even telling the country which of several competing bills he wanted to pass.” The proposals “vary in severity, but all of them would leave millions more people without health insurance and make medical care unaffordable for many low-income and middle-class families. It is clear that Mr. McConnell does not much care which of these proposals the Senate passes; for whatever reason – pride, White House pressure, sheer cussedness – he just wants to get a bill out of the Senate.”

In his Washington Post (7/25) column, George Will writes, “Congress’s continuing self-degradation is writ large in a process that brought us to Tuesday, when most Republican senators knew only this: They would vote to begin consideration of a bill that they might have to pass in order to find out what is in it.” However, the Wall Street Journal (7/25) says in an editorial that the vote was a vindication for McConnell, but warns that the GOP caucus will need to retain discipline as votes proceed on a wide array of Democratic amendments meant to create divisions.

Trump Calls Vote “A Big Step,” Thanks McCain For Returning. The Washington Times (7/25, Miller) reports that the President “applauded...the Senate vote to open debate.” Speaking at a joint news conference with Lebanese Prime Minister Saad Hariri in the Rose Garden, Trump said, “This was a big step.” Politico (7/25, Nussbaum) reports that Trump “acknowledged a difficult path remains to actually passing legislation.” He said, “This is the tough vote to get. Now we’re all going to sit together and we’re going to try and come up with something that’s really spectacular.”

The Hill (7/25, Bowden) reports that Trump also thanked McCain for returning to Washington, tweeting, “@SenJohnMcCain-Thank you for coming to D.C. for such a vital vote. Congrats to all Rep. We can now deliver grt healthcare to all Americans!” The AP (7/25, Salama) reports that later in Youngstown, Ohio, Trump said “the nation was one step closer to liberation from the ‘Obamacare nightmare.’”

DSCC Blasts Flake, Heller Over Healthcare Votes. The Hill (7/25, Savransky) reported that the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee on Tuesday took aim at Sens. Jeff Flake and Dean Heller for voting in favor of the motion to proceed. DSCC spokesman David Bergstein said in that Heller “has shown the people of Nevada they can’t ‘trust him to stand up for their care,’” referring to the GOP lawmaker “as a ‘deciding vote.’” Bergstein also said Flake “voted to ‘give big insurance companies and the wealthiest few another tax break.’” The Los Angeles Times (7/25, Montero) reports that a Heller tweet “about why he chose to ‘vote to move forward and give us the chance to address the unworkable aspects of Obamacare’ generated more than 5,300 replies within three hours of posting it,” the “vast majority” of them expressing “anger, or eagerness to donate to his opponent.”

Scott: “Obamacare Is Failing.” Sen. Tim Scott writes in USA Today (7/25), “The unavoidable

fact right now is that the ACA is failing. ... Our plans will reform Medicaid, ensure that it is serving those it was created to help (people with disabilities, children and those most in need) and sustain it for future generations." Scott writes, "Obamacare is failing, and our plan provides a better path forward."

McCarthy: House Will Return From Recess If Needed. The Washington Times (7/25, Dinan) reports that the House is still planning to begin its five-week summer recess after this week, "but GOP leaders said they'll bring the chamber back to vote should the Senate approve an Obamacare repeal." House Majority Leader McCarthy said, "We will call the House back in to finish the job."

Boehner Says ACA Will Not Be Repealed. However, USA Today (7/25, Shesgreen) reports that in a private speech in Las Vegas, ex-House Speaker John Boehner said, "They're not going to repeal and replace Obamacare. It's been around too long, and the American people have gotten accustomed to it." The Washington Post (7/25, Costa) also covers Boehner's remarks.

Collins Recorded Criticizing Trump Budget And "Unattractive" Farenthold. The AP (7/25, Kerr) reports, "Sen. Susan Collins got caught Tuesday at the end of a hearing with a microphone that was still hot – and captured her ripping President Donald Trump and making fun of a fellow lawmaker who had been critical of her on health care." Collins criticized Trump's proposed 2018 budget as "incredibly irresponsible," and made "unflattering remarks" about Rep. Blake Farenthold (R-TX) "a day after he blamed 'some female senators from the Northeast' for blocking health care legislation." She told Sen. Jack Reed, "I don't mean to be unkind but he's so unattractive it's unbelievable." The New York Times (7/25, Rogers) reports that Collins "also said she was taken aback when she realized" that Farenthold referenced the duel between Aaron Burr and Alexander Hamilton in his criticism. Bloomberg News (7/25, Blum) and an online Washington Post (7/25, Bump) report also cover the conversation.

Trump Says He May Reappoint Yellen Or Name Cohn To Lead Fed.

The Wall Street Journal (7/25, Davidson) reports that in a Tuesday interview, President Trump said that he may renominate Fed Chair Janet Yellen for another term, but that he is also considering National Economic Council Director Cohn and "two or three" other candidates. Trump said of Yellen, "I like her; I like her demeanor. I think she's done a good job. I'd like to see rates stay low. She's historically been a low-interest-rate person." The Journal points out that Trump was very critical of Yellen during his presidential campaign. Bloomberg News (7/25, Torres) says that other possible candidates include Glenn Hubbard of Columbia University's business school, Fed Governor Jerome Powell, and ex-Fed Governor Kevin Warsh.

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"The Senate's Healthcare Travesty." The New York Times (7/25) editorializes that Senate Majority Leader McConnell "browbeat and cajoled 50 members of his caucus to vote to begin a debate on health care without even telling the country which of several competing bills he wanted to pass." The proposals "vary in severity, but all of them would leave millions more people without health insurance and make medical care unaffordable for many low-income and middle-class families. It is clear that Mr. McConnell does not much care which of these proposals the Senate passes; for whatever reason – pride, White House pressure, sheer cussedness – he just wants to get a bill out of the Senate."

"Fixing Blame Won't Fix The Subways." The New York Times (7/25) argues in an editorial that New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo and New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio "need to knock off the finger-pointing" and cooperate to address "the crisis afflicting the city's subways."

"Britain Sees Brexit's Threats More Clearly." In an editorial, the New York Times (7/26) says "since the British voted to leave the European Union," thus far "the only results are increasingly gloomy prognoses for Britain." As negotiations continue, the Times says, "visions of a painless divorce and new opportunities for a 'global Britain' will most likely wither further, but the infighting will not," because demands "to halt Brexit will grow." The Times concedes "another referendum is not popular, and the result would be uncertain"; however, "there is nothing undemocratic about reviewing the pros and cons of Brexit as the trade-offs become clearer. A move this fateful should not be declared off-limits to a continuing national debate."

Washington Post.

“This Is Not Okay.” Citing President Trump’s public attacks on Attorney General Sessions, a Washington Post (7/25) editorial says that “there is a serious point to be made about the difference between the United States of America and a state ruled by personal whim.” The US “has been the envy of the world because certain norms have been accepted.” The Post argues that the stakes are higher than “the careers of a particular attorney general or special counsel.” When Trump “attacks that process and seeks revenge on his opponents,” he “betrays bedrock American values. It’s crucial that other political leaders say so.”

“The Migrants Who Died In Misery Last Weekend Won’t Be The Last.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (7/25) argues that the human smuggling incident in San Antonio that resulted in 10 immigrants dead and more than a dozen still hospitalized will not be the last such case, asserting that the demand for low-wage labor will continue to attract workers willing to take great risks to enter the country. The Post adds that although the Administration has reduced illegal border crossings, it has fostered an “inhospitable political environment” for illegal immigrants. The editorial concludes, “Without an overhaul of the nation’s dysfunctional immigration laws, don’t expect illegal immigration or human trafficking or further terrible tragedies to end anytime soon.”

“Change J.E.B. Stuart High School’s Name.” A Washington Post editorial.

Wall Street Journal.

“Trump’s Sessions Abuse.” A Wall Street Journal (7/25) editorial is highly critical of President Trump’s attacks on Attorney General Sessions, likening Trump’s suggestion that Sessions prosecute Clinton to something one would see from the Erdogan government in Turkey or the Duterte government in the Philippines.

“Repealing The Arbitration Rule.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (7/25) applauds the House vote Tuesday to repeal a rule by Consumer Financial Protection Bureau chief Richard Cordray to ban mandatory arbitration. The Journal argues that according to the CFPB’s own study, consumers who prevail in arbitration recovered $5,389 on average, while those joining class action lawsuits received an average of $32, with attorneys making an average of $1 million. The Journal urges the Senate to join the House in repealing the ban.

“A GOP Gallows Reprieve.” The Wall Street Journal (7/25) says in an editorial that the Senate vote to proceed to debate on measures to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act was a vindication for Majority Leader McConnell, but warns that the GOP caucus will need to retain discipline as votes proceed on a wide array of Democratic amendments meant to create divisions.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Health Debate Rolls On After First Option Fails
Trump Eyes Tax-Code Overhaul, With Emphasis On Middle-Class Break
Caterpillar Boosts Outlook, Signaling Cautious Optimism
New Challenge To US Power: Chinese Exceptionalism

New York Times:

Senate Votes Down Broad Obamacare Repeal
In Trump’s World, “Very Weak” Sessions Twists In Wind
McCain Returns To Cast Vote To Help The President Who Derided Him
Trump Finds Reason For The US To Remain In Afghanistan: Minerals
At A Moment Of Success, USC Is Rocked By Scandal
\$800 Million Subway Rescue Plan Adds Cars And Subtracts Seats

Washington Post:

Scouts Speech Brings Backlash
In Return To Senate, McCain Urges Bipartisanship
N. Korea On Fast Track To Nuclear Missile
Deported Va. Teen Killed In Tex. Was Trying To Get Back To US In Truck
Senate Begins Debate On Health Bill
Standoff Between Trump And Sessions Escalates

Financial Times:

Greece Raises €3bn In First Bond Sale For Three Years
Trump Steps Up Attacks On Attorney-General
"Wake-Up Call" For Male Health As Sperm Counts Drop

Washington Times:

Court Calls DC Gun Law Unconstitutional
CTE Disease In Brain Tied To Football Injuries
IRS Finally Agrees To Act On Last Case For Tea Party
Senate Republicans Win Vots To Begin Debate On Health Care
Unschooling, Hungry Children Will Carry Plight Into Future

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Trump-Sessions; McCain Returns-Healthcare Bill; Russia Sanctions Bill; Summer Camp-Kid Dies; NYC Train Collision Investigation; US-Iran Navy Close Call; Houston-Drunk Pedestrian; Implanted Employee ID; Sea World-Last Killer Whale Dies; Minneapolis-Police Violence Investigation; Missouri Traffic Accident; Inflight Crew Feud; Football-Head Trauma; Barbara Sinatra Dies; Rescued Puppy.

CBS: Trump-Sessions; McCain Returns-Healthcare Bill; Russia Sanctions Bill; Russia Meddling Investigation-Kushner; Texas-Immigrants Trailer Deaths; US-Iran Navy Close Call; Coast Guard-Budget; Brain Games; Implanted Employee ID; Andy Warhol Art Recovered; Barbara Sinatra Dies; Wrestling-Political Satire.

NBC: McCain Returns-Healthcare Bill; Healthcare Reform Plan; Trump-Sessions; Russia Sanctions Bill; US-Iran Navy Close Call; Football-Head Trauma; Arizona-Flood Deaths; Sea World-Last Killer Whale Dies; Ford Explorer-Carbon Monoxide Leak; Barbara Sinatra Dies; New Girl Scout Badges; Money-Life Satisfaction; Colorado-Rock Climbers.

Network TV At A Glance:

Trump-Sessions – 10 minutes, 35 seconds
McCain Returns-Healthcare Bill – 9 minutes, 35 seconds
US-Iran Navy Close Call – 2 minutes, 15 seconds
Russia Sanctions Bill – 1 minute, 10 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Healthcare Reform Plan; McCain Returns-Healthcare Bill; Trump-Sessions; Russia Meddling Investigation-Kushner.

CBS: McCain Returns-Healthcare Bill; Healthcare Reform Plan; Trump-Sessions; Texas-Immigrants Trailer Deaths; Volkswagen Emission Cheating; Barbara Sinatra Dies; Wall Street News.

FOX: Healthcare Reform Plan; Russia Sanctions Bill; Ohio-Capital Punishment.

NPR: Healthcare Reform Plan; Trump-Boy Scouts Jamboree; McCain Returns-Healthcare Bill; Russia Sanctions Bill; Texas-Bathroom Law.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Delivers remarks to the American Legion Boys Nation and the American Legion Auxiliary Girls Nation; participates in a jobs announcement.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Delivers remarks to White House interns; joins the President to participate in a jobs announcement.

US Senate: 9:30 AM Senate Aging Committee hearing on curing Type I Diabetes – Hearing on 'Progress Toward a Cure for Type I Diabetes: Research and the Artificial Pancreas', with testimony from actor Paul Sparks; NIH National Institute of Diabetes and Kidney Diseases Director Griffin Rodgers; 10-year old Type 1 diabetes sufferer Charlie Albair; 17-year old Type 1 diabetes sufferer Lorynn Watt; and JDRF 2017 Children's Congress Chair Mom Angie Platt, and member (and her son) Jonathan – a 14-year old Type 1 diabetes sufferer Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 106, Washington, DC <http://aging.senate.gov/>

9:45 AM Senate Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Public Lands, Forests and Mining Subcommittee legislative hearing, with testimony from bipartisan Sens. Orrin Hatch and Jon Tester; National Forest System Associate Deputy Chief Glenn Casamassa; and Bureau of Land Management Acting Deputy Director of Operations John Ruhs Location: Rm 366, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://energy.senate.gov/public/>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on 'attempts to influence U.S. elections', though with no testimony from President Trump's son – Hearing on 'Oversight of the Foreign Agents Registration Act and Attempts to Influence U.S. Elections: Lessons Learned from Current and Prior Administrations', with testimony from Deputy Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division Adam Hickey; FBI Counterintelligence Division Assistant Director Bill Priestap; Department of Justice Inspector General Michael Horowitz; and Hermitage Capital Management (UK) CEO William Browder * Former Donald J. Trump for President campaign manager Paul Manafort and Fusion GPS' Glenn Simpson have been subpoenaed to testify, although Simpson's lawyer has said he is on vacation and would invoke the Fifth Amendment if forced to appear * President Donald Trump's son Donald Trump, Jr. was previously scheduled to testify, but is instead due to hold a private meeting with the Committee * Follows a meeting involving Trump, Jr., Manafort, White House Senior Advisor (and President Trump's son-in-law) Jared Kushner, and Russian attorney Natalia Veselnitskaya in June 2016 Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 226, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Commerce, Science, & Transportation Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Ronald Batory to be Federal Railroad Administration Administrator; Mark Buzby to be Maritime Administration Administrator; Peter Davidson to be Department of Commerce General Counsel; and Karen Dunn Kelley to be Under Secretary of Commerce for Economic Affairs Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 253, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

10:00 AM Treasury Secretary Mnuchin testifies to Senate Appropriations subcommittee on FY'18 budget – Financial Services and General Government Subcommittee hearing on 'Review of the FY2018 Budget Request for the U.S. Department of the Treasury', with testimony from Secretary of the Treasury Steven Mnuchin; Internal Revenue Service Commissioner John Koskinen; and Department of the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration J. Russell George Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 138, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

10:00 AM Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee hearing on South Sudan, nominations hearing – Africa and Global Health Policy Subcommittee hearing on 'South Sudan's Conflict and Famine', with testimony from Heritage Foundation Douglas and Sarah Allison Center for Foreign Policy Senior Policy Analyst for Africa and the Middle East Joshua Meserve; and U.S. Institute of Peace consultant Payton Knopf, and visiting expert Aly Verjee * Immediately followed by nominations hearing considering Michael Arthur Raynor to be U.S. Ambassador to Ethiopia; Maria Brewer to be U.S. Ambassador to Sierra Leone; and John Desrocher to be U.S. Ambassador to Algeria Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee Business Meeting – Business Meeting, with agenda including legislation including 'S. 1584, to amend the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 to reauthorize the Judicial Conference of the United States to redact sensitive information contained in financial disclosure reports of judicial officers and employees, and for other purposes', 'S. 288, Regulatory Predictability for Business Growth Act of 2017', 'S. 1199, Border Enforcement Security Task Force Reauthorization Act of 2017', 'S. 938, Procurement Fraud Prevention Act', 'S. 1208, Strengthening the Department of Homeland Security Secure Mail Initiative Act', 'H.R. 1293, to amend title 5, United States Code, to require that the Office of Personnel Management submit an annual report to Congress relating to the use of official time by Federal employees', 'H.R. 1679, FEMA Accountability, Modernization and Transparency Act of 2017', 'H.R. 195, Federal Register Printing Savings Act of 2017', and 'H.R. 194, Federal Agency Mail Management Act of 2017' Location: Rm 342, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

10:00 AM Business Meeting, to consider 'S.1514, the Hunting Heritage and Environmental Legacy Preservation for Wildlife Act' Location: Rm 406, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

11:00 AM Capitol Hill rally for 'greater investments in affordable housing' – Rally on Capitol Hill to raise awareness about 'the lack of affordable housing' and call on Congress to 'fully invest in affordable housing solutions that help low income families', hosted by the National Low Income Housing Coalition and the Campaign for Housing and Community Development Funding as part of the 'Our Homes, Our Voices' National Week of Action. Speakers include Democrats Sen. Chris Van Hollen and Reps. Charlie Crist, Adriano Espaillat, Sheila Jackson Lee, Barbara Lee, David Price,

Mark Takano, and Maxine Waters, Miriam's Kitchen Homeless Rights Advocate Waldon Adams, CSH federally assisted housing resident Emily Marinuik, National Alliance to End Homelessness President and CEO Nan Roman, and National Coalition for the Homeless Rights Advocate Steve Thomas Location: Upper Senate Park, 200 New Jersey Ave NW, Washington, DC www.nlihc.org
<https://twitter.com/NLIHC>

12:00 PM Business Meeting, to consider committee print of 'S.1598 Harry W. Colmery Veterans Educational Assistance Act of 2017' Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC
<http://veterans.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/VACHair>

2:00 PM Helsinki Commission briefing on Central and Eastern Europe – Helsinki Commission briefing on 'Democracy in Central and Eastern Europe: Renewing the Promise of Democratic Transitions', examining the current state of democracy in Central and Eastern Europe, analyzing efforts to address the region's challenges, and discussing the declaration adopted 1 Jun by civil society representatives, members of business communities, and others which seeks to reinvigorate the region's democratic trajectory, support democratic and economic reform, and strengthen the transatlantic partnership. Speakers include Center for International Private Enterprise Managing Director Andrew Wilson, Institute for Economic and Social Reforms (Slovakia) Director Peter Golias, Transparency International (Hungary) Chair Andras Loke, Civil Development Forum (Poland) Vice-President Marek Tatala, International Republican Institute Regional Director for Europe Jan Surotchak, and German Marshall Fund Senior Resident Fellow Jonathan Katz Location: The U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, SVC-215, Washington, DC
<http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

2:30 PM Senate Indian Affairs Committee oversight hearing on GAO reports on trafficking of American Indian and Alaska Natives – Oversight hearing on 'The GAO Reports on Human Trafficking of American Indian and Alaska Natives in the United States', with testimony from Government Accountability Office Director of Homeland Security and Justice Issues Gretta Goodwin; Department of Justice Office of Tribal Justice Director Tracy Toulou; Bureau of Indian Affairs Acting Deputy Director for Justice Services Jason Thompson; and Covenant House Alaska Executive Director Alison Kear Location: Rm 628, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

2:30 PM Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee hearing on federal infrastructure permitting – Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations hearing on 'Cutting Through the Red Tape: Oversight of Federal Infrastructure Permitting and the Federal Permitting Improvement Steering Council', with testimony from American Municipal Power CEO Marc Gerken; U.S. Chamber of Commerce Senior Vice President for the Environment, Technology & Regulatory Affairs William Kovacs; Natural Resources Defense Council Legislative Director Scott Slesinger; Federal Permitting Improvement Steering Council Acting Executive Director Janet Pflieger; Federal Energy Regulatory Commission Associate General Counsel for Energy Projects Jacqueline Holmes; U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Assistant for Water Resources Policy Robyn Colosimo; and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Assistant Director of Ecological Services Gary Frazer Location: Rm 342, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

4:30 PM Republican Sen. James Lankford meets National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency Deputy Director-nominee Susan Gordon Location: Washington, DC
<http://www.lankford.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenatorLankford>

US House: 10:00 AM Hearing on 'Office of National Drug Control Policy: Reauthorization in the 115th Congress' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2154, Washington, DC
<http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources Committee markup hearing concludes – Markup hearing concludes on legislation including 'H.R. 825, Public Land Renewable Energy Development Act', 'H.R. 873, Global War on Terrorism War Memorial Act', 'H.R. 1418, To amend the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act to provide that Alexander Creek, Alaska, is and shall be recognized as an eligible Native village under that Act, and for other purposes', 'H.R. 1491, Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians Land Affirmation Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2083, Endangered Salmon and Fisheries Predation Prevention Act', 'H.R. 2199, Federal Land Asset Inventory Reform Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2316, Cooperative Management of Mineral Rights Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2371, Western Area Power Administration Transparency Act', 'H.R. 2582, Confirming State Land Grants for Education Act', 'H.R. 2611, Little Rock Central High School National Historic Site Boundary Modification Act', 'H.R. 3279, Helium Extraction Act of 2017', and 'H.R. 3281, Reclamation Title Transfer and Non-Federal Infrastructure Incentivization Act' * Began yesterday Location: Rm 1324, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM Congressional Black Caucus Twitter town hall on 'Trumpcare' – Congressional

Black Caucus Twitter town hall on 'Trumpcare' and 'how it will negatively impact all Americans', with CBC Chairman Cedric Richmond, Assistant House Minority Leader James Clyburn, and fellow Democratic Reps. Bobby Scott, Gwen Moore, Marcia Fudge, Joyce Beatty, and Robin Kelly taking over the Caucus' Twitter account and responding to questions and comments from tweeters via Twitter's video-reply technology Location: TBD <https://cbc.house.gov/>
#CBCOnHealthcare

10:00 AM Hearing on 'Renegotiating NAFTA: Opportunities for Agriculture' Location: Rm 1300, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://agriculture.house.gov/>

10:00 AM Markup hearing on 'H.R. 391, Asylum Reform and Border Protection Act' and 'H.Res. 446, Resolution of Inquiry' Location: Rm 2141, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

10:00 AM House Energy subcommittee hearing on the nation's wholesale electricity markets – Energy Subcommittee hearing on 'Powering America: A Review of the Operation and Effectiveness of the Nation's Wholesale Electricity Markets', with testimony from Southwest Power Pool President and CEO Nick Brown; California Independent System Operator Corporation Vice President for Market and Infrastructure Development Dr Keith Casey; Midcontinent Independent System Operator Executive Vice President for Operations Richard Doying; PJM Interconnection Vice President for Federal Government Policy Craig Glazer; New York Independent System Operator President and CEO Bradley Jones; Electric Reliability Council of Texas Senior Vice President and COO Cheryl Mele; and ISO New England President and CEO Gordon van Welie Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Education and the Workforce subcommittee hearing on 'earn-and-learn opportunities' – Higher Education and Workforce Development Subcommittee hearing on 'Expanding Options for Employers and Workers Through Earn-and-Learn Opportunities', with testimony from Cianbro Vice President Mike Bennett; Kentucky Federation for Advanced Manufacturing Education State Chair Stacey Johnson Hughes, and student Robert Peglow; and Newport News Shipbuilding Vice President of Manufacturing and Material Distribution Rob Hogan Location: Rm 2175, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

10:00 AM Hearing on 'U.S. Cyber Diplomacy', with testimony from U.S. Coordinator for Cyber Issues Christopher Painter Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

10:00 AM House Science, Space, and Technology subcommittee hearing on STEM and computer science education – Research and Technology Subcommittee hearing on 'STEM and Computer Science Education: Preparing the 21st Century Workforce', with testimony from STEM Education Coalition Executive Director James Brown; Code.org Chief Academic Officer Pat Yongpradit; University of California-Berkeley Executive Vice Chancellor Dr A. Paul Alivisatos; and Micron Technology Foundation Executive Director Dee Mooney Location: Rm 2318, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:15 AM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on special needs plans – Health Subcommittee hearing on 'Examining the Extension of Special Needs Plans', with testimony from National MLTSS Health Plan Association President Larry Atkins; former Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services Federal Coordinated Health Care Office Director Melanie Bella; and SCAN Health Plan CEO Chris Wing Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2322, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee hearing on cybersecurity insurance – Hearing on 'Protecting Small Businesses from Cyber Attacks: the Cybersecurity Insurance Option', with testimony from SureFire Innovations President Robert Luft; Zurich Insurance North America Senior Vice President and Head of Specialty Products Errors & Omissions Erica Davis (on behalf of American Insurance Association); Munich Re U.S. Vice President and Cyber Risk Practice Leader Eric Cernak (on behalf of Reinsurance Association America); and Risk Advisory Services Security and Privacy Consulting Principal Daimon Geopfert Location: Rm 2360, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

11:00 AM House Administration Committee hearing on the Library of Congress – Hearing on 'Oversight of the Library of Congress' Strategic Plan', with testimony from Librarian of Congress Dr Carla Hayden Location: Rm 1310, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://cha.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAdmnGOP>

11:00 AM Capitol Hill rally for 'greater investments in affordable housing' – Rally on Capitol Hill to raise awareness about 'the lack of affordable housing' and call on Congress to 'fully invest in affordable housing solutions that help low income families', hosted by the National Low Income

Housing Coalition and the Campaign for Housing and Community Development Funding as part of the 'Our Homes, Our Voices' National Week of Action. Speakers include Democrats Sen. Chris Van Hollen and Reps. Charlie Crist, Adriano Espaillat, Sheila Jackson Lee, Barbara Lee, David Price, Mark Takano, and Maxine Waters, Miriam's Kitchen Homeless Rights Advocate Waldon Adams, CSH federally assisted housing resident Emily Marinuik, National Alliance to End Homelessness President and CEO Nan Roman, and National Coalition for the Homeless Rights Advocate Steve Thomas Location: Upper Senate Park, 200 New Jersey Ave NW, Washington, DC www.nlihc.org <https://twitter.com/NLIHC>

11:30 AM House Homeland Security markup – Markup: H.R. 2626, H.R. 2805, H.R. 3202, H.R. 3284, H.R. 3328, H.R. 3359, and H. Res. 447. https://homeland.house.gov/markup/markup-h-r-2626-h-r-2805-h-r-3202-h-r-3284-h-r-3328-h-r-___-h-res-447/ Location: HVC-210 Capitol Hill homeland.house.gov <https://twitter.com/HouseHomeland>

12:00 PM House expected to begin debate on 'Make America Secure Appropriations Act, 2018' – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include beginning consideration of 'H.R. 3219 – Make America Secure Appropriations Act, 2018', plus consideration of legislation – possibly including 'H.R. 3210 – SECRET Act of 2017', 'H.R. 1927 – African American Civil Rights Network Act of 2017', as amended, and 'H.Res. 317 – Calling for the unconditional release of United States citizens and legal permanent resident aliens being held for political purposes by the Government of Iran', as amended, 'H.R. 2370 – Escambia County Land Conveyance Act' – under suspension of the rules * Administration has said it supports passage of 'H.R. 3219', and that President Donald Trump would likely sign it if it reached his desk Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on the U.S.-Qatar relationship – Middle East and North Africa Subcommittee hearing on 'Assessing the U.S.-Qatar Relationship', with testimony from Foundation for Defense of Democracies Senior Vice President Dr Jonathan Schanzer; The Washington Institute for Near East Policy Stein Program on Counterterrorism and Intelligence Director Dr Matthew Levitt; and Center for a New American Security Middle East Security Program Director Ilan Goldenberg Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

Other: 8:00 AM NAACP Annual Convention continues – National Association for the Advancement of Colored People 108th Annual Convention, final day Location: The Baltimore Convention Center, 1 West Pratt Street, Baltimore, MD Baltimore <http://www.naacp.org> <https://twitter.com/NAACP>

8:30 AM GOP Sen. Bob Corker discusses Russia, Iran, and foreign policy at Washington Post event – The Washington Post hosts Senate Committee on Foreign Relations Chairman Bob Corker for an interview with columnist David Ignatius, discussing the Committee's efforts to expand sanctions against Russia and Iran, the status of the Iranian nuclear deal, President Donald Trump's proposed State Department budget, and the U.S. response to 'other foreign policy flare ups around the globe' Location: The Washington Post Live Center, 1301 K St NW, Washington, DC <http://www.washingtonpost.com/> <https://twitter.com/washingtonpost>

9:00 AM GOP Sen. Dan Sullivan speaks on the North Korean ballistic missile threat at Heritage Foundation – Republican Sen. Dan Sullivan speaks at Heritage Foundation on 'What a North Korean Ballistic Missile Threat Means for the U.S. Missile Defense System', followed by discussion with Center for Strategic and International Studies International Security Program Senior Fellow Thomas Karako, RAND Senior Political Scientist Austin Long, and Heritage Foundation Northeast Asia Senior Research Fellow Bruce Klingner Location: Heritage Foundation, 214 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC www.heritage.org <https://twitter.com/Heritage>

7:15 PM Young Americans for Liberty National Convention – Young Americans for Liberty National Convention, with today's speakers including Republican Sen. Rand Paul Location: Sheraton Reston Hotel, 11810 Sunrise Valley Drive, Reston, VA www.yaliberty.org <https://twitter.com/YALiberty>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Stephen Colbert: "You know how the Republicans have been trying to repeal and replace Obamacare? Well, since Trump's been in office, they've tried three times, and they've failed. But they finally figured out why they failed. They failed because people knew what was in their bill."

Stephen Colbert: "The bill was a total mystery. It's like 'Westworld.' No one knows exactly what's going on, but it's probably going to be a bad thing for women."

Stephen Colbert: "If none of the senators know what they voted for, it's potentially both good and bad at the same time. It's a black box we can't see inside. It's 'Schrodinger's Healthcare.' But the cat is probably dead, because it doesn't have health insurance."

Stephen Colbert: "It's no surprise [President Donald Trump] went to the Boy Scouts. With all his scandal, he's good at putting out fires."

James Corden: "This afternoon, Republicans in the Senate narrowly won a vote on Obamacare. And when I heard this news, I was bummed. And then I found out it was simply a vote to begin debating the future of Obamacare, which raises the question, what the heck have they been doing this whole time?"

James Corden: "The vote was 50-50, so Vice President Mike Pence was the deciding vote after the tie, which is weird because, usually, when Trump needs to fix a tie, he goes with scotch tape."

James Corden: "All I know is whoever ends up replacing Jeff Sessions is going to have some pretty tiny shoes to fill."

Trevor Noah: "But first, we begin the show with the Boy Scouts, the young men who learn about civic responsibility and tying knots, unlike the Girl Scouts who drift America with their cookie ponzi scheme."

Trevor Noah: "Yesterday at the National Jamboree in West Virginia, the Boy Scouts got a speech from America's most powerful adolescent, President Trump."

Trevor Noah: "The effort to repeal and replace Obamacare appeared to be deader than Trump's prospects on Tinder."

Trevor Noah: "I don't know who's more original, Hollywood or Senate Republicans. So many sequels. Healthcare Bill 1, 2, Healthcare Bill In Space, Healthcare Bill Versus Predator, the one where the Predator lost because of preexisting conditions."

Trevor Noah: "So the new GOP plan is to reinvent the national healthcare system by Thursday? I admire their optimism. We haven't been able to do this in seven years, let's try it in three days."

Trevor Noah: "If you're really confused by what's happening, you're probably a Republican senator who has to vote on third."

Trevor Noah: "Mitch McConnell was so hell-bent on getting this passed, he forced a man just diagnosed with brain cancer to come to Washington to vote. McCain was probably like, 'What the hell, Mitch, don't you know I could be dying?' McConnell is like, 'If we cared about people dying, we wouldn't be doing this bill. Now shut up and vote'"

Jimmy Fallon: "Today, Senate Republicans voted to move forward in the process to repeal and replace Obamacare even though they don't know exactly what they're going to be voting on. That's like going into the hospital and telling the surgeon, 'Surprise me.'"

Jimmy Fallon: "The heads of the healthcare voting centers are saying that they had no clue what they've been voting on. Then America said, 'Hey, just like us during the election.'"

Jimmy Fallon: "This morning, two senators were caught on a hot mic calling President Trump crazy, and when the news came out, literally every member of the Senate was like, 'Wait, was it me?'"

Jimmy Fallon: "Last night, President Trump gave a big speech at the Boy Scouts of America National Scout Jamboree. And this is cool, his healthcare bill won the award for scariest campfire story."

Jimmy Fallon: "I saw that this week, Democrats announced their new slogan, 'A Better Deal, Better Jobs, Better Wages, Better Future.' And Republicans announced their new slogan, 'Shorter Slogan.'"

Seth Meyers: "White House Communications Director Anthony Scaramucci reportedly told his staff today, quote, 'You're either going to stop leaking, or you're going to get fired.' Replied the leaker, 'You can't fire me, I'm the President.'"

Seth Meyers: "The Girl Scouts have announced that they will offer 23 new badges focused on science, technology, engineering, and math, while the Boy Scouts have announced they're just going to lay low for a while."

Seth Meyers: "President Trump spoke yesterday at the Boy Scouts jamboree and bragged about his election victory over Hillary Clinton. And every Scout in attendance earned the merit badge for eye rolling."

Seth Meyers: "According to the Washington Post, President Trump is considering Ted Cruz as a replacement for Attorney General Jeff Sessions. And if you thought Jeff Sessions was bad, you were right."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, June 14, 2017
Date: Wednesday, June 14, 2017 7:01:25 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, JUNE 14, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Law360: Zinke Says Government Is Failing Tribes, Deflects Budget Concerns.
- New Hampshire Public Radio: Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke Makes Stop In Hooksett.
- U.S. News & World Report: US Interior Chief To Visit Maine Monument Under Review.
- Deseret (UT) News: Deciphering Protections Inside Bears Ears Monument Designation.
- Los Angeles Times: California's Senators Ask Residents To Tell The Federal Government To Stay Away From The State's National Monuments.
- Great Falls (MT) Tribune: Tester: Trump Budget Guts Forest, Park Funding.
- The Hill: Washingtonians Take Center Stage At Will On The Hill.

- Washington Post: Why A Cabinet Of Kiss-Ups Is A Big Problem For Trump.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- DOI Blasts Nooksack Group's Bid For Redo In Funding Row.
- Mashpee Selectmen Show Support For Wampanoag's Land Into Trust Battle.

Bureau Of Land Management

- E&E Publishing: Law Professors Urge Court To Continue Hearing Fracking Regulation Case.
- Fairfield (MT) Sun Times: BLM Oil And Gas Lease Auction Brings In Over $720,000.
- Associated Press: Winds Push Northwest Colorado Wildfire To Over 5K Acres.

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

- Eni Submits Alaska Drilling Plans.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Phoenix City Council OKs Colorado River Conservation Plan.
- Decision Coming On California's Delta Tunnels Water Project.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Casper (WY) Star-Tribune: Groups File Formal Petition To Ban Cyanide Traps In Wyoming.
- Green Bay (WI) Press-Gazette: Historic Island Opens To Public.
- Fremont (OH) News-Messenger: Public Input Sought On Wildlife Refuge Drive.
- Washington Post: Another Wacky Find At Airport Customs: A Stuffed Puffin.
- Havasu (AZ) News-Herald: Our View: Lean On Administration To Deal With Fish And Wildlife.

National Park Service

- U.S. News & World Report: Lawmakers Seek Historic Site Designation For Ste. Genevieve.
- Durham (NC) Herald Sun: Pauli Murray's Historic Home In Durham Gets Federal Grant To Become Accessible.
- Associated Press: Yellowstone Sees Drop In Visitation Partly Because Of Storms.
- Daily Inter Lake (MT): Strong Start For Glacier Visitation.
- Philly (PA): Philadelphia Region Saw Record 42 Million Visitors In 2016.
- Minneapolis Star Tribune: Rockslide Blocks Popular Entrance To Yosemite National Park.
- Golden Isles (GA) News: Park Service Asks For Delay In Cumberland Rezoning.
- Beckley (WV) Register-Herald: Replacement Of Canyon Rim Boardwalk System Begins This Month.
- Billings (MT) Gazette: Daines Is Right: The National Park System Needs To Do More To Protect Workers.
- Huffington Post: Why We Preserve Our National Parks: Big Bend National Park.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Saipan (MNP) Tribune: DOI Powers Utilities In Territories, FAS.
- Marianas Variety: Interior Releases $7.8M For American Samoa.

Office Of Surface Mining

- Trump Clings To Coal As Worldwide Demand Plummets.

US Geological Survey

- Big Island (HI) Now: Latest Upgrade Of Kilauea Summit Seismic Stations Completed.
- Springfield (MO) News-Leader: Officials Agree To Fund Most Of Missouri's Threatened Stream Gauges.

Top National News

- New York Post: Sessions: Claims Of Russia Collusion An "Appalling And Detestable Lie."
- NBC: President Derides "Fake News," White House Says There Is "No Intention" To Fire Mueller.
- Wisconsin State Journal: Trump Talks Healthcare, Apprenticeships In Visit To Wisconsin.
- Politico: Meadows: Freedom Caucus Considering $1.5 Trillion Debt Ceiling Increase.
- Los Angeles Times: Hiltzik: Trump's EPA Cuts Revisit "Morale-Sapping Approach" Of Reagan-Era Administrator.
- Associated Press: Fed Set To Raise Rates On "Brighter Economic Outlook."
- Los Angeles Times: House Passes VA Reform Bill.
- Roll Call: Tillerson Says He Still Supports Paris Climate Deal, But Respects Trump's Decision.

- USA Today: Trump Tells Tangier Island Mayor Not To Worry About Sea-level Rise.
- Washington Examiner: EPA Looks To Halt Emission Rules For Two Years.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Jeff Sessions Clams Up In Congress."
 - "How To Protest In Russia."
- Washington Post.
 - "North Korea's Outrageous Treatment Of A US Student Must Not Go Unpunished."
 - "By Firing Mueller, Trump Would Make A Stronger Case That He Is Obstructing Justice."
 - "It's Time To Get Realistic About The Debt Ceiling."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Uber's Growing Pains."
 - "Otto Warmbier's Homecoming."
 - "Pennsylvania's Lesson For Illinois."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Zinke Says Government Is Failing Tribes, Deflects Budget Concerns.

Law360 (6/13, Westney) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "told a National Congress of American Indians conference Tuesday that federal programs serving tribes aren't working, as NCAI officials and tribal leaders raised concerns about funding cuts to such programs in the Trump administration's proposed budget."

The Connecticut Mirror (6/13, Pazniokas) reports that Zinke "pledged to establish a relationship of respect and consultation with the nation's 567 federally recognized tribes and reassured them that President Trump's deep budget cuts at Interior were not a prelude to dismantling the Bureau of Indian Affairs." Zinke said in remarks delivered at the Mohegan Sun gambling resort, "My pledge is to work with you, partner with you and be your advocate and fix a system that is broken."

Additional coverage was provided by the New London \(CT\) Day (6/13, Shanahan).

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke Makes Stop In Hooksett.

New Hampshire Public Radio (6/13, Greene) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "stopped at the Bass Pro Shop in Hooksett Tuesday afternoon, appearing with Governor Chris Sununu and State Fish and Game Executive Director Glenn Normandeau." At the store, Zinke "signed a ceremonial $1.1 billion check for fish and wildlife conservation programs."

The Concord \(NH\) Monitor (6/14, Reid) reports that Zinke "enthusiastically recited the state's motto and listed off attributes that he said make it perfect for his announcement: 'very outdoors, loves hunting, loves traditional land use, making sure the land is open to the public.'" He said, "That's what the funds are used for. They're used for restoration, the wildlife refuges, access. ... It's really a program paid for by hunters and fishermen that protects hunting and fishing and the great outdoors."

WBIN-TV Concord, NH (6/13) reports that Zinke said, "For nearly eight decades, the nation's hunters and anglers have generated billions of dollars to protect wildlife and habitat simply by purchasing items that help them engage in the outdoor activities they enjoy. Their support has helped state wildlife agencies protect our country's environmental legacy for future generations of hunters, fishers, recreationalists, and conservationists."

US Interior Chief To Visit Maine Monument Under Review.

The AP (6/14, Whittle) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is "heading to Maine on Wednesday to see Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument as part of a tour of national monuments that are under review." Zinke is "scheduled to spend the day driving, hiking and canoeing through the monument grounds and waters."

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by ABC News (6/14, Whittle), Business Insider (6/14, Whittle), the Minneapolis \(MN\) Star Tribune (6/13, Whittle), the North Platte \(NE\) Telegraph (6/14, Whittle), the Oklahoman (6/14, Whittle), Philly \(PA\) (6/14, Whittle), the San Francisco \(CA\) Chronicle (6/14, Whittle), the Washington \(DC\) Post (6/14, Patrick Whittle |, Ap), the Washington \(DC\) Times (6/14, Whittle), and KGMB-TV Honolulu \(HI\) Honolulu (6/14, Whittle).

Visit Should Convince Interior Secretary That Monument Is Welcome Addition To Maine, America.

In an editorial, the Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (6/13) welcomes Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to the Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument and surrounding area. The paper says that "it is important for him to meet with area residents firsthand and to spend time exploring the monument land himself before making a recommendation to the president." The paper argues that Maine Gov. Paul LePage was wrong in claiming that "there wasn't enough public discussion of the land preservation and that local residents don't want it." It hopes that Zinke will recognize this after his visit.

The Katahdin Region Can Thrive Alongside The Monument. In an op-ed for the Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (6/13, King), Sen. Angus King touts the Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument as an economic "pillar" of the community. King writes about how he has "heard from businesses throughout the area – from hardware store owners, grocers, and lumber retailers to recreational equipment suppliers, lodge and inn operators, and realtors – who have all testified that the monument has been a much-needed boost to their businesses and the regional economy as a whole." He also notes that "these positive developments have led many local elected officials who once opposed the monument to reverse their positions and work unabashedly to secure its success."

Let's Welcome Interior Secretary Zinke To Our National Monument. In his column for the Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (6/13, Smith), George Smith also welcomes Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to Maine. Smith reprints his testimony in favor of the designation of the monument last year at a public hearing hosted by Sen. Angus King and the Director of the National Park Service.

Deciphering Protections Inside Bears Ears Monument Designation.

The Deseret \(UT\) News (6/13, O'Donoghue) reports that "when Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke announced a preliminary recommendation that contemplates shrinking the boundaries of the Bears Ears National Monument, one of the key points he emphasized is that some of the land is already subject to special management restrictions." Zinke's interim report "notes there are 11 wilderness study areas inside the monument that comprise 381,000 acres and are managed by the Bureau of Land Management." According to the article, "the lands have to be in the same or better condition than they were 41 years ago to ensure Congress has the ability to invoke permanent wilderness protection." The article notes "that year is significant, 1976, when Congress passed the Federal Lands Policy Management Act that set up the majority of Utah's wilderness study areas — vast amounts of land that have remained in limbo since then."

Additional coverage of Zinke's recommendation on Monday to redraw the boundaries of Bears Ears National Monument was provided by Fox News (6/13, O'Reilly), the Christian Science Monitor (6/13, Wood), PBS NewsHour (6/13, McCombs), Fronteras (6/12, Morales), the Los Alamos \(NM\) Daily Post (6/13), Courthouse News (6/12, Renda), and WRC-TV Washington \(DC\) Washington (6/13, McCombs, Daly).

Tribune Editorial: Zinke Leaves Bears Ears Dispute Unsettled. In an editorial, the Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (6/13) argues that "the best thing that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke could have done about the Bears Ears National Monument in southeastern Utah was absolutely nothing." According to the paper, "what Zinke did was tantalizingly close to that." It says that "by admitting that some of the area deserves eternal protection, making a vague suggestion about redrawing the monument's borders, calling on Congress to get involved and extending the time for public comments, the secretary has created a little breathing room." The paper hoes that, "when it is all over, a significant amount of land that is sacred to the area's Native Americans will be indeed protected, that the tribes involved will possess some unquestioned legal authority over what happens there and that future monument designations will be done in a way that creates more consensus and less division." Until then, it concludes that "Bears Ears should remain just the national monument it has been designated," "because, right now, nobody has a better idea."

California's Senators Ask Residents To Tell The Federal Government To Stay Away From

The State's National Monuments.

The Los Angeles Times (6/13, Wire) reports that "California's senators are trying to prevent changes to six national monuments in the Golden State, and they're asking Californians to help by sending comments to the Interior Department." In a letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, Sens. Dianne Feinstein and Kamala Harris wrote, "On behalf of all Californians, we urge that these national monument designations are preserved with their present boundaries, to ensure these special places remain for generations to come."

Porterville Wants Giant Sequoias Reduced. The Visalia \(CA\) Times-Delta (6/13, Lindt) reports that the Porterville City Council "approved a draft letter to the Secretary the Interior to reduce the size of the Sequoia National Monument by about two-thirds." The letter, "approved unanimously, seeks to return the protective zone to its 1992 size." They recommend that the "Giant Sequoia National Monument's boundaries be reduced to the approximate 90,360 acres established by Proclamation 6457, and encourage the use of active forest management by the Forest Service in protection of the Giant Sequoia Groves, in addition to fulfilling the commitment of developing a Visitors Center for the Monument."

Residents Support Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument. The Las Cruces \(NM\) Sun-News (6/14, Gibbs) reports that "Doña Ana County leaders are speaking up in support of the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument and announcing the results of a new poll showing overwhelming support among county residents." According to the article, "the poll of 400 registered voters in Doña Ana County, conducted by the Las Cruces Green Chamber of Commerce from May 13-17, shows that 63 percent oppose any reduction of the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument, compared to 26 percent who support reducing protections." The survey "also shows Democrats, Republicans and independents all fell positively toward the monument."

Possible Monument Downsizing Prompts Hold Our Ground Effort. The Great Falls \(MT\) Tribune (6/13, Puckett) reports that "a group from Montana is calling for protections of national monuments in response to President Trump's decision to review monuments designated by presidential executive order since 1996." According to the article, "launched Monday to protect national monuments with cultural, historical and scientific value, Hold Our Ground has produced a television commercial and a series of social media videos demanding monument protection stay in place for the Missouri Breaks." Hold Our Ground is "encouraging history buffs, hunters, anglers and others who recreate on the river to tell the Trump administration to decline to review the Breaks monument, which could lead to modifications," says member Larry Epstein.

NM Must Speak Up Again For Its Livelihood. In an op-ed for the Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (6/14, Miyagishima), Las Cruces Mayor Ken Miyagishima touts "what the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks and Río Grande del Norte national monuments bring our constituents and visitors in economic benefits, quality of life and natural assets." According to the mayor, "since designating the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument in 2014, the town of Mesilla's tax revenues have increased and Las Cruces' lodgers' tax revenues are also up." Miyagishima asserts that "the outcome from protected public lands is clear – people and businesses located around places like the Río Grande del Norte National Monument reap the benefits of protection."

Our View: Monument Review A Moving Target. The Medford \(OR\) Mail Tribune (6/14) editorializes that "Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's recommendation to scale back Utah's Bears Ears National Monument may pose less of a threat to Southern Oregon's Cascade-Siskiyou National Monument than supporters fear." The paper acknowledges that "Zinke's proposal to ask Congress to modify management rules for portions of Bears Ears might have a better outcome than leaving it up to the White House." However, it concludes that "this administration is determined to undo what previous presidents put in place" so "the future of the Cascade-Siskiyou National Monument is far from assured."

Tester: Trump Budget Guts Forest, Park Funding.

The Great Falls \(MT\) Tribune (6/13, Puckett) reports that Sen. Jon Tester "told reporters Tuesday that President Trump's budget proposes 'radical' cuts for parks, forests and land acquisition that will harm the state's outdoor economy." Joining Tester were Randy Newman, "who hosts two outdoor TV programs, former Glacier National Park Superintendent Chas Cartwright and Marne Hayes, executive director for Montana Outdoors." Tester "said he would work through the appropriations process to help get funding restored but said there are so many cuts it would be difficult."

Additional coverage was provided by the Helena \(MT\) Independent Record (6/13, Chaney) and the Bozeman \(MT\) Daily Chronicle (6/13, Wright).

Washingtonians Take Center Stage At Will On The Hill.

The "In The Know" blog of The Hill (6/13, Costello) reports that the Shakespeare Theater Company "hosted the annual tradition, Will on the Hill, where notable Washingtonians take to the stage and act out classic theater with a modern political twist." According to the article, "the cast poked fun at the president and themselves in their production, 'Met by Moonlight,' a take on Midsummer Night's Dream, in which Oberon (Kahn), a forest deity, and his assistant, Puck (Pancholy), encounter two park rangers (Swallow and Fontana), and the four then try to stem the flow of people fleeing the heat of D.C. in the summer." The Washington-based cast members included Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke.

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington Post (6/13, Heil).

Why A Cabinet Of Kiss-Ups Is A Big Problem For Trump.

In the "On Leadership" blog of the Washington Post (6/13), Jena McGregor writes that the "effusive praise" of President Trump in his first full Cabinet meeting Monday "drew mockery from Democratic corners." McGregor cites "management experts" as saying the praise likely cuts "down on the kind of dissenting views Trump will need to lead the country well." In addition, "research shows that when people feel like they need to engage in flattery, it makes them resentful, slows down strategic change and can even prompt subordinates to make negative comments to the press."

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

DOI Blasts Nooksack Group's Bid For Redo In Funding Row.

Law360 (6/13, Powell) reports that the Interior Department "urged a Washington federal judge Monday to stay firm on a recent decision dismissing the purported Nooksack Indian Tribal Council's lawsuit claiming that the agency has wrongly refused to pay roughly $14 million in funding, saying there's no reason to reconsider."

Mashpee Selectmen Show Support For Wampanoag's Land Into Trust Battle.

The Cape Cod \(MA\) News (6/13) reports that "selectmen in Mashpee have restated their support for the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe's continued effort for getting land into trust." The tribe is "currently in a legal dispute after a lower court ruled in favor of Taunton residents who challenged the federal ruling which placed land into trust in Taunton and Mashpee." Selectmen sent a letter to the Interior Department "expressing their support for the federal government's remand application."

Bureau Of Land Management

Law Professors Urge Court To Continue Hearing Fracking Regulation Case.

E&E Publishing (6/13) reports dozens of law professors submitted an amicus brief urging the 10th US Circuit Court of Appeals to continue hearing a case stemming from the Obama Administration's rule for hydraulic fracturing on public and tribal lands. The 29 professors said that freezing the case would leave an incorrect decision stand. The brief said, "The Order contains fundamentally erroneous legal principles of statutory interpretation and administrative law. ... Yet under an abeyance and potentially drawn-out new rulemaking, the Order would remain extant and could solidify further incorrect precedent in other cases even if it were ultimately vacated and rendered moot."

BLM Oil And Gas Lease Auction Brings In Over $720,000.

The Fairfield \(MT\) Sun Times (6/13) reports that "bids on oil and gas leases in northern and southeastern Montana brought in $720,843 in an online auction held June 13, by the Bureau of Land Management." The auction "included 156 parcels encompassing approximately 69,000 acres of federal minerals in Big Horn, Carter, Custer, Fallon, Garfield, Powder River and Rosebud Counties were offered at auction."

Winds Push Northwest Colorado Wildfire To Over 5K Acres.

The AP (6/13) reports that "one of two large wildfires burning in northwestern Colorado has spread to more than 5,000 acres (2,023 hectares)." According to the article, "wind gusts of over 70 mph (113 kph) on Monday fueled the growth of the Dead Dog Fire 10 miles (16 kilometers) north of Rangely." Bureau of Land Management spokesman David Boyd said "that the fire moved more than 4 miles (6 kilometers) because of the winds, which also grounded firefighting aircraft."

Additional coverage was provided by the Glenwood Springs \(CO\) Post Independent (6/13).

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

Eni Submits Alaska Drilling Plans.

Offshore Engineer (6/13, Sustaita) reports that Italian oil major Eni has submitted its proposal to the Bureau of Ocean Management "for a drilling program offshore Alaska, from the man-made island, Spy Island Drillsite (SID) in the Beaufort Sea." According to the article, "Eni's proposed exploration plan (EP) is for the exploratory drilling of the company's Nikaitchuq North Project, consisting of four exploration wells, two mainbores and two sidetracks from the Italian giant's existing SID man-made gravel island, on the State of Alaska lease." BOEM has "30 calendar days to evaluate the EP in accordance with federal law and regulations."

Additional coverage was provided by Upstream Online (6/13) and the Alaska Journal of Commerce (6/13, Brehmer).

Bureau Of Reclamation

Phoenix City Council OKs Colorado River Conservation Plan.

The AP (6/13) reports that the Phoenix City Council has "unanimously approved an agreement with tribal, state and federal leaders to help protect the Colorado River and preserve water levels in Lake Mead." The agreement reached Tuesday "with the state, the Gila River Indian Community and the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation will save the equivalent of 35 percent of the Colorado River water used annually by Phoenix residents." The deal also will "fund a contribution of 13 billion gallons of Colorado River water to system conservation in Lake Mead this year."

Additional coverage was provided by the Arizona Republic (6/14) and KJZZ-FM Phoenix \(AZ\) Phoenix (6/13, Kuhn).

Decision Coming On California's Delta Tunnels Water Project.

The Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (6/13, Sabalow, Kasler) reports that California's "most powerful water agencies have set a September goal to decide whether they're going pay" for the Delta tunnels project. Meanwhile, "in greater Sacramento and throughout the Delta, farmers, environmental groups and elected officials remain deeply mistrustful of the proposal." Delta-area lawyers have "promised a nasty court fight if the tunnels, known officially as California WaterFix, get the go-ahead."

Fish And Wildlife Service

Groups File Formal Petition To Ban Cyanide Traps In Wyoming.

The Casper \(WY\) Star-Tribune (6/13, Peterson) reports that "a coalition of environmental groups formally petitioned the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on Tuesday asking for a ban of M-44s, a cyanide trap used to kill coyotes across the state." The article notes that "many of the groups, which include Western Watersheds Project, WildEarth Guardians and the Center for Biological Diversity, filed a similar petition in Idaho in March." Wildlife Services, an agency of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, "decided to remove all M-44s from private, state and federal land in Idaho." Erik Molvar, executive director of Western Watersheds Project, said, "We're not at war with native wildlife, and it is irresponsible to allow poison landmines to be sown anywhere in Wyoming. Wildlife Services got rid of M-44s in Idaho, and they should do the same in Wyoming before more pets, and even people, get hurt or killed."

Historic Island Opens To Public.

The Green Bay \(WI\) Press-Gazette (6/13, Welter) reports that "the recently completed renovations to the Plum Island dock and breakwater will allow more visitors to one of the jewels among the protected islands managed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service." A study of the island's structures "found it will cost about $7 million to either stabilize or renovate buildings including the lighthouse on nearby Pilot island.”

Public Input Sought On Wildlife Refuge Drive.

The Fremont \(OH\) News-Messenger (6/13) reports that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is seeking public input “on a draft Compatibility Determination for the Wildlife Drive at Ottawa National Wildlife Refuge.” Written comments will be accepted through June 27.

Another Wacky Find At Airport Customs: A Stuffed Puffin.

The Washington Post (6/13, Aratani) reports, “A traveler on a flight from Iceland brought along an unusual keepsake: a taxidermied Atlantic Puffin.” The bird “was discovered by U.S. Customs and Border Protection agents at Baltimore-Washington International Marshall Airport earlier this month.” CBP notified US Fish and Wildlife Service, “which seized the bird on Jun. 6.” The Post says possession of the stuffed puffin “violates the Migratory Bird Treaty Act.” CBP Port of Baltimore area port director Dianna Bowman is quoted as saying, “Customs and Border Protection enforces all manner of agriculture protection laws, including laws concerning threatened and endangered animal species...CBP agriculture specialists are our nation’s front line protectors of our nation’s agriculture industries and they take their job very serious.”

Additional coverage was provided by WJLA-TV Washington \(DC\) Washington (6/13).

Our View: Lean On Administration To Deal With Fish And Wildlife.

In an editorial, the Havasu \(AZ\) News-Herald (6/14) notes that “it has been a year since the controversial boating restrictions were introduced at the Havasu National Wildlife Refuge.” The paper is glad that “we now have an administration that has shown a willingness to consider economic interests over environmental ones,” but “what that means for the Havasu National Wildlife Refuge is anybody’s guess.” The paper hopes that “if boating restrictions resurface,” then “they’ll have a smaller scope and will be introduced in a way that is considerate of all those impacted — particularly Lake Havasu’s boating community.”

National Park Service

Lawmakers Seek Historic Site Designation For Ste. Genevieve.

The AP (6/13) reports that “members of Missouri’s congressional delegation are renewing efforts to designate the Mississippi River town of Ste. Genevieve as a national historic site.” Democratic Sen. Claire McCaskill, Republican Sen. Roy Blunt and Republican Rep. Jason Smith “on Monday introduced legislation to establish the Ste. Genevieve National Historic Site and designate it as part of the National Park Service.” The legislators “introduced similar legislation last year.”

Additional coverage was provided by the St. Louis \(MO\) Post-Dispatch (6/13, Raasch) and KFVS-TV Cape Girardeau \(MO\) Cape Girardeau, MO (6/13, Dobrinick).

Pauli Murray’s Historic Home In Durham Gets Federal Grant To Become Accessible.

The Durham \(NC\) Herald Sun (6/13, Vaughan) reports that “the historic Pauli Murray House will become wheelchair accessible as the interior is restored, thanks to a National Park Service grant.” The park service “awarded a grant for $237,575 to the Pauli Murray Center for History & Social Justice, which is set to open in 2020.” National Park Service Acting Director Michael Reynolds said in the announcement, “Through the African American Civil Rights Grant Program, we’re helping our public and private partners tell unique and powerful stories of the African-American struggle for equality in the 20th century.”

Yellowstone Sees Drop In Visitation Partly Because Of Storms.

The AP (6/13) reports that “partly because of late spring snowstorms, fewer people visited Yellowstone National Park in May when compared with a year ago.” However, “it was still the second busiest May on record at the world’s first national park.” Yellowstone “hosted more than 419,600 visits during May, down 5.6 percent from May 2016’s 444,600 visits.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Billings \(MT\) Gazette (6/13).

Strong Start For Glacier Visitation.

The Daily Inter Lake \(MT\) (6/13, Wilson) reports that “more than a quarter of a million people entered” Glacier National Park “during the first five months of 2017, according to the National Park Service estimate.” The article notes that “that’s the second-highest total in park history for that time period, second only to the first five months of 2016." Also, "last month's 177,256 visitors to Glacier was similarly the second-busiest May in park history — down 13.2 percent from last year."

Philadelphia Region Saw Record 42 Million Visitors In 2016.

Philly \(PA\) (6/13, Loyd) reports that "the Philadelphia region has seen an uptick in visitors annually for the last seven years, after a tourism slump in 2008 and 2009 due to the recession." Of note, Independence National Historical Park "saw 5.07 million visitors in 2016." Meanwhile, "outside the city, the big attractions were Valley Forge National Historical Park which drew 2.4 million, up nearly 14 percent over the 2.1 million in 2015."

Rockslide Blocks Popular Entrance To Yosemite National Park.

The AP (6/13) reports that "a large rockslide has blocked one of the main roads into Yosemite National Park that will remain closed at least through the weekend, an official said Tuesday." According to park spokesman Scott Gediman, "about 4,000 tons (3,600 metric tons) of rock detached from a cliff on Monday, blocking El Portal Road."

Additional coverage was provided by CBS News, the Los Angeles \(CA\) Times (6/13, Rocha) and the Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (6/13, Oide).

Park Service Asks For Delay In Cumberland Rezoning.

The Golden Isles \(GA\) News (6/13, Jackson) reports that the National Park Service has "asked the Camden County Commission to delay the proposed rezoning of about 1,000 acres of private property on Cumberland Island National Seashore." In a letter sent Monday to county commissioners, superintendent Gary Ingram "said 'valuable progress' is being made in negotiations about proposed zoning and code changes for the barrier island."

Replacement Of Canyon Rim Boardwalk System Begins This Month.

The Beckley \(WV\) Register-Herald (6/13) reports that the National Park Service has "received funds to replace the boardwalk system at Canyon Rim Visitor Center in New River Gorge National River." According to the article, "the entire project is expected to take several months and closures are necessary to ensure the safety of visitors to the area and to allow the construction to progress as quickly as possible."

Daines Is Right: The National Park System Needs To Do More To Protect Workers.

In an editorial, the Billings \(MT\) Gazette (6/13) lauds Sen. Steve Daines for leading Senate subcommittee "that was looking into workplace problems within the National Park Systems." The paper calls it "an important move by an important person." That is, "if a Montana Republican cannot condone the behavior, in a Republican Congress, that means things must change."

Why We Preserve Our National Parks: Big Bend National Park.

In a piece for the Huffington Post (6/13, Preservation, Contributor), the National Trust For Historic Preservation calls for helping the National Park Service to "tackle their backlogs and conduct ongoing maintenance." Doing so would "create a richer experience for park visitors and locals, increasing economic prosperity and cultural vitality in legions of national parks across the country." It urges support for the National Park Service Legacy Act, which "would dedicate time and investments to repairing NPS's roads, facilities, and park structures."

Office Of Insular Affairs

DOI Powers Utilities In Territories, FAS.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (6/14) reports that Acting Interior assistant secretary for Insular Areas Nikolao Pula "made available this week $380,447 in maintenance assistance funding from the Office of Insular Affairs to support two regional initiatives and one local initiative that support and bolster capacity for the power utilities in all main islands of the Pacific U.S. insular areas." Pula said, "Electrical power is costly for residents in the territories and freely associated states. We do all we can to help them keep costs down through building local capacity and facilitating collaboration of ideas and expertise."

Interior Releases $7.8M For American Samoa.

Marianas Variety (6/14) reports that the Office of Insular Affairs has “released $7.8 million remaining in grant assistance for fiscal year 2017 to the American Samoa Government through the Office of Insular Affairs’ Operations Grant Program.” Interior Acting Assistant Secretary for Insular Areas Nikolao Pula said, “These funds are critical for government operations in the territory of American Samoa. We are pleased to transmit the remaining funds on behalf of the administration.”

Office Of Surface Mining

Trump Clings To Coal As Worldwide Demand Plummet.

The AP (6/13, Biesecker) reports that demand for coal is “plummeting worldwide” and coal’s share of global energy consumption is continuing to fall, “even as President Donald Trump has made reviving the long-struggling U.S. coal mines the bedrock of his administration’s energy policy.” Meanwhile, “renewable energy made big gains, growing 14 percent in 2016.” The AP states, “as Trump doubles down on coal, the rest of the world appears headed in the opposite direction.”

US Geological Survey

Latest Upgrade Of Kilauea Summit Seismic Stations Completed.

Big Island \(HI\) Now (6/13) reports that “field engineers at the USGS Hawaiian Volcano Observatory (HVO) recently completed a multi-year effort to upgrade a subset of seismic stations at the summit of Kilauea Volcano.” Beginning in 2014, “each of the stations was progressively upgraded with a new-generation broadband seismometer, solar-power system, radio, antenna, enclosure and cabling.” According to the article, “the new enclosures for the seismometers were designed with better insulation properties to buffer the effects of changing temperatures throughout the day.”

Officials Agree To Fund Most Of Missouri’s Threatened Stream Gauges.

The Springfield \(MO\) News-Leader (6/13) reports that the U.S. Geological Survey and the Missouri Department of Natural Resources have “agreed to spend more than half a million dollars to pay for dozens of water gauges across the state.” USGS and DNR will join “to fund 42 of the 49 river and stream gauges for which funding was previously threatened, said Amy Beussink, director of the USGS Missouri Water Science Center in Rolla.” According to a copy of the agreement, “DNR will pay $461,203 and the USGS will chip in $106,800 in federal matching funds.”

Top National News

Sessions: Claims Of Russia Collusion An “Appalling And Detestable Lie.”

Media reports cast Attorney General Sessions as defiant, forceful, and aggressive in his testimony to the Senate Intelligence Committee. Almost universally, reports highlight Sessions’ claim that the suggestion that he was involved in colluding with Russia during the 2016 campaign is an “appalling and detestable lie.” Coverage focuses heavily on questions surrounding Sessions’ meetings with Russian officials during the campaign and his role in the firing of former FBI Director Comey, while Sessions’ refusal to discuss his private conversations with President Trump – which prompted allegations of stonewalling from Democrats on the panel – also receives a great deal of attention.

The New York Post (6/13, Fredericks) reports that Tuesday’s hearing “was initially going to take place behind closed doors – but ranking committee members decided to make it public.” In his opening statement, Chairman Richard Burr told Session this was “his opportunity to ‘separate fact from fiction and set the record straight on a number of allegations reported in the press.’” Media reports indicate that Sessions appears to have seized that opportunity as Politico (6/13, Kim, Gerstein) says he “forcefully denied” any collusion and Roll Call (6/13, Bennett) reports that Sessions “aggressively denied” any collusion, while USA Today (6/13, Johnson, Kelly) reports that an “animated” Sessions said, “Let me state this clearly. I have never met with or had any conversations with any Russians or any foreign officials concerning any type of interference with any campaign or election. I was your colleague in this body for 20 years, and the suggestion that I participated in any collusion...to undermine the integrity of our democratic process is an appalling and detestable lie."

Similar characterizations of Sessions' testimony appear across the media. For example, Lester Holt said on NBC Nightly News (6/13, story 2, 2:30) that Sessions "came out forcefully in his own defense," while Kasie Hunt described him as "defiant." The New York Times (6/13, Savage, Huetteman, Ruiz) describes Sessions' testimony as "highly contentious," while the Los Angeles Times (6/13, Tanfani) says Session delivered "sometimes impassioned testimony," during which he "repeatedly rebutted any suggestions that he had any improper contacts with Russian authorities – but he also repeatedly said he did not recall details of the meeting he had."

Reuters (6/13, Ainsley, Zengerle) reports that Sessions "had a series of tense exchanges with Democrats" on the committee. In one, Sen. Ron Wyden told Sessions, "I believe the American people have had it with stonewalling. Americans don't want to hear that answers to relevant questions are privileged," to which Sessions replied, "I am not stonewalling." The Wall Street Journal (6/13, Viswanatha, Sonne, Wilber) cites the exchange with Wyden as evidence of the heated tone during Tuesday's hearing. Wyden said on CNN's Anderson Cooper 360 (6/13) that Sessions "refused to address the most basic issues today. Why didn't he recuse himself sooner? What did the President say to him about firing Director Comey? Look, the bottom line is that we have had one of these Trump officials after another and they basically say they're not going to respond to questions because they don't feel like it."

McClatchy (6/13, Leavenworth) says Sessions also "faced tough questioning from Sen. Kamala Harris," and "appeared visibly relieved when Harris' time allotment ran out." The Washington Examiner (6/13, Cohen) offers a more positive assessment, saying Democrats went into the hearing "ready to attack" but Sessions "offered a tough defense."

The Hill (6/13, Williams) says Sessions delivered a "fiery opening statement" during which he "denied rumors that he had a third, previously unreported private meeting with Russian Ambassador Sergey Kislyak during the campaign." However, later in his testimony, Sessions "said that it was 'possible' the third meeting with Kislyak occurred, arguing that he would have 'gladly reported it... if I remembered it, or if it actually occurred.'" According to the Washington Post (6/13, Horwitz, Zapotosky), Sessions "took particular aim at news reports about a possible meeting he had with a Russian official during an April 2016 event at the Mayflower hotel." While he "acknowledged being at the event and said he had conversations with those there," he "did not remember any with Russian Ambassador Sergey Kislyak." Said Sessions, "If any brief interaction occurred in passing with the Russian ambassador during that reception, I do not remember it," and if such a conversation did occur, it was "certainly nothing improper."

USA Today (6/13, Cummings) reports that Sen. Tom Cotton, referring to the Sessions-Kislyak meeting at the Mayflower, asked Sessions about his affinity for spy fiction and then inquired, "Have you ever, in any of these fantastical situations, heard of a plot line so ridiculous that a sitting United States senator and an ambassador of a foreign government colluded at an open setting with hundreds of other people to pull off the greatest caper in the history of espionage?" USA describes Sessions as "effusively grateful for Cotton's attempt to paint those theories as absurd," adding that he said, "Thank you for saying that, Senator Cotton. It's just like through the looking glass. I mean what is this?"

In an analysis for the Washington Post (6/13), Callum Borchers writes that Sessions' defense for failing to disclose his meetings with Kislyak come down "to a critical distinction: At times during the presidential race, he acted as a surrogate for Donald Trump. At other times, he acted as a US senator." Because those roles were separate, Sessions believes his statement during his confirmation hearing that he had no communications with the Russians "should not be viewed as dishonest." Borchers adds, however, that Sessions does not always see that division, adding that "Sessions couldn't or wouldn't say whether he was acting as a surrogate or a senator" at the Mayflower event.

Tom Bevan of Real Clear Politics said on Fox News' Special Report (6/13), "I thought Sessions was passionate and sincere in his defense, and drove a stake through the heart of the collusion argument," but "I don't know it's going to convince anybody, any Democrats, anybody who thought that there is collusion or obstruction, he probably didn't change any minds in that regard."

The Washington Post (6/13, Horwitz, Zapotosky) focuses on Sessions' repeated refusal to discuss his private conversations with Trump, reporting that in "a number of testy exchanges," he "said he would not discuss his conversations with Trump because of long-standing Justice Department policy that protected private conversations between cabinet secretaries and the president." A USA Today (6/13, Page) analysis similarly says that while Sessions "angrily denied any wrongdoing in his campaign contacts with Russian officials or the steps he later took at the Justice Department leading to Comey's ouster," he "refused to respond to a series of questions about President Trump's actions and motivations."

Pierre Thomas said in the lead story for ABC World News Tonight (6/13, lead story, 5:35, Muir) that Sessions was "defiant," adding that he "repeatedly protect[ed] any conversations he had with the President." CNN senior legal analyst Jeffrey Toobin said on CNN's Situation Room (6/13) that Sessions did not "formally cit[e] executive privilege, referring to some confidentiality which was apparently of his own invention."

To Bloomberg Politics (6/13, Dennis), Sessions sought "to preempt questions from the panel about conversations" with the President, which Nancy Cordes said in the lead story for the CBS Evening News (6/13, lead story, 3:45, Pelley) "frustrated Democrats, who accused Sessions of stonewalling about his conversations with Mr. Trump." Cordes added that "one top Democrat said tonight...that perhaps Sessions and other top officials should be held in contempt of Congress if they won't answer these questions about the President."

Roll Call (6/13, Bennett) reports that Sessions cited "the potential that the White House could assert executive privilege – which has not yet happened." The Attorney General said, "I am protecting the right of the president ... to assert it if he chooses, and there may be other privileges that apply in this circumstance." Sessions added "that he was unsure if there was any additional clarity he could provide to members of the Intelligence panel in a closed session." Jim Acosta said on CNN's Situation Room (6/13) that according to the White House, Sessions "did not discuss with aides over here whether the President was asserting executive privilege and the President was not invoking it, so Sessions was essentially just dodging those questions during his testimony and the Republican-led committee simply allowed Sessions to do that."

Sen. Chris Murphy said on CNN's Situation Room (6/13) that "the very fact that he continues to not be able to testify to the conversations with the President suggests that there is something that he could be hiding." That, alongside the Deputy Attorney General's refusal in closed session to "give us any information about how he put together that memo that created the justification for Comey's firing," suggests "that there's a potential obstruction of justice charge here that no one wants to testify to."

John Dickerson said on the CBS Evening News (6/13, story 3, 1:30, Pelley) Sessions is "asserting a privilege the President has not asserted. He's saying the President might some day assert exclusive privilege." Similarly, Gloria Borger said on CNN's Situation Room (6/13), "This was General Sessions not talking at all about the President, not invoking any kind of executive privilege but allowing the fact if the President wanted to some time in the future, he didn't want to stand in the way or get in the way of that. I think there were a lot of Democrats, particularly Senator Heinrich, who basically said, 'You are obstructing our investigation.'"

A New York Times (6/13) editorial says that after giving "false testimony" to a Senate committee during his confirmation hearing, Sessions on Tuesday "lowered a broad cone of silence around all his communications with President Trump," citing "a supposedly longstanding policy at the Justice Department — although he couldn't confirm that it existed in writing or that, if it did, he had actually read it." Sessions, the Times argues, "has no intention to answer any of those questions now or in the future." In an editorial, USA Today (6/13) says committee Democrats "failed to land any knockout blows, nor did Sessions punch any meaningful holes in Comey's damaging testimony about President Trump." USA Today adds that Sessions "often came across as forgetful, testy and defensive, his testimony sprinkled with the 'do not recall' that reek of the lawyerly way public officials often evade accusations in Washington." In an accompanying op-ed for USA Today (6/13), RNC Chairwoman Ronna McDaniel takes a very different view, writing that Sessions "proved his unwavering commitment to transparency and dedication to upholding the integrity of the Justice Department."

The AP (6/13, Tucker, Werner) reports that Sessions "also rejected any idea of misconduct in the ouster of FBI Director James Comey." Citing Comey's claim that "implored" Sessions "to make sure he was never left alone with the president again – but that Sessions didn't respond," the AP quotes the Attorney General as saying, "He didn't recall this, but I responded to his comment by agreeing that the FBI and Department of Justice needed to be careful to follow department policy regarding appropriate contacts with the White House." Breitbart (6/13, Mason) reports that the Attorney General "took Comey to task for saying Sessions had 'shrugged' as if to say 'what do you want me to do' when the now-fired FBI director asked Sessions to help him avoid impropriety in his communications with the White House."

Townhall (6/13, O'Brien) reports that in response to requests that he "expand on his involvement in the firing of Comey," Sessions explained that the President "asked him and Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein for their opinions on Comey and to put it in writing." Sessions said, "There was a clear view of mine and Rosenstein that we had problems" at the FBI, adding that Comey had demonstrated his unfitness for the job "when he denied prosecution of Hillary Clinton after the email probe," which Sessions called a "usurpation of authority." Rep. Adam Schiff said on CNN's Situation Room (6/13) that Sessions "avoided really answering questions about whether his letter, Rod Rosenstein's memo were a pretext and they knew they were a pretext for the Comey firing, and from my perspective, Congress can not let those non-answers stand. We're going to go have to press to get answers, and we're going to have to force them to invoke privilege if that's what they intend to do."

The Washington Times (6/13, Noble) reports that Sessions "called it 'absurd; that his own recusal would bar him from making the recommendation that former FBI Director James B. Comey be fired, noting recusal in the case should not preclude him from managing Justice Department components."

Steve Hayes of The Weekly Standard said on Fox News' Special Report (6/13), "He was weakest in talking about privilege and refusing to answer questions and explaining why he was refusing to answer questions. He was also relatively weak and trying to explain his role of why James Comey was dismissed and why the White House had given the convoluted explanation it gave. But overall, a good witness for the White House. It was a good day for the Trump Administration."

NYTimes Analysis: Harris Cut Off During Questioning For Second Time. The New York Times (6/13, Rogers) reports that Sen. Kamala Harris, who "employs a rapid-fire questioning pace more commonly seen in courtroom," was "cut off by Republican senators on Tuesday as she questioned" Sessions. This is "notable" the Times says, because it marks "the second time in a week that Ms. Harris, who is of Indian and Jamaican descent and is the only minority woman on the committee, was interrupted by two male colleagues during a hearing."

Miller Says Sessions "Knocked Away The Hysteria" From Harris. Former Trump campaign spokesman Jason Miller prompted a heated exchange with USA Today's Kirsten Powers when he said on CNN's Anderson Cooper 360 (6/13) that Sessions "knocked away the hysteria from Kamala Harris and some of the Democrats who wanted to make this a partisan show." Powers questioned (6/13), how "asking some tough questions" made Harris hysterical. Powers added, "She was very dogged but I wouldn't say she was any more dogged than Ron Wyden was, would you say that? ... It's just women that usually are called hysterical."

Comey Friend Turns Over "Relevant Materials" To FBI. ABC News (6/13, Siegel) reports that Columbia Law School professor Daniel Richman, a friend of Comey's who leaked details of the former FBI director's "alleged interactions with President Donald Trump to the media based on Comey's notes, has turned those materials over to the FBI." In a message to ABC News, Richman wrote, "Special counsel has been in contact with the committee to discuss access. In the meantime, I am turning the relevant materials over to the FBI."

Cohen Asked To Testify Before House Intelligence Committee Sept. 5. Reuters (6/13) reports that the President's personal attorney Michael Cohen "said he has been asked to testify on Sept. 5 before the House Intelligence Committee, Bloomberg reported on Tuesday."

Inglis: Charges Facing Trump Are More Serious Than Charges Against Clinton. In an op-ed for the Washington Post (6/13), former Rep. Bob Inglis, who was a member of the House Judiciary Committee that considered the impeachment of President Bill Clinton, writes that Clinton "was impeached for charges less serious than the ones before us now." Inglis adds that although "it's not time to start drafting articles of impeachment, it is time to pursue this investigation into Russian meddling in our presidential election with vigor, without friends to reward and without enemies to punish."

Russian Hackers Tried To Access Voter Databases In Dozens Of States. Jeff Pegues reported on the CBS Evening News (6/13, story 4, 2:05, Pelley) that while the intelligence community "concluded late last year, that the Russian government's cyberattacks were designed to help the Trump campaign," CBS News "has learned those efforts were even greater than previously reported." In the campaign's final weeks, "hackers tried to gain access to voter databases in more than two dozens states" but "former US officials now say they can't be sure that voter registration data in some states wasn't taken." Pegues added that officials still "do not believe the hacks impacted the outcome of the election." The Washington Times (6/13, Blake), citing a Bloomberg report, says voting systems in more than "three dozen states-- nearly twice as many as previously thought -- bore the brunt of a Russian cyberattack during the November presidential election."

President Derides “Fake News,” White House Says There Is “No Intention” To Fire Mueller.

Newsmax editor-in-chief Christopher Ruddy’s claim Monday on PBS’ NewsHour that the President is considering the dismissal of special counsel Robert Mueller sparked a great deal of speculation and discussion in Washington. So much so, that Ruddy “appeared on CNN Tuesday morning to walk back his earlier statements.” Kristen Welker reported on NBC Nightly News (6/13, story 3, 2:40, Holt) that Trump is “under fire” over the “explosive allegations.” and on ABC World News Tonight (6/13, story 2, 1:30, Muir), Cecilia Vega said that “the White House is pushing back, saying Ruddy does not speak for the President.” Margaret Brennan reported on the CBS Evening News (6/13, story 2, 2:20, Pelley) that “the White House says that President Trump interviewed Mueller for the FBI director job just a day before the Justice Department announced that he’d serve as an impartial special counsel. Confidants of the President say this presents yet another conflict for Mueller.”

John Roberts said on Fox News’ Special Report (6/13), “Sources tell Fox News President Trump was upset about the firestorm Ruddy ignited and dispatched the communications team to get the clarification. The President took aim at the press for not checking its facts, tweeting, ‘Fake news is at an all-time high. Where is their apology to me for all of the incorrect stories???’”

The New York Times (6/13, Thrush, Haberman, Davis) says that soon after Mueller’s appointment Trump “began entertaining the idea of firing [him] even as his staff tried to discourage him from something they believed would turn a bad situation into a catastrophe, according to several people with direct knowledge of Mr. Trump’s interactions.” The Times adds, “For now, the staff has prevailed.” The Los Angeles Times (6/13, Bennett) reports that deputy White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders told reporters traveling with the President on Tuesday that he has “no intention” of firing Mueller. Sander said, “While the president has the right to, he has no intention to do so.” The Washington Examiner (6/13, Westwood) also reports on Sanders’ comments.

Also Tuesday, the Washington Times (6/13, Noble) reports, Deputy Attorney General Rosenstein “tamped down” the rumors during testimony before a Senate appropriations committee. Rosenstein told the panel he is aware of “no secret plan” to fire Mueller “and indicated it would only be appropriate to do so if there was good cause to support it.” Reuters (6/13) quotes Rosenstein as saying, “Director Mueller is going to have the full degree of independence that he needs to conduct that investigation appropriately.”

Politico (6/13, McCaskill, Cheney) cites House Speaker Ryan’s expression of “confidence” in Mueller and Sen. Dianne Feinstein’s prediction that such a move “would destroy any shred of trust in the president’s judgment that remains over here,” but adds that while “prominent Washington figures bat down the idea that Mueller could be shown the door, the debate is still aiding the White House’s efforts to try to discredit the former FBI director and push the idea that the sprawling Russia probe is a vendetta against Trump.” Under the headline “How Trump could fire the special counsel (if he were foolish enough to try),” a Washington Post (6/13, Bump) analysis lays out the steps “of how that might progress.”

Democratic lawmakers were, nonetheless, suspicious. In an interview on MSNBC’s Morning Joe (6/13) before Attorney General Sessions’ testimony before the Senate Intelligence Committee, Sen. Richard Blumenthal said that he wants a commitment from Sessions “that he will resign if the President of the United States fires Bob Mueller.” Rep. Adam Schiff was asked on MSNBC’s Morning Joe (6/13) how Republicans would react if Trump fired Mueller. Schiff said, “I would hope that would be the last straw for many Republicans that have stayed their hand and not been willing to speak out, if he were to take this step with all its echoes of Watergate. I would hope that what Congress would do would be to take up a law...so that Bob Mueller could be reappointed because I don’t think Congress would sit still and allow the President to pick his own investigator.”

Politico (6/13, Caygle, Bresnahan) reports that House Minority Leader Pelosi believes Trump will “self-impeach” and that “Democrats should wait for the Russia investigations — especially special counsel Robert Mueller’s probe — to play out before pushing to remove him from the Oval Office.” Pelosi also believes that firing Mueller “would be enough to push Republicans to begin seriously considering acting against the president on their own.”

The Los Angeles Times (6/13) argues in an editorial that a “decision to dismiss Mueller and abort the investigation” would be “disastrous.” The Washington Post (6/13) also warns against firing Mueller, arguing in an editorial that it would, “more than anything else the president has done in office, firm up a case that Mr. Trump is obstructing justice.”

Trump: Lynch Gave Clinton Cover During Email Probe. The New York Post (6/13, Moore)

reports that in a tweet Tuesday, President Trump accused former Attorney General Lynch of giving Hillary Clinton cover during the investigation into her use of a private email server. Trump wrote, "A.G. Lynch made law enforcement decisions for political purposes...gave Hillary Clinton a free pass and protection. Totally illegal!."

Trump Talks Healthcare, Apprenticeships In Visit To Wisconsin.

President Trump's brief visit to Wisconsin on Tuesday, accompanied by Labor Secretary Acosta, Education Secretary DeVos, and Ivanka Trump, receives relatively light coverage, mainly limited to in-state media and brief items in some national outlets. Though the President discussed both the push to repeal the Affordable Care Act and his call for an apprenticeship program for young people, most coverage focuses on the latter. And while reporting is basically straightforward, a few articles highlight the fact that the President, now pushing an apprenticeship plan, famously hosted a TV show called "The Apprentice."

The Wisconsin State Journal (6/13, DeFour) reports that the President visited Wisconsin "to promote apprenticeships and attend a fundraiser that Gov. Scott Walker is billing as 'one of the biggest events we've ever had for a statewide elected official.'" During a discussion with Walker, state government officials, business leaders, and students at Waukesha County Technical College, Trump "mentioned that he and Walker were negotiating with a 'major, major incredible manufacturer of phones and computers and televisions.' ... It wasn't immediately clear to which company Trump was referring, but Walker recently traveled to Japan for a trade mission." WFRV-TV Green Bay, WI (6/13, 10:07 p.m. CDT) reported that Trump "hinted that a major employer could be bringing jobs to Wisconsin."

The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel (6/13, Glauber, Gilbert) reports that during the "whirlwind trip," Trump discussed the Affordable Care Act at Milwaukee's Mitchell International Airport, talked about his planned apprenticeship program at the college, "and returned to Milwaukee to raise campaign cash for Walker. ... On the airport tarmac, he spoke for four minutes about 'Obamacare victims.'" Wisconsin Radio Network (6/13, Beckett) reports on its website that Trump "used a brief speech in Milwaukee Tuesday to continue his call for Congress to repeal" the ACA.

WITI-TV Milwaukee (6/13, 5:33 p.m. CDT) reported that Trump "met with two families he's calling victims of the Affordable Care Act." WAOW-TV Wausau, WI (6/13, 10:03 p.m. CDT) showed a clip of Trump saying, "Millions of American families, and I mean millions, continue to suffer from Obamacare, while congressional Democrats obstruct our efforts to rescue them. And I'll tell you, that's exactly what's happening. The Democrats have let you down big league." In response, Sen. Tammy Baldwin tweeted, "@POTUS, the people who are let down 'bigly' are Americans who want solutions, not partisan bickering."

In a piece headlined "Who Else But Trump To Call For A Nation Full Of Apprentices?" the AP (6/13, Boak, Thomas) reports, "The man who parlayed a run on TV's 'The Apprentice' into a winning presidential campaign said Tuesday the nation needs a stronger system of apprenticeship to match workers with millions of open jobs." GM Today \(WI\) (6/13) writes that during his brief presidential bid, Walker was critical of Trump, saying, "We don't need an apprentice in the White House." But during Trump's Tuesday visit, the President both discussed apprenticeships and raised money for his ex-rival. WAOW-TV Wausau, WI (6/13, 10:03 p.m. CDT) reported that Trump "commended" Walker "for developing workforce programs for students across the state, but says the nation needs stronger apprenticeship programs."

The Washington Times (6/13, Miller) reports that Trump "said enhancing training and educational opportunities to help young people to get good-paying jobs 'is one of the most important questions facing' their generation." The Hill (6/13, Fabian) reports that the President "said it requires a change in mentality from institutions of higher learning, which typically offer two- and four-year degrees." Politico (6/13, Kullgren) reports that Trump is expected to follow up the visit by signing "an executive order Wednesday that would virtually eliminate oversight of government-subsidized apprenticeship programs. ... The draft executive order would shift certification of federally funded apprenticeship programs from the Labor Department to grant recipients."

The Washington Post (6/13, Wagner) reports that as the President "has pushed workforce development this week, critics have charged that other actions he is pursuing would hurt the people he says he wants to help." His budget proposal would cut the Labor Department budget by 21 percent in the next fiscal year, including "a 40 percent cut to the Labor Department's Wagner-Peyser Employment Service, which supports about 14 million job seekers annually and last year helped nearly 6 million people find jobs."

Reuters (6/13) reports in a brief item that Trump also said he was "making progress on behalf of Wisconsin dairy farmers in a dispute with Canada over its trade practices." Trump said, "We are making big progress on opening things up."

On arrival, the President tweeted, "Just arrived in Wisconsin to discuss JOBS, JOBS, JOBS! #MAGA". He later tweeted, "Just got back from Wisconsin. Great day, great people!" Twitter discussion was light; comments from anti-Trump protesters in Milwaukee were shared on Twitter under the hashtag #TrumpInWI. Bloomberg Politics (6/13, Epstein) reports that Trump won Waukesha County "by 2-to-1 over Democrat Hillary Clinton" last year. The Washington Examiner (6/13, Jashinsky) says those number are the "reverse image" of the President's current national approval rating.

Meadows: Freedom Caucus Considering $1.5 Trillion Debt Ceiling Increase.

Politico (6/13, Bade) reports Freedom Caucus Chairman Mark Meadows said after a group meeting yesterday that some of his conservative colleagues favor a $1.5 trillion raise in the debt limit, compared to the Administration's proposed $2.5 trillion lift. Meadows said the $1.5 trillion raise would put the deadline for revisiting the contentious issue past the 2018 mid-term elections.

WPost: Mnuchin Is Administration's "Adult In the Room" Regarding Debt Ceiling. In an editorial, the Washington Post (6/13) writes that Treasury Secretary Mnuchin espoused a view of "simple realism" when he said in congressional testimony on Monday that Congress should adopt additional borrowing authority, as "the debt ceiling should not be a Republican issue or a Democrat issue." The Post finds Mnuchin to be the "adult in the room, with respect to government debt," as he made two important clarifications that show the Administration's intention to maintain the "risk-free" status of Treasury securities, which "undergird the global financial system." First, Mnuchin said a failure to increase the debt limit would "create a serious problem." Second, he recommended that it would be best to pass such legislation well before August and without amendments.

Hiltzik: Trump's EPA Cuts Revisit "Morale-Sapping Approach" Of Reagan-Era Administrator.

Columnist Michael Hiltzik writes for the Los Angeles Times (6/13) that President Trump's proposed budget presents the EPA with the most "devastating cuts" of any federal agency. The proposal would cut the agency's budget by 31 percent, but because two programs for clean water and drinking water infrastructure will maintain complete funding, the rest of the EPA would experience an effective cut of 42 percent. According to former EPA attorney and Environmental Protection Network organizer Ruth Greenspan Bell, the cuts seem like "a full-frontal attack," as "everything at EPA is so intertwined": "Science is tied into the regulatory process, permitting, enforcement." Hiltzik points to Reagan-era EPA Administrator Anne Gorsuch's similar vision for scaling back the agency's reach, saying that her "morale-sapping approach made her job all the more difficult."

Fed Set To Raise Rates On "Brighter Economic Outlook."

The AP (6/13, Wiseman) reports that "the Federal Reserve is set to raise short-term interest rates Wednesday for the third time in six months – a vote of confidence in the American economy and especially in the resilience of the U.S. job market." However, the AP writes, "neither the U.S. nor the world economy is likely to regain the robust health that prevailed before the recession struck a decade ago." The article adds that "the IMF foresees the global economy growing 3.5 percent this year — up from 3.1 percent in 2016 but well below the 4 to 5 percent growth typical of the mid-2000s." The AP writes, "A big problem is that the richest countries can't count on steadily growing workforces to drive expansion because their populations are aging," and "across the globe, for reasons that largely confound economists, countries are struggling to generate the acceleration of worker productivity that normally underpins prosperity."

House Passes VA Reform Bill.

The Los Angeles Times (6/13, Rosenblatt) reports that in a 368-55 vote on Tuesday, the House approved The Department of Veterans Affairs Accountability and Whistleblower Protection Act of 2017, which will "make it easier for the troubled Veterans Affairs Department to fire managers accused of misconduct." The measure "would make it easier to fire employees for cause, adds some protections for whistleblowers and puts more power in the hands of Veterans Affairs Secretary David Shulkin," but civil service unions condemned it, arguing it is "an end-run around long-standing protections for government employees and whistle-blowers." The Hill (6/13, Mitchell) says the measure, which was already approved by the Senate, now goes to President Trump is “expected to sign it.” NBC Nightly News (6/13, story 4, 0:20, Holt) also reported on the bill.

Tillerson Says He Still Supports Paris Climate Deal, But Respects Trump’s Decision.

Roll Call (6/13, Nawaguna) reports Secretary of State Tillerson, who backed the US staying in the Paris climate agreement, told lawmakers on Tuesday that his views have “never changed,” but that he respects President Trump’s decision to withdraw from the international accord. Asked by Sen. Ben Cardin during testimony Tuesday if he had changed his position on the agreement, Tillerson said, “I will tell you that the president was quite deliberative on the issue and took some time to make his decision, particularly after he had heard from European counterparts. My views were heard out. I respect that the president heard my views, but I respect the decision he’s taken.”

Trump Tells Tangier Island Mayor Not To Worry About Sea-level Rise.

USA Today (6/14, Vaughn) reports, “President Trump phoned Tangier Island Mayor James ‘Ooker’ Eskridge Monday after viewing a CNN report about the Virginia island’s struggle with rising sea levels,” telling him “not to worry about sea-level rise.” Eskridge said Trump said, “Your island has been there for hundreds of years, and I believe your island will be there for hundreds more.” Eskridge added that he responded to Trump, “The stuff you are doing is just common-sense stuff. I believe you’re for the working man – and you want people to get back to work – you’re for the military, and Israel and religious liberties – it’s all the stuff that we value. I believe you came along for such a time as this.”

EPA Looks To Halt Emission Rules For Two Years.

The Washington Examiner (6/13, Siciliano) reports the EPA is now looking to halt the Obama Administration’s emission rules for hydraulic fracturing for two years, rather than the initial 90-day stay. The EPA said, “Under the proposal, sources would not need to comply with these requirements while the stay is in effect. Since issuing the final rule, EPA has received several petitions to reconsider certain aspects of the rule.” The agency said the delay is needed to conduct a review of the methane emission rules. The Hill (6/13, Henry) reports the EPA’s announcement must undergo a 30-day public comment period. Environmental groups have already sued over the EPA’s decision to implement a stay of the regulations limiting methane leaks at drilling sites.

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

“Jeff Sessions Clams Up In Congress.” A New York Times (6/13) editorial says that after giving “false testimony” to a Senate committee during his confirmation hearing, Attorney General Sessions on Tuesday “lowered a broad cone of silence around all his communications with President Trump,” citing “a supposedly longstanding policy at the Justice Department — although he couldn’t confirm that it existed in writing or that, if it did, he had actually read it.” Sessions, the Times argues, “has no intention to answer any of those questions now or in the future.”

“How To Protest In Russia.” In an editorial, the New York Times (6/14, Board) calls Alexei Navalny, the organizer of anti-corruption protests in Russia, a “master of mobilization” who has captured the world’s attention. The Times explains Navalny and other critics of the Kremlin “have succeeded in mobilizing the internet and social media to maintain a lively opposition in major cities” by targeting “what is arguably the most vulnerable attribute of the ruling elite: its corruption.” The Times concedes Navalny “will not defeat Vladimir Putin for the Russian presidency in March 2018,” but his strategy is remarkable because it focuses on wealthy, corrupt Russian leaders, which “Putin cannot facilely dismiss as the work of a hostile West.”

Washington Post.

“North Korea’s Outrageous Treatment Of A US Student Must Not Go Unpunished.” A Washington Post (6/13) editorial says North Korea’s treatment of American college student Otto Warmbier “should not go unpunished” and calls on President Trump to make security the release of three other Americans held by Pyongyang “a priority.” The US, it argues, “should also move quickly to step up sanctions on the regime of Kim Jong Un.”

“By Firing Mueller, Trump Would Make A Stronger Case That He Is Obstructing Justice.” The

Washington Post (6/13) warns President Trump against firing special counsel Robert Mueller, arguing in an editorial that it would, “more than anything else the president has done in office, firm up a case that Mr. Trump is obstructing justice.”

“It’s Time To Get Realistic About The Debt Ceiling.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (6/13) writes that Office of Management and Budget Director Mick Mulvaney espoused a view of “simple realism” when he said in congressional testimony on Monday that Congress should adopt additional borrowing authority, as “the debt ceiling should not be a Republican issue or a Democrat issue.” The Post finds Mulvaney to be the “adult in the room, with respect to government debt,” as he made two important clarifications that show the Administration’s intention to maintain the “risk-free” status of Treasury securities, which “undergird the global financial system.” First, Mulvaney said a failure to increase the debt limit would “create a serious problem.” Second, he recommended that it would be best to pass such legislation well before August and without amendments.

Wall Street Journal.

“Uber’s Growing Pains.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (6/13) writes that as Uber Chief Business Officer Emil Michael stepped down on Monday and CEO Travis Kalanick said yesterday he would take an indefinite leave from the company, the firm is at a crossroads. Reforming “workplace culture” is important, and changing management is logical since workplace culture usually flows from the top. However, Kalanick’s determined entrepreneurial spirit was a key factor in Uber’s meteoric growth. Therefore, if management of the tech firm relies on its legal and human-resources teams, it won’t survive, let alone maintain its status as the dominant ride-hailing app in most US cities.

“Otto Warmbier’s Homecoming.” A Wall Street Journal (6/13) editorial says American college student Otto Warmbier’s fate underscores the inappropriate nature of Dennis Rodman’s latest visit this week to Pyongyang.

“Pennsylvania’s Lesson For Illinois.” The Wall Street Journal (6/13) editorializes that Pennsylvania took a positive first step toward addressing its pension woes – it has up to $70 billion in liabilities – when Gov. Tom Wolf signed a bill on Monday that would enroll new state employees in “hybrid” retirement plans featuring defined-contributions from employees and smaller ones by the government. The Journal says the plan, effective 2019, has the advantages of eliminating taxpayer risk for new hires and giving employees the option of portability. Current workers would have the option to switch to the new plan. The Journal recommends that Connecticut and Illinois take note of Pennsylvania’s policy.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Uber CEO Travis Kalanick To Take Indefinite Leave Of Absence

Sessions Calls Russian Collusion Allegation An ‘Appalling And Detestable Lie’

Wall Street Veteran Leads Search For Next Fed Chief

Total Eclipse: Oil Giant Sees Its Future In Electricity

New York Times:

Jeff Sessions Denies Collusion, Deploring ‘Detestable Lie’ In Senate Testimony

Trump Stews, Staff Steps In, And Mueller Is Safe For Now

Uber Embraces Major Reforms As Travis Kalanick, The CEO, Steps Away

Otto Warmbier, Detained American, Is Evacuated From North Korea In A Coma

On A Tiny Norwegian Island, America Keeps An Eye On Russia

As Church Shifts, A Cardinal Welcomes Gays: They Embrace A ‘Miracle’

Washington Post:

U-Va. Student Released By N. Korea In A Coma

With Each Puff, A Deeper Socioeconomic Gap

Northam Fends Off Perriello In Va.

Sessions Silent On Talks With Trump

Uber CEO On Leave As Firm Tries To Repair Its Culture

Secret Meeting Offers Prospect Of Wider Talks

Financial Times:

Macron Leaves Door Open To UK Staying In EU
Japan Inc's Silence Over Toshiba Sends Chill Across Tokyo
Uber Chief Travis Kalanick To Take Indefinite Leave
Cristiano Ronaldo Accused Of €14.8m Tax Fraud

Washington Times:

Sessions Calls Talk Of Russian Collusion A 'Detestable Lie,' Says Comey Fired Over Clinton Probe
Gillespie Ekes Out GOP Win In Virginia Governor's Race; Northam Easily Claims Democratic Victory
Minority Judicial Nominations By Trump Would Pose Political Dilemmas For Democrats With U.S. Pullback, China Pursues Further Foothold In Latin American Business
No Apologies: ICE Chief Says Illegal Immigrants Should Live In Fear Of Deportation

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Sessions Senate Hearing; Trump-Special Counsel; Healthcare Reform Plan; North Korea Detainee Released; Georgia-Escaped Fugitives Manhunt; NYC-Carbon Monoxide Leak; Severe Weather; Ohio-Killing Spree; Bill Cosby Trial; Teen Texting Suicide Trial; Ohio-Highway Chase; Uber-Shake Up; NBA Finals-MVP.

CBS: Sessions Senate Hearing; Trump-Special Counsel; Sessions Senate Hearing-Expert Opinion; Russia Meddling Investigation; Bill Cosby Trial; Georgia-Escaped Fugitives Manhunt; North Korea Detainee Released; Uber-Shake Up; Afghanistan-US Soldiers Murdered; NBA Finals-MVP.

NBC: North Korea Detainee Released; Sessions Senate Hearing; Trump-Special Counsel; Veteran Affairs Reform Plan; Uber-Shake Up; Bill Cosby Trial; Georgia-Escaped Fugitives Manhunt; Afghanistan-US Soldiers Murdered; SUV Headlight Safety; Oprah-Not Running 2020; Young Girl-Thanking Officers; Wedding Proposal.

Network TV At A Glance:

Sessions Senate Hearing – 13 minutes, 20 seconds
North Korea Detainee Released – 8 minutes, 15 seconds
Trump-Special Counsel – 6 minutes, 30 seconds
Georgia-Escaped Fugitives Manhunt – 5 minutes, 45 seconds
Afghanistan-US Soldiers Murdered – 1 minute

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: London High-Rise Fire; Sessions Senate Hearing; Bill Cosby Trial; Healthcare Reform Plan; North Korea Detainee Released; War In Afghanistan.

CBS: Sessions Senate Hearing; Trump-Special Counsel; Bill Cosby Trial; North Korea Detainee Released; War In Afghanistan; Wall Street News.

FOX: London High-Rise Fire; North Korea Detainee Released; Sessions Senate Hearing; Bill Cosby Trial; Georgia-Escaped Fugitives Manhunt.

NPR: Sessions Senate Hearing; Bill Cosby Trial; UK-France Meeting.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Gives remarks at the Apprenticeship Initiative kickoff; signs an Executive Order.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Gives remarks at the National Association of Home Builders Legislative Conference.

US Senate: 9:45 AM Senate Judiciary Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers John Kenneth Bush to be U.S. Circuit Judge for the Sixth Circuit; Kevin Christopher Newsom to be U.S. Circuit Judge for the Eleventh Circuit; and Damien Michael Schiff to be a U.S. Court of Federal Claims Judge Location: Rm 226, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Public Works Committee legislative hearing on the Consumer and Fuel Retailer Choice Act – Legislative hearing on 'S. 517, the Consumer and Fuel Retailer Choice Act', with testimony from Advanced Biofuels Business Council Executive Director R. Brooke Coleman;

Clean Air Task Force Senior Counsel Jonathan Lewis; Sheetz Executive Vice President Mike Lorenz; Briggs & Stratton Corporation Chairman, President, and CEO Todd Teske; and Ecoengineering Principal Engineer Dr Janet Yanowitz Location: Rm 406, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

10:00 AM Senate Transportation Committee hearing on self-driving vehicles – Hearing on ‘Paving the Way for Self-Driving Vehicles’, with testimony from Alliance of Automobile Manufacturers President and CEO Mitch Bainwol; NVIDIA Corporation Vice President and General Manager of Automotive Business Rob Csongor; American Center for Mobility President and CEO John Maddox; and Mothers Against Drunk Driving National President Colleen Sheehey-Church Location: Rm 253, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov>

10:00 AM Senate Homeland Security Committee hearing on violent extremism – Hearing on ‘Ideology and Terror: Understanding the Tools, Tactics, and Techniques of Violent Extremism’, with testimony from Stanford University Hoover Institution Research Fellow Ayaan Hirsi Ali; Muslim Reform Movement co-founder Asra Nomani; Institute of World Politics President Dr John Lenczowski; and former National Counterterrorism Center Director Michael Leiter Location: Rm 342, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenRonJohnson>

10:00 AM Senate Finance Committee Executive Session – Executive Session, with agenda including consideration of nominations of Eric Hargan to be Deputy Secretary of Health and Human Services; David Malpass to be Under Secretary of the Treasury; Andrew Maloney to be Deputy Under Secretary of the Treasury; and Brent James McIntosh to be Department of the Treasury General Counsel Location: Rm 215, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://finance.senate.gov>

10:30 AM Defense Secretary Mattis testifies to Senate Appropriations subcommittee hearing on FY’18 budget – Defense Subcommittee hearing on ‘Review of the FY2018 Budget Request for the U.S. Dept. of Defense’, with testimony from Secretary of Defense James Mattis; and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. Joseph Dunford, Jr. Location: Rm 192, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

11:00 AM Senate Appropriations subcommittee hearing on FY’18 Congressional budgets – Legislative Branch Subcommittee hearing on ‘Review of 2018 Budget Requests for the Senate Sergeant at Arms, U.S. Capitol Police’, with testimony from Senate Sergeant at Arms Frank Larkin; and U.S. Capitol Police Chief Matthew Verderosa Location: Rm 124, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

2:00 PM Senate Energy and Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Water and Power Subcommittee legislative hearing, with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Water and Science Scott Cameron; Western Area Power Administration Administrator and CEO Mark Gabriel; Harlowton, MT, Mayor Jeff Sell; Yuma County Water Users’ Association General Manager Tom Davis; Patterson Lake Homeowners Association President Tom Fisher; Middle Rio Grande Conservancy District Chief Engineer/CEO Mike Hamman; and Brookfield Renewable Energy Group Vice President for Northeast Operations Christopher Wynn Location: Rm 366, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC www.energy.senate.gov

2:30 PM VA Secretary Shulkin testifies to Senate committee hearing on FY’18 and FY’19 budgets – Hearing on ‘Fiscal Year 2018 Budget for Veterans’ Programs and Fiscal Year 2019 Advance Appropriations Requests’, with testimony from Secretary of Veterans Affairs David Shulkin; Acting Assistant Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Management and Department of Veterans Affairs CFO Edward Murray; Acting Assistant Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Information and Technology Rob Thomas; Veterans Health Administration CFO Mark Yow; Veterans Benefits Administration Acting Principal Deputy Under Secretary James Manker; National Cemeteries Division Deputy Under Secretary for Finance and Planning and CFO Matthew Sullivan; Paralyzed Veterans of America Associate Executive Director of Government Relations Carl Blake; Disabled American Veterans Assistant National Service Director LeRoy Acosta; Veterans of Foreign Wars National Legislative Service Director Carlos Fuentes; and Vietnam Veterans of America National President John Rowan Location: Rm 418, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://veterans.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Ryan Phillippe testifies to Senate Aging Committee hearing on military caregivers – Hearing on ‘Military Caregivers: Families Serving for the Long Run’, with testimony from actor Ryan Phillippe; Elizabeth Dole Foundation founder Elizabeth Dole; RAND Corporation Senior Behavioral Scientist Terri Tanielian; veteran caregiver Mary Hahn and veteran Thomas Ward; veteran caregiver Melanie Swoboda and veteran Sgt. 1st Class (Ret.) Joe Swoboda; and veteran caregiver Wanda Ickes and veteran Sgt. (Ret.) Samuel Ickes Location: Rm 106, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://aging.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Senate Appropriations subcommittee hearing on FY'18 NNSA budget – Energy and Water Development Subcommittee hearing on 'Review of the FY2018 Budget Request for the National Nuclear Security Administration', with testimony from NNSA Administrator (and Under Secretary of Energy for Nuclear Security) Lt. Gen. (Ret.) Frank Klotz, Acting Deputy Administrator for Defense Programs Philip Calbos, Acting Deputy Administrator for Defense Nuclear Nonproliferation David Huizenga, and Deputy Administrator for Naval Reactors Adm. Frank Caldwell, Jr. Location: Rm 138, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

2:30 PM Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee hearing on southeast Europe – Europe and Regional Security Cooperation Subcommittee hearing on 'Southeast Europe: Strengthening Democracy and Countering Malign Foreign Influence', with testimony from Atlantic Council Executive Vice President Damon Wilson; SAIS Foreign Policy Institute Fellow Dr Majda Ruge; National Endowment for Democracy Associate Director for Europe Ivana Cvetkovic Bajrovic; and Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for European and Eurasian Affairs Hoyt Brian Yee Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

3:00 PM Senate Small Business and Entrepreneurship Committee hearing on tax reform – Hearing on 'Tax Reform: Removing Barriers to Small Business Growth', with testimony from S Corporation Association President Brian Reardon; AICPA Tax Executive Committee Chair Annette Nellen; and Urban-Brookings Tax Policy Center Director Mark Mazur Location: Rm 428A, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://sbc.senate.gov/>

5:00 PM Community College Innovation Challenge finalists on Capitol Hill – Community College Innovation Challenge Finalists' Reception on Capitol Hill, with members of the House of Representatives and Senate meeting the finalists from the third annual Challenge, in which the National Science Foundation and American Association of Community Colleges annual invite teams from across the country to submit 'innovative solutions grounded in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) to solve some of the nation's most pressing challenges'. Reception includes all 10 finalist teams showcasing their projects, and the NSF and AACC announcing the top three finalists * Event follows a four-day Innovation Boot Camp, where the students learn 'how to put their proposals into action to make real-world change' Location: Rm 485, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.nsf.gov/> <https://twitter.com/NSF#CCIChallenge>

US House: 9:00 AM Hearing on 'The FY 2018 Foreign Affairs Budget', with testimony from Secretary of State Rex Tillerson Location: Rm 2172, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

9:30 AM Helsinki Commission hearing on Romania – Helsinki Commission hearing on 'The Romanian Anti-Corruption Process: Successes and Excesses', with witnesses – Mayer Brown Special Counsel Mark Gitenstein, Center for Strategic and International Studies Senior Vice President Heather Conley, foreign policy commentator and consultant David Clark, and Freedom Capital Chairman Philip Stephenson – examining the current state of the process with the goal of understanding its successes and excesses and how best to respond Location: SVC 212-210, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

10:00 AM Department of Defense Intelligence and Overhead Architecture Subcommittee closed hearing on 'Ongoing Intelligence Activities' Location: HVC-304, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseIntelComm>

10:00 AM Treasury Secretary Mnuchin testifies to House Appropriations subcommittee hearing – State, Foreign Operations, and Related Programs Subcommittee 'Department of the Treasury – International Programs Budget Hearing', with testimony from Secretary of the Treasury Steven Mnuchin Location: Rm 2359, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Federal Lands Subcommittee legislative hearing on discussion draft of the 'Sportsmen's Heritage and Recreational Enhancement Act' (aka 'SHARE Act') Location: Rm 1324, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM House Energy subcommittee hearing on state security planning and emergency preparedness – Energy Subcommittee hearing on 'States' Perspectives on Energy Security Planning, Emergency Preparedness, and State Energy Programs', with testimony from National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners First Vice President John Betkoski III; Michigan Agency for Energy Executive Director Valerie Brader; Washington State Department of Commerce Assistant Director Michael Furze; Georgia Environmental Finance Authority Energy Resources Division Director David Gipson; Public Utility Commission of Texas Executive Director Brian Lloyd; and National Association of State Energy Officials Executive Director David Terry Location: Rm

2123, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Financial Services Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on ‘H.R. 1422, the Flood Insurance Market Parity and Modernization Act’, ‘H.R. 1558, the Repeatedly Flooded Communities Preparation Act’, ‘H.R. 2246, the Taxpayer Exposure Mitigation Act of 2017’, ‘H.R. 2565, To require the use of replacement cost value in determining the premium for flood insurance coverage under the National Flood Insurance Act, and for other purposes’, ‘H.R. 2868, the National Flood Insurance Program Policyholder Protection Act of 2017’, ‘H.R. XXXX, the National Flood Insurance Program Administrative Reform Act of 2017’, and ‘H.R. XXXX, the 21st Century Flood Reform Act’ Location: Rm 2128, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM House Ways and Means Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on ‘H.R. 2742, Modernizing the Interstate Placement of Children in Foster Care Act’, ‘H.R. 2857, Supporting Families in Substance Abuse Treatment Act’, ‘H.R. 2834, Partnership Grants to Strengthen Families Affected by Parental Substance Abuse Act’, ‘H.R. 2866, Reducing Barriers for Relative Foster Parents Act’, ‘H.R. 2847, Improving Services for Older Youth in Foster Care Act’, and ‘H.R. 2842, Accelerating Individuals into the Workforce Act’ Location: Rm 1100, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

10:00 AM House Judiciary Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on ‘H.J.Res. 76, Granting the consent and approval of Congress for the Commonwealth of Virginia, the State of Maryland, and the District of Columbia to enter into a compact relating to the establishment of the Washington Metrorail Safety Commission’, ‘H.J.Res. 92, Granting the consent and approval of Congress for the Commonwealth of Virginia, the State of Maryland, and the District of Columbia to amend the Washington Area Transit Regulation Compact’, ‘H.R. 495, Protection of Children Act’, and ‘H.R. 2826, Refugee Program Integrity Restoration Act’ Location: Rm 2141, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

10:15 AM Health Subcommittee hearing on ‘Examining the Extension of Safety Net Health Programs’ Location: Rm 2322, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:15 AM House Workforce subcommittee hearing on legislative reforms to the National Labor Relations Act – Health, Employment, Labor, and Pensions Subcommittee hearing on ‘Legislative Reforms to the National Labor Relations Act: H.R. 2776, Workforce Democracy and Fairness Act; H.R. 2775, Employee Privacy Protection Act; and, H.R. 2723, Employee Rights Act’, with testimony from McGuireWoods partner Seth Borden; Communications Workers of America General Counsel Guerino Calemine III; Karen Cox of Dixon, IL; and Michigan Health and Hospital Association Senior Vice President and Chief of Staff Nancy McKeague Location: Rm 2175, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

11:00 AM Rep. Peter DeFazio; House members join Pilots Of American Airlines, Flight Attendants, others for Capitol Hill Rally – On Flag Day, pilots of American Airlines join U.S. Rep. Peter DeFazio, flight attendants, aviation workers, their families and supporters for a Capitol Hill rally to support the American flag and urge passage of H.R. 2150, the Flags of Convenience Don't Fly Here Act, bipartisan legislation introduced by DeFazio and supported by 54 additional co-sponsors. “H.R. 2150 would prohibit the Department of Transportation from issuing a permit to a foreign airline unless DOT determines that it is not establishing itself in a particular country just to avoid regulations — a so-called “flag of convenience” scheme that allows companies to skirt international labor standards, outsource cheap labor from low-wage countries, and take advantage of weak safety and security oversight.” Participants include: Rep. Peter DeFazio (D-Ore.); Rep. Paul Cook (R-Calif.); Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson (D-Texas); Rep. Bill Johnson (R-Ohio); Captain Dan Carey, President of the Allied Pilots Association; Captain Lee Collins Location: Capitol Grounds, Corner of First Street SE and Independence Ave, across from Library of Congress.

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee hearing on ‘SBA’s failed 2014 agency restructure’ – Hearing on ‘A Cautionary Tale: A Review of SBA’s Failed 2014 Agency Restructure’, with testimony from Small Business Administration Acting Inspector General Mike Ware, and COO Joseph Laddo Location: Rm 2360, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

11:00 AM Markup hearing on ‘H.R. 2825, the Department of Homeland Security Authorization Act of 2017’ Location: HVC 210, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC homeland.house.gov

<https://twitter.com/HouseHomeland>

11:30 AM Conversations with Conservatives event – Conversations with Conservatives session, with Republican Reps. Dave Brat, Warren Davidson, Andy Harris, Thomas Massie, Mark Sanford, and Mark Walker meeting traditional press and bloggers to discuss issues of the day * Chaired by Reps. Raul Labrador, Jim Jordan, and Mark Meadows Location: Rm 2247, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://jordan.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/conversations#CWC115>

12:00 PM House expected to debate VETERAN Act – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include 'H.R. 2372 – VETERAN Act' and beginning consideration of 'H.R. 2579 – Broader Options for Americans Act' Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

2:00 PM Secretary of State Tillerson testifies to House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on budget – State, Foreign Operations, and Related Programs Subcommittee 'Department of State – Budget Hearing', with testimony from Secretary of State Rex Tillerson Location: Rm 2359, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee marks up End Neglected Tropical Diseases Act – Africa, Global Health, Global Human Rights, and International Organizations Subcommittee markup hearing, on 'H.R. 1415, End Neglected Tropical Diseases Act' Location: Rm 2172, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

2:15 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on famines in Africa – Africa, Global Health, Global Human Rights, and International Organizations Subcommittee hearing on 'Africa's Current and Potential Famines', with testimony from Alliance to End Hunger Executive Director Emeritus Tony Hall; Chicago Council on Global Affairs Senior Fellow for Global Food and Agriculture Roger Thurow; and InterAction Director for Humanitarian Practice Julien Schopp Location: Rm 2172, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

5:00 PM Community College Innovation Challenge finalists on Capitol Hill – Community College Innovation Challenge Finalists' Reception on Capitol Hill, with members of the House of Representatives and Senate meeting the finalists from the third annual Challenge, in which the National Science Foundation and American Association of Community Colleges annual invite teams from across the country to submit 'innovative solutions grounded in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics (STEM) to solve some of the nation's most pressing challenges'. Reception includes all 10 finalist teams showcasing their projects, and the NSF and AACC announcing the top three finalists * Event follows a four-day Innovation Boot Camp, where the students learn 'how to put their proposals into action to make real-world change' Location: Rm 485, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.nsf.gov/> <https://twitter.com/NSF#CCIChallenge>

Other: 8:30 AM 'Building a Competitive U.S.-Mexico Border' conference – 'Building a Competitive U.S.-Mexico Border' conference hosted by the Wilson Center Mexico Institute and the Border Trade Alliance, to discuss 'improving border management in order to strengthen the competitiveness of both the U.S. and Mexico'. Speakers include Republicans Sen. John Cornyn and Rep. Will Hurd, Democratic Rep. Henry Cuellar, Customs and Border Protection Acting Commissioner Kevin McAleenan, Mexico Ambassador to the U.S. Amb. Geronimo Gutierrez, San Diego Mayor Kevin Faulconer, Arizona Governor Doug Ducey, and State Department Border Coordinator Hillary Quam Location: Wilson Center, 1300 Pennsylvania Ave, Washington, DC <http://www.wilsoncenter.org/> <https://twitter.com/TheWilsonCenter>

9:00 AM 2017 CSIS-JETRO Conference – 2017 Center for Strategic and International Studies-Japan External Trade Organization Conference on 'Asia-Pacific Economic Integration and the Role of the United States and Japan', with Democratic Rep. Rick Larsen, JETRO Chairman and CEO Hiroyuki Ishige, and CSIS President and CEO John Hamre Location: CSIS, 1616 Rhode Island Ave, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

6:00 PM Endowment for Middle East Truth's 'Rays of Light in the Darkness' Annual Dinner – Endowment for Middle East Truth's 'Rays of Light in the Darkness' Annual Dinner, honoring Israeli Ambassador to the U.S. Ron Dermer, Republican Sen. Jim Inhofe, Republican Rep. Mark Meadows, Democratic Rep. Juan Vargas Location: Washington, DC www.emetonline.org

6:00 PM National Partnership for Women & Families Gala Dinner – National Partnership for Women & Families Gala Dinner. Distinguished honoree and keynote speaker is Democratic Sen. Kamala Harris Location: Washington Hilton, 1919 Connecticut Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.nationalpartnership.org/> <https://twitter.com/NPWF>

7:30 PM CFA Annual Awards Dinner – Consumer Federation of America Annual Awards Dinner, for awards recognizing individuals who have made exceptional progress in American consumerism by improving the marketplace, eliminating fraud, promoting consumer health and safety, and providing consumer information. Honorees include Democratic Rep. Bobby Rush, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Chairman Martin Gruenberg, Center for Digital Democracy Executive Director Jeffrey Chester, National Cooperative Bank President and CEO Charles Snyder, and The Nation Institute Investigative Fund Reporting Fellow Susan Antilla Location: Capital Hilton, 1001 16th Street Northwest, Washington, DC <http://www.consumerfed.org/>
<https://twitter.com/consumerfed>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: “Senate Democrats accused [Attorney General] Jeff Sessions of stonewalling, which the attorney general adamantly denied. Although he did add if he did decide to stonewall, the Mexicans would definitely be paying for it.”

Stephen Colbert: “I’m sure you know everyone is talking about America’s favorite new reality TV show, ‘So You Think You Can Testify About Russia.’ Today’s contestant: Attorney General and Last Surviving Little Rascal, Jeff Sessions.”

Stephen Colbert: “As soon as Sessions sat down, everyone had the same question, are you now, or have you ever hidden any pots of gold?”

Stephen Colbert: “Attorney General Sessions, you’re not answering, even though the President hasn’t claimed executive privilege, and you haven’t claimed executive privilege. So what are you claiming, white privilege?”

Stephen Colbert: “Wait a second. Everybody knows there was communication between Russia and Michael Flynn. That’s why he was fired. Sessions really seems to know nothing. Which explains why he was the first senator to endorse Trump.”

Trevor Noah: “The play was so violent, Delta pulled out. Terrible news for the Public Theater, but a great opportunity for United Airlines!”

Trevor Noah: “At some point, we’re going to have to stop saying Trump is committing political suicide. Alright, Donald Trump don’t die, people. Donald Trump is the Transformers movie of politics. No matter how bad it gets, it’s never over.”

Trevor Noah: “Jeff Sessions uses that line all the time: ‘I recuse myself from the Russia investigation, but I will not recuse myself from these nachos, yeah! Wait, $5 for guacamole? I recuse myself!’”

Jimmy Fallon: “Attorney General Jeff Sessions testified in Congress today as part of the Russia investigation. And it wasn’t a good sign when they asked him if he swore to tell the truth and nothing but the truth, and he said, ‘Da.’”

Jimmy Fallon: “During his testimony, Sessions said he doesn’t recall having any conversations with Russian officials at the Mayflower Hotel. Then John McCain interrupted to talk about being on the Mayflower.”

Jimmy Fallon: “Jeff Sessions said he doesn’t recall meeting with any Russians at the Mayflower. For those of you who don’t know, ‘doesn’t recall’ is the Washington term meaning, ‘I definitely recall, and I’m in trouble.’”

Seth Meyers: “Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich has published a new book titled ‘Understanding Trump,’ and I have to say it’s a pretty quick read.”

Seth Meyers: “It seems like every day, the news surrounding the Russia scandal and the firing of former FBI Director James Comey gets more intense and more unbelievable. It's like every time we think we're on top of crazy mountain, a cloud blows away and there is another peak to climb."

Seth Meyers: "Trump's our first President to spend more time watching 'The Situation Room' than he does in the actual situation room."

Conan O'Brien: "After winning the NBA championship – this is a big story – the Golden State Warriors unanimously decided to skip the traditional visit to the White House. They're skipping it. After hearing this, Melania Trump said, 'Wait, you can do that?'"

Conan O'Brien: "A new report came out and found that the employees at a Trump clothing factory in Indonesia are subject to low wages and verbal abuse. And even they wouldn't change places with Sean Spicer."

Conan O'Brien: "It's rumored that President Trump's upcoming trip to the UK is on hold because he's worried about angry protests. Yeah. I have to admit, of all the wars I thought Trump might restart, I wasn't counting on revolutionary."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, June 21, 2017
Date: Wednesday, June 21, 2017 7:13:12 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Washington Post: Zinke Defends Trump's Sharp Cuts At Interior: 'This Is What A Balanced Budget Looks Like.'
- Navajo-Hopi Observer (AZ): Zinke Says Tribes Are 'Happy' To Have Bears Ears Modifications; Tribes Disagree.
- Deseret (UT) News: Counties Drawing Maps On Preferred Monument Boundaries.
- Albuquerque (NM) Journal: Las Cruces City Council Opposes Changes To OMDP Monument.
- KRWG-FM Las Cruces (NM): Pearce Introduces Bill To Increase Access To Federal Lands.
- Livingston (MT) Enterprise: Locals Seek Action From Steve Daines On Fed Mining Ban.

- Houma (LA) Courier: Grant To Help Open Bayou Country Sports Park.
- Grand Junction (CO) Daily Sentinel: A Different Letter To Secretary Zinke.
- The Hill: National Parks Have More To Offer Than Gas — Why Won't The Government Protect Them?

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- New Deadline Set In Tribal Remand.
- In Hardin, One Jail Is Overcrowded; The Other Sits Empty.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Bloomberg BNA: Interior Prepares To Issue Rule On Fracking On Federal Land.
- Daily Caller: Environmentalists Sue Trump Over Alleged Coal Industry Ties.
- Denver Post: Non-motorized Recreation On BLM Lands Contributes $54 Million To Arkansas River Valley Economy.
- Carlsbad (NM) Current-Argus: BLM Pays State $70 Million Owed From Sept. Lease Sale.
- East Idaho News: BLM: Gap Fire Was Caused By Shooters Illegally Shooting Exploding Targets.
- Elko (NV) Daily Free Press: BLM Posts Environmental Study.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Bill Aims To Have California Save Water For A Not-so-rainy Day.
- Rural Water Projects Bill Receives Hearing.
- Arkansas River Levels Peak After U.S.
- Napa County Still Weighing Berryessa Resorts Decision.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Orange County (CA) Breeze: OCTA And Wildlife Officials Preserve 1,300 Acres Of Wilderness.
- Great Falls (MT) Tribune: Living With Grizzly Bears Challenges Montana.
- Ronan Valley (MT) Journal: Comprehensive Conservation Plan Process Begins At Nat'l Bison Range.
- Salem (OR) Capital Press: Agencies Watch For First Western Washington Wolfpack.
- Morristown (NJ) Daily Record: With Dams Gone American Shad Return To Musconetcong River.
- Forum of Fargo-Moorhead (ND): Two Northeast SD Men Sentenced For Shooting 200 Pelicans, Double-crested Cormorants.
- Bangor (ME) Daily News: Maine Man Pleads Guilty To Illegal Trafficking In Baby Eels Valued At $375K.
- Medium: Sunrise And Sage-Grouse On Sacred Ground.

National Park Service

- Chelsea Now: Google Supports Stonewall National Monument With $1M.
- Los Angeles Times: It Was 127 Degrees In Death Valley, And Miserable Just About Everywhere Else.
- Omaha (NE) World-Herald: Bill Nye Is Coming To Nebraska For Anticipated Solar Eclipse.
- Arizona Daily Star: Fee Increases Proposed For Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument.
- U.S. News & World Report: Glacier National Park Trail Closed Due To Grizzlies.
- U.S. News & World Report: Highway Closed By Water In Central Wyoming Reopens.
- Bangor (ME) Daily News: Carriage Roads In Acadia National Park To Be Resurfaced.
- Savannah (GA) Morning News: Cumberland Rezoning Postponed To Allow Park Service Negotiations.
- U.S. News & World Report: Rural Cemetery In Ramsey County Listed In National Register.
- Washington Times: Additional Coverage: Olympic Champ And Capital-area Native Dawes Advocates For National Parks And Discusses Motherhood.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Samoa News: Petition Wants To Keep Am.
- Guam Daily Post: Decolonization Advocates Weigh In On Puerto Rico Vote.
- Samoa News: The Future Prospects For American Samoa's Political Status.
- Samoa News: Definition Of AS Cultural Fishing Practices Still Being Debated.
- Marianas Variety: Global Coral Bleaching May Be Ending, US Agency Says.
- St. Croix Source: The V.I. Budget Crisis, Part 11: Education, Where The Big Spending Is.
- Marianas Variety: Mumps Outbreak In The Marshalls Continues To Spread.
- Pacific (GUM) Daily News: War Claims Application Available Now.
- Virgin Islands Consortium (VIR): Reducing Greenhouse Emissions Is An Economic Imperative For Territory.

Office Of Surface Mining

- King II Coal Mine Expansion Proposal Splits Crowd.

Top National News

- Fox News: Trump Takes Veiled Shot At Obama, Signals Loss Of Faith In China's North Korea Efforts.
- Fox News: Media Analyses: Handel Victory Big Win For Trump, Another Setback For Democrats.
- Charleston (SC) Post and Courier: Republican Norman Wins Special Election To Succeed Mulvaney.
- New York Times: NYTimes Analysis: Trump Moves To Roll Back Obama's Labor Legacy.
- Washington Examiner: Thune: Plan To Privatize Air Traffic Controllers Doesn't Have Enough Committee Votes.
- New York Times: NYTimes A1 Analysis: Climate Change Likely To Increase Disruptions To Air Travel.
- Bloomberg BNA: Cities, States Take On Brunt Of Climate Responsibility.
- Washington Post: EPA Notifies BOSC Members Their Terms Won't Be Renewed.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "The Health Care Of Millions Depends On A Few Senators."
 - "More Doubts Are Raised Over Mrs. May's Leadership."
 - "Tired Of The Suspense On Mayoral Control Of Schools."
- Washington Post.
 - "Children Are Dying Because Of America's Lax Gun Control Policies."
 - "The Supreme Court Has A Chance To Rein In Partisan Gerrymandering."
 - "Will The Trump Administration Send Iraqi Minorities Home – And Into Danger?"
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Trump To Cordray: You're Not Fired."
 - "Free Speech For Sex Offenders."
 - "The Illinois Capitulation."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Zinke Defends Trump's Sharp Cuts At Interior: 'This Is What A Balanced Budget Looks Like.'

The Washington Post (6/20, Fears) reports that in testimony before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee Tuesday, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "defended the $1.6 billion in funding cuts that President Trump has proposed for his department," telling the panel that "this is what a balanced budget looks like." However, Democrats on the committee "took issue with the $400 million that the national parks would lose in fiscal 2018," and "questioned the $370 million in cuts the Bureau of Indian Affairs would face." Committee Republicans, however, "applauded the Trump administration's proposals to invest in energy exploration on public lands, including a controversial move to open the Arctic to oil and gas exploration after the Obama administration closed it."

Additional coverage was provided by The Hill (6/20, Cama, Henry), The Hill (6/20, Wheeler), the Washington \(DC\) Times (6/20, Wolfgang), the High Country \(CO\) News (6/20, Kapoor), Oil Change International (6/20, Redman), Oil Change International (6/20, Redman), and The Fuse (6/20, Piotrowski).

Interior Secretary Advocates For Cutting Up To 4,000 Jobs At Agency. The Huffington Post (6/20, D'angelo) reports that "thousands of federal workers at the Interior Department could soon find themselves out of a job as the Trump administration looks to reorganize the agency and cut its funding by 12 percent." Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke noted that President Trump's 2018 budget request would “slash funding by $1.6 billion — to $11.7 billion — and support just shy of 60,000 full-time staff, a reduction of roughly 4,000.” In written testimony, Zinke wrote, “To accomplish this, the Department will rely on a combination of attrition, reassignments, and separation incentives. Actual attrition rates and acceptance of separation incentives will determine the need for further action to reduce staffing.”

E&E Publishing (6/20, Lunney) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke indicated “that the department is looking at relocating more resources out West as part of a larger management reorganization.” Zinke said, “The way we are organized currently is, we’re all different bureaus reporting to different regions. We’re not very good at joint operations,” he added. He gave an example of a river with both trout and salmon, meaning different agencies inside and outside of Interior could have jurisdiction.

Additional coverage was provided by the Summit \(CO\) Daily (6/20, Fixler) and the Glenwood Springs \(CO\) Post Independent (6/20, Fixler).

Senators: Trump’s Interior Budget Is Going Nowhere. The Hill (6/20, Henry) reports, “Senators of both parties on Tuesday poked holes in President Trump’s budget request for the Interior Department, which cuts funding for the agency by 11 percent.” During a Tuesday hearing, Sen. Lisa Murkowski told Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “that the budget is ‘better than what we have seen in the last few years,’ but that it’s still not going anywhere on Capitol hill.” Murkowski said, “I don’t expect many of [the cuts] to become a reality, especially those that target popular programs.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington \(DC\) Examiner (6/20, Siciliano) and the Business Insider (6/20, Siciliano).

Zinke Pledges To Enforce Obama-Era Methane Rule Amid Rewrite. The AP (6/20, Daly) reports Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said the department will enforce regulations designed to restrict methane emissions from oil and gas production, even though the rule is being rewritten to be more industry friendly. Responding to questions from the Senate Energy Committee, Zinke agreed that flaring methane at drill sites is wasteful, and that he hopes to design a rule ensuring taxpayers are getting fair royalty values while not punishing the industry. Zinke said, “It’s a public asset we’re flaring, and we need to incentivize it so it’s used and not wasted.” The Washington Examiner (6/20, Siciliano) reports Sen. Maria Cantwell, the top Democrat on the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, said Zinke is skirting the law when he planned to review the rule cutting methane emissions from hydraulic fracturing on public lands. Cantwell said, “You cannot just change this rule without notice and without comment. ... You cannot make up your own new regulations without due process.” When she asked Zinke if he was following the Administrative Procedures Act, the Interior Secretary responded that he is following all procedures within the law. Zinke also said he plans to have a public notice and comment period when revising the regulation. Greenwire (6/20) reports Sens. Cantwell and Udall sent a letter to Zinke arguing the Administrative Procedure Act does not allow for a delay of rules that are already in effect. The letter said, “The effect of this claim is to allow the Department, according to its whim, to suspend properly promulgated regulations with no public notice and comment nor any legal reasoning beyond an unsubstantiated claim that ‘justice requires’ suspension of a rule that has already gone into effect.”

Additional coverage was provided by The Hill (6/20, Henry).

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by ABC News (6/20, Daly), Fox Business (6/20, Daly), the Minneapolis \(MN\) Star Tribune (6/20, Daly), Philly \(PA\) (6/20, Daly), the San Francisco \(CA\) Chronicle (6/20, Daly), the Winston-Salem \(NC\) Journal (6/20, Daly), the Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (6/20, Daly), the Washington \(DC\) Times (6/20, Daly), U.S. News & World Report (6/20, Daly), and WMUR-TV Manchester \(NH\) Manchester, NH (6/20, Daly).

GOP Senator To White House: Hands Off Oil And Gas Payments To Gulf Coast States. Route Fifty (6/20, Lucia) reports that Sen. Bill Cassidy pressed Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Tuesday “about a proposal in President Trump’s budget plan to redirect billions of dollars in offshore oil and gas revenues away from Gulf Coast states.” Cassidy’s comments “concerned the Trump administration’s push to overhaul how money is distributed under the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act, or GOMESA.” Zinke “expressed an openness to working with Cassidy to address his concerns about the payments.”

Canyons Of The Ancients Not “Currently” Under Priority Review, Ryan Zinke Tells Cory Gardner. The Denver Post (6/20, Paul) reports that Sen. Cory Gardner “said Tuesday he was ‘encouraged’ by comments from Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke about the future of Canyon of the Ancients, whose protected status as a national monument was put in question early last month as part of a broader federal review.” Zinke stated, “It is currently not on our priority review list.” Gardner said later, “I’m encouraged Secretary Zinke stated today that Canyons is not currently on the department's priority review. I'll continue to...do all that I can to protect Canyons of the Ancients."

Zinke: Maine Monument's Foes And Fans Will Be 'Enthusiastic' About Recommendation. The Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (6/20, Sambides) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "once again hinted Tuesday that he won't advise President Donald Trump to get rid of Maine's national monument." Speaking to Sen. Angus King of Maine during a Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee hearing, "Zinke predicted that both Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument's supporters and its opponents will be 'enthusiastic' about the recommendations he will make to President Trump on Aug. 24." Zinke said, "I am sure you are going to be enthusiastic about the recommendation as well as the governor. I have talked to the governor, and I think we have a reasonable approach with the recommendation that all parties will be satisfied with."

King Advocates For Acadia National Park Advisory Commission To Interior Secretary. WAGM-TV Presque Isle, ME (6/20, Lumpkin) reports that during a Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee hearing Tuesday, Sen. Angus King "spoke in support of the Acadia National Park Advisory Commission to Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke." King's comments "come after the Department of the Interior earlier this year suspended meetings of all national park advisory commissions across the country – including the Acadia Commission in Maine – while the National Park Service conducts a review of them." Zinke "responded that the purpose of the review was to gain a better understanding of what the advisory commissions have accomplished over the years, and noted that the commissions could apply for an exemption if they would like to meet."

Al Franken Butts Heads With Interior Secretary Over Climate Change. The Huffington Post (6/20, D'angelo) reports that Sen. Al Franken "clashed with Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke Tuesday on the subject of climate change, calling out the Trump Cabinet member for downplaying melting glaciers in Glacier National Park." At Tuesday's budget hearing before the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, Franken "pointed to data released last month by the U.S. Geological Survey — a bureau Zinke oversees — and Portland State University showing that the park's glaciers have shrunk an average of 39 percent since 1966." According to the article, "with limited time, Franken moved on to the larger climate crisis, asking Zinke if he knows how much warming government scientists are predicting by 2100 under a business-as-usual scenario."

Zinke Says Tribes Are 'Happy' To Have Bears Ears Modifications; Tribes Disagree.

The Navajo-Hopi Observer \(AZ\) (6/20, Capriccioso) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is "misrepresenting tribal positions about his plan to reduce a yet unspecified portion of the Bears Ears National Monument while increasing tribal co-management of the site, according to tribal officials and their lawyers." In a June 12 press call hosted by Sen. Tom Udall, the vice-chair of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, Navajo Nation Attorney General Ethel Branch "said the tribe's leaders have maintained a consistent position that they support the monument designation." Natalie Landreth, "a lawyer with the Native American Rights Fund who represents the Hopi, Zuni and Ute Mountain Ute Tribes on Bears Ears issues," said, "It's unclear exactly what the secretary is suggesting, so until we know more details about what he's talking about, it's difficult to have a view on it. Our initial reaction on behalf of the three tribes we represent is that this was really a cynical effort to distract Indian country from the devastating blow of reducing the size of the monument."

Let The Floodgates Of Protest Open Over Bears Ears. In an op-ed for the High Country \(CO\) News (6/20, Worthy), Crista Worthy writes that "though Zinke might not be listening, many Americans have spoken up in defense of Bears Ears and the other national monuments now under 'review.'" She notes that "in addition to the 90,000 individual comments as of May 25, dozens of groups like the Sierra Club and Southern Utah Wilderness Alliance gathered feedback, which amounted to over 685,000 additional public comments in support of Bears Ears, and tens of thousands of comments in support of other national monuments." According to Worthy, "when combined they show support for Bears Ears and other national monuments at more than 99 percent, all gathered during this short 15-day comment period."

Counties Drawing Maps On Preferred Monument Boundaries.

The Deseret \(UT\) News (6/20, O'Donoghue) reports that "Kane and Garfield counties are drawing new monument boundaries for Grand Staircase-Escalante at the request of the U.S. Department of the Interior as part of an ongoing review of 27 controversial national monument designations across the country." Rep. Mike Noel "told members of the Commission for the Stewardship of Public Lands that producing a consensus map for the monument is no easy task given the amount of land involved — 1.9 million acres.” According to the article, “there were initially two interim maps produced for Grand Staircase-Escalante’s potential new boundaries, but Noel said the Interior Department wants one working map for the monument from which to make its recommendations to President Donald Trump.”

Las Cruces City Council Opposes Changes To OMDP Monument.

The Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (6/20, Soular) reports that Las Cruces city councilors unanimously approved “a measure Monday opposing curtailment or elimination of the Organ Mountains-Desert Peaks National Monument.” Councilors “heard from many proponents, including several business owners, and opponents, including some ranchers who rehashed concerns about the monument’s size.” The city council’s statement expresses support for the national monument and “it also opposes a curtailment or elimination of the monument.”

Pearce Introduces Bill To Increase Access To Federal Lands.

KRWG-FM Las Cruces, NM (6/20) reports that Rep. Steve Pearce has “introduced a bill to increase access to public lands for hunting, fishing, and recreational shooting.” The Make Public Lands Public Act will “amend the Land and Water Conservation Fund to increase public access to federal lands by maintaining and restoring existing roads, trails, and rights of way.” Pearce said, “In New Mexico and across the west, private, state, and federal lands are intermingled, resulting in a checkerboard issue that diminishes access to public lands for hunting, fishing, and shooting sports. These lands belong to the people, and we must ensure that sportsmen and women have the ability to participate in outdoor recreation as their parents and grandparents did before them. This bill will not only bring greater recreational enjoyment and economic growth to New Mexico, but will increase conservation efforts that are funded by these activities.”

Locals Seek Action From Steve Daines On Fed Mining Ban.

The Livingston \(MT\) Enterprise (6/20, Kearney) reports that “area business owners who want to see some local public lands permanently withdrawn from mining are asking Congress to get moving” on the “Yellowstone Gateway Protection Act.” Sen. Jon Tester introduced the bill in April. Karrie Kahle, a spokeswoman for the YGBC said Monday, “We’re asking Sen. Daines to request a hearing of the bill by July before the August recess. We’re urging him to support his constituents in our community and to act for a hearing and get this bill passed to protect our economy and our way of life.... He’s our Congressman, and we’d like to have his support on the act.”

Grant To Help Open Bayou Country Sports Park.

The Houma \(LA\) Courier (6/20, Boudreaux) reports that “Terrebonne Parish government has received the first grant check for the Bayou Country Sports Park.” Christopher Pulaski, Terrebonne’s director of planning and zoning, said the parish received the money from the Land and Water Conservation Fund Grant. The parish was “awarded the entire grant, totaling a $250,000 reimbursement that the parish is putting back into the park.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Thibodaux \(LA\) Daily Comet (6/20, Boudreaux).

A Different Letter To Secretary Zinke.

In an open letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke published in the Grand Junction \(CO\) Daily Sentinel (6/20, Spehar), columnist Jim Spehar offers a response to the commissioners of Mesa County’s “litany of supposed grievances regarding Department of Interior policies and practices.” Spehar hopes Zinke will “accept and support the decisions they would have you revisit and, like others in our community, look forward, not backward in your important responsibility of overseeing our public lands.”

National Parks Have More To Offer Than Gas — Why Won’t The Government Protect Them?

For the “Pundits” blog of The Hill (6/20, Korenblat, Contributor), Ashley Korenblat, CEO of cycling tour company Western Spirit Cycling and managing director of Public Land Solutions, writes that “our public lands are bringing long-term sustained growth to rural economies, while simultaneously protecting America’s best idea: our national parks.” Korenblat argues that “communities that used to depend on the coal, oil, gas and timber now have an opportunity to supplement those revenue sources by investing in access to recreation assets.” However, “poorly planned energy development could threaten these communities.” Korenblat warns that the Dinosaur National Monument, Canyonlands, Chaco Canyon, Capitol Reef, Carlsbad Caverns, Mesa

Verde and Zion National Parks are “all threatened by oil and gas leases on adjacent lands.” Korenbalt concludes that “as local governments and businesses increasingly benefit from land in its natural state, the Bureau of Land Management needs to acknowledge that resource extraction is no longer the only way to make a living off the land.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

New Deadline Set In Tribal Remand.

The Falmouth \(MA\) Enterprise (6/20, Houghton) reports that “The federal government has set a new timeline of Tuesday, June 27, for a decision on the remand process in the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe’s legal proceedings.” David H. Tennant, an attorney representing East Taunton plaintiffs in the lawsuit, confirmed on Tuesday that the Interior Department has “set a new date of June 27, just over a week from the original intended deadline for a decision.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Fall River \(MA\) Herald News (6/20, Winokoor), the Taunton \(MA\) Daily Gazette (6/20, Winokoor), the Cape Cod \(MA\) Times (6/20, Lindahl), the Raynham \(MA\) Call (6/20, Winokoor), and the Nation Sun News (6/20).

In Hardin, One Jail Is Overcrowded; The Other Sits Empty.

The Billings \(MT\) Gazette (6/20, Hudson) reports that “Hardin’s vacant private prison will get another look from Big Horn County, which is again searching for options to alleviate its ailing jail facility.” Late last year, the Bureau of Indian Affairs “began negotiating a lease to take over the facility as a regional detention center for Native American inmates.” A BIA spokeswoman “confirmed in February that a lease was in the works and estimated for April,” but “since then, the agency has not responded to multiple inquiries about any potential deal.”

Bureau Of Land Management

Interior Prepares To Issue Rule On Fracking On Federal Land.

Bloomberg BNA (6/19, Kovski) reports the Interior Department soon may issue a rule to replace the Obama Administration’s regulation governing hydraulic fracturing on federal and tribal lands. The department is under pressure from the US Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit, where it requested a stay of the case over the regulation. Federal attorneys for the Interior must file their next brief no later than June 20, and having a proposed rule at the Office of Management and Budget will allow the attorneys to say that the BLM needs the court to halt litigation while the rule-making takes place.

Additional coverage was provided by Law360 (6/20, Goldberg).

Environmentalists Sue Trump Over Alleged Coal Industry Ties.

The Daily Caller (6/20, Follett) reports that the Center for Biological Diversity “filed a lawsuit Tuesday against the Trump administration over its alleged ties to the coal industry, asking for public records of meetings between U.S. Bureau of Land Management (BLM) officials and coal industry executives.” The group submitted a Freedom of Information Act request “in March to obtain information about meetings between BLM officials and coal industry lobbyists.” The center says “it filed suit Tuesday after BLM ignored its FOIA request.”

Non-motorized Recreation On BLM Lands Contributes $54 Million To Arkansas River Valley Economy.

The Denver Post (6/20, Blevins) reports that “non-motorized recreation on Bureau of Land Management mountains around the Upper Arkansas River Valley contributed more than $54.3 million to local economies according to a ‘quiet use’ economic impact report released Tuesday.” The report, “prepared by ECONorthwest economic consulting firm and paid for by The Pew Charitable Trusts, showed more than three-quarters of all recreational visits to BLM-managed land on the eastern flank of the Continental Divide along the Arkansas River were for ‘quiet recreation,’ meaning the visitors did not twist a throttle or stomp a gas pedal during their visit.” According to the report, “those 1.23 million visits — tallied from BLM 2015 visitor data — accounted for $54.3 million in spending, with $39 million of that coming from non-local visitors.” The report “showed those hikers, climbers, paddlers and cyclists supported 693 jobs in the rural region.”

Additional coverage was provided by KXRM-TV Colorado Springs, CO (6/20, Asperin).

BLM Pays State $70 Million Owed From Sept. Lease Sale.

The Carlsbad \(NM\) Current-Argus (6/20, Hayden) reports that “nearly $70 million owed to the state of New Mexico by the Bureau of Land Management has been paid off.” The article says that “the $69.9 million is a portion of the proceeds allotted to the state from a record-breaking BLM oil and gas lease sale held in September that netted $145 million for 36 Permian Basin parcels.” BLM New Mexico spokeswoman Donna Hummel “confirmed the payment was made on May 30.”

BLM: Gap Fire Was Caused By Shooters Illegally Shooting Exploding Targets.

The East Idaho News (6/20) reports that “investigators have determined that the June 8th Gap Fire was caused by shooters illegally using exploding targets.” KIFI-TV Idaho Falls, ID (6/20) reports that the BLM “said the conditions for a wildfire aligned perfectly the day of the Gap Fire, and the potential of exploding targets to start wildfires is why the BLM Fire Prevention Order is in place.”

BLM Posts Environmental Study.

The Elko \(NV\) Daily Free Press (6/20) reports that “an environmental study and findings conducted by the local Bureau of Land Management office are available for public review until July 5.” The Elko District Office “completed a field project environmental assessment that analyzed the proposed implementation of demonstration study plots for pseudomonas fluorescens strain D7 on up to 50 acres.”

Bureau Of Reclamation

Bill Aims To Have California Save Water For A Not-so-rainy Day.

The McClatchy (6/20, Siripurapu) reports that “after years of drought, the state of California is bracing for water,” and “Congress is trying to help manage such drastic shifts in California’s water levels.” On Thursday, the House “plans a vote on legislation sponsored by Rep. Tom McClintock, R-Calif., that aims to help the state capture more of that water to save for a future dry season.” The bill is expected to pass the House.

Rural Water Projects Bill Receives Hearing.

The Sidney \(MT\) Herald (6/20) reports that Sen. Steve Daines’ bill “to provide much-needed authorization for Montana rural water infrastructure received a legislative hearing in the U.S. Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources Subcommittee on Water and Power last week.” The Clean Water for Rural Communities Act “authorizes two Bureau of Reclamation rural water projects: the Dry-Redwater Regional Water Authority System and the Musselshell-Judith Rural Water System.”

Arkansas River Levels Peak After U.S.

Bureau Of Reclamation Conducts Water Release. The Canon City \(CO\) Daily Record (6/20, Matott) reports that “the Arkansas River was flowing at about 4,100 cubic feet per second on Tuesday, hitting a new peak level for this year.” Kyle Horne, “programs director at the Cañon City Area Recreation and Park District and co-chairman for the Royal Gorge Whitewater Festival, said the river is running high again after the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation released water from Twin Lakes Reservoir.”

Napa County Still Weighing Berryessa Resorts Decision.

The Napa Valley \(CA\) Register (6/20, Eberling) reports that “Napa County after a year of research remains interested in managing the Lake Berryessa resort renovation effort, but wants a little more information before taking the plunge.” The county “wants to offer 55-year contracts to run resorts, but needs permission from the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation for this longer-than-usual time frame.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

OCTA And Wildlife Officials Preserve 1,300 Acres Of Wilderness.

The Orange County \(CA\) Breeze (6/20) reports that the Orange County Transportation Authority “joined with officials from federal and state wildlife agencies and local environmental leaders on Tuesday to announce the completion of plans to protect 1,300 acres of open space, ensuring that it remains free from development forever.” Tuesday’s event “marked the culmination of more than 10 years of work between the agencies to finalize the plans related to the Measure M Freeway Environmental Mitigation Program, which protects natural habitat and rare animal and plant species in Orange County.” According to the article, “the certification of the final conservation plans, known as the Natural Community Conservation Plan/Habitat Conservation Plan and the associated environmental impact report, is the culmination of OCTA’s work with both the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the California Department of Fish and Wildlife.” Paul Souza, Regional Director of the Wildlife Service’s Pacific Southwest Region, said, “Our work with OCTA, the state and other partners to develop this plan is an example of proactive conservation planning the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is spearheading across Southern California. This plan provides assurances that crucial transportation projects can go forward efficiently while safeguarding Orange County’s priceless natural resources.”

Living With Grizzly Bears Challenges Montana.

The Great Falls \(MT\) Tribune (6/21, Puckett) reports that “managing and living with a growing grizzly bear population once the threatened species loses federal protection was the focus of a panel discussion Tuesday during the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee meeting.” The IGBC is “conducting a three-day summer meeting in this Rocky Mountain Front community.” According to the article, “the focus of a two-hour panel discussion was transitioning from recovery to management in both the North Continental Divide Ecosystem in northcentral and northwestern Montana and the greater Yellowstone area.”

Comprehensive Conservation Plan Process Begins At Nat’l Bison Range.

The Ronan Valley \(MT\) Journal (6/20, Soptelean) reports that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has started “the process for creating a Comprehensive Conservation Plan for the National Bison Range and other conservation lands in Lake and Flathead counties.” The initial public meeting was held June 6 in Polson and another was held June 7 in Kalispell. Toni Griffin, “a FWS refuge planner from Denver, said the effort is the beginning of a three-year process.”

Agencies Watch For First Western Washington Wolfpack.

The Salem \(OR\) Capital Press (6/20, Jenkins) reports that “federal and state biologists are watching a male wolf in Western Washington to see whether he has a traveling companion.” The Washington Department of Fish Wildlife and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service “trapped a male wolf June 8 in Eastern Skagit County.” According to Washington Department of Fish Wildlife wolf policy coordinator Donny Martorello, “if he stays in the area, it will suggest he’s found a mate.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Omak-Okanogan County \(WA\) Chronicle (6/20, Hires).

With Dams Gone American Shad Return To Musconetcong River.

The Morristown \(NJ\) Daily Record (6/20, Radel) reports that “small schools of American shad” were found “swimming above the site of the former Hughesville Dam in Warren County” in June. The fishermen’s report was “quickly followed up by biologists from New Jersey’s Bureau of Freshwater Fisheries who captured shad at the base of the Warren Glen Dam in Holland Township.” Eric Schrading, Supervisor of the N.J. Field Office for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said, “The confirmation of American shad in the Musconetcong River marks a significant milestone in the effort to restore this fish in the Delaware River Basin.”

Two Northeast SD Men Sentenced For Shooting 200 Pelicans, Double-crested Cormorants.

The Forum of Fargo-Moorhead \(ND\) (6/20, Amundson) reports that “two northeast South Dakota men will lose their hunting privileges for three years and pay restitution of $10,850 for shooting and killing more than 200 pelicans and double-crested cormorants in the spring of last year on small lake in Day County.” Brant Nelson and Kirk Nelson were “convicted in federal court of taking, killing and possessing migratory birds.” They were “sentenced to 36 months of probation.”

Maine Man Pleads Guilty To Illegal Trafficking In Baby Eels Valued At $375K.

The Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (6/20, Brogan) reports that “a 38-year-old Woolwich man pleaded guilty on Friday to illegally trafficking in poached elvers — juvenile American eels — in 2012.”

Michael Squillace pleaded guilty to violating the federal Lacey Act. Squillace “faces up to five years in prison with a maximum of 3 years supervised release.”

Sunrise And Sage-Grouse On Sacred Ground.

In a piece for Medium (6/12, Strickland), Jennifer Strickland of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Lakewood, Colorado, writes about seeing “the iconic dance of the greater sage-grouse on Native American lands.” Speaking of the Wind River Reservation, Pat Hnilicka, a biologist with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said, “This place is a national treasure. It provides wonderful, intact, diverse habitat for pretty much the full complement of species native to the Northern Rockies. I’m very grateful to the Tribes for allowing us to assist them in conserving their incredible fish and wildlife resources.”

National Park Service

Google Supports Stonewall National Monument With $1M.

The Chelsea Now (6/20, Schindler) reports that Google has “committed $1 million to support efforts at the LGBT Community Center to develop oral histories and other narratives related to the Stonewall Rebellion of 1969 that can be preserved and disseminated in digital formats.” The funding, “announced at a press conference on Sun., June 18 — the beginning of Pride Week in Manhattan — will allow the Center to partner with the National Park Foundation (NPF), a nonprofit advocacy group that supports the mission and facilities of the US National Park Service, to enhance the experience visitors enjoy when they travel to the Stonewall National Monument.”

It Was 127 Degrees In Death Valley, And Miserable Just About Everywhere Else.

Here’s How We Coped. The Los Angeles Times (6/20, Sahagun) reports that Death Valley on Tuesday “hit 127 — seven degrees shy of the hottest day ever recorded on the planet.” The article says that “facing a full week of temperatures above 120 degrees, officials at the national park’s headquarters — 190 feet below sea level — are bracing for heat-related illness and injuries.”

Additional coverage was provided by CNN (6/20, Kravarik).

Bill Nye Is Coming To Nebraska For Anticipated Solar Eclipse.

The Omaha \(NE\) World-Herald (6/20, Mertes) reports that Bill Nye, “the longtime fact advocate and host of the Netflix series ‘Bill Nye Saves the World,’ will join the rangers at Homestead National Monument of America to highlight the new Eclipse Explorer Junior Ranger program.” Nye plans to visit “on Aug. 21, the day of a solar eclipse.” The article notes that “the new program is a collaboration between National Park Service programs and the astronomy educational resources of the Planetary Society, of which Nye is the CEO.”

Fee Increases Proposed For Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument.

The Arizona Daily Star (6/20) reports that Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument is “proposing increased park entrance and camping fees.” In addition, “an amenity fee for the Ajo Mountain Drive van tour, which has been free of charge, is also proposed.” Acting Superintendent Rijk Morawe said, “The increase in fees would allow the park to continue to protect, preserve, improve facilities and services and share the special places here at Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument with current and future visitors. Increasing the fees will bring the park into compliance with the current nationwide National Park Service fee structure and address many unfunded needs to improve the overall visitor experience.”

Glacier National Park Trail Closed Due To Grizzlies.

The AP (6/20) reports that “a popular trail in Montana’s Glacier National Park is closed temporarily because of grizzly bears frequenting the area.” The Avalanche Creek Trail is “temporarily closed after the park received reports of up to six different grizzly bears in the Avalanche area.” The park said Monday that “the temporary closure will likely last several days, and will give park managers the opportunity to assess bear behavior and movement, allow the bears to move to more remote areas, and identify any needed additional actions.”

Highway Closed By Water In Central Wyoming Reopens.

The AP (6/20) reports that “flood warnings continued Tuesday for Wind and Little Wind rivers in Fremont County as well as the South Fork of the Shoshone River in Park County and the Green and New Fork rivers in Sublette and Lincoln counties." Grand Teton National Park officials "report that high water has caused erosion problems on some roads." The National Park Service is "making repairs where it can and monitoring the situation for public safety."

Carriage Roads In Acadia National Park To Be Resurfaced.

The Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (6/20) reports that the National Park Service will be "resurfacing 13 miles of the 45-mile carriage road system in Acadia National Park beginning on Tuesday, June 20." According to the article, "sections of the carriage roads in the vicinity of Jordan Pond, Wildwood Stables, and Bubble Pond will be closed on a rolling basis during weekdays 7 a.m.-5 p.m. through September to complete the work." The project is "funded in the amount of $400,000 by the National Park Service's cyclic maintenance program and is being completed under contract with Harold MacQuinn, Inc. of Ellsworth, Maine." Superintendent Kevin Schneider said, "The investment of park funding will help ensure the protection of this historic resource and provide for its enjoyment for many years to come."

Cumberland Rezoning Postponed To Allow Park Service Negotiations.

The Savannah \(GA\) Morning News (6/20, Landers) reports that "a last-minute request from the National Park Service has postponed a controversial decision on rezoning private property within Cumberland Island National Seashore." The Camden County Board of Commissioners "last week voted to allow time for negotiations between the park and private landowners rather than moving forward with either an ongoing zoning variance request or a new zoning district." Environmental groups welcomed the decision.

Rural Cemetery In Ramsey County Listed In National Register.

The AP (6/20) reports that the Sons of Jacob Cemetery in Ramsey County has been added to the National Register of Historic Places.

Additional Coverage: Olympic Champ And Capital-area Native Dawes Advocates For National Parks And Discusses Motherhood.

Additional coverage that former Olympic gymnast Dominique Dawes has teamed up with the National Park Foundation "to help families and individuals 'find their park' and to help them discover lesser-known parks," was provided by the Washington Times (6/20, Althoff).

Office Of Insular Affairs

Petition Wants To Keep Am.

Samoa Marine Protection. The Samoa News (6/20) reports that "an environmental group has launched an online petition aimed at preventing American Samoa's Rose Atoll Marine National Monument from losing its protected status." The Pacific Environment is "directing the petition to the US Secretary of Interior Ryan Zinke, who last month issued a federal notice seeking public comments on the review." The petition requests Zinke "not to modify the area's boundaries, management or allowed uses."

Decolonization Advocates Weigh In On Puerto Rico Vote.

The Guam Daily Post (6/18, Cruz) reports that "members of Guam's Commission on Decolonization are looking carefully at Puerto Rico's recent political status plebiscite as a cautionary tale for Guam's self-determination process moving forward." Guam Independence Task Force co-chair Michael Lujan Bevacqua, said, "Puerto Rico, as the largest and also geographically closest colony of the U.S., in many ways will set the limits of what is or isn't possible for Guam in its own quest for decolonization. In the unlikely case that Puerto Rico becomes a state, it may help Guam should it choose to become formally included in the union. But regardless of what happens, should there be sustained efforts in Washington, D.C., for some sort of political status change for the island, it will increase the chances of Guam receiving some assistance or attention."

The Future Prospects For American Samoa's Political Status.

The Samoa News (6/19, Sagapolutele) reports that "in his presentation to a United Nation's Decolonization regional seminar, ASG Office of Political Status, Constitution, and Federal Relations executive director, Tapaau Dr. Daniel Aga emphasized that the territory's form of government going forward must be 'firmly vested in the authority of the people of American Samoa.'" According to the article, "the presentation covered four specific issues, according to a revised copy of Tapaau's written presentation posted recently by the Decolonization Committee on its website."

Definition Of AS Cultural Fishing Practices Still Being Debated.

The Samoa News (6/17, Sagapolutele) reports that "a 'draft paper' has been prepared providing options for consideration by the Western Pacific Regional Fishery Management Council in regards to the Large Vessel Prohibited Area (LVPA) in territorial waters, and the consideration of American Samoa's cultural fishing practices." The options, "outlined in the draft paper, follows a Honolulu Federal Court ruling in favor of American Samoa, saying that the US National Marine Fisheries Service's decision in 2016 to reduce the LVPA in territorial waters is invalid, and that NMFS's adoption of the 2016 LVPA rule, which became effective on Feb. 3, 2016 'was arbitrary and capricious.'"

Global Coral Bleaching May Be Ending, US Agency Says.

The Marianas Variety (6/21) reports that "coral reef bleaching may be easing after three years of high ocean temperatures, the longest such period since the 1980s, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said on Monday." The agency's experts "said satellite data and other analysis showed widespread bleaching was no longer occurring in the three ocean basins — Atlantic, Pacific and Indian — 'indicating a likely end to the global bleaching event.'" Scientists from the NOAA "said they will closely monitor sea surface temperatures and bleaching 'over the next six months to confirm the event's end.'"

The V.I. Budget Crisis, Part 11: Education, Where The Big Spending Is.

In an analysis of the V.I. government's budget crisis, the St. Croix Source (6/20, Kossler) focuses on education spending. It notes that "in a $1 billion budget, the V.I. Education Department is by far the biggest item, with $167 million from the V.I. budget and another $38 million in federal funding."

Mumps Outbreak In The Marshalls Continues To Spread.

The Marianas Variety (6/19, Johnson) reports that "a mumps outbreak that started in March in Majuro could be slowing based on official data from the Ministry of Health — but health officials warn the true number of cases could be as high as 3,000 even though the confirmed and probable number is listed as 1,033 as of late last week." Meanwhile, "with thousands of islanders from the outer islands, Ebeye and the United States in Majuro for summer church conferences, the opportunity for further spread is increased." The article notes that "it is the biggest outbreak of mumps in the Marshall Islands in decades and started up following a large outbreak late last year in the American state of Arkansas in an area where about 15,000 Marshall Islanders live."

War Claims Application Available Now.

The Pacific \(GUM\) Daily News (6/19, Babauta) reports that "the federal government has begun accepting applications for Guam war claims." Eligible people will have one year to file a claim.

Reducing Greenhouse Emissions Is An Economic Imperative For Territory.

In an op-ed for the Virgin Islands Consortium \(VIR\) (6/17), Delegate to Congress Stacey Plaskett pledges to "work with Congressional leaders to develop policy options that address the impacts of climate change and to create economically viable options to reduce climate risk and protect our economy, security, and infrastructure." According to Plaskett, "without the Paris Agreement, our local government will need to be the driver for incentives to create jobs and grow renewable energy industries for which the territory is a prime area."

Office Of Surface Mining

King II Coal Mine Expansion Proposal Splits Crowd.

The Durango \(CO\) Herald (6/20, Shinn) reports that "an open house Tuesday at the Breen Community Building focused on the expansion of a coal mine west of Durango drew ardent supporters and skeptics." The GCC Energy King II Coal Mine is "set to run out of reserves in about two years, and the company is asking for a 950-acre expansion of the underground workings." A decision on the permit is expected in the fall.

Top National News

Trump Takes Veiled Shot At Obama, Signals Loss Of Faith In China's North Korea Efforts.

There is extensive media coverage of President Trump's remarks and tweets Tuesday following the death of American student Otto Warmbier, in which the President appeared to blame the Obama Administration for failing to secure Warmbier's release sooner. Reports also noted Trump's statement that efforts by China to pressure Pyongyang have "not worked out" – something a number of analyses view as a possible shift in his approach to North Korea. James Rosen, for example, reported on Fox News' Special Report (6/20) that Trump "tweeted out what could prove to be a major shift in the US approach to the entire complex of problems presented by North Korea."

The Washington Times (6/20, Boyer) reports the President said Warmbier's death was "a total disgrace." Speaking to reporters at the White House, Trump added, "It's a disgrace what happened to Otto. It should never, ever be allowed to happen. And frankly, if he were brought home sooner, I think the results would have been a lot different. ... He should have been brought home a long time ago."

ABC World News Tonight (6/20, story 8, 0:35, Muir) reported that while the President said Warmbier "should have been brought home sooner," former NSC spokesperson for Obama Administration, Ned Price, said, "We had no higher priority than the securing the release of Americans detained overseas. These tireless efforts resulted in the release of at least ten Americans from North Korean custody. It's painful that Mr. Warmbier was not among them." The New York Daily News (6/20, Silverstein) also reports the statement by Price.

The Washington Post (6/20, Nakamura) says Trump also "appeared to lose faith in China's ability to pressure North Korea to curb its abusive behavior, throwing into question how his administration plans to contain the rogue nation's growing nuclear threat." Politico (6/20, Nelson) likewise says Trump "appeared to give up on the notion that China might be able to pressure North Korea into behaving better on the world stage," tweeting, "While I greatly appreciate the efforts of President Xi & China to help with North Korea, it has not worked out. At least I know China tried!"

The CBS Evening News (6/20, story 8, 1:35, Mason) briefly reported on the President's tweets, which the New York Times (6/20, Landler, Harris) says were delivered in "an almost cavalier" manner "given how ardently he had sought the cooperation of President Xi Jinping of China." The Times adds that "taken together, the developments are a major complication for Mr. Trump's approach to North Korea, which he has called America's most urgent foreign threat." Zack Beauchamp writes for Vox that Trump "seems like he's declaring failure in some kind of campaign by China to help the United States bring North Korea in line."

A Wall Street Journal (6/20, Browne) analysis says Trump ceases the verbal hostilities he unleashed on the campaign trail amid hopes that Xi will use his influence to halt Pyongyang's nuclear program. It is unclear now if they will resume if the President has in fact determined that the strategy is not working.

Business Insider (6/20, Lockie), however, reports that "senior administration officials...told CNN not to read too much into [the President's tweet], and that they did not know what he meant by it." Bloomberg Politics (6/20, Sharp, Wadhams) reports White House press secretary Sean Spicer "didn't signal any change in the administration's approach to North Korea" in Tuesday's briefing, saying the US "will continue to apply economic and political pressure and try to continue to work with our allies."

Breitbart (6/20, Spiering) says Trump's "new focus on North Korea might have been sparked" Warmbier's death, but Reuters (6/20, Holland, Brunnstrom) says it was "unclear whether [Trump's] remark represented a significant shift in his thinking." Former Ambassador Christopher Hill told MSNBC, "I think the president is signaling some frustration, he's signaling to others that he understands this isn't working, and he's trying to defend himself, or justify himself, by saying that at least they tried as opposed to others who didn't even try."

Eric Levitz of the Daily Intelligencer \(NY\) (6/20) criticizes the President's tweets, saying "the fact that the American president is an emotionally volatile reality star — who publishes his foreign-policy musings directly to the internet — has always been dangerous. In the context of a military standoff with a nuclear-weapons state, it may prove fatally so."

On NBC Nightly News (6/20, story 6, 2:25, Holt), Andrea Mitchell said the President's remarks come ahead of US-China talks in Washington on Wednesday. North Korea, the AP (6/20) reports, is "expected to be among the issues discussed" at Wednesday's talks. Chinese foreign ministry spokesman Geng Shuang said Tuesday that Beijing "remains committed to banishing nuclear weapons from the Korean Peninsula and working with the US and others on restarting talks over the issue."

Asked on MSNBC's Morning Joe (6/20) if more sanctions would impact North Korea, Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Bob Corker said, "The only sanctions that matter are the ones coming from China and...we all know that. It's almost becoming a cliché. They've got to step up to the table." Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse likewise said on MSNBC's Morning Joe (6/20), "The country that has the most leverage is China, and to the extent that we could prevail upon China to crank up its economic pressure, I think that would probably be the most effective way to do something on the sanction side."

Senators Urge US To Ban North Korea Travel By Americans. On NBC Nightly News (6/20, story 6, 2:25, Holt), Andrea Mitchell said that "despite warnings, 1,000 Americans still visit North Korea every year. The company that took [Otto] Warmbier was still taking people 11 days ago," but "now telling NBC News, it will no longer take US citizens there." USA Today (6/20, Shesgreen) reports that in the wake of Warmbier's death, the Administration and "top lawmakers in Congress said Tuesday that they were considering dramatic new restrictions on Americans' ability to travel to North Korea." Both Republicans and Democrats said Tuesday that banning tourist visits to North Korea "could be an effective response" to Warmbier's death, depriving the regime of "desperately needed revenue" and preventing it from using American citizens "as leverage." State Department spokeswoman Heather Nauert said the Administration is "contemplating that right now." The AP (6/20) reports Secretary of State Tillerson "has been weighing such a move since late April, when American teacher Tony Kim was detained in Pyongyang, a senior State Department official said." However, the official cautioned that "no ban is imminent."

The Washington Post (6/20, Fifield) reports the State Department has "steadily ratcheted up its travel advisory for North Korea," and efforts to restrict US citizens from traveling to North Korea "are likely to gain new momentum" in the wake of Warmbier's death. The Post notes that a bill is already before the House to limit travel to North Korea for American citizens, and Warmbier's death "could prompt the Senate to consider the same."

US Flies B-1 Bombers Over Korean Peninsula. In what the CBS Evening News (6/20, story 8, 1:35, Mason) called "a show of force, the US flew two B-1 bombers over the Korean Peninsula" on Tuesday.

US Detects Activity At North Korean Nuclear Test Site. Two US officials have told CNN (6/20, Starr, Labott, Cohen) that US spy satellites have detected "new activity at North Korea's underground nuclear test site for the first time in several weeks." The officials said it is "not yet clear if the activity indicates a sixth nuclear test is imminent, but noted there is concern that North Korea could set off a test during Wednesday's visit to Washington by top Chinese diplomats and military officials."

Moon: "Maximum Pressure" Needed On North Korea. The CBS Evening News (6/20, story 8, 1:35, Mason) reported that South Korean President Moon Jae-in will travel next week to the White House for "talks on de-escalating the North's nuclear threat," and in an interview with CBS' Norah O'Donnell said leader Kim Jong-Un "currently has a blind faith that his nuclear and missile programs will protect him and his regime. So we must show and teach North Korea that this belief is incorrect. If North Korea gives up its nuclear program and missile programs and wants to start a dialogue, then I believe we can send a message that we will not threaten Kim Jong-Un's regime, and we can even provide assistance to them. And that is why I fully agree with President Trump that we need stronger sanctions and pressure on North Korea to the level that we have never reached before, maximum pressure."

Iran Opposition Group: North Korean Scientists Advising Tehran On Ballistic Missiles. The Washington Times (6/20, Scarborough) reports that a "leading Iranian opposition group" said Tuesday Tehran has increased production and testing of ballistic missiles since the 2015 nuclear deal under advice from North Korean scientists. The National Council of Resistance of Iran issued "a white paper that the dissidents say identifies and documents work at 42 missile centers operated by the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps." According to the Council a dozen of those sites had never been disclosed before. The North Koreans have reportedly shown Iran "how to dig tunnels and build 'missile cities' deep inside mountains to prevent destruction by airstrikes, among other projects."

China Invites Ivanka Trump, Jared Kushner To Visit Beijing. Reuters (6/20, Spetalnick) reports China has invited President Trump's daughter, Ivanka Trump, and son-in-law, Jared Kushner, to visit Beijing later this year, a White House official said Tuesday. The Chinese invitation was first reported by Bloomberg Politics (6/20), which said details of the possible trip are "still under discussion, according to a US official and a Chinese official who asked not to be identified."

Warmbier's Family Requests No Autopsy Be Performed. NBC Nightly News (6/20, story 6, 2:25, Holt) reported that the coroner's office in Ohio said Tuesday "that no autopsy will be conducted on the body of Otto Warmbier at his family's request. Only an external examination was performed with no conclusions made about the cause of death."

Media Analyses: Handel Victory Big Win For Trump, Another Setback For Democrats.

In a contest widely cast by the media as a referendum on President Trump, ex-Georgia Secretary of State Karen Handel (R) – strongly backed by the President – on Tuesday won the special election to succeed now-HHS Secretary Tom Price, defeating ex-congressional aide Jon Ossoff (D), who raised millions of dollars from Democrats across the US. With 100% of precincts reporting, Handel led Ossoff 52%-48%. Reports and analyses cast Handel's victory as a big win for Trump, a reassuring outcome for congressional Republicans, and another in a series of special-election setbacks for Democrats. On Tuesday night, Trump tweeted, "Congratulations to Karen Handel on her big win in Georgia 6th. Fantastic job, we are all very proud of you."

Shelby Holliday of the Wall Street Journal said on Fox News (6/20), "Karen Handel going to Washington is not just a win for Karen Handel. It's a huge win for the White House. Big win for Paul Ryan. In Karen Handel Republicans now have yet another House member who is fiscally conservative, who shared their conservative social values."

CNN political director David Chalian said on CNN Tonight (6/20), "This is a big victory for Republicans. ... This was the best shot Democrats in these special elections to really try to make a victory in the Trump era and they came up short, which now of course, is going to create a whole series of questions about how the Democratic party should run in the year of Donald Trump because they came up short here."

John King said on CNN Tonight (6/20), "Donald Trump picked four Republican House members to join his cabinet. At the close of business tonight, Republicans will have held all four of those seats. Only this one in Georgia was viewed as competitive. ... Democrats can say we're closer than 2016, closer than 2012, closer than last time. But close doesn't count. Democrats can say, 'Yes the climate is better for us,' but they're still not winning."

David Axelrod said on CNN Tonight (6/20), "There's no doubt that if Democrats had won this district, it would have been an earthquake on both sides of Pennsylvania Avenue. The White House would have been reeling and been faced with questions whether Trump was mentioned a lot or not down there about whether there was a referendum on him, and on the Hill...people would be very, very nervous. You'd see incumbents more serious about retiring and you'd see less of an appetite for supporting some of the Trump priorities and standing up for Trump in the Congress. They avoided that disaster, but it wasn't a stellar showing for Republicans."

Jason Johnson said on MSNBC's The Last Word (6/20) that Republicans "spent $23 million – spending like Tom Brady's salary to keep a seat that had been in Republican hands for 20 years. That's not something that you want to have to think about. if you're a Republican next year heading into 2018, knowing that the public is going to be more energized, more excited and possibly unhappy about the healthcare bill."

Fox News politics editor Chris Stirewalt said on Fox News (6/20), "The head winds that Republicans are facing are real. They shouldn't pretend they aren't facing serious challenges. ... Republicans have head winds and the President is not that popular right now. All that said, if the checkmark was on the other box, what Paul Ryan would be facing tomorrow, what Mitch McConnell would face in the Senate is revolt."

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution (6/20, Niesse) reports that in her victory speech, Handel "thanked...Trump and other prominent Republicans who supported her in the nationally watched runoff, leading to cheers of 'Trump, Trump, Trump' from the crowd at the Hyatt Regency in Dunwoody." In another report, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution (6/20, Bluestein) reports that with Handel's win, "the GOP and...Trump avoided an embarrassing defeat in the most expensive US House contest in history. ... Her victory will be cast as a win for Trump, who campaigned for Handel and hurled a string of antagonizing tweets at Ossoff. And it could buoy jittery GOP incumbents who worry that allying with Trump in competitive districts could doom them."

The New York Times (6/20, Martin, Fausset) reports that Handel "overcame a deluge of liberal money to" defeat Ossoff, "who emerged from obscurity to raise $25 million from progressives across the country eager to express their anger at Mr. Trump. That fervor quickly elevated what would otherwise have been a sleepy local race into a high-stakes referendum on Mr. Trump." Handel's "surprisingly easy" win "averted a humiliating upset for" the GOP and "showed that Republicans skeptical of Mr. Trump remain comfortable supporting more conventional candidates from their party." The Times adds, "For Democrats, the loss was demoralizing after questionable 'moral victories' in two earlier special election defeats, for House seats in conservative districts in Kansas and Montana."

The Washington Post (6/20, Costa, Kane, Viebeck) reports that Trump's "hopes of steadying his presidency and his agenda on Capitol Hill were given a lift" with Handel's win, which "will bring fresh attention to a beleaguered Democratic Party that has suffered a string of defeats in special elections this year despite an angry and engaged base of voters who dislike" the President. Her victory "may also embolden Republicans in Washington to press ahead on an ambitious policy agenda that has yielded few legislative victories since Trump's inauguration in January." The Wall Street Journal (6/20, A1, Hook, McWhirter, Epstein) reports that Handel's win illustrates that Trump still retains some political clout in the GA6.

USA Today (6/20, Collins) reports that Handel's win kept "in GOP hands a seat Democrats had hoped would be the first evidence that the party can retake control of the House." USA Today adds, "Democrats around the country poured a record-breaking $23 million for Ossoff," and the Democrat "had the support of more than 11,000 volunteers, according to his campaign, but it didn't prove to be enough." Handel "had a series of high-profile supporters such as Vice President Pence," and Trump "also fundraised on her behalf and offered his support on Twitter."

The Los Angeles Times (6/20, Halper) reports that though "the close election result is sobering for the" GOP "in a conservative district it customarily wins by double digits without much effort, the victory helps the party avert – for now – potentially much more damaging fallout for the White House and Republicans in Congress. 'It's a huge disappointment for Democrats, who really did put all their eggs in this one basket, feeling as though it was the kind of district – upscale, higher education, higher income voters that went only narrowly for Trump – that if there's any movement nationally, it should show up in this district,' said Stuart Rothenberg, a veteran nonpartisan elections analyst."

On its website, NPR (6/20, Taylor) reported that the contest "became framed by some as a referendum on Trump and his agenda, and the win may ease GOP fears – for now – that its base wouldn't stay engaged heading into the 2018 midterms." NPR added, "Democrats have so far been unable to prove that they can turn resistance against Trump – with marches and protests – into actual victories the ballot box. The Georgia race was their best shot to do that, and they fell just short." The AP (6/20, Barrow, Foody) reports that Handel's "margin allows Republicans a sigh of relief," though "the result in a historically conservative district still offers Republicans a warning that Trump, for better or worse, will dominate the looming campaign cycle."

The Washington Times (6/20, McLaughlin) reports that Handel "emerged victorious" on Tuesday, "beating back the 'Resistance' movement and defending a seat in the wealthy Atlanta suburbs that Republicans have held for nearly 40 years." The Washington Examiner (6/20, Drucker) reports that Handel's win provides "a much-needed lift to...Trump and GOP majorities in Congress." The Washington Free Beacon (6/20, Scher) reported that Ossoff "was branded by Handel as the Democratic establishment's hand-picked candidate and criticized frequently for not living in the district they were competing to represent. Ossoff was also criticized for collecting nearly 97 percent of his fundraising haul from out-of-state donors."

Writing for National Review (6/20), Dan McLaughlin said that Tuesday's outcome is "a costly and depressing victory for the Republicans, bled white defending their own turf, and a debacle for Democrats, who came home empty-handed and must be able to win districts like GA-06 if they are to take control of the House in 2018 and carry out their chief policy goal of impeaching President Trump."

In the "Right Turn" blog on the website of the Washington Post (6/20), Jennifer Rubin – a right-leaning writer who has been extremely critical of Trump – says, "The rational response is that this race does not indicate either that the Republicans are cooked in 2018 nor that they can breathe a sigh of relief and continue to cling to Trump. ... If a district rated as safely Republican in past years is now a virtual tossup, that's one sign that Republicans under Trump have an uphill climb to reach highly educated, suburban voters."

Media Analyses: GOP Successfully Turned Race Into "A Referendum On Nancy Pelosi." The Washington Examiner (6/20, Drucker) reports that Congressional Leadership Fund, a super PAC aligned with House Speaker Ryan, "had a strategy to keep" the GA6 "from slipping away: Make the contest a referendum on Nancy Pelosi." The group "rediscovered a familiar antidote to Trump's drag and Handel's standoffishness in its internal polling: Pelosi, the House minority leader from California, who would once again become speaker in a Democratic takeover. If Republicans could make...Ossoff synonymous with Pelosi liberalism, disinterested GOP voters who might otherwise skip an irregular congressional election would be motivated to show up. It worked."

Politico (6/20, Schneider) reports that the outcome was "deflating [for] Democrats who yearned for a special election rebuke to...Trump." However, Trump "is not the only unpopular politician in the country, and Republicans once again used House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi as a bogeyman in a major House race, linking Ossoff to her in TV ads, in door-to-door conversations with voters and even in the televised debates between Ossoff and Handel."

On the CNN (6/20, Cillizza) website, Chris Cillizza writes, "Everyone knew the Democratic base was ginned up beyond belief at the chance to send Trump a message about his performance in the first 150 days of his administration. The big question mark was whether the GOP base – perhaps worn down by Trump's seemingly never-ending series of self-inflicted wounds – would be equally as intense. It turns out that they were motivated – as has been the case since at least 2010 – by the idea of Ossoff as nothing more than a Pelosi henchman. Republican strategists successfully convinced GOP voters that a vote for Ossoff was a vote for values anathema to their own."

After Loss, Some Question Ossoff's "Centrist" Campaign Approach. Under the headline "Ossoff Chose Civility And It Didn't Work. How Do Democrats Beat Trump?", Paul Kane writes in an analysis for the Washington Post (6/20) that Ossoff's "decisive" loss "is sure to spark more questions about what type of candidates and what type of message Democrats need in the Trump era. The most passionate Democratic activists have wanted a full-frontal assault on Trump and congressional Republicans, angrily denouncing party leaders for not aggressively supporting other, more progressive candidates." However, "Ossoff chose the high priest route instead of the fierce warrior. It was civil disobedience rather than civil unrest. And he still lost."

Writing for the Daily Intelligencer \(NY\) (6/20, Kilgore), Ed Kilgore says, "There may be some intra-party recriminations among Democrats that Ossoff was too 'centrist,' or counted too much on swing-voter persuasion rather than mobilizing first-time voters in the district's small-but-growing minority communities. And the loss (along with another, more surprising, near miss in South Carolina tonight) means Democrats will almost certainly enter the 2018 election cycle without that satisfying mark in the W column to encourage donors and help recruit candidates."

On its website, WSB-TV Atlanta (6/20, Dupree) reported that Tuesday's outcome "left some Congressional Democrats pained, and searching for answers. 'We need a genuinely new message, a serious jobs plan that reaches all Americans, and a bigger tent not a smaller one,' said Rep. Seth Moulton (D-MA), who has tried to sharpen the election message of Democrats since coming to Congress after the 2014 election."

Writing for Vox (6/20), Matthew Yglesias says, "The fact that the district was competitive is a sign that the GOP majority is at risk" in 2018; "the question is simply what can Democrats do to put themselves over the top? One thing they might want to try is developing a substantive policy agenda to run on. They came close this time, and they'll just need to put forth an attractive package for voters in the 2018 midterms."

Ahead of the election outcome, Anthony Mason reported on the CBS Evening News (6/20, story 4, 2:15, Mason) that "Trump barely won the district in November. Now some are looking at today's vote as a referendum on him." also ahead of Tuesday's election outcome, Steve Osunsami reported on ABC World News Tonight (6/20, story 5, 2:15, Muir), "Hillary Clinton was two percent away from winning this district, so a poor showing tonight would look terrible." Under the headline "Game Over: Karen Handel Beats Jon Ossoff In Georgia Special Election," Townhall (6/20, Vespa) also reported on the election results.

Republican Norman Wins Special Election To Succeed Mulvaney.

As expected, ex-state Rep. Ralph Norman (R-SC) on Tuesday defeated tax attorney Archie Parnell (D) in the special election to succeed now-OMB Director Mulvaney. With 100% of precincts reporting, Norman led Parnell 51%-48%. The Charleston \(SC\) Post and Courier (6/20, Brown) calls Norman's victory "the first sign that Republican support in the Palmetto State is unwavering in the era of President Donald Trump." Even so, adds the Post and Courier, Parnell "still came within about 3 percentage points of beating Norman in a district that Mulvaney won by 20 percentage points in November over Democrat Fran Person, a former aide to Vice President Joe Biden."

Under the headline "Republican Aligned With Trump Wins South Carolina House Seat," the AP (6/20, Kinnard) quotes Norman as saying in an interview after his election win, "Everybody's had their differences with President Trump. He's a polarizing president, but I think a majority of the people like what he's doing." The Columbia \(SC\) State (6/20, Marchant) reports that Norman, in his victory speech, said, "I believe with (Republican President Donald) Trump in the White House, we have a great opportunity as conservatives," adding, "Washington needs leaders to help maintain the God-given right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Politico (6/20, Robillard) called the outcome "closer than expected," adding that the SC5 "swung drastically to Democrats: Mulvaney defeated...Person by 21 percentage points in November, and Trump won the district by 18 percentage points. Norman, a conservative hardliner in the state legislature who won a primary runoff against a more moderate opponent with the help of the Club for Growth, has said he would join the House Freedom Caucus if elected."

The Huffington Post (6/20, Marans) reported that Norman "campaigning heavily on his commitment to helping Trump enact his agenda, including the repeal of Obamacare. He has also embraced raising the Social Security retirement age and, following last week's shooting of House Majority Whip Steve Scalise and others at a baseball field, said he believes more members of Congress should carry guns." HuffPost added that Trump "recorded a robocall for Norman over the weekend and tweeted his support for the GOP candidate on Monday." Roll Call (6/20, Pathé) reported that Norman "has fully embraced Trump, saying in a Saturday morning interview that the president is still popular in the district."

On its website, Fox News (6/20) reported that the SC5 contest "garnered far less national attention than Tuesday's other special election" in the GA6, though "national surrogates found time to stump for both candidates, as Texas Sen. Ted Cruz and former South Carolina Sen. Jim DeMint campaigned with Norman. Democratic National Committee Chairman Tom Perez made the rounds for Parnell." The Daily Caller (6/20, Stucky) reported that Norman "was widely expected to win." The Wall Street Journal (6/20, Epstein) also reports on Norman's victory.

NYTimes Analysis: Trump Moves To Roll Back Obama's Labor Legacy.

In what the New York Times (6/20, Scheiber) casts as "a major step to alter the direction of federal labor policy," President Trump is "positioning the National Labor Relations Board to overturn a series of high-profile Obama-era decisions" by "filling two vacant seats and swinging the board from Democratic to Republican control." Doing so would enable Trump to reverse several Obama-era actions. On Monday, "the White House announced the nomination of Marvin Kaplan, a lawyer serving on a federal health and safety commission, to one of two vacant seats on the board," and "a second nomination is expected shortly." While supporters "said the nominations would restore a state of normality to the agency," critics "expressed concern that the nominations would undermine the labor rights of the rising proportion of the work force that is nonunionized, in addition to those who are union members."

Thune: Plan To Privatize Air Traffic Controllers Doesn't Have Enough Committee Votes.

The Washington Examiner (6/20, Siegel) reports that Senate Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee Chairman Sen. John Thune told reporters Tuesday that his committee does not have "the votes necessary to advance a plan by President Trump to privatize the country's air traffic control system." Arguing "that the House will have to take the lead on Trump's air traffic proposal if it is to proceed successfully," Thune said, "No, we don't have the votes to pass that in our committee at the moment. ... We'll see what the House is able to do and we'll proceed accordingly. But if that issue were to get addressed, it would probably have to be on the floor in conference."

NYTimes A1 Analysis: Climate Change Likely To Increase Disruptions To Air Travel.

The New York Times (6/20, A1, Wichter) reports that as the global climate changes, disruptions to air travel "are likely to become more frequent, researchers say, potentially making air travel costlier and less predictable with a greater risk of injury to travelers from increased turbulence." For instance, American Airlines recently has been forced to cancel more than 40 flights in Phoenix because of high temperatures that make takeoff impossible due to thinner air. According to airline industry analysis firm R. W. Mann & Company President Robert Mann, though airlines are working to increase their efficiency, their efforts to prepare for the long-term effects of climate change are as of yet insufficient. The Times says that since there's so little data available regarding how climate change affects aviation and so many factors at play, "it can be hard to attribute any one service disruption to global warming."

Cities, States Take On Brunt Of Climate Responsibility.

Bloomberg BNA (6/19, Silverman) reports that some US states and cities are taking on the mantle of combating climate change from the federal government after President Trump announced his decision to withdraw the U.S. from the Paris climate agreement. The Democratic governors from New York, California and Washington have already “formed an alliance of states that plan to meet the pact’s goals.” In addition, “nine other states have joined the U.S. Climate Alliance and more than 1,200 cities, businesses, and colleges formed a separate group called We Are Still In.” Vicki Arroyo, executive director of the Georgetown Climate Center at Georgetown University Law Center, argues that cities and states are eager to act because “they are on the front lines when it comes to the impact and costs of climate change and extreme weather events.”

In an “Editorial-Observer” column in the New York Times (6/20, Thompson), Vikas Bajaj and Stuart A. Thompson write that while there is “no replacing the federal role in setting the larger climate agenda, without which the country is unlikely to meet more ambitious targets,” states and cities should still continue to “fight for sensible climate policy in the absence of a sensible president.”

In an op-ed in USA Today, (6/20, Waxman) Henry Waxman, former Democratic congressman from California, argues that the private sector may have the best opportunities to address climate change now that the federal government is pulling back from its role. He describes various climate-friendly actions taken by industry behemoths, and attributes them to “strong, concerted pressure by groups like Greenpeace.”

Majority Of Americans Oppose Withdrawal From Paris Climate Agreement. The AP (6/20, Biesecker, Swanson) reports that “less than one-third of Americans” support President Trump’s decision to withdraw from the Paris climate agreement, according to a survey conducted by the Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Researcher. Moreover, 52 percent of Americans “worry that withdrawing will actually hurt the economy.”

UN Chief Warns That US Disengagement Will Have Consequences. The Wall Street Journal (6/20, Fassihi) reports that during his first news conference as Secretary-General of the United Nations, António Guterres warned that other actors will fill the space left by the United States as it continues to disengage from global issues, including climate change and other aspects of foreign policy.

EPA Notifies BOSC Members Their Terms Won’t Be Renewed.

The Washington Post (6/20, Mooney, Eilperin) reports that the EPA has notified that their membership on the EPA’s Board of Scientific Counselors will not be renewed when they end in August. The Post adds that “five meetings of subcommittees of the board, planned for the late summer and the fall, will now be canceled because of lack of membership.” The Post says the move continues “a scientific shake-up that has already triggered resignations and charges from some researchers that the administration is politicizing the agency.”

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

“The Health Care Of Millions Depends On A Few Senators.” In an editorial, the New York Times (6/21, Board) criticizes both Senate and House versions of the new healthcare bill for having “a callous disregard for the health care of millions of people plus a kind of frantic wish to pass something, no matter how destructive and poorly thought out, that lets President Trump and other Republicans claim that they have repealed Obamacare.” The Times outlines provisions in the bill that it says are particularly harmful to constituents in Republican senators’ states, and urges Republican senators to “defy their party and fight for their constituents” by opposing the bill.

“More Doubts Are Raised Over Mrs. May’s Leadership.” A New York Times (6/20, Board) editorial says after “two terrible weeks,” British Prime Minister Theresa May’s political credibility “was further eroded” by her “slow and seemingly uncaring response” to the Grenfell Tower fire that killed at least 79 people. May is now “severely handicapped as she opens formal talks on Brexit with the European Union this week,” the Times says, but “she cannot hope to gain the political credibility she needs for a successful Brexit negotiation without simultaneously pursuing a domestic agenda that addresses Britain’s domestic inequalities.”

“Tired Of The Suspense On Mayoral Control Of Schools.” In an editorial, the New York Times (6/21, Board) says the issue of whether to extend mayoral control over a school system “is not a standard left-vs.-right issue," and even many conservative state lawmakers agree a mayor "must have control for the sake of stability and efficacy." In New York, however, state Republican Sen. John Flanagan has hinged support for mayoral control over New York City public schools on Mayor Bill de Blasio's agreement to increase the "number of charter schools the city will allow." The Times stresses that the least favorable outcome is reverting "to the old system, with policies set by 32 community school districts whose earlier incarnations were distinguished by cronyism and corruption more than by pedagogical excellence."

Washington Post.

"Children Are Dying Because Of America's Lax Gun Control Policies." In an editorial, the Washington Post (6/20) writes that a report published Monday in the journal Pediatrics lays out "grim numbers" on gun fatalities: almost 1,300 children are killed annually by gunshot wounds, and about 6,000 are wounded. This amounts to more than three children killed daily and more than 15 wounded. The Post says "so commonplace are bloody weekends" such as the one that preceded the report's release that gun-related deaths are the third-leading cause overall of child fatalities. Citing the report's emphasis on the importance of safely storing guns to prevent shootings – unintentional and intentional – the Post says lawmakers should enact storage standards despite the NRA's "lunacy."

"The Supreme Court Has A Chance To Rein In Partisan Gerrymandering." In an editorial, the Washington Post (6/20) says the Supreme Court will "hear a challenge to one of the most egregious examples of partisan mapmaking, raising hopes that, after two centuries, the justices may find their way to setting some limits on this increasingly corrupt practice." The Post opines that "if the court were to quash Wisconsin's legislative map, it would deter future bad behavior by putting statehouses across the country on notice: Don't go too far in rigging the system." However, the Post says that it will be difficult for judges to distinguish between "acceptable and excessive politicization" and "redistricting, a power assigned to the legislative branch, could effectively become a judicial enterprise." Meanwhile, according to the Post, if the court declines to strike down the Wisconsin map, "the political battle to curb gerrymandering must continue, steeply uphill though it may be."

"Will The Trump Administration Send Iraqi Minorities Home – And Into Danger?" In an editorial, the Washington Post (6/20) calls the deportation of Iraqi Christians "morally reprehensible" and a violation the UN Convention Against Torture, which "prohibits the return of a person to a country where patterns of mass human rights violations provide substantial grounds for believing they may be tortured." In the Post's view, the "potential harm is real enough at least to warrant a case-by-case review."

Wall Street Journal.

"Trump To Cordray: You're Not Fired." An editorial in the Wall Street Journal (6/20) urges President Trump to fire Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) director Richard Cordray.

"Free Speech For Sex Offenders." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (6/20) says that to praise the Supreme Court's unanimous decision in Packingham v. North Carolina, in which the court ruled that the First Amendment preserves the right of sex offenders to use social media. The Journal says that while the Internet poses new challenges, the court's decision shows that Constitutional rights apply regardless of the platform.

"The Illinois Capitulation." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (6/20) writes that Illinois Gov. Bruce Rauner's announcement last night that the state would raise income taxes from 3.75 percent to 4.95 percent in order to end a multi-year budget impasse with Democrats amounts to a political defeat. Rauner campaigned on lowering the income tax to three percent. Rauner also proposed last night to freeze property taxes – a move that could provide some election contrast with Democrats – in order to reduce the state's backlog of unpaid bills by $4 billion. The Journal says the root problem of Rauner's proposal is that it includes next to none of the reforms the state needs to remain competitive with neighboring states and rehabilitate its fiscal health.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Oil Returns To Bear Market

GOP's Karen Handel Beats Democrat Jon Ossoff In Georgia House Race
How To Survive The Retail Crisis: A Master Class From TJ Maxx
Ford's Plan To Import Cars Veers From Mexico To China

New York Times:

China Falls Short On Curbing North Korea, Trump Says
Karen Handel Wins Georgia Special Election, Fending Off Upstart Democrat
Haven For Recovering Addicts Now Profits From Their Relapses
GOP Rift Over Medicaid And Opioids Imperils Senate Health Bill
Despite Concerns About Blackmail, Flynn Heard CIA Secrets
Too Hot To Fly? Climate Change May Take A Toll On Air Travel

Washington Post:

McConnell To Roll Out Rewrite Of Health Law
A Trump Conflict In Proposed HUD Cuts
In Slice Of Midwest, Labor Shortage Weighs On Economy
Hundreds Of Americans Visit N. Korea Each Year Despite Warnings
GOP Retains House Seat

Financial Times:

Barclays And Former Executives Charged With Fraud
José Mourinho Accused Of €3.3m Spanish Tax Fraud
Merkel Picks Up The Flag To Face Right-wing Challenge
French Defence Minister Goulard Resigns As Party Investigated

Washington Times:

Isolated From Washington Establishment, Trump Struggles For Presidential Victories
Republican Handel Wins Runoff For Georgia Seat In House
Iran Gets North Korean Expertise In Building Up, Testing And Hiding Its Ballistic Missiles
Christians With 'Grave Concern' About Persecution Fight Deportations Of Iraqi Criminals In U.S.
Brexit Puts Gibraltar's U.K. Subjects Between 'The Rock' And Hard Places
Former DHS Chief Jeh Johnson To Testify About Putin's Meddling, Obama's Validity In Ending It

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Brussels Terror Attack; United-Flight Turbulence; Severe Weather; Weather Forecast; Georgia-House Special Election; Minnesota Police Violence; US-Russia Jet Fly-By; Released Detainee Dies; Healthcare Reform Bill; New York City-Worker Accident; OJ Simpson Parole Hearing; Breast Cancer Risk; Vitamin Pills Overdose; Girl Singer.

CBS: Severe Weather-Heat; Severe Weather-Storms; Brussels Terror Attack; Georgia-House Special Election; Trump Presidency-Public Opinion; Healthcare Reform Bill; White House-Transparency; South Korean President Interview; Minnesota Police Violence; Portugal-Wildfire; United-Flight Turbulence; Grizzly Bear-Product Test.

NBC: Healthcare Reform Bill; Weather Forecast; Severe Weather; United-Flight Turbulence; Brussels Terror Attack; US-North Korea Relations; US-Russia Jet Fly-By; Georgia-House Special Election; OJ Simpson Parole Hearing; Opioid Epidemic; Singing Janitor; South Korean Zoo-Baby Elephant.

Network TV At A Glance:

Weather – 9 minutes, 20 seconds
Healthcare Reform Bill – 7 minutes, 15 seconds
Georgia-House Special Election – 5 minutes
Brussels Terror Attack – 4 minutes, 5 seconds
US-Russia Jet Fly-By – 3 minutes, 35 seconds
United-Flight Turbulence – 3 minutes, 5 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Georgia-House Special Election; Healthcare Reform Bill; Brussels Terror Attack; Severe Weather.

CBS: Georgia-House Special Election; South Carolina-House Special Election; US-North Korea Relations; Severe Weather; OJ Simpson Parole Hearing; Wall Street News.

FOX: Georgia-House Special Election; Brussels Terror Attack; Severe Weather.

NPR: Georgia-House Special Election; Trump-Texas Sanctuary Cities Law; Minnesota Police Violence.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Participates in a Make America Great Again Rally.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Delivers remarks at the US Department of Justice National Summit on Crime Reduction and Public Safety; participates in a call with Turkish Cypriot leader Mustafa Akinci.

US Senate: 9:00 AM Senate Armed Services subcommittee hearing on U.S. Navy shipbuilding programs – Seapower Subcommittee hearing on 'Navy Shipbuilding Programs', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Research, Development, and Acquisition Allison Stiller; Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Integration of Capabilities and Resources (N8) Vice Adm. William Lescher; and U.S. Marine Corps Deputy Commandant for Combat Development and Integration, Marine Corps Combat Development Command Commanding General, and U.S. Marine Forces Strategic Command Commander Lt. Gen. Robert Walsh Location: Rm 232A, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://armed-services.senate.gov/>

9:30 AM Interior Secretary Zinke testifies to Senate Appropriations subcommittee on FY'18 budget – Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies Subcommittee hearing 'To review the FY2018 budget request for the U.S. Department of the Interior', with testimony from Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke, and Deputy Assistant Secretary for Budget, Finance, Performance, and Acquisition Olivia Barton Ferriter; and Department of the Interior Office of Budget Director Denise Flanagan Location: Rm 124, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

9:30 AM Senate Intelligence Committee hearing on 'Russian interference in the 2016 U.S. elections' – Hearing on 'Russian Interference in the 2016 U.S. elections', with testimony from Department of Homeland Security Office of Intelligence and Analysis Cyber Division Acting Director Dr Sam Liles, and National Protection and Programs Directorate Office of Cyber and Infrastructure Analysis Director Brandon Wales; FBI Counterintelligence Division Assistant Director Bill Priestap; National Association of State Election Directors Midwest Regional Representative Michael Haas; University of Michigan Professor of Computer Science & Engineering Dr J. Alex Halderman; and Illinois State Board of Elections Executive Director Steve Sandvoss Location: Rm 216, Hart Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.senate.gov>

10:00 AM Senate Transportation Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers David Pekoske to be Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security for the Transportation Security Administration Location: Rm 253, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on gangs – Hearing on 'The MS-13 Problem: Investigating Gang Membership, its Nexus to Illegal Immigration, and Federal Efforts to End the Threat', with testimony from Customs and Border Protection U.S. Border Patrol Acting Chief Carla Provost; Department of Health and Human Services Office of Refugee Resettlement Director Scott Lloyd; Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division Kenneth Blanco; and Immigration and Customs Enforcement Executive Associate Director of Enforcement and Removal Operations Matthew Albence, and Homeland Security Investigations Acting Executive Associate Director Derek Benner Location: Rm 226, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee Business Meeting – Business Meeting, to consider nominations of Russell Vought to be Office of Management and Budget Deputy Director; and Neomi Rao to be OMB Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs Administrator Location: Rm 342, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

10:15 AM USTR Lighthizer testifies to Senate Finance Committee on FY'18 budget – Hearing on 'The President's Trade Policy Agenda and Fiscal Year 2018 Budget', with testimony from U.S. Trade Representative Amb. Robert Lighthizer Location: Rm 215, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://finance.senate.gov>

10:30 AM Senate Homeland Security Committee hearing on 'cybersecurity regulation harmonization' – Hearing on 'Cybersecurity Regulation Harmonization', with testimony from BITS/Financial Services Roundtable President Christopher Feeney; Information Technology Industry Council President and CEO Dean Garfield; Health Information Trust Alliance founder and

CEO Daniel Nutkis; and Oklahoma Office of Management and Enterprise Services CIO Bo Reese
Location: Rm 342, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

10:30 AM Senate Appropriations subcommittee hearing on FY'18 U.S. Air Force budget –
Defense Subcommittee hearing on 'Review of the FY2018 Budget Request for the U.S. Air Force', with testimony from Secretary of the Air Force Heather Wilson; and U.S. Air Force Chief of Staff
Gen. David Goldfein Location: Rm 192, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

11:00 AM Senate Foreign Relations Committee closed briefing on the 2017 Trafficking in Persons Report – Closed briefing on 'Preparing for the 2017 Trafficking In Persons Report', given by State Department Office to Monitor and Combat Trafficking in Persons Ambassador-at-Large Amb. Susan Coppedge Location: S-116, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

11:00 AM Senators Join Advocates, Kids in Superhero Costumes in "Save Our Health Care"
Action on Capitol Hill – Senator Chuck Schumer (D-NY), Senator Debbie Stabenow (D-MI),
Senator Ron Wyden (D-OR), Senator Al Franken (D-MN), Senator Maggie Hassan (D-NH), Senator Sheldon Whitehouse (D-RI), and Senator Chris Murphy (D-CT) will join with a coalition of progressive organizations, health care advocates, and parents and kids dressed in superhero costumes, for a speak out on Capitol Hill opposing the repeal of the Affordable Care Act and its replacement with the Republican plan. For more information:

<https://www.facebook.com/events/1490776790966115/> Contacts: Madison Donzis; madison@unbendablemedia.com, (210) 488-6220; Brett Abrams, brett@unbendablemedia.com, (516) 841-1105. Location: East Lawn of the U.S. Capitol Building, by the Senate steps.

12:15 PM Dem Sens. Jack Reed and Sherrod Brown introduce Military Consumer
Enforcement Act – Democratic Sens. Jack Reed and Sherrod Brown introduce Military Consumer Enforcement Act, which would 'empower the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau to oversee and enforce compliance with certain existing provisions of the Servicemember Civil Relief Act', via teleconference briefing with former CFPB Office of Servicemember Affairs Assistant Director Holly
Petraeus and Ret. Air Force Chief Master Sgt. James Cody Location: TBD <http://reed.senate.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/SenJackReed>

2:30 PM Energy Secretary Perry testifies to Senate Appropriations subcommittee on FY'18 budget – Energy and Water Development Subcommittee hearing on 'Review of the FY2018 Budget Request for the U.S. Department of Energy', with testimony from Secretary of Energy
Rick Perry Location: Rm 138, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

2:30 PM VA Secretary McDonald testifies to Senate Appropriations subcommittee on FY'18 and FY'19 budgets – Military Construction, Veterans Affairs, and Related Agencies Subcommittee hearing on 'Review of the FY2018 Budget Request for the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs', with testimony from Secretary of Veterans Affairs David Shulkin; Veterans Health Administration Acting Under Secretary Dr Poonam Alaigh; Veterans Benefits Administration Acting Under Secretary Thomas Murphy; and National Cemetery Administration Interim Under Secretary for Memorial Affairs Ronald Walters Location: Rm 124, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

2:30 PM Senate Transportation subcommittee hearing on commercial space / U.S. Govt partnership – Space, Science, and Competitiveness Subcommittee hearing on 'Reopening the American Frontier: Promoting Partnerships Between Commercial Space and the U.S. Government to Advance Exploration and Settlement', with testimony from NASA Kennedy Space Center Director Robert Cabana; Relativity co-founder and CEO Tim Ellis; University of Texas at Austin
Cockell School of Engineering Associate Professor of Aerospace Engineering and Engineering
Mechanics Dr Moriba Jah; Nanoracks CEO Jeffrey Manber; SpaceX President and COO Gwynne
Shotwell Location: Rm 253, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://commerce.senate.gov>

3:00 PM Senate Appropriations subcommittee hearing on GAO and CBO FY'18 budgets –
Legislative Branch Subcommittee hearing on 'Review of the FY2018 Budget Requests for the GAO
& CBO', with testimony from U.S. Comptroller General Gene Dodaro; and Congressional Budget
Office Director Dr Keith Hall Location: Rm 192, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

3:30 PM Senate Dems hold hearing on 'ways the GOP health care bill would devastate rural America' – Democratic Policy and Communications Committee Chair Debbie Stabenow and fellow Democratic Sens. Bill Nelson, Al Franken, Joe Manchin, Tammy Baldwin, Elizabeth Warren, Heidi
Heitkamp, Maggie Hassan, and Catherine Cortez-Masto hold hearing on 'America Speaks Out:
How the Republican Health Care Bill Would Devastate Rural America', featuring witnesses Uplift

Executive Director Heidi Mansir, University of Alaska-Anchorage student Moira Pyhala, Community Health Alliance CEO Chuck Duarte, former West Virginia State Rep. Denise Campbell, Community Hospitals and Wellness Centers (CHWC) President and CEO Phil Ennen, Marshfield Clinic Health System Chief Medical Officer Dr Mark LePage, and National Farmers Union President Roger Johnson Location: SVC 203, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC dpcc.senate.gov

US House: 10:00 AM Former DHS Secretary Jeh Johnson testifies to House Intelligence Committee task force as part of Russia investigation – House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence Russia Investigative Task Force hearing, with testimony from former Secretary of Homeland Security Jeh Johnson Location: HVC-210, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseIntelComm>

10:00 AM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Egyptian-American Enterprise Fund and Tunisian-American Enterprise Fund – Middle East and North Africa Subcommittee hearing on 'Grading the Egyptian and Tunisian Enterprise Funds', with testimony from Egyptian-American Enterprise Fund Chairman James Harmon; and Tunisian-American Enterprise Fund Chairman Bowman Cutter Location: Rm 2172, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACrepublicans>

10:00 AM House Financial Services Committee markup hearing continues – Markup hearing continues on 'H.R. 1422, the Flood Insurance Market Parity and Modernization Act', 'H.R. 1558, the Repeatedly Flooded Communities Preparation Act', 'H.R. 2246, the Taxpayer Exposure Mitigation Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2565, To require the use of replacement cost value in determining the premium for flood insurance coverage under the National Flood Insurance Act, and for other purposes', and 'H.R. 2875, the National Flood Insurance Program Administrative Reform Act of 2017' * Begun 15 Jun Location: Rm 2128, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Energy and Mineral Resources Subcommittee legislative hearing on a discussion draft of 'Helium Extraction Act of 2017', with testimony from University of California-Los Angeles Department of Physics and Astronomy Professor Dr Stuart Brown; Tacitus Ventures Corporation (Canada) President Jason Demers; Air Products Helium Vice President and General Manager Walter Nelson; and Bureau of Land Management Senior Advisor for Minerals and Realty Management Tim Spisak Location: Rm 1324, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM House Technology subcommittee hearing on advances in environmental technologies – Environment Subcommittee hearing on 'Leading the Way: Examining Advances in Environmental Technologies', with testimony from Saildrone COO Sebastien De Halleux; Panasonic Avionics Chief Atmospheric Scientist Dr Neil Jacobs; and Oregon State University College of Earth, Ocean and Atmospheric Sciences Professor in Ocean Ecology and Biogeochemistry Dr Burke Hales Location: Rm 2318, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on broadband coverage in the U.S. – Communications and Technology Subcommittee hearing on 'Defining and Mapping Broadband Coverage in America', with testimony from Information Technology & Innovation Foundation Senior Telecommunications Policy Analyst Doug Brake; Mosaik CEO Bryan Darr; Connected Nation Vice President of Government Affairs Brent Legg; Matthey Consulting Principal Carol Matthey; and Westminster, MD, City Council President Dr Robert Wack Location: Rm 2123, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Judiciary Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H.R. 495, Protection of Children Act', 'H.R. 2826, Refugee Program Integrity Restoration Act', and 'H.R. 1096, Judgment Fund Transparency Act' Location: Rm 2141, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee hearing on the Trade Promotion Coordinating Committee – Hearing on 'Partners in Commerce: The Trade Promotion Coordinating Committee', with testimony from International Trade Administration Trade Promotion Coordinating Committee Director Patrick Kirwan; Small Business Administration Associate Administrator for International Trade Peter Cazamias; and Missouri Department of Economic Development International Trade and Investment Office Manager Ann Pardalos Location: Rm 2360, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

12:00 PM House debates Electricity Reliability and Forest Protection Act – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda including 'H.R. 1873 – Electricity Reliability and Forest Protection Act' Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

12:30 PM Congressional Pollinator Protection Caucus co-hosts briefing on pollinator health and conservation – Congressional Pollinator Protection Caucus (co-chaired by bipartisan Reps. Alcee Hastings and Jeff Denham), in cooperation with the Pollinator Partnership and the American Society of Landscape Architects, hosts briefing on the status of pollinator health and conservation actions. Panel features American Beekeeping Federation President Gene Brandi, Organization for Bat Conservation Executive Director Rob Mies, U.S. Geological Survey Associate Director for Ecosystems Anne Kinsinger, and Federal Highway Administration Office of Project Development & Environmental Review Environmental Protection Specialist/Research Coordinator Deirdre Remley Location: Rm 340, Cannon House Office Bldg, Washington, DC www.alceehastings.house.gov <https://twitter.com/RepHastingsFL>

2:00 PM POSTPONED: House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on 'monetary policy v. fiscal policy' – POSTPONED: Monetary Policy and Trade Subcommittee hearing on 'Monetary Policy v. Fiscal Policy: Risks to Price Stability and the Economy' Location: Rm 2128, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

2:00 PM House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on OMB budget – Financial Services and General Government Subcommittee 'Office of Management and Budget – Budget Hearing', with testimony from OMB Director Mick Mulvaney Location: Rm 2359, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

2:00 PM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Indian, Insular and Alaska Native Affairs Subcommittee legislative hearing on 'H.R. 2662 Restoring Accountability in the Indian Health Service Act of 2017', with testimony from Republican Rep. Kristi Noem; Indian Health Service Acting Director Rear Adm. Chris Buchanan; Rosebud Sioux Tribal Health Board Chairman William Bear Shield; Confederated Tribes of the Colville Reservation Business Council Member Andy Joseph; Ho-Chunk Nation Legislature District 5 Representative Robert TwoBears; and National Indian Health Board Great Plains Area Representative Victoria Kitcheyan Location: Rm 1324, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

2:30 PM Emerging Threats and Capabilities Subcommittee markup hearing on '2018 National Defense Authorization Act' Location: Rm 2212, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC www.armedservices.house.gov <https://twitter.com/HASCRpublicans>

3:00 PM House Rules Committee hearing – Hearing on 'H.R. 2842, the Accelerating Individuals into the Workforce Act' Location: H-313, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://www.rules.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/RulesReps>

3:00 PM House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on FBI budget – Commerce, Justice, Science, and Related Agencies Subcommittee 'Federal Bureau of Investigation – Budget Hearing', with testimony from FBI Acting Director Andrew McCabe Location: Rm 2358-C, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

3:30 PM GOP Rep. John Duncan discusses medical professionals crossing state lines to help the needy – Republican Rep. John Duncan talks about 'the need for more states to allow medical professionals to volunteer their health care services across state lines to the nation's neediest,' via press conference Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC www.duncan.house.gov <https://twitter.com/RepJohnDuncanJr>

4:00 PM Tactical Air and Land Forces Subcommittee markup hearing on '2018 National Defense Authorization Act' Location: Rm 2118, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC www.armedservices.house.gov <https://twitter.com/HASCRpublicans>

Other: 7:45 AM National Association of Manufacturers Annual Manufacturing Summit continues – National Association of Manufacturers Annual Manufacturing Summit. Day two speakers include Secretary of Labor Alexander Acosta and House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy * Agenda also includes Congressional office visits Location: Grand Hyatt Washington DC, 1000 H St NW, Washington, DC <http://www.nam.org> <https://twitter.com/ShopFloorNAM>

8:00 AM Colorado Capital Conference – Colorado Capital Conference, hosted by bipartisan Sens. Cory Gardner and Michael Bennet, Colorado Mesa University and the University of Colorado to provide residents across Colorado a better understanding of the federal legislative process Location: Washington, DC www.cu.edu <https://twitter.com/CUSystem>

9:00 AM The Washington Post hosts 'Addiction in America' forum – The Washington Post hosts 'Addiction in America' forum, examining the roots of the country's opioid crisis and solutions for combating addiction in America, including the role of doctors in managing patients' pain. Speakers include Democrats Sen. Ed Markey and Rep. Diana DeGette, Republican Rep. Greg Walden, Brandeis University Heller School for Social Policy and Management Opioid Policy

Research Co-Director Dr Andrew Kolodny, Baltimore City Commissioner of Health Dr Leana Wen, former Rep. Patrick Kennedy, and PhRMA Vice President of Research and Policy Anne Pritchett
Location: The Washington Post Live Center, 1301 K St., NW, Washington, DC
<http://www.washingtonpost.com/> <https://twitter.com/washingtonpost>

1:00 PM GOP Rep. Blaine Luetkemeyer speaks at FSR on financial regulation – Financial Services Roundtable discussion on ‘Financial Regulation: What to Expect from the Trump Administration and Congress’, with remarks from Republican Rep. Blaine Luetkemeyer, Counselor to the Treasury Secretary Craig Phillips and FSR CEO Tim Pawlenty, and panel discussion on the ‘CHOICE Act’ and next steps on the regulatory horizon with Citi’s Julie Bell Lindsay, Patomak Global Partners’ Paul Atkins, and American Action Forum’s Douglas Holtz-Eakin Location: FSR, 600 13th St. NW, Washington, DC www.fsround.org <https://twitter.com/fsroundtable>

7:00 PM Annual Congressional Women’s Softball Game – Ninth Annual Congressional Women’s Softball Game: Members of Congress vs. the Washington, DC Press Corps (aka the Bad News Babes), raising funds for Young Survival Coalition – an organization dedicated to issues unique to young women who are diagnosed with breast cancer. Members of Congress team features Sens. Shelley Moore Capito, Kirsten Gillibrand, and Catherine Cortez Masto, and Reps. Cheri Bustos, Kathy Castor, Mia Love, Michelle Lujan Grisham, Kathleen Rice, Martha Roby, Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, Debbie Wasserman Schultz, Nanette Diaz Barragan, Lisa Blunt Rochester, Stephanie Murphy, Claudia Tenney, and Norma Torres plus coach Rep. Ed Perlmutter, with the Bad News Babes team containing representatives from the Huffington Post, New York Times, Roll Call, NBC News, ‘PBS NewsHour’, MSNBC, NPR, Texas Tribune, POLITICO, Chicago Sun Times, Vice, Cook Political Report, LA Times, ABC News, Real Clear Politics, and CNN Location: Watkins Recreational Center, 420 12th St SE, Washington, DC <http://www.congwomensoftball.org/> <https://twitter.com/CWSSoftballGame>

Mortgage Bankers Association National Advocacy Conference continues – Mortgage Bankers Association National Advocacy Conference continues, including keynote address by House Committee on Financial Services Rep. Jeb Hensarling Location: Grand Hyatt Washington, 1000 H Street Northwest, Washington, DC <http://www.mbaa.org> <https://twitter.com/MBAMortgage>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: “White House press secretary Sean Spicer might soon be moving to another job in the Administration. He’s reportedly in the process of interviewing his own replacements. They’re looking for someone who’s cool under pressure, well-briefed on policy, and can keep a straight face when saying, ‘Yes, the gentleman from Infowars.’”

Stephen Colbert: “At yesterday’s press briefing, not only didn’t Spicer not allow cameras, he also prohibited audio recordings. It’s a big change from his usual press briefings, where only information is prohibited.”

Stephen Colbert: “Supposedly, Spicer isn’t actually being fired. He’s being promoted to White House communications director, which means he’s ‘leading search for his own replacement.’”

James Corden: “On Monday, Donald Trump met with the President of Panama and bragged that the US built the Panama Canal. ... Trump’s bringing up a project from 100 years ago like he had something to do with it. So I guess if he never builds his border wall, he can always take credit for the one in China.”

Trevor Noah: “Bernie! I miss his passion! He’s so passionate about everything. Bring that bill out! He probably says that in restaurants all the time. Bring that bill out! Stop being a coward and bring out that bill!”

Jimmy Fallon: “The White House is reportedly taking Sean Spicer off of all press briefings and moving him to a more senior role focused on strategy, which I think is the political version of saying someone’s moving to a farm upstate.”

Jimmy Fallon: “[White House aide Steve] Bannon said this. He said because, quote, ‘Sean got fatter.’ You know you’re in bad shape when Steve Bannon thinks you let yourself go.”

Jimmy Fallon: "When asked if he feels good about the case, Trump's lawyer's lawyer said, 'Talk to my lawyer.'"

Jimmy Fallon: "Ivanka Trump met with Republican senators today to talk about paid family leave. The senators were like, 'We'll totally pay for your family to leave. How much you want? We're in.'"

Seth Meyers: "Qatar Airways, today, was named airline of the year at the Paris Air Show while United was named heavyweight champion by the WWE."

Seth Meyers: "It was alleged yesterday that former National Security Adviser Michael Flynn failed to report a trip he took to Saudi Arabia to pursue a joint US-Russian business venture. How many trips did Michael Flynn take? He's like the Anthony Bourdain of treason."

Conan O'Brien: "Trump adviser Steve Bannon told reporters yesterday that the White House has been doing fewer press briefings because Sean Spicer got fatter. That's what Bannon said. Bannon then went home to his mirror-less house."

Conan O'Brien: "There is a rumor that the White House will find a new place for Press Secretary Sean Spicer, a new place. All they told Spicer was it's on a big farm upstate where you can run and play with all the other press secretaries."

Conan O'Brien: "A new study just came out and it found that after a few months of Donald Trump, most Americans now have a favorable view of President George W. Bush. When reached for comment, the ghost of Richard Nixon said, 'Here I come, baby!'"

Conan O'Brien: "The US experienced a series of internet outages all across the US. Things got so bad, we momentarily surpassed China in productivity."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, May 24, 2017
Date: Wednesday, May 24, 2017 7:00:03 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, MAY 24, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- New York Times: Trump Budget Would Focus Interior On Energy Extraction, Reduce Climate Research.
- Gardnerville (NV) Record Courier: Secretary Zinke Praises Progress On Reducing Violent Crime In Indian Country.
- U.S. News & World Report: 30,000 Comments Submitted On Monument Designations.
- Washington Times: Two Republican Lawmakers Ask Trump To Leave Canyons of The Ancients National Monument Intact.
- Gloucester (MA) Times: Massachusetts' Top Environmental Official Hopes For Northeast Marine Monument Modifications.

- Huffington Post: Secretary Zinke Discussed Border Wall With Right-Wing Journalist.
- Santa Rosa (CA) Press Democrat: Trump Administration Urged To Leave National Monuments Alone.
- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Utah's Senators Take Different Stances On Bears Ears.
- Bangor (ME) Daily News: Editorial: Maine Gov. LePage Refuses To See Benefits Of Monument.

America's Great Outdoors

National Park Service

- U.S. News & World Report: Deadline Looms For Route 66 Corridor Preservation Program.
- Newport News (VA) Daily Press: Fort Monroe Transfer To Be Completed Soon.
- U.S. News & World Report: New River Gorge Offering Free Water Safety Instruction.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- U.S. News & World Report: Maine Senators Support Plan To Ease Sea Urchin Shipping Burden.
- Atlanta Journal-Constitution: Okefenokee Fire To Keep Memorial Day Crowds Away.
- Monroe (MI) Evening News: Bald Eagle Numbers Soaring In Southeast Michigan.
- Monroe (MI) Evening News: No Eaglets Found In Nests Near Fermi 2 Plant.
- Forbes: Additional Coverage: Oil Company Takes Measures To Protect Pregnant Polar Bear.

Bureau Of Land Management

- St. George (UT) Spectrum: Bill Would Revive Roadway Plans Through Tortoise Habitat.
- Las Vegas Review-Journal: Defense Cost In Bunkerville Standoff Case Over $1M.
- Idaho Statesman: Judge Finds Teen's Firework Caused Table Rock Fire.
- Arizona Daily Sun: New Report Details How Southern Arizona Wildfire Started.
- U.S. News & World Report: Additional Coverage: BLM Investigating Fire That Damaged Guard Station In Bears Ears.

US Geological Survey

- New York Times: Glacier National Park Losing Its Glaciers.
- Wildfire Today: USGS To Study Fuel Break Effects On Wildfires, Sage-grouse.
- Union of Concerned Scientists: Additional Coverage: USGS Removes Climate Change Language From News Release.
- Government Technology: Additional Coverage: California Likely To Roll Out Earthquake Warning System Next Year.

Securing America's Energy Future

Offshore Energy Development

- ClimateWire: Environmental Groups Send Letter To Secretary Zinke Against Offshore Drilling.
- U.S. News & World Report: Angelle Resigns From Louisiana Public Service Commission.

Onshore Energy Development

- Charleston (WV) Gazette-Mail: Environmental Groups Hope Study Leads To End Of Mountaintop Removal Mining.
- Wall Street Journal: With Coal Jobs Not Expected To Return, Kentucky Seeks To Address Unemployment.

Renewable Energy

- Bloomberg News: Renewable Energy Employs Almost 10 Million People Globally.
- Bloomberg BNA: Bipartisan Group Of Legislators Seeks To Revive Clean Energy Tax Credits, Extend Nuclear Production Credit.
- San Diego Union-Tribune: Wind Power Conference Meets In California.

Empowering Native American Communities

- Newsweek: Op-Ed: Native American Objects Should Be Returned To Their Rightful Home.

Tackling America's Water Challenges

- Clearwater (ID) Tribune: Little Wood River Reservoir Campground Drinking Water Closed Due To Bacteria.
- Wenatchee (WA) World: Renovations Still Underway At Conconully RV Campground.

Top National News

- ABC: Administration Unveils Budget To Bipartisan Criticism.
- Washington Post: Trump: Manchester Attackers Are “Evil Losers In Life.”
- Los Angeles Times: British Authorities Say Another Terror Attack Could Be “Imminent.”
- ABC: Ex-CIA Chief Says He Was Concerned About Trump Campaign’s Russian Contacts.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - “When Terrorists Target Children.”
 - “Vermont’s D.I.Y. Approach On Marijuana.”
- Washington Post.
 - “The Best Response To The Tragedy In Manchester.”
 - “Trump Pushes The Boundaries On The Russia Probe – Again.”
 - “Was Maryland Stabbing Death A Hate Crime?”
- Wall Street Journal.
 - “Trump’s Bob Kerrey Budget.”
 - “Ending North Korea’s Cyber Impunity.”
 - “Jihad In Manchester.”

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today’s Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Trump Budget Would Focus Interior On Energy Extraction, Reduce Climate Research.

The New York Times (5/23, Plumer, Davenport) reports that according to the White House’s budget plan, $36 billion will be raised over the next 10 years “by selling off major American energy resources and infrastructure, opening up vast new areas of public land for oil and gas drilling, and redirecting state revenues from oil and gas royalties back to Washington.” The Times says that while Congress is “highly unlikely” to approve the cuts, “the document lays down a detailed marker of the administration’s energy philosophy.”

The Washington Post (5/23, Dennis) reports the White House budget proposal would cut the Interior Department budget by about 12 percent and shift “the agency’s focus toward promoting fossil fuel drilling and extraction on public lands and in federal waters.” Under the proposal, “onshore fossil fuel programs would receive $189 million annually, an increase of $24 million; offshore programs would get $343 million, including a $10 million increase to update the nation’s five-year offshore drilling plan.” Meanwhile, an additional $16 million would go to the Bureau of Land Management’s “oil and gas management program to accelerate the rate at which its staff processes permit applications and addresses right-of-way requests for infrastructure projects.”

Greenwire (5/23) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said “that the budget request ‘speaks to the overall mission of Interior and funds our highest priorities.’” Zinke “said it ‘wasn’t an easy job’ putting it together, but he wanted to make sure the budget reflected his priority of ‘shoring up our infrastructure and shoring up our front line’ – meaning the department’s federal managers and rangers.”

The Wall Street Journal (5/23, Carlton) reports that climate change and other science programs would receive less funding under the budget, and climate programs would be consolidated. Zinke has said that many of the programs are duplicative.

Additional coverage was provided by NPR (5/23, Siegler), the Washington \(DC\) Examiner (5/23, Siciliano), the Chicago \(IL\) Sun-Times (5/23, Sweet), the Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune, the Ogden \(UT\) Standard-Examiner (5/23), the Morning Consult (5/23, Fitzpatrick, Gheorghiu), and Natural Gas Intelligence (5/23, Passut).

White House Budget Would Reduce Spending On Climate Change. The Hill (5/23, Cama) reports Office of Management and Budget Director Mick Mulvaney said former President Obama was “spending too much of your money on climate change, and not very efficiently.” He denied the Administration is “anti-science,” adding, “we want to do some climate science, but we’re not going to do some of the crazy stuff the previous administration did.” The Washington Post (5/23, Guarino) reports, “Mulvaney invoked a musical that, seven years ago, won a government grant worth nearly $700,000,” incorrectly stating that the National Science Foundation awarded the grant last year. E&E Publishing (5/23) reports the White House’s proposed budget is “a sharp rebuke of the energy and environmental policies pushed for the past eight years by the Obama administration.”

USA Today (5/23, Rice, King) reports scientists say the proposed budget, in the words of USA Today, “guts funding for climate science” by cutting funding at NASA, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). David Doniger of the Natural Resources Defense Council said the budget “savages” the agencies’ programs, and Ken Kimmell, president of the Union of Concerned Scientists, said the proposal would “stall out U.S. technological innovation and scientific research, and the country’s capabilities to respond to extreme weather and national security threats.” The Washington Examiner (5/23, Siciliano) also covers this story.

Proposed Budget Would Cut Clean Air, Water Programs. The AP (5/23, Biesecker) reports the White House budget proposal “slashes funding for the Environmental Protection Agency by nearly one-third,” including “dramatic cuts to clean air and water programs.” President Trump and EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt “have called for increased fossil fuel production while expressing doubt about the scientific consensus that man-made carbon emissions are the primary driver of global warming.” Meanwhile, “environmentalists said the administration’s spending plan, if adopted by Congress, will lead directly to more pollution-related illnesses and deaths.”

Budget Proposal Would Cut Clean Coal Research. Bloomberg News (5/23, Natter) reports that despite President Trump’s promise to bring about “clean coal,” but his budget proposal would cut research into carbon capture and storage research from more than $200 million a year to $31 million, an 85 percent reduction. Brad Crabtree, vice president of fossil energy for the Great Plains Institute, said, “I think at some point the administration is going to have to decide whether they intend to keep their commitments to ensuring a future for coal.”

Renewables Budget Would See 70 Percent Cut. The Washington Examiner (5/23, Siciliano) reports the Energy Department’s Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy would see its budget cut by 69.3 percent under the Trump budget proposal to $636 million. The move “stoked the ire of climate change activist and environmentalists who are vowing to restore the funds by lobbying lawmakers to oppose them.” Some argue the “cut would cede global leadership on energy efficiency and clean energy to countries such as China.”

Science Cuts Said To Be Bad For Economy. The Los Angeles Times (5/23, Netburn) reports the American Assn. for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) estimated that the White House budget proposal “represented a 16.8% decrease in overall funding for scientific research compared with the current budget.” Rush Holt, a former congressman who heads AAAS, “said science and research have been a source of economic growth for the country as well as the primary driver of improvements in public health, energy, agriculture and overall quality of life as well as the nation’s economic well-being.”

Budget Plan Would Sell Half Of Strategic Oil Reserve. CNN Money (5/23, Egan) reports President Trump’s budget plan would sell half of the strategic oils reserve. While the US has become a leading producer of oil due to the shale oil boom, “some energy analysts warn that selling half the SPR could backfire, especially in today’s uncertain world.” Carl Evans, senior crude oil analyst at energy market research firm Genscape, said the move would put “more risk onto the consumer” and “does seem like a short-term cash grab.” The Washington Examiner (5/23, Siciliano) reports Office of Management and Budget Director Mick Mulvaney said that by selling the oil gradually, it the sale could be done “without having a dramatic impact on prices.” He called the reserve “no longer necessary” due to increased domestic production.

Also covering this story are the San Antonio Express-News (5/23), Platts (5/23), the Washington Times (5/23, Wolfgang), and Reuters (5/23, Rampton).

Budget Plan Would Allow ANWR Drilling, End Oil Revenue Sharing. Roll Call (5/23, Dillon, Nawaguna) reports that among the “variety of legislative changes to boost federal revenue from the oil and gas industry” the budget request includes are allowing federal drilling leases in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge and ending “the sharing of federal revenues from offshore oil and gas drilling leases with the Gulf Coast states.”

Fuel Fix \(TX\) (5/23, Osborne) reports the Gulf funds “are set aside under the law to protecting the Gulf coastline, with money directed to maintaining levees and other infrastructure, hurricane relief and preventing further erosion of wetlands that are fast disappearing along the Gulf Coast," as established under the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act. The Baton Rouge \(LA\) Advocate (5/23) also covers this story.

Budget For Territories, Micronesia Announced. The Hawaii Free Press (5/23) reports that Trump "proposed $591.9 million for Fiscal Year 2018 (FY18) for the benefit of the U.S. Territories of Guam, American Samoa, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands and the Freely Associated States of the Republic of Palau, the Federated States of Micronesia, and the Republic of the Marshall Islands through the Office of Insular Affairs (OIA)."

The Virgin Islands Daily News (5/24, Austin) reports that the Interior Department said: "The president's budget allows Interior's Office of Insular Affairs to continue with its core mission of empowering insular area communities by improving quality of life, creating economic opportunity, and promoting efficient and effective governance. The funding allows OIA to continue providing grants for technical assistance, implementing sustainable energy plans and invasive species control. OIA also works closely with the USVI Governor's office to balance all of the Governor's priorities with the resources available."

Additional coverage was provided by the Pacific \(GUM\) Daily News (5/24, Sablan, Raymundo).

Wild Horse Group Wants Funding To Save Mustangs. The Daily Caller (5/23, Picket) reports that the American Wild Horse Campaign "on Tuesday demanded President Trump intervene on the proposed Interior Department's budget and save American Mustangs from being slaughtered by the Bureau of Land Management." Suzanne Roy, Executive Director of the AWHC "said the Bureau of Land Management requested Congress to allow the slaughter of over 46,000 captured mustangs and burros that Roy says is on the verge of extinction." Roy said, "This lethal budget is wildly out of step with the wishes of the American people, and the American public will not stand for this travesty."

Lawmakers Preparing To Oppose Administration Budget Plan. Reuters (5/23, Gardner) reports, "Lawmakers from both parties worried the proposal" to sell half the SPR "would undermine the drilling industry and make the country vulnerable to supply shocks." They raised concerns that the move "could dampen crude prices and hurt drilling companies still recovering from a price crash in 2014. Trump had campaigned on a promise to revive the drilling industry." The SPR proposal's future "could depend in part on Republican Senator Lisa Murkowski of Alaska, a member of the appropriations committee and the head of the chamber's energy panel." She previously opposed selling a modest amount of oil from the reserve in 2015, "saying the reserve should not be used as an ATM."

The Hill (5/23, Henry, Cama) reports Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee Chairwoman Lisa Murkowski called the SPR plan "Crazy," and House Natural Resources Committee Chairman Rob Bishop, "If you're not replenishing [the oil], then [the plan] doesn't make any sense at all." Additionally, "the Trump administration also faced harsh criticism for its proposal to end the revenue sharing system that allows Gulf of Mexico states to get a share of federal royalties from offshore oil and natural gas drilling."

Secretary Zinke Praises Progress On Reducing Violent Crime In Indian Country.

The Gardnerville \(NV\) Record Courier (5/22) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "praised a recent announcement by the Department of Justice on the progress being made in coordinated federal, state, tribal and local efforts that are reducing the incidence of violent crime across the Nation." The Indian Country Federal Law Enforcement Coordination Group, "an assembly of sworn federal law enforcement officers and other stakeholders who have responsibilities in Indian Country, was created in response to suggestions by federal law enforcement officials who sought to enhance coordination and provide improved federal law enforcement services to Tribal communities." Zinke said, "I am very happy to see that the Indian Country Federal Law Enforcement Coordination Group has been an integral part of this effort and is focusing on violent crime on Tribal reservations. The Federal Government provides significant public safety resources to Indian Country, with numerous departments and agencies delivering and supporting law enforcement services."

30,000 Comments Submitted On Monument Designations.

The AP (5/23) reports that "more than 30,000 people have offered their thoughts about the country's protected areas, including ones near Hawaii, in the first five days of President Donald Trump's call for monument designation public comment." Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is "expected to recommend to the president after the comment period whether any of the monuments protecting natural resources should have boundaries changed or rescinded." The article notes that "a majority of the public comments so far, including those specifically written in regard to the marine national monument; have urged the Trump administration to keep the protections in place."

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by the Bristol \(VA\) Herald Courier (5/23), the Washington \(DC\) Times (5/23), and the State College \(PA\) Centre Daily Times (5/23).

Two Republican Lawmakers Ask Trump To Leave Canyons of The Ancients National Monument Intact.

The AP (5/23) reports that "two Republican members of Congress from Colorado are asking the Trump administration not to change the Canyons of the Ancients National Monument, one of more than two dozen monuments under review for possible modification." Sen. Cory Gardner and Rep. Scott Tipton "said Tuesday the southwestern Colorado monument preserves thousands of archaeological sites while allowing traditional uses of the land." According to the article, "their recommendation is likely to get a close hearing in the GOP administration."

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by the Kansas City \(MO\) Star (5/23) and the Oklahoman (5/23).

Additional coverage was provided by the Durango \(CO\) Herald (5/23, Perkins) and the Grand Junction \(CO\) Daily Sentinel (5/24, Harmon).

Massachusetts' Top Environmental Official Hopes For Northeast Marine Monument Modifications.

The Gloucester \(MA\) Times (5/23, Norton) reports that Massachusetts' "top environmental official hopes the Trump administration modifies President Barack Obama's 2016 designation of a marine monument area off the Massachusetts coast, which is on the Trump administration's list of areas under review." Energy and Environmental Affairs Secretary Matt Beaton said, "Yeah, I think modified in the sense that it echoes what we put forward in our original comment letter, recognizing the work that went into the ocean management [sic] plan and the public process around this issue." He "did not express a preference for desired modifications, but said, 'Hopefully the new administration takes those points into account and with future action makes appropriate decisions that reflect, you know, the opinions of the states.'"

Additional coverage was provided by WWLP-TV Springfield, MA (5/23, Norton).

Secretary Zinke Discussed Border Wall With Right-Wing Journalist.

The Huffington Post (5/23, D'angelo) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "held a video call in April with an infamous right-wing internet troll and a virtual reality entrepreneur to discuss the Trump administration's plans to construct a wall along the U.S.-Mexico border." The article says that "Zinke's half-hour call with Charles 'Chuck' Johnson, the CEO and founder of Gotnews.com, and Palmer Luckey, the founder of Oculus VR, occurred just after lunch on April 12, according to a recently published log of Zinke's scheduled meetings last month." A spokeswoman for the agency said, "Regarding setting up the meeting, a friend of the Secretary's suggested he talk with them about their technology. As a result, they had a very brief meeting with the Secretary. There was no action after."

Trump Administration Urged To Leave National Monuments Alone.

In an editorial, the Santa Rosa \(CA\) Press Democrat (5/24) emphasizes the "strong display of public support" for national monuments. It urges the Trump Administration to leave these "treasures intact as part of our national heritage."

Utah's Senators Take Different Stances On Bears Ears.

In his column for the Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (5/23, Gehrke), Robert Gehrke writes that "Utah's senators are not seeing eye to eye on what steps President Donald Trump should take when it comes to Bears Ears National Monument." While Sen. Mike Lee is "pushing hard for fully rescinding the entire monument," Sen. Orrin Hatch is "taking a different approach, pushing the White House to dramatically shrink it, but leave a piece or pieces of the monument preserved, according to interviews with a half-dozen sources familiar with the behind-the-scenes lobbying effort." Whatever the ultimate decision will be, Gehrke concludes that "the debate seems to be over the most effective way to dismantle the monument and gut the authority of future presidents to protect our nation's treasures."

Editorial: Maine Gov. LePage Refuses To See Benefits Of Monument.

The Bangor \(ME\) Daily News (5/23) editorializes that Maine Gov. Paul LePage “doesn’t like” the Woods and Waters National Monument, “so he is going to do everything in his power – this time preventing state crews from installing signs – to undermine it.” The paper says that “in his latest stunt, the governor has refused to allow directional signs for the monument to be placed on Interstate 95 and state roads leading to it.” The editorial concludes that “the Katahdin monument is a positive addition to Maine, and the state’s governor should be encouraging people to go visit.”

America’s Great Outdoors

National Park Service

Deadline Looms For Route 66 Corridor Preservation Program.

The AP (5/23, Contreras) reports that historic Route 66 “soon may be dropped from a National Park Service preservation program, which would end years of efforts aimed at reviving old tourist spots in struggling towns.” According to the article, “a federal law authorizing the Route 66 Corridor Preservation Program is set to expire in two years, and some lawmakers are working to save the program or get Congress to designate Route 66 as a National Historic Trail.” The deadline “also has Route 66 enthusiasts and preservation advocates scrambling to make sure the program or an alternative is maintained for the ‘Mother Road.’”

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by the Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (5/23, Contreras), the Business Insider (5/23, Contreras), the Chicago \(IL\) Sun-Times (5/23), the Chicago \(IL\) Tribune (5/23, Contreras), the Daily Mail (5/23, Contreras), the Minneapolis \(MN\) Star Tribune (5/23, Contreras), the New York Daily News (5/23, Contreras), Philly \(PA\) (5/23, Contreras), the San Francisco \(CA\) Chronicle (5/23, Contreras), the Washington \(DC\) Post (5/23, Contreras), the Washington \(DC\) Times (5/23, Contreras), the Bristol \(VA\) Herald Courier (5/23, Contreras), KPIX-TV San Francisco \(CA\) San Francisco (5/23), and KGMB-TV Honolulu \(HI\) Honolulu (5/23, Contreras).

Fort Monroe Transfer To Be Completed Soon.

The Newport News \(VA\) Daily Press (5/23, Ressa) reports that the Fort Monroe Authority’s gift to the National Park Service “should be completed shortly.” The transfer of “beach and the grassy open space to the east of Fenwick Road” will “create the unified national monument Gov. Terry McAuliffe has pushed for since 2014, his communications director said.” However, “federal officials, even after McAuliffe’s lobbying efforts at the White House, did not want to accept a tract of state-owned land to the west of Fenwick, known as the West Wherry Quarter, where the now-shuttered post exchange and the city’s community center are located, said Brian Coy, the governor’s communications director.” Coy “said the governor did not intend to ask Washington to accept the West Wherry Quarter, since federal officials made clear that there were not interested in taking on the cost of razing buildings and maintaining the area as open space for a park.”

New River Gorge Offering Free Water Safety Instruction.

The AP (5/24) reports that “water safety instruction will be given this weekend at New River Gorge National River.” The National Park Service and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers are “offering their annual safety program on Saturday and Sunday.”

Fish and Wildlife Service

Maine Senators Support Plan To Ease Sea Urchin Shipping Burden.

The AP (5/24) reports that “Maine’s U.S. senators are on board with a plan to make it easier for seafood dealers to export sea urchins and sea cucumbers outside of the United States.” The lawmakers “say unnecessary inspections result in the highly perishable seafood products to be held in warehouses for long periods of time, increasing the likelihood that they will go bad.” Sen. Susan Collins and Sen. Angus King “say their proposal would prevent the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service from burdening the industry with inspections that they say are repetitive.”

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by ABC News (5/24), Fox Business (5/24), the Houston \(TX\) Chronicle (5/23), the Minneapolis \(MN\) Star Tribune (5/23), Philly \(PA\) (5/23), and the Washington \(DC\) Post (5/24).

Okefenokee Fire To Keep Memorial Day Crowds Away.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution (5/23, Poole) reports that Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge will be closed on Memorial Day, "generally pretty busy for the refuge," because of "massive wildfires that have burned more than 150,000 acres." The article notes that "even parts of the refuge that have not been burned won't be open." According to Susan Heisey, supervisory refuge ranger, "the refuge will remain closed until it has been deemed safe for visitors to reenter the area."

Bald Eagle Numbers Soaring In Southeast Michigan.

The Monroe \(MI\) Evening News (5/23, Cousino) reports that "more bald eagles are being seen in southeast Michigan, according to monitoring efforts by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service." John Hartig, manager of the Detroit River International Wildlife Refuge, said that "since 1991, there has been a steady increase in the number of occupied eagle nests a year in metropolitan Detroit." The article says that "from 2012-15, at least 25 active nests have been documented each year, resulting in the fledgling of 28 or more young a year." It also notes that "the most recent survey data from 2015 shows that there were 14 occupied nests in Monroe County and six occupied nests in Wayne County that produced a total of 21 eaglets."

Additional coverage was provided by the Adrian \(MI\) Daily Telegram (5/23, Cousino).

No Eaglets Found In Nests Near Fermi 2 Plant.

The Monroe \(MI\) Evening News (5/23, Cousino) reports that a "team of wildlife biologists and volunteers" were unable to locate "any young eagles in a dense, tree-lined marsh at DTE Energy's Fermi 2 nuclear power plant here Monday morning." But they "did find both a male and a female baby eagle later Monday at the U.S. Silica quarry in Rockwood." The four-person team consisted of "two biologists from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and two volunteers" and they "walked deep into a forest just a few hundred feet north and west of the Fermi 2 cooling towers looking for three nests that were identified earlier this year from airplane flyovers." The team discovered two nests "using GPS coordinates, but there were no eaglets to be seen."

Additional Coverage: Oil Company Takes Measures To Protect Pregnant Polar Bear.

Additional coverage that Hilcorp, LLC is "going to great lengths to protect a pregnant polar bear who has established a den in a snow bank near one of its operations off the northern coast of Alaska" was provided by Forbes (5/23, Blackmon).

Bureau of Land Management

Bill Would Revive Roadway Plans Through Tortoise Habitat.

The St. George \(UT\) Spectrum (5/23, DeMille) reports that Rep. Chris Stewart is "pushing for legislation that would mandate federal land managers to step aside and make room for a controversial roadway that would cross through habitat of the endangered Mojave desert tortoise north of St. George." Stewart's bill, H.R. 2423, "would order the federal government to 'grant any necessary rights-of-way for the northern transportation route,' more commonly known as the Northern Corridor, as drawn up by county transportation planners and stick to the protocols for authorizing utility lines as included in a 1996 plan created for the tortoise habitat." Stewart argued the legislation "seeks to clarify directions included in a 2009 Omnibus Public Land Management Act, which directed the Bureau of Land Management to 'identify' a route for the northern corridor as part of its planning process for the area but did not explicitly describe an exact route or mandate that a road be allowed."

Defense Cost In Bunkerville Standoff Case Over $1M.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal (5/23, Wilson) reports that "taxpayers already have spent over $1 million to provide legal representation for the 19 men accused of participating in the 2014 armed standoff in Bunkerville." According to the article, "as of last week, the federal government had paid $1,028,154.30 to defense lawyers, investigators, paralegals and others who have played a role in defending those accused of staging a mass assault on federal agents who, in April 2014, tried to seize rancher Cliven Bundy's cows from public lands." The article says that "the $1 million figure is likely to balloon in the coming months as federal prosecutors proceed with the three remaining trials in the high-profile case."

Judge Finds Teen's Firework Caused Table Rock Fire.

The Idaho Statesman (5/23, Sowell) reports that "an Ada County judge found Tuesday that 19-year-old Taylor Kemp caused last summer's Table Rock fire when a Roman candle he lighted tipped over and ignited nearby dry grass." Magistrate James Cawthon "said the evidence presented over two days showed Kemp more likely than not caused the fire that destroyed a house, threatened dozens of others and burned 2,500 acres of land near the Boise monument." After Cawthon's ruling, "testimony shifted to the damage caused by the fire." Of note, the Bureau of Land Management, which "fought the fire on the ground and by dropping fire retardant from the air, is seeking $250,000."

New Report Details How Southern Arizona Wildfire Started.

The AP (5/23) reports that "a new report details how a southern Arizona wildfire started and quickly spread after an off-duty Border Patrol agent went target shooting with an explosive powder." The fire "damaged nearly 19 square miles" of the Las Cienegas National Conservation Area. The Bureau of Land Management "announced on Tuesday that it had reopened parts of the areas closed off because of the fire."

Additional Coverage: BLM Investigating Fire That Damaged Guard Station In Bears Ears.

Additional coverage that the Bureau of Land Management is "investigating a suspicious fire that damaged a remote guard station in Utah's Bears Ears National Monument" was provided by the AP (5/23).

US Geological Survey

Glacier National Park Losing Its Glaciers.

The New York Times (5/24, Popovich) reports that Glacier National Park is "losing its glaciers." They "shrank by more than a third between 1966 and 2015, according to new data from the United States Geological Survey and Portland State University."

USGS To Study Fuel Break Effects On Wildfires, Sage-grouse.

Wildfire Today (5/23, Pohl) reports that the U.S. Geological Survey is preparing for "a project across the Great Basin studying how effective fuel break are, simultaneously evaluating their ecological costs and benefits." The USGS said in a statement, "We want to determine the extent to which fuel breaks can help protect existing habitat from wildland fires, paying particular attention to how such breaks affect sagebrush habitat, sage-grouse, and other sagebrush-dependent species."

Additional Coverage: USGS Removes Climate Change Language From News Release.

Additional coverage that the United States Geological Survey "deleted a sentence acknowledging the link between climate change and sea level rise from an official agency press release" was provided by the Union of Concerned Scientists (5/23, Halpern), MSNBC (5/23, Benen), and the Daily Caller (5/23, White).

Additional Coverage: California Likely To Roll Out Earthquake Warning System Next Year.

Additional coverage that "California will probably introduce a limited public earthquake early warning system next year" was provided by Government Technology (5/23, Lin).

Securing America's Energy Future

Offshore Energy Development

Environmental Groups Send Letter To Secretary Zinke Against Offshore Drilling.

ClimateWire (5/23) reports more than 130 environmental and advocacy groups wrote a letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, saying that plans to open the Atlantic, Arctic, Pacific and Gulf of Mexico to offshore drilling would be an unacceptable level of risk for coastal communities and ecosystems. The letter said, "Our future depends on clean renewable energy, not sacrificing our precious waters for oil that harms our families' health and pollutes our oceans." This past weekend saw events organized by environmental groups across almost 20 states to protest offshore energy extraction and in support of clean energy. E&E Daily (5/23) reports Interior Department spokeswoman Heather Swift defended the plan. She said, "Offshore oil and gas development helps fund conservation and cultural preservation grants like the Land and Water Conservation Fund and the Historic Preservation Fund. ... Responsible offshore energy development is a critical component of the work at Interior, bringing billions of dollars to the Treasury every year. We look forward to increasing that revenue under President Trump's American Energy First policies."

Angelle Resigns From Louisiana Public Service Commission.

The AP (5/23) reports that Scott Angelle "resigned Tuesday from his elected seat on the Louisiana Public Service Commission, a job the Republican held since 2013." Angelle's "resignation came the day he started his new job" leading the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement.

Onshore Energy Development

Environmental Groups Hope Study Leads To End Of Mountaintop Removal Mining.

The Charleston \(WV\) Gazette-Mail (5/23, Ward) reports that "West Virginia environmental groups on Tuesday urged a National Academy of Sciences panel to look carefully at the public health impact of strip mining, saying they hope more scrutiny of the issue will lead to a ban on the practice." According to the article, "several panels of citizen group representatives, industry officials and state regulators...spoke to and took questions from the National Academy committee that is investigating a series of previously published studies that revealed coalfield residents living near mountaintop removal operations face increased risks of a variety of illnesses and premature death." The article says that "Tuesday's meeting is part of an effort by an 11-member committee from various fields – ranging from epidemiologists to mining engineers and medical experts to regulatory decision-makers – to examine existing studies, identify research gaps and look for 'new approaches to safeguard the health of residents living near these types of coal-mining operations,' according to the project's study plan."

Additional coverage was provided by the AP (5/23, Virtanen).

With Coal Jobs Not Expected To Return, Kentucky Seeks To Address Unemployment.

The Wall Street Journal (5/23, Campo-Flores) reports coal production in Kentucky is on the decline, and despite vows by President Trump to return coal jobs, many analysts say that systemic changes in the energy market, including cheap natural gas and the growing cost of extracting eastern Kentucky coal, will prevent that outcome. Projects seek to deal with the growing unemployment, including a drone-testing facility, a high-tech greenhouse, and software-coding training programs. Additionally, Berkeley Energy Group is seeking to create a 100 megawatts solar power facility on a reclaimed strip mine.

Renewable Energy

Renewable Energy Employs Almost 10 Million People Globally.

Bloomberg News (5/23, Habboush) reports an International Renewable Energy Agency report says that "renewable energy employed 9.8 million people last year, up 1.1 percent from 2015, led by solar photovoltaic at 3.09 million jobs." Over the past two years "growth has slowed" while "solar photovoltaic and wind categories more than doubled their number of jobs since 2012, the first year assessed."

Bipartisan Group Of Legislators Seeks To Revive Clean Energy Tax Credits, Extend Nuclear Production Credit.

Bloomberg BNA (5/23, Dabbs, Kern) reports a bipartisan coalition of legislators is seeking to revive expired clean energy tax credits "for solar energy, fuel cells, microturbines and small-scale wind energy, among other industries" as well as "an early extension of a nuclear production credit." They are expected to seek to add the bill to a larger legislative vehicle, such as a comprehensive overhaul of the tax code, although "congressional leaders indicate that individual revivals and extensions may violate the spirit of an overhaul."

Wind Power Conference Meets In California.

The San Diego Union-Tribune (5/23, Nikolewski) reports California state Senate President pro Tem Kevin de León, in his keynote address at the American Wind Energy Association (AWEA) WindPower 2017 Conference and Exhibition, said, "President Trump's fossil-fuel fetish, economically, does not make any sense." However, "some of the wind industry's executives were much more conciliatory," although AWAE's board chairman Tristan Grimbert, CEO of San Diego-based EDF Renewable Energy, told the crowd, "The political context is a little challenging." Still, he declared, "We are not just here to stay but to grow and grow and grow." Kiernan said that while his group isn't planning to seek an extension of the production and investment tax credits being phased out by 2019, he added, "We are calling for a level playing field." As other sources of electricity have permanent tax credits and so, "We're hoping that ... Congress will look, as we're phasing down ours, look at everybody else's public support and phase them down or somehow levelize it."

Empowering Native American Communities

Op-Ed: Native American Objects Should Be Returned To Their Rightful Home.

In an op-ed for Newsweek (5/23, Thornton), Russell Thornton, chair of the Native American Repatriation Review Committee, writes that the Interior Department warned the Andover Newton Theological School in Newton, Massachusetts against selling a sacred fishhook. Thornton argues that "repatriations to restore the linkage should occur expeditiously." He concludes that "rights of Native American tribes to their religions and sacred objects may or may not be inherent, but they are granted by the U.S. Government through AIRFA and NAGPRA."

Tackling America's Water Challenges

Little Wood River Reservoir Campground Drinking Water Closed Due To Bacteria.

Clearwater \(ID\) Tribune (5/23) reports that the Bureau of Reclamation has "detected coliform bacteria in the drinking water system at Little Wood River Reservoir Campground." According to the article, "the system has been shut off; however, the campground and related facilities are unaffected and will remain open during the camping season." Upper Snake Field Office Manager Ryan Newman said, "There will be no drinking water available at Little Wood campground for an indefinite period of time. Out of concern for public safety, the water system has been shut off while we inspect and treat the well."

Renovations Still Underway At Conconully RV Campground.

The Wenatchee \(WA\) World (5/23, Mehaffey) reports that "unexpected problems with a new well will delay the much-awaited reopening of a popular RV campground on the upper reservoir in Conconully." However, "a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation says that the agency is working as quickly as possible to complete renovation of the 11 RV campsites at what is now being called the Conconully Lake RV Campground."

Top National News

Administration Unveils Budget To Bipartisan Criticism.

Media coverage of the $4.1 trillion budget proposal the Trump Administration sent to Congress on Tuesday is largely negative, focusing on the plan's spending cuts across a range of programs and highlighting the negative reaction from lawmakers in both parties. For example, in a brief report on ABC World News Tonight (5/23, story 9, 0:25, Muir), David Muir said the plan drew criticism from "lawmakers on both sides of the aisle," and Lester Holt said on NBC Nightly News (5/23, story 5, 1:55, Holt) that it is already "getting push-back from both sides." NBC's Casey Hunt added that the proposal "landed...in Congress with a thud."

On its front page, the New York Times (5/23, Kaplan) describes congressional Republicans' reaction to Trump's budget as "open hesitation," but adds that "it was not clear that they could come up with an alternative that could win over conservatives and moderates while clearing a path for the tax cuts and policies they have promised for years." The Times adds that the coming budget battle "mirrors the continuing health care fight, in which concessions to Republican moderates alienate conservatives, while overtures to conservatives lose moderate votes."

The Hill (5/23, Elis) reports that the Administration plan, which is titled, "A New Foundation for American Greatness," seeks "$1.5 trillion in nondefense discretionary cuts and $1.4 trillion in Medicaid cuts over the course of a decade, while adding nearly half a trillion dollars to defense spending." It would "dramatically reshape federal spending, cutting anti-poverty and safety net programs, but leaving Medicare and the retirement portion of Social Security untouched." Politico (5/23, Scholtes, Ferris) says the budget "breaks with Republican orthodoxy on domestic programs, funds programs he threatened to cut, increases spending where he called for less, and cuts parts of government he promised not to touch." Politico goes on to outline "the contradictions and unrealistic projections spattered throughout the lengthy budget proposal."

A USA Today (5/23, Today) analysis assesses the "winners and losers" in Trump's plan. Among the "winners," according to USA Today, are the Pentagon, Social Security and Medicare, border security, new parents, and school vouchers, while "losers" include farmers, the able-bodied poor, federal employees, tax reform, and the 2011 bipartisan budget agreement.

The Washington Times (5/23, Miller) says that the plan "puts numbers to President Trump's priorities, boosting military spending by 10 percent and slashing a slew of social welfare programs that the administration deemed a waste of money," but Reuters (5/22, Rampton) says it is "unlikely to be approved in its current form." While the "austere budget," which would "cut $3.6 trillion in government spending over the next decade," is "not expected to survive on Capitol Hill," it nonetheless "puts numbers on Trump's vision of a government that radically cuts assistance to lower-income Americans."

Roll Call (5/23, McCrimmon) reports that during a White House briefing Tuesday, OMB Director Mulvaney, who will go to Capitol Hill this week "to try to sell" the plan, "framed the proposal as a 'taxpayer first' budget that would trim needless federal spending and reinvigorate the economy with massive tax cuts and deregulation." Democrats, meanwhile, "slammed Trump's plans to bulldoze domestic discretionary spending and cut social safety net programs like food stamps and health care for kids." Ylan Mui said on CNBC's Closing Bell (5/23) that Senate Minority Leader Schumer called Trump's budget "a meat cleaver to the Middle Class," and Sen. Claire McCaskill predicted on MSNBC's Morning Joe (5/23), "I think you're going to see a lot of people push back on this budget. By the way, I anticipate that's going to be bipartisan. ... I really don't think there's an appetite on either side of the aisle for this President's budget."

According to the AP (5/23, Taylor, Crutsinger), Trump also "drew rebukes...from some Republican allies for the plan's jarring, politically unrealistic cuts to the social safety net for the poor and a broad swath of other domestic programs." Senate Majority Whip Cornyn said the plan is "Basically dead on arrival." Sen. Bill Cassidy said, "I don't think the president's budget is going anywhere."

Reuters (5/23, Cowan) says that while Trump's plans "to slash federal aid to the poor, the sick and people living in rural areas reflect conservatives' demands for a smaller federal government," they "target many of the very people who voted for him last November" and "could trigger a backlash for Republicans, complicating efforts to keep control of the U.S. Congress in the 2018 midterm elections." According to Reuters, many GOP lawmakers, "seeing a budget they think will be tough to sell back home, greeted it warily." Similarly, USA Today (5/23, Przybyla) reports that the plan "could be particularly punishing for the rural, working-class voters who overwhelmingly supported Trump." According to USA Today, it "takes aim at programs used disproportionately by people without college degrees, who voted for Trump by six points, including food assistance, crop subsidies and education and job training."

The Wall Street Journal (5/23, Davidson, Peterson, Andrews) also highlights the bipartisan pushback against the plan, and says that while House Freedom Caucus Chairman Mark Meadows praised the spending cuts, he expressed concern about the plan to reduce funding for Meals on Wheels. Meadows said, "Meals on Wheels, even for some of us who are considered to be fiscal hawks, may be a bridge too far." McClatchy (5/23, Clark) says Trump may have given Republicans "leery of supporting him a great gift: a spending plan that calls for deep cuts to some of the country's most popular programs – and one they can rail against." McClatchy focuses on criticism of the plan from "vulnerable" Republicans, who are "up for election in congressional districts that Democratic presidential candidate Hillary Clinton won." McClatchy cites of several examples, saying these lawmakers were "quick to denounce the plan, looking to contrast themselves with Trump."

Michelle Singletary is likewise very critical of the plan in her Washington Post (5/23, Singletary) column, arguing that the Administration "wants to balance the federal budget in part on the backs of the poor, the sick and the marginalized." Singletary adds that while the "wildly overreaching" and "cruel" proposal "is likely to look tremendously different by the time it's signed into law," it "speaks volumes about what the administration thinks of struggling low- and middle-income people.”

A Wall Street Journal (5/23) editorial is also critical of the proposal, although for a different reason. The journal says Trump’s plan vindicates former Sen. Bob Kerrey, who argued in the 1990s that other programs would eventually feel the pinch if entitlements were not reformed. Like Democrats, the Journal argues, Trump is avoiding Social Security and Medicare and, as a result, every other government priority is left struggling for the remaining funds. In an editorial, National Review (5/23) makes a similar argument, saying that “if your budget priorities include an increase in defense spending and avoiding cuts to Social Security and Medicare – and these are President Trump’s priorities – then any effort to locate savings in the budget will put tremendous pressure on non-defense discretionary spending.” Trump’s “promise to enact ‘one of the biggest tax cuts in American history’” makes that pressure “very intense indeed.” National Review adds that the proposal “is ill-advised in many of its particulars and incompetent in others, but as a statement of priorities, it is very much what one would expect from a conventional Republican president — perhaps too much so.”

Administration Lays Out Infrastructure Plan As Part Of Budget. Politico (5/23, Gardner) reports that the Administration “finally laid out its long-promised vision for a $1 trillion national infrastructure plan” in “a six-page fact sheet packaged with President Donald Trump’s $4.1 trillion proposed 2018 budget.” The plan “laid out a vision for $200 billion in direct federal spending over the next decade on needs such as roads, bridges, tunnels, railroads and expanded broadband, along with incentives for states, cities and private investors and efforts to reduce the burdens of regulations.”

The Washington Post (5/23, Wagner) cites an analysis from Senate Democrats which says Trump’s budget would “actually cut more federal spending on [infrastructure] programs than it would add.” While Trump’s budget “proposes to spend $200 billion over the coming decade to make good on a campaign promise to spur $1 trillion in new investments in roads, bridges, airports, waterways and other ailing infrastructure,” the analysis released by Schumer’s office “cites $206 billion in cuts to an array of infrastructure programs included in Trump’s budget document over the coming decade.”

Reuters Analysis: Defense Spending Increase Falls Short Of Trump’s Campaign Promises. A Reuters (5/23, Stone) analysis says that while the Administration budget increases spending for defense, “it falls short of campaign promises to rebuild the U.S. Navy and a ‘historic’ increase in military spending.” While Trump “is seeking a $52 billion hike for the Pentagon as part of an overall defense spending increase of $54 billion,” that is “only 3 percent more than what former President Barack Obama had sought in his long-term budget plan.” Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman John McCain called the proposal “inadequate” and “dead on arrival.”

In response to criticism from “defense hawks” like McCain and House Armed Services Chairman Mac Thornberry, that the Administration’s proposed increase in defense spending is insufficient to “deliver on the president’s promise to ‘rebuild the military,’” the Washington Post (5/23, Lamothe) says defense officials said that “they’ve asked for modest growth now and will likely want even more money in 2019.” Acting Pentagon comptroller and chief financial officer John Roth told a news conference, “$52 billion, I would argue that isn’t chump change. ... That’s a pretty significant increase in the defense budget that we’re requesting here. And we’re not done. We’ll take a look once we have the new defense strategy.”

Roberts, Moran Blast Trump’s Proposed Cuts To Crop Insurance. McClatchy (5/23, Wise, Lowry) says two of the “most powerful Republican advocates” for farmers in the Senate “slammed” Trump’s proposal “to slash crop insurance, warning those and other budget cuts would badly wound one of the president’s most loyal constituencies.” Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Pat Roberts and Appropriations Committee member Jerry Moran “vowed to fight the president’s plan to cut crop insurance by $28.5 billion over 10 years.” McClatchy describes Roberts as “visibly annoyed” as he called the cuts “not viable” and “very troubling” for Kansas. However, like a number of other reports this morning, McClatchy adds that it is likely “the cuts won’t ever become law.”

Officials Say Proposal Won’t Impact Those On Track For Public Service Student Loan Forgiveness. The Washington Post (5/23, Douglas-Gabriel) reports that Education Department officials said Tuesday that the Administration budget’s call to eliminate the Public Service Loan Forgiveness program will not impact “the hundreds of thousands of doctors, lawyers, teachers and social workers on track” to benefit from it. According to the officials, the proposal “would only affect people entering college or continuing on to graduate school after July 1, 2018.”

Plan Could Set Stage For Work Requirements For Housing Subsidies. The Washington Post (5/23, Jan) says Trump’s budget would make “the most dramatic cuts to the Department of Housing and Urban Development since President Ronald Reagan slashed the agency's funding in the early 1980s and leaves a wide opening for introducing work requirements for people who receive federal housing subsidies." According to the proposal, by 2019, HUD "plans to present more comprehensive changes that include a 'a path for work-able families to move toward self-sufficiency.'" However, the plan "does not offer further details about how work requirements, which would require statutory change, would be introduced."

Budget Would Cut $3.1 Billion From Energy Research. The New York Times (5/23, Plumer, Davenport) reports that according to the plan, $36 billion will be raised over the next 10 years "by selling off major American energy resources and infrastructure, opening up vast new areas of public land for oil and gas drilling, and redirecting state revenues from oil and gas royalties back to Washington." Meanwhile, it "would cut $3.1 billion from energy research programs at the Energy Department, an 18 percent reduction from last year's spending." Critics argue that such cuts "could imperil American leadership in cutting-edge clean energy industries." The Times says that while Congress is "highly unlikely" to approve the cuts, "the document lays down a detailed marker of the administration's energy philosophy."

Meanwhile, the Washington Post (5/23, Mooney) highlights what it calls "an extremely deep cut aimed at the government's leading clean energy research office." The plan provides "just $636 million in new funding in 2018" for the Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy, marking a 69 percent decline from the $2.069 billion allocated in 2017. Bloomberg News (5/23, Habboush) reports that the International Renewable Energy Agency's annual report on the industry says renewable energy "employed 9.8 million people last year, up 1.1 percent from 2015, led by solar photovoltaic at 3.09 million jobs."

Media Analyses: Trump's Growth Predictions Are Unrealistic. In an op-ed for the Wall Street Journal (5/23, Furman), Jason Furman, a senior fellow at the Peterson Institute for International Economics, and a former chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers, argues that Trump's budget makes unrealistically optimistic predictions about economic growth. The plan, he writes, assumes long-term growth of 3 percent, which is a percentage point higher than professional forecasters and 1.1 percentage points higher than the CBO forecast.

An analysis in the Wall Street Journal (5/23, Ip) says that while the Administration sets a goal of 3 percent economic growth, it does not offer a plan to get there, while the New York Times (5/23, Appelbaum) says in its own analysis that while the White House is "projecting faster economic growth as a consequence of tax cuts," it is not "projecting the cost of those tax cuts: that is, the loss in tax revenue."

Trump Budget's Paid Medical Leave Proposal Debated. A USA Today (5/23) editorial argues that a proposal "for paid medical leave of up to six weeks" is "one of the better new ideas in the Trump budget." It is, USA Today argues, "the germ of a good idea amid an epidemic of bad ones." In an accompanying USA Today (5/23, Somin) op-ed, Ilya Somin is professor of law at George Mason University, argues that despite the "superficial appeal" of the leave proposal, it is "likely to harm families more than it helps." Mandatory paid leave, Somin writes, "must somehow be paid for" and "potential beneficiaries are likely to end up with lower salaries, fewer benefits of other types, or both."

Trump: Manchester Attackers Are "Evil Losers In Life."

President Trump's characterization of the Manchester attackers as "evil losers" during comments in Bethlehem received ample media attention, although it was generally covered as a subtopic within the story about Britain raising its terror threat level. The Washington Post (5/23, Borchers) reports Trump "appeared to be going for impact" when he spoke about the attackers, while ABC World News Tonight (5/23, story 5, 1:15, Muir) showed Trump saying the attackers were "evil losers" and the CBS Evening News (5/23, story 4, 0:55, Pelley) noting that he "won't call them monsters because they would like that term. They would think that's a great name. I will call them from now on losers because that's what they are. They're losers. And we'll have more of them. But they're losers, just remember that."

NBC Nightly News (5/23, story 3, 1:35, Holt) reported Trump "linked the fight against terror to Middle East peace." Trump was shown saying, "Peace can never take root in an environment where violence is tolerated, funded and even rewarded." Jim Acosta reported on CNN's Situation Room (5/23) "took notice of the timing of his remarks that were to jump start Middle East peace talks." Trump said, "It's interesting that our meeting took place on this morning of horrible death to young people. This wicked ideology must be obliterated, and I mean completely obliterated, and the innocent life must be protected. All innocent lives."

Jeff Zeleny reported at CNN's Situation Room (5/23) that fighting extremism was "already the key focus of the President's first trip abroad" and was made "even more urgent in the aftermath in the attack in England." Zeleny said the President's words are coming far faster than his policies to combat terror and "he has yet to unveil his plans to fight the Islamic State which claimed responsible for Manchester attack."

Acosta also reported on CNN's Situation Room (5/23) that the President also tweeted, "We stand in absolute solidarity with the people of the United Kingdom." Meanwhile, John Roberts said on Fox News' Special Report (5/23) that the Manchester bombing is "certain to change the tone of the President's last two stops on this nine-day trip" and "may give a tough talking President new leverage to seek some of the reforms on security and trade that he's really after."

Deputy Assistant to the President Sebastian Gorka noted on Fox News' Hannity (5/23) that Trump called terrorists "evil losers," and added, "Why? This is a war with evil. These people aren't unemployed or suffering political disenfranchisement. This is evil walking the earth that must be obliterated. Secondly, he said they are not going to call them monsters. Monsters are frightening. These people are cowards. Nothing less. Evil cowards. As the President said, they will be obliterated."

NYPost Analysis: Trump's Comments "Shot Down As 'Playground' Talk On Twitter." The New York Post (5/23, Fonrouge) reports President Trump's "decision to call the terrorists responsible for the deadly Manchester attack 'evil losers' has been shot down as 'playground' talk on Twitter." The Post says individuals "across the world collectively rolled their eyes at Trump when he announced he wouldn't be calling the terrorists responsible for killing 22 people at an Ariana Grande concert 'monsters' and instead opted for the more schoolyard-appropriate rebuke."

Sen. Murphy: "Many Of Us Are Worried" Administration's "Rhetoric" Could Lead To Attack In US. Breitbart (5/23, Hanchett) reports Sen. Chris Murphy said on CNN's "Situation Room" that "many of us are worried about some of the rhetoric of the Trump administration, because we worry that that combined with robust online recruitment might end up in an attack like this happening in the United States."

Robbins: Trump Right About Fight Against Terrorism Being "Battle Between Good And Evil." In a USA Today (5/23, Robbins) op-ed, James Robbins – a former special assistant to the secretary of defense – says the Manchester attack shows Trump is correct that the fight against terrorism is "a battle between good and evil." Robbins says the "insidious" attack "sought to maximize human carnage" and "targeted young people who would have no inkling of what he was up to as he mingled among them."

British Authorities Say Another Terror Attack Could Be "Imminent."

Britain on Tuesday raised its terror threat from "severe" to "critical," which means an attack could be imminent. Coverage highlights the British government's decision to raise the threat level, while spending comparably little attention on the identity of the attacker, Salman Abedi, and ISIS' claim of responsibility.

The Los Angeles Times (5/23, Boyle) says the announcement "marks the first time in 10 years that the government has deemed the threat level from international terrorism" to be its highest possible rating. According to the Times, the warning level over the past decade "has shifted between substantial and severe, meaning that at all times officials believed that an attack was at least a 'strong possibility.'"

Bloomberg News (5/22, Penny, Ross) reports British Prime Minister Theresa May – who announced the decision after meeting with top security officials, said intelligence analysts' decision to raise the threat level "means that their assessment is not only that an attack remains highly likely but that a further attack may be imminent."

BBC News \(UK\) (5/23) reports May indicated the decision came after authorities were unable to determine if Abedi acted alone in carrying out the attack. May said, according to the New York Times (5/23, Yeginsu, Erlanger), "it is a possibility we cannot ignore that there is a wider group of individuals linked to this attack."

The New York Post (5/23, Perez) reports thousands of armed military personnel are being moved throughout Britain to support and replace local officers, as part of a "well-established plan known as 'Operation Temperer.'" ABC World News Tonight (5/23, lead story, 3:50, Muir) reported that "up to 5,000 military troops will now be deployed at key sites and on the streets of Britain, a striking sight in a country where ordinary policemen don't carry firearms. Those troops will free up police resources to go on the hunt for more suspects." The AP (5/23) says armed soldiers could be used instead of police to secure public events. The Wall Street Journal (5/23, A1, Kantchev, Bird, Gauthier-Villars) quotes May as saying, "Members of the armed forces deployed in this way will be under the command of police officers."

The CBS Evening News (5/23, lead story, 4:15, Pelley) said a “major anti-terror investigation is now trying to determine whether” Abedi “acted alone, as the police first said, or whether he had help in planning his attack and building his bomb.” The Washington Post (5/23, A1, Witte, Adam) similarly reports Greater Manchester Chief Constable Ian Hopkins said law enforcement’s top priority is to “establish whether [Abedi] was acting alone or as part of a network.” Hopkins said Abedi executed the bombing alone and “was carrying an improvised explosive device, which he detonated, causing this atrocity.” However, the Post adds that experts indicated “it was unlikely that Monday’s attack had been carried out without help.”

Richard Engel reported on NBC Nightly News (5/23, story 2, 3:10, Holt) US intelligence officials said Abedi “likely received training abroad by a terrorist group, but his allegiances are unclear.” Engel added that a US intelligence official says there “is a concern that he was part of a cell, a cell that still could be planning more attacks.”

Brian Ross reported on ABC World News Tonight (5/23, story 2, 2:20, Muir) that Abedi “was once one of the 500 young men known to British authorities as possible terrorists,” but the government did not consider him an imminent threat. However, Brian Todd reported on CNN’s Situation Room (5/23) that “a British counterterrorism official says so far authorities there have discovered no evidence of a link between suspected attacker Salman Abedi and an established terror group.”

Authorities Probing Whether Bomber Was Trained In Libya, Syria. The Times \(UK\) (5/24, Swerling, Hamilton, Haynes, Keate) reports Abedi “had recently returned from Libya” and Fox News (5/23) says on its website that “investigators are attempting to learn whether the university dropout attended a terrorist training camp” there. The Telegraph \(UK\) (5/23, Malnick) reports Abedi “had links to fellow Libyan terrorist, Abdalraouf Abdallah and his brother Mohammed.” The Telegraph adds that security services are looking into whether Abedi “is part of a network which has links to Mohamed Abrini.”

The Sun \(UK\) (5/23, Wells, Sullivan, Dale, Reilly, Sales, Diaz) reports it can “reveal” the “sick terrorist” Abedi “had secret jihadi training during family trips to Syria.” The Sun adds that while the “monster” was born and grew up in Britain, Abedi’s family was from Libya and visited the country “regularly in recent years.” According to the Sun, “sources said there were fears Abedi may have taken advantage of the conflict to make the simple journey across the Med to Syria without alerting the British authorities.”

Reuters (5/22, Super) reports May said that while “all acts of terrorism are cowardly,” the Manchester attack “stands out for its appalling sickening cowardice, deliberately targeting innocent, defenseless children and young people who should have been enjoying one of the most memorable nights of their lives.”

WPost Analysis: Attack May Have Targeted Women. The Washington Post (5/23, McAuley) reports that if ISIS carried out the attack, the “targeting of women” – at a concert “meant to celebrate female empowerment” and in which many victims “were young British women” – “could have been intentional.” Ariana Grande, the Post says, is a “self-styled ‘dangerous woman’” who is “famous for lyrics that seek to champion female power and routines that exalt the female body.” The Post says “many of the women” attending the vigil for victims on Tuesday saw “the attack on the concert was an attack on women.”

Police Constable Asks For “Patience And Calm.” USA Today (5/23, Hjelmggaard) reports Hopkins, during a vigil for the victims of the bombing, “asked for patience and calm in the ethnically diverse city of more than 500,000.” Hopkins said, “We understand that feelings are very raw right now and people are bound to be looking for answers.” Hopkins added, “However, now, more than ever, it is vital that our diverse communities in Greater Manchester stand together and do not tolerate hate.”

US Cities Also Concerned About Attacks On “Soft Targets.” Tom Costello reported at NBC Nightly News (5/23, story 6, 2:10, Holt) that terrorists are increasingly attacking “soft targets.” Costello said that “today, with US police increasing their visibility in cities across the country, concern about the 32 million people who will attend music festivals this summer.” He said “medical teams are teaching ‘stop the bleed’ courses, so everyday Americans nationwide can learn to save lives in a terror attack.” DC Police Chief Peter Newsham said that regardless of how far back you move perimeters, “crowds are still going to gather at some point. So it gives somebody who is inclined to create a terrorist incident that opportunity to do it.” Meanwhile, “police insist ‘see something, say something’ is often the key to preventing an attack.”

ABC World News Tonight (5/23, story 4, 1:25, Muir) also reported that “state, federal, and local authorities are now working to identify potentially vulnerable ‘open venues’ here, ranging from sporting events to concerts.” The CBS Evening News (5/23, story 3, 2:25, Pelley) reported that “within minutes of the attack in Manchester, New York City police dispatched heavy weapons teams to high-profile locations like Madison Square Garden. In the Dallas area, police also made a show of force at a John Legend concert.” Former Assistant FBI Director Ron Hosko “says terrorists view people entering and exiting events, from papal masses to hockey games, as easy targets. Typically, security is relaxed when an event ends. You exhale because the event’s over.” Meanwhile, “the FBI has said that terrorist attacks in this country could have been stopped if only someone had reported suspicious activity.”

NYTimes, WPost, USA Today, WSJournal Say Unity, Outreach Key To Combating Terrorism. The New York Times (5/23) editorializes the “quickest way for open societies to lose the freedoms they enjoy and the Islamic State seeks to destroy would be to whip up divisive ethnic, racist and religious hatreds.” The Washington Post (5/23) editorializes the “Incomprehensible” and “sickening” attack “should redouble the determination of civilized nations to combat the evil that imbues the Islamic State and its followers.” The Post says the response to the attack by Manchester’s residents “as thousands of people of all races and faiths gathered for a vigil in the city’s Albert Square” is a positive step “focuses on uniting rather than dividing a diverse society.”

USA Today (5/23) editorializes that law enforcement and community leaders must “make it easy for first- or second-generation immigrants to step forward with their valuable insights about people who’ve become radicalized.” USA Today adds that “inflammatory rhetoric about banning all Muslims, or labeling Islam a hateful religion, only makes this more difficult.” The Wall Street Journal (5/23) editorializes that integration of Muslim areas is key to overcoming terrorism, saying that governments must work to address the problem within Muslim communities that are isolated from mainstream society.

WTimes Analysis: Attack “Underscores Complaints” Europe Is In “Denial” About “Islamic Terrorism” Threat. The Washington Times (5/23, Scarborough) reports the “Manchester massacre underscores complaints from counterterrorism analysts that Europe has fallen into denial about the threat of Islamic terrorism.” The Times says this is occurring as Europe “has become home to thousands of migrants from Islamic State-infested Syria and other Muslim-majority countries.”

Ex-CIA Chief Says He Was Concerned About Trump Campaign’s Russian Contacts.

While there were several threads in the ongoing coverage of the investigations into whether President Trump’s campaign colluded with Russian officials, most outlets emphasize former CIA director John Brennan’s testimony before the House Intelligence Committee, in which he said was concerned during the campaign. Another significant thread was the appearance of DNI Coats before the Senate Armed Services Committee, in which he declined to comment on a Washington Post report that he and NSA Director Rogers were pressured by the President – but did say that he would discuss his conversations with the President with special counsel Robert Mueller’s team if asked.

ABC World News Tonight (5/23, story 6, 2:05, Muir) reported that Brennan “said associates of the Trump campaign were in touch with the Russians and often, and that it worried him.” ABC’s Mary Bruce: “On Capitol Hill today, blunt talk from the former CIA director.” Brennan: “I encountered, and am aware of, information and intelligence that revealed contacts and interactions between Russian officials and US persons involved in the Trump campaign.” Bruce: “For the first time, John Brennan saying during the campaign, he was concerned about ties between the Russians and the Trump campaign – so much so, he thought the FBI should investigate.” On the CBS Evening News (5/23, story 5, 3:20, Pelley), Nancy Cordes reported, “By last July, he said, the volume of contacts was large enough to warrant the creation of a working group, made up of agents from the CIA, FBI, and NSA.” Brennan: “Having been involved in many counter-intelligence cases in the past, I know what the Russians try to do. ... Frequently, individuals who go along the treasonous path do not even realize they’re along that path until it gets to be a bit too late.”

Peter Alexander reported on NBC Nightly News (5/23, story 4, 2:25, Holt) that Brennan “says he never saw proof of collusion.” But CNN’s Situation Room (5/23) said that while Brennan “stopped short of saying he saw clear evidence that collusion took place between Russia and the Trump campaign, he said he saw a need for serious investigation on whether Russian officials were working on Trump’s behalf wittingly or unwittingly.” Townhall (5/23, Vespa) reports, “Brennan also said that in terms of hard evidence of collusion, he doesn’t know. What he does know is that there was enough to warrant an inquiry.”

The New York Times (5/23, Apuzzo) reports that Brennan said that in early August 2016, he warned Alexander Bortnikov, the director of Russia’s Federal Security Service, “not to meddle in the election.” The Times says his “warning proved futile.” USA Today (5/23, Kelly) reports that

Brennan “declined to identify Trump campaign officials who had contact with Russian officials, saying that the information was classified and had been provided to the committee on a classified basis.” The Washington Post (5/23, Miller) reports that the FBI investigation “has scrutinized Trump associates including Paul Manafort, Trump’s former campaign manager; Carter Page, who was once listed as a foreign policy adviser to Trump; and former national security adviser Michael Flynn.”

The AP (5/23, Sullivan, Riechmann) reports that Brennan’s testimony “was the clearest public description yet of the significance these contacts play in counterintelligence investigations that continue to hang over the White House,” and Politico (5/23, Wright) similarly reports that his remarks “are the most direct acknowledgment yet by a current or former US official that Russia sought to recruit Americans to help in its effort to affect the 2016 contest.”

Rep. Jim Himes (D-CT) said on CNN’s Anderson Cooper 360 (5/23), “I think that my Republican colleague was hoping to get the answer that he had seen no evidence of collusion. To be very careful about what Brennan said, Brennan didn’t give him quite the answer he wanted. He said, ‘I saw contacts that raised some concerns.’”

Rep. Mike McCaul (R-TX) told CNN’s Situation Room (5/23) that the allegations made by Brennan are serious and need to be investigated. McCaul said that lawmakers were told in October “that the Russians were in fact attempting to influence our elections. Whether they had an impact or not was still unclear at that time. ... But, it was very clear to me that Russian intelligence and military were attempting to influence our elections.”

David Gergen said on CNN’s Anderson Cooper 360 (5/23) that “the Trump people” are “going to push back against Brennan. They’re going to say he’s a lackey of President Obama, he was an Obama appointee, and he was trying to stick it to the President wherever he could today.” Gergen added that Brennan “spent 25 years in the CIA, rode through the ranks of Republican administrations as well as Democratic administrations.”

The Washington Post (5/23) says in an editorial, “Brennan’s testimony made only more imperative a full investigation of Russia’s election-year hacking, any sort of Trump campaign collusion and any after-the-fact attempt to foil this question-asking. Yet even as the public case for such an investigation continues to strengthen, revelations about Mr. Trump’s apparent attempts to challenge the FBI’s inquiry into these questions continue to roll in.”

The Washington Free Beacon (5/23, Gertz) writes that as CIA director from 2013 until January, “Brennan initiated a number of reforms that critics say have weakened the agency, including weakening the CIA operations directorate, its spying branch, by mixing in analysts with espionage and covert action specialists.” Reuters (5/23, Zengerle, Chiacu), McClatchy (5/23, Schofield), the Washington Times (5/23, Boylan), and The Hill (5/23, Williams) also cover Brennan’s testimony.

Coats Declines To Comment On Report Of Pressure From Trump. On ABC World News Tonight (5/23, story 6, 2:05, Muir), Mary Bruce reported that after the Washington Post reported that Trump “asked two of his top intelligence officials to publicly deny any coordination with the Russians, one of those officials, the Director of National Intelligence, pressed by lawmakers today, would neither confirm nor deny.” Coats: “It’s not appropriate for me to comment publicly on any of that.” Bruce: “For now, the Director isn’t saying anymore.” The Washington Post (5/23, Nakashima) reports that Coats was asked about the report at a hearing of the Senate Armed Services Committee. He did say that if asked by special counsel Robert Mueller, “he would provide details of his conversation with Trump to Mueller.” Coats said, “I certainly will provide them with what I know and what I don’t know.”

On the CBS Evening News (5/23, story 5, 3:20, Pelley), Nancy Cordes reported, “CBS News has confirmed that the President asked Coats to push back on the FBI’s Russia investigation. Mr. Trump made the same request of NSA Director Mike Rogers.” The Wall Street Journal (5/23, Tau, Jamerson) reports that when asked if he had spoken with Rogers about any such request, Coats replied, “That is something that I would like to withhold, that question, at this particular point in time.”

Politico (5/23, Nelson) reports that Sen. Marco Rubio said Tuesday that if the Post report is accurate, “the scope of problems created would extend far beyond the Russia investigation.” Rubio said on CNN’s New Day (5/23), “It goes further in my mind, as a member of the Intelligence Committee, than just the focus on the Russia investigation. I think it goes into the very nature of the intelligence community’s work and its ability to work with the executive branch and the presidency.”

Rep. Joaquin Castro (D-TX) said on CNN’s The Lead (5/23), “If the media reports are true and if the President did what is being reported, then I think there’s a pretty credible case of obstruction of justice, both in the firing of [ex-FBI Director] Jim Comey and also in...asking members of the intelligence community to say that there was no collusion really without evidence one way or the other."

Rep. Adam Schiff (D-CA) told CNN's Situation Room (5/23) that he would like to have Coats come before the House Intelligence Committee and would like to ask him about conversations with Trump regarding investigations into Russian meddling. He said he'd also like to have Rogers answer similar questions before the committee. Rep. Chris Stewart (R-UT) said on CNN's New Day (5/23), "It would be troubling for this president or any president to be viewed as interfering or take actions that would be interfering with any investigation and one of the things we would want to understand."

The Los Angeles Times (5/23, Cloud) and Washington Times (5/23, Morton) have brief reports.

Senate Intelligence Committee Indicates Flynn Could Be Held In Contempt. On NBC Nightly News (5/23, story 4, 2:25, Holt), Peter Alexander reported that the Senate Intelligence Committee is "zeroing in on" Flynn, "ruling out immunity and threatening to hold him in contempt of Congress if he refuses to turn over subpoenaed documents." Senate Intelligence Chairman Richard Burr: "I've said that everything is on the table. That's not our preference today. We would like to hear from Gen. Flynn. We'd like to see his documents." The Washington Post (5/23, Demirjian) reports that Vice Chairman Mark Warner "said the panel would not specify what measures it would pursue 'before we actually take the ultimate sanctions step' of voting to hold Flynn in contempt." USA Today (5/23, Johnson, Kelly) says the committee "accelerated its pursuit" of Flynn "issuing two new subpoenas for his business records – and raising the specter" of holding Flynn in contempt of Congress.

Sen. Chris Murphy told CNN's Situation Room (5/23) that Burr and Warner "are taking the right steps. They are going to give him another opportunity to do right by this committee and turn over these documents, but they have made it very clear that if he doesn't take this second opportunity, then there's a contempt charge at the end of this."

Rep. Adam Schiff (D-CA) told CNN's Situation Room (5/23) that he doesn't believe Flynn's Fifth Amendment protections extend to his business documents. He said the House Intelligence Committee will "be entertaining the same options in terms of our subpoena which I hope will go out shortly to obtain these documents." He said they would also be open to holding Flynn in contempt and that they are "certainly a long way from making any judgment about" granting Flynn immunity.

Trump Retains Kasowitz As Counsel. The Washington Post (5/23, Wagner, Parker) reports, "President Trump has retained the services of a trusted lawyer, Marc E. Kasowitz, to help him navigate" the investigations into his campaign. Kasowitz, "who has known Trump for decades, has represented Trump in numerous cases, including on his divorce records, real estate transactions and allegations of fraud at Trump University." The Wall Street Journal (5/23, Ballhaus, Bender) reports that two senior White House officials confirmed the hire, though neither the White House nor Kasowitz had any official comment. The Hill (5/23, Fabian) reports, "It's unclear whether Trump will enlist other lawyers to work with Kasowitz."

Depositions Coming In Dossier Defamation Suit Against BuzzFeed. McClatchy (5/23, Hall, Gordon) reports that attorneys for Russian technology magnate Aleksej Gubarev, who is suing BuzzFeed for defamation over its publication of "a former British spy's dossier about Russia's alleged scheme" to help Trump win the presidency, "will seek within the next two weeks to take sworn testimony from its editor and several reporters."

Fox News Retracts Seth Rich Report, But Hannity Remains Defiant. The New York Times (5/23, Victor) reports, "Fox News on Tuesday retracted a May 16 story about the murder" of former Democratic National Committee staff member Seth Rich, "which has stirred conspiracy theories that have been pushed by Sean Hannity." In a statement, Fox News said, "The article was not initially subjected to the high degree of editorial scrutiny we require for all our reporting. Upon appropriate review, the article was found not to meet those standards and has since been removed." The Washington Post (5/23, Phillips) reports that Fox News and its Washington affiliate "reported last week that Rich had leaked 44,053 DNC emails and 17,761 attachments to a now-deceased WikiLeaks director. The stories immediately gained traction on social media and among conservative news outlets – even as Rich's family rejected the reports."

The Hill (5/23, Concha) reports that Hannity "ripped his critics and the mainstream media on his nationally syndicated radio program Tuesday, saying, 'I am not Fox.com or FoxNews.com, I retracted nothing.'" He continued, "For those accusing me of pushing a conspiracy theory, you are the biggest phony hypocrites in the entire world." Deadline Hollywood (5/23, Patten) reports that Hannity said Monday “that his heart was ‘not troubled in the least’ over reports of FNC staffers being ashamed of his beating of the drum that the 27-year old Rich may have been murdered by potentially politically connected operatives for allegedly communicating with WikiLeaks.”

The Drudge Report links to a Gateway Pundit (5/23, Hoft) piece stating that hacker Kim Dotcom “admitted on Saturday that he was part of an operation along with Seth Rich to get stolen DNC emails to Wikileaks” and said that “he is willing to come to the US and give testimony if it is required.” In a statement on his website, Kim Dotcom writes, “I know that Seth Rich was involved in the DNC leak.”

Rich’s parents Mary and Joel Rich write in the Washington Post (5/23), “Imagine having to face every single day knowing that your son was murdered. ... Imagine that every single day, with every phone call you hope that it’s the police, calling to tell you that there has been a break in the case. Imagine that instead, every call that comes in is a reporter asking what you think of a series of lies or conspiracies about the death. That nightmare is what our family goes through every day.”

Ignatius: 2018 Shaping Up To Be “Impeachment Election.” David Ignatius writes in his Washington Post (5/23) column, “For all Mueller’s probity, this investigation has an inescapable political destination. Mueller must refer any evidence of wrongdoing by Trump himself to the House of Representatives as evidence of possible ‘high crimes and misdemeanors’ that might warrant impeachment.” Since the “GOP-dominated House” would be unlikely to “begin impeachment proceedings, even on strong evidence of obstruction...the real collision point ahead is the 2018 midterm election. This will be the ‘impeachment election,’ and it may be as bitterly contested as any in decades.”

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

“When Terrorists Target Children.” The New York Times (5/23) editorializes the “quickest way for open societies to lose the freedoms they enjoy and the Islamic State seeks to destroy would be to whip up divisive ethnic, racist and religious hatreds.”

“Vermont’s D.I.Y. Approach On Marijuana.” The New York Times (5/24) editorializes, “Vermont is on the verge of becoming the ninth state to legalize the recreational use of marijuana, but, being Vermont, it is taking an earthier, grow-it-yourself approach – one that could become a model for others.” Legislation “that would let people 21 and older keep two flowering and four young marijuana plants at home” and let them “possess up to one ounce of the drug...resembles that of the District of Columbia.” The Times recommends that Gov. Phil Scott “sign this sensible measure.”

Washington Post.

“The Best Response To The Tragedy In Manchester.” The Washington Post (5/23) editorializes the “Incomprehensible” and “sickening” attack in Manchester “should redouble the determination of civilized nations to combat the evil that imbues the Islamic State and its followers.” The Post says the response to the attack by Manchester’s residents “as thousands of people of all races and faiths gathered for a vigil in the city’s Albert Square” is a positive step “focuses on uniting rather than dividing a diverse society.”

“Trump Pushes The Boundaries On The Russia Probe – Again.” The Washington Post (5/23) says in an editorial that former CIA Director Brennan’s testimony “made only more imperative a full investigation of Russia’s election-year hacking, any sort of Trump campaign collusion and any after-the-fact attempt to foil this question-asking. Yet even as the public case for such an investigation continues to strengthen, revelations about Mr. Trump’s apparent attempts to challenge the FBI’s inquiry into these questions continue to roll in.”

“Was Maryland Stabbing Death A Hate Crime?” In an editorial, the Washington Post (5/23) writes that “answers are needed,” as investigators seek to determine whether race was a motive in the “senseless and horrible tragedy” of the fatal stabbing of Richard Collins – who was black – by Sean Urbanski – who is white. Police have charged Urbanski, a University of Maryland student, with the murder of Collins, also a student, as a “totally unprovoked” attack. The Post finds it important that the FBI has been called in to investigate whether the murder was a hate crime, as Urbanski “appears to have publicly identified with a Facebook group that posts racist material.” The Post concludes that a “continued effort against the bigotry that sadly still divides this country.”

Wall Street Journal.

“Trump’s Bob Kerrey Budget.” A Wall Street Journal (5/23) editorial says President Trump’s budget proposal vindicates former Sen. Bob Kerrey, who argued in the 1990s that other programs would eventually feel the pinch if entitlements were not reformed. Like Democrats, the Journal argues, Trump is avoiding Social Security and Medicare and, as a result, every other government priority is left struggling for the remaining funds.

“Ending North Korea’s Cyber Impunity.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (5/23) points to evidence the cybersecurity firm Symantec released on Monday connecting a North Korean hacking syndicate, the Lazarus Group, to the Wannacry ransomware attack, and says the international community must address Pyongyang’s hackers as a threat just as serious as its nuclear program and missile testing. The Journal warns additional sanctions terminating North Korea’s access to foreign currencies will likely increase hacking efforts, and suggests implementing much tougher sanctions, including those proposed by Rep. Ed Royce, to punish Pyongyang for its criminal activities.

“Jihad In Manchester.” The Wall Street Journal (5/23) editorializes that integration of Muslim areas is key to overcoming terrorism, saying that governments must work to address the problem within Muslim communities that are isolated from mainstream society.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Ex-CIA Director Brennan Sheds Light On Escalating Russia Probe
Britain Raises Terror Alert Level After ISIS Claims Deadly Suicide Bombing
Google Vs. Uber: How One Engineer Sparked A War
Bipartisan Pushback Greet’s Trump’s Proposed Budget

New York Times:

Ex-CIA Chief Reveals Mounting Concern Over Trump Campaign And Russia
Terror Alert In Britain Is Raised To Maximum As ISIS Claims Manchester Attack
In Manchester, A Loud Bang, Silence, Then Screaming And Blood
Trump’s Saudi Arabia Trip Figures Into Plan For Palestinian Deal
Republicans, Pushing Aside Trump’s Budget, Find Few Alternatives
Malaysian Money. Opulent Ideas. But Now, For Park Lane, A Forced Sale.
Roger Moore, Who Played James Bond 007 Times, Dies At 89

Washington Post:

Russia Contacts Alarmed Brennan
Privatizing Assets To Modernize The Rest
Steep Budget Cuts Don’t Sit Well With Many In GOP
Google Data Mine Digs Into Credit-Card Privacy Renewed Privacy Issue Over Google Ad Program
Britain Raises Threat Level To ‘Critical’
A Bang, A Brief Silence, Then ‘Absolute Mayhem’

Financial Times:

UK Raises Terror Threat After Manchester Bombing
Nigeria’s Chibok Girls Still Waiting To Go Home
Us Files Fiat Suit Alleging Emissions Violations

Washington Times:

Europe’s Denial Of Islamic Terrorism Threat Perplexes Security Specialists
Amid Shock And Grief, Britons Are Told ‘A Further Attack May Be Imminent’
Brennan: Russia Recruited Americans To ‘Wittingly And Unwittingly’ Influence The 2016 Election
Trump Requests \$24.5-Million-Per-Mile Border Wall, U.S. Choice Of Immigrants
Montana Voters To Send New Lawmaker, Health Care Message To Congress
Trump Sends Optimistic Budget To Pessimistic Congress

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Manchester Bombing; Manchester Bombing-Suspect; Manchester Bombing-Victims; Manchester Bombing-US Cities Reactions; Manchester Bombing-Trump; Russia Meddling Investigation; Severe Weather; California-Fuel Tank Explosion; Budget Proposal; Roger Moore Dies; Manchester Bombing-Locals Help.

CBS: Manchester Bombing; Manchester Bombing-Locals Help; Manchester Bombing-US Cities Reactions; Manchester Bombing-Trump; Russia Meddling Investigation; Alcohol-Breast Cancer; Univ of Maryland Murder; Dina Merrill Dies; Roger Moore Dies; Manchester Bombing-Memorial.

NBC: Manchester Bombing; Manchester Bombing-Suspect; Manchester Bombing-Trump; Russia Meddling Investigation; Budget Proposal; Manchester Bombing-US Cities Reactions; Roger Moore Dies; Alcohol-Breast Cancer; Manchester Bombing-Locals Help.

Network TV At A Glance:

Manchester Bombing – 29 minutes, 25 seconds
Russia Meddling Investigation – 7 minutes, 50 seconds
Manchester Bombing-US Cities Reactions – 6 minutes
Manchester Bombing-Trump – 3 minutes, 45 seconds
Budget Proposal – 2 minutes, 20 seconds
Alcohol-Breast Cancer – 2 minutes, 10 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Russia Meddling Investigation; Trump-Vatican Visit; Manchester Bombing; Newark Airport Temp Closed; Wall Street News.

CBS: Manchester Bombing; Russia Meddling Investigation; Trump-Vatican Visit; Budget Proposal; Newark Airport Temp Closed.

FOX: Manchester Bombing; Budget Proposal.

NPR: Trump-Vatican Visit; Russia Meddling Investigation; Manchester Bombing.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Participates in an audience with His Holiness Pope Francis; participates in a bilateral meeting with Cardinal Secretary of State Pietro Parolin; tour the Sistine Chapel and St. Peter's Basilica; participates in a bilateral meeting with President Sergio Mattarella of Italy; participates in a bilateral meeting with Prime Minister Paolo Gentiloni of Italy; take an official photo with Their Majesties King Philippe; participates in a bilateral meeting with Prime Minister Charles Michel of Belgium.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Participates in a listening session with small businesses and job creators in the community in Baton Rouge, LA; delivers remarks at Cajun Industries.

US Senate: 9:30 AM Senate Armed Services subcommittee hearing on a 355-ship U.S. Navy – Seapower Subcommittee hearing on 'Industry Perspectives on Options and Considerations for Achieving a 355 Ship Navy', with testimony from Ingalls Shipbuilding President Brian Cuccias; General Dynamics Executive Vice President for Marine Systems John Casey; and Shipbuilders Council of America President Matthew Paxton Location: Rm 232A, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://armed-services.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Vishal Amin to be U.S. Intellectual Property Enforcement Coordinator; Stephen Elliott Boyd to be Assistant Attorney General for Legislative Affairs; and Lee Francis Cissna to be U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services Director Location: Rm 226, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Homeland Security Committee hearing on transnational criminal organizations – Hearing on 'Border Insecurity: The Rise of MS-13 and Other Transnational Criminal Organizations', with testimony from Suffolk County Police Department (NY) Commissioner Timothy Sini; Chelsea Police Department (MA) Criminal Investigative Division Detective Scott Conley; and Montgomery County Police Department (MD) Chief J. Thomas Manger Location: Rm 342, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

10:30 AM Senate Appropriations subcommittee hearing on FY'18 U.S. Navy and Marine Corps budgets – Defense Subcommittee hearing 'To review of the President's Fiscal Year 2018 funding request and budget justification for the U.S. Navy and U.S. Marine Corps', with testimony from Acting Secretary of the Navy Sean Stackley; Chief of Naval Operations Adm. John Richardson; and U.S. Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Robert Neller Location: Rm 192, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.senate.gov/>

<https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

11:00 AM Republican Sen. James Lankford speaks at Conference on International Religious Persecution Location: Capitol Hill, Washington, DC <http://www.lankford.senate.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/SenatorLankford>

1:00 PM Leadership Conference Education Fund release report on economic security – Leadership Conference Education Fund release 'In Their Own Words: Working People and the Need for Policies that Provide Economic Security' report, reviewing and calling for policy initiatives in 'six areas critical to the life of every American worker: higher wages, affordable family leave, paid sick days, fair scheduling, access to health care, and basic living standards'. Speakers include The Education Fund Executive Vice President and Director of Public Policy Nancy Zirkin, democrats Sen. Patty Murray and Reps. Bobby Scott and Rosa DeLauro, The Education Fund Director of Human Rights Policy June Zeitlin, Family Values @ Work Co-Executive Director Wendy Chun-Hoon, National Council on Disability Executive Director Rebecca Cokley, National Women's Law Center Federal Reproductive Rights and Health Director Janel George, Mothering Justice Director of Action and Organizing Staci Lowry and Labor Council for Latin American Advancement Director of gender equality Monica Ramirez Location: SVC-210, Capitol Visitors Center, Washington, DC www.civilrights.org <https://twitter.com/civilrightsorg>

2:15 PM Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee second hearing on U.S. leadership in the Asia-Pacific – East Asia, The Pacific, and International Cybersecurity Policy Subcommittee hearing on 'American Leadership in the Asia-Pacific, Part 2: Economic Issues', with testimony from U.S. Chamber of Commerce Senior Vice President For Asia Tami Overby; and University of Maryland School of Public Policy Professor and Dean Dr Robert Orr Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on a committee print of 'S.1094 – Department of Veterans Affairs Accountability and Whistleblower Protection Act of 2017' Location: Rm 418, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://veterans.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/VACHair>

2:30 PM Senate Judiciary subcommittee hearing on 'law enforcement access to data stored across borders' – Crime and Terrorism Subcommittee hearing on 'Law Enforcement Access to Data Stored Across Borders: Facilitating Cooperation and Protecting Rights', with testimony from Deputy Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division Brad Wiegmann; UK Deputy National Security Advisor Paddy McGuinness; Microsoft Corporation Chief Legal Officer Brad Smith; American University Washington College of Law Associate Professor Jennifer Daskal; and Massachusetts Office of the Attorney General Digital Evidence Laboratory Director Christopher Kelly * Rescheduled from 10 May Location: Rm 226, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Senate Armed Services subcommittee hearing on DOE atomic energy defense activities and programs – Strategic Forces Subcommittee hearing on 'Department of Energy Atomic Energy Defense Activities and Programs', with testimony from Under Secretary of Energy for Nuclear Security Frank Klotz, and Acting Assistant Secretary for Environmental Management Susan Cange; National Nuclear Security Administration Deputy Administrator for Naval Reactors Adm. James Caldwell, Jr.; and Government Accountability Office Director of Natural Resources and Environment David Trimble Location: Rm G50, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://armed-services.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Closed Briefing: Intelligence Matters Location: Rm 219, Hart Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.senate.gov>

2:30 PM Senate Commerce subcommittee hearing on 10 years of the Virginia Graeme Baker Pool and Spa Safety Act – Consumer Protection, Product Safety, Insurance, and Data Security Subcommittee hearing on 'Pool Safety: The Tenth Anniversary of the Virginia Graeme Baker Pool and Spa Safety Act', with testimony from Nancy Baker – mother of Virginia Graeme Baker; ZAC Foundation co-founder Karen Cohn; Association of Pool & Spa Professionals President and CEO Rich Gottwald; and American Red Cross Director of Aquatics Centennial Initiatives Connie Harvey Location: Rm 253, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov>

Annual Foster Youth Shadow Day – Annual Foster Youth Shadow Day, with 100 former foster youth – wearing teal sashes to represent National Foster Care Month – visiting their Members of Congress to learn how bills become laws and share their experiences in the nation's child welfare system Location: Capitol Hill, Washington, DC fosteryouthcaucus-

karenbass.house.gov

US House: 9:00 AM House Natural Resources subcommittee oversight hearing on 'federal natural resources laws gone astray' – Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee oversight hearing on 'Examining Impacts of Federal Natural Resources Laws Gone Astray', with testimony from DC Cattle Company owner David Cook; Napa County, CA, Supervisor Diane Dillon; Washington County, UT, Deputy Attorney Celeste Maloy; and Nageezi, NM, Chapter House Member Kendra Pinto Location: Rm 1324, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

9:30 AM Hearing on 'Oversight of the FBI's Independence' Location: Rm 2154, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

9:30 AM OMB Director Mulvaney testifies to House Budget Committee – Hearing on 'The President's Fiscal Year 2018 Budget', with testimony from Office of Management and Budget Director Mick Mulvaney Location: Rm 1334, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://budget.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/housebudgetGOP>

9:45 AM MEMBERS OF CONGRESS TO HOLD PRESS CONFERENCE ON MEDICARE FOR ALL LEGISLATION – Participants: Congressman John Conyers, Jr., Dean of the U.S. House of Representatives; Congressman Keith Ellison, Congressional Progressive Caucus Co-Chair; Congressman Ro Khanna; Congresswoman Sheila Jackson Lee; Congresswoman Bonnie Watson Coleman; Congressman Jamie Raskin; Congressman Adriano Espaillat; Congressman Peter Welch; Dr. Philip Verhoef, Assistant Professor of Medicine and Pediatrics, ICU physician, University of Chicago; Jean Ross, RN., Co-President, National Nurses United; Additional Members of Congress. Media RSVP to Shadawn.reddick-smith@mail.house.gov Location: House Triangle, near the corner of New Jersey Ave. and Independence Ave.

10:00 AM Dem Rep. Grace Meng holds panel discussion on menstrual hygiene policies – Democratic Rep. Grace Meng holds panel discussion on 'how current menstrual hygiene policies at the local, state, and federal level have negative outcomes for women's health, safety, and wellbeing' and what can be done to address them, featuring Period Equity co-founder Laura Strausfeld, Women's Voices for the Earth (WVFE) Director of Science and Research Alexandra Scranton, Seventh Generation Director of Mission Advocacy and Engagement Ashley Orgain, United Nations Population Fund Washington Office Director Sarah Craven, and Bringing Resources to Aid Women's Shelters (BRAWS) Executive Director Holly Seibold * Held ahead of World Menstrual Hygiene Day (28 May) Location: Rm 2255, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC
meng.house.gov <https://twitter.com/RepGraceMeng>

10:00 AM House Judiciary Committee markup hearing continues – Markup hearing continues on 'H.R. 2431, Michael Davis, Jr. and Danny Oliver in Honor of State and Local Law Enforcement Act', 'H.R. 2407, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services Reauthorization Act', 'H.R. 2406, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement Authorization Act', and 'H.R. XXXX, Secret Service Reauthorization Act' * Began 18 May Location: Rm 2141, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

10:00 AM House Ways and Means Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H.R. 2372, VETERAN Act', 'H.R. 2579, Broader Options for Americans Act', and 'H.R. 2581, Verify First Act' Location: Rm 1100, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

10:00 AM House Transportation Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'HR 2518, The Coast Guard Authorization Act of 2017', 'HR 2548, The FEMA Reauthorization Act of 2017', 'HR 2547: a bill to support the Nation's veterans by expanding to all Veterans Administration medical professionals the ability to provide physical examinations on eligible veterans and issue the medical certificates required for the operation of a commercial motor vehicle if certain requirements are met', 'HR 1684, the Disaster Support for Communities and Homeowners Act', 'HR 2258, the Active Duty Voluntary Acquisition of Necessary Credentials for Employment (ADVANCE) Act', and 'HR 2593, The Federal Maritime Commission Authorization Act of 2017' Location: Rm 2167, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://transportation.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/Transport>

10:00 AM House Science subcommittees joint hearing on the overhead cost of research – Research and Technology Subcommittee and Oversight Subcommittee joint hearing on 'Examining the Overhead Cost of Research', with testimony from National Science Foundation Institution and Award Support Division Director Dale Bell; Government Accountability Office Director of Natural Resources and Environment John Neumann; Duke University Associate Vice President of Finance and Compliance Officer James Luther; and Ohio University Department of Economics Distinguished Professor Emeritus Dr Richard Vedder Location: Rm 2318, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM Agriculture Secretary Perdue testifies to House Appropriations subcommittee on budget – Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Subcommittee ‘Budget Hearing – USDA Office of the Secretary’, with testimony from Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue; and U.S. Department of Agriculture Chief Economist Dr Robert Johansson, and Budget Officer Michael Young Location: Rm 2362-A, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:00 AM House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on National Guard and reserves – Defense Subcommittee ‘National Guard and Reserve Hearing’, with testimony from National Guard Bureau’s Gen. Joseph Lengyel; Army Reserve Chief Lt. Gen. Charles Luckey; Navy Reserve Chief Vice Adm. Luke McCollum; Marine Corps Forces Reserve Commander Lt. Gen. Rex McMillian; and Air Force Reserve Chief Lt. Gen. Maryanne Miller Location: H-140, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:00 AM House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on the GSA – Financial Services and General Government Subcommittee hearing on ‘General Services Administration’, with testimony from GSA Administrator Tim Horne Location: H-310, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:00 AM POSTPONED: Transportation Secretary Chao testifies to House Appropriations subcommittee hearing – POSTPONED: Transportation, Housing and Urban Development, and Related Agencies Subcommittee ‘Department of Transportation Budget Hearing’, with testimony from Secretary of Transportation Elaine Chao Location: Rm 2358-A, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:30 AM VA Secretary Shulkin testifies on FY’18 budget at House Veterans Affairs Committee hearing – Hearing on ‘U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs Budget Request for Fiscal Year 2018’, with testimony from Secretary of Veterans Affairs David Shulkin, Acting Assistant Secretary for Information and Technology Rob Thomas, and Acting Assistant Secretary for Management and Department of Veterans Affairs CFO Edward Murray; Veterans Health Administration CFO Mark Yow; Veterans Benefits Administration Acting Principal Deputy Under Secretary James Manker; and National Cemetery Administration Deputy Under Secretary for Finance and Planning and CFO Matthew Sullivan + written statements from Disabled American Veterans; Paralyzed Veterans of America; The American Legion; and Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States Location: Rm 334, Cannon House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

10:30 AM House Education Committee hearing on ‘empowering students and families to make informed decisions on higher education’ – Hearing on ‘Empowering Students and Families to Make Informed Decisions on Higher Education’, with testimony from American Institutes for Research Vice President Dr Mark Schneider; American Enterprise Institute Resident Fellow Jason Delisle; Institute for Higher Education Policy Vice President of Policy Research Mamie Voight; and Pepperdine University President and CEO Andrew Benton Location: Rm 2175, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

11:00 AM Education Secretary DeVos testifies to House Appropriations subcommittee hearing – Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Subcommittee ‘Department of Education Budget Hearing’, with testimony from Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos Location: Rm 2358-C, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

11:00 AM Architect of the Capitol testifies to House Administration Committee – Hearing on ‘Oversight of the Architect of the Capitol’s Office of Inspector General’, with testimony from Architect of the Capitol Stephen Ayers, and Inspector General Christopher Failla; and Government Accountability Office Director of Financial Management and Assurance Beryl Davis Location: Rm 1310, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://cha.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAdmnGOP>

12:00 PM House expected to vote on Reducing Regulatory Burdens Act – Houses meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include completion of consideration of ‘H.R. 953 – Reducing Regulatory Burdens Act of 2017’, beginning consideration of ‘H.R. 1973 – Protecting Young Victims from Sexual Abuse Act’ and ‘H.R. 1761 – Protecting Against Child Exploitation Act of 2017’, and consideration of legislation under suspension of the rules Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

1:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee markup hearing – Western Hemisphere Subcommittee markup hearing on ‘H. Res. 201, Expressing support to the Government of Argentina for its investigation into the terrorist bombing of the Embassy of Israel in Buenos Aires on March 17, 1992’, ‘H. Res. 259, Expressing concern and condemnation over the political, economic, social, and humanitarian crisis in Venezuela’, ‘H. Res. 336, Reaffirming a strong commitment to the United States – Mexico Partnership’, and ‘H.R. 1918, Nicaragua Investment Conditionality Act of 2017’ Location: Rm 2172, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

1:00 PM House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on Indian Health Service budget – Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies Subcommittee ‘Budget Hearing – Indian Health Service’, with testimony from Indian Health Service Acting Director Rear Adm. Chris Buchanan, Acting Chief Medical Officer Capt. Michael Troedt, and Acting Office of Finance and Accounting Director Ann Church Location: Rm 2007, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

1:30 PM Bipartisan Reps. Walter Jones, John Garamendi, and John Duncan call for debate on war in Afghanistan – Republican Reps. Walter Jones and John Duncan, and Democratic Rep. John Garamendi hold press conference regarding ‘H.R. 1666, to prohibit funds for activities in Afghanistan, and discuss the ‘necessity to debate the 16 year war in Afghanistan’ Location: House Triangle, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC jones.house.gov <https://twitter.com/repwalterjones>

1:30 PM Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on religious freedom – Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on ‘Freedom of Belief: Countering Religious Violence’, with witnesses – U.S. Committee on International Religious Freedom Chair Rev. Thomas Reese, Pew Research Center Director of Religion Research Alan Cooperman, Princeton University Professor of Jurisprudence Robert George, and Center for Global Policy Senior Analyst Dr Kamran Bokhari – presenting testimony informed by their work on freedom of belief, and discussing ‘which policies are effective and which need to be reevaluated’ Location: Rm 2255, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://tlhrc.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/TLHRCommission>

2:00 PM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Energy and Mineral Resources Subcommittee legislative hearing on a discussion draft of ‘H.R. XXXX. Community Reclamation Partnerships Act’, with testimony from Pennsylvania Deputy Secretary of Environmental Protection for Active and Abandoned Mine Operations John Stefanko (on behalf of Interstate Mining Compact Commission, and National Association of Abandoned Mine Land Programs); Trout Unlimited President/CEO Chris Wood; and Appalachian Voices Senior Legislative Representative Thom Kay Location: Rm 1324, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

2:00 PM House Appropriations subcommittee oversight hearing on ‘high-risk American Indian and Alaska Native programs’ – Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies Subcommittee oversight hearing on ‘High-Risk American Indian and Alaska Native Programs (Education, Healthcare, Energy)’, with testimony from Government Accountability Office Education, Workforce and Income Security Team Director Melissa Emrey-Arras, Health Care Team Director Kathleen King, and Natural Resources and Environment Team Director Frank Rusco Location: Rm 2007, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

2:00 PM Treasury Secretary Mnuchin testifies to House Ways and Means Committee on FY’18 budget – House Committee on Ways and Means hearing on President Donald Trump’s fiscal year 2018 budget proposals for the Department of Treasury, with testimony from Secretary of the Treasury Steven Mnuchin Location: Rm 1100, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

2:00 PM House Veterans’ Affairs subcommittee hearing on VA financial management – Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee hearing on ‘VA Financial Management’, with testimony from Deputy Assistant Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Finance Laurie Park; Veterans Benefits Administration Acting Deputy CFO Mitchel Sturm; Government Accountability Office Director of Financial Management and Assurance Beryl Davis; Department of Veterans Affairs Deputy Assistant Inspector General for Audits and Evaluations Nick Dahl, and Office of Inspector General Financial Audit Division Director Sue Schwendiman; and The American Legion Pension Maintenance Center and Debt Management Team Leader Julie Larsen Location: Rm 334, Cannon House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

2:00 PM House Armed Services subcommittee hearing on Department of the Navy FY’18 budget – Seapower and Projection Forces Subcommittee hearing on ‘Department of the Navy FY 2018 Budget Request for Seapower and Projection Forces’, with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Research, Development, and Acquisition Allison Stiller; U.S. Marine Corps Deputy Commandant for Combat Development and Integration Lt. Gen. Robert Walsh; and Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Integration of Capabilities and Resources Vice Adm. William Lescher Location: Rm 2212, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC www.armedservices.house.gov <https://twitter.com/HASCRpublicans>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Iran – Terrorism, Nonproliferation, and Trade Subcommittee hearing on ‘Nuclear Deal Fallout: The Global Threat of Iran’, with testimony from American Foreign Policy Council Senior Vice President Ilan Berman; Council on Foreign Relations Senior Fellow for Middle East Studies Dr Ray Takeyh; and Brookings Institution Center for Middle East Policy Senior Fellow Dr Daniel Byman Location: Rm 2172, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

2:00 PM House Oversight subcommittees joint hearing on ‘Sue and Settle’ agreements – Intergovernmental Affairs Subcommittee and Interior, Energy, and Environment Subcommittee joint hearing on ‘Sue and Settle’ Agreements: Part I’, with testimony from U.S. Chamber of Commerce Senior Vice President of Environment, Technology and Regulatory Affairs William Kovacs; Simplot Livestock Company’s Darcy Helmick; Holsinger Law’s Kent Holsinger; and environmental and natural resources law professor Justin Pidot Location: Rm 2154, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

3:00 PM DHS Secretary Kelly testifies to House Appropriations subcommittee on budget – Homeland Security Subcommittee hearing on ‘The DHS FY 18 Budget Request’, with testimony from Secretary of Homeland Security John Kelly Location: Rm 2358-A, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

3:30 PM House Armed Services subcommittee hearing on ground force modernization – Tactical Air and Land Forces Subcommittee hearing on ‘Ground Force Modernization Budget Request’, with testimony from Assistant Secretary of the Army for Acquisition, Logistics and Technology’s Military Deputy Lt. Gen. Paul Ostrowski; U.S. Army Deputy Chief of Staff (G-8) Lt. Gen. John Murray; and U.S. Marine Corps Deputy Commandant for Programs and Resources Lt. Gen. Gary Thomas, and Marine Corps Systems Command Commanding General Brig. Gen. Joe Shrader Location: Rm 2118, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC www.armedservices.house.gov <https://twitter.com/HASCRpublicans>

3:30 PM House Dem Financial Services Committee members host roundtable on community development programs – House Committee on Financial Services Ranking Member Maxine Waters and fellow Democratic members Dan Kildee and Emanuel Cleaver host roundtable discussion on ‘how the administration’s proposed elimination of the Community Development Block Grant and HOME Investment Partnerships (HOME) programs would create suffering for whole communities, increase poverty, hunger, and homelessness, and reduce affordable housing and economic development opportunities across the country’, featuring Gary, IN, Mayor Karen Freeman-Wilson, Marion, VA, Mayor David Helms, Allentown, PA, Mayor Ed Pawlowski, Orange County, NC, Commissioner Renee Price, Abode Communities President and CEO Robin Hughes, National Community Development Association President Bonnie Moore, Council of State Community Development Agencies Director Bill Shelton, and N Street Village Executive Director Schroeder Stribling Location: HVC-215, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC democrats-financialservices.house.gov <https://twitter.com/FSCDem>

House Oversight Committee deadline for FBI to provide any memos made by former Director James Comey – Deadline set by the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform for the FBI to provide the committee with all memoranda, notes, summaries, and recordings relating to any communications between former FBI Director James Comey and President Donald Trump * Request followed a New York Times report that said then-Director Comey memorialized the content of phone calls and meetings with President Trump, including one in which the president reportedly referenced the agency’s investigation of former National Security Advisor Michael Flynn and said ‘I hope you can let this go’, which the committee said raises questions over whether the president attempted to influence or impede the investigation * President Trump suddenly fired Director Comey earlier this month, with subsequent reports attributing it to either the latter’s handling of a probe into former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton’s use of a private email server or of a probe into possible links between Russia and the Trump campaign Location: TBD <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

Annual Foster Youth Shadow Day – Annual Foster Youth Shadow Day, with 100 former foster youth – wearing teal sashes to represent National Foster Care Month – visiting their Members of Congress to learn how bills become laws and share their experiences in the nation’s child welfare system Location: Capitol Hill, Washington, DC fosteryouthcaucus-karenbass.house.gov

Other: 10:30 AM FDIC chair announces Q1 2017 bank and thrift industry earnings – Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Chairman Martin Gruenberg announces Quarterly Banking Profile data for Q1 2017 via press briefing, including discussion of industry earnings Location: FDIC, 550 17th Street NW, Washington, DC www.fdic.gov <https://twitter.com/FDICgov>

12:00 PM Dem Sen. Chris Coons speaks on ‘voting rights in the Trump era’ – Democratic

Sen. Chris Coons delivers remarks and participates in a Q&A about 'voting rights in the Trump era,' at an event hosted by the Brennan Center for Justice at the National Press Club Location: National Press Club DC, 529 14th St, NW, Washington, DC coons.senate.gov
<https://twitter.com/SenCoonsOffice>

2:00 PM DoJ National Missing Children's Day commemoration – Department of Justice annual National Missing Children's Day commemoration, with Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein presenting awards honoring two law enforcement officers, two Internet Crimes Against Children task forces and a private citizen for their efforts to recover missing and abducted children and investigate cases of child sexual exploitation and child pornography Location: Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, DC <http://www.usdoj.gov>
<https://twitter.com/TheJusticeDept>

5:30 PM Jewish Primary Day School of the Nation's Capital Yitzhak Rabin Memorial Lecture, with speaker Republican Sen. John McCain Location: Sixth and I Historic Synagogue, 600 I St NW, Washington, DC www.jpds.org

CBO releases cost estimate for House-passed American Health Care Act – Congressional Budget Office releases cost estimate for 'H.R. 1628 – American Health Care Act of 2017', which passed the House of Representatives on 4 May * House Republicans were criticized for passing the bill – their legislation to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act – before the CBO could prepare a cost estimate * Republicans in the Senate have indicated that they will draft their own version of the legislation rather than taking up the House-passed version Location: TBD
www.cbo.gov/ <https://twitter.com/USCBO>

Organic Trade Association Annual Policy Conference continues – Organic Trade Association Annual Policy Conference Day Two, with officials sharing their perspectives on the critical issues confronting U.S. agriculture and its growing organic sector. Speakers include Democratic Reps. Jimmy Panetta, and Tim Ryan, and Republican Rep. John Faso Location: The Newseum, 555 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC www.ota.com <https://twitter.com/OrganicTrade>
#ORGANICWEEKDC

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: "Trump has a meeting with the Pope tomorrow at the Vatican. And you know he's dreading that. It's like getting called to the principal's office. Only, instead of detention, you go to hell as a result."

Jimmy Kimmel: "The President released his budget today for the upcoming year, and it's exactly what you would guess it would be. It cuts programs for the poor and the elderly to give tax breaks to the rich. It's like Robin Hood if Prince John was the good guy."

Jimmy Kimmel: "According to a report by the Washington Post, the President asked two top intelligence officials to publicly deny evidence of collusion, and also asked them to find ways to get FBI Director James Comey to drop his investigation, just like an innocent person would do."

Stephen Colbert: "Just today, this morning, the Trump Administration unveiled their 2018 budget, titled, 'A New Foundation For American Greatness,' which is just slightly grandiose for a financial document. It's like calling your grocery list 'A Bold Vision For Yogurt And Dog Food.'"

Stephen Colbert: "[Budget Director] Mike Mulvaney told reporters, 'We are no longer going to measure compassion by the number of programs or the number of people on those programs. We are going to measure compassion by the number of people we help get off of those programs.' Yes, it's like the old saying, 'Give a man fish, he eats for a day. Take away his fish, we've got all the fish! Woo-hoo! Fish party!'"

James Corden: "[President Trump] asked the Director of National Intelligence and the head of the NSA to lie for him. What was he thinking? He does realize they're intelligence chiefs, right? Intelligence. It's right there in their titles."

James Corden: "This Russian investigation into Trump is like one of those Russian nesting dolls, except every time you open one, the doll inside is somehow bigger. And instead of it being a doll, it's a horrible conspiracy concocted by Russian hackers to systematically erode America's democratic freedoms."

James Corden: "Trump is going to visit the Pope tomorrow, and I bet they'll get along because it looks like both of them are living a life of celibacy."

James Corden: "A White House memo contained a typo that said Donald Trump wants to promote 'lasting peach' between Israel and Palestine. I'm surprised they went with a peach. I always thought of Trump as more of an orange guy."

Jimmy Fallon: "Trump just released his new budget proposal. And Bernie Sanders says his cuts to Medicaid are just cruel. Yeah, but Bernie will get his medicine the same way he has always, finding an old pill in his suit pocket."

Jimmy Fallon: "Yesterday, Education Secretary Betsy DeVos said that people who oppose school choice are flat Earthers. She was like, 'Which is ridiculous, because everyone knows the earth is a cube.'"

Seth Meyers: "Former CIA Director John Brennan testified today that there was contact between President Trump's campaign and Russian officials. However, still no contact between Donald and Melania."

Seth Meyers: "President Trump released a 2018 budget plan today, titled 'A New Foundation For American Greatness.' Boy, you can tell that from the name, Trump loves this budget. When he doesn't love something, he'll give it a boring name like 'Eric.'"

Seth Meyers: "President Trump will meet with Pope Francis tomorrow at the Vatican. 'I can't wait to ask him why he wears that ridiculous thing on his head,' said the Pope."

Conan O'Brien: "Donald Trump's budget director said people need to stop taking government money and get a job."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, May 31, 2017
Date: Wednesday, May 31, 2017 7:01:10 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, MAY 31, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Alaska Dispatch News: New Interior Secretary Ready To Work With Alaska Natives On Sharing Federal Management Duties.
- Coastal Television (AK): U.S. Secretary Of The Interior Ryan Zinke & Senator Lisa Murkowski Conduct Memorial Day Ceremony.
- Fox News: Interior Secretary Zinke Visits Vietnam Veterans Memorial.
- Alaska Dispatch News: Murkowski Campaign Chief Named To Interior Department Post.
- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Bears Ears Critics' Numbers Are Misleading: A Look At Early Monument Sizes.
- Boston Herald: Fishermen Hoping To Reel In Obama-Era Conservation.

- Law360: With Coal Leases Back, Enviro's Want Appeal Restarted.
- Billings (MT) Gazette: Gazette Opinion: Zinke Must Keep His Park Promises.
- Clark County (WA) Columbian: In Our View: Safeguard Monuments.
- Yale University (CT) Environment 360: With Trump, A Full-Scale Assault On Protections For U.S.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- County Plans Lawsuit Over Spokane Tribe's Casino In Airway Heights.
- Feds, Calif. Tribe Push To Nix Suit Over Casino Project.
- Lawmakers Hear Details On Meth Problem During State Meeting.

Bureau Of Indian Education

- Native American Education Groups Respond To Proposed Budget Cuts.

Bureau Of Land Management

- U.S. News & World Report: Strong Support For BLM Buying Land On Wyoming Mountain.
- Washington Times: BLM To Hold Wyoming Oil And Gas Lease Sale In September.
- KKCO-TV Grand Junction (CO): County Commissioners Support BLM Public Land Lease Sales.
- USA Today: Additional Coverage: Trump's Proposed Budget Could Threaten An American Icon.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Lawsuit From 2001 Klamath Shutoff Draws Many Claims.
- Lower Brule Tribe Won't Be Forced To Pay Back Missing Taxpayer Funds.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Denver Post: Groups Seek To Block Construction At Former Nuclear Site.
- E&E Publishing: Alaskan Oil Finds Spur Hopes Arctic Refuge May Hold Large Reserves.
- Syracuse (NY) Post-Standard: 'Secretive' Onondaga Lake Plan Needs More Public Input, Group Says.
- Missoulian (MT): Grizzly Killing Near Missoula Leaves Neighbors Wondering
- Casper (WY) Star-Tribune: Second Large Release Of Endangered Toads Planned; Unique Species Once Thought Extinct Finds Hope.
- Washington Business Journal: Federal Judge Dismisses Remaining Counts In Lawsuit Against Purple Line.
- Watauga (NC) Democrat: Deadly Bat Fungal Infection Cases Confirmed In Stokes County.

National Park Service

- Hanover (PA) Evening Sun: Gettysburg National Military Park Superintendent Reassigned.
- Minneapolis Star Tribune: Reward Upped To $25K For Info About Yellowstone Wolf Death.
- U.S. News & World Report: Public Comment Period Extended On Grand Canyon Bison Plan.
- Oregon Public Broadcasting: Crater Lake National Park Low On Water.
- U.S. News & World Report: Idaho World War II-Era Internment Camp Opens Visitor Center.
- U.S. News & World Report: Report On Response To Tennessee Wildfires Expected In July.
- Los Angeles Times: Two Of Hawaii's National Parks Will Increase Admission Fees To $25.
- Smithsonian: The Powerful Story Behind Glacier Bay National Park's New Totem Poles.
- Greeneville (TN) Sun: Scouts Honor Fallen Veterans.
- KCET-TV Los Angeles: The National Park Service Brings Enchantment To Hidden Ranch This Summer.
- U.S. News & World Report: Man Dies After Falling From Top Of Tennessee Waterfall.
- Fox News: Additional Coverage: Christian Geologist Sues Grand Canyon For Religious Discrimination.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Pacific (GUM) Daily News: Micronesian Starling Nesting Project Hatches Over 200 Successes.
- Pacific (GUM) Daily News: Don't Cut Discretionary Funding For Impact Of Regional Migrants.

Top National News

- ABC: Cohen Refuses Hill Investigators' Request For Information In Russia Probe.
- NBC: White House Continues To Defend Kushner.
- CNN: CNN: "Sources" Say Russians Talked About Having "Derogatory" Info On Trump, Aides.
- Associated Press: Democratic Senators Say Trump's Budget Will Hurt Rural Areas.
- Politico: Economists: Trump's Prediction Of Three Percent Growth Is "Wildly Optimistic."
- Washington Post: Hewitt: Trump Can Solve Tax-Reform Crisis Through Federal Gas Tax Hike.

- USA Today: USA Today: Trump's Plan To Sell Oil Reserves Would Leave Americans Vulnerable.
- Politico: Guessing Game Continues About Trump's Decision On Paris Accord.
- New York Times: Fed's Brainard Adds To Expectations Of June Rate Hike.
- Washington Post: Obama Advisers Warn Of Link Between Climate Change, Disease Epidemics.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Donald Trump's Insult To History."
 - "A Meaningful Move On Voting Rights In Alabama."
 - "Gov Walker Would Drug Test The Poor."
- Washington Post.
 - "'Trump Told Sissi He Wouldn't 'Lecture' Him. So Sissi Cracked Down On Civil Society."
 - "The Supreme Court Rises Above Politics."
 - "The Portland Train Victims Were Heroes."
- Wall Street Journal:
 - "The White House Mess."
 - "Lawyers Get Lassoed."
 - "The Bureaucracy's Judges."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

New Interior Secretary Ready To Work With Alaska Natives On Sharing Federal Management Duties.

The Alaska Dispatch News (5/30, DeMarban) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "said on Tuesday he would work to give Alaska Natives more opportunities to take over wildlife management and other federal responsibilities." Zinke "said the Interior Department needs to look at more opportunities to 'get government out of the way' and give Alaska Native villages more input into federal decisions affecting their communities."

KTUU-TV Anchorage, AK (5/30, Carpenter) reports that "Zinke met with more than 40 Alaska Native leaders Tuesday for an hour and a half round table discussion." Zinke said, "Why can't we allow villages to manage their destiny? And that means being an active participant in managing mammal populations, fish populations rather than having sometimes a smaller voice I think maybe they should have the voice."

Additional coverage was provided by Coastal Television \(AK\) (5/30, Athens), KTUU-TV Anchorage \(AK\) Anchorage, AK (5/30, Essig), KTVA-TV Anchorage \(AK\) Anchorage, AK (5/31, Leval), and KTVF-TV Fairbanks \(AK\) Fairbanks, AK (5/30, Brennen).

U.S. Secretary Of The Interior Ryan Zinke & Senator Lisa Murkowski Conduct Memorial Day Ceremony.

The Coastal Television \(AK\) (5/30, Athens) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is "conducting an approximated week-long tour around the Arctic Circle to Norway, Greenland and Alaska, spearheaded by U.S. Senator Lisa Murkowski." Zinke along with Murkowski and Gov. Bill Walker, "held a Memorial Day Ceremony with Rolling Thunder at Byer's Lake." Zinke will "participate in a variety of events, that includes remarks at AOGA's Annual Conference tomorrow, Wednesday May 31st."

Interior Secretary Zinke Visits Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Fox News (5/30) reports on Interior Secretary Zinke's visit to the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. Zinke spent Memorial Day "sharing war stories with other veterans."

Murkowski Campaign Chief Named To Interior Department Post.

The Alaska Dispatch News (5/30, Martinson) reports that Steve Wackowski, “who led Sen. Lisa Murkowski’s 2016 campaign for re-election, will serve as a senior adviser for Alaska affairs for the Department of Interior, Secretary Ryan Zinke announced Tuesday.” Wackowski will “work for the Interior Department from Anchorage, which marks a shift from the previous administration, when former Alaska adviser Kim Steven Elton worked from Washington, D.C.” Zinke said in a statement, “A lifelong Alaskan and Air Force Major, Steve is perfectly qualified to advise me on Alaskan issues. His broad range of experience will prove to be invaluable as the Department focuses on future energy opportunities in Alaska, the welfare of Alaska Natives, and the vast expanses of lands and waters under Interior’s management.”

Bears Ears Critics’ Numbers Are Misleading: A Look At Early Monument Sizes.

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (5/30, Maffly) reports that “Bears Ears National Monument critics routinely point to the sprawling reach of President Barack Obama’s proclamation, taking in the swath of canyon country from the San Juan River north to Indian Creek, as the monument’s chief defect.” However, “to drive that point, monument critics have relied on misleading numbers to back their claim that large monuments fall outside the norm of the 1906 statute, which gave presidents broad authority to set aside public land to protect objects of scientific interest.” The article says that “a comparison of monument designations by Obama and President Theodore Roosevelt show that recent proclamations, on average, are not that much larger than those a century ago, when Congress passed the Antiquities Act, which Roosevelt invoked with great zeal to safeguard the nation’s natural heritage from looters, miners and loggers who were then misappropriating the West’s resources.”

Listen To The Bears Ears And Protect National Treasures. In an op-ed for USA Today (5/30, Shoff), Emily Brendler Shoff writes about “what it’s actually like to experience” the Bears Ears National Monument. Shoff acknowledges that she is “guilty of favoring wilderness preservation over every other use for land,” but asks, “couldn’t the same be said for those in the opposite camp, who only see land for its profit potential?”

Fishermen Hoping To Reel In Obama-Era Conservation.

The Boston Herald (5/31, Villani) reports that “New England fishermen are looking for a seat at the table as the Trump administration mulls whether to make any adjustments to an Obama-era marine monument off Cape Cod that has drawn criticism for the potential impact on the fishing industry.” The New Bedford \(MA\) Standard-Times (5/30, Metzger) reports that on Tuesday, the New England Fisheries Management Council’s Habitat Committee “recommended that the regulatory council provide feedback to the Trump administration” about the designation of the Northeast Canyons and Seamounts Marine National Monument. According to the article, “while the committee members did not delve into what the letter should say during Tuesday’s meeting, the council chairman, former Rep. John Quinn, the director of public interest at the UMass School of Law in Dartmouth, made clear he believes the council should have jurisdiction.”

With Coal Leases Back, Enviros Want Appeal Restarted.

Law360 (5/30, Phillis) reports that “two environmental groups have asked the D.C. Circuit to restart their appeal challenging the environmental analysis of the federal coal leasing program, arguing that the U.S. Department of the Interior’s decision to revive the practice made their case relevant again.”

Gazette Opinion: Zinke Must Keep His Park Promises.

The Billings \(MT\) Gazette (5/30) editorializes that “we have to go back 130 years to find a threat to national parks more drastic than the 2018 Trump administration budget.” It notes that “earlier this year, before the Senate confirmed” Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke’s appointment, “he wrote a Gazette guest opinion in which he listed three priorities.” However, the paper argues that “the proposed budget cuts are contrary to Zinke’s avowed priorities.” The paper calls on Zinke “to honor his pledge to step up support for our national parks.”

In Our View: Safeguard Monuments.

In an editorial, the Clark County \(WA\) Columbian (5/30) urges President Trump to “recognize the importance” of public lands and “eschew any desire to remove protections in exchange for the extraction of fossil fuels or the creation of mining activity.” The paper argues that “the monuments are pristine areas that provide numerous recreational opportunities along with a sense of an America that will outlast us all." It adds that "the benefits of pulling resources out of these areas would provide short-term benefits that enrich the extractors but deliver irreversible damage for the public."

With Trump, A Full-Scale Assault On Protections For U.S.

Public Lands. In an analysis for Yale University \(CT\) Environment 360 (5/30, Robbins), Jim Robbins writes that "while legal experts say that revoking federal protection for...national monuments is unlikely, conservationists, environmentalists, and outdoors enthusiasts warn that the Trump administration and its allies are already moving decisively to make dramatic changes in the federal government's management of public lands." According to Robbins, "these include efforts to slash funds for managing federal lands, cutting budgets for the acquisition of new protected areas, allowing large-scale fossil fuel development on public lands where resource extraction is now prohibited, eliminating citizens groups that advise officials on stewarding federal lands, and considerably weakening the Endangered Species Act, which could lead to more resource extraction and economic activity on public lands."

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

County Plans Lawsuit Over Spokane Tribe's Casino In Airway Heights.

The Spokane \(WA\) Spokesman-Review (5/30, Sokol) reports that "Spokane County leaders plan to sue the federal government over its role in approving the Spokane Tribe's long-planned $400 million gaming and retail development on the West Plains." Construction of the Spokane Tribe Economic Project "began last fall after receiving final approval from Gov. Jay Inslee." The year before, the Interior Department "determined the casino would have no negative impact on the surrounding community." The county commissioners "approved a lawsuit against the Interior Department at their Tuesday afternoon meeting."

Feds, Calif. Tribe Push To Nix Suit Over Casino Project.

Law360 (5/30, Lidgett) reports that the Interior Department and the North Fork Rancheria of Mono Indians have "doubled down on their bids for a quick win in the Picayune Rancheria of Chukchansi Indians' suit challenging a decision that authorized the North Fork tribe to conduct gaming on an off-reservation site in the same county as the Picayune's casino." The federal government and the North Fork Rancheria "both filed bids Thursday in support of their separate summary judgment motions in California federal court."

Lawmakers Hear Details On Meth Problem During State Meeting.

The Riverton \(WY\) Ranger (5/30, Silva) reports that the Bureau of Indian Affairs "believes increased incidence of aggravated assault on the Wind River Indian Reservation is tied to a rise in meth use among the community." BIA police chief Will Mathews "provided the information in report on BIA activity to the Select Committee on Tribal Relations meeting May 23 in Lander." He said, "It's a big problem. It's not so much the quantity they're running across, it's the acts of people that are on it."

Bureau Of Indian Education

Native American Education Groups Respond To Proposed Budget Cuts.

Politico Morning Education (5/30, Wermund) reports that "education advocates for Native American children are protesting Trump proposals to cut the Bureau of Indian Education budget within the Interior Department by 12 percent and to eliminate a combined $65 million in funding for two Education Department programs that serve Alaska Native and Native Hawaiian students." If those proposals are enacted, the government would be "blatantly disregarding its federal trust responsibilities" and "expressly ensuring that education is no longer a viable path for a better life and a better future for millions of Americans," says Cheryl Crazy Bull, president of the American Indian College Fund.

Bureau Of Land Management

Strong Support For BLM Buying Land On Wyoming Mountain.

The AP (5/30) reports that “a proposal for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management to buy about 1,800 acres on top of a mountain in northern Wyoming has strong support.” According to the article, “more than a dozen organizations, agencies and individuals – ranging from the Greater Yellowstone Coalition to the Park County Commission – have written letters supporting the proposed federal purchase of the land on Sheep Mountain west of Cody.” But it is uncertain whether the BLM “can come up with the money.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Powell \(WY\) Tribune (5/30, Baker).

BLM To Hold Wyoming Oil And Gas Lease Sale In September.

The AP (5/30) reports that the Bureau of Land Management is “offering 140 parcels totaling about 118,000 acres in Wyoming for its next oil and gas lease sale.” The sale, which “includes parcels located in Big Horn, Campbell, Converse, Crook, Fremont, Goshen, Johnson, Niobrara, Sheridan, Washakie and Weston counties,” is “scheduled for Sept. 21 and will be conducted online.”

County Commissioners Support BLM Public Land Lease Sales.

KKCO-TV Grand Junction, CO (5/30, Moore) reports that the Bureau of Land Management is “taking public comment until June 9, before they lease 27,000 acres of Mesa and Garfield counties public land to oil and gas companies.” According to the article, “as the deadline for public comment draws closer, Mesa County Commissioners and environmental groups are butting heads.”

Additional Coverage: Trump’s Proposed Budget Could Threaten An American Icon.

Additional coverage that President Trump’s proposed budget could threaten wild horses was provided by USA Today (5/30), Quartz (5/30, Livni), and the Huffington Post (5/30, Bershadker, Contributor).

Bureau Of Reclamation

Lawsuit From 2001 Klamath Shutoff Draws Many Claims.

The AP (5/30, Dillemoth) reports that “more than 1,500 claims covering 3,523 parcels and more than 160,000 acres on Klamath Project land are now under review by the United States as part of the class-action lawsuit surrounding the ‘Takings’ case.” According to the article, “the trial’s closing arguments adjourned May 9, roughly three months following a trial that lasted more than a week at the Federal Court of Claims in Washington, D.C.” Local water attorney Bill Ganong, special counsel to the case, said, “That last week, we had a lot of people coming into the office, asking for help or wanting to make sure they had it (Notice of Appearance form) filled out right.” He added, “The turnout demonstrates that a lot of people were hurt and that a lot of land did not get irrigated. If we prevail and if the United States has to pay on a per-acre basis, it’s going to be a significant amount of money.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Eugene \(OR\) Register-Guard (5/31, Dillemoth).

Lower Brule Tribe Won’t Be Forced To Pay Back Missing Taxpayer Funds.

The Sioux Falls \(SD\) Argus Leader (5/30, Ellis) reports that the Lower Brule Sioux Tribe will “not be required to pay back nearly $1.5 million in missing taxpayer funds, prompting concerns from two members of the state’s congressional delegation and the organization that uncovered widespread financial mismanagement.” The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation “announced that the tribe will only be required to pay back $54,190.” Michael Ryan, the Bureau of Reclamation’s Great Plains regional director, “said in a press release that the bureau and tribe worked together to reach a number that the tribe would repay.” Ryan said, “Reclamation made a decision after careful review of the facts and findings of the audit, while staying in close coordination with the tribe.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

Groups Seek To Block Construction At Former Nuclear Site.

The Denver Post (5/30, Aguilar) reports groups opposed to public access to Rocky Flats National Wildlife Refuge are seeking a preliminary injunction “to block construction of a visitor center or trails.” The groups argue more analysis is needed of the environmental risks; the site was used to process “a vast mix of toxic chemical and nuclear substances.”

Alaskan Oil Finds Spur Hopes Arctic Refuge May Hold Large Reserves.

E&E Publishing (5/30) reports new discoveries on Alaska’s North Slope are reviving hopes that the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge may also house large petroleum reserves. Federal scientists are saying that the Arctic refuge has rock formations that are very similar to the oil finds in northern Alaska. USGS research geologist Dave Houseknecht said the government licensed two 3D surveys in the Alaska reserve, but that there are no plans to reassess the Arctic refuge because no new well data or seismic studies have been conducted since 1998.

‘Secretive’ Onondaga Lake Plan Needs More Public Input, Group Says.

The Syracuse \(NY\) Post-Standard (5/30, Coin) reports that “the state and federal governments spent 10 years compiling an Onondaga Lake restoration plan, but the public hasn’t been given a chance to provide meaningful feedback, said a group that sued to help clean up the lake.” Samuel Sage, president of Syracuse-based Atlantic States Legal Foundation, “said the public hasn’t had enough time or opportunities to comment on the plan that seeks to compensate the public for damages caused by decades of industrial pollution.” In a letter to the state Department of Environmental Conservation and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Sage wrote, “The public is only just now becoming aware of this process and should be afforded additional time to comment on the record.”

Grizzly Killing Near Missoula Leaves Neighbors Wondering

The Missoulian \(MT\) (5/30, Chaney) reports that “a black-bear hunter reportedly killed a large grizzly bear in the hills 5 miles northeast of Missoula on May 16, but federal wildlife officials have released few details about the incident.” U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service spokesman Ryan Moehring wrote in a press release on Tuesday, “The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, in conjunction with its partners at Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks, is actively investigating the self-reported killing of a grizzly bear by a black bear hunter in the Johnson Creek drainage near Bonner.” He added, “This is an active, ongoing investigation and the Service will share more information with the public when the circumstances of the case permit.”

Second Large Release Of Endangered Toads Planned; Unique Species Once Thought Extinct Finds Hope.

The Casper \(WY\) Star-Tribune (5/30, Peterson) reports that on Wednesday, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, “along with landowners, volunteers and other organizations, plans to release another batch of about 900 toads into the Laramie-region wetlands.” Mindy Meade, wildlife biologist with the Partners for Fish and Wildlife Program, an arm of the Fish and Wildlife Service, said, “Everything is voluntary. So no one is under any pressure to do anything with regard to our efforts, and so it can be a difficult decision, but it is nothing that we rush on our end.”

Federal Judge Dismisses Remaining Counts In Lawsuit Against Purple Line.

The Washington Business Journal (5/30, Neibauer) reports that on Tuesday, Judge Richard Leon “dismissed the remaining counts in a lawsuit filed to stop the Purple Line, though his previous ruling ordered that state and federal transit authorities to launch a new ridership study remains in place.” The article explains that the judge’s final order will allow Maryland officials to appeal the judge’s initial ruling. According to the article, the judge’s initial ruling “will force a new study and perhaps a lengthy delay – and maybe the final death blow – to the light-rail project.”

The WTOP-FM Washington (5/30, Smith) and Engineering News-Record (5/30, Parsons) also report on the story.

Deadly Bat Fungal Infection Cases Confirmed In Stokes County.

The Watauga \(NC\) Democrat (5/30, Sherrill) reports that white-nose syndrome, “which was diagnosed in 2006 and first detected in North Carolina in 2011 in Avery County, was documented in winter bat surveys in January and February” by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission and N.C. State Parks in Stokes County. According to the NCWRC, “this is the farthest east that WNS has been documented in North Carolina and the first case in the Piedmont.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Stanly \(NC\) News Press (5/30, Drye).

National Park Service

Gettysburg National Military Park Superintendent Reassigned.

The Hanover \(PA\) Evening Sun (5/30, Levy) reports that Ed Clark, “the three-year superintendent of the Gettysburg National Military Park has been reassigned, according to a National Park Service official.” Clark was “stationed at the Harper’s Ferry Center in West Virginia as of May 26, said Cinda Waldbuesser, the chief of staff for the northeast regional office of the National Parks Service.” Waldbuesser said, “Regional directors can use their discretion to move staff as needed to ensure National Park Service needs are best met. The acting regional director for the northeast region felt this move was in the best interest of regional and park needs.”

The Harrisburg \(PA\) Patriot-News (5/30, Vigna) reports that “there was no way to determine whether an ongoing investigation into the park in April by The Office of the Inspector General of the U.S. Department of the Interior had anything to do with Clark’s departure.”

Reward Upped To $25K For Info About Yellowstone Wolf Death.

The AP (5/30) reports that Yellowstone National Park is “offering a reward of up to $25,000 for information about the shooting death of a rare white wolf near Gardiner, Montana.” Park Superintendent Dan Wenk “says due to an outpouring of donations the park established the Yellowstone Resources Rewards Fund.” Any remaining funds will be “used for future resource violation cases in the park.”

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by Philly \(PA\) (5/30), the San Francisco \(CA\) Chronicle (5/30), U.S. News & World Report (5/30), the Washington \(DC\) Post (5/30, Press), the Washington \(DC\) Times (5/30), Fox News (5/30), and the Daily Mail (5/30).

Additional coverage was provided by the Idaho State Journal (5/30) and KTVH-TV Helena \(MT\) Helena, MT (5/30).

Public Comment Period Extended On Grand Canyon Bison Plan.

The AP (5/30) reports that the National Park Service has “extended the length of a public comment period on a plan to reduce the number of bison found near the Grand Canyon’s North Rim through lethal and nonlethal means.” Comment will now be received through June 14.

Coverage by the AP was picked up by the Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (5/30), the Bristol \(VA\) Herald Courier (5/30), the San Francisco \(CA\) Chronicle (5/30), the Stamford \(CT\) Advocate (5/30), the Washington \(DC\) Times (5/30), and KFDA-TV Amarillo \(TX\) Amarillo, TX (5/30).

Additional coverage was provided by KJZZ-FM Phoenix \(AZ\) Phoenix (5/30).

Crater Lake National Park Low On Water.

Oregon Public Broadcasting (5/30) reports that Crater Lake National Park is “running low on water.” The Klamath Tribes has “placed a water call on the Wood River, the river Annie Creek flows into.” According to the article, “as a temporary solution for the water shortage before the park’s summer tourism season gets underway, park officials are having to truck in water from California.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Salem \(OR\) Statesman Journal (5/30) and the Eugene \(OR\) Register-Guard (5/31).

Idaho World War II-Era Internment Camp Opens Visitor Center.

The AP (5/30) reports that a new visitor center has opened at the Minidoka War Relocation Center. Hanako Wakatsuki, chief interpreter for the Minidoka National Historic Site, noted that “the visitor center has on-site staff for the first time since the National Park Service began developing the location.” The article says that visitors can now “take guided tours or walk through the camp on their own.”

Report On Response To Tennessee Wildfires Expected In July.

The AP (5/31) reports that the National Park Service “says it expects to release a review in mid-to late July of its response to a November wildfire in Great Smoky Mountains National Park that turned deadly.” According to the article, “a seven-member committee began in February to study how the fire was handled.” National Park Service staff is reviewing the report. Committee leader Joe Stutler, “a senior adviser with Deschutes County forestry in Oregon, said the report is meant to be constructive, not punitive.”

Two Of Hawaii’s National Parks Will Increase Admission Fees To $25.

The Los Angeles Times (5/30, Jones) reports that Haleakala National Park and Hawaii Volcanoes National Park will “increase fees from $20 to $25 per vehicle starting Thursday.” Also, “for pedestrians and bicyclists, the fee will climb from $10 to $12.” The article notes that “the increased fees will bring Hawaii’s two national parks in line fee-wise with other parks that provide similar services.”

The Powerful Story Behind Glacier Bay National Park’s New Totem Poles.

Smithsonian (5/30, Blakemore) reports that “in honor of the Huna Tlingit’s connection to the area, two gigantic totem poles—each weighing 2,000 pounds and rising 20 feet tall—have been erected in Bartlett Cove” at Glacier Bay National Park and Preserve. According to the article, “members of the Hoonah Indian Association and national park employees carried the poles to a newly dedicated Huna tribal house by hand, then erected them in a ceremony that included dancing and speeches.” The agency wrote in a press release, “It was clear that a physical manifestation of pride in culture, strengthening connections to homeland, and the success of collaboration, the Eagle and Raven poles now stand tall for all to see.”

Scouts Honor Fallen Veterans.

The Greeneville \(TN\) Sun (5/30) reports that “Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts from the Nolachuckey District (Greene, Hawkins and Hancock counties) honored fallen veterans by placing American flags on graves at Andrew Johnson National Cemetery in observance of Memorial Day.” According to the article, “over 70 Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, adult leaders, parents, and siblings, working with the National Park Service, placed flags on the over 2,000 graves in the cemetery on Friday.”

The National Park Service Brings Enchantment To Hidden Ranch This Summer.

KCET-TV Los Angeles (5/30, Hemmerlein) reports that “this summer marks the return of musicians, dancers and bathing beauties to Peter Strauss Ranch as part of the National Park Service’s Arts in the Parks program – one that features free art installations and performances to draw visitors back to this historic site.”

Man Dies After Falling From Top Of Tennessee Waterfall.

The AP (5/30) reports that the National Park Service “says a 37-year-old man has died after falling from the top of a 100-foot high waterfall in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.” According to officials, “park rangers responded immediately and determined the victim had fallen 80 feet and was deceased.”

Additional Coverage: Christian Geologist Sues Grand Canyon For Religious Discrimination.

Additional coverage that a creationist geologist has filed a lawsuit over the rejection of his Grand Canyon study was provided by Fox News (5/30), the New York Post (5/30), and Rewire (5/30, Littlefield).

Office Of Insular Affairs

Micronesian Starling Nesting Project Hatches Over 200 Successes.

The Pacific \(GUM\) Daily News (5/27, Mora) reports on “the culmination of a 15-month effort to increase the population of Micronesian starlings on Guam.” A team of researchers and Naval Facilities Engineering Command Marianas scientists “began installing nest boxes resistant to brown tree snakes on utility poles on Andersen Air Force Base in November 2015.” According to the article, “a total of 206 starling chicks have grown enough to fly from their nest box homes, the Navy announced in a May 26 press release.”

Don’t Cut Discretionary Funding For Impact Of Regional Migrants.

In an editorial, the Pacific \(GUM\) Daily News (5/30) criticizes President Trump’s budget proposal for cutting “$3 million in discretionary funds used to offset the financial impact of regional migrants from the Freely Associated States.” It argues that “rather than cutting support to our community, the federal government should give us more money to provide educational and other services to people from the Freely Associated States.” The paper urges the federal government to “keep its promises to Guam and the region. The Compacts of Free Association benefit the United States, and the United States should pay for the impact of its agreements in the region.”

Top National News

Cohen Refuses Hill Investigators' Request For Information In Russia Probe.

Media reports portray word that President Trump's personal attorney Michael Cohen has become a focus of the congressional investigation into Russian meddling in the 2016 election as evidence of an expanding probe. The coverage universally reports that Cohen refused a request from investigators to provide information and testimony related to contacts he had with people connected to the Russian government, but several also indicate that subpoenas could be issued to obtain the requested information.

In its lead story, ABC World News Tonight (5/30, lead story, 3:10, Muir) reported that Cohen, "a man who knows the deepest secrets, has become a focus of the expanding congressional investigation," and the Washington Examiner (5/30, Quinn) says Cohen, a "notoriously feisty defender of Trump," is "now one of the people included in the widening congressional probe into Russia's meddling in the 2016 election." The Hill (5/30, Savransky) cites an NBC News report which said that "the request letters sent to Cohen were the same ones sent to former Trump aides Carter Page, Roger Stone, Paul Manafort and Michael Flynn."

Similarly, Politico (5/30, Samuelsohn) reports that Cohen "is among a growing list of Trump associates to come under congressional or federal scrutiny." The Wall Street Journal (5/30, Bender, Stokols) cites the congressional investigation's expansion to his inner circle as one of the new realities confronting Trump since his return from overseas. Axios (5/30, Allen) cites "a White House source" who said the President's "skittish staff claims it is rallying around a new mentality: 'It's us against the world.'" This, as "crisis is shifting the power dynamics a bit" and "six people close to Trump...are under the microscope of investigators."

The CBS Evening News (5/30, story 2, 2:10, Glor) said Cohen "refused to cooperate," and ABC News (5/30, Ross, Mosk) reports on its website that Cohen said in an email, "I declined the invitation to participate, as the request was poorly phrased, overly broad and not capable of being answered." The New York Times (5/30, Huetteman) says Cohen's refusal "may prompt lawmakers to issue subpoenas, compelling him to provide documents, testimony or other records."

Rep. Jackie Speier said on CNN's The Lead (5/30) that "the request has been made and he declined it and in all likelihood there will be subpoenas issued that he'll be compelled to respond to." Speier added that "this is not a fishing expedition. This is furthering our review on whether or not associates of the Trump campaign were in coordination and/or collusion with the Russians who were attempting to turn the election."

Lawmakers Request Information From Epshteyn. In a separate story on its website, ABC News (5/30, Ross, Mosk, Madden) said that "yet another Trump associate, Boris Epshteyn, has acknowledged that he has received a request for information from lawmakers." Epshteyn "confirmed to ABC News that he has received a lengthy list of questions from the House Intelligence Committee." Epshteyn's lawyer said in a statement that Epshteyn "has received a broad, preliminary request for information from the House Intelligence Committee. This is a voluntary request. Mr. Epshteyn has not been subpoenaed nor do we anticipate that he will be."

Page Seeks To Testify, Citing "False Information" From FBI, CIA. The Washington Examiner (5/30, Sheppard) reports that in a letter to the House Intelligence Committee on Monday, former Trump adviser Carter Page asked to address the panel directly and "says neither the FBI nor the CIA are telling the truth about his role, which has resulted in an 'ongoing barrage of false information' in the last three months." Page wrote, "I have learned from your Committee staff on this Memorial Day holiday that I might not be immediately afforded the opportunity to address the false or misleading testimony by James Comey, John Brennan, et al. as per our previously scheduled appointment for next week. ... In the interest of finally providing the American people with some accurate information at long last, I hope that we can proceed with this straight dialogue soon."

Comey In Talks With Mueller About Senate Intel Committee Testimony. USA Today (5/30, Johnson, Kelly) reports that former FBI Director Comey "has started preliminary discussions with special counsel Robert Mueller about his intention to testify before the Senate Intelligence Committee about his communications with the president, as part of the panel's ongoing inquiry into possible collusion between the Trump campaign and Russia, USA TODAY has learned." USA Today cites "a close associate of Comey" who "said Tuesday that Mueller is not expected to block the former director from appearing before the Senate panel," but added that the appearance

"would occur only after Comey is fully debriefed for the federal investigation."

Flynn Agrees To Share Documents With Senate Panel. The Washington Examiner (5/30, Giaritelli) cites "multiple reports Tuesday evening" which said that former National Security Adviser Michael Flynn "has agreed to share some documents with the Senate Intelligence Committee."

The Wall Street Journal (5/30, A1, Nissenbaum), meanwhile, reports on its front page that as Flynn was traveling the country on behalf of then-candidate Trump last fall, his firm, the Flynn Intel Group, was producing a documentary for a Turkish businessman who paid the firm $530,000 to improve Turkey's image in the wake of a failed military coup. That contract, the Journal says, resulted in legal problems for Flynn, who failed to disclose to the federal government until March that his firm was paid to represent Turkish interests.

NYTimes Analysis: Four GOP Senators "Integral" To Senate Intel Committee Probe. In an analysis, the New York Times (5/30, Hulse) reports that GOP Sens. Susan Collins, James Lankford, Roy Blunt, and Marco Rubio "are emerging as a bloc integral to the Senate Intelligence Committee's investigation into Russian meddling in the 2016 presidential election." That panel's investigation "is widely considered the premier inquiry, the one with the necessary jurisdiction and the best chance of producing a credible outcome," and the four senators "loom large as a crucial element in getting there." The Times says they "have made it clear that they are determined to see it through to a conclusion that would satisfy the public and their colleagues in both parties." They have, the Times adds, "quietly coalesced into something of an informal working group within the Intelligence Committee, pushing the investigation forward and consulting not only with each other" and Chairman Richard Burr, but also ranking Democrat Mark Warner.

Senate Democrats Seek To Keep Focus On Trump's White House Meeting With Russian Diplomats. The AP (5/30, Lardner) reports that Senate Democrats are seeking to keep attention focused on President Trump's May 10 White House Oval Office meeting with "top Russian diplomats" and are "peppering [his] national security team with questions about the damage they believe Trump caused by sharing top-secret intelligence with the Russians" at that meeting.

Cummings Seeks Documentation Of Coats, Rogers Conversations With Trump. Politico (5/30, Wright) report that Rep. Elijah Cummings, the ranking Democrat on the House Oversight Committee is asking DNI Coats and NSA Director Rogers "to turn over any documentation of their conversations with President Donald Trump relating to the FBI or congressional investigations into Trump's ties to Russia." Cummings' request comes in the wake of a Washington Post report which said that President Trump asked the officials "to publicly deny that there is evidence showing the Trump campaign colluded with Russia to sway the presidential election in Trump's favor."

Franken: Everything Points To Collusion. The AP (5/30) reports that during a joint appearance with David Letterman in New York City on Tuesday, Sen. Al Franken "said 'everything points to' collusion" between the Trump campaign and the Russians. While Franken "did not cite any evidence," he said, "My feeling is that there was some cooperation between the Trump campaign and the Russians. I think everything points to that. ... They just haven't been acting like people who have nothing to hide."

Nunes: Democrats Believe Independent Commission Will Say Clinton Was Cheated. The Washington Examiner (5/30, Giaritelli) cites a Los Angeles Times report which said that House Intelligence Chairman Devin Nunes "said Democrats are unsatisfied with congressional probes into Russia because they believe only an independent commission will come to the conclusion Hillary Clinton was cheated." According to the Times story, Nunes told the Tulare County Lincoln Day Dinner in April, "The Democrats don't want an investigation on Russia. They want an independent commission. Why do they want an independent commission? ... Because they want to continue the narrative that Vladimir Putin and Donald Trump are best friends, and that's the reason that he won, because Hillary Clinton would have never lost on her own; it had to be someone else's fault." The Examiner adds that Nunes told the Times that "reporting his comments nearly two months later was an example of 'fake news.'"

Drew: Trump's Hold On Presidency Is Slipping. In a nearly 4,000-word piece for the New York Review of Books (5/25), Elizabeth Drew writes that Trump's "troubles will continue to grow as the investigators keep on investigating and the increasingly appalled leakers keep on leaking." Drew questions how long Trump can "keep blaming his failures to deliver on others – Democrats, the 'dishonest media,' the Washington 'swamp.'" Drew adds that while that is uncertain, "what is knowable is that an increasingly agitated Donald Trump's hold on the presidency is beginning to slip."

Hannity Says He Is "Making Progress" In Rich Murder Investigation. The Washington Examiner

(5/30, Mayfield) reports that a week after he "said he would back down from sharing conspiracy theories" about the death of murdered DNC staffer Seth Rich, Sean Hannity said on his Fox News program Tuesday that "he is 'making progress' on unearthing the truth behind what really happened." Hannity said, "Now I can report, I am making progress. We will have a lot more coming probably sooner than later." Hannity added that the "country deserves the truth, because this impacts so much of what the narrative in this country is now about, which is the left and their conspiracy theory."

USAA To Resume Advertising On Hannity's Program. The AP (5/30, Bauder) reports that after it received "heavy criticism" from "many of the military members and veterans that it serves" for its decision to pull advertising from Sean Hannity's Fox News Channel show, the USAA financial services firm said Tuesday that it is reinstating advertising on the program. USAA pulled its ads "following Hannity's reporting on a discredited conspiracy theory involving the death of a Democratic National Committee staff member."

White House Continues To Defend Kushner.

Media reports describe the White House as coming to the defense of President Trump's son-in-law and adviser Jared Kushner, who reportedly sought to establish back-channel communications with the Russian government during the presidential transition. NBC Nightly News (5/30, story 3, 2:30, Guthrie) reported that President Trump and his advisers "are forming a new crisis management team" as the White House is "struggling to fend off questions about...Kushner's connections with Russia during the transition."

Politico (5/30, Karni) says Kushner has made "no open acknowledgment" that "he has transformed from behind-the-scenes West Wing power broker to its lead distracting story." Politico cites "multiple White House sources" who say Kushner "emerged from the holiday weekend intent on dismissing his increased public scrutiny in connection with the FBI's ongoing Russia probe as nothing more than a public relations problem that will blow over."

The Hill (5/30, Williams) describes Kushner as "embattled" and says the White House "offered a vigorous defense" of him. On Tuesday, Trump retweeted "a single-source Fox News article reporting that the Russian ambassador, not Kushner, had suggested a secure back channel for communication." Later in the day, White House press secretary Sean Spicer "sought to cast doubt on the veracity of media reports that Kushner had sought a secret communications channel with Russia during the presidential transition, while simultaneously defending Kushner's alleged conduct." While Spicer told reporters, "Your question assumes a lot of facts that are not substantiated by anything but anonymous sources that are being leaked out," he "also pointed to remarks from senior administration officials that 'in general terms ... back channels are an appropriate part of diplomacy.'"

USA Today (5/30, Groppe) likewise says that while Spicer "questioned the credibility of the report, he referred to recent comments made by National Security Adviser H.R. McMaster and Homeland Security Secretary John Kelly supporting the practice of back-channel communications as an appropriate part of diplomacy." Spicer "also said Kushner's attorney has volunteered to share information on the Russian meetings with the congressional committees investigating Russia's interference in the election." ABC World News Tonight (5/30, story 3, 2:40, Muir) reported that "Kushner didn't get much help from...Spicer."

The Washington Times (5/30, Persons) reports that in an appearance on Fox News' Fox & Friends (5/30), presidential counselor Kellyanne Conway "attributed President Trump's successful foreign trip to his son-in-law and adviser Jared Kushner's foreign relationships," and "said the White House is not concerned about the reports Mr. Kushner discussed back-channel communications with the Russians." Conway told Fox, "As you heard McMaster and Kelly say over this weekend, they're not concerned," she said. "Back channels like this are the regular course of business and that's really all that we know. And I think it's important to recognize that the president has expressed full confidence in Jared Kushner."

In that same vein, associate editor Matt Vespa writes at Townhall (5/30) that such back-channel communications are "completely normal and acceptable, according to Department of Homeland Security Secretary John Kelly." Former DNI Clapper "also said that back channeling is a long-standing practice," and "even the Obama administration used this method of communication in 2008 to reach out to Iran." Vespa adds that "there is still zero evidence to suggest that Trump officials colluded with the Russians" and it is "unknown if Jared Kushner is a target, but what we do know is that he hasn't been charged with any wrongdoing."

Rep. Gregory Meeks was asked on CNN's Situation Room (5/30) about the "different explanations about the purpose of a meeting that Kushner had with an influential Russian banking chief who has close ties to Putin," with Wolf Blitzer saying the White House claimed Kushner "was acting as an official for the transition" while the "bank put out a statement saying they met with Kushner in a financial capacity on account of his family's real estate business." Meeks said that as a former prosecutor, the "first thing that would jump at me is a cover-up."

Sen. Brian Schatz said on CNN's Situation Room (5/30) that it is "one thing to establish a diplomatic backchannel for the purpose of avoiding a miscalculation or war. It is an entirely different thing" for an individual in an "incoming Administration without an official appointment to the White House to try to set up a secure communications channel and to evade your own government. That is strange in the extreme. It is weird and deserves an explanation."

Rep. Jackie Speier was asked on CNN's The Lead (5/30) if it is premature for the DNC to be calling on the President to fire Kushner. Speier said, "I think that certainly he should be given the opportunity to tell his side of the story. I think the question that has to be asked is whether or not he should continue to have his security clearance during this time of probing." Kathleen Parker writes in her Washington Post (5/30) column that while Kushner "surely deserves a chance to explain his actions before he's indicted in the public square," as "a senior adviser to the president, he has become a liability without family blood to protect him." Parker concludes by asking, "Without blood to bind him, what's to prevent Kushner getting the boot?"

Grassley Wants Investigation Into Promotion Of Kushner Companies Project. Reuters (5/29, Harney) reports that Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Grassley "has called for an investigation into 'potentially fraudulent statements and misrepresentations' made by companies promoting investment in a property development involving" Kushner Companies, the family company of White House adviser Jared Kushner. Citing a Reuters report, Grassley "requested a review of claims made by Chinese migration agency Qiaowai and the US Immigration Fund (USIF) in the marketing of the One Journal Square project in Jersey City, New Jersey to potential investors in China." USIF contracted with Qiaowai "to market projects including One Journal Square to potential investors through the controversial EB-5 scheme."

Trump Blasts Anonymous Sources, Then Retweets Story Citing One. USA Today (5/30, Estepa) reports that President Trump "doesn't like anonymous sources," based on "his first tweet storm after his first foreign trip abroad while in office," in which he wrote, "Whenever you see the words 'sources say' in the fake news media, and they don't mention names....," "...it is very possible that those sources don't exist but are made up by fake news writers. #FakeNews is the enemy!" However, "that strong dislike for anonymous sources didn't keep him from tweeting on Tuesday a story that relies exclusively on a single anonymous source." According to the anonymous source in the Fox News story, "it was not [Jared] Kushner's idea that a secure communications line be established between Russian officials and the Trump administration."

Sununu: Back-Channel Efforts Could Be Linked To Obama Intel Leaks. In an appearance on CNN Tuesday, former New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu said "that the White House's efforts to have a back-channel relationship with Russia could've been over suspected leaks in the intelligence community," the Washington Times (5/30, Persons) reports. Sununu said, "There might have been concern that the intelligence community was feeding Obama the information that he probably shouldn't have had. ... If that was a concern, and I doubt it was, if that was a concern, they were pretty smart to have those feelings weren't they?" Sununu also argued that efforts to create back channel communications "are completely normal for an incoming administration." He said, "It is not unusual. You guys have made back channel a derogatory term. Back channel is a positive asset. Nixon could not have done China without a back channel."

Reynolds: Obama Administration "Politically Weaponized" Intel Agencies. In an op-ed for USA Today (5/30), University of Tennessee law professor Glenn Harlan Reynolds questions whether the "recently unveiled Obama administration program of massively spying on political opponents in violation of clearly established law" is worse than the Watergate scandal. Reynolds writes that after World War II, "we gave massive power to the national security apparatus" in "the belief that professionalism and patriotism would lead people in those agencies to refuse to let their work be used for partisan political purposes." He adds that it "seems apparent that we overestimated the patriotism and professionalism of the people in these agencies, who allowed them to be politically weaponized by the Obama administration."

CNN: "Sources" Say Russians Talked About Having "Derogatory" Info On Trump, Aides.

Dianne Gallagher reported on CNN's Situation Room (5/30), "Sources are telling CNN that the Russian government officials talked about having...potentially derogatory information during the 2016 election. It was about then-candidate Trump and some of his top aides. One of those sources saying that the information was financial in nature." Gallagher continued that conversations collected by US intelligence “suggest the Russians believed they had the ability to influence the Administration with the information.” The sources cautioned that the claims “could have been fake or even exaggerated as part of Russia’s greater disinformation campaign,” but former DNI James Clapper “warned, ‘I will just say that there were a series of communications and dialogues that we grew – I say we, members of the intelligence community that were aware of it, --were very concerned about.’” Rep. Gregory Meeks said on CNN’s Situation Room (5/30) that the news provides another reason why an independent commission is needed to look into all of the Russia allegations.

Rep. Jackie Speier said on CNN’s The Lead (5/30) that “the Putin playbook has been around for a long time, and it’s all about getting kompromat, getting stuff on individuals to be able to use something against them, and it wouldn’t surprise me if they had derogatory information on the President.”

Putin: Election Meddling A “Fiction” Created By Defeated Democrats. The Washington Times (5/30, Miller) reports that in an interview published Tuesday in the French newspaper Le Figaro, Russian President Vladimir Putin “called allegations of interference in the US presidential election a ‘fiction’ created by Democrats as an excuse for their defeat at the ballot box.” Putin said, “They simply lost, and they must acknowledge it. ... They want to explain to themselves and prove to others that they had nothing to do with it, their policy was right, they have done everything well, but someone from the outside cheated them. It’s not so. ... People who lost the vote hate to acknowledge that they indeed lost because the person who won was closer to the people and had a better understanding of what people wanted.”

Trump: Russian Officials Laughing At US Over Investigations. Politico (5/30, Nelson) reports that in a tweet Tuesday morning, President Trump wrote that “Russian officials must be laughing at the US” over the investigations into Russian involvement in the 2016 election. Trump, who “has referred to the investigations as a ‘witch hunt’ and ‘fake news,’” tweeted, “Russian officials must be laughing at the US & how a lame excuse for why the Dems lost the election has taken over the Fake News.”

The Washington Times (5/30, Persons) reports that in response to Trump’s tweet, Rep. Adam Schiff criticized Trump “for his conduct with Russian officials in the Oval Office.” Schiff tweeted, “They were certainly laughing in the Oval Office, but that had more to do with your conduct than anything else. And who can blame them?”

The Los Angeles Times (5/30, Willon) reports that in a May 20 talk with reporters, Schiff described his late March visit to the White House “to view classified documents that Trump said would help prove his claim that President Obama had ordered wiretaps at Trump Tower.” Schiff said NSC lawyers would not allow his staff director, Michael Bahar, in the room to view the documents. After being invited into the Oval Office, Schiff told Trump about the situation, and Trump “said he had no problem with the congressman’s staff member reviewing the documents, Schiff recalled.” Ultimately, “Schiff and his staff director were invited in to review the records.”

Democratic Senators Say Trump’s Budget Will Hurt Rural Areas.

The AP (5/30, Jalonick) reports that President Trump’s budget proposal is drawing fire from Democratic senators from rural states who say it would have “significant negative impacts” on rural America. In a letter to Trump Tuesday, 29 Democratic senators, “singled out the rural development cuts and the proposed elimination of an account that pays for rural water and wastewater infrastructure projects.” They wrote, “These reductions would undermine the ability of local communities to support rural home ownership, provide clean drinking and waste water systems and promote access to critical services such as rural hospitals, police and firefighters. ... If enacted, these cuts would have a damaging impact on rural communities throughout the country.”

Economists: Trump’s Prediction Of Three Percent Growth Is “Wildly Optimistic.”

Politico (5/30, White) reports that while President Trump “is betting much of his first term on a bold promise that tax cuts, revamped trade deals and deregulation will unleash the kind of sustained economic boom the United States hasn’t seen since the dot-com days of the late 1990s,” even if he manages to get the tax cuts through Congress, “many economists argue that the administration’s predictions – for nearly a decade of at least 3 percent economic growth – are wildly optimistic and unlikely to materialize.” Moreover, some of his plans “could backfire and constrict economic growth.”

Hewitt: Trump Can Solve Tax-Reform Crisis Through Federal Gas Tax Hike.

In the Washington Post (5/30), columnist Hugh Hewitt writes that in order to address the tax reform crisis, President Trump should embrace “a solution that is obvious and equitable – and that ought to be easy”: raising the federal gas tax from its 1993 level of 19 cents per gallon. The tax – which now brings in $35 billion annually – could bring in up to $100 billion per year if raised by 50 cents per gallon. Hewitt says this revenue boost would allow for corporate tax rate cuts, an end to the “military-crippling” sequester, a “real” increase in defense spending, a drop in marginal income-tax rates, and, “crucially,” increased local infrastructure spending.

USA Today: Trump’s Plan To Sell Oil Reserves Would Leave Americans Vulnerable.

In an editorial, USA Today (5/30) condemns President Trump’s proposal to sell off half of America’s oil reserve to raise an estimated $16.6 billion to reduce the federal deficit. USA Today compares the situation to “a person with a lot of credit card bills taking items to the pawn shop rather than curtailing his spending or enhancing his income.” Alternatively, Trump’s approach could be billed as “the buy-high, sell-low school of budgeting.” USA Today finds irony in that “the push to sell is coming principally from the party that preaches fiscal responsibility, the GOP, when it could hardly be called responsible.” USA Today says the reserves are needed in case of “major oil disruption” because even with fracking and other new production techniques, American oil fields wouldn’t be capable of ramping up production fast enough to meet demand.

Meanwhile, Philip Verleger – who has studied oil markets since 1971 – writes in a USA Today (5/30) op-ed that Trump is “right” on his proposal, which “would be a good start on selling all the oil.” Verleger says the Strategic Petroleum Reserve “is a failed economic experiment.” Created to address shortages, the SPR was never used when oil reached $100 per barrel, thus economic activity was disrupted. However, futures markets “have allowed for the hedging of more than 2 billion barrels of oil,” which makes “it possible to dampen price fluctuations” and makes the SPR “superfluous.”

Guessing Game Continues About Trump’s Decision On Paris Accord.

Politico (5/30, Restuccia) reports the President’s “advisers have sent wildly different messages to US allies about the president’s willingness to remain in the Paris climate agreement – adding to the confusion as he appears set to render a verdict this week.” Politico adds that “Trump vowed during the presidential campaign to ‘cancel’ the Paris agreement,” but ventures that “the climate discussions at the G-7, paired with a lobbying campaign from Pope Francis and other leaders, could have changed” his mind. Meanwhile, some “US officials were convinced as recently as last week that Trump would remain in Paris,” but “others are just uncertain. ‘I’ve stopped trying to figure it out,’ said one longtime climate negotiator.”

On its front page, the New York Times (5/30, A1, Shear, Cardwell) refers to “a divided White House staff, anxious corporate executives, lawmakers and foreign leaders” who “are fiercely competing for...Trump’s ear this week as he nears a decision.” The Times adds that “for a president not steeped in policy intricacies, the decision is vexing,” because “on both sides are voices he profoundly respects: chief executives of some of the world’s largest companies urging him to remain part of the accord and ardent conservatives like Stephen K. Bannon, his chief strategist, and Scott Pruitt, his Environmental Protection Agency administrator, tugging him toward a withdrawal from the 195-country agreement.”

While interviewing Rep. Gregory Meeks on CNN’s Situation Room (5/30), Wolf Blitzer reported that White House Press Secretary Sean Spicer “refused to say whether or not the President believes that humans are a cause of climate change” as President Trump considers whether to withdraw from the Paris climate agreement. Meeks said that if Trump ends up taking the US out of the deal, “It would send to the rest of the world a message that the United States does not care about this planet that we all share and does not care about multi-lateral agreements that we make with other nations.”

Coal CEO Murray Says Cohn, Ivanka, Tillerson Wrong On Paris Accord. Bloomberg Politics (5/30, Malik, Fu, Chatterley) reports “the US coal industry’s most outspoken champion says...Trump needs to stop taking advice from his daughter Ivanka Trump, Gary Cohn and other top advisers on climate change policy and withdraw from the landmark Paris climate agreement.” Robert E. Murray, “founder and chief executive officer of coal miner Murray Energy Corp.,” told Bloomberg Television that “Trump needs to get out of the accord because countries from the US to India need coal to deliver reliable, low-cost electricity.” Said Murray, “Hopefully he’ll listen to those who voted for him and not to some members of his staff. ... Meaning Gary Cohn, Ivanka Trump, Rex Tillerson. They’re wrong in their advice to the president.”

Obama Advisers Warn Of Link Between Climate Change, Disease Epidemics. Brian Deese, a senior adviser on climate change and energy policy to former President Obama, and Ronald A. Klain, a former White House Ebola response coordinator and a senior adviser to Hillary Clinton's campaign, explain in a Washington Post (5/30) op-ed how climate change can increase "the spread of dangerous epidemics and the risk of a global pandemic." Deese and Klain say this "link between climate and disease is most often identified through the spread of disease vectors such as mosquitoes," but they warn that "a second, and less appreciated, interaction between climate change and epidemics occurs when humans and animals are forced to compete for dwindling habitat and resources." The authors accuse the Administration of being "engaged in a form of double denial" about these "intrinsically global threats" by "slashing funding for the science to fight disease and climate change."

Fed's Brainard Adds To Expectations Of June Rate Hike.

The New York Times (5/30, Appelbaum) reports "a speech by a Federal Reserve governor Tuesday underscored a basic shift in Fed policy: The central bank now needs to be convinced that quarterly rate increases are a bad idea." Lael Brainard, "a Federal Reserve governor, told the New York Association for Business Economics that the Fed should raise its benchmark interest rate 'soon,' despite new evidence that inflation remains below the level the Fed desires." The Times adds "the comments by Ms. Brainard reinforced expectations that the Fed will raise rates in mid-June at its next meeting, particularly because she has been a consistent advocate of caution."

Stocks Finish Lower. CNBC (5/30, Imbert) reported "US equities closed lower on Tuesday as investors digested key economic data, but a rise in tech stocks helped cap losses." The Dow "fell about 50 points, with Goldman Sachs contributing the most losses," the Nasdaq "traded 0.1 percent despite shares of Amazon breaking above $1,000 for the first time," and "the S&P 500 slipped 0.1."

Obama Advisers Warn Of Link Between Climate Change, Disease Epidemics.

Brian Deese, a senior adviser on climate change and energy policy to former President Obama and current Mossavar-Rahmani Center for Business and Government senior fellow at Harvard's Kennedy School, and Ronald A. Klain, a former White House Ebola response coordinator and a senior adviser to Hillary Clinton's campaign, explain in a Washington Post (5/30) op-ed how climate change can increase "the spread of dangerous epidemics and the risk of a global pandemic." Deese and Klain say this "link between climate and disease is most often identified through the spread of disease vectors such as mosquitoes," but warn "a second, and less appreciated, interaction between climate change and epidemics occurs when humans and animals are forced to compete for dwindling habitat and resources." The authors accuse the Administration of being "engaged in a form of double denial" about these "intrinsically global threats" by "slashing funding for the science to fight disease and climate change."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Donald Trump's Insult To History." A New York Times (5/31) editorial says the "tectonic plates of Europe are shifting, and President Trump is at the heart of this upheaval." The Times says German Chancellor Angela Merkel "bluntly made that point on Sunday," and it "became clear that the United States is no longer the reliable partner her country and the rest of Europe have long depended on." In what the Times calls a "bright spot," Merkel "seems committed to playing a lead role as the United States pulls back."

"A Meaningful Move On Voting Rights In Alabama." A New York Times (5/31) editorial says last week, "more than 100 years late, Alabama took an important step toward excising a toxic slice of white supremacy from its Constitution and restoring voting rights to perhaps thousands of people, disproportionately black, with criminal records." The Times says Alabama's new law is "a small but meaningful move toward welcoming more of those people back to full participation in civic life, and to counteracting the stench of white supremacy that lingers there."

"Gov Walker Would Drug Test The Poor." The New York Times (5/31) editorializes that as he prepares to run for a third term, Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker "is hoping the Trump administration will allow his state to be the first in the nation to mandate the drug screening of childless individuals who apply for Medicaid help." The Times warns that if Walker succeeds, "other conservative states will most likely consider the step."

Washington Post.

“Trump Told Sissi He Wouldn't ‘Lecture’ Him. So Sissi Cracked Down On Civil Society.”

In an editorial, the Washington Post (5/30) says President Trump's “unqualified support for Sunni Arab dictatorships” has emboldened Egyptian President Abdel Fatah al-Sissi. After Trump assured Sissi that US would not “lecture” Egypt's “domestic repression,” Sissi “returned to Cairo last week and immediately doubled down” by ratifying “a new law imposing unprecedented restrictions on civil society groups.” The Post says the law was in the past “widely condemned as draconian,” and blowback from Sens. Lindsey O. Graham, John McCain, and other leaders in Congress “apparently gave the regime pause.” After “his second embrace by Mr. Trump in less than two months, however, Mr. Sissi moved forward,” and Trump “appears indifferent to the subsequent repression.” Thus, the Post says, “it will be up to Congress to respond,” and they “should block the distribution of new military aid to Egypt until the nongovernmental-organizations law is repealed or revised and political prisoners released.”

“The Supreme Court Rises Above Politics.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (5/30) notes four rulings handed down by the Supreme Court on Tuesday on issues ranging from statutory rape to patent protection, and it notes that while the rulings “may not be the most exciting or remarkable,” they “were all unanimous, or nearly so.” The Post argues that “in the country's tense political atmosphere, the political branches of government too often operate on the principle that ‘because the other side is for it, we must be against it,’” and notes that “thankfully, the judicial branch has not reached that low, instead evincing more dedication to professional restraint than it often gets credit for.”

“The Portland Train Victims Were Heroes.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (5/30) praises the willingness of three bystanders – two of whom were killed and the other injured – “to stand up against bigotry and hate” when they intervened as two young women – one with a hijab – were being “terrorized with anti-Muslim insults” by Jeremy Joseph Christian on a commuter train in Portland, Oregon. The Post says President Trump's “unequivocal condemnation” of the attacks on Twitter was welcome and needed. The Post says, “Sadly, some may learn the wrong lessons from Portland's tragic events, using them as reason not to say or do something when someone needs help,” but it's important to understand that the three who saved the day “didn't have capes. They were just human beings that we all have the capacity to be,” in the words of a speaker at a vigil in their honor.

Wall Street Journal:

“The White House Mess.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (5/30) urges President Trump to overhaul his White House team, but cautions him that his own management style (described as chaotic) is at the root of his communication woes. To the Journal, Trump operates in a chaotic atmosphere, and that makes his team's job nearly impossible.

“Lawyers Get Lassoed.” The Wall Street Journal (5/30) editorializes that on Tuesday the Supreme Court ruled 8-1 that out-of-state plaintiffs may not sue a railroad company in Montana because the company is not incorporated in that state, the plaintiffs do not live there, and the injuries did not occur there. Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg wrote for the majority that “Our precedent explains that the Fourteenth Amendment's Due Process Clause does not permit a State to hale an out-of-state corporation before its courts when the corporation is not ‘at home’ in the State and the episode-in-suit occurred elsewhere.” The Journal praises the ruling as a limitation on “forum shopping.”

“The Bureaucracy's Judges.” As the DC Circuit Court of Appeals is set to rule on a case addressing whether administrative law judges at the SEC are unconstitutional, the Wall Street Journal (5/30) writes in an editorial that even if the appellate court rules in favor of the judges, the issue is one the Supreme Court should settle. The Constitution's Appointments Clause says the President “shall nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint...Officers of the United States, whose Appointments are not herein otherwise provided for.” However, agency judges are appointed by career bureaucrats, a system the Journal says allows the products of an ever-expanding federal bureaucracy to ensure its perpetuity.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Uber Fires Driverless-Car Executive At The Center Of Google Legal Battle
US Tests Missile Defense Amid North Korea Tensions
Mike Flynn's Pro-Turkey Work: An Unfinished Documentary To Boost Country's Image
Steven Cohen's Hedge-Fund Comeback Shoots For A Record Target: \$20 Billion

New York Times:

Trump Advisers Wage Tug Of War Before Decision On Climate Deal
Blind Spots In Trump's Trade Tirade Against Germany
In Chicago's Crisis Of Violence, Some Signs Of Hope
The Billionaire Gadfly In Exile Who Stared Down Beijing
Free Play Or Flashcards? New Study Nods To More Rigorous Preschools
Bangladesh Cyclone Wreaks Havoc In Rohingya Refugee Camps

Washington Post:

Democrats' Left Wing Raises Stakes In Virginia Primary
President's Window For Early Wins Is Shrinking
Trump, Merkel Not Giving Ground
Opioid Crisis In US Fueling Chaos In Mexico
Progressive Portland Confronts Murderous Hate

Financial Times:

Amazon Ascent To \$1,000 Highlights Tech Stock Surge
Consumer Spending Rise Boosts Hopes For US Economy
China's Cyber Security Law Rattles Multinationals
Temer Says Brazil Coalition Steady Despite Scandal

Washington Times:

More Than 5,500 Illegals Registered To Vote In Virginia In Last Decade: 1,852 Actually Cast Ballots
Successful US Missile Interceptor Test Cast As Warning To North Korea, Iran
White House Says "Full Steam Ahead" On Trump Agenda
New York Secessionists Look To Constitutional Convention As Best Chance To Split State
Obama's 2016 Regulations To Cost Economy $2 Trillion A Year

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Russia Meddling Investigation; Russia Meddling Investigation-Flynn; Russia Meddling Investigation-Kushner; US Missile Defense; Tiger Woods-DUI; Oregon Train Stabbing Trial; Severe Weather; NYC Sky Diving Accident; Former Panama Leader Dies; Singer Battles Breast Cancer; Cleveland Police Fired; Water Park Accident; Three Mile Island Closure; Ariana Grande-Manchester Performance; Spelling Bee.

CBS: White House Media Team; Russia Meddling Investigation; US-German Relations; Mosul Assault; US Missile Defense; Oregon Train Stabbing Trial; Cleveland Police Fired; Tiger Woods-DUI; Former Panama Leader Dies; US-Cuba Trips; College Graduation Commencements.

NBC: US Missile Defense; Oregon Train Stabbing Trial; Russia Meddling Investigation-Kushner; US-Germany Relations; White House Media Team; Tiger Woods-DUI; Former Panama Leader Dies; Mortgage Cyber Scam; Ariana Grande-Manchester Performance; Hollywood-Women; France-Tennis Player Banned; Young Inventor.

Network TV At A Glance:

Russia Meddling Investigation – 10 minutes, 50 seconds
US Missile Defense – 6 minutes, 20 seconds
Tiger Woods-DUI – 5 minutes, 40 seconds
Oregon Train Stabbing Trial – 4 minutes, 25 seconds
White House Media Team – 3 minutes, 10 seconds
US-German Relations – 3 minutes, 10 seconds
Former Panama Leader Dies – 1 minute

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: JetBlue-Laptop Fire; Orlando Airport-Gun Scare; US Missile Defense; Russia Meddling Investigation; White House Media Team.

CBS: US Missile Defense; White House Media Team; Tiger Woods-DUI; Ariana Grande-Manchester Performance; Kathy Griffin Apology; Wall Street News.

FOX: Russia Meddling Investigation-Kushner; Russia Meddling Investigation-Flynn; Oregon Train Stabbing Trial; Orlando Airport-Gun Scare.

NPR: White House Media Team; Mosul Assault; Georgia-House Special Election; Wall Street News.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Meets with Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc of Vietnam.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Joins the President for an expanded bilateral meeting with Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc of Vietnam.

US Senate: On recess until 5 June.

US House: On recess until 5 June.

Other: 9:00 AM Special Olympic Committee president speaks at Brookings on learning programs – Special Olympic Committee President Timothy Shriver speaks at Brookings Institution 'Future of Children' event on 'the future of school-based social and emotional learning programs', including the release by Brookings and Princeton University of the latest issue of The Future of Children – a journal that promotes effective, evidence-based policies and programs for children. Rush NeuroBehavioral Center Executive Director Clark McKown also speaks Location: Brookings Institution, 1775 Massachusetts Ave, Washington, DC <http://www.brookings.edu> #FutureOfChildren

9:30 AM Free State Foundation annual Telecom Policy Conference – Free State Foundation Annual Telecom Policy Conference, themed 'A New Direction for Communications Policy: Less Regulation, More Investment and Innovation', with speakers including Federal Communications Commission Chairman Ajit Pai, Federal Trade Commission Bureau of Consumer Protection Acting Director Tom Pahl and Bureau of Competition Acting Director Tad Lipsky, former OMB Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs Administrator Howard Shelanski, CTIA President and CEO Meredith Attwell Baker, Comcast Corporation Senior Executive Vice President David Cohen, MMTCA President and CEO Kim Keenan, Brookings Institution Nonresident Senior Fellow Blair Levin, Boston College Law School Professor Daniel Lyons, AT&T Senior Executive Vice President of External and Legislative Affairs Robert Quinn, and FSF President Randolph May and Senior Fellow Seth Cooper Location: National Press Club, 529 14th St NW, Washington, DC freestatefoundation.org #FSFConf9

5:00 PM Vietnamese PM Nguyen speaks at Heritage Foundation – 'Opportunities and Challenges to Peace, Security, Cooperation and Development in the Asia-Pacific and the Growth of Vietnam–U.S. Comprehensive Partnership' Heritage Foundation address by Vietnamese Prime Minister Nguyen Xuan Phuc, outlining Vietnam's views on issues facing the Asia-Pacific region, and the potential for U.S.–Vietnam cooperation Location: Heritage Foundation, 214 Massachusetts Ave NE, Washington, DC www.heritage.org <https://twitter.com/Heritage>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: "Sen. John McCain, fellow Republican, said he doesn't like this at all. He says allegations of ties between Trump's campaign and Russia are reaching Watergate size and scale. I understand what Sen. McCain is saying. But Watergate was different. Watergate was some guys breaking into a hotel. This is a guy with a hotel breaking into the White House."

Trevor Noah: "Greg Gianforte was elected Montana's new Republican congressman, elected just a day after body slamming a reporter who had the nerve to ask him a question about the House Republicans' healthcare bill, which you've got to admit, is a pretty gangster response. 'How are the people going to pay their hospital bills?' 'You tell me, bam!'"

Trevor Noah: "Former Trump National Security Adviser Michael Flynn says he's going to plead the fifth rather than testify to Congress. He won't speak to anyone unless they are Russian spies."

Trevor Noah: "So now, basically, we've got Jared, Flynn, Jeff Sessions, Paul Manafort, Carter

Page, and, just today, Trump's lawyer Michael Cohen, all linked to the Russians in some way or the other. Wouldn't it be funny if everyone in Trump's campaign was talking to the Russians except Trump? But only because the Russians didn't trust him."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, November 1, 2017
Date: Wednesday, November 01, 2017 6:12:11 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 2017 6:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Washington Examiner: Lawmakers Demand Accountability For Puerto Rico's $300M Whitefish Deal.
- High Country (CO) News: Scandals Pile Up For Interior Secretary.
- Politico Influence: Nonprofits Go After Interior Official Who Joined American Petroleum Institute.
- Huffington Post: Trump's 'Review' Of Utah Monument Was Over Before It Started.
- Washington Examiner: Rob Bishop To Announce Big Energy Bill Pushing Oil, Gas Development.
- Morning Consult: House GOP Sees Smooth Sailing For Forest Management Bill.
- U.S. News & World Report: 2 States Warn Trump Against Big Changes In Sage Grouse Plan.
- New Orleans Times-Picayune: Bill Cassidy Balks At Trump Administration's Offshore Oil Revenue Figure, Seeks Review.

- Associated Press: Judge Gives Reprieve To Montana Coal Mine, Averting Layoffs.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Tribes' Lawyers Tell Interior It Must Accept Casino Deal.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Natural Gas Intelligence: Energy Industry Again Seeking To Block BLM Venting/Flaring Rule.
- KIFI-TV Idaho Falls (ID): BLM Names Pocatello Field Office Manager.
- Livingston (MT) Enterprise: Oil, Gas Leases Proposed Close To Livingston.
- Las Vegas Review-Journal: Conservationists Fight Proposed Ruby Mountains Oil Development.
- Casper (WY) Star-Tribune: Wyoming, Ranching Group Enter Lawsuit Over Wild Horse Gather Near Rock Springs.
- Las Cruces (NM) Sun-News: Bureau Of Land Management Las Cruces District Sponsors Photo Contest.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Waynesboro (VA) News Virginian: DuPont Funds Help Expand Stuarts Draft Preserve.
- KCNC-TV Denver: Herd Gets Annual Checkup At Wildlife Refuge.

National Park Service

- NBC News: Park Service Superintendent Terry Brown Is Bridging The Racial Divide.
- Ridgecrest (CA) Daily Independent: Historic Keane Wonder Mine Reopens To Public.
- Los Angeles Times: Wildlife Camera Catches Uncollared Mountain Lion Roaming The Hollywood Hills.
- U.S. News & World Report: Route 66 Hotel Project Aims For December Opening.
- Bend (OR) Bulletin: Crater Lake Seeks Public Comment On Trail Plan.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Marianas Variety: DLNR Gets $181K Grant For Eradication Of Coconut Rhinoceros Beetle On Rota.
- Focus Taiwan: Taiwan To Give Visa Waivers To Six Pacific Allies: President.
- Virgin Islands Consortium (VIR): Mapp Ends Curfew, Issues $3 Million In Tax Refunds; DSNAP To Rollout Mid-November.

US Geological Survey

- The Hill: West Coast Dems Lead Call To Fund Early Warning System For Earthquakes.
- Additional Reading.

Dept. Of Interior Op/Eds & Editorials

- Stephen Trimble: Mr. President, It's Not Too Late To Save Bears Ears.
- Making National Parks More Expensive Will Only Make Them Whiter.
- Congress At A Crossroads: We Can Prevent Further Wildfire Tragedy.
- National Forests Deserve Better Than House And Senate's Wildfire Bills.
- The Park Service Needs To Do More To Connect.
- President Trump's Claim That He 'Turned West Virginia Around' By Cutting Regulations On Mining.
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- CBS: Trump Orders Increased Vetting Of Foreign Visitors After New York Terror Attack.
- CBS: Media Analyses: Trump Seeks To Distance Himself From Papadopoulos.
- Associated Press: White House: Trump Will Not Visit DMZ During Visit To South Korea.
- Associated Press: Trump Wants To Sign Tax Bill By Christmas.
- Bloomberg News: Republicans Delay Release Of Tax Plan Until Thursday.
- Washington Times: Trump Says Announcement On Businesses Returning To US Coming "Very Soon."
- Axios: EPA Official Says Obama Administration Had Legal Basis For Methane Rule.
- Associated Press: Pruitt To Replace Members Of EPA Advisory Boards.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "That Crazy Talk About Robert Mueller."
 - "Constitutional Convention: Thanks, But No Thanks."

- Washington Post.
 - "Trump Pulls Another Stunt Of Cynical Distraction."
 - "A Legal Change That Could Help Stop The Next Harvey Weinstein."
 - "Ralph Northam Should Repudiate This Offensive Anti-Gillespie Ad."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Tax Credit Bidding War."
 - "The Terror In Tribeca."
 - "The Press Loves Fusion GPS."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Lawmakers Demand Accountability For Puerto Rico's $300M Whitefish Deal.

The Washington Examiner (10/31, Siciliano, Siegel) reports US senators yesterday "demanded accountability for the $300 million no-bid contract that Puerto Rico's power company gave to a tiny firm from the same small town as Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke." Sen. Jon Tester of Montana "asked for someone to be held accountable for the Whitefish contract, during the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee hearing on hurricane response." Sen. Ron Johnson "the chairman of the committee, said in his opening statement that the 'issue with Whitefish is Exhibit A of how careful we need to be with spending taxpayer money.'"

FEMA Chief Says Agency Didn't Know About Whitefish Contract. FEMA Administrator Brock Long says FEMA would probably not have approved a Hurricane Maria recovery contract that Puerto Rican officials recently canceled, according to many of the news outlets covering Long's appearance before a congressional committee. Bloomberg News (10/31, Flavelle) reports Long "testified Tuesday that his agency didn't know about a $300 million no-bid contract to rebuild Puerto Rico's electrical grid until after it was awarded, and likely wouldn't have approved it." But Ron Johnson, who chairs the Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs, said the panel was warned in June about FEMA's "continued failure to manage disaster relief funds adequately." In response, Long stated, "We have a lot of work to do when it comes to training and ensuring the grant monitoring," but the Puerto Rico power restoration agreement "was not our contract."

The AP (10/31, Biesecker) reports Long told committee members that "no lawyer inside FEMA would have ever agreed to the language in that contract." In a separate coverage of the Senate hearing, the AP (10/31) reports Long "said he...needs additional legal authority from Congress to build the power grid in Puerto Rico back better than it was before."

Scandals Pile Up For Interior Secretary.

The High Country \(CO\) News (10/31, Worby) reports that "several events" have recently "come to light that raise questions" about Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's "ethical practices." The latest is the controversy over "the now-revoked Whitefish Energy contract for grid repair in Puerto Rico." According to the article, "some of the controversies – including allegations that Zinke has mixed professional and personal business, dodged campaign finance laws and generally demonstrated dubious ethics – have led watchdog groups to call for investigations."

Nonprofits Go After Interior Official Who Joined American Petroleum Institute.

Politico Influence (10/31, Meyer) reports that "three-left leaning nonprofit groups" want the Interior Department's top ethic official to weigh in on whether "a former senior official who left for a job with the oil industry violated conflict-of-interest laws by participating in meetings about oil and gas policy in the weeks before her departure." The request refers to Megan Bloomgren, who "joined Interior's beachhead team in December and left the department in June to go work for the American Petroleum Institute."

Trump's 'Review' Of Utah Monument Was Over Before It Started.

The Huffington Post (10/31, D'Angelo) reports that "six months after signing a pair of executive orders threatening the future of 27 national monuments, President Donald Trump reportedly phoned Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) to inform him that he would follow through on Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's recommendation to shrink Bears Ears National Monument, a 1.35 million-acre area in southern Utah that President Barack Obama declared a national monument in 2016." According to the article, "seemingly every comment and action the administration made leading up to Friday had suggested Bears Ears was headed for the chopping block, and that the review – at least for this particular monument – was mostly for show." Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "insisted early on that 'there is no predetermined outcome on any monument.'" However, "like Trump, he has consistently criticized recent monument designations, suggesting Bears Ears and other monuments wouldn't survive intact."

Rob Bishop To Announce Big Energy Bill Pushing Oil, Gas Development.

The Washington Examiner (10/31, Siegel) reports that Rep. Rob Bishop, chairman of the House Natural Resources Committee, "soon will introduce a comprehensive federal energy lands bill that would aim to facilitate offshore and onshore oil and gas development by easing federal permitting responsibilities and giving more authority to states." Bishop said in a statement, "America's shale revolution ushered in an era of energy leadership and innovation. As state and private lands benefited from greater investment and development, misguided federal policies prevented our vast federal estate from experiencing the same fortune." The legislation, "expected to be considered by the House in the coming weeks, would overhaul existing regulatory frameworks for energy development on the Outer Continental Shelf and federally-owned onshore land."

House GOP Sees Smooth Sailing For Forest Management Bill.

The Morning Consult (10/31, Gheorghiu) reports that "House Republicans expect to pass a bipartisan bill tackling forest resilience on Wednesday, with further action likely in the Senate, as California's wildfires add urgency to finding a comprehensive solution." However, "many Democrats, and almost half of California's delegation in the House, support competing legislation, which has more than four times as many co-sponsors, that's focused solely on funding and doesn't try to roll back environmental regulations that limit logging." The legislation introduced by Rep. Bruce Westerman "that's scheduled for a Wednesday floor vote would reduce the risk of wildfire by offering different options to the U.S. Forest Service to fund fire suppression, without changing funding levels, and by creating access for loggers to thin overgrown forests."

2 States Warn Trump Against Big Changes In Sage Grouse Plan.

The AP (10/31, Elliott) reports that "two Western governors on Tuesday warned the Trump administration against making big changes" in a plan to protect the greater sage grouse, "saying it would send a message to states not to bother working together to save other imperiled species." Colorado Gov. John Hickenlooper and Wyoming Gov. Matt Mead "said a 2015 conservation plan designed to save the greater sage grouse was the product of long negotiation among state and federal governments, conservation groups, industry and agriculture." However, "not all Western governors support the 2015 plan." Idaho Gov. C. L. "Butch" Otter "filed a lawsuit shortly after the plan was released, contending the Obama administration illegally imposed federal land-use restrictions."

Bill Cassidy Balks At Trump Administration's Offshore Oil Revenue Figure, Seeks Review.

The New Orleans Times-Picayune (10/31, Broach) reports Sen. Bill Cassidy is reviewing the Trump Administration's accounting of the revenue from the Gulf of Mexico Energy Security Act after reports Louisiana will only get half of the $140 million it expected to receive. Cassidy said, "We're trying to do our own individual verification of those numbers. ... I'm not saying they're wrong. I'm not saying they're right."

Judge Gives Reprieve To Montana Coal Mine, Averting Layoffs.

The AP (10/31, Brown) reports that "a central Montana coal mine averted dozens of imminent layoffs on Tuesday after a judge allowed work on an expansion of the mine to proceed while the government reconsiders the project's contribution to climate change." The ruling by U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy "allows Signal Peak Energy to remove up to 170,000 tons of coal from federal leases adjacent to its Bull Mountain Mine north of Billings." Attorneys for the Trump Administration "had backed the company's request in court to modify that earlier ruling."

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Tribes' Lawyers Tell Interior It Must Accept Casino Deal.

The Connecticut Mirror (10/31, Pazniokas) reports that "two national law firms representing the Mashantucket Pequot and Mohegan tribal nations pressed the federal government Tuesday with a letter insisting the Interior secretary has no choice but to approve their gaming agreements with Connecticut and clear the way for them to jointly develop a commercial casino in East Windsor." The letter comes just days after a meeting at the Bureau of Indian Affairs, "where the tribes and the state's congressional delegation failed to move the department off its puzzling stance of neither rejecting nor approving amendments to the tribes' gaming compacts." According to the article, "the refusal to give a clear answer was a victory for MGM Resorts International, which has fought for two years in Hartford and Washington, D.C., to block the East Windsor casino and protect the market for an MGM casino scheduled to open next year in nearby Springfield."

Additional coverage was provided by the New London \(CT\) Day (10/31, Hallenbeck) and the Connecticut Post (10/31, Haar).

Bureau Of Land Management

Energy Industry Again Seeking To Block BLM Venting/Flaring Rule.

Natural Gas Intelligence (10/31, Nemece) reports that "the Independent Petroleum Association of America (IPAA) and the Western Energy Alliance (WEA) late Friday sued to halt the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) natural gas flaring and venting rules" as some are taking effect in January. The lawsuit was filed in the US District Court in Wyoming and said that the operators are in a "game of regulatory chicken" following the rulings against the Department of the Interior. IPAA spokesperson Dan Naatz said "the Interior Department has already signaled its intent to delay the impending compliance deadlines by one year, but it must abide by a lengthy notice and comment process for public input." Naatz added that "while we applaud this step, our member companies need to know what rules they will be operating under in just a few months' time."

BLM Names Pocatello Field Office Manager.

KIFI-TV Idaho Falls, ID (10/31) reports that the Bureau of Land Management has announced Melissa Warren will be the new manager of the Pocatello Field Office. Acting District Manager Lance Brady "said Warren has a strong background in lands and reality and a solid grasp of how BLM functions in its day-to-day activities." Warren has been manager of BLM's Tuscon Field Office in Arizona. S

Oil, Gas Leases Proposed Close To Livingston.

The Livingston \(MT\) Enterprise (10/31) reports that the Bureau of Land Management is "preparing to offer oil and gas leases in Park County." In a recently issued proposal, "the agency would offer nine lease parcels on 670 BLM acres and 3,637 private acres, totaling 4,307 acres, predominantly on lands between Livingston and Springdale. Small parcels north of Wilsall would also be included."

Conservationists Fight Proposed Ruby Mountains Oil Development.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal (10/31, Brean) reports that "conservationists are bashing the latest move to open more federal land in Nevada to oil exploration, this time in the Ruby Mountains of Elko County." The U.S. Forest Service is "studying whether to make 54,000 acres in the Rubies, about 370 miles north of Las Vegas, available for lease to oil and gas developers for the first time." The Bureau of Land Management "requested the evaluation of the forest land in early August, after a developer expressed interest in a lease there."

Wyoming, Ranching Group Enter Lawsuit Over Wild Horse Gather Near Rock Springs.

The Casper \(WY\) Star-Tribune (10/31, Rosenfeld) reports that "the state of Wyoming and a ranching group have entered into the latest in a series of contentious lawsuits over the presence of wild horses in southwest Wyoming, pitting wild horse advocates against the Bureau of Land Management." On Tuesday, Wyoming and the Rock Springs Grazing Association were "granted permission to enter the current dispute over a horse gather in three regions of southwest Wyoming near Rock Springs, where the BLM recently rounded up wild horses in accordance with a 2013 settlement between the ranching group and the federal government.”

Bureau Of Land Management Las Cruces District Sponsors Photo Contest.

The Las Cruces \(NM\) Sun-News (10/31) reports that the Bureau of Land Management Las Cruces District is “sponsoring a photo contest and inviting public land users to submit their favorite photographs of a special landscape, plant, animal or object located on public land.” According to the article, “the grand prize winner will receive a 2018 Las Cruces District Office Annual Pass valued at $30, with their photograph printed on it.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

DuPont Funds Help Expand Stuarts Draft Preserve.

The Waynesboro \(VA\) News Virginian (10/31, Stuart) reports that Stuarts Draft’s Cowbane Prairie Natural Area Preserve has been enlarged by 84 acres “thanks to the state’s purchase of land with funds from the DuPont South River settlement.” The article adds that “a donation of land also helped add to the preserve, which contains rare and imperiled plants.” According to Wendi Weber, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service northeast regional director, “expansion of the preserve will benefit numerous species, including several kinds of birds, affected by the mercury contamination.”

Herd Gets Annual Checkup At Wildlife Refuge.

KCNC-TV Denver (10/31, Mason) reports that “the Rocky Mountain Arsenal National Wildlife Refuge held its annual bison herd roundup and tagging Tuesday.” The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service “conducted a heard health check on more than 100 bison.” It was “part of a nationwide effort to conserve genetically pure bison and keep the species healthy and thriving.”

National Park Service

Park Service Superintendent Terry Brown Is Bridging The Racial Divide.

NBC News (10/31, Cottman) reports that Terry Brown, “the first African-American National Park Service Superintendent to oversee Fort Monroe National Monument, has adapted to an unusual workspace that once served” as Confederate Army General Robert E. Lee’s military home. Brown has “embarked on a profound mission to help bridge the racial divide in Virginia by sharing the historical account of Fort Monroe.” Brown said, “My challenge is protecting these stories and telling these stories in a fair and sensible way. I look at U.S. parks and Fort Monroe as comfort zones because people won’t have these kinds of tough conversations about slavery if they don’t feel comfortable.”

Historic Keane Wonder Mine Reopens To Public.

The Ridgecrest \(CA\) Daily Independent (10/31) reports that Death Valley National Park “plans to reopen historic Keane Wonder Mine to the public starting on Tuesday, November 7.” Superintendent Mike Reynolds said, “We’re so excited to be able to open this site up to the public again! The mine, tramway, and mill are charismatic.”

Wildlife Camera Catches Uncollared Mountain Lion Roaming The Hollywood Hills.

The Los Angeles Times (10/31, Easter) reports that “an uncollared mountain lion was caught on camera roaming the Hollywood Hills just after midnight recently — the first official evidence of a cougar inhabiting a specially preserved parcel of land in Laurel Canyon, wildlife advocates say.” According to the article, “the Oct. 26 image was snapped by a wildlife camera placed somewhere on a 17-acre plot that CLAW and the Laurel Canyon Assn. helped preserve from development.” Kate Kuykendall of the National Park Service said, “It’s unusual for us to have confirmed sightings in that area.”

Route 66 Hotel Project Aims For December Opening.

The AP (10/31) reports that “developers of an $18 million project along historic Route 66 say they are aiming for a December opening of the revamped property.” The upgrade of “the storied El Vado motor lodge in Albuquerque includes a boutique hotel, a new mixed-use building next door and an events center." According to the article, "the lobby of the hotel will have a taproom that will feature local brews, and General Manager Carrie Confair is lining up different businesses to operate food trucks at the site."

Crater Lake Seeks Public Comment On Trail Plan.

The Bend \(OR\) Bulletin (11/1, Hamway) reports that Crater Lake National Park seeks input "on a management plan that will shape the park's trail system over the next quarter-century." The park is "working on a comprehensive trail management plan that will guide the national park's approach to trail infrastructure and visitor usage for the next 25 years." The public scoping period ends on Nov. 13.

Office Of Insular Affairs

DLNR Gets $181K Grant For Eradication Of Coconut Rhinoceros Beetle On Rota.

Marianas Variety (11/1, Lirio) reports that "the U.S. Office of Insular Affairs has awarded the CNMI Department of Lands and Natural Resources $181,048 for Coconut Rhinoceros Beetle detection, eradication and prevention on Rota." In a statement on Tuesday, Gov. Ralph D.L.G. Torres "said upon learning of the rhino beetle outbreak on Rota, the CNMI Office of Grants Management began the grant application immediately." While visiting Washington, D.C. "for meetings with the White House and other federal departments, Governor Torres said he also met with Assistant Interior Secretary for Insular Affairs Douglas W. Domenech to emphasize the need for expedited funding to address the rhino beetle problem in Rota."

Taiwan To Give Visa Waivers To Six Pacific Allies: President.

Focus Taiwan (10/31, Hsin-hui, Low) reports that Taiwan President Tsai Ing-wen "announced Tuesday that Taiwan will soon give visa waivers to the nationals of its six diplomatic allies in the Pacific." During her address to the Legislature of the Marshall Islands, "Tsai said she believed the decision will further enhance Taiwan's relations with these Pacific nations, which also include Kiribati, Nauru, the Solomon Islands, Palau, and Tuvalu." She "said her administration's 'steadfast diplomacy' policy, with a focus on 'mutual assistance for mutual benefits,' is aimed at strengthening bilateral cooperation and substantial ties with Taiwan's diplomatic allies to develop relationships that are reciprocal and mutually beneficial."

Mapp Ends Curfew, Issues $3 Million In Tax Refunds; DSNAP To Rollout Mid-November.

The Virgin Islands Consortium \(VIR\) (10/31) reports that Gov. Kenneth Mapp "during his hurricane recovery press briefing on Monday, ended the territory-wide curfew." The decision "comes nearly two months after Hurricane Irma devastated St. Thomas, and more than 6 weeks following Hurricane Maria's ravaging of St. Croix." It also "comes as the Virgin Islands Water and Power Authority (WAPA) continues to make progress in power restoration — 38 percent of St. Thomas has been restored, 19 percent of St. Croix and 14 percent of St. John." However, "with most of the territory's main thoroughfares still dark, and all but two traffic lights on St. Croix operable as of Monday, Mr. urged residents to be careful."

US Geological Survey

West Coast Dems Lead Call To Fund Early Warning System For Earthquakes.

The Hill (10/31, Bowden) reports, "A group of Democrats representing western states has sent a letter to White House budget chief Mick Mulvaney urging the Trump administration to include funding for an earthquake early-warning system in the fiscal 2018 budget." The group "urge[d] Mulvaney to adopt Early Earthquake Warning (EEW) systems, such as those employed during Mexico City's earthquake last month." They are seeking "$16.1 million to be included in the budget for the continued development and operation of the EEW for the West Coast, called ShakeAlert."

Additional Reading.

- 5 Earthquakes Recorded Tuesday In Central Oklahoma By USGS. Seattle Times (10/31).
- Earthquake Of Magnitude 6 Strikes Off Ambon In Indonesia: USGS. Reuters (10/31).

Stephen Trimble: Mr. President, It's Not Too Late To Save Bears Ears.

In an op-ed for the Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (11/1, Trimble), author Stephen Trimble urges President Trump to "turn back to the tribes before you finalize your attack on the integrity of Bears Ears, Grand Staircase-Escalante and other national monuments." Trimble beseeches Trump: "Mr. President, it's not too late. Heed the outpouring of rage and grief rolling toward you. Preserve our national monuments as designated. Do not diminish them, do not open them to destructive resource extraction, but cherish them, manage them, protect them."

Making National Parks More Expensive Will Only Make Them Whiter.

In an op-ed for the Washington Post (10/31, White), author Dan White argues that raising fees at national parks will only exacerbate the "long-standing ethnicity gap." He claims that "if the price increases go into effect, all lower-income Americans stand to be priced out." Moreover, "advocates say fee hikes could have an oversize impact on communities of color by creating a new disincentive for groups that have stayed away from, or felt discouraged from, visiting national parks, for reasons including fearful historical associations with wilderness areas and a perceived lack of cultural relevancy."

Congress At A Crossroads: We Can Prevent Further Wildfire Tragedy.

For the "Congress" blog of The Hill (10/31, Bishop), Rep. Rob Bishop urges his colleagues to support the Resilient Federal Forests Act of 2017. Bishop asserts that "it is no longer debatable that proactive management — prescribed burns, salvaging of dead trees, responsible timber harvesting, among other prescriptions — reduce wildfire severity." He argues that "whether Congress passes the Resilient Federal Forests Act as a stand-alone bill or includes similar provisions in a future legislative package, we must enact reforms to increase the pace and scale of hazardous fuel reduction."

National Forests Deserve Better Than House And Senate's Wildfire Bills.

In an op-ed for The Hill (10/31, Christensen, Franklin), Norm Christensen, Ph.D., a research professor of ecology and the founding dean of the Nicholas School of the Environment at Duke University, and Jerry Franklin, Ph.D., a professor of forest ecosystems at the University of Washington, calls the Resilient Federal Forests Act of 2017 is "a misguided bill that would seriously damage our national forests and reduce Americans' ability to have a say in how these forests are managed." They argue that "wildfire funding should concentrate on prevention programs such as controlled burning and fuel reduction." They assert that "better legislative options that provide the necessary resources for those on the ground, maintain the ecological health of the forests, and keep the voice of the American people involved are needed."

The Park Service Needs To Do More To Connect.

In an op-ed for the High Country \(CO\) News (11/1, Franzen), August Franzen, an intern with the National Park Service in Seattle, writes about the "barriers" that "exist throughout the National Park Service." According to Franzen, "the agency has gotten so used to its own existence that it has a hard time connecting with new audiences." He claims that "the parks have worked so hard to appeal to people who look like me — white, male and comfortable in hiking boots — that they have trouble going any further." As a result, "people who know the parks will visit them, and people who don't, won't." Franzen writes that "these are the challenges that my internship was created to address, and the challenges that motivated me to join."

President Trump's Claim That He 'Turned West Virginia Around' By Cutting Regulations On Mining.

The Washington Post (11/1, Lewis) analyzes President Trump's claim that he "turned West Virginia Around" by cutting regulations on mining. The piece acknowledges that "since taking office, Trump has cut several Obama-era regulations on mining and energy production," and in the first quarter of 2017, West Virginia, a major energy-producing state, saw a 3 percent increase in gross domestic product, the broadest measure of the economy." But the piece concludes that Trump does not deserve the credit, largely because Trump's actions have not had time to impact the economy. As a result, "for trying to capitalize on the hard work of West Virginians, Trump earns Four Pinocchios."

Additional Reading.

- Our View: National Parks Becoming Victims Of Own Success. Central Maine (11/1).
- Susan Shelley: 'Rim Of The Valley' Plan Offers Politicians A Place In The Sun. Los Angeles Daily News (10/31, Shelley).
- Montana's Congressional Delegation's 'Alternative Facts' On Lynx. Great Falls \(MT\) Tribune (10/31, Garrity).
- Cutler: The Deregulation President. Roanoke \(VA\) Times (11/1, Cutler).

Top National News

Trump Orders Increased Vetting Of Foreign Visitors After New York Terror Attack.

The deadly truck attack near Ground Zero in New York City dominated the network news broadcasts – the networks spent more than 37 minutes on the story – and the cable shows Tuesday night. The attack also receives saturation coverage in print and online. Much of the coverage focuses on the details of the attack, which authorities are casting as an act of terrorism, as well as President Trump's reaction, including his order that DHS step up the extreme vetting of foreign visitors to the US.

In its lead story, the CBS Evening News (10/31, lead story, 2:50, Mason) reported that at least eight people were killed and at least 11 were injured "in the deadliest act of terror in this city since 9/11, and it happened just block from the World Trade Center." A 29-year-old suspect, originally from Uzbekistan, is accused of using a truck to mow down bikers and pedestrians on a bicycle path. NBC Nightly News (10/31, story 3, 2:40, Holt) reported on eyewitness accounts of the attack, with correspondent Savanna Guthrie saying: "According to one witness, the truck was traveling at a high rate of speed, about 40 to 50" miles per hour. ABC World News Tonight (10/31, lead story, 3:25, Muir) reported in its lead story that witnesses saw the driver exit the vehicle with "what turned out to be two fake guns." ABC World News Tonight (10/31, story 5, 1:00, Muir) and the CBS Evening News (10/31, story 4, 1:45, Glor) reported from Bellevue Hospital where they said some of the injured were taken. The Wall Street Journal (10/31, West, King, Gay) also reports on the attack, providing accounts from eyewitnesses.

Sean Hannity said on Fox News' Hannity (10/31) that Trump tweeted Tuesday night, "I have just ordered Homeland Security to step up our already Extreme Vetting Program. Being politically correct is fine, but not for this!" The Washington Times (10/31, Miller) says Trump "did not elaborate on what exactly he had ordered done."

The New York Times (10/31, Mueller, Rashbaum, Baker) says the President responded to the attack in a tweet, writing, "In NYC, looks like another attack by a very sick and deranged person. Law enforcement is following this closely. NOT IN THE U.S.A.!" Reuters (10/31, Cherelus, Trotta) reports that Trump, "who has pressed for a ban on travelers entering the United States from some predominantly Muslim countries," tweeted, "We must not allow ISIS to return, or enter, our country after defeating them in the Middle East and elsewhere. Enough!" In another tweet, Trump wrote, "My thoughts, condolences and prayers to the victims and families of the New York City terrorist attack. God and your country are with you!" The Washington Examiner (10/31, Mayfield) reports that Vice President Pence tweeted that he was "saddened by the tragedy in NYC. Our prayers are w/the victims, their families & first responders. Those responsible must be held accountable."

Lester Holt said on NBC Nightly News (10/31, story 5, 1:05) that while Trump "did not explicitly call this an act of terror," he "did appear to link it to ISIS." Likewise, the CBS Evening News (10/31, story 5, 1:10, Glor) said Trump "gave [the attack] an ISIS inspiration, or at least indirect ISIS linkage." Bloomberg News (10/31, Sink, Fletcher) reports that Trump "was briefed on the incident earlier Tuesday by White House chief of staff John Kelly, and press secretary Sarah Sanders said he would be updated as more details became known." In a statement from the White House Tuesday evening, Trump said, "Our thoughts and prayers are with the victims of today's terrorist attack in New York City and their families. ... My Administration will provide its full support to the New York City Police Department, including through a joint investigation with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. We offer our thanks to the first responders who stopped the suspect and rendered immediate aid to the victims of this cowardly attack." ABC World News Tonight (10/31, story 6, 1:00, Muir) reporting Trump is "continuing to be updated by his national security team."

Suspect Entered US On "Diversity Visa" Trump Has Sought To End. NBC Nightly News

(10/31, story 2, 0:55, Holt) reported federal authorities have named the suspect as Sayfullo Saipov. ABC World News Tonight (10/31, story 2, 1:50, Muir) reported that authorities say he came to the US "under the diversity visa program, which offers a lottery for people from countries with few immigrants to America." Breitbart (10/31, Binder) says Trump and "pro-American immigration reformers have demanded an end to" the program, which "gives out 50,000 visas every year to foreign nationals from a multitude of countries, including those with known terrorist problems – such as Afghanistan, Algeria, Egypt, Iraq, Lebanon, Libya, Nigeria, Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Syria, Trinidad and Tobago, Venezuela, Yemen, and Uzbekistan." The Washington Examiner (10/31, Mayfield) also points out Trump's support for "legislation that would end the program." The New York Times (10/31, Kilgannon, Goldstein) cites a "law enforcement official" who said Saipov "is an Uzbek national who came to the United States in 2010" through Kennedy International Airport, "and apparently remained in the United States after that."

The AP (10/31, Long, Pearson) reports that Saipov "has a Florida driver's license but may have been staying in New Jersey." The Washington Post (10/31, Merle, Barrett, Lowery, Siegel) reports that Dilnoza Abdusamatova "said that Saipov stayed with her family in Cincinnati for his first two weeks in the country because their fathers were friends." Abdusamatova "said that Saipov then moved to Florida to start a trucking company."

CNN's Anderson Cooper 360 (10/31) reported that Saipov left a note in the truck that, according to a law enforcement official, "claimed he...went on this attack in the name of ISIS." The New York Post (10/31, Celona) says Saipov "had the notes written in Arabic inside his Home Depot rental truck along with a picture of the ISIS flag, according to law enforcement sources."

The Daily Caller (10/31, Bennett) says police "are not looking for any other suspects in the attack." The CBS Evening News (10/31, story 2, 1:40, Glor) similarly said that investigators believe Saipov was "acting alone," but intelligence officials will still be searching databases to find out details, including "where he's traveled and who he has been in contact with," as well as his Internet history.

The Wall Street Journal (10/31, Donati, Sonne) says the attack highlights the increasing threat of terrorism from Central Asia. Fran Townsend, Homeland Security adviser to President George W. Bush, said on the CBS Evening News (10/31, story 3, 2:15, Mason) that "one of the things [investigators will] look at, we know that this man, the truck driver, was from originally Uzbekistan," which "has an Islamic extremist group, the IMU, the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan and they were established in 1998. In 2015, they moved from an affiliate of Al Qaeda to ISIS. ... And so, the FBI investigators are going to look to see whether or not he was motivated by the IMU, or another extremist group."

FBI Takes Lead In Investigation. Politico (10/31, Lima) reports that the Administration "announced that the FBI and the New York City Police Department were mounting a joint investigation into the attack." ABC World News Tonight (10/31, story 7, 0:45, Muir) reported Attorney General Sessions spoke with FBI Director Wray by phone regarding the attack "and what to do about it." CNN's Situation Room (10/31) reported the FBI has now taken the lead in the case.

The Hill (10/31, Fabian) reports that New York City Mayor Bill De Blasio "called the incident an 'act of terror' that targeted 'innocent people.'" In its lead story, NBC Nightly News (10/31, lead story, 3:20, Holt) showed De Blasio saying, "This was an act of terror, and a particularly cowardly act of terror, aimed at innocent civilians."

New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo said on CNN's Anderson Cooper 360 (10/31), "All the evidence we have suggests that he was acting alone, the so-called lone wolf syndrome. You have to remember a couple years ago they telegraphed this, that they were going to go to individual acts. They said use a knife, car, truck or what ever you can get. That's what this was." Citing witness accounts that the driver yelled, "Allahu Akbar!" as he got out of the truck, USA Today (10/31, James, McCoy) reports that New York City Police Commissioner James O'Neill "said the statement and the method of attack led police to conclude it was a terrorist act."

"Today is just latest in which attackers have used car or truck to mow people around the world," NBC Nightly News (10/31, story 6, 2:15, Holt) reported, with Tom Costello mentioning truck attacks in Nice, London, Barcelona, Stockholm, Berlin, and Ohio State University, before noting that "for years, ISIS and Al Qaeda called for this kind of low tech attack." Jim Sciutto said on CNN's Situation Room (10/31), "We know ISIS has encouraged their supporters to use vehicles in attacks." Ray Kelly said on ABC World News Tonight (10/31, story 4, 1:30, Muir), "This is the nightmare scenario, no question about it." On NBC Nightly News (10/31, story 4, 1:10, Holt), counterterrorism analyst Bill Bratton argued, "It's actually fortunate more people weren't injured in this incident. There's a major school there getting out a few minutes after this event occurred."

James Rosen said on Fox News' Special Report (10/31) that DHS officials and a member of the House Intelligence Committee "are portraying it as most likely a copycat attack based on similar uses of motor vehicles as weapons in acts of terrorism in big cities. A spokesperson for acting DHS Secretary Elaine Duke after noting that Duke she had been briefed in the attack stated, 'We have recently seen attacks like this throughout the world.'" Rep. Joaquin Castro, a member of the House Intelligence Committee, "told Fox News tonight, 'More people are being inspired. It certainly looks like a copycat thing, but it's too early to make that determination.'"

The Washington Times (10/31, Ernst, Morton) reports that while there was "no immediate claim of responsibility from the Islamic State, al Qaeda or any other terrorist group...pro-ISIS web sites were openly exulting in the attack." Meanwhile, in cable appearances Tuesday evening, lawmakers' comments indicated a belief that ISIS was behind the attack. For example, House Homeland Security Committee Chairman Mike McCaul said on Fox News' Special Report (10/31), "I believe when an individual yells out allahu akbar, all the indicators and hallmarks of an act of terror and I think that's true in this case. ... I believe as we are crushing the caliphate, defeating ISIS in Mosul and Raqqa, this is going to be the new sort of age or chapter of terror that we are going to see are these vehicles, these knives and explosive devices."

Sen. Richard Blumenthal said on CNN's Situation Room (10/31) that ISIS "has been on the run and on the defensive in Iraq and the Middle East and certainly it has boasted about metastasizing in effect this cancer of attacks on democracies all around the world. So it's attempting to reach America, the greatest democracy in the world, would not be surprising."

Sen. Chris Coons said on CNN's Situation Room (10/31), "Earlier this week, just yesterday we had a hearing in the Senate where we asked the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State about what we can expect as the amount of territory that ISIS controls in the Middle East is shrunk through action by the United States military and our coalition forces and one of the things they said is we will see ISIS around the world try and carry out attacks."

Former National Security council staffer Gillian Turner said on Fox News' Special Report (10/31) that if this was an ISIS attack, "their turn to reliance on the use of vehicles, the weaponization of vehicles, is something that is going to have catastrophic consequences for decades to come. While ISIS' reach is definitively global thanks to the Internet, this particular tactic makes all terrorism local for the effective future. It means they can reach into any community anywhere in the world, at any time and find recruits and sympathizers who are willing and able to go forth and carry out terrorist attacks."

A Wall Street Journal (10/31) editorial likens the attack to attacks this year in Las Ramblas in Barcelona, London Bridge and Stockholm, and last year on Bastille Day in Nice and at a Berlin Christmas market, and the Los Angeles Times (10/31, Lee, Hansen) says a US Transportation Security Administration report issued this year titled "Vehicle ramming attacks: Threat landscape, indicators and countermeasures," says "that in the last three years, at least 173 people have been killed and more than 700 wounded in 17 ramming attacks around the world."

NYC Deploying Extra Security As A Precaution. ABC World News Tonight (10/31, story 3, 2:05, Muir) reported that while authorities believe this was a lone wolf attack and do not believe there is an ongoing threat, with "millions...out for Halloween, and the annual parade in Manhattan," "major steps are being taken tonight to protect families." New York will deploy additional officers throughout the city. Cuomo said, "You'll see them in the airports, you'll see them in the tunnels. It's not because there's any evidence of any ongoing threat or any additional threat, it is just out of vigilance and out of caution." De Blasio said, "The bottom line is, we are going to go about our business in this city, we're not going to be deterred."

Media Analyses: Trump Seeks To Distance Himself From Papadopoulos.

Coverage of the aftermath of Special Counsel Robert Mueller's indictments of Paul Manafort and Rick Gates, and the revelation of George Papadopoulos' plea agreement, contrasts efforts by President Trump and the White House to distance Trump from Papadopoulos with pieces on Papadopoulos' role in the 2016 campaign. The CBS Evening News (10/31, story 6, 2:10, Mason) reported, "President Trump today tried to put distance between himself and the investigation into Russian interference in the election...despite the indictment of his former campaign chairman and a guilty plea by a former campaign adviser." CBS' Major Garrett: "On Twitter, President Trump falsely claimed Paul Manafort's alleged offense took place long before he came to the campaign. But the indictment alleges Manafort lied to federal officials and carried out a money laundering scheme during his tenure as campaign chairman and while advising the transition.”

On ABC World News Tonight (10/31, story 8, 3:10, Muir), Jonathan Karl reported, “On Twitter, the President lashed out at former campaign adviser George Papadopoulos, who pleaded guilty to lying about his contacts with the Russians: ‘Few people knew the young low level volunteer named George, who has already proven to be a liar. Check the Dems.’ Trump once called him an ‘excellent guy,’ and sat just a few seats away from him during a national security meeting in March 2016.” Chief of Staff Kelly “acknowledged in an interview with Fox News that the special counsel’s investigation is distracting President Trump.” Kelly: “It is very distracting to the President, as it would be to any citizen, to be investigated for something, while at the same time trying to carry the weight of what being President of the United States means.”

On NBC Nightly News (10/31, story 7, 2:30, Holt), Kristen Welker reported that Papadopoulos’ guilty plea “is providing fresh insight into Robert Mueller’s investigation into Russia’s attempt to influence the presidential campaign. ... NBC News has learned that one of those questioned just last week was Sam Clovis, a Trump campaign aide who appeared to approve of Papadopoulos request to go to Russia for the campaign. But his lawyer says would never have agreed to that.” Reporter Shirish D  te: “Are you going to pardon Mr. Manafort?” Trump: “Thank you all, thank you.” Welker: “The President ignored questions today, but called Papadopoulos a low-level volunteer and proven liar.”

The AP (10/31, Tucker, Day) reports that Trump “dismissed” Papadopoulos “as a ‘liar’ and a mere campaign volunteer, but newly unsealed court papers outline the former adviser’s frequent contacts with senior officials and with foreign nationals who promised access to the highest levels of the Russian government.” The New York Times (10/31, Baker) reports that Trump “did not deny” that Papadopoulos “worked to collaborate with Russia. He simply brushed off his significance and focused on the fact that Mr. Papadopoulos pleaded guilty to lying to the F.B.I. to cover up the contacts with Russia.”

The Washington Times (10/31, Miller) reports that White House press secretary Sarah Sanders said that the Trump campaign has fully cooperated with the investigation and in fact informed on Papadopoulos. She said, “Papadopoulos is an example of someone doing the wrong thing while the campaign was doing the right thing. ... What Papadopoulos did was lie and that’s on him, not the campaign.”

Politico (10/31, Nelson) reports that Trump “cast the Manafort charges as a vindication, of sorts, for the campaign.” However, USA Today (10/31, Przybyla) reports that the “series of charges unsealed early Monday morning is a significant step in the federal investigation of Russian attempts to influence the 2016 presidential election, which Trump has previously dismissed as a ‘hoax’ and a ‘witch hunt.’” The Wall Street Journal (10/31, Radnofsky) reports that while the President mentioned the indictments on Monday, Tuesday was the first time he addressed Papadopoulos’ plea.

CNN’s Dan Merica tweeted, “Trump’s claim that Papadopoulos was nothing but ‘low level volunteer named George’ belies what Mueller laid out.” Yahoo! News’ Olivier Knox tweeted, “The ‘coffee boy’? Papadopoulos appears to have been empowered to speak publicly for Trump quite extensively.” Reuters (10/31) also reports on Trump’s remarks.

Papadopoulos Was In Regular Contact With Top Campaign Officials. The Washington Post (10/31, Helderman, DeYoung, Hamburger) reports that though Trump “belittled” Papadopoulos, “interviews and documents show that Papadopoulos was in regular contact with the Trump campaign’s most senior officials and held himself out as a Trump surrogate as he traveled the world to meet with foreign officials and reporters.” And while “some top campaign aides appeared to rebuff Papadopoulos’s persistent offers to broker a meeting” with Russian President Vladimir Putin, there is “no sign they told him directly to cease his activities or sought to end his affiliation with the campaign.”

On its front page, the New York Times (10/31, A1, Rosenberg, Lafraniere, Apuzzo) examines how the Trump campaign rushed to assemble a foreign policy team in the spring of 2016 as his “surprise march to the nomination had left the party’s establishment openly questioning whether he had the foreign policy experience.” The group was “almost immediately written off as a collection of fringe thinkers and has-beens and unknowns,” and some “have now created far deeper problems for Mr. Trump.”

Some Trump Allies Seek Tougher Line On Mueller, Though Not Firing. The Washington Post (10/31, Rucker, Costa) reports that “despite his growing frustration with an investigation he has roundly dismissed,” the President “has been cooperating with Mueller and lately has resisted attacking him directly, at the urging of his attorneys inside and outside the White House.” But some Trump allies including Steve Bannon “have said they think the president’s posture is too timid" and "are urging a more combative approach to Mueller that would damage his credibility and potentially kneecap his investigation."

The Post reports that even these advisers are not suggesting Trump fire Mueller, and Politico (10/31, Nelson) reports that Sanders said the President is not considering defunding Mueller's inquiry, and the Washington Post (10/31, Demirjian, Sullivan) reports that "several GOP senators" including Sens. Bob Corker, Jeff Flake, John McCain, and Richard Shelby said that they would oppose any such action.

The New York Times (10/31) editorializes, "If there were any remaining hope that Republicans would accept the precise, methodical work" of Mueller, a "veteran, highly respected, Republican-appointed law enforcement official – the man Newt Gingrich once called a 'superb choice to be special counsel' – it has evaporated in a fog of propaganda and delirious conspiracy theories." Mueller "is doing the job he was hired to do."

Politico's Roger Simon tweeted, "I am really, really pleased that Robert Mueller is so smart and the people he is up against are so stupid."

Mueller's Team To Speak With Hicks, Other Current White House Officials. Politico (10/31, Karni, Dawsey) reports that White House Communications Director Hope Hicks is scheduled to speak with Mueller's team "in mid-November, following the president's trip to Asia. ... Mueller's team is also expected to interview three or four other current White House officials as early as this week, according to an administration official."

Mueller May Be Able To Compel Subjects' Lawyers To Testify. The Washington Post (10/31, Barrett, Zapotosky) writes that "a little-noticed court filing unsealed this week" as part of Mueller investigation indicates that he is "willing to use suspects' lawyers to provide evidence against them." The US District Court unsealed an opinion from Chief Judge Beryl A. Howell saying that "one of Manafort's former lawyers could be compelled to testify to the grand jury" – an exception to the tradition of attorney-client privilege.

NYTimes Analysis: Mueller Lieutenant "An Expert" In Getting Defendants To Flip. The New York Times (10/31, A1, Flegenheimer) has a front-page profile of prosecutor Andrew Weissmann, who once focused on New York's Genovese crime family and is now "a top lieutenant" to Mueller. Weissmann "is an expert in converting defendants into collaborators – with either tactical brilliance or overzealousness, depending on one's perspective."

Trump: Podesta's Exit "Has The Dems In A Dither." Politico (10/31, McCaskill) reports that Trump "claimed Tuesday that Monday's "biggest story" was Democratic lobbyist and Podesta Group founder Tony Podesta 'running from his firm.'" The President tweeted (10/31), "The biggest story yesterday, the one that has the Dems in a dither, is Podesta running from his firm. What he know about Crooked Dems is earth shattering. He and his brother could Drain The Swamp, which would be yet another campaign promise fulfilled. Fake News weak!"

Politico (10/31, Meyer) reports that Podesta's resignation "sent K Street scrambling, as lobbyists rushed to make sure they're in compliance with the" rules governing the representation of foreign powers. The indictment names the Podesta Group as a company that lobbied a company allegedly under control of Ukrainian President Viktor Yanukovich, his political party and the Ukrainian government.

Townhall (10/31, Pavlich) reports that ex-FBI and CIA Leon Panetta told CNN on Monday evening that Mueller "is just getting started and that Democrats should also be nervous." Panetta said, "We are at the beginning of this investigation, not at the end of it. ... There will be other trails of evidence that will be followed by Bob Mueller. I think there's probably a very good bet that additional indictments will be forthcoming and could involve members of both parties."

DNC's Perez Declines To Offer Details On Fusion GPS Payments. The Daily Caller (10/31, Pollock) reports that Democratic National Committee Chairman Tom Perez "stonewalled reporters Tuesday by refusing to divulge any concrete information about the DNC's financial payments to Fusion GPS." Perez told reporters, "Opposition research is not simply something that ought be done, it would be malpractice not to do it." The Wall Street Journal (10/31) says in an editorial that the Washington press corps has so far protected Fusion GPS, lashing out at those who have questioned its role in the 2016 campaign.

Jim Rutenberg of the New York Times (10/31) writes, "As Mr. Mueller and his team home in on people connected to President Trump...the president and his allies in the conservative media sphere are pointing at the Democrats and Hillary Clinton." The Washington Post (10/31) says in an editorial that the GOP focus on whether "the Democrats collude[d] with Russian nationals to tip the election against" Trump, and on the Uranium One deal, is because Trump "needs a distraction, and his surrogates, some Republican members of Congress, right-wing media and even some people in mainstream outlets are helping him gin up outrage" against Hillary Clinton.

Democrats Mull Strategy Of How To Discuss Mueller Probe On Campaign Trail. The Washington

Post (10/31, O'Keefe, Weigel) reports that Mueller's probe "is not expected to become a dominant theme for Democrats on the campaign trail as the party continues grappling with how to talk about President Trump. ... The Russia investigation 'is important to talk about, but I don't think it's something that you can focus entirely on,'" said Minnesota Democratic Chairman Ken Martin. But Guy Cecil, who heads Democratic super PAC American Priorities Action, "said that despite the reservations of some, the Russia story would be part of the party's 2018 focus, especially after the indictments. 'That took what had been a complicated story and it simplified it,' he explained."

Facebook, Google, And Twitter Testify On Russian Trolls, But Resist Legislative Action. The CBS Evening News (10/31, story 7, 2:10, Mason) reported, "Social media executives total a Senate subcommittee today that Russian-linked accounts began trying to interfere with the election in 2015, and they kept at it long after the voting had ended." CBS' Nancy Cordes: "Executives from Facebook, Twitter, and Google told Senators today that Russian trolls were more prolific than they initially believed, posting 80,000 pieces of content on Facebook alone between 2015 and this summer. .. Most of the posts and ads originated from one office building in St. Petersburg, Russia, where an operation innocuously named the Internet Research Agency uploaded 1,100 videos to YouTube and published more than 131,000 divisive messages on Twitter."

The Federalist (10/31, Payton) reports that the "so-called 'troll farm' with connections to the Russian Kremlin" organized political rallies in the US with the goal of increasing divisions. On NBC Nightly News (10/31, story 8, 1:55, Holt), Jo Ling Kent reported, "One ad by Russian group calling itself Heart Of Texas falsely claimed that Hillary Clinton had a 69% disapproval rating among veterans. A second ad erroneously told Americans they could vote for Hillary by texting." The Minneapolis Star Tribune (10/27, Furst) looks at whether a July 2016 rally against police brutality in St. Paul was one of the group's efforts.

Politico (10/31, Scola, Gold) reports that Facebook general counsel Colin Stretch told senators that the Internet Research Agency "after Nov. 8 centered on 'fomenting discord about the validity of his [Trump's] election.'" That's a change from Russia's pre-election activity, which was largely centered on trying to denigrate Clinton.

The New York Times (10/31, Kang, Fandos, Isaac) reports that the executives "appeared on Capitol Hill for the first time on Tuesday to publicly acknowledge their role in Russia's influence on the presidential campaign, but offered little more than promises to do better." USA Today (10/31, Kelly) reports that representatives of the three companies "stopped short Tuesday of endorsing a bipartisan bill that would require them to disclose who is paying for political ads that appear on their online platforms," instead highlighting "the voluntary steps they are taking to ensure they don't violate federal election law." ABC World News Tonight (10/31, story 10, 0:25, Muir), the Los Angeles Times (10/31, Cloud), and the Washington Times (10/31, Dinan) have brief reports.

Kremlin Calls Charges Of Election-Meddling "Baseless." The Washington Post (10/31, Filipov) reports that the Kremlin "dismissed as 'baseless' and 'ludicrous' the notion that charges leveled by" Mueller "constituted proof of Russian meddling in US political affairs." Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov told reporters, "From the outset we have been completely baffled over these baseless, unproven accusations against our country, about alleged attempts to interfere with US elections. We don't want to be any part of this process, and we'd prefer that these proceedings not facilitate the intensification of already rampant Russophobic hysteria."

David Ignatius writes in his Washington Post (10/31) column, "Next comes the overtly dangerous part: When covert operations are exposed, nations sometimes adopt more aggressive actions. ... As the world focuses on Russian mischief, will the Kremlin move the dial up or down?"

NYTimes Analysis: Manafort's Big Spending On Clothes Draws Attention. The New York Times (10/31, Friedman) looks at "the approximately $1.3 million Mr. Manafort spent during two shopping sprees in New York and Beverly Hills," writing that "at least when it comes to politics, fancy clothes or even just an unseemly focus on clothes have been a stand-in for (at best) bad character and (at worst) corruption for years." The Times cites the cases of ex-Virginia Gov. Bob McDonnell, as well as Gingrich, who "had a $500,000 line of credit at Tiffany & Co."

White House: Trump Will Not Visit DMZ During Visit To South Korea.

The AP (10/31, Colvin) reports the White House said Tuesday that President Trump will not visit the Demilitarized Zone during his upcoming trip to South Korea in "a break from many previous administrations." A "senior Administration official" said there is not enough time in the President's schedule to accommodate a visit to the border zone. Instead, Trump will visit Camp Humphreys, a military base outside Seoul, "to highlight the US-South Korean partnership."

State Dept. Official: US Pursuing Direct Diplomacy With North Korea. Reuters (10/31, Mohammed, Spetalnick) reports exclusively that the US is “quietly pursuing direct diplomacy with North Korea, a senior State Department official said” Tuesday, despite President Trump’s public assertion that such talks are a waste of time. Using the so-called “New York channel,” US negotiator Joseph Yun “has been in contact with diplomats at Pyongyang’s United Nations mission, the official said.” There is “no sign, however, that the behind-the-scenes communications have improved” the relationship.

Democrats Introduce Bill That Would Prevent Trump From Launching First Strike On North Korea.

Reuters (10/31, Zengerle) reports that a group of Democratic senators introduced a bill Tuesday aimed at preventing President Trump from launching a nuclear first strike on North Korea “on his own.” The measure would prevent the President from launching an attack on North Korea, “or spending any money on a military strike, without congressional approval, unless North Korea has first attacked the United States.” Sen. Chris Murphy, the bill’s lead sponsor, told reporters, “I worry that the President’s enthusiasm will not be checked by the advisers around him.”

Report: 200 Killed In North Korea Nuclear Test Site Accident. Bloomberg News (10/31, Tweed) reports that as many as 200 people “may have died when tunnels collapsed at a North Korean nuclear test site in October, TV Asahi reported, citing unidentified people familiar with North Korean matters.” Roughly 100 people “got caught in a collapsed tunnel” near the Punggye-ri site “around Oct. 10, while the others were trapped in a further collapse during a rescue attempt, TV Asahi said.”

Trump Wants To Sign Tax Bill By Christmas.

A day before Republicans are expected to reveal their tax overhaul plan, President Trump “predicted a grand signing ceremony before Christmas at” what he called “the biggest tax event in the history of our country,” the AP (10/31, Thomas, Lucey) reports. Peaking in the Roosevelt Room alongside “the heads of more than a dozen business and trade allies,” Trump said, “The process is complicated but the end result will not be that complicated. It’s going to be: People are going to pay less tax by a lot, companies are going to pay less tax by a lot – that’s a big difference – and companies are going to start rebuilding and they’re going to stay here.” The Hill (10/31, Fabian) quotes the President as saying, “I want the House to pass a bill by Thanksgiving. I want all the people standing by my side when we sign by Christmas, hopefully before Christmas.”

Republicans Delay Release Of Tax Plan Until Thursday.

In a story posted just before 10 p.m. Tuesday, Bloomberg News (10/31, Murphy, Basu) reports that the House Ways and Means Committee has postponed the release of the Republican tax bill – which had been planned for Wednesday – until Thursday “amid unresolved questions about the timing of a corporate tax rate cut and other proposals.” While Chairman Kevin Brady said members of his committee were “pleased with the progress” that has been made, Bloomberg says “the one-day delay reflects the challenge of crafting – and then passing – a complex bill by the Thanksgiving deadline that House Speaker Paul Ryan has imposed.” Politico (10/31, Bade, Becker, Faler, Lorenzo) calls the delay “an ominous sign for a direly needed legislative accomplishment for President Donald Trump and his party.”

A New York Times (10/31, Rappeport, Tankersley) story posted earlier Tuesday reports that “many key details remain[ed] in flux.” Republicans are “struggling with how to make the math work, including how to treat the wealthiest Americans, whether to get rid of some of the most valuable tax deductions and whether to make the income tax cuts temporary.” The Los Angeles Times (10/31, Mascaro, Puzanghera) says that while Republicans “remained divided on some issues, particularly how to pay for the cuts they favored, other details were coming into focus.”

Republicans Close To Deal To Preserve Deduction For State And Local Property Taxes. Reuters (10/31, Morgan, Becker) reports that Republicans were nearing a deal Tuesday “to preserve a federal tax deduction for state and local property taxes, but not income tax payments, potentially removing a major obstacle to progress on their US tax overhaul plan.” According to Rep. Tom Reed support for a “sweet spot” compromise was building “among high-tax state lawmakers who have resisted the tax overhaul due to its proposed repeal of the state and local tax, or SALT, deduction.” Reed told reporters that the compromise “goes a long way to listen to their plight, respond to their needs.” Reuters adds that House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Kevin Brady told radio commentator Hugh Hewitt on Tuesday that the tax package “will maintain the federal deduction for SALT property tax payments, but not SALT income tax payments.”

GOP Tax Plan Will Not Phase-In Corporate Tax Rate Cut. Ylan Mui said on CNBC’s Closing Bell (10/31), “Two sources who have been briefed on the Republican tax plan are telling me that there will be no phase-in of the corporate tax rate. There had been some potential discussion of having that corporate tax phase in over four to five years. Now I'm hearing that that will not be included in the Republicans' plan that will be released tomorrow." Mui added that Sen. John Thune said "he is not personally in favor" of phasing in the corporate tax rate, "but in the Senate he's not taking it off the table." The Wall Street Journal (10/31, Hughes, Rubin) says President Trump pushed back against reports that Republicans were considering phasing in the cut. Before a meeting with business trader group leaders Tuesday, Trump said, "We're not looking for that, no. We're not looking for that. ... Some people have mentioned that. Hopefully not."

Trump Says Announcement On Businesses Returning To US Coming "Very Soon."

The Washington Times (10/31, Miller) reports that President Trump said at a White House meeting with business leaders that a "major announcement was coming soon about companies returning to the United States, which he credited to the tax reform effort." Trump said, "We have companies that really want to move back into the United States now because of what we're doing with taxes. And some big ones are going to be announcing very soon."

EPA Official Says Obama Administration Had Legal Basis For Methane Rule.

Axios (10/31, Harder) contributor Amy Harder says that one senior EPA official is claiming that "President Obama had a strong legal case to limit emissions of methane, a potent greenhouse gas, from new oil and gas wells." Obama cited the EPA's 2009 endangerment finding, which found that "greenhouse gas emissions, including methane, endanger public health and welfare indicate 'a level of responsibility for the agency to consider.'" Moreover, he argued that "any change in approach or application will require an equally robust record." The American Petroleum Institute opposes direct regulation on methane emissions. According to API vice president for Regulatory and Economic Policy Kyle Isakower, "That's really the concern about methane being regulated for new sources. It triggers the existing source standard, which would put significant cost on hundreds of thousands of wells, many that are low-producing."

Meanwhile, Reuters (10/31, Volcovici) quotes Sen. Tom Carper, top Democrat on the Senate environment committee, as saying, that Pruitt's decision was part of an EPA effort to "delegitimize the work of nonpartisan scientists." Sen. Carper adds, "this crusade endangers the health of every American, and it cannot be tolerated."

Pruitt To Replace Members Of EPA Advisory Boards.

The AP (10/31, Biesecker) reports that EPA Administrator Pruitt said that he "intends to replace the outside experts that advise him on science and public health issues with new board members holding more diverse views." In announcing the changes, Pruitt "suggested many previously appointed to the panels were potentially biased because they had received federal research grants. The 22 boards advise EPA on a wide range of issues, including drinking water standards and pesticide safety."

USA Today (10/31, King) reports that Pruitt told reporters, "We want to ensure that the American people have confidence...in the process and that the advisers that we have in each of these respective capacities are providing independent, arms-length input to us as we make decisions." The Washington Free Beacon (10/31, Harrington) reports that during the last three years of the Obama Administration, "members sitting on just three of the agency's scientific advisory boards received $77 million in EPA grants."

The Washington Post (10/31, Dennis, Eilperin) reports that while Pruitt "did not announce his selections for new appointees," a list obtained by the Post "from multiple individuals familiar with the likely appointments includes several categories of experts – voices from regulated industries, academics and environmental regulators from conservative states, and researchers who have a history of critiquing the science and economics underpinning tighter environmental regulations."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"That Crazy Talk About Robert Mueller." The New York Times (10/31) editorializes, "If there were any remaining hope that Republicans would accept the precise, methodical work" of special counsel Robert Mueller, a "veteran, highly respected, Republican-appointed law enforcement official – the man Newt Gingrich once called a 'superb choice to be special counsel' – it has evaporated in a fog of propaganda and delirious conspiracy theories." Mueller "is doing the job he was hired to do."

"Constitutional Convention: Thanks, But No Thanks." The New York Times (10/31) editorializes that New Yorkers should vote "no" to Ballot Proposal 1, which asks if there "shall there be a convention to revise the Constitution and amend the same," and which will be put to a vote across the state on Tuesday. The Times reasons that "the likelihood of a con-con yielding the most desperately needed reforms is disappointingly low, and the possibility of its accomplishing nothing at significant cost, or, worse, setting New York back even further, is worrisomely high." The Times opines that the more appropriate route for voters to take is to vote lawmakers who can't make needed changes out of office when they come up for re-election.

Washington Post.

"Trump Pulls Another Stunt Of Cynical Distraction." The Washington Post (10/31) says in an editorial that the GOP focus on whether "the Democrats collude[d] with Russian nationals to tip the election against" President Trump, and on the Uranium One deal, is because Trump "needs a distraction, and his surrogates, some Republican members of Congress, right-wing media and even some people in mainstream outlets are helping him gin up outrage" against Hillary Clinton.

"A Legal Change That Could Help Stop The Next Harvey Weinstein." The Washington Post (10/31) editorializes that "the story of Harvey Weinstein is partly a story of secrecy," which "involves Mr. Weinstein's use of confidential settlements and non-disclosure agreements that kept his victims and employees from speaking out." The Post adds that "powerful men engaged in sexual misconduct often use similar legal tools to bury controversy." The Post notes that some are "pushing for federal legislation to prohibit employers from mandating private arbitration for civil rights complaints." The Post argues that "laws alone can't change a culture in which powerful men feel entitled to prey on those around them," but "reducing secrecy would be an important step toward holding predators accountable and diminishing their opportunity to transgress multiple times."

"Ralph Northam Should Repudiate This Offensive Anti-Gillespie Ad." In an editorial, the Washington Post (10/31, Board) weighs in on the Latino Victory Fund's ad against Virginia Republican gubernatorial candidate Ed Gillespie, saying, "There is no question that if this were a race to the bottom, Mr. Gillespie would be the winner, having spent millions of dollars on ads that use specious claims and appeals to race and ethnicity to scare and divide." However, the ad depicting "Gillespie voters as white supremacists looking to run down minority children is not only wrong, it is deeply offensive. [Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ralph] Northam should say so."

Wall Street Journal.

"Tax Credit Bidding War." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (10/31) argues against calls from Sens. Marco Rubio and Mike Lee to at least double the child tax credit, which is currently $1,000 per child. The Journal casts the tax credit as income redistribution and says a better use of the funds could be to finance lower tax rates on capital and labor, which would help create opportunity and increase incomes.

"The Terror In Tribeca." A Wall Street Journal (10/31) editorial likens Tuesday's truck attack in New York City to attacks this year in Las Ramblas in Barcelona, London Bridge and Stockholm, and last year in Nice and at a Berlin Christmas market.

"The Press Loves Fusion GPS." The Wall Street Journal (10/31) says in an editorial that the Washington press corps has so far protected Fusion GPS, lashing out at those who have questioned its role in the 2016 campaign.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Eight Killed In Terror Attack In New York

GOP Tax Plan Won't Cut Rate For Highest Earners

In Mainstream Move, Bitcoin Poised To Join Oil, Gold In Futures Trading

Inside The Decline Of Sears, The Amazon Of The 20th Century

New York Times:

Manhattan Terror Attack Kills 8 And Injures 11
A Mangled School Bus, Bodies Everywhere: "It Was Surreal"
Andrew Weissmann, Mueller's Legal Pit Bull
Tech Executives Are Contrite About Election Meddling, But Make Few Promises On Capitol Hill
Trump Foreign Policy Advisers Were Brought On To Solve A Political Problem. Now They Are One.
De Blasio Finds Biggest Win In Pre-K, But Also Lasting Consequences

Washington Post:

Former Adviser Touted Ties To Trump Campaign
Trump Allies Split Over Whether To Battle Mueller
In Shift, GOP Proposal Won't Lower Rate For The Wealthiest
As Northam's Lead Slips, Other Races Have An Edge

Financial Times:

Carles Puigdemont Vows To Lead Catalan Fight From Brussels
Samsung Shakes Up Top Leadership
Mueller Probe Casts Spotlight On UK-Based Academic
CME To Offer Bitcoin Futures

Washington Times:

At Least 8 Dead In Vehicle Attack; Feds Investigating As Islamist Terrorism
Russians Fomented Discord In U.S. Over Issues More Than Candidates, Social Media Execs Say
Trump Campaign Gave Feds The Goods On Papadopoulos, Says White House
Mueller's Investigation Shows Aggressive Approach
Afghanistan Security Deteriorates As Military Ramps Up Trump's War Strategy
Spacey's Outing Follows Political Sex Scandal Playbook

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: NYC Truck Attack; NYC Truck Attack-Suspect; NYC Truck Attack-Security Measures; NYC Truck Attack-Expert Comment; NYC Truck Attack-Victims; NYC Truck Attack-WH Response; NYC Truck Attack-Law Enforcement Response; Russia Meddling Investigation-White House; California School Shooting; Russia Meddling Investigation-Social Media; Kevin Spacey Sex Harassment Scandal; Tampa Serial Killer Search; NYC Truck Attack-Recap.

CBS: NYC Truck Attack; NYC Truck Attack-Suspect; NYC Truck Attack-Expert Comment; NYC Truck Attack-Victims; NYC Truck Attack-WH Response; Russia Meddling Investigation-White House; Russia Meddling Investigation-Social Media; NYC Truck Attack-Analysis; NYC Truck Attack-Recap.

NBC: NYC Truck Attack; NYC Truck Attack-Suspect; NYC Truck Attack-Eyewitnesses; NYC Truck Attack-Expert Comment; NYC Truck Attack-WH Response; NYC Truck Attack-Past Vehicle Attacks; Russia Meddling Investigation-White House; Russia Meddling Investigation-Social Media; Kevin Spacey Sex Harassment Scandal; Play Stage Crash; Most Popular Candy; Houston Hurricane Recovery.

Network TV At A Glance:

NYC Truck Attack – 37 minutes, 20 seconds
Russia Meddling Investigation – 12 minutes, 20 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: NYC Truck Attack; Tax Reform Plan; Puerto Rico Hurricane Recovery.

CBS: NYC Truck Attack; Baseball World Series; White House-Tax Reform.

FOX: NYC Truck Attack; Russia Meddling Investigation.

NPR: NYC Truck Attack; Puerto Rico Hurricane Recovery; US Consumer Confidence; Wall Street News.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Holds a Cabinet Meeting; signs the National Veterans and Military Families Month Proclamation; has lunch with Vice President Mike Pence, Secretary of State Rex Tillerson, and Secretary of Defense James Mattis; meets with the Chairwoman of the Republican National Committee; signs H.J. Res. 111 – Disapproving of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's Arbitration Agreements Rule.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — No public schedule announced.

US Senate: 9:30 AM Senate Intelligence Committee holds hearing with Facebook, Twitter, and Google testifying – Hearing on 'Social Media Influence in the 2016 U.S. Elections', with testimony from Facebook Vice President and General Counsel Colin Stretch; Twitter General Counsel Sean Edgett; and Google Senior Vice President and General Counsel Kent Walker Location: Hart Senate Office Building, Rm 216, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.senate.gov>

10:00 AM Senate Banking Committee Executive Session, nominations hearing – Executive Session, to consider the nominations of David Ryder to be U.S. Mint Director; and Hester Peirce and Robert Jackson Jr. to be Securities and Exchange Commission members * Immediately followed by nominations hearing considering Scott Garrett to be Export-Import Bank of the United States President, Kimberly Reed to be First Vice President, Spencer Bachus III (reappointment), Claudia Slacik (reappointment), and Judith Delzoppo Pryor to be Board of Directors members, and Mark Greenblatt to be Inspector General Location: Rm 538, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://banking.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Leonard Steven Grasz to be U.S. Circuit Judge for the Eighth Circuit; Terry Doughty to be U.S. District Judge for the Western District of Louisiana; Terry Fitzgerald Moorer to be U.S. District Judge for the Southern District of Alabama; and Mark Saalfield Norris Sr. to be U.S. District Judge for the Western District of Tennessee Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 226, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Foreign Relations Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Irwin Steven Goldstein to be Under Secretary of State For Public Diplomacy; Rebecca Eliza Gonzales to be U.S. Ambassador to Lesotho; Lisa Johnson to be U.S. Ambassador to Namibia; James Randolph Evans to be U.S. Ambassador to Luxembourg; and Sean Lawler to be U.S. Chief of Protocol, and to have the rank of ambassador during his tenure of service Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Commerce, Science, & Transportation Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers James Bridenstine to be NASA Administrator; Dana Baiocco to be a Consumer Product Safety Commission Commissioner; Dr Neil Jacobs to be Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Environmental Observation and Prediction; and Nazakhtar Nikakhtar to be Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Industry and Analysis Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 253, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov>
<https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

10:00 AM Helsinki Commission briefing on the Western Balkans – 'The Western Balkans: Perspectives from OSCE Field Missions' Helsinki Commission briefing, with three Americans who currently hold, or have recently held, senior positions on OSCE Missions in the region – OSCE Mission to Skopje Deputy Head Jeff Goldstein, former OSCE Mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina Head Jonathan Moore, and former OSCE Mission to Serbia Deputy Head Michael Uyehara – commenting on developments in those countries during their assignment, the efforts undertaken by their respective missions to assist those countries, and the effectiveness of the OSCE as a multilateral tool for enhancing stability and promoting reform, while OSCE Secretariat Conflict Prevention Centre Director Amb. Marcel Pesko comments on the organization's field work from the Secretariat perspective, and the challenges not only to OSCE field activity in the Western Balkans but throughout the OSCE region Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, SVC-202, Washington, DC <http://www.osce.org> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

2:30 PM Oversight hearing on 'Building Tribal Economies: Modernizing Tax Policies that Work for Indian Country' Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 628, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

2:30 PM Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee hearing on energy and international development – Multilateral International Development, Multilateral Institutions, and International Economic, Energy, and Environmental Policy Subcommittee hearing on 'Energy and International Development', with testimony from United Nations Secretary-General's Special Representative and Sustainable Energy for All CEO Rachel Kyte; Rice University's Dr Todd Moss; Purpose Climate Lab Program Director Joao Talocchi; and Energy Systems Network President and CEO Paul Mitchell Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

US House: 10:00 AM POSTPONED: FEMA Administrator Long testifies to House Homeland Security Committee – POSTPONED: Hearing on 'Assessing FEMA's Preparedness and Response

Capabilities', with testimony from Federal Emergency Management Agency Administrator Brock Long; and San Juan, Puerto Rico, Mayor Carmen Yulin Cruz Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, HVC 210, Washington, DC homeland.house.gov <https://twitter.com/HouseHomeland>

10:00 AM House Science subcommittee hearing on low dose radiation research – Energy Subcommittee hearing on 'The Future of Low Dose Radiation Research', with testimony from Government Accountability Office Director of Science and Technology Issues John Neumann; Northwestern University Professor Radiation Oncology and Radiology Dr Gayle Woloschak; and Harvard Medical School Professor of Radiology Dr James Brink Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2318, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM National Security Subcommittee hearing on 'Overview of 16 Years of Involvement in Afghanistan' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2154, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

10:00 AM House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on Community Development Block Grant-Disaster Recovery Program – Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee hearing on 'Examining the Community Development Block Grant-Disaster Recovery Program', with testimony from Department of Housing and Urban Development Acting Inspector General Helen Albert Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on consumer credit data security – Digital Commerce and Consumer Protection Subcommittee hearing on 'Securing Consumers' Credit Data in the Age of Digital Commerce', with testimony from Consumer Data Industry Association President and CEO Francis Creighton; Hudson Cook Partner Emeritus Anne Fortney; Symantec Senior Director of Global Government Affairs and Policy Jeff Greene; and Harvard Kennedy School Adjunct Lecturer in Public Policy Bruce Schneier Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM USAID Administrator Green testifies to House Appropriations subcommittee oversight hearing – State, Foreign Operations, and Related Programs Subcommittee oversight hearing on 'Accountable Soft Power in the National Interest', with testimony from USAID Administrator Mark Green Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:00 AM House Judiciary subcommittee hearing on net neutrality and antitrust – Regulatory Reform, Commercial and Antitrust Law Subcommittee hearing on 'Net Neutrality and the Role of Antitrust', with testimony from Federal Trade Commission Acting Chairman Maureen Ohlhausen, and Commissioner Terrell McSweeney; NTCA (The Rural Broadband Association) Senior Vice President for Industry Affairs & Business Development Michael Romano; and former FTC Commissioner Robert McDowell Location: Rm 2141, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

10:00 AM North Korean defector testifies to House Foreign Affairs Committee – Hearing on 'An Insider's Look at the North Korean Regime', with testimony from former Embassy of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea in the United Kingdom Deputy Chief of Mission Thae Yong-ho Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

10:00 AM Helsinki Commission briefing on the Western Balkans – 'The Western Balkans: Perspectives from OSCE Field Missions' Helsinki Commission briefing, with three Americans who currently hold, or have recently held, senior positions on OSCE Missions in the region – OSCE Mission to Skopje Deputy Head Jeff Goldstein, former OSCE Mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina Head Jonathan Moore, and former OSCE Mission to Serbia Deputy Head Michael Uyehara – commenting on developments in those countries during their assignment, the efforts undertaken by their respective missions to assist those countries, and the effectiveness of the OSCE as a multilateral tool for enhancing stability and promoting reform, while OSCE Secretariat Conflict Prevention Centre Director Amb. Marcel Pesko comments on the organization's field work from the Secretariat perspective, and the challenges not only to OSCE field activity in the Western Balkans but throughout the OSCE region Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, SVC-202, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

10:15 AM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on FirstNet – Communications and Technology Subcommittee hearing on 'Oversight of FirstNet: State Perspectives', with testimony from The Digital Decision founder Robert LeGrande II; Virginia Secretary of Public Safety and Homeland Security Brian Moran; First Responder Network Authority CEO Michael Poth; AT&T Senior Vice President Christopher Sambar; and New Hampshire Statewide Interoperability Coordinator John Stevens Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2322, Washington, DC

<http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

11:30 AM House Judiciary subcommittee hearing on the Heartbeat Protection Act – Subcommittee on the Constitution and Civil Justice hearing on ‘H.R.490, the Heartbeat Protection Act of 2017’, with testimony from Reproductive Rights and Justice Project Clinical Lecturer in Law Priscilla Smith; Cleveland State University Professor of Law David Forte; American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists Fellow Dr Kathi Aultman; and Center for Urban Renewal and Education (CURE) founder and President Star Parker Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2237, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

12:00 PM House debates Resilient Federal Forests Act – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda including ‘H.R. 2936 – Resilient Federal Forests Act of 2017’, as well as consideration of legislation including ‘H.R. 3903 – Encouraging Public Offerings Act of 2017’, as amended, ‘H.R. 1585 – Fair Investment Opportunities for Professional Experts Act’, as amended, ‘H.R. 425 – FTO Passport Revocation Act of 2017’, as amended, ‘H.Res. 422 – Urging adherence to the ‘one country, two systems’ policy as prescribed in the Joint Declaration between the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and the Government of the People’s Republic of China on the Question of the Hong Kong’, as amended, ‘H.R. 3279 – Helium Extraction Act of 2017’, ‘H.R. 1488 – The Indiana Dunes National Park Act’, as amended, and ‘H.R. 1074 – To repeal the Act entitled ‘An Act to confer jurisdiction on the State of Iowa over offenses committed by or against Indians on the Sac and Fox Indian Reservation’ under suspension of the rules Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

1:00 PM Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on Central America – Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on ‘Human Rights and Humanitarian Challenges in Central America’, with witnesses – United Nations Refugee Agency (UNHCR) Deputy Regional Representative Chiara Cardoletti-Carroll, Freedom House Director for Latin American Programs Carlos Ponce, Washington Office on Latin America (WOLA) Senior Associate for Citizen Security Adriana Beltran, Latin America Working Group Education Fund (LAWG) Executive Director Lisa Haugaard, Kids in Need of Defense (KIND) Gender and Migration Initiatives Director Rachel Dotson, and U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops Migration and Refugee Services Director of Policy Ashley Feasley – providing an update on the quality of democracy in the region, the relationship between corruption, organized crime, and human rights violations, some of the significant human rights problems affecting the region, and the countries’ capacity to address the resulting humanitarian crisis Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2255, Washington, DC <http://tlhrc.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/TLHRCCommission>

1:00 PM House Judiciary subcommittee hearing on the Executive Office of Immigration Review – Immigration and Border Security Subcommittee hearing on ‘Oversight of the Executive Office of Immigration Review’, with testimony from EOIR Acting Director James McHenry Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2141, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

2:00 PM House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on data security – Financial Institutions and Consumer Credit Subcommittee hearing on ‘Data Security: Vulnerabilities and Opportunities for Improvement’, with testimony from Securities Industry and Financial Markets Association President and CEO Kenneth Bentsen Jr.; H.B. Wilkinson Title Company President Daniel Mennenoh (on behalf of American Land Title Association); and Mission Federal Credit Union President and CEO Debra Schwartz (on behalf of National Association of Federally-Insured Credit Unions) Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

2:00 PM House Intelligence Committee task force holds hearing with Facebook, Twitter, and Google testifying – Russia Investigative Task Force hearing, with testimony from Twitter General Counsel Sean Edgett; Facebook General Counsel Colin Stretch; and Google Senior Vice President and General Counsel Kent Walker Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, HVC-210, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseIntelComm>

3:00 PM House Rules Committee hearing – Hearing on ‘H.R. 3922 – Community Health And Medical Professionals Improve Our Nation Act of 2017’ Location: U.S. Capitol, H-313, Washington, DC <http://www.rules.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/RulesReps>

3:00 PM House Rules Committee hearing – Hearing on ‘H.R. 849 – Protecting Seniors’ Access to Medicare Act of 2017’ Location: U.S. Capitol, H-313, Washington, DC <http://www.rules.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/RulesReps>

Other: 8:00 AM GPU Technology Conference – GPU Technology Conference on latest developments in Artificial Intelligence for gov’t, healthcare, cybersecurity, defense, and self-driving cars. Speakers include Democratic Sen. Gary Peters, Republican Reps. Darrell Issa and John Ratcliffe, National Science Foundation Director France Cordova, Office of the Under

Secretary of Defense Director of Defense Intelligence Lt. Gen. John Shanahan, Massachusetts General Hospital/Harvard Medical School Vice Chairman of Radiology Keith Dreyer, CIA Deputy Director for Science and Technology Dawn Meyerriecks, Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Army Richard Kidd, and NVIDIA Vice President of Developer Programs Greg Estes Location: Ronald Reagan Building and ITC, 1300 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC www.nvidia.com/en-us/gtc-dc <https://twitter.com/nvidia>

9:00 AM Foreign ministers of Niger, Chad, Burkina Faso, and Mali speak at CSIS – ‘The Joint Force of the Group of Five for the Sahel: An African-led Response to Insecurity in the Sahel’ Center for Strategic and International Studies Africa Program and Europe Program discussion, with foreign ministers from the Sahel nations of Burkina Faso, Chad, Mali, Mauritania, and Niger discussing the joint force, its progress to date, and their strategy for engaging with external partners, including the United States and France. Speakers include Nigerien Foreign Affairs Minister Ibrahim Yacoubou, Malian Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation Minister Abdoulaye Diop, Burkinabe Foreign Affairs Minister Alpha Barry, Chadian Foreign Affairs Minister Brahim Hissein Taha, Mauritanian Defense Minister Amadou Bathily Diallo, and G5 Sahel Permanent Secretary Najim Elhadj Mohamed Location: Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1616 Rhode Island Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

9:30 AM Pakistan Ambassador to the U.S. speaks at George Washington University – Pakistan Ambassador to the U.S. Amb. Aizaz Ahmad Chaudhry speaks at George Washington University on international and regional issues facing Pakistan Location: George Washington University, 1957 E St NW, Washington, DC <http://www.gwu.edu/index.cfm> <https://twitter.com/GWtweets>

10:00 AM CSIS press briefing on President Trump’s trip to Asia – Center for Strategic and International Studies press briefing ahead of President Donald Trump’s trip to Japan, South Korea, China, Vietnam, the Philippines, and Hawaii, discussing the ‘expectations and implications of the trip, including the President’s participation in the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Economic Leaders’ Meeting and the U.S.-ASEAN Summit’ Location: Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1616 Rhode Island Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

12:00 PM CFR preview President Trump’s Asia trip – Council on Foreign Relations preview ‘Trump’s Trip to Asia’, via conference call with CFR Asia Studies Director Elizabeth Economy, CFR Japan Studies Senior Fellow Sheila Smith, and CFR Program on U.S.-Korea Policy Director Scott Snyder * President Donald Trump departs 3 Nov for a trip that includes stops in Japan, South Korea, China, Vietnam, and the Philippines Location: TBD www.cfr.org https://twitter.com/CFR_org

Jewish Institute for National Security Affairs annual awards dinner – Jewish Institute for National Security Affairs Annual Awards Dinner, including presentation of the Henry M. ‘Scoop’ Jackson Distinguished Service Award to Republican Rep. Michael McCaul, Democratic Rep. Eliot Engel and Hudson Bay Capital Management CEO Sander Gerber Location: Marriott Marquis Washington, DC, 901 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC www.jinsa.org <https://twitter.com/jinsadc>

House Ways and Means Committee members introduce tax reform bill – House Committee on Ways and Means members introduce tax reform bill * President Donald Trump introduced his tax reform plan, based on work with Members of Congress, in September. It includes shrinking the current seven individual tax brackets into three (12%, 25%, and 35%), roughly doubling the standard deduction, reducing the corporate tax rate to 20%, and limiting the maximum tax rate for small businesses to 25% Location: TBD <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Stephen Colbert: “Yesterday, Special Counsel Robert Mueller indicted Trump campaign chairman...Paul Manafort on 12 charges, including ‘conspiracy against the United States,’ which I believe is a legal term meaning ‘getting Trump elected.’”

Stephen Colbert: “For Trump, it could be the spookiest Halloween ever, because I’m pretty sure Mueller is ready to drop off a few more flaming bags of poop.”

James Corden: "After Trump campaign staffer George Papadopoulos was arrested in connection with the Russia investigation, the White House is distancing themselves from him, with one Trump ally saying Papadopoulos was nothing more than a coffee boy. ... Honestly, I think that might be a typo. I think they meant covfefe boy."

James Corden: "The Trump ally minimized the role Papadopoulos had in the campaign, saying he 'never had a role, never got paid, never a staffer, and never did anything.' Now, that could be anyone. Ivanka, Jared, Donald Junior, Eric."

James Corden: "In an interview on Fox News last night, White House Chief of Staff John Kelly defended Confederate monuments, saying that the cause of the Civil War was merely 'a lack of ability to compromise.' Compromise? It was a war over slavery, not a Saturday afternoon haggling over the price of a Honda Civic."

Trevor Noah: "Pray to God you are in the room with Grassley when there is a fire because he will find the exit. He will find it. The only catch is you have to ask him about Manafort. 'There is no escape. We're going to die.' 'What happened with Manafort?' 'I found a trap door!'"

Trevor Noah: "This is the man people hold up as the voice of reason in the Trump White House. 'As long as General Kelly is there, we've got a chance!' We're starting to learn he is as Trumpy as the rest of them. You just didn't know it because he doesn't tweet."

Jimmy Fallon: "A little weird, though. While the kids were trick-or-treating, the White House was playing trick-or-treason."

Jimmy Fallon: "This is very cool. I saw that the hosts of the Today show dressed up as country singers. The hosts of Good Morning America dressed up as superheroes, while the hosts of Fox and Friends denied that it was Halloween."

Seth Meyers: "In an interview yesterday, White House Chief of Staff John Kelly said the Civil War was caused by a lack of ability to compromise. Even weirder, he said that Pearl Harbor was an air traffic control issue."

Seth Meyers: "According to a new poll, Mitch McConnell is the nation's least popular senator, which explains the festivities over at Ted Cruz's office."

Conan O'Brien: "A recent poll came out showing that the approval rating for President Donald Trump has fallen on the historic all-time low of 33 percent. In response, Trump said, 'You hear that? Historic! I'm in the history books.'"

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, November 8, 2017
Date: Wednesday, November 08, 2017 6:02:48 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 2017 6:00 AM EST

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Washington Examiner: Ryan Zinke Creates Panel To Look At National Park Fees.
- E&E Publishing: Vacancies Vex Leaders And Lawmakers Alike.
- Reuters: Puerto Rico Utility Says Its Boss Is Too Busy For Washington Hearing.
- Grand Junction (CO) Daily Sentinel: Limited Space For Interior Official's Speech.
- MeriTalk: Interior IG Finds Inaccurate DATA Act Information.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Your $20 Million Loan Went Bust? The Trump Team Has A Job For You.

- $1.4 Billion Buyback Of Tribal Land Ending This Month.
- Justices Seem Inclined To Side With Tribe In Casino Case.
- State Officials Press For Approval Of Tribal Amendments.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Minneapolis Star Tribune: Judge Delays Trial Start For Bundy, Sons In Nevada Standoff.
- Logan (UT) Herald Journal: Congressman Introduces A Bill To Transfer BLM Ground To Hyde Park.
- Natural Gas Intelligence: Appellate Court Sets New Deadline In BLM Fracking Rule Fight.
- U.S. News & World Report: New Path Eyed For High-Voltage Transmission Lines In Idaho.
- Elko (NV) Daily Free Press: Gold Bar Project Gets Green Light.

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

- House Takes Up Offshore Drilling Overhaul.
- Scalise Bill Would Incentivize Energy Production With Revenue Sharing.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Hoeven Introduces Lot Purchase Bill For Jamestown Reservoir.
- Lake Managers Request Title Transfer.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Southgate (MI) News Herald: Detroit River International Wildlife Refuge Manager John Hartig Named Fulbright Scholar.
- Flathead (MT) Beacon: Ensuring The Health Of A Herd.
- WLRN-FM Miami: Environmental Group Wants To Sue U.S.

National Park Service

- WJLA-TV Washington: New Interactive App Launched For National Mall Visitors.
- Law360: DC Circ. Backs Park Service's Grand Teton Elk Reduction Plan.
- Seattle Times: Students Connect To Culture At Grand Teton National Park.
- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Zion National Park's Biggest Headache: Keeping Toilets Clean.
- Ventura County (CA) Star: Brown Boobies Spotted Nesting For The First Time On The Channel Islands.
- Island Free Press (NC): Beach Access And Park Issues.
- KFDA-TV Amarillo (TX): Suspension Of Boat Launch Fees At Lake Meredith Extended.
- Rock Hill (SC) Herald: York, Lancaster, Chester SC Students Participate In Teen CEO Day.
- Bluffton (SC) Today: Fort Mitchel Added To National Register Of Historic Places.
- Rancho Santa Fe (CA) Review: Osuna Adobe Placed On National Register Of Historic Places.
- The Guardian (UK): Additional Coverage: Anger As US National Parks Plan High-season Price Hikes.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Alaska Dispatch News: Murkowski Leads Congressional Trip To Hurricane-Ravaged Puerto Rico And U.S. Virgin Islands.

US Geological Survey

- Kaua'i (HI) Garden Island News: Scientists Say Maui Sewage Injected Into Ocean Damages Coral.
- Additional Reading.

Opinion Pieces

- The SECURE American Energy Act Only Endangers Public Lands.
- Our View: Good Riddance To Mislabeled Canyon Mining Ban.
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- USA Today: Trump Warns North Korea: Do Not "Try Us."
- ABC: Trump: "Hundreds More" Could Have Died In Texas Under Stricter Gun Laws.
- Politico: Trump Courts Democratic Senators On Tax Reform.
- Roll Call: Brady Leaves Open Possibility Of Repealing ACA's Individual Mandate In Tax Bill.
- Washington Times: Schumer Predicts Spending Bill Will Include DACA Fix.
- New York Times: Syria To Join Paris Climate Agreement, Leaving Only US Opposed.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Let The People Pick The President."
 - "Virginia Rejects Your Hateful Politics, Mr. Trump."
- Washington Post.
 - "A Triumph Of Decency Over Dread."
 - "The Killer Responsible For More Yearly Deaths Than AIDS, Malaria, And TB Combined."
 - "Let This Sick 10-Year-Old Girl Stay In The Country."
 - "These Are The Questions To Ask About the Trump-Russia Connection."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "South Korea's Bow To Beijing."
 - "Koskinen's Parting Gift From The IRS."
 - "Trump's Antiterror Omission."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Ryan Zinke Creates Panel To Look At National Park Fees.

The Washington Examiner (11/7, Siciliano) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Tuesday announced the creation of a new "Made in America Recreation Advisory Committee." The new advisory panel's "primary aim is to provide advice to him on establishing public-private partnerships across all public lands 'with the goal of expanding access to and improving infrastructure on public lands and waterways,' the Interior Department said." It will "focus on better ways to exact fees from national park visitors and make sure the fees go toward improving park infrastructure." Zinke said, "By forming this committee, I look forward to hearing from the best and the brightest in our private sector on how to improve the public experience on our federal lands and waters by expanding access for all Americans."

Vacancies Vex Leaders And Lawmakers Alike.

E&E Publishing (11/7) reports that "key Interior Department vacancies" have remained unfilled "for an unusually long time, leaving Secretary Ryan Zinke's management team problematically short-handed." Only "four Interior nominees, including Zinke, have been confirmed to date by the Republican-controlled Senate." Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift noted, "In the cases of every one of our nominees, they have taken longer than the previous administration or have actually set records for the longest waits thus far." She added, "The department has continued to do its work as efficiently as possible, and we are lucky to have such incredible talent in acting roles. However, when the secretary does not have his team in place, it forces people to juggle multiple jobs simultaneously."

Puerto Rico Utility Says Its Boss Is Too Busy For Washington Hearing.

Reuters (11/7) reports the Puerto Rico Electric Power Authority "declined to send its executive director to Washington for a hearing on Tuesday before a key U.S. House of Representatives committee, saying he was too busy working on restoring power to the hurricane-hit island." Ricardo Ramos was "due to testify at the House Natural Resources committee, which has expressed concern about contracts issued by the Puerto Rico Electric Power Authority (PREPA) for rebuilding its power grid after it was devastated in September by Hurricane Maria." PREPA Chairman Ernesto Sgroi told the committee in a letter, "Having him off the island for the three days required to come to Washington D.C. would undoubtedly disrupt our restoration effort."

The Hill (11/7, Henry) reports Rep. Rob Bishop, House Natural Resources Committee chairman, "said Tuesday he has more questions for Puerto Rican authorities about their controversial hurricane recovery contract with a small Montana energy firm." He indicated that documents given to the committee "raised fresh concerns about the island's $300 million contract with Whitefish Energy.” The deal was rescinded “last month amid questions from lawmakers and government watchdogs.” The Wall Street Journal (11/7, Scurria) reports that PREPA is only generating power at 42% of capacity, almost seven weeks after Hurricane Maria.

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington \(DC\) Examiner (11/7, Siegel). E&E Publishing (11/7) provides coverage of the power restoration efforts and the Whitefish contract.

Limited Space For Interior Official’s Speech.

The Grand Junction \(CO\) Daily Sentinel (11/8) reports that “limited spaces remain available for a Grand Junction speech” by Kate MacGregor, acting assistant secretary for land and minerals management. MacGregor will “discuss the Interior Department’s ‘Role in Energy Dominance’ at a regular meeting of the Grand Junction Petroleum and Mining Club.” The meeting will be held Nov. 16 at Two Rivers Convention Center.

Interior IG Finds Inaccurate DATA Act Information.

MeriTalk (11/7, Lynch) reports that the Inspector General for the Interior Department “assessed the information that the agency submitted under the DATA Act, and found that some of the data was incomplete or inaccurate.” According to the article, “the IG found 16 of 385 transactions tested were incomplete; 53 were not timely; 145 did not meet quality standards; and 145 were not accurate.” Mary Kendall, deputy IG for DOI, said in the report, “We assessed the data submitted and found that, while it contained most of the required information and conformed to the OMB [Office of Management and Budget] and Treasury standards, there were deficiencies in completeness, timeliness, quality, and accuracy of the data submissions we sampled.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Your $20 Million Loan Went Bust? The Trump Team Has A Job For You.

ProPublica (11/7, Arnsdorf) reports that “as a deputy assistant secretary for policy and economic development in the Department of the Interior’s Bureau of Indian Affairs, Gavin Clarkson oversees a small program that guarantees loans for Indian businesses.” According to the article, “Clarkson is particularly well acquainted with the loan guarantee program he now supervises: He played a key role in a convoluted transaction that flopped and left the Interior Department fending off a $20 million liability that is still in litigation years later.” That figure “represents about 25 percent of the amount the program can guarantee in a year, and until the case is resolved, that money cannot be used to guarantee new loans.”

$1.4 Billion Buyback Of Tribal Land Ending This Month.

Courthouse News (11/7, Reese) reports that “the Indian land buyback program makes its final offers on land purchases Nov. 27.” According to the article, “through Oct. 27, completed land purchases have totaled $1.4 billion, with 2.1 million acres going back to Native Americans on their reservations through the land buyback program.” The article notes that “while the land buyback program wraps up Nov. 27, the scholarship portion of the Cobell settlement will continue in perpetuity.”

Justices Seem Inclined To Side With Tribe In Casino Case.

The AP (10/31) reports that Supreme Court justices “suggested Tuesday that they would side with a Native American tribe in Michigan in a case that arose out of the tribe’s construction of a casino.” Michigan resident David Patchak sued in 2008 but Congress eventually shut down further litigation. The Supreme Court “is now deciding whether Congress’ act was constitutional.”

Also reporting are The Hill (11/7, Wheeler), Roll Call (11/7, Ruger), the Washington Examiner (11/7, Lovelace), and Education Week (11/7, Walsh).

State Officials Press For Approval Of Tribal Amendments.

The New Haven \(CT\) Register (11/7, Stuart) reports that Sens. Richard Blumenthal and Chris Murphy and Rep. Joe Courtney sent a letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “five days ago asking him to take action on a request from Connecticut’s two federally recognized tribes.” In the Nov. 2 letter, they requested “approval for the amendments to the Mashantucket Pequot and Mohegan Tribal Nation’s compacts with the state of Connecticut.”

Additional coverage was provided by the New London \(CT\) Day (11/7, Hallenbeck).

Bureau Of Land Management

Judge Delays Trial Start For Bundy, Sons In Nevada Standoff.

The AP (10/31, Ritter) reports that “trial was postponed at the last minute Tuesday for Nevada rancher Cliven Bundy, two of his sons and a co-defendant accused of leading an armed uprising against government agents in 2014, amid questions about whether federal prosecutors in Las Vegas turned over complete evidence records to defense teams.” Chief U.S. District Judge Gloria Navarro “pushed the start date back to Nov. 14 and set a rapid briefing schedule around hearings Wednesday and Monday.” The central issue is “whether recordings or written notes show what an FBI agent in a command post trailer observed with a camera placed on a hilltop to monitor activities at the Bundy ranch ahead of the April 2014 standoff that stopped a roundup of Bundy cattle from what is now Gold Butte National Monument.”

Also reporting are the Los Angeles Times (11/7, Montero), Reuters (11/7, Smith), and USA Today (11/7, Anglen, Republic).

Congressman Introduces A Bill To Transfer BLM Ground To Hyde Park.

The Logan \(UT\) Herald Journal (11/7, Macavinta) reports that Hyde Park City would “gain about 80 acres of land from the Bureau of Land Management if a bill introduced Tuesday by Rep. Rob Bishop is approved.” Bishop said, “The BLM has land it can’t use, but the city can, and it actually makes sense.” According to Mayor Bob Christensen, “the city would like to obtain the land and use it for an additional water source, to be surrounded by a park and trails that could tie into the Bonneville Shoreline Trails.”

Appellate Court Sets New Deadline In BLM Fracking Rule Fight.

Natural Gas Intelligence (11/7, Passut) reports that “an appellate court panel in Denver said it wants to hear more arguments over an Obama-era rule governing hydraulic fracturing (fracking) on public and tribal lands, and ordered the Trump administration and environmental groups to file responses over the matter by mid-November.” In two separate orders Monday in U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit Court, Judges Mary Beck Briscoe, Harris Hartz and Jerome Holmes ordered the Bureau of Land Management and “a coalition of six environmental groups to file responses to rehearing requests by four Western states and two energy industry groups by Nov. 20.”

New Path Eyed For High-Voltage Transmission Lines In Idaho.

The AP (11/7, Ridler) reports that “federal officials have released their latest analysis on proposed routes for two high-voltage transmission lines in southwestern Idaho intended to modernize the Pacific Northwest’s energy grid.” The draft environmental assessment released by the Bureau of Land Management “late last week covers two segments of the Gateway West project proposed by Idaho Power and Rocky Mountain Power.” The Gateway West project is “one side of a giant triangle of transmission lines that Rocky Mountain Power says are necessary to meet future demands in the region and improve reliability.”

Gold Bar Project Gets Green Light.

The Elko \(NV\) Daily Free Press (11/7) reports that the Bureau of Land Management is “allowing work to begin at the Gold Bar site, after completing its analysis of McEwen Mining Inc.’s proposal for the mine.” The project is “expected to create 120 new jobs.”

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

House Takes Up Offshore Drilling Overhaul.

UPI (11/7, Graeber) reports that House leaders have scheduled a markup hearing for the Accessing Strategic Resources Offshore Act, or ASTRO, for Wednesday. The measure would give the Interior Department the authority to move ahead with new lease sales “as soon as practicable.” Rep. Rob Bishop, R-Utah, said he supports the bill because it would “make the U.S. energy dominant.”

Scalise Bill Would Incentivize Energy Production With Revenue Sharing.

The Ripon Advance (11/7) reports that House of Representatives Majority Whip Rep. Steve Scalise (R-LA) introduced a bill last week that would encourage energy production in the US. The bill entitled the "Strengthening the Economy with Critical Untapped Resources to Expand (SECURE) American Energy Act" includes "smoother permitting structures, revenue sharing, and expanded access to renewable and conventional resources." The bill requires the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management to conduct studies over the potential wind lease sales off the coasts of California, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the US Virgin Islands.

Additional coverage was provided by the Huffington Post (11/7, D'Angelo).

Bureau Of Reclamation

Hoeven Introduces Lot Purchase Bill For Jamestown Reservoir.

The Jamestown \(ND\) Sun (11/7) reports that Sen. John Hoeven has "introduced legislation that would let cabin owners on Jamestown Reservoir buy the lots on which their cabins sit from the federal government." The legislation would "also transfer all remaining U.S. Bureau of Reclamation lands around the reservoir to state and local government ownership, according to information from Hoeven's office."

Lake Managers Request Title Transfer.

The Norman \(OK\) Transcript (11/8, Hampton) reports that in March, the Central Oklahoma Master Conservancy District "paid off its 50-year loan to the Bureau of Reclamation for the lake's construction." The article notes that "paying off the mortgage meant the district could ask the Bureau of Reclamation to transfer the lake's title to COMCD." However, "the proposition of a title transfer of the lake property" has "turned into a tug-of-war between COMCD and the Oklahoma Tourism Department."

Fish And Wildlife Service

Detroit River International Wildlife Refuge Manager John Hartig Named Fulbright Scholar.

The Southgate \(MI\) News Herald (11/7, Suchyta) reports that "newly named Fulbright Scholar John Hartig, Ph.D., of Trenton, Manager of the Detroit River International Wildlife Refuge, has begun research in Canada to evaluate 32 years of Great Lakes remediation." Hartig will "spend the next six months at the Basillie School of International Affairs in Waterloo, Ontario working as part of a project to determine what has been achieved and learned in more than three decades of Great Lakes clean up in degraded 'areas of concern.'" The hope is "to apply the best practices and lessons learned to not only sustain the Great Lakes restoration efforts but to share the knowledge with other countries working to restored polluted bodies of water and ecosystems."

Ensuring The Health Of A Herd.

The Flathead \(MT\) Beacon (11/7, Scott) reports that "as one of the three initial reserves set aside for the preservation of American bison, the National Wildlife Refuge in Moiese continues to play an important role in the success story of recovery of the once endangered plains bison." According to Bernie Petersen, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's acting project manager at the National Bison Range, "since 1908, the National Bison Range has played an important role in the successful recovery of the striking creatures, as well as preserving their genetic health." Last month, "refuge managers, biologists, veterinarians, and others assessed the herd's health condition and genetics during the annual bison roundup, conducted each year to preserve the genetics of the prized herd, considered among the strongest and purest in the nation."

Environmental Group Wants To Sue U.S.

Government To Get Protection For Rare Keys Lizard. WLRN-FM Miami (11/7, Klingener) reports that the Center for Biological Diversity has "notified the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service of its intent to sue the agency over its decision not to list the Florida Keys mole skink, along with 24 other species proposed for protection." According to the center, "sea level rise inundates the skinks' coastal habitat, and they also face threats from habitat loss, pollution and predation by cats and other predators."

National Park Service

New Interactive App Launched For National Mall Visitors.

WJLA-TV Washington (11/7, Carter-Conneen) reports that the National Park Service is “encouraging National Mall visitors to download a new augmented reality, mobile gaming experience.” With assistance from fifth graders from D.C.’S School Within School, the American Recreation Coalition and National Park Service “launched the Agents of Discovery app on the National Mall.” The free, educational app for kids “features what it calls mission sites with quizzes along the way.”

DC Circ. Backs Park Service’s Grand Teton Elk Reduction Plan.

Law360 (11/7, Rodriguez) reports that “the D.C. Circuit on Tuesday affirmed the federal government’s 15-year plan to reduce the elk population in Wyoming’s Grand Teton National Park, ruling the environmental analysis for the plan was adequate to cover changes the government made to the plan after its implementation.”

Students Connect To Culture At Grand Teton National Park.

The AP (11/7, Cassutt) reports that 33 sixth-grade students from Arapahoe Middle School visited Grand Teton National Park in September. The trip was part of “a field trip arranged in part to connect the Northern Arapaho students to the cultural and historical heritage of the park.”

Zion National Park’s Biggest Headache: Keeping Toilets Clean.

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (11/7, Maffly) reports that “thousands of gallons of human waste stored by two outhouses” in Zion National Park give the area “the aura of an open sewer despite the park’s efforts to contain the odors.” According to the article “park managers installed them several years ago for visitors who receive the call of nature while hanging out at the knife-edge vista rising between Cathedral Mountain and Observation Point.” On Monday, park officials closed the West Rim Trail “for a few hours as the fecal remains were – ahem – evacuated by helicopter.” The operation will continue Thursday “as the last of the 32 barrels, each weighing 500 pounds, are flown out, emptied and returned.” Park geologist Dave Sharrow said, “This is a bad spot for a toilet, but if we took them out there would be poop behind every bush. We encourage people to use the toilet at the Grotto Trailhead.”

Brown Boobies Spotted Nesting For The First Time On The Channel Islands.

The Ventura County \(CA\) Star (11/7, Carlson) reports that “a tropical bird known for its webbed feet and plunging dives has been found nesting for the first time in Channel Islands National Park.” Late last week, biologists counted “102 brown boobies and four of their nests on a small, rocky islet off Santa Barbara Island.” Biologists “plan to keep tabs on the new residents, checking to see if nesting numbers increase or when they might be able to spot larger chicks.”

Beach Access And Park Issues.

The Island Free Press \(NC\) (11/7, Crist) reports that “easier access to South Beach is on the way, thanks to a wintertime project by the National Park Service (NPS) that focuses on the former ORV ramp 45 just south of the Point.” Because of “changes to the off road vehicle management plan that stemmed from the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2015, the road that leads to this isolated beach will be improved, shortening the walk to the oceanfront.” Cape Hatteras National Seashore Superintendent David Hallac said, “This will be a rehabilitation of that road. We’ll be bringing the [condition of the road] back to how it used to be. It won’t be a paved road, just an improved dirt road with clay and shell on it – similar to ramp 44.”

Suspension Of Boat Launch Fees At Lake Meredith Extended.

KFDA-TV Amarillo, TX (11/7, Johnson) reports that the National Park Service will “extend the suspension of boat launch fees at Lake Meredith for another year.” The fees will “now be suspended until April 1 of 2019.” Lake Meredith National Recreation Area Superintendent Robert Maguire said, “With the lake levels just starting to approach historic levels and installation of new infrastructure not yet completed, it is in the best interest for the community and all park visitors to extend the fee suspension one more year.”

York, Lancaster, Chester SC Students Participate In Teen CEO Day.

The Rock Hill \(SC\) Herald (11/7, Harris) reports that “Teen CEO Day, held in Winthrop University’s coliseum, brought together eighth-graders from York, Lancaster and Chester County to talk with local businesses about careers in Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics, or STEM.” According to the article, “nearly 5,000 local students got a chance to learn about careers in robotics, medicine, park service and other science and technology fields that exist locally.” Katherine Lynn, a park ranger with Kings Mountain National Military Park, “said she spoke with students about the variety of STEM-related careers the U.S. National Park Service offers.” Lynn said, “We hope more people, especially in the local area, become aware of the National Park Service as a career and the opportunities it has.”

Fort Mitchel Added To National Register Of Historic Places.

The Bluffton \(SC\) Today (11/7) reports that Fort Mitchel on Hilton Head Island was recently added to the National Register of Historic Places.

Osuna Adobe Placed On National Register Of Historic Places.

The Rancho Santa Fe \(CA\) Review (11/7, Billing) reports that Rancho Santa Fe’s Osuna Adobe was recently added to the National Register of Historic Places.

Additional Coverage: Anger As US National Parks Plan High-season Price Hikes.

Additional coverage of the proposal to raise fees at national parks was provided by The Guardian \(UK\) (11/8, Chubb).

Office Of Insular Affairs

Murkowski Leads Congressional Trip To Hurricane-Ravaged Puerto Rico And U.S. Virgin Islands.

The Alaska Dispatch News (11/7, Martinson) reports that a bipartisan coalition of lawmakers visited Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands “over the weekend to assess recovery from extreme hurricane damage.” Sen. Lisa Murkowski, chair of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, and “the congressional delegation visited damaged neighborhoods and the Schneider Medical Center in St. Thomas, U.S Virgin Islands, according to the committee.” Murkowski “plans to hold an Energy Committee hearing next week to examine recovery efforts on the island.”

US Geological Survey

Scientists Say Maui Sewage Injected Into Ocean Damages Coral.

The AP (11/7) reports that “discharge from a sewage treatment facility in West Maui has been damaging the coral reefs off Kahekili Beach Park for years, according to a study by federal scientists.” The study by the U.S. Geological Survey “found pollution is not only eroding the reef, but is also inhibiting new coral growth.” However, Maui County spokesman Rod Antone “said on Friday that the findings contradict data from other studies that show the coral reef at Kahekili is getting healthier.”

Additional Reading.

- How Can We Save America’s Vanishing Beaches? California Shows The Way, According To Surfrider Report. Orange County \(CA\) Register (11/7, Connelly).
- Magnitude 6.5 Quake Hits Papua New Guinea: USGS. Reuters (11/7).

Opinion Pieces

The SECURE American Energy Act Only Endangers Public Lands.

In an op-ed for The Hill (11/7, Metcalf), Peter Metcalf, the vice chairman of the Outdoor industry’s Conservation Alliance, criticizes Rep. Rob Bishop’s SECURE American Energy Act. According to Metcalf, the bill “would give handouts to corporate polluters and special interests at the expense of our irreplaceable public landscapes and wildlife that Americans of all stripes – including hikers, bikers, climbers, sportsmen and campers – depend on and seek out for recreation and enjoyment.” Metcalf also asserts that the bill is “a direct assault on transparency and accountability that severely limits the public’s input in management decisions made regarding our shared natural resources.”

Our View: Good Riddance To Mislabeled Canyon Mining Ban.

In an editorial, the Havasu \(AZ\) News-Herald (11/8) supports the Trump Administration's plan to repeal "a ban on uranium mining on a million acres of Northern Arizona." The paper points out that "the land withdrawn from mining is mostly miles away from the canyon itself and – in the areas of actual or proposed mines – is buffered from the canyon by miles of protected national monument or national park land." The paper also notes that "mining can provide jobs as well as a strong addition to a tax base limited by the vast amounts of government land in the county as well as the rest of Northern Arizona."

Additional Reading.

- Fitzgerald: An Elitist Plan For Yosemite. Stockton \(CA\) Record (11/7, Fitzgerald).
- Our Voice: Federal Wildfire Fix Needed By Summer. Tri-City Herald \(WA\) (11/7).
- Our Largest Wildlife Refuge Is Also The Most Vulnerable. High Country \(CO\) News (11/7, Graham).
- OPINION: Protest In Durango Over BLM Methane Rule Delay. Pagosa \(CO\) Daily Post (11/7, Bowie).

Top National News

Trump Warns North Korea: Do Not "Try Us."

Coverage of President Trump's remarks to the South Korean parliament Wednesday are being cast as contrary to his remarks to reporters in Seoul on Tuesday in which he called on North Korea to "make a deal." Media outlets had cast those earlier comments as a shift and softening of his tone towards North Korea.

During Wednesday's address, USA Today (11/7, Jackson) reports President Trump said the world cannot tolerate a "rogue regime" that threatens "nuclear devastation," and called on all countries to increase economic and diplomatic pressure on North Korea. "All responsible nations must join forces to isolate the brutal regime of North Korea," Trump told South Korean lawmakers. The AP (10/26, Lemire, Colvin) reports the President "delivered a sharp warning" to North Korean leader Kim Jong Un, telling him the weapons he's acquiring "are not making you safer. They are putting your regime in grave danger."

Reuters (11/7, Holland, Spetalnick) quotes Trump as saying, "Do not underestimate us and do not try us." His "return to harsh language against North Korea comes a day after he appeared to dial back some of his bellicose rhetoric that had fueled fears across east Asia of the risk of military conflict." On Tuesday, Trump offered "a diplomatic opening" to Pyongyang to "make a deal," but in Wednesday's speech, Trump "went mostly on the attack."

The Washington Post (11/7, Parker, Nakamura) calls the remarks "a hard-line speech aimed at rallying international pressure against North Korea," and Breitbart (11/7, Spiering) says the President sent "a strong message" to North Korea.

The Washington Times (11/7, Boyer), however, reports that during the "stern 33-minute address," Trump "recited a long list of the communist regime's crimes against its own citizens, including forced labor, torture, forced abortions and religious persecution" before offering it "a path to a much better future." Axios (11/7, Britzky) likewise says Trump said he was prepared to offer North Korea "a path to a far better future," but only if the regime gives up its nuclear ambitions.

The AP (11/7, Lemire, Colvin) said Trump's call Tuesday for North Korea to "come to the table" and "make a deal" marked a "striking shift of tone." All three networks reported Tuesday night on the President's comments, which ABC World News Tonight (11/7, story 4, 1:00, Karl) called "a dramatic change in tone." NBC Nightly News (11/7, story 4, 2:25, Holt) dubbed it "a slightly softer tone," and the CBS Evening News (11/7, story 6, 2:00, Mason) referred to as "a new approach to dealing with North Korea's nuclear threat." Margaret Brennan said Trump "notably chose not to repeat his ridicule of Kim Jong-Un."

The Washington Post (11/7, Nakamura, Parker) similarly says the President "avoided the type of heated rhetoric he has employed in the past," and asserted that his Administration is making "a lot of progress." Said Trump, without elaborating, "I do see certain movement, yes, but we'll see what happens." The Los Angeles Times (11/7, Bennett) says Trump "spoke in unusually measured tones," and while saying he has seen "certain movement," offered no specifics, noting that his Administration likes "to play our cards a little bit close to the vest." The Times notes that Trump's call for a deal came "five weeks after he publicly dismissed the possibility of diplomacy with North Korea," saying on Twitter that Secretary of State Tillerson was "wasting his time trying to negotiate with Little Rocket Man."

Trump, Bloomberg News (11/7, Jacobs, Kong, Wadhams) reports, "toned down his harsh rhetoric toward North Korea" in remarks that were "a far cry from his comments in recent months," when he promised "fire and fury" against the nation. With his remarks, Bloomberg says, Trump "went further than he has before, amid the recent tensions, in saying he was open to engaging with Kim's regime." Reuters (11/7, Holland, Spetalnick, Kim) likewise says Trump made "a more conciliatory appeal than ever before." Taking a "more measured, less confrontational tone," Trump urged North Korea to "do the right thing."

The New York Times (11/7, Davis, Landler, Choe) says Trump "brought a message of reassurance to South Korea...moving to bolster an anxious ally." Instead of threatening preemptive action against the North, the Times says the President "said he prayed that using military force would not be necessary."

Politico (11/7, Restuccia) says Trump "cast the North Korean nuclear threat as a global crisis that requires greater cooperation from every nation," and also "appeared to take a dig at China," saying, "It is unacceptable that nations would help to arm and finance this increasingly dangerous regime." Reuters (11/7, Spetalnick, Holland) reports that the next stop on Trump's trip is Beijing, where he is "expected to press a reluctant President Xi Jinping to tighten the screws further on Pyongyang, US officials say."

The Wall Street Journal (11/7, Bender, Youssef) reports that there was no immediate North Korean reaction to Trump's comments, but as Trump met with South Korean President Moon Jae-in, USA Today (11/7, Hjelmggaard) reports North Korea "reaffirmed its determination to strengthen its nuclear weapons program." In a commentary, the state-run Rodong Sinmum said, "As long as the US and its followers continue their hostile acts against us, we will further bolster our nuclear, precious sword of justice."

Sen. James Risch (R-ID) said on CNN's The Lead (11/7), "I think what President Trump has shown in the last 72 hours is an accommodation towards what South Korea's position is. Having said that, he has not walked back at all his determination that he's going to defend the country and defend the allies, and I'm sure that that is what he wants to convey to our allies over there."

Asked on MSNBC's Morning Joe (11/7) about President Trump's "optimism" that a deal is on the horizon, Sen. Angus King (I-ME) said, "I don't know what he knows in terms of the imminence of any kind of discussions. I think we're not necessarily close to a deal. What I hope we're close to is talking...because a military action, we've heard all kinds of data in the last few weeks about how difficult that would be." King added, "The other piece this has to involve is China. China is the only country that really has any true power over North Korea."

Suzanne DiMaggio, a senior fellow at New America, and Joel S. Wit, a senior fellow at the US-Korea Institute at the Johns Hopkins University, write in the New York Times (11/7, DiMaggio, Wit) that Trump's comments Tuesday in Seoul were "certainly better than his past bluster, but they still fall far short of what is needed." They argue that Trump "could begin reducing tensions by stating clearly that diplomatic engagement with Pyongyang is his administration's first choice and that the United States is ready to proceed down this road, working with its allies and partners."

In USA Today (11/7), Director of Policy and Advocacy of the Council of Korean Americans Jessica Lee writes that the US "can, and must, do more to de-escalate tension and give diplomacy a chance. We believe, as most Korean Americans do, that there is no substitute for US leadership on this issue. The time to lead is now."

A Wall Street Journal (11/7) editorial, meanwhile, says that while Trump praised Moon Jae-in for "great cooperation" on containing the threat from North Korea, the South Korean leader's recent actions suggest that he is an unreliable friend. The Journal argues that Moon favors appeasing Kim Jong Un to lower tensions, even at the expense of his own country's security.

Trump Scraps Surprise DMZ Visit Due To Weather. Bloomberg News (11/7, Jacobs) reports President Trump "scrapped plans for a surprise visit" to the Demilitarized Zone on Wednesday due to thick fog. Trump's helicopter flew "within five minutes of the landing zone, while South Korean President Moon Jae-in was diverted to an alternative location, Press Secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders told reporters." The visit was intended to be a symbol of "the strength of the alliance." USA Today (11/7, Jackson) reports that while White House officials had left the DMZ off the President's official schedule, "tentative plans for a visit were in the works."

South Koreans Demonstrate To Show Both Support, Disapproval Of Trump. The AP (11/7, Tong-Hyung) reports that “hundreds of South Koreans took to the streets of Seoul on Tuesday for two separate demonstrations, one to show support” for visiting President Trump and the other to “voice disapproval” of the US leader. Surrounded by “thousands of police officers and a tight perimeter...hundreds of anti-Trump protesters rallied” near the US Embassy. Across the street, hundreds of Trump supporters “waved the US and South Korean flags” and chanted “USA!” when Trump’s motorcade passed by.

China Curbs Tourism To North Korea Ahead Of Trump Visit. Sources told Reuters (11/7, Wong, Pearson) on Tuesday that Chinese tour operators based in the border city of Dandong “have been told to halt trips to the North Korean capital Pyongyang.” Reuters notes that tourism is “one of the few remaining ways North Korea earns hard currency,” and Chinese tour operators said they were caught off guard by the move. The Chinese Foreign Ministry did not immediately comment.

Senate Banking Committee Approves New North Korea Sanctions. Reuters (11/7, Zengerle) reports the Senate Banking Committee unanimously approved new sanctions on North Korea on Tuesday, “seeking to send a message of strength” as President Trump visits Asia. As well as “strengthening existing sanctions and Congressional oversight,” the measure will target “foreign financial institutions – in China and elsewhere – that provide services” to those targeted for North Korea-related sanctions by the Congress, executive order or UN Security Council resolution.

US Building Up Military In The Pacific. On NBC Nightly News (11/7, story 6, 2:00, Holt), Richard Engel reported that it is “hard to deny that US is increasingly ready for war” with North Korea, “even if it says it doesn’t want one. The highest concentration of naval powers [is] coming together in years in the Pacific: three carrier strike groups; 32,000 US troops in South Korea; reinforced missile defense systems and more F-35 jets to the region, a show of the force that speaks louder than words.”

AP Analysis: Trump At A Distinct Disadvantage In Meeting With Xi. The AP (11/7, Pennington) reports that when President Trump arrives Wednesday in Beijing, the “grandeur of its welcome for the larger-than-life American president will mask a sobering reality.” While President Xi Jinping is China’s “most powerful figure in a generation,” Trump is “unpopular and untrusted, pursued by political scandal and questions over his temperament as commander in chief of the world’s most formidable military.” As a result, the AP says Trump “is at a distinct disadvantage against” Xi during this week’s talks, which are expected to focus on North Korea and trade.

Politico (11/7, Restuccia, Johnson) reports that “few observers expect Trump to rock the boat on the ground in Beijing, where Trump will be seeking Xi’s continued help with the effort to stop North Korean leader Kim Jong Un’s nuclear program.” The Wall Street Journal (11/7, Browne) says Trump’s visit is an opportunity for the two nations to make deals, but Asian governments are worried Trump, looking for a foreign-policy success, will be tempted to strike a bargain with Beijing.

USA Today (11/7, Ullmann), meanwhile, reports that Taiwan is watching Wednesday’s meeting between Trump and Xi with “deep apprehension,” fearing its future “might be a factor in any deal the leaders strike on North Korea or trade.” Taiwanese officials fear Trump “might alter the United States’ long-standing policy of support for Taiwan” to gain concessions from Xi on North Korea and trade.

Bannon: China Is “An Enemy” And “Not A Strategic Partner.” Breitbart (11/7, Riehl) reports former White House chief strategist Steve Bannon warned Tuesday that China is “an enemy of incalculable power and they’re not a strategic partner. They are an enemy and we have to understand that.”

Trump Use Of Term “Indo-Pacific” Draws Attention. Politico (11/7, Nelson) reports that “when Americans talk about the region that includes China, Japan and Korea, they usually refer to Asia-Pacific,” but President Trump “wheeled out a different phrase in remarks Tuesday that’s rapidly become the watchword” of his Asia trip: “Indo-Pacific.” The Administration’s use of “Indo-Pacific,” puts the US “on the side of regional allies eager to balance Chinese influence.” While Administration officials “haven’t yet laid out a detailed vision for what precisely it means,” Trump is expected to give “a major address on the American relationship with the region” at the APEC leaders’ summit in Vietnam.

Trump Praises His New Jersey Golf Club During Speech To South Korean Parliament. The Washington Examiner (11/7, Correll) reports President Trump “lauded his New Jersey golf club” during his address Wednesday to the South Korean National Assembly. “Korean golfers are some of the best on earth,” Trump said. “In fact, and you know what I’m going to say, the Women’s US Open was held this year at Trump National Golf Club in Bedminster, N.J., and it just happened to be won by a great Korean golfer.” The Examiner says that “although Trump’s comments were met by applause," they "also received pushback for attempting to promote Trump's businesses."

Trump: "Hundreds More" Could Have Died In Texas Under Stricter Gun Laws.

The President's response during a news conference in Seoul with South Korean President Moon Jae-in to a question about the Texas shooting generated extensive, generally unfavorable print media coverage. ABC World News Tonight (11/7, story 3, 1:00, Muir) was the only major newscast to report them. Reports cast Trump as irritated by the issue, and contrasted his reaction to the tragedy to his approach to the terror attack in New York City. To the New York Times (11/7, Landler), "the carnage in Texas has overshadowed Mr. Trump's trip to Asia, and his response to questions about it has hardened as the questions have kept coming." On Monday in Tokyo, "he described the gunman as a 'very deranged individual,'" but yesterday he "invoked street violence in Chicago as a reason to be suspicious of tighter gun regulations." The Chicago Tribune (11/7) quotes Trump as saying, "Look at the city with the strongest gun laws in our nation – Chicago. ... Chicago is a disaster, a total disaster." The Chicago Sun-Times (11/7, Spielman) reports that later in the day, Mayor Rahm Emanuel accused the President "of 'pointing fingers'...instead of leading on gun control."

The comments that sparked the most media attention, however, came in response to question about whether "extreme vetting" for visa applicants should also be applied to would-be gun owners. ABC World News Tonight (11/7, story 3, 1:00, Muir) showed Trump saying, "If you did what you're suggesting, there would have been no difference three days ago. And you might not have had that very brave person who happened to have a gun or a rifle in his truck, go out and shoot him and hit him and neutralize him." The Los Angeles Times (11/7, Bennett) reports Trump "seemed to chafe at being asked about gun policy," and quoted him as saying, "Instead of having 26 dead, he would've had hundreds more dead."

Politico (11/7, Nelson) says "Trump appeared to bristle at even the mention of gun control," the Washington Post (11/7, Nakamura) that he "appeared irritated by the question and suggested it was not appropriate to talk about 'in the heart of South Korea,'" and Fox News (11/7) that he "appeared annoyed...and asked if it was an appropriate question given the timing and the venue."

ABC News (11/7), meanwhile, says the President's response to the Texas shooting "has been compared with his reaction to the terror attack in New York City just last Tuesday, where he waited only hours before stating he had directed the Department of Homeland Security to institute strict vetting procedures and called for Congress to change immigration policy." The AP (11/7) similarly indicates that "Trump's more muted response to gun violence contrasts with his swift call for legislative and military action following the Oct. 31 truck attack in New York City." According to CNN (11/7, Diamond), "Trump has called for 'extreme vetting' of immigrants from Muslim-majority countries in response to terrorist incidents," but "he has resisted any action on gun laws in response to the deadly mass shootings that have occurred during his time in office."

In an analysis, the AP (11/7, Pane, Bellisle) says "gun-rights supporters have seized on the Texas church massacre as proof of the well-worn saying that the best answer to a bad guy with a gun is a good guy with a gun." Yet "gun-control advocates...say the tragedy shows once more that it is too easy to get a weapon in the US." The AP adds that "to no one's surprise, many Americans on opposite sides of the gun debate are using the latest mass shooting to reaffirm their opinions about firearms, drawing very different lessons from the rampage that left 26 people dead."

Sen. Chris Murphy said on CNN's Situation Room (11/7), "There is no way to prepare for somebody walking into a church with tactical gear, with a weapon that was designed for the military to kill as many people as quickly as possible. Truly, the only way to prepare for that inevitability is to stay home and never go out. So instead, we have to be on the offense. Instead, we have to make sure people like this do not get guns. Instead, we have to make sure that guns like that, that can do that much damage in that short of a period of time, stay in the hands of the military." Murphy added that "we are not powerless to stop this and people here in Congress need to wake up here and realize that."

The Washington Post (11/7, Rosenberg, Horton, Berman) says the shooting "has brought sharp attention to the deep-rooted gun culture in parts of rural Texas and how many believe that open access to weapons and greater citizen vigilance is the best deterrent to gun violence." The Post adds that "such views are deeply at odds with those calling for stricter gun controls in the United States."

Cornyn Opens Door To Bipartisan Review Of Background Check System. The Washington Times (11/7, Dinan) reports "top Republicans said Tuesday that there may be room for a limited gun debate in the wake of this weekend's church shooting in Texas – though they said it'll be limited to trying to make sure the background check system works." Sen. John Cornyn "said he'll begin drafting a bill that would remind government agencies of their duty to provide information to the background check system, and would offer incentives to try to earn more cooperation from states as well." Said Cornyn, "I believe there is an opportunity for us to work here on a bipartisan basis." ABC World News Tonight (11/7, story 5, 0:40, Muir) also reported that "there are bipartisan calls in Congress to strengthen the background check system, including" one from Cornyn.

The CBS Evening News (11/7, lead story, 2:35, Martin) reported that "FBI statistics indicate not just the Air Force, but the entire Department of Defense almost never files a report unless the offender also received a dishonorable discharge, a slightly harsher punishment than...Kelley's bad conduct discharge." CBS added that "more than 11,000 dishonorable discharges have been entered into the database but only one for domestic violence, and one for mental health. In other words, the failure to flag Kelley to the FBI may not have been an isolated oversight, but part of a pattern."

The AP (11/7, Burns) reports Defense Secretary Mattis "said Tuesday he has directed the Pentagon inspector general to review circumstances of the Kelley case and 'define what the problem is.'" Air Force Secretary Wilson, meanwhile, said on Fox News' Fox & Friends (11/7), "What happened in Texas was absolutely that awful this weekend, and I think all of us were heartbroken. But that's why we have launched a full-scale review of what happened in this case and every other one like it."

Pentagon Health Nominee Thinks Civilians Having Assault Rifles Is "Insane." Politico (11/7, O'Brien) reports that Dean Winslow, Trump's nominee "to be the assistant secretary of Defense for health affairs," described the ability for civilians to gain access to semi-automatic assault rifles as "insane." Winslow said during his confirmation hearing with the Senate Armed Services Committee that "I think that's an issue not as much for this committee, but elsewhere," prompting Sen. John McCain to quickly interject that he didn't think that was in Winslow's "area of responsibility or expertise." McCain also urged Winslow to clarify his written views on abortion or risk jeopardizing his confirmation.

Sen. King: Assault Weapons Should Not Be Banned. The Washington Times (11/7, Chasmar) reports Sen. Angus King said on MSNBC's Morning Joe that "assault weapons are nothing more than semi-automatic hunting rifles 'in costume' and therefore shouldn't be banned."

Democratic Lawmaker Walks Out During House Moment Of Silence For Victims. CNN (11/7, Diaz) reported "a Democratic lawmaker walked out of a moment of silence for the Texas shooting victims on Monday night to protest a lack of action on gun safety after mass shootings in the United States." The Washington Post (11/7, Wootson) says "Rep. Ted Lieu's national profile skyrocketed as he became the acerbic foil to the nation's tweeter in chief, blasting...Trump with incessant and sharply worded responses to presidential posts." The Post recounts that "while his colleagues were inside the House chambers on Monday, having a moment of silence for the victims, Lieu was outside, phone in selfie position, being the opposite of silent." Lieu wrote on Facebook, "I've been to too many moments of silences. In just my short career in Congress, three of the worst mass shootings in U.S. history have occurred. I will not be silent. What we need is we need action. We need to pass gun safety legislation now."

Gunman Escaped New Mexico Mental Hospital In 2012. KPRC-TV Houston (11/7, 6:09 p.m. CST) reported that Kelley "briefly escaped a mental facility near El Paso in 2012." Kelley "was ordered by the military to a New Mexico mental health facility in 2012." A police report obtained from the El Paso police department "shows Kelley escaped the facility before getting picked up by police at a downtown El Paso bus station." Responding officers say Kelley "was facing military charges, trying to catch a bus out of state, caught sneaking firearms onto Holloman Air Force Base and he was attempting to carry out death threats against military superiors." Patients at the facility "tipped off staff that Kelly was planning something. The military investigated and...found he was ordering weapons and tactical gear to a P.O. box in San Antonio." The San Antonio Express-News (11/7, Downs) also says Kelley "had been checked into the facility following an attempt to sneak firearms into an Air Force base in a plot to carry out the death threats he made against his chain of command, according to police records." KHOU-TV Houston (11/7, Homer), meanwhile, said Kelley had been "sent to the Peak Behavioral Health Services Center in Santa Teresa, New Mexico after beating his wife and child while stationed at Holloman Air Force Base."

The New York Times (11/7, Pérez-Peña) notes "the report filed by the El Paso officers says that the person who reported Mr. Kelley missing from the hospital advised them that he 'suffered from mental disorders,' and that he 'was attempting to carry out death threats' against 'his military chain of command.” The report also indicated “the man ‘was a danger to himself and others as he had already been caught sneaking firearms onto Holloman Air Force Base.” The Washington Times (11/7, Richardson), AP (11/7, Vertuno, Weissert, Weber) and Reuters (11/7, Herskovitz, Garza), among other news outlets, also report the story.

Armed Man Who Wounded Gunman Invokes God, Says He’s Not A Hero. The Dallas Morning News (11/7, Steele) reports that in an interview with KHBS-TV in Fort Smith, AK Stephen Willeford recounted his experiences. Willeford “and another good Samaritan, 47-year-old Johnnie Langendorff, have been celebrated as heroes for their quick action in confronting...Kelley.” Said Willeford, “I’m no hero. I am not. ... I think my God, my Lord protected me and gave me the skills to do what needed to be done.” The Washington Post (11/7, Rosenberg, Horton, Berman) notes Trump has praised Willeford as a “hero.”

FBI Unable To Access Kelley’s Phone So Far. The Los Angeles Times (11/7, Pearce) reports “the FBI has been unable to access the phone of the Texas church gunman, officials said Tuesday, voicing their frustration with the tech industry as they try to gather evidence about...Kelley’s motive.” Christopher Combs, special agent in charge of the FBI’s San Antonio bureau, said in a news conference, “With the advance of the technology and the phones and the encryptions, law enforcement – whether that’s at the state, local or federal level – is increasingly not able to get into these phones.”

NBC Nightly News (11/7, lead story, 3:30, Holt) showed Combs saying, “They are in the process of looking at the phone. Unfortunately at this point in time, we’re unable to get into the phone.” The development, says Bloomberg News (11/7, Shields), is “renewing tension between tech companies that protect devices with encryption and law enforcement agencies investigating crimes.” The Wall Street Journal (11/7, Ailworth, Hobbs) runs a similar report.

ABC World News Tonight (11/7, lead story, 3:20, Gutman), meanwhile, reported that “as authorities continue to process the scene at the First Baptist Church, tonight, we learned that the day of the massacre wasn’t...Kelley’s first time at the church. Officials tell us Kelley attended the church’s fall festival on Halloween, October 31,” and “when he came back on Sunday, he wore a skeleton mask over his face, blasting off hundreds of rounds in the deadliest shooting in Texas history.”

Trump Courts Democratic Senators On Tax Reform.

Politico (11/7, Schor) reports that President Trump called a dozen Democratic senators from Asia on Tuesday in an effort to build support for tax reform, but he “didn’t appear to change many minds.” According to Sen. Sherrod Brown, Trump argued that “rich people get hurt in this bill. ... We made it clear that we don’t agree with that.” Politico says Democrats “reiterated their interest in a bipartisan process rather than the closed-door, one-party approach that congressional Republicans have taken so far on tax legislation.” Sen. Chris Coons said, “This was more a conversation about our desire to have a seat at the table and to be able to contribute ideas that would genuinely help the middle class, strengthen manufacturing, make our country more competitive, than it was specific negotiations.” While Democrats “appreciate the effort and outreach,” Coons added, “I think every one of us expressed our deep frustration that this meeting happened very late in the process.”

Brady Leaves Open Possibility Of Repealing ACA’s Individual Mandate In Tax Bill.

Roll Call (11/7, McPherson) reports that while the House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Kevin Brady’s amendment to the GOP tax plan, which was “adopted on a party-line vote,” did not include a repeal of the ACA’s individual mandate, Brady on Tuesday “left open the possibility” that a repeal “could eventually make it into the GOP’s tax overhaul.” Brady told radio host Hugh Hewitt “that he’s asked for an updated cost estimate on repealing the individual mandate, indicating he won’t make a final decision until he sees that.” Said Brady, “I have been asked to consider it, and that’s exactly what we’re doing.” However, House Freedom Caucus Chairman Mark Meadows is predicting that “there’s no way” the bill will include a repeal, the AP (11/7) reports. According to Meadows, there is concern among Republican leaders that “mixing the tax overhaul measure and a key element of the party’s failed health care bill could complicate the tax drive.”

Schumer Predicts Spending Bill Will Include DACA Fix.

The Washington Times (11/7, Dinan) reports that Senate Minority Leader Schumer said Tuesday that the end-of-year spending bill being crafted by Congress will provide permanent legal status for Dreamers, “and said President Trump will have to sign it.” Schumer told reporters, “We feel very strongly that DACA must pass and must pass by Dec. 31. ... We think we're going to have a good number of our Republican colleagues join us." Schumer also predicted that Trump "would sign whatever bill reaches his desk," saying, "If DACA is in the omnibus he won't veto it, is my prediction."

Syria To Join Paris Climate Agreement, Leaving Only US Opposed.

The New York Times (11/7, Friedman) reports Syria announced during UN climate talks in Bonn, Germany on Tuesday that it would sign the Paris agreement on climate change. The move, "which comes on the heels of Nicaragua signing the accord last month, will leave the United States as the only country that has rejected the global pact." Asked about the move, White House spokeswoman Kelly Love said, "As the president previously stated, the United States is withdrawing unless we can re-enter on terms that are more favorable for our country."

The Washington Post (11/7, Dennis) says Syria's decision to join the accord "brought another round of rebukes for the Trump Administration." Michael Brune, executive director of the Sierra Club, said in a statement, "As if it wasn't already crystal clear, every single other country in the world is moving forward together to tackle the climate crisis, while Donald Trump's has isolated the United States on the world stage in an embarrassing and dangerous position."

USA Today (11/7, Rice) reports Alden Meyer of the Union of Concerned Scientists said, "Syria's announcement that it will join the Paris agreement leaves President Trump in not-so-splendid isolation as a result of his irresponsible and ignorant decision to withdraw the United States from the most comprehensive effort ever to confront the mounting climate crisis."

Bloomberg News (11/7) reports Glen Peters, research director of the Center for International Climate Research in Oslo, contends, "President Donald Trump's June 1 decision to withdraw from the Paris Agreement may have inadvertently strengthened all other nations' resolve." Peters added, "This is one side benefit of the Trump thing. It plays a role in galvanizing the remaining 200 or so countries. ... So he may actually achieve the opposite and strengthen the Paris Agreement." Reuters (11/7, Doyle) reports "the United Nations welcomed Syria's statement as a declaration of intent to adhere to the Paris pact. But it said Damascus had not yet filed any of the official documents to sign up."

U.S. News & World Report (11/7, Newman), CBC \(CAN\) (11/7), The Hill (11/7, Savransky) and the AP (11/7, Press) also provides coverage of this story.

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Let The People Pick The President." The New York Times (11/7) editorializes that the Electoral College should be eliminated, and that states that are undecided about the National Popular Vote compact, which commits states to pledge their electoral votes to the popular vote winner, should sign on. The Times dismisses the Electoral College as "a 200-year-old constitutional anachronism designed in part to appease slaveholders and ratified when no one but white male landowners could vote." Additionally, the Times laments the fact that modern presidential campaigns can focus on only a handful of key states instead of targeting voters in all of them.

"Virginia Rejects Your Hateful Politics, Mr. Trump." In an editorial the New York Times (11/7) calls Lt. Gov. Ralph Northam's win in the Virginia governor's race "a stinging and welcome rebuke to President Trump and white nationalism." The Times adds that Gillespie "chose to dog-whistle himself breathless in pursuit of the state's pro-Trump white voters, and the president attested to his make-America-great-again credentials." Gillespie's decision "to lay his principles on the altar of Trumpism made Mr. Northam's win doubly important, as a triumph over the politics of racial division, and as a lesson for other Republicans tempted to adopt Mr. Trump's vile tactics as their own."

Washington Post.

"A Triumph Of Decency Over Dread." In an editorial, the Washington Post (11/7, Board) calls Lt. Gov. Ralph Northam's win in the Virginia governor's race "a victory of decency, civility and moderation over fear, dread and barely veiled racist coding." The outcome, adds the Post, "was a repudiation not only of...Gillespie...but also more fundamentally of the racially divisive Trump campaign playbook, which Mr. Gillespie, ditching his reputation as a traditional and fair-minded conservative, embraced whole-hardheartedly."

“The Killer Responsible For More Yearly Deaths Than AIDS, Malaria, And TB Combined.” A Washington Post (11/7) cites a study in the British medical journal the Lancet, which found that pollution is a “global killer responsible for more yearly deaths than AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis combined.” The study said pollution is associated with “1 in 6 premature deaths, 9 million people in 2015.” The Post says critics of environmental regulation “often overstate the potential costs of pollution controls and discount the benefits.” The study, the Post argues, “should remind leaders in the United States and elsewhere that, though there are costs associated with restricting pollution, countries also incur costs by failing to do so.”

“Let This Sick 10-Year-Old Girl Stay In The Country.” The Washington Post (11/7) editorializes that Rosa Maria Hernandez, a 10 year old undocumented immigrant with cerebral palsy who was detained during her recovery from surgery, should have her immigration status regularized by federal officials so that she can remain in the country. The Post opines that “the amount of effort already expended to go after this sick little girl is just astounding and clearly out of whack with President Trump’s stated promise to go after ‘bad hombres.’” Hernandez was placed in a federal detention center 150 miles away from her home last week before being released back to her family.

“These Are The Questions To Ask About the Trump-Russia Connection.” A Washington Post (11/7) editorial says it counts nine of President Trump’s associates who “had direct contact with Russian officials during the campaign and presidential transition.” The Post says it is “beyond dispute that the Russian government sought to help the Trump campaign and that some campaign officials were open to overtures from Russia. The question is how far that cooperation went and who on the campaign was aware of it.” Trump’s “tweeted declarations of ‘NO COLLUSION!’ are not sufficient.”

Wall Street Journal.

“South Korea’s Bow To Beijing.” A Wall Street Journal (11/7) editorial says that while President Trump praised South Korean President Moon Jae-in for “great cooperation” on containing the threat from North Korea, the South Korean leader’s recent actions suggest that he is an unreliable friend. The Journal argues that Moon favors appeasing Kim Jong Un to lower tensions, even at the expense of his own country’s security.

“Koskinen’s Parting Gift From The IRS.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (11/7) says that with Commissioner John Koskinen exiting, the IRS on Tuesday confirmed that for the first time, it has started to enforce the Affordable Care Act employer mandate. The agency has sent letters to companies that employ more than 50 workers that have yet to provide what the ACA deems as qualifying coverage to its employees. The Journal, which casts the move as a way for Koskinen to hit back at Republicans who took aim at the IRS over the agency’s targeting of Tea Party groups, says enforcing the mandate will hurt smaller companies and the economy. The Journal criticizes Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin for not overruling Koskinen and delaying enforcement of the mandate until the IRS had more time to better prepare businesses for the move.

“Trump’s Antiterror Omission.” The Wall Street Journal (11/7, Board) editorializes that President Trump’s lack of a coherent strategy for handling detained terrorists creates national security risks and demonstrates a lack of seriousness regarding an important facet of our national approach to terror. The Journal criticizes Trump’s mixed messaging regarding Sayfullo Saipov, with Trump first indicating openness to sending him to Guantanamo before changing course and advocating for the death penalty for the attacker on Twitter. The Journal also unfavorably compares Trump’s general policies of how to handle captured terrorists to the policies of President

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

US Prepares Show Of Strength As Trump Urges North Korea Talks
Lapses In Gun Buyers’ Records Come Under Scrutiny
Jet-Set Debt Collectors Join A Lucrative Game: Hunting The Superrich
ADP Boss Taunts Ackman: This Was A ‘Whooping’

New York Times:

With Virginia, Voters Give Democrats First Big Wins Of The Trump Era
Phil Murphy Is Elected Governor Of New Jersey, In A Lift For Democrats
Texas Gunman Once Escaped From Mental Health Facility
In Saudi Arabia, Where Family And State Are One, Arrests May Be Selective
How Business Titans, Pop Stars And Royals Hide Their Wealth
De Blasio Coasts To Re-Election, As Second-Term Challenges Await

Washington Post:

Black Wealth A Target In Anthem Debate
Shooter Escaped Facility In 2012
Senate GOP Could Break From House On Tax Plan
For Republicans, A Grim Omen For The Midterms
Democrats Jolt Trump's Party With Firm Message

Financial Times:

Saudi Arabia Accuses Iran Of 'Act Of War' As Tensions Rise
Wall St Warns Trump Team Of Brexit 'Point Of No Return'
Forbes Says Wilbur Ross Lied About Being A Billionaire
Google Owner Tests First Driverless Car On City Streets

Washington Times:

Ralph Northam Wins Of Virginia's Governor's Race
Republicans Agree To Debate Gun Control After Background Check System Fails
Anti-Trump Voters Swarm Virginia Polls To Send Message To President
Doctors Fear Obesity Diagnosis Will Embarrass Patients
Catalonian Drive For Freedom Stirs Feelings Of Repression, Discrimination

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Texas Church Shooting; Texas Church Shooting-Gunman; Trump-Asia Tour; Texas Church Shooting-Trump; Russia Meddling Investigation; Gubernatorial Elections; Weinstein Sexual Harassment; Roy Halladay Dies; Highway Shootout; Teacher Threatens Student; Twitter-Higher Character Limit; Texas Church Shooting-Survivor.

CBS: Texas Church Shooting; Texas Church Shooting-Gunman; Texas Church Shooting-Victims; Texas Church Shooting-Video Analysis; Roy Halladay Dies; Trump-Asia Tour; Weinstein Sexual Harassment; Paris Climate Accord; Gubernatorial Elections; Painting-Ownership Dispute.

NBC: Texas Church Shooting; Texas Church Shooting-Victims; Weinstein Sexual Harassment; Trump-Asia Tour; South Korea-US Military; Gubernatorial Elections; Roy Halladay Dies; Health-Alcohol And Cancer; Miami-Airport Security Breach; Van Gogh Painting Found; Twitter-Higher Character Limit; Honest Judge.

Network TV At A Glance:

Texas Church Shooting – 22 minutes, 45 seconds
Weinstein Sexual Harassment – 6 minutes, 45 seconds
Trump-Asia Tour – 5 minutes, 25 seconds
Gubernatorial Elections – 2 minutes, 30 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Gubernatorial Elections; Trump-Asia Tour; Roy Halladay Dies; Wall Street News.

CBS: Trump-Asia Tour; Gubernatorial Elections; Texas Church Shooting; Roy Halladay Dies.

FOX: Trump-Asia Tour; Gubernatorial Elections; Roy Halladay Dies.

NPR: Trump-Asia Tour; Texas Church Shooting; Gubernatorial Elections.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Participates in an embassy meet and greet in Seoul, South Korea; delivers a speech to the National Assembly; participates in a wreath laying ceremony; will have tea with President Xi Jinping of the People's Republic of China and Madame Peng Liyuan; tours the Forbidden City and view an opera performance with President Xi and Madame Peng; has dinner with President Xi and Madame Peng.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Visits victims of the First Baptist Church shooting; participates in a briefing with local law enforcement officials; meets with families of the victims of the First Baptist Church shooting; delivers remarks at a prayer vigil for the victims of the First Baptist Church shooting.

US Senate: 9:45 AM Senate Commerce, Science, & Transportation Committee Executive Session – Executive Session, with agenda including ‘S. 1693, Stop Enabling Sex Traffickers Act of 2017’ and ‘S. 1668, A bill to rename a waterway in the State of New York as the ‘Joseph Sanford Jr. Channel’, and the nominations of Dana Baiocco to be a Consumer Product Safety Commission Commissioner, James Bridenstine to be NASA Administrator, Neil Jacobs and Nazakhtar Nikakhtar to be Assistant Secretaries of Commerce, Bruce Landsberg to be a National Transportation Safety Board member, Raymond Martinez to be Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration Administrator, Diana Furchtgott-Roth to be Assistant Secretary of Transportation, and Leon Westmoreland to be an Amtrak Board of Directors member Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 106, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

10:00 AM Current and former Equifax and Yahoo! officials testify to Senate Commerce Committee on consumer data security – Hearing on ‘Protecting Consumers in the Era of Major Data Breaches’, with testimony from Equifax Interim CEO Paulino do Rego Barros Jr.; former Equifax CEO Richard Smith; former Yahoo! CEO Marissa Mayer; Verizon Communications Deputy General Counsel and Chief Privacy Officer Karen Zacharia; and Entrust Datacard Corporation President and CEO Todd Wilkinson * Follows 2013 data breach at Yahoo! that affected 3 billion user accounts and another earlier this year at Equifax that hit around 145 million people Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 106, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on impacts of lawsuit abuse – Hearing on ‘The Impact of Lawsuit Abuse on American Small Businesses and Job Creators’, with testimony from National Federation of Independent Business Small Business Legal Center Senior Executive Counsel Elizabeth Milito; Yeshiva University Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law Professor Myriam Gilles; and Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom partner John Beisner (on behalf of U.S. Chamber of Commerce Institute for Legal Reform) Location: Rm 226, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee considers Kirstjen Nielsen to be DHS secretary – Nominations hearing considers Kirstjen Nielsen to be Secretary of Homeland Security * President Donald Trump announced the nomination of the Principal Deputy White House Chief of Staff last month Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 342, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

10:00 AM Senate Environment Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Kathleen Hartnett White to be a Council on Environmental Quality member; and Andrew Wheeler to be Environmental Protection Agency Deputy Administrator Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

2:30 PM Senate Indian Affairs Committee legislative hearing – Legislative hearing on ‘S. 1400 Safeguarding Tribal Objects of Patrimony Act of 2017’ and ‘S. 465 Independent Outside Audit of the Indian Health Service Act of 2017’, with testimony from Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Indian Affairs John Tahsuda III; Indian Health Service Deputy Director for Management Operations Elizabeth Fowler; Sisseton Wahpeton Oyate of the Lake Traverse Reservation Chairman Dave Flute; and Pueblo of Acoma, NM, Governor Kurt Riley Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

3:00 PM U.S. ambassador to the U.N. briefs Senate Foreign Relations Committee – Closed briefing on ‘A Readout Of Ambassador Haley’s Recent Trip To Africa’, given by U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations Amb. Nikki Haley Location: U.S. Capitol, S-116, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

3:00 PM POW/MIA commemorative chair unveiled on Capitol Hill – Commemorative chair unveiled and dedicated in the U.S. Capitol’s Emancipation Hall in honor of U.S. prisoners of war and the tens of thousands of service members missing in action. Participants include House Speaker Paul Ryan, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, Democrats Sen. Elizabeth Warren and Rep. Stephen Lynch, and veterans’ advocacy groups Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, Emancipation Hall, Washington, DC www.speaker.gov <https://twitter.com/SpeakerRyan>

US House: 10:00 AM House Science subcommittees joint hearing on geoengineering –

Environment Subcommittee and Energy Subcommittee joint hearing on 'Geoengineering: Innovation, Research, and Technology', with testimony from Pacific Northwest National Laboratory Chief Scientist for Climate Science Dr Phil Rasch; Niskanen Center Director of Climate Policy Dr Joseph Majkut; Cornell University Senior Research Associate Dr Douglas MacMartin; and University of Washington Joint Institute for the Study of the Atmosphere and Ocean Marine Cloud Brightening Project Principal Director Kelly Wanser Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2318, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM House Foreign Affairs subcommittees joint hearing on Afghanistan and Pakistan – Middle East and North Africa Subcommittee and Asia and the Pacific Subcommittee joint hearing on 'The President's Plan for Afghanistan and Pakistan: Objectives and Resources', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of State and Acting U.S. Special Representative for Afghanistan and Pakistan Alice Wells; and USAID Office of Afghanistan and Pakistan Affairs Administrator's Assistant Gregory Huger Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

10:00 AM House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on the international financial institutions – Monetary Policy and Trade Subcommittee hearing on 'Administration Priorities for the International Financial Institutions', with testimony from Under Secretary of the Treasury for International Affairs David Malpass Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM House Veterans' Affairs Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H.R. 4242, the VA Care in the Community Act' and 'H.R. 4243, the VA Asset and Infrastructure Review (AIR) Act of 2017' Location: Cannon House Office Building, Rm 334, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

10:00 AM Health Subcommittee hearing on 'MACRA and Alternative Payment Models: Developing Options for Value-based Care' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Education and Workforce subcommittees joint hearing on impacts of opioids – Early Childhood, Elementary, and Secondary Education Subcommittee and Higher Education and Workforce Development Subcommittee joint hearing on 'Close to Home: How Opioids are Impacting Communities' Location: Rm 2175, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

10:00 AM House Government Reform subcommittee hearing on moving the U.S. Embassy in Israel to Jerusalem – National Security Subcommittee hearing on 'Moving the American Embassy in Israel to Jerusalem: Challenges and Opportunities', with testimony from American Enterprise Institute Senior Fellow John Bolton; Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs President Dore Gold; Northwestern University Professor of Law Eugene Kontorovich; Zionist Organization of America President Morton Klein; and Israel Policy Forum Policy Director Dr Michael Koplow Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2167, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

10:00 AM POSTPONED: House Oversight subcommittees joint hearing on cybersecurity of voting machines – POSTPONED: Information Technology Subcommittee and Intergovernmental Affairs Subcommittee joint hearing on 'Cybersecurity of Voting Machines' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2154, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources Committee markup hearing concludes – Markup hearing concludes on 'H.R. 995, 21st Century Respect Act', 'H.R. 1532, Poarch Band of Creek Indians Land Reaffirmation Act', 'H.R. 1800, To direct the Secretary of Agriculture to transfer certain Federal land to facilitate scientific research supporting Federal space and defense programs', 'H.R. 2504, To ensure fair treatment in licensing requirements for the export of certain echinoderms', 'H.R. 2907, Planning for American Energy Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3469, To designate the bridge located in Blount County, Tennessee, on the Foothills Parkway (commonly known as 'Bridge 2') as the 'Dean Stone Bridge', 'H.R. 3905, Minnesota's Economic Rights in the Superior National Forest Act', 'H.R. 4239, Strengthening the Economy with Critical Untapped Resources to Expand American Energy Act' ('SECURE American Energy Act'), and 'S. 140, To amend the White Mountain Apache Tribe Water Rights Quantification Act of 2010 to clarify the use of amounts in the WMAT Settlement Fund' * Began yesterday Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1324, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:15 AM Markup hearing on 'H.R. 3989, USA Liberty Act' and 'H.R. 170, Protect and Grow American Jobs Act' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2141, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

10:30 AM TSA Administrator Pecoske testifies to House Homeland Security Committee –

Hearing on 'Preventing the Next Attack: TSA's Role in Keeping Our Transportation Systems Secure', with testimony from Transportation Security Administration Administrator Vice Adm. (Ret.) David Pekoske Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, HVC-210, Washington, DC homeland.house.gov <https://twitter.com/HouseHomeland>

10:30 AM House Military Veterans Caucus event on the benefits of assistance dogs for vets – House Military Veterans Caucus, with Canine Companions for Independence, hosts event on the benefits of assistance dogs for veterans, including a demonstration of the commands the dogs can perform specific to individuals living with post-traumatic stress disorder. Participants include Caucus Co-Chairs bipartisan Reps. Mike Thompson, Gus Bilirakis, Collin Peterson, and Tom Rooney, Canine Companions for Independence CEO Paul Mundell, Staff Sgt. (Ret.) Charlie Linville and his assistance dog Devon, Department of Veterans Affairs Center for Compassionate Innovation Health Systems Specialist Heather Luper, and other Canine Companions trainers and assistance dogs Location: Cannon House Office Building, Rm 340, Washington, DC
<http://mikethompson.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/RepThompson>

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee hearing on SBA Office of Veterans Business Development – Hearing on 'Hiring More Heroes: A Review of SBA's Office of Veterans Business Development', with testimony from Small Business Administration Associate Administrator for Veterans Business Development Barbara Carson Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2360, Washington, DC <http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

12:00 PM House expected to vote on Hydropower Policy Modernization Act – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include completion of consideration of 'H.R. 3043 – Hydropower Policy Modernization Act of 2017', and beginning consideration of 'H.R. 2201 – Micro Offering Safe Harbor Act' Location: Washington, DC
<http://www.house.gov/>

2:00 PM House Veterans' Affairs subcommittee hearing on the interagency transition assistance program – Economic Opportunity Subcommittee oversight hearing on 'A Review of the Interagency Transition Assistance Program and the Need for Enhanced Outcome Measurements' Location: Cannon House Office Building, Rm 334, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on the Kingpin Designation Act – Western Hemisphere Subcommittee hearing on 'Examining the Effectiveness of the Kingpin Designation Act in the Western Hemisphere', with testimony from former Drug Enforcement Administration Office of Financial Operations Chief Donald Semesky Jr.; former Department of Justice prosecutor David Hall; Foundation for Defense of Democracies Center on Sanctions and Illicit Finance Senior Fellow Dr Emanuele Ottolenghi; and Wilson Center Latin American Program Deputy Director Eric Olson Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC
<http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

2:00 PM House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on safeguarding the U.S. financial system – Terrorism and Illicit Finance Subcommittee hearing on 'Financial Intelligence and Enforcement: Treasury's Role in Safeguarding the American Financial System', with testimony from Under Secretary of the Treasury for Terrorism and Financial Intelligence Sigal Mandelker Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC
<http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

3:00 PM POW/MIA commemorative chair unveiled on Capitol Hill – Commemorative chair unveiled and dedicated in the U.S. Capitol's Emancipation Hall in honor of U.S. prisoners of war and the tens of thousands of service members missing in action. Participants include House Speaker Paul Ryan, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, Democrats Sen. Elizabeth Warren and Rep. Stephen Lynch, and veterans' advocacy groups Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, Emancipation Hall, Washington, DC www.speaker.gov
<https://twitter.com/SpeakerRyan>

6:00 PM 'The US and Southeast Asia on the Eve of President Trump's Visit' event – 'The US and Southeast Asia on the Eve of President Trump's Visit' event, hosted by the East West Center in Washington and the Congressional Caucus on ASEAN, highlighting the current status of U.S.-ASEAN relations and cooperation in the fields of security, trade, and business during President Donald Trump's first visit to the Asia-Pacific region. Speakers include Caucus Co-Chair Democratic Rep. Joaquin Castro, Singapore Ambassador to the U.S. Amb. Ashok Mirpuri, former Assistant Secretary of Defense for Asian and Pacific Security Affairs David Shear, US-ASEAN Business Council Vice President for Policy Marc Mealy, Human Rights Watch Asia Advocacy Director John Sifton, former Assistant U.S. Trade Representative for Southeast Asia and the Pacific Barbara Weisel, and East-West Center Director Dr Satu Limaye Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2168, Washington, DC www.eastwestcenter.org <https://twitter.com/EastWestCenter>

Other: 9:00 AM Ivorian President Ouattara speaks at CSIS – Ivorian President Alassane Ouattara speaks at Center for Strategic and International Studies conference on Cote D'Ivoire's first compact with the Millennium Challenge Corporation and the country's economic, political, and security outlook. Other speakers include MCC Acting CEO Jonathan Nash, Ivorian President's Secretary General Patrick Achi and Special Advisor Abdourahmane Cisse, Corporate Council on Africa President and CEO Florizelle Liser, Entrepreneurial Solutions Partners West Africa Manager Teddy Roux, independent political analyst Edwige Depagne-Sorgho, and Bechtel Corporation Global Head of Sustainability Tam Robert Nguyen Location: Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1616 Rhode Island Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

9:30 AM GOP Sen. Cory Gardner keynotes Heritage Foundation event on the U.S. and South Korea – The Trump Administration and the Future of the ROK-U.S. Alliance' Heritage Foundation discussion, with keynote from Republican Sen. Cory Gardner and panelists including Center for a New American Security Asia-Pacific Security Program Senior Advisor and Senior Director Patrick Cronin, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace Asia Program Senior Fellow James Schoff, Korea Institute for Defense Analyses Center for Security and Strategy Director Park Chang-kwoun, Woodrow Wilson International Center Asia Program Director Abraham Denmark, South Korea Ewha Womans University's Park Ihn-hwi, Korea Institute for Defense Analyses Research Fellow Kim Jin-a, Brookings Institution Korea Studies Chair Jung H. Pak, Former South Korea Chairman of the Joint Chief of Staff Gen. (Ret.) Jung Seung-jo, and Korea Institute for Defense Analyses Senior Research Fellow Cho Nam-hoon Location: Heritage Foundation, 214 Massachusetts Ave NE, Washington, DC www.heritage.org <https://twitter.com/Heritage>

11:00 AM Agriculture Secretary Perdue honors USDA vets – Secretary of Agriculture Sonny Perdue recognizes the contributions of veterans serving throughout the Department, and highlights upcoming USDA resources for vets, in honor of Veterans Day * He holds a press gaggle immediately following the observance Location: U.S. Department of Agriculture, 1400 Jefferson Dr SW, Washington, DC www.usda.gov <https://twitter.com/USDA>

7:00 PM Mercy Corps Humanitarian Hero Award ceremony – Mercy Corps Humanitarian Hero Award ceremony, honoring Democratic Sen. Jeff Merkley and Republican Sen. Todd Young Location: The Whittemore House, 1526 New Hampshire Ave NW, Washington, DC www.mercycorps.org <https://twitter.com/mercy Corps>

7:00 PM Got Your 6 Storytellers event in DC – Got Your 6 hosts its Washington, DC Storytellers program, an annual event that celebrates 'the accomplishments and inspirational stories of the nation's veterans.' Speakers include Republican Reps. Phil Roe and Brad Wenstrup, and Democratic Rep. Tim Walz Location: Capitol Hill, Washington, DC <http://www.gotyoursix.org/> #VetInspired

Annual CAPG Colloquium – CAPG Colloquium, 'Healthcare Reform: The Saga Continues', with keynote speakers including CAPG President and CEO Donald Crane, Democratic Sen. Ron Wyden, Republican Reps. Greg Walden and Pat Tiberi, Anthem Chairman, President and CEO Joseph Swedish, and National Association of Medicaid Directors Executive Director Matt Salo Location: Hyatt Regency Washington on Capitol Hill, 400 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, Washington, DC <http://www.capg.org/> <https://twitter.com/CAPGVoice>

SINET Showcase – SINET Showcase event – 'Highlighting and Advancing Innovation', featuring representatives from both public and private sectors including the State Department, Air Force, Army, Postal Service, Department of Defense, Department of Homeland Security, Monsanto, National Institute of Standards and Technology, Google, VISA, BAE Systems, JPMorgan Chase and Co., Sony Group, SEI, National IT Federal Reserve, and Verizon Location: The National Press Club, 529 14th Street NW, Washington, DC www.security-innovation.org <https://twitter.com/SINETconnection>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: "We have so much to get to, starting as we often do with President Trump, who has been in Asia for four days. Still no mushroom cloud, so that's a positive."

Jimmy Kimmel: "Tomorrow is the one-year anniversary of Donald Trump winning the election. Isn't it crazy to think we're already 80 percent of the way through this presidency?"

Jimmy Kimmel: "A lot of people say Trump hasn't accomplished anything. That's unfair. Because since this time last year, he's played golf more than 70 times, and that's a record, folks."

Stephen Colbert: "According to the military newspaper 'Stars & Stripes,' Trump had tacos, a burrito, and curly fries, which shows, I think, just how far we've come. Because just 10 years ago, fries, like everything in the military, had to be straight."

Stephen Colbert: "Of course, it's tough for Trump to be overseas, because that's where all the foreigners are."

James Corden: "Melania Trump joined the first lady of Japan, Akie Abe, in a fourth-grade calligraphy lesson during a visit to a Tokyo school. ... At one point during the calligraphy lesson, Melania Trump leaned over to Akie Abe and asked for help. After Akie showed her how to use the brush, Melania was like, 'No, I mean help me!'"

Trevor Noah: "Someone assaulted a sitting US senator. That's crazy. What's even crazier is that after only one night in jail, the man was released. Like, he broke a senator's ribs and he's already out. I'm going to take a shot in the dark and say that he's white."

Seth Meyers: "Former White House Chief Strategist Steve Bannon said this weekend that he tries to be bad cop to President Trump's good cop. Wow. Imagine what a bad cop you have to be for Donald Trump to be your good cop."

Seth Meyers: "According to a CNN poll, President Trump's approval rating has reached a new low of 36 percent. He's so unpopular, pretty soon it's just going to be Fox & Friend."

Conan O'Brien: "Did you know this? President Trump's approval rating among African-Americans is now at 4 percent. I know what you're thinking. When did it go up?"

Conan O'Brien: "Things not going too well for Trump. This week, a federal judge banned his former campaign manager Paul Manafort from leaving the country. He can't leave the country. So now, if Manafort wants to meet with Russians, he'll be forced to go to any night club in Manhattan."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, November 15, 2017
Date: Wednesday, November 15, 2017 6:23:52 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 2017 6:00 AM EST

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Idaho Statesman: Idaho Sen. Risch Aide Named To Interior Water, Science Job.
- Morning Consult: Senate Minority Whip To Meet With Zinke After Hold On Interior Nominees.
- Associated Press: Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch's Office Says President Donald Trump Is Expected To Significantly Downsize Two Sprawling Utah National Monuments.
- Huffington Post: Whistleblower Sues Interior Department For Information On Staff Shuffle.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Trump Appointee To Bureau Of Indian Affairs Resigns After Interior's IG Slams The Loan Program He Oversaw.

- Secretary Ryan Zinke Among Those Excited To Take Part In #RockYourMocs This Year.
- Oglala Sioux Tribe Working To Protect Children.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Associated Press: Videos Lead Defense Opening In Bundy Standoff Trial In Vegas.
- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Trump's Team May Move The Bureau Of Land Management Headquarters To Salt Lake City.
- Associated Press: Judge Weighs Motion To Dismiss Twin Metals Mining Lawsuit.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Palm Beach (FL) Post: Group To Sue Trump Administration For Not Protecting Florida Lizard.
- WPXI-TV Mobile (AL): Gov. Ivey Announces $33 Million For Restoration And Conservation Projects In Alabama.
- Gillette (WY) News Record: Environmental Groups Push Back On Cheney Amendment Allowing Birds To Be Killed; Industry Supportive.
- Reuters: Jane Goodall Urges U.S. Senate To Halt Quest For Arctic Refuge Oil.

National Park Service

- Fredericksburg (VA) Free Lance-Star: Culpeper Town Council Opposes Shenandoah Rate Increase.
- Peninsula (WA) Daily News: Clallam Commissioners Readying Letter To National Park Service Over Fee Hike.
- Pittsburgh Tribune-Review: Flight 93 Tower Of Voices To Be Built By Altoona Contractor.
- Washington Business Journal: Here's What It Costs To Maintain An Empty RFK Stadium.
- Washington Post: Lawmakers Ask National Park Service To Rethink Plan To Ban Recreation On The Mall.
- KTVZ-TV Bend (OR): Redmond Downtown Historic District Added To National Register.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- St. Croix Source: US Education Secretary Visits CAHS, UVI.
- St. Croix Source: Mapp, Senators To Visit D.C. To Discuss V.I.'s Needs With Congress.
- Daily Caller: Virgin Islands GOP Begs Congress Not To Give Them 'Blank Checks' For Hurricane Repairs.
- Guam Daily Post: Status Quo 'Unacceptable'; Governor Prefers Statehood.
- Guam Daily Post: Reviving Seafaring Traditions.

US Geological Survey

- Greenwire: USGS Science Center In Va. Set To Close.
- San Francisco Chronicle: More Small Quakes Rattle Monterey County.

Top National News

- Associated Press: Trump Touts "Tremendously Successful" Asia Trip.
- CBS: Sessions Says He Didn't Lie To Congress About Russian Contacts With Trump Campaign.
- CBS: Senate GOP Adding ACA Individual Mandate Repeal To Tax Plan.
- New York Times: Poll: Americans Don't Believe GOP Bill Will Raise Their Wages.
- Politico: As GOP Awaits Trump's Direction On Moore, McConnell Floats Sessions As Write-In Candidate.
- Washington Times: DOJ: Trump Tweets Are Official Statements Of The President.
- Politico: House Narrowly Passes Flood Insurance Overhaul.
- Associated Press: Puerto Rico's Electric Utility Ignored Own Legal Advice On Whitefish Deal.
- Washington Times: Democratic Governors Aided By "Shadow Staff Supplied By Climate Change Advocacy Groups."

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Mrs. May's Tribulations."
 - "Attorney General Jeff Sessions Doesn't Recall."
 - "Torches And Hate On The March In Poland."
- Washington Post.
 - "There Are No Grounds For Special Counsel To Investigate Hillary Clinton."

- "Trump Loves Human Rights – When Convenient."
- "Fix Metro Now. Or Face The Consequences."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "The Roy Moore Mess."
 - "Ruling Out The ABA On Judges."
 - "Venezuela Goes Bust."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Idaho Sen. Risch Aide Named To Interior Water, Science Job.

The Idaho Statesman (11/14, Barker) "Letters from the West" blog reports Timothy R. Petty, an aide to Idaho Republican Sen. Jim Risch, was appointed Monday as the Interior assistant secretary overseeing the Bureau of Reclamation and the US Geological Survey. Petty, a hydrologist, "has a doctorate from the University of Alaska-Fairbanks" and "served Risch as deputy legislative director and legislative assistant on issues of water, natural resources, environment, science, technology and telecommunications and space." Petty previously served as acting assistant Interior secretary and deputy assistant secretary for water and science under President George W. Bush.

Senate Minority Whip To Meet With Zinke After Hold On Interior Nominees.

Morning Consult (11/14, Gheorghiu) reports Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke will meet with a group of Democratic senators led by Illinois Sen. Dick Durbin Tuesday "about his recommendations to President Trump to reduce the size of certain national monuments, according to a Senate aide." Zinke agreed to Durbin's request for a meeting in response to a public letter last week "announcing a hold on four Interior Department nominees."

Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch's Office Says President Donald Trump Is Expected To Significantly Downsize Two Sprawling Utah National Monuments.

The AP (11/14, Price) reports in continuing coverage that Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch's office said Tuesday that the Trump Administration "is expected to significantly downsize two sprawling Utah national monuments that protect more than 3 million acres of the state's red rock country." In his testimony before a Utah legislative public lands committee, Ron Dean, Hatch's Central and Eastern Utah Director, "testified...that he expects Bears Ears National Monument will be cut by at least 80 percent of its current size, while Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument will be reduced by about 40 percent to 60 percent." Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, who visited both monuments in May, "told The Salt Lake Tribune on Monday that he thinks Bears Ears will end up larger than two existing national parks in Utah, keeping the monument at least 180,000 acres (728 square kilometers)."

Whistleblower Sues Interior Department For Information On Staff Shuffle.

The Huffington Post (11/14, D'Angelo) reports Joel Clement, a "scientist-turned-whistleblower who resigned from the Interior Department in October citing" Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's "poor leadership" and "resume of failure" is suing the agency to "obtain information concerning his own reassignment and that of several of his former colleagues." Clement alleged that in July "he was transferred to a position for which he had no qualifications because he warned about the dangers of climate change." The department's inspector general also is "investigating the job shifts to determine whether they were done legally."

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Trump Appointee To Bureau Of Indian Affairs Resigns After Interior's IG Slams The Loan Program He Oversaw.

The Washington Post (11/14, Eilperin) reports Gavin Clarkson, a senior Bureau of Indian Affairs official appointed by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke in June, "resigned Monday after the department's inspector general issued a scathing report on the loan program he oversaw." The IG report found the BIA's division of capital investment (DCI), which falls under its Office of Indian Energy and Economic Development (IEED), "did not have adequate controls in place and managed the [loan program] with limited oversight from IEED, creating unnecessary risk for an already risky program." Prior to serving in the Trump Administration, "Clarkson served as a consultant for tribes that received loans under the program, including a controversial $22.5 million loan for the Lower Brule Sioux Tribe that helped finance the purchase of a brokerage firm that eventually went under."

Secretary Ryan Zinke Among Those Excited To Take Part In #RockYourMocs This Year.

The Nation Sun News (11/14) reports Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke is participating in "#RockYourMocs week." Zinke and "thousands across the nation are expressing Native pride by wearing moccasins to work, to school and just about everywhere." Zinke said he "plans to sport a pair of Crow moccasins."

Oglala Sioux Tribe Working To Protect Children.

KOTA-TV Rapid City, SD (11/14, Huntington) reports Oglala Sioux tribal leaders have brought together stakeholders for its Child Protective Services "for a three day summit in Rapid City to brainstorm solutions." The Pine Ridge CPS reached a state where the tribal council considered in April "turning over the program to state control." OST Vice President Darla Black said, "When I met with the employees, they were neglected." He adds, "Bottom line? The program's neglected. They didn't have vehicles, they're underfunded." Amber Sierra, a Bureau of Indian Affairs employee who oversees the contract the bureau has with the tribe for Child Protective services, said, "We look at our children and my children and the grandchildren and the kids that we protect every day and we have to decide, 'How do want them to grow up?'"

Bureau Of Land Management

Videos Lead Defense Opening In Bundy Standoff Trial In Vegas.

The AP (11/14, Ritter) reports that on Tuesday, a federal grand jury "got a first look...at videos of confrontations involving armed federal agents and Bundy family members that rancher Cliven Bundy's lawyer said provided a catalyst for an April 2014 gunpoint standoff and a trial now underway in Las Vegas." The AP says "one clip that attorney Bret Whipple said spread widely on the internet showed Bundy's sister, Margaret Huston, thrown to the ground by a federal agent. ... Another clip showed Bundy's son, David Bundy, hauled to the ground and arrested on the shoulder of a state highway by two agents who approached him for taking photos of armed men with guns on a ridge top near the Bundy ranch."

The Los Angeles Times (11/14, Montero) reports that "the high-profile case is expected to push into 2018 as federal prosecutors aim to prove the Bundy family and militia leader [Ryan] Payne tried to stop the federal government from seizing cattle that were grazing on public land by threatening a federal officer, carrying and using a firearm and engaging in a conspiracy." Whipple also "argued that Bundy had tried to pay the state of Nevada the grazing fees because he didn't recognize BLM sovereignty over grazing land, and he said the family held water rights in the areas in which the cattle were grazing."

Trump's Team May Move The Bureau Of Land Management Headquarters To Salt Lake City.

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (11/14, Burr) reports Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke told The Salt Lake Tribune that he is considering moving Bureau of Land Management headquarters out West, perhaps Salt Lake City or Denver. Zinke told the newspaper, "We're certainly looking at where would be the right place," noting that the "preponderance of activity is in the West" for BLM's activities. Colorado Republicans Sen. Cory Gardner and Rep. Scott Tipton "legislation in May that would authorize moving the BLM's headquarters to a Western state."

Judge Weighs Motion To Dismiss Twin Metals Mining Lawsuit.

The AP (11/14) reports US lawyers “asked a federal judge Tuesday to dismiss a lawsuit by developers of the proposed Twin Metals copper-nickel mine who are seeking to regain their mineral rights leases, arguing that their dispute belongs in a different court.” Twin Metals sued to get leases back after the Obama administration last December declined to renew long-standing leases the company needs for the underground mine it wants to build in northeastern Minnesota. The Bureau of Land Management “first issued the leases in 1966 to a predecessor of Twin Metals and renewed them in 1989 and 2004. But by the time Twin Metals sought another renewal in 2012, strong opposition had developed to copper-nickel mining in northeastern Minnesota, primarily because of concerns about the pristine Boundary Waters.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

Group To Sue Trump Administration For Not Protecting Florida Lizard.

The Palm Beach \(FL\) Post (11/14, Todaro) reports the Center for Biological Diversity on Monday “filed a notice of its intent to sue the Trump administration for not protecting a lizard that lives distinctly in the Florida Keys.” The group said that the US Fish and Wildlife Service denied requests to protect the Florida Keys mole skink in October in opposition to the Endangered Species Act. The Center for Biological Diversity “first requested protection of the mole skink in 2010, and in 2015 the Fish and Wildlife Service concluded that the lizard might warrant for protection under the Endangered Species Act’s, the Miami Herald reports.”

Gov. Ivey Announces $33 Million For Restoration And Conservation Projects In Alabama.

WPMI-TV Mobile, AL (11/14) reports Alabama Gov. Kay Ivey announced Tuesday the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation has approved over $33.5 million for five new projects and amendments to two existing projects “which focus on the restoration and conservation of Alabama’s natural resources.” Ivey said, “This additional $33 million in funding for Alabama from the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation will further strengthen our long-term recovery efforts along the Gulf Coast. The commitment of our local, state, and federal partners to ensure the long-term sustainability of our coastal areas is greatly appreciated.” The settlement from BP and Transocean for their part in the Deepwater Horizon Spill “directs a total of $2.54 billion to NFWF to establish a Gulf Environmental Benefit Fund (GEBF) over a five-year period to support ecological projects in all five Gulf States. A total of $356 million will be paid into the GEBF for conservation projects dedicated to the State of Alabama.”

Environmental Groups Push Back On Cheney Amendment Allowing Birds To Be Killed; Industry Supportive.

The Gillette \(WY\) News Record (11/14, Richards) reports conservationists are fighting back against an amendment proposed by US Rep. Liz Cheney’s (R-WY) to the Migratory Bird Treaty Act that limits liability for energy companies that accidentally kill “migrating birds, whether by an oil field disposal pit or a solar farm.” In a statement Wednesday, the Audubon Society “pointed to the number of ways industry contributes to bird deaths, including 500,000 to 1 million birds a year killed in oil waste pits and some 175 million birds annually killed by power lines, according to according to U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service estimates.”

Jane Goodall Urges U.S. Senate To Halt Quest For Arctic Refuge Oil.

Reuters (11/14, Gardner) reports primatologist Jane Goodall sent a letter to every US senator Tuesday “urging them to oppose a push in the U.S. Congress to allow oil drilling” in ANWR. According to Reuters, the GOP-led Senate “is trying to open up the 1002 region on the coastal plain of the ANWR, a region inhabited by Gwich’in natives, caribou herds, polar bears and millions of birds that migrate to six of the world’s seven continents.” Goodell wrote in the letter, “If we violate the Arctic Refuge by extracting the oil beneath the land, this will have devastating impact for the Gwich’in people for they depend on the caribou herds to sustain their traditional way of life.” A group of 37 US scientists whose research focuses on Arctic wildlife told senators that drilling in ANWR would be “incompatible with the purposes for which the refuge was established.”

National Park Service

Culpeper Town Council Opposes Shenandoah Rate Increase.

The Fredericksburg \(VA\) Free Lance-Star (11/14, Johnston) reports the Culpeper Town Council unanimously agreed Tuesday evening that increasing the entrance fee to Shenandoah National Park from $25 to $70 for a four-day pass will hurt tourism, but Councilman Jon Russell said the increase might be necessary. Russell "said he had talked to officials at the Department of Interior and learned that Shenandoah National Park has an $11 million maintenance backlog and needs the fee increase to upgrade its almost-90-year-old facilities." However, Councilman Pranas Rimeikis argued, "I am appalled at the idea that the Interior Department is putting [this increase] on the backs of the localities."

Clallam Commissioners Ready Letter To National Park Service Over Fee Hike.

The Peninsula \(WA\) Daily News (11/14, Major) reports Clallam County commissioners are drafting a letter to the National Park Service "urging the federal government to reconsider increasing the entry fee at 17 national parks up to $70." The letter says, "While we would be supportive of increased entrance fees to help bridge the funding gap, we are extremely concerned that the proposed increase to $70 per vehicle is too steep."

Flight 93 Tower Of Voices To Be Built By Altoona Contractor.

The Pittsburgh Tribune-Review (11/14) reports a contractor from Altoona, Leonard S. Fiore, Inc., was awarded the construction contract to build the Flight 93 National Memorial's Tower of Voices, "the final phase of major construction of the Somerset County memorial's original design." According to the Tribune-Review, the tower is a "musical instrument, designed as a visual and audible reminder of the passengers and crew. The shape and orientation of the 93-foot-tall tower are designed to optimize air flow through the tower walls to reach the interior chamber."

Here's What It Costs To Maintain An Empty RFK Stadium.

The Washington Business Journal (11/14, Cooper) reports the District of Columbia paid over $2 million for security and maintenance at Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium last fiscal year, "a dollar amount that will likely be taken into account as the city and Events D.C. decide what's next for the aging edifice." The Department of General Services' maintains RFK, but "Events D.C., the District's sports and conventions authority, manages the facility and books events there." It is "leading an effort to redevelop the RFK campus, but exactly when the main part of the project, the replacement of the stadium itself, would move forward is unclear."

Lawmakers Ask National Park Service To Rethink Plan To Ban Recreation On The Mall.

The Washington Post (11/14, Ruane) reports DC Del. Eleanor Holmes Norton and six other local members of the House of Representatives asked the National Park Service Tuesday to "reconsider its proposal to band recreational activities on the grounds of the Washington Monument." The legislatures also asked NPS to "reconsider its proposed increase in fees for use of its ballfields elsewhere on the Mall and in Rock Creek Park."

Redmond Downtown Historic District Added To National Register.

KTVZ-TV Bend, OR (11/14) reports on its website that the Oregon Parks and Recreation Center said Tuesday the Redmond Downtown Historic District has been added to the National Register of Historic Places. According to KTVZ, the district "embraces the historic commercial core of Redmond, including 43 downtown buildings." Oregon's State Advisory Committee on Historic Preservation "recommended the district's nomination during their June meeting and on October 30, the district was formally listed by the Keeper of the National Register in Washington, D.C."

Office Of Insular Affairs

US Education Secretary Visits CAHS, UVI.

St. Croix Source (11/10, Shimmel) reports Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos "toured Charlotte Amalie High School Wednesday, listening more than she spoke as she met with CAHS Principal Alcede Edwards and his administrative team." A spokesperson for DeVos said her trip to St. Thomas was "part of an assessment tour of U.S. states and territories affected by recent hurricanes – Harvey in Texas and Louisiana, Irma in the Caribbean and Florida and Maria in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands." DeVos said she wanted to see how large the problems were after the hurricanes and what her department would have to do to help. "We know that we are working with many challenges and are dealing with in the interest of getting children back to school and back to a routine and some sense of normalcy," DeVos said.

The Virgin Islands Consortium \(VIR\) (11/8) reports that after the campus tour, DeVos "sat in the midst of C.A.H.S. students and listened as they spoke about their challenges. Seniors voiced their concerns about the connectivity issues prohibiting them from filling out the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA), and juniors inquired about colleges' willingness to assist students from disaster areas." She encouraged the students to remain positive and "she assured them that the U.S. Department of Education would make concessions where it can for students hailing from disaster-stricken areas like the U.S. Virgin Islands." She also described federal assistance as "a process, not an event."

Mapp, Senators To Visit D.C. To Discuss V.I.'s Needs With Congress.

St. Croix Source (11/8) reports Gov. Kenneth Mapp and members of the Virgin Islands Senate will head to Washington, DC, next week to meet with members of Congress and Congressional staffers to discuss federal assistance to help the territory rebuild after two being hit by two category 5 hurricanes. V.I. Delegate to Congress Stacey Plaskett said in his announcement of the trip, "I look forward to testifying alongside him, the governor of Puerto Rico and the resident commissioner of Puerto Rico on 'Hurricane Recovery Efforts in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.'" Plaskett said Mapp will testify before both the Senate and House committees. Plaskett also said Congressional delegations will visit both the V.I. and Puerto Rico "to view the devastation and let our fellow citizens know they are not forgotten."

The Virgin Islands Consortium \(VIR\) (11/8, Gilbert) reports the goal of the V.I. delegation's visit to Washington is "to win Congressional support for the $7.49 billion ask, which follows an assessment of damage sustained during Hurricanes Irma and Maria. By comparison, Puerto Rico's initial estimate of damage was $95 billion."

Virgin Islands GOP Begg Congress Not To Give Them 'Blank Checks' For Hurricane Repairs.

The Daily Caller (11/14, Phippen) reports Republican representatives from the Virgin Islands were in Washington, DC, this week "to push legislators to avoid spending unchecked millions on disaster aid that could lead to waste and corruption." Jevon Williams, a committeeman representing the Virgin Islands in the Republican National Committee, said in a statement, "We are here telling our fellow Republicans in the administration and Congress that strict scrutiny is needed to recover and rebuild our island communities."

Status Quo 'Unacceptable'; Governor Prefers Statehood.

The Guam Daily Post (11/13, Kerrigan) reports Gov. Eddie Calvo said he believes the resolution adopted last week by the UN's Special Political and Decolonization Committee is a "victory on the road to self-determination." Calvo said in an interview with the Guam Daily Post that he did not agree with everyone who testified in favor of the resolution, noting he took exception to remarks by US representative who objected and was quoted as saying that many on Guam preferred the "status quo" over independence or other options. Calvo said, "The status quo is just unacceptable," adding, "I'm an advocate of statehood, personally. But I'm not going to try and influence the Commission on Decolonization."

Reviving Seafaring Traditions.

The Guam Daily Post (11/12, Lujan) reported that the "rebirth of ancient seafaring traditions in the Micronesian region is slowly becoming a new-age reality." The first Okeanos Marianas canoe arrived in Rota earlier this week "after first stopping at its home base in Saipan, and before then, made rounds to several islands throughout the South Pacific." The canoe was expected to depart Rota early Tuesday morning "for a short visit to Guam to pick up lumber for another canoe being built in Saipan." According to the Daily Post, the Okeanos Marianas canoe "ushers in a new era of transportation for the Northern Mariana Islands, combining ancient seafaring traditions with modern, environmentally rooted upgrades."

US Geological Survey

USGS Science Center In Va. Set To Close.

Greenwire (11/14, Streater, Hotakainen) reports a US Geological Survey science center in Reston, Virginia, is closing down. The facility "receives a major sum of its annual funding from the agency's climate program," which is being cut by the Trump Administration.

More Small Quakes Rattle Monterey County.

The San Francisco Chronicle (11/15, Ma) reports a "3.8 magnitude earthquake rattled Monterey County again on Tuesday after a swarm of tremors shook the area Monday, according to the U.S. Geological Survey." The earthquake struck at "5:23 p.m. about 13.6 miles northeast of Gonzales at a depth of 3.3 miles." At 5:15 p.m., a few minutes earlier, "a 3.3 earthquake struck about a half-mile away at a depth of 2.6 miles." Later that evening, at 10:58 p.m. local time, USGS reported "a preliminary magnitude 2.5 earthquake struck near Gilroy, California" at a depth of 5 kilometers.

Top National News

Trump Touts "Tremendously Successful" Asia Trip.

President Trump ended his five-nation tour of Asia on Tuesday as media analyses cast doubt on whether it resulted in many tangible results. The AP (11/14, Lemire, Colvin) reports that Trump hailed the "tremendous amounts of work" on trade and "said nations around the globe have been put on notice that the US will demand improved trading conditions." Speaking to reporters in Manila, Trump said the "fruits of our labor are going to be incredible." Before heading back to Washington, he tweeted, "The United States has to be treated fairly and in a reciprocal fashion. The massive TRADE deficits must go down quickly!"

Bloomberg News (11/14, Sink, Jacobs) reports the President "ended his swing through Asia, hailing progress toward his goal of reducing the US trade deficit." While Trump "spent the bulk of his public appearances emphasizing the need to reduce trade deficits," and announced he will be making a "major statement" when he returns to Washington, he "neither publicly requested nor received specific assurances to address issues like market access and intellectual property theft" during his trip.

USA Today (11/14, Maresca) similarly says that while Trump hailed what he called a "tremendously successful" trip, "some analysts questioned whether the tour was a public relations show with few concrete achievements." Speaking to reporters on Air Force One after departing Manila, the President said, "I think the fruits of our labor are going to be incredible, whether it's security of our nations, whether it's security of the world or whether it's trade." Political expert Richard Javad Heydarian "saw little in the way of tangible accomplishments," and noted that nations announced last week that they would push ahead with the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) without the US. The Los Angeles Times (11/14, Bennett, Bierman) says Trump "demonstrated how willing he was to be flattered and to flatter back, while getting little in return, at least for now."

Politico (11/14, Restuccia) says that "as he flies home to Washington, former diplomats and Asia experts were talking about how China came out ahead – and they noted he is returning to Washington largely empty-handed." The Wall Street Journal (11/14, Bender) says that Trump emphasized his rapport with the leaders who hosted him, and he is returning to the US with a great deal of cordiality with those leaders, but little in the way of concrete outcomes.

A USA Today (11/14, Jackson) analysis says that despite Trump's "sense of triumph," the trip's success "depends on what he – and China, North Korea, South Korea, and Japan, among others – do in the months or years ahead." For example, while Trump "says he's seeking new trade deals with Asian partner...if he does not follow through, those countries may simply decide to trade more among themselves." While Trump "wants to see other countries – especially China – ratchet up economic and diplomatic pressure on North Korea," it is "up to them to decide whether to take action," and there is "no guarantee that pressure from North Korea's neighbors will actually get the rogue nation to give up its nuclear weapons."

A New York Times (11/14, Davis) analysis says that "like most things that Mr. Trump undertakes, the president treated the grueling 12-day trip...as a test of his own personal charisma and stamina, a marathon charm offensive that he vowed would yield quick results. Never mind that it is not at all clear what he actually achieved." The Times says Trump left China "without any concrete agreements on opening Chinese markets," and his "America First" message "fell flat in Vietnam, where other nations moved forward" on the TPP.

Reuters (11/14, Chalmers, Holland) similarly says that for Asian leaders, Trump's "go-it-alone instincts must have represented a puzzling departure from his predecessors, who were – to varying degrees – standard bearers of multilateralism, democracy and human rights." Another New York Times (11/14) story says Trump's "mixed messages left allies unsure of America's staying power and fed a growing sense that China, not the United States, drives the agenda in the region." Trump, the Times adds, "was an often bewildering figure to countries that had already viewed this new president with anxiety."

David Ignatius writes in the Washington Post (11/14) that during the trip, Trump "rarely explained details of U.S. policy" and "mostly asked other leaders for help, lauded their virtues and embraced their worldviews." Trump also "praised himself at nearly every stop, telling reporters on the way home that the trip had been 'tremendously successful' with 'incredible' achievements." Ignatius adds that the trip may "prove to be historic, but probably not in the way he intends. It may signal a U.S. accommodation to rising Chinese power, plus a desire to mend fences with a belligerent Russia – with few evident security gains for the United States." Ignatius concludes, "The Asia trip left me feeling that we're watching an American retreat, accompanied by a shiny brass band."

In an analysis for the Washington Times (11/14, Curl), Joseph Curl takes a much different tone, writing that "by all accounts OVER THERE, the trip was a resounding success," but "the U.S. media tried to play 'gotcha' throughout the trip," such as when "CNN edited a video to make it look like Mr. Trump – the boorish and impatient American – dumped a whole bowl of fish food into a pond while feeding goldfish with Mr. Abe. In fact, Mr. Abe had done the exact same things seconds before." The Times says Trump's trip was a "surprising success," but "you wouldn't know that if you're only source of news is the mainstream media."

After Trump Intervention, UCLA Players Returned To US. The AP (11/14, Harris) reports that three UCLA basketball players detained in China on suspicion of shoplifting "are on a plane back to Los Angeles." Pac-12 Commissioner Larry Scott said Tuesday the matter "has been resolved to the satisfaction of the Chinese authorities." The CBS Evening News (11/14, story 10, 0:20, Mason) said the players "can thank President Trump for getting them out of China," and NBC Nightly News (11/14, story 7, 0:25, Holt) reported that "Trump personally appealed" to Chinese President Xi Jinping on their behalf. The Washington Post (11/14, Denyer, Nakamura, Bontemps) says Trump had asked the Chinese leader to help resolve the case of the three players.

The Los Angeles Times (11/14, Schilken) reports the three players "are not facing any charges in China, according to a person close to the situation," but it "was not clear whether the resolution of the case came as a result of insufficient evidence or a negotiated deal." Politico (11/14, Nelson) says that apart from Trump's intervention, the case "has garnered additional attention because of the involvement of Ball, the younger brother of Los Angeles Lakers star rookie Lonzo Ball." The Washington Times (11/14, Boyer) also reports on the case, as does the Wall Street Journal (11/14, Areddy).

Writing in the Daily Caller (11/14, Greene), Jena Greene criticizes media coverage of the case, saying that "the buzz around these three players has been relatively mum relative to the storm [Ryan] Lochte had to endure" after the incident during the 2016 Olympics. Lochte "urinated on the side of a gas station, and was treated like a war criminal," while the UCLA players "allegedly stole from a store, and haven't gotten a fraction of the coverage." Greene adds, "Misbehavior abroad is apparently only interesting when the perpetrator is white."

WSJournal Analysis: Asian Nations Favor Third Alternative Over US Or China. The Wall Street Journal (11/14, Browne) reports that while the accepted narrative has been that the decline of the US will mean the rise of China, the remaining members of the TPP have moved toward a trade deal that provides a more liberal alternative to China's economic model and favors multilateralism as the US pushes for agreements with individual nations.

WPost Accuses Trump Of Selective Criticism Of Human Rights Abuses. In an editorial, the Washington Post (11/14) contrasts Trump's condemnation of human rights abuses in North Korea with his praise for Chinese President Xi Jinping, "who has just elevated his intolerant and iron-fisted rule to a cult of personality not seen since Mao. Mr. Xi suffocates freedom and throws dissidents into prison." The Post says the trip showed "that human rights and democracy are seen by the president not as universal principles demanding attention everywhere, but as cudgels to be rolled out selectively, to criticize tyrants and rights abusers when convenient, and to be easily ignored elsewhere."

Sessions Says He Didn't Lie To Congress About Russian Contacts With Trump Campaign.

Media coverage of Attorney General Sessions' testimony Tuesday before the House Judiciary Committee is heavy, including nearly eight minutes of reporting on the network news broadcasts and extensive discussion on cable. Nearly all of the coverage is negative in tone, casting doubt on Sessions' recollections about Trump campaign contacts with Russia and portraying him as defensive over suggestions that he had intentionally misled lawmakers.

Justice Correspondent Jeff Pegues said on The CBS Evening News (11/14, story 4, 2:00, Mason) that it "was clear from his opening statement that...Sessions knew" he would face questions about his previous testimony. Sessions: "I will not accept and reject accusations that I have ever lied. That is a lie." Pegues: "But when committee Democrats started questioning him, he was not so certain." Sessions: "I don't recall. I don't believe so. I don't know." USA Today (11/14, Kelly) reports that "many of the questions" during Sessions' five and a half hours of testimony "focused on seemingly inconsistent statements that Sessions has made about his knowledge of the Trump campaign's contact with Russian officials."

The Washington Post (11/13, Zapotosky, Horwitz) reports that Sessions "again revised his account of what he knew about the Trump campaign's dealings with Russians," telling the panel that "he now remembered adviser George Papadopoulos saying in March 2016 that he knew people who might be able to help arrange a Trump-Putin meeting." Pete Williams reported on NBC Nightly News (11/14, story 5, 2:10, Holt) reported that in a "revision from Sessions' previous testimony," the Attorney General "said he now does remember meeting" Papadopoulos. He "says news reports about that meeting refreshed his memory." Sessions: "I don't think it's right to accuse me of doing something wrong. I had no participation in any wrongdoing with regard to influence in this campaign improperly."

Senior justice correspondent Pierre Thomas said on ABC World News Tonight (11/14, story 3, 3:45, Muir) that while Sessions "said he did not remember details of the meeting, he says he does remember what he told Papadopoulos," and Politico (11/14, Gerstein, Cheney) reports that "Sessions said that despite his lack of clarity on what transpired at the March 2016 meeting, he believes he rejected the suggested meeting with Putin." Sessions said, "I believe that I wanted to make clear to him that he was not authorized to represent the campaign with the Russian government, or any other foreign government, for that matter. ... But I did not recall this event, which occurred 18 months before my testimony of a few weeks ago, and would gladly have reported it."

The AP (11/14, Tucker, Gurman) says Sessions "displayed a hazy memory of the Trump campaign's discussions about and dealings with Russians in the 2016 election, denying he ever lied to Congress about those contacts but blaming the chaos of the race for fogging his recollections." Sessions "strongly disputed allegations that he was not truthful in earlier testimony about Trump campaign contacts with Russian officials," saying, "I will not accept and reject accusations that I have ever lied."

The Wall Street Journal (11/14, Viswanatha, Tau) reports that some Democrats have said that revelations of interactions between Papadopoulos and Carter Page with Russia raise questions of whether Sessions told the truth when he denied knowing of any such contacts. However, the Washington Free Beacon (11/14, Crabtree) says Sessions "vehemently defended himself," and the Los Angeles Times (11/14, Decker) says Sessions "angrily denounced accusations that he had intentionally misled members of Congress about any Russian interference in the presidential campaign," while Bloomberg News (11/14, Strohm, House) reports that Sessions "denied he lied or misled Congress...saying he simply forgot" about the meeting.

Reuters (11/14, Lynch, Strobel) reports that while Sessions' acknowledgment that "he was aware of contact between Donald Trump's election campaign and Russian intermediaries" did not "reveal any new link between the Trump team and Russia," it was "another example of the top U.S. law enforcement official offering a different version of events as lawmakers try to work out if the Trump campaign colluded with Russia in the 2016 election."

The Washington Times (11/14, Noble) reports that committee Democrats "pushed the attorney general further, asking whether in light of the disclosures, Mr. Sessions wanted to change prior testimony he gave in which he said he had no contact with Russian officials about the Trump campaign." Reading from a statement, Sessions said, "I stand by this testimony about the intelligence committee. ... I have never met with or had any conversations with any Russians or any foreign official concerning any interference with the campaign or election in the U.S. Further I have no knowledge of any such conversations by anyone connected to the Trump campaign." The New York Times (11/14, Apuzzo, Fandos) says while Sessions "was supposed to be an influential force in the administration," he "has twice amended his sworn testimony, creating a distraction for the White House and renewing questions about whether the Trump administration is concealing its connections with Russia." Democrats, the Times adds, criticized him "for what they said was repeatedly making inaccurate statements."

Rep. David Cicilline said on CNN's Situation Room (11/14), "Throughout the hearing, the Attorney General said on many, many occasions 'I just don't recall.' He said his testimony remained the same, but of course, he gave very different testimony to the Senate committee. And then he refused to answer questions as we probed more about the Comey firing and about Mr. Papadopoulos saying those involved conversations with the Executive Branch and I don't want to answer them or I can't answer them. ... I think the principal lesson that we learned from this hearing is that the independence of the Attorney General has been significantly undermined and he did nothing today to restore confidence in the members of the committee and the American people that the Justice Department remains independent from the Executive Branch." Sen. Ed Markey said on CNN's Situation Room (11/14), "I think what's happening with the Attorney General and his memory is it seems to be improved every time that there is a leak about Russian contacts with the Trump campaign and then almost invariably the Attorney General remembers. And I think that's been a constant pattern throughout the course of this past year with the Attorney General in the same way that Donald Trump Jr. is constantly being reminded of things that happened that he forgot to disclose as well with regard to his contacts with those that might have been trying to compromise the campaign."

House Oversight Committee Chairman Trey Gowdy said on Fox News The Story (11/14), "I don't think [Sessions] persuaded the committee, because I don't think the committee is very open-minded. I think his audience was the American people, and I think they understand sometimes it's hard to recall the details of conversations from 12 months ago. Ironically, in every courtroom across the country, we have this concept called a 'refresh recollection' where a witness forgets something and then the lawyer will hand them a document or a photo that refreshes their recollection. We don't do that in Congress. We want to play 'got you,' and if you don't remember a room that you were in 12 months ago or a person you met outside of a restaurant, we think we have a perjury case. So, I don't think anybody's mind was changed because I don't think anybody went with an open mind."

Charles Hurt of the Washington Times said on Fox News' Special Report (11/14), "As far as the questions from the Democrats, questioning about the varying statements, if you go back to the original statements where they are claiming he misled them or he lied, there were exchanges between Senators Al Franken and Pat Leahy. Those questions were specifically asked in terms of, 'Were you part of this conspiracy to conspire with Russia to rig the election?' Each of those questions, he answered factually correctly at the time. Now it's all theatrics. They are just trying to make him look bad in trying to sort of do everything they can to associate the Trump campaign with Russia."

Sessions Rejects Jordan's Call For Special Counsel To Investigate Clinton. Reports also highlight a testy exchange with Rep. Jim Jordan during which Sessions rebuffed Jordan's call for a special counsel to investigate Hillary Clinton, saying such a move would require "a factual basis that meets the standard of a special counsel." The CBS Evening News (11/14, story 4, 2:00, Mason) reported that Republican lawmakers "pressed Sessions to investigate Hillary Clinton over a controversial uranium deal involving a Russian company and her handling of emails." Bloomberg News (11/14, Farrell) reports that Sessions was "pressed" to "commit to a probe into the Obama administration," but responded with "a blunt retort: Not yet." When "confronted" with "a list of allegations" by Jordan, who "said it looks like there's more than enough to proceed," Sessions said, "'Looks like' is not enough of a basis to appoint a special counsel." During what The Hill (11/14, Williams) describes as a "heated exchange" with Jordan, Sessions said that it would require "a factual basis that meets the standard of a special counsel" for the Justice Department to appoint one. Sessions added, "We will use the proper standards and that's the only thing I can tell you, Mr. Jordan. ... You can have your idea, but sometimes we have to study what the facts are and to evaluate whether it meets the standards it requires."

Jordan said on Fox News' Hannity (11/14), "On one hand, he said he was not recused from that. On the other hand, he said maybe I would have to check to see if I'm supposed to be recused from that. [Rep. Matt] Gaetz asked him those questions, and within the same five minutes, he said two different things." Gaetz said on Fox News' Hannity (11/14) that "we had a lack of clarity from the Attorney General, and just like you, are frustrated. We are frustrated. We've been calling for three and a half months for an investigation into these scandals because if we allow them to continue, we erode the rule of law. The Attorney General at one point said that he would have the power to appoint a special counsel, and then later he said he wasn't sure, and that may be subject to a recusal. So, we left today without a straight answer on whether or not there would be a special counsel or even what the time frame would be. That's frustrating."

Rep. Ron DeSantis said on Fox News' Hannity (11/14), "Let's just take Trump-Russia collusion. Not only is there not evidence of collusion, but we know – or we think that the dossier that was used to justify some of this surveillance was done through the Democratic Party paying and Christopher Steele, and obviously he had to pay some of these Russians to be able to get some of this information. We need to know, and Jeff Sessions would not answer, whether the FBI paid Christopher Steele for that, how much did they pay him, and whether they used it for the FISA warrant."

□ ABC World News Tonight (11/14, story 3, 3:45, Muir) reported Sessions is also "under pressure from President Trump, who has been pushing the Justice Department to investigate his political opponents." ABC (Thomas) added that "just ten days after the President's comments, Sessions' office informed Congress prosecutors would look into naming a special counsel to investigate the Clinton Foundation. But tonight, the Attorney General insists, he's not a pawn of the President." To Pete Williams of □ NBC Nightly News (11/14, story 5, 2:10, Holt), Sessions "seemed to be speaking to two audiences, showing White House he's aware what the President wants, but telling Congress there's a high bar to appointing a special counsel."

The Washington Post (11/14, Barrett) says Sessions' "suggestion that he may appoint a special counsel to investigate Hillary Clinton has alarmed current and former Justice Department officials who fear he will further politicize the embattled agency." The suggestion "has raised fresh questions about the independence of the Justice Department in the Trump administration." The New York Times (11/14, Baker) reports that if a new investigation of Clinton is authorized, "it would shatter norms established after Watergate that are intended to prevent presidents from using law enforcement agencies against political rivals."

In an editorial, the New York Times (11/14) says that whether a special counsel is appointed or not, "the pressure to do so is clear, from both Republicans in Congress and Mr. Trump, who has threatened Mr. Sessions's job if he fails to prosecute Mrs. Clinton." The Times describes as "alarming" the "push for the Justice Department to undertake a politically motivated investigation of a president's political opponent, and purely as revenge for an actual investigation already underway." Similarly, a Washington Post (11/14) editorial says the "demands for the politically motivated prosecution of Mr. Trump's former political opponent are profoundly inappropriate and degrading to democracy." While the Justice Department "appears to be holding firm against the president," it "remains under pressure."

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Chuck Grassley said on □ Fox News' Fox & Friends (11/14), "The reason that I asked for special counsel is because the extent to which Mueller was head of the FBI at the time of the Uranium One stuff and he's special counsel in the Trump-Russia investigation, I suggested that maybe another special counsel would bring about more independence and more credibility to the investigation. But if it's going on within the Department of Justice and people that aren't had anything to do with it at that time or weren't close to the leadership of the Department of Justice or the FBI at that time, if they can carry it out, I'm satisfied with that."

The New York Times (11/14, Sullivan) reports on the Uranium One deal in which the Obama Administration, while Clinton was Secretary of State, allowed the Russian nuclear agency Rosatom to buy the company, which "had access to the United States uranium supply." People linked to Uranium One "had donated millions of dollars to the Clinton family's charitable organization, the Clinton Foundation," and "questions have been raised about whether there were any connections between deal's approval and the donations to the Clinton Foundation." While the Justice Department said Monday "that it was looking into whether to appoint a special counsel to investigate Mrs. Clinton and the Uranium One deal," there has been "no evidence that donations to the Clinton Foundation influenced the Uranium One deal." Sean Hannity said on □ Fox News' Hannity (11/14), "If you listen very closely to Sessions today, he is suggesting that it would take 'a factual basis that meets the standards of a special counsel' in order for the DOJ to make that type of appointment. Those words, I can assure you, were carefully crafted. Sources told me earlier this month, and we reported it right here on this show, that Sessions has not, hear me, has not recused himself in the Uranium One scandal, and if there is an ongoing investigation, Sessions isn't going to – can't reveal all that in an open setting in front of Congress."

FBI Probing Money Transfers From Russian Foreign Ministry To Embassies. BuzzFeed (11/14, Leopold) reports that the FBI and other federal agencies investigating Russian involvement in the US election are looking into more than 60 wire transfers from the Russian foreign ministry to its embassies in nearly 60 countries between Aug. 3 and Sept. 20, 2016, most with "a memo line referencing the financing of the 2016 election."

House Democrats To Introduce New Articles Of Impeachment Against Trump. The Hill (11/14, Lillis) reports that the office of Rep. Steve Cohen says a group of House Democrats on Wednesday will "introduce new articles of impeachment against President Trump, representing the broadest effort yet to oust him as commander in chief." Rep. Luis Gutierrez "will team up with Cohen in the effort," but it is "unclear how many other Democrats will join the pair, and neither office would say what grounds the articles will cite."

Ukraine Seeks To Question Manafort As A Witness. Reuters (11/14, Williams, Polityuk) reports that Serhii Horbatiuk, head of special investigations at the Ukraine general prosecutor's office, said Ukraine "is puzzled by the lack of a U.S. response to requests it has made to question former Donald Trump campaign chief Paul Manafort as a witness over two cases involving misuse of Ukrainian state funds." Horbatiuk "told Reuters Ukraine had sent requests in 2014 and 2015 to question representatives of a law firm and Manafort. He said Ukraine had received reassurances from the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) that the requests would be met, but without result."

Russia Moves To Retaliate For US Designation Of RT As A Foreign Agent. The Washington Post (11/14, Roth) reports that Russian lawmakers have proposed "legislation that could designate nearly all foreign media in the country as 'foreign agents,' a move to retaliate for a similar U.S. requirement aimed at Russia's state-funded RT television station." Lawmakers on Wednesday are expected to approve the legislation, which "represents a significant expansion in a tit-for-tat targeting of foreign media following allegations of Russian interference in the 2016 U.S. presidential election." The measures would enable the Russian Ministry of Justice to "require any media organizations in the country that receive foreign funding, whether from governments or private individuals, to join a registry, issue special disclaimers on articles and submit financial reports under penalty of fines or a possible ban on operations."

Medvedev Says He Met "Friendly" Trump At ASEAN Summit. Bloomberg News (11/14, Anishchuk) reports Russian Prime Minister Dmitry Medvedev said Tuesday that he spoke with President Trump at the ASEAN summit in Manila, describing him as "an open, friendly person" even amid heightened tensions between the two countries. With Trump "sitting practically next to me, we had the chance to talk" at a dinner in Manila, Medvedev said Tuesday, according to the Tass news service. "The bad thing is that despite the contacts, the opportunity to discuss some issues, our relations are degrading day after day. They're at the lowest point in recent decades."

US Hires Company With KGB Ties To Guard Moscow Embassy. The New York Times (11/14, Higgins) reports that after Russia ordered American diplomatic missions to slash their staff by 755 employees, the State Department made up "for the loss of security guards axed" by hiring a private Russian company. Under a $2.8 million no-bid contract awarded by the Office of Acquisitions in Washington, security guards at the US Embassy in Moscow and at US Consulates in St. Petersburg, Yekaterinburg and Vladivostok will be provided by Elite Security Holdings, "a company closely linked to the former top K.G.B. figure, Viktor G. Budanov." A "State Department official" said that Elite Security and individuals associated with it had been "vetted" with "relevant national and local agencies" and did not pose a threat risk. "US missions around the world work constantly under intelligence and physical security threats," the official said. "This contract does not change that fact."

UK, Spanish Prime Ministers Say Russian Entities Interfered In European Elections. The Washington Post (11/14, Booth, Birnbaum) reports that "the prime ministers of Britain and Spain have separately accused Russian entities – including some allegedly supported by the state – of meddling in European elections and have vowed to foil them." The allegations from British Prime Minister Theresa May and Spanish Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy "stand in stark contrast to remarks made over the weekend by President Trump, who appeared to defend the Russian president."

Milbank Cites Evidence Trump Jr. Is "Dumb As A Post." Dana Milbank writes in the Washington Post (11/14) that President Trump's "best excuse" amid mounting evidence of Russia collusion "may be that his people were too incompetent to organize a conspiracy." There is, Milbank adds, "clear and compelling evidence that Donald Trump Jr. is dumb as a post." As evidence, Milbank cites Trump Jr.'s contacts with Wikileaks, his meeting with Russians during the campaign, and his Twitter feed, which "skews Low Playground, with vulgar words, jokes about bestiality and sexual assault and a quip about pretending to be gay so he can put his hands up women's skirts. When he ventures into big-boy topics, he gets in big trouble."

Klion: The Left Should Embrace Trump-Russia Investigation. In an op-ed for the New York Times (11/14, Klion), David Klion, a writer and editor covering United States-Russia relations, says that many on the political left see "questions about Russia's interference in last year's election [as] a frustrating distraction." However, as special counsel Robert Mueller's investigation "closes in on more Trump associates like Paul Manafort and Michael Flynn, it seems clear that the Russia story is only going to get bigger." Klion argues that the left "should embrace it," as Trump's "Russia ties illustrate the dangers of inequality and elite corruption – and point to the need for radical solutions.”

Senate GOP Adding ACA Individual Mandate Repeal To Tax Plan.

Coverage of the Senate GOP’s move to add to its tax plan a repeal of the Affordable Care Act’s individual mandate was cast by many media outlets as a surprise move that may increase the difficulty of passing the measure. The CBS Evening News (11/14, story 7, 0:25, Mason) reported Senate Republicans said their tax plan would remove the Affordable Care Act’s individual mandate for most Americans to pay a penalty if they don’t have health insurance. Reducing the number of insured Americans would reduce the amount spent on subsidizing health “plans helping to pay for tax cuts.”

NBC Nightly News (11/14, story 2, 2:15, Holt) reported the fight over the ACA is “roaring back” as the Senate GOP’s adding the repeal of the ACA mandate to their “sweeping and controversial tax plan” has “set off a firestorm.” NBC (Welker) called it “a risky and surprising move,” and NBC News Political Contributor Steve Schmidt warned, “It may be a poison pill.” As the House GOP tax plan doesn’t have this provision, Welker said that the “two chambers will have to reconcile yet another major difference in their two plans. All underscoring the challenges ahead.”

The Wall Street Journal (11/14, Armour, Peterson) reports that while GOP leaders had been wary of complicating the tax effort with healthcare provisions, a Senate GOP aide said that Sen. John Thune and Sen. Pat Toomey pitched the idea; President Trump has also expressed support for such a move. In response, industry stakeholders, America’s Health Insurance Plans, Blue Cross Blue Shield Association, and the American Medical Association, wrote urging congressional to keep the mandate, warning that its repeal would lead to premium increases and a drop in the number of uninsured Americans.

The New York Times (11/14, Kaplan, Tankersley) reports the Congressional Budget Office said the provision would increase the average health insurance premium in the individual market by about 10 percent and result in 13 million fewer Americans being covered by health insurance by the end of a decade. The GOP move “risks reigniting the contentious debate over health care that Republicans found themselves mired in for much of the year.” said Republican Sen. Susan Collins said, “I personally think that it complicates tax reform.” Meanwhile, Democrats said the mandate repeal would, in the Time’s words, “underwrite tax cuts for the rich at the expense of people who buy insurance on the individual market.” Sen. Patty Murray said, “Americans have stood up and spoken loudly for the last year saying they do not want the markets destabilized, and their provision in the tax bill that they are talking about will really destabilize the marketplaces.”

The Washington Post (11/14, A1, Paletta, Debonis) calls adding the individual mandate repeal to the GOP Senate tax plan “a major change of strategy” that “would cause substantial political problems.” Not only is it “likely” to remove any hope of Democratic support, but “the prospect of adding millions to the ranks of the uninsured could trouble moderate Republicans who voted down previous repeal efforts.” Sen. John McCain, one of the three GOP senators who voted against repealing the Affordable Care Act, “declined to say whether he’d back a tax bill that included repeal.” Meanwhile, projections showing large corporations and the wealthy benefiting the most from the GOP plan have the Senate GOP leadership “under pressure” to increase its middle-class benefits, despite “struggling to ensure that the legislation does not add too much to the budget deficit.”

Similarly, the AP (11/14, Gordon) calls the GOP move a “surprise” that “upended” debate over the measure, turning it “into an angry partisan referendum on health care and” the ACA just as the tax measure “was inching closer to passage following months of fine-tuning and compromise.” In response, “feeling ambushed without advance notice, minority Democrats exploded in anger.”

Reuters (11/14, Becker, Cornwell) reports the GOP is “raising new political risks and uncertainties” for the tax measure. Majority Leader Mitch McConnell “infuriated Democrats and left some senior Republicans unsure what comes next,” saying, “We’re optimistic that inserting the individual mandate repeal would be helpful and that’s obviously the view of the Senate Finance Committee Republicans as well.”

However, Bloomberg News (11/14) reports Sen. John Thune, the chamber’s No. 3 Republican, said, “We wouldn’t have proceeded if [Senate Majority Whip John] Cornyn wasn’t confident he could get to” the 50 votes needed to pass a bill. Similarly, Politico (11/14, Haberkorn, Kim, Becker) reports that “several key swing-vote lawmakers” indicated “they’re open to the idea.” Sen. Pat Toomey said on CNBC’s Closing Bell (11/14), “We are going to include a provision to repeal this very onerous tax on low-income Americans.”

USA Today (11/14, Jackson) reports that on Monday President Trump suggested on that the repeal be included, although Office of Management and Budget Director Mick Mulvaney told reporters, “If adding a repeal of the individual mandate makes it easier to pass, great. If keeping it off makes it easier to pass, we’ll take that as well.” USA Today adds, “Trump focused on using the budget savings from the repeal to bring down the top tax bracket.”

In an analysis on the New York Times (11/14) “The Upshot” blog, Margot Sanger-Katz writes that while the individual mandate “has long been the most loathed” part of the Affordable Care Act, economic studies suggest that it prevents “an unhappy spiral of rising prices and lower rates of insurance coverage.” The mandate has been compared to a leg of a three-legged stool and that removing the mandate would tip the stool, “broken and useless.” However, the Congressional Budget Office recently indicated it is considering GOP complaints of “the mandate’s overstated importance,” writing in a report that the agency is revising its methods to estimate the effects of repealing the individual mandate and expects “smaller” estimate effects of repeal on the budget and health insurance coverage, which would make the mandate “less valuable as a means to pay for tax cuts” but also “less central to the success of future health care overhaul ideas.” Among other outlets covering this story are the Los Angeles Times (11/14, Mascaro, Puzanghera), Roll Call (11/14, Williams), The Hill (11/14, Bolton, Sullivan, Jagoda), the Washington Times (11/14, Dinan, Sherfinski), and Breitbart (11/14, Carney).

Ryan: House Didn’t Include Individual Mandate Repeal To Avoid Needless Complications. Asked in a Fox News (11/14) town hall why the Senate GOP’s Affordable Care Act individual mandate repeal is not in the House GOP tax bill, House Speaker Ryan said, “We didn’t want to complicate tax reform and make it harder.” He added, “We are in favor of repealing the individual mandate but we didn’t want to needlessly complicate the passage of tax reform given we do not have the votes before to get this to the Senate.”

Poll: Americans Don’t Believe GOP Bill Will Raise Their Wages.

The New York Times (11/14) reports that a new survey “suggests even the party’s strongest supporters aren’t buying” the argument that the GOP tax plan “to cut corporate taxes will increase wages for American workers.” The “national survey of 9,504 adults conducted for The New York Times by the online polling firm SurveyMonkey” found that “78 percent of respondents...did not believe they would receive a raise if their employer received a tax cut.” Moreover, about “70 percent of self-identified Republicans – and roughly 65 percent of people who said they strongly approved of President Trump’s performance in office – said they didn’t think they would get a pay increase.” Overall, the survey “found that 52 percent of respondents said they disapproved of the plan, compared with 44 percent who said they supported it.”

As GOP Awaits Trump’s Direction On Moore, McConnell Floats Sessions As Write-In Candidate.

On Tuesday, pressure continued to mount on embattled Alabama Senate candidate Roy Moore (R), as more Republicans called for him to step aside amid allegations of sexual assault, the RNC pulled its support from the candidate, and GOP congressional leaders plotted strategies for a path forward in the Dec. 12 special election for the former seat of now-US Attorney General Jeff Sessions. Meanwhile, several reports focus on what role President Trump may play as the controversy over Moore reaches a fever pitch.

Politico (11/14, Isenstadt, Johnson, Dawsey) reported that President Trump may have “to decide whether to push out Attorney General Jeff Sessions in a Hail Mary attempt to save the Alabama Senate seat Sessions once held.” Politico said that Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell on Monday “discussed the Alabama situation with White House chief of staff John Kelly and Vice President Mike Pence,” proposing “a dramatic idea: that Sessions run as a write-in candidate or be appointed to the seat.” Politico added, “It’s a vexing call for Trump. If he tries to pressure Moore out of the race, as some people close to the White House expect him to do, there’s no guarantee that the candidate will oblige.”

The AP (11/14, Fram, Chandler) reports, “With Alabama Republicans reluctant to block Moore and enrage his legions of loyal conservative supporters, national GOP leaders were turning to Trump as their best chance of somehow turning the tide.” The AP adds, “Two Washington Republicans, speaking on condition of anonymity to describe private conversations, said they didn’t know what Trump would do, but said the White House shares McConnell’s concerns about Moore. While few think Trump could persuade Moore to step aside, several are hoping he can convince the Alabama state party to take some action.”

On NBC Nightly News (11/14, story 3, 2:35, Holt), Gabe Gutierrez reported, "Amid a growing political firestorm," McConnell "is publicly floating the idea of...Sessions as write-in alternative to...Moore." NBC broadcast a clip of McConnell – addressing the Wall Street Journal's CEO Council – saying, "The Alabamian who would fit the standard would be the Attorney General. He is totally well-known and extremely popular in Alabama."

Reuters (11/14, Oliphant, Whitesides) reports that McConnell, speaking on Tuesday with reporters, said "that he wants to work with the White House to explore ways to" prevent "Moore from taking office." McConnell "said he had been in contact with...Trump and others about sexual misconduct allegations against Moore." Of Moore, McConnell said, "He's obviously not fit to be in the United States Senate, and we've looked at all the options to try and prevent that from happening." Reuters adds that McConnell "said later in the day that Sessions...would be a plausible write-in candidate. 'He fits the mold of somebody who might be able to pull off a write-in,'" McConnell said.

The Washington Examiner (11/14, Weaver) reports that McConnell "publicly floated the idea of" having Sessions run as a write-in candidate. McConnell "made the comments to the Wall Street Journal's CEO Council while talking about who could mount a successful write-in campaign, like Sen. Lisa Murkowski did in Alaska in 2010." Said McConnell, "The name being most often discussed may not be available, but the Alabamian who would fit that standard would be the attorney general. He's totally well-known and is extremely popular in Alabama." McConnell added, "That obviously would be a big move for him and for the president."

The Wall Street Journal (11/14, Hughes) quotes McConnell as saying of Moore, "His campaign is collapsing." And of his conversation with Trump about the situation, McConnell said, "Obviously we're in a discussion here about how to salvage this seat if possible." The Hill (11/14, Bolton) reported that McConnell, speaking with reports, "said no final decision had been made and it would await further discussions with Trump. McConnell told reporters that Trump called him from Vietnam last week to discuss what to do about Moore." McConnell, commenting on "his discussions with White House officials and colleagues," told reporters, "We've looked at all the options. This close to the election it's a very complicated matter."

Bloomberg News (11/14, Pettypiece, Litvan) reports that McConnell "reiterated that Moore is 'obviously not fit' to hold office and that he's discussing 'all the options' with the White House for keeping Moore out of the Senate while maintaining the seat for Republicans. The election is 'up to the people of Alabama to make this decision,' McConnell said while adding, 'From a Republican point of view, we would hope to save the seat and that might require a write-in, and all of those things are under discussion.'"

USA Today (11/14, Shesgreen) reports that National Republican Senatorial Committee chief Sen. Cory Gardner on Monday "said the Senate should vote to expel Moore if he wins the Alabama contest. McConnell did not explicitly endorse that idea when asked about it on Tuesday. But he suggested it was one of several options Republicans were considering." The New York Times (11/14, Stack) runs a piece examining "the options" the GOP has for dealing with Moore and the Senate race, saying that Republicans could run a write-in candidate or possibly move back the date of the election. If Moore wins, says the Times, Republicans could move to hold a vote to expel him from the Senate.

Under the headline "Republicans Seek To Derail Roy Moore And Salvage Senate Seat," the Wall Street Journal (11/14, Hook, Hughes) reports on the various options Republicans are mulling to torpedo the bid of Moore and prevent Democrats from capturing the seat. In a Wall Street Journal (11/14, Kalt) op-ed, Michigan State University law professor Brian Kalt says that under the US Constitution, if Moore wins the election, he is required to be seated by the Senate. Kalt adds that the Senate lacks the legal authority to exclude Moore, should he win, but does have the ability to vote to expel him, once he was formally seated.

Sessions Says He Has "No Reason To Doubt" Moore's Accusers. On its website, CNN (11/14, Kopan) reported that during an appearance before the House Judiciary Committee, Sessions "said Tuesday he did not doubt the accusations leveled against" Moore. Responding to Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee (D-TX), who asked, "Do you believe these young women?", Sessions replied, "I have no reason to doubt these young women." On the CBS Evening News (11/14, story 5, 2:00, Mason), Manuel Bojorquez reported that Sessions "sided against the man who wants his old Senate seat." The Los Angeles Times (11/14, Decker) reports that Sessions "would not say whether he believed Moore should be seated if he wins the December runoff. He said he has been advised by Department of Justice ethics officials to 'not be involved' in the campaign."

RNC Pulls Its Support For Moore. Politico (11/14, Isenstadt) reported that the RNC is pulling its support for Moore, "leaving him increasingly isolated as he confronts charges of sexual misconduct with teenagers. The RNC is pulling out of a joint fundraising agreement it had with Moore, according to a senior party official briefed on the decision," and "is also canceling a field program it had set up ahead of the state's Dec. 12 special election. The committee had about a dozen paid canvassers in Alabama working for Moore. It will no longer transfer any money to the race."

The Hill (11/14, Carter) reported, "New documents filed Tuesday with the Federal Election Commission show the RNC is no longer listed alongside other groups involved in the joint fundraiser. The two parties now listed on the documents include 'Judge Roy Moore for US Senate' and the Alabama Republican Party. The initial FEC filing, dated Oct. 24, included both the RNC and National Republican Senatorial Committee (NRSC)."

Ryan: Moore "Should Step Aside." The AP (11/14) reports that House Speaker Paul Ryan on Tuesday "joined a growing chorus of Republican officials calling on Moore to leave the race saying that he believes the women who have accused Moore of sexual misconduct." On its website, CNN (11/14, Mattingly, Fox, Watkins) reported that Ryan, during an appearance on CNN, said of Moore, "He should step aside. Number one, these allegations are credible. Number two, if he cares about the values that he claims to care about, then he should step aside."

However, the Washington Post (11/14, Sullivan, Scherer, Kane) reports that the "growing criticism" of Moore by Washington's GOP leaders "has yet to sweep over key Republicans in Alabama, many of whom are standing by the former judge or staying silent on the controversy. The sharply contrasting reactions coming out of Washington and Alabama underscore the challenge Republican leaders face as they try to force Moore out of the race." The Post adds that GOP "officials in Alabama continued to express skepticism about the accusations made against Moore, saying that they are still waiting for the evidence to back up the allegations."

"Vulnerable" Heller Says Moore Should Withdraw From Race. The Las Vegas Review-Journal (11/14, Joecks) reports that Sen. Dean Heller (R-NV) on Tuesday "became the latest Republican senator to urge" Moore to step aside. In a statement, Heller – who faces a difficult reelection race next year – said, "I believe the women who have come forward. Roy Moore should do what is best for the conservatives of Alabama and step aside." The Nevada Independent (11/14, Snyder) reports, "A progressive Super PAC, American Bridge 21st Century, launched a digital ad campaign over the weekend targeting Heller for staying silent on the allegations surrounding Moore. Heller is up for re-election in 2018 and is widely considered one of the most vulnerable senators in the nation."

Alabama Poll: Moore Leads Jones 49%-43%; 8% Undecided. In an "exclusive," WALA-TV Mobile, AL (11/14, Grip) reported on its website that a FOX10 News/Strategy Research poll of 3,000 Alabama likely voters, taken Nov. 13, shows Moore leading ex-US Attorney Doug Jones (D) 49%-43%; 8% were undecided. In a similar poll taken "two weeks ago," Moore led Jones 52%-41%, with 7% undecided. WALA-TV added, "When asked if the recent sexual misconduct allegations against Moore had influenced their support, 36 percent of all likely voters said they intended to vote for Jones anyway, 35 percent said the allegations made them more likely to vote for Moore, 11 percent said the allegations made it less likely they would vote for Moore and 18 percent said they were either undecided, or that the allegations made no difference to them." Breitbart (11/14, Poor) also reported on the poll results.

National Poll: 60% Of US Voters, Including 50% Of Republicans, Say Moore Should Quit Race. Politico (11/14, Shepard) reported that a Politico/Morning Consult nationwide poll of 1,993 US voters, taken Nov. 9-11, "shows voters nationally find the allegations against...Moore credible – and a majority thinks Moore should drop out of the race." In the survey, "which was conducted prior to the most recent allegations against Moore leveled by Beverly Young Nelson, who said Monday that Moore sexually assaulted her when she was 16 years old," 59% said "they considered the original allegations against Moore outlined in a Washington Post article last week very or somewhat credible," including 49% of GOP voters, while 17% said "the allegations are 'not too credible' or not credible at all." And 60% said they "think Moore should not continue his campaign," including 50% of Republicans.

Moore: "I'm Being Harassed By The Media," Those "Pushing Allegations." On its website, CNN (11/14, Tatum) reported that during a Tuesday appearance at a church conference in Jackson, Alabama, Moore said "he's being hounded by the news media over sexual allegations against him." Moore is quoted as saying, "Why do you think they're giving me this trouble? Why do you think I'm being harassed by media and by people pushing allegations in the last 28 days of the election? ... After 40-something years of fighting this battle, I'm now facing allegations and that's all the press wants to talk about." The AP (11/14, Fram) reports that Moore also said "there is a 'spiritual battle' going on in American politics as he faces mounting pressure from national Republicans to drop out of the race."

Hannity Gives Moore "24 Hours" To Satisfactorily Explain His "Inconsistencies." Sean Hannity said on Fox News' Hannity (11/14) that Moore "has 24 hours. He must immediately and fully come up with a satisfactory explanation for your inconsistencies. ... You must remove any doubt. If you can't do this, then Judge Moore needs to get out of this race. This country has way too many issues and problems. The American people deserve a hundred percent truth and honesty. We needed correct answers the first time on issues this serious. Judge Moore, you owe that to the people of Alabama, the Republican Party that you represent, and to the country which is suffering under so many problems."

USA Today (11/14, Snider) reports that Fox News host Sean Hannity "is being targeted with an advertiser boycott, the third this year, a relief to critics riled by the conservative pundit's comments. But do they hurt him with Fox and its viewers?" USA Today says, "Viewership of the show took a hit earlier this year during a period in which he was targeted by ad boycotts – and his show was temporarily moved an hour later from its traditional 9 p.m. ET time slot because of the departure of Bill O'Reilly. Back at the old hour, it's bounced back. Hannity drew an average of 2.5 million during the April-September months, down from his 2.87 million in the year's first three months of the year. ... Since returning to his 9 p.m. slot, ET slot, the show has drawn an average of 3.2 million total viewers, according to Nielsen."

WSJournal: If Moore Won't Quit, It'd Be Better For GOP For Him To Lose. In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (11/14, Board) says that if Moore won't quit the race and Trump won't urge him to do so, it'd be better for Republicans if Moore is defeated. Otherwise, says the Journal, Democrats and the press will use Moore as a cudgel in 2018 to batter GOP candidates.

In a USA Today (11/14, Zeigler) op-ed, Alabama Auditor Jim Zeigler (R) says that if Moore steps aside, "it would cause an automatic pickup of a Democratic seat in the Senate. ... A defeat of Moore would mean the Republican Senate majority is reduced to 51-49, a dangerous number when the present 52-48 split is already not an effective working majority. It would endanger Senate confirmation of Supreme Court appointments and the Trump agenda. The people of Alabama voted for Trump despite sexual innuendo. They will vote for Roy Moore."

In an editorial, USA Today (11/14, Board) says, "Driven by the Trump presidency and the Harvey Weinstein moment born after weeks of sickening accusations about rape, sexual harassment and abuse in entertainment, finance, journalism and politics, there's little doubt the country is moving toward greater gender equality. If this special election helps push that forward, it will have served a purpose well beyond Alabama."

Democrat Jones' Ad Alludes To Moore Allegations. Meanwhile, the Washington Post (11/14, Weigel) reports that Jones, the Democrat battling Moore in the special election, "is running the first TV ad about the allegations" involving "Moore, in a meticulous and careful way." In the spot, "a number of unnamed 'Republican voters' explain why they 'just can't' stick with their party in the" race. A pair "of the voters refer, unmistakably but subtly, to allegations of Moore's improper conduct with teenage girls. ... 'He's already been removed from office twice,' says one voter. 'And this time, it's even worse,' says another. 'You read the story and it just shakes you,' says a female voter. Another female voter finishes the thought: 'Just awful.'"

The Washington Times (11/14, McLaughlin) reports, "In the ad, self-identified Republican voters say are backing Mr. Jones because they can't stomach Mr. Moore, noting that the former chief justice of the Alabama Supreme Court was removed from the bench, and once again is engulfed in controversy. 'I am a Republican, but Roy Moore? No way,' a man says in the spot, which also alludes to the allegations of sexual misconduct that women leveled against Mr. Moore in a recent Washington Post report." Some of the voters "say the story is 'Just awful,' 'I just don't trust him,' 'He is too divisive' and 'Don't decency and integrity matter anymore?'"

NYTimes Analysis: National Democrats Providing Stealth Support For Jones. The New York Times (11/14, Burns, Martin) reports, "National Democratic groups have not spent a dollar on their own television or radio commercials promoting Mr. Jones," and Democrats' "most popular campaigners, such as former President Barack Obama and Senator Bernie Sanders...have not set foot in the state." However, "the national Democrats' ostensibly arm's-length treatment of Mr. Jones belies a far deeper investment in the race," as the party has helped the candidate raise cash and has blasted "Republicans who have been slow to denounce" Moore. Moreover, some "liberal activist groups have begun deploying organizers to Alabama to help prepare get-out-the-vote efforts for Mr. Jones."

Limbaugh: With Targeting Of Moore, McConnell Sending Message To Bannon. Breitbart (11/14, Poor) reported that Rush Limbaugh on Tuesday said on his radio program that "the recent sexual misconduct allegations aimed at...Moore had been inspired by...McConnell...who had backed Moore's former opponent Sen. Luther Strange (R-AL) in the earlier primary contests." Limbaugh opined that the “charges were meant to send a message to former Donald Trump chief strategist...Steve Bannon, who has publicly said he seeks to take on all Republicans that back McConnell as Senate Majority Leader.” Limbaugh is quoted as saying that “what’s really driving this is Mitch McConnell saying to Steve Bannon, ‘Really? You think you’re going to get your guys elected? You think you are going to get your guys elected and me kicked out of here? Really? Seriously? OK, watch this.’”

Editorial Published In Three Alabama Newspapers Rips Moore As “Grossly Unfit For Public Office.” Politico (11/14, Nelson) reported, “An editorial published by three of Alabama’s largest newspapers on Monday called...Moore ‘grossly unfit for office’ in the wake of allegations that he initiated sexual encounters with girls as young as 14 when he was in his 30s. ‘Roy Moore simply cannot be a US Senator. Even if his party and many of its adherents still think it possible, it is unthinkable – for his state, and his country,’ wrote the AL.com editorial board, which feeds newspapers in Birmingham, Mobile and Huntsville.”

The Federalist’s Davidson: “Moore Is No Conservative.” Writing for The Federalist (11/14, Davidson), John Daniel Davidson said that even in the wake of the Moore allegations, “it’s hard to understand why voters in Alabama are only just now realizing that he is unfit for office. They should have known years ago, when his contempt for the rule of law twice got him removed from the Alabama Supreme Court.” Davidson said “those incidents...reveal that Moore is no conservative and has little use for the American constitutional order that conservatives hold dear.”

NYTimes Analysis: Moore’s Hometown Remains “Bitterly Divided” Over Him. Reporting from Gadsden County, Alabama, under the headline “Roy Moore, Long Divisive In His Hometown, And Even More So Now,” the New York Times (11/14, Bidgood, Fausset) says, “Etowah County, the largely rural slice of northeast Alabama where Mr. Moore was raised and currently lives, was bitterly divided about Mr. Moore before the allegations. And it remains so now.” The Times reports that “Moore, many people say, clearly had a fondness for younger women in decades past.” However, “around Gadsden, a city of 36,000...opinions about the recent allegations tend to follow lines that were etched long before.” The Times adds that “even in a place that has long ago been polarized over Mr. Moore, there are hints of nagging doubt among his supporters, and admissions by critics that they still want more clarity about the allegations.”

Alabama Pastor: Caller Claiming To Be A WPost Reporter Offered Cash For Damaging Info On Moore. The Washington Post (11/14, Eltagouri, Wong) reports, “A pastor in Alabama said he received a voice mail Tuesday from an individual falsely claimed to be a reporter with The Washington Post and seeking women ‘willing to make damaging remarks’ about...Moore in exchange for money.” The Post adds, “Pastor Al Moore of Creola, Ala., said that he received the call on his cellphone a little after 7 a.m. Tuesday from a private number, which he did not answer. The caller, claiming to be ‘Bernie Bernstein,’ left a 27-second voicemail, which Moore played for local CBS-affiliate WKRG. ‘I’m a reporter for the Washington Post calling to find out if anyone at this address is a female between the ages of 54 to 57 years old, willing to make damaging remarks about candidate Roy Moore for a reward of between 5,000 and 7,000 dollars,’ the caller said in the voice mail.”

Report: Moore Story Receiving Much More Extensive Coverage Than Menendez Trial. The Washington Times (11/14, Harper) reports that the press “has provided intensive coverage of the ongoing woes of...Moore, and the coverage often showcases melodrama, speculation and sensationalism. Reporters and anchors, in fact, frequently repeat the same ‘damning accusations’ and key phrases against Mr. Moore says Rich Noyes, research director of the Media Research Center. ... ‘From the evening of November 9 through the morning of November 13, the ABC, CBS and NBC morning and evening newscasts have generated 79 minutes, 42 seconds of coverage of the Moore case,’ says Mr. Noyes.” In comparison, says Noyes, since the federal corruption trial of Sen. Bob Menendez (D-NJ) “began Sept. 5, ABC and CBS managed to produce two minutes of coverage combined and NBC has offered none.”

DOJ: Trump Tweets Are Official Statements Of The President.

The Washington Times (11/14, Blake) reports that, in response to questioning by US District Judge Amit Mehta, Justice Department lawyers wrote in an eight-page submission entered in DC federal court that the agency is treating tweets by President Trump “as official statements of the President of the United States.” The issues came up in a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit against the Justice Department, CIA, the Office of Director of National Intelligence, and the Pentagon by Politico reporter Josh Gernstein and the James Madison Project government accountability group seeking records relating to the dossier compiled by former British spy

Christopher Steele on Trump's alleged ties to Russia. Acting Assistant Attorney General Chad Readler wrote that while the plaintiffs argue Trump's tweets calling the dossier fake indicate such records exist, "The Court cannot assume that the President was expressing a view based on 'some knowledge and understanding' provided by these agencies."

House Narrowly Passes Flood Insurance Overhaul.

Politico (11/14, Warmbrodt) reports that the House of Representatives passed "a bill that would reauthorize and overhaul the National Flood Insurance Program...in a 237-189 vote." If passed into law, "the bill would reauthorize the NFIP for five years and enact several operational changes championed by Financial Services Chairman Jeb Hensarling (R-Texas), the fiscal conservative who led an effort to pare back the program as part of the reauthorization bill." Opponents of the bill from both parties argued that the "committee's proposals threatened homeowners and local economies."

Puerto Rico's Electric Utility Ignored Own Legal Advice On Whitefish Deal.

The AP (11/14, Daly) reports that Puerto Rico's electric utility "ignored advice from its own lawyers before signing an expanded contract worth $300 million with a tiny Montana company," Whitefish, "to repair its damaged power grid," according to newly released documents. Law firm Greenberg Traurig "recommended that the state-run power authority be allowed to terminate the deal within 10 days for any breach by the company" and "that the utility be allowed to seek damages from Whitefish and that the company be required to hold a bond for such a large contract." These recommendations were ignored.

Half Of Power Grid Will Be Restored By Wednesday. USA Today (11/14, King) reports that "half of Puerto Rico's power grid will be back up Wednesday," but full power restoration might not come for several months. Officials in the US Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico "are exploring different ways to modernize their systems," including increased reliance on renewable energy sources.

Democratic Governors Aided By "Shadow Staff Supplied By Climate Change Advocacy Groups."

The Washington Times (11/14, Richardson) reports, "It may look as if Democratic governors – not climate change activists – are driving the campaign to 'fill the void' left by President Trump's exit from the Paris agreement, but that's not necessarily the impression left by behind-the-scenes emails," which showed "that the governors who descended this week on the Bonn climate summit had plenty of help – not just from state aides, but also from a kind of shadow staff supplied by climate change advocacy groups and funded by liberal foundations in support of the ambitious foreign policy effort." The "emails obtained via open records requests by Competitive Enterprise Institute senior fellow Chris Horner shows state employees relying on activists for organizational and communications work in what he described as 'outsourcing government off the books.'"

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Mrs. May's Tribulations." A New York Times (11/14) editorial says "hardly a day goes by without new revelations of sleaze or ministers' doing their own thing," further complicating British Prime Minister Theresa May's "brutally complex and consequential task of extricating Britain from the European Union." Brexit "has all but paralyzed the government already," and the "political mess" within May's government "has made the going far tougher and the uncertainties far greater." On a positive note, the Times says, "what's happening in Britain is at its core a democratic debate – furious, bitter and divisive, to be sure – over the fundamental conflict of national identity and supranational organizations in a confusing and rapidly changing world," including in the US. While the outcome of this debate is unclear, "it is democracy, and there is no reason yet to fear that the center cannot hold."

"Attorney General Jeff Sessions Doesn't Recall." In an editorial, the New York Times (11/14) says that whether a special counsel is appointed or not, "the pressure to do so is clear, from both Republicans in Congress and [President] Trump, who has threatened [Attorney General] Sessions's job if he fails to prosecute Mrs. Clinton." The Times describes as "alarming" the "push for the Justice Department to undertake a politically motivated investigation of a president's political opponent, and purely as revenge for an actual investigation already underway."

“Torches And Hate On The March In Poland.” The New York Times (11/14) editorializes that perhaps the most troubling aspect of the Polish nationalist march on Saturday “was that the words from an old Polish nationalist song that were the march’s slogan – ‘We want God’ – were cited by President Trump to huge applause on his visit to Warsaw in July.” The Times says this “ugly nationalism sweeping through the Western world, and especially Central Europe, may be a passing phase in a difficult transition and a confusing world,” but “the disgusting slogans on display in Warsaw and the fictions and paranoia behind them must be relentlessly exposed for what they are and condemned, and the right-wing, populist governments that condone them must be censured, not embraced.”

Washington Post.

“There Are No Grounds For Special Counsel To Investigate Hillary Clinton.” A Washington Post (11/14) editorial says the “demands for the politically motivated prosecution of Mr. Trump’s former political opponent are profoundly inappropriate and degrading to democracy.” While the Justice Department “appears to be holding firm against the president.,” it “remains under pressure.”

“Trump Loves Human Rights – When Convenient.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (11/14) contrasts President Trump’s condemnation of human rights abuses in North Korea with his praise for Chinese President Xi Jinping, “who has just elevated his intolerant and iron-fisted rule to a cult of personality not seen since Mao. Mr. Xi suffocates freedom and throws dissidents into prison.” The Post says Trump’s Asia trip showed “that human rights and democracy are seen by the president not as universal principles demanding attention everywhere, but as cudgels to be rolled out selectively, to criticize tyrants and rights abusers when convenient, and to be easily ignored elsewhere.”

“Fix Metro Now. Or Face The Consequences.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (11/14) finds hope that fixing Metro, “the Washington area’s infrastructural linchpin,” can go beyond the “stoppages and temporizing” that have “best that elected officials could offer.” The Post notes the recent weakening of the GOP “stranglehold” in Virginia’s legislature and a recent report by former transportation secretary and Republican congressman Ray LaHood, who “exposed as bunk many of the excuses favored by foot-dragging politicians” – that “Metro is wildly profligate, or mismanaged, or provides terrible service” – and, “amply supported by evidence,” concluded “that Metro urgently needs a new, earmarked means of raising $500 million more annually.” The Post warns that Metro “is teetering on the brink” and that officials will have to quickly “get serious” about long-term solutions “or explain why they’ve set the stage for the region’s economic decline.”

Wall Street Journal.

“The Roy Moore Mess.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (11/14, Board) says that if Alabama Republican Senate candidate Roy Moore won’t quit the race and President Trump won’t urge him to do so, it’d be better for Republicans if Moore is defeated. Otherwise, says the Journal, Democrats and the press will use Moore as a cudgel in 2018 to batter GOP candidates.

“Ruling Out The ABA On Judges.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (11/14) calls for the GOP to stop allowing the American Bar Association to vet judicial nominees. In particular, the Journal argues the ABA’s liberal bias is evident in its label of Brett Talley as not qualified to serve as a federal judge. The Journal argues the organization stretched an article on not broadening Supreme Court rights ruling into suggesting he would ignore Roe v. Wade and that, unable to find issues with Talley’s integrity or temperament, unfairly argues that, as Tally never sat on the bench, he lacks the requisite trial experience.

“Venezuela Goes Bust.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (11/14) says the success of any attempt by Venezuela to restructure its debt and claw out of default depends on whether the nation’s economy has a realistic chance of growing again – a near-impossible goal without policies in place that will free it. If the Venezuelan government resorts to seizing assets in the US and elsewhere because it cannot settle with its bondholders, the Journal says, it will serve as a stark reminder of why government investments in socialist regimes is unwise.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

US Manufacturing Rides Rising Tide
Senate GOP Adds Healthcare Twist To Tax Overhaul Plan
GOP Seeks To Derail Moore, Salvage Senate Seat
The Class Of 1994, Venezuela's Golden Generation, Is Fleeing The Country

New York Times:

Senate Plans To End Obamacare Mandate In Revised Tax Proposal
Sessions Says He Did Not Lie To Congress On Contacts With Russia
'Lock Her Up' Becomes More Than A Slogan
An Alabama Senate Candidate Keeps Democratic Leaders Away — But Not Their Money
'I Am Alive': Survivors Of Iran Earthquake Mourn As Government Scrambles To Help
Zimbabwe's Military, In Apparent Takeover, Says It Has Custody Of Mugabe
A Statue Stirs To Life In Washington Square Park

Washington Post:

Damaged Bodies, Healing Hearts
Sessions Changes His Account Of Russia Dealings
Senate GOP Seeks To End Part Of ACA In Tax Bill
Prospect Of New Special Counsel Rattles Justice
Suit Alleges Laxness Enabled Sex Abuser At Pr. George's School

Financial Times:

Venezuela Slips Deeper Into Crisis After Default
Sessions Moves To Quell Furor Over Clinton Foundation Probe
French Minister Turns Up Heat On EDF Over Shift To Renewables
David Davis Promises City Of London Special Post-Brexit Travel Regime

Washington Times:

Democrats Use Loss Of Deduction To Drown Out Message About Tax Bill's Benefits To Middle Class
Senate Republicans' Tax Plan Includes Repeal Of Obamacare Mandate
Teen Suicide Rate Suddenly Rises With Heavy Use Of Smartphones, Social Media
ICE Agents Rebel, Say Trump 'Betrayed' Them By Retaining Obama's People
Democratic Governors Outsource Climate Campaigns To Activist Groups, Emails Reveal Explosions, Military Tanks And Soldiers On Streets Of Zimbabwe Put Mugabe's Rule In Doubt

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: California Elementary School Shooting; Tampa-Possible Serial Killer; Russia Meddling Investigation-Sessions; Roy Moore-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; Congress-Sexual Harassment Policy; Tax Reform Plan-Obamacare Repeal; Uber-County Attorney Fired; West Coast Storm; Las Vegas-Plane Escape; Wine-Weight Effect; Bakery Charity.

CBS: California Elementary School Shooting; Sandy Hook Shooting Families-Lawsuit; Tampa-Possible Serial Killer; Russia Meddling Investigation-Sessions; Roy Moore-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; Congress-Sexual Harassment Policy; Tax Reform Plan-Obamacare Repeal; Mediterranean African Refugees; Health-Digital Pill; Arrested US College Students Return; Hijab Barbie Doll; National Zoo-Pandas.

NBC: California Elementary School Shooting; Tax Reform Plan-Obamacare Repeal; Roy Moore-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; Congress-Sexual Harassment Policy; Russia Meddling Investigation-Sessions; Presidential Power-Nuclear Strike; Arrested US College Students Return; Tampa-Possible Serial Killer; ISS Pizza Delivery; Da Vinci Painting; Diamond Auction; Charity-Auto Repair.

Network TV At A Glance:

Roy Moore-Sexual Misconduct Allegations – 8 minutes
Russia Meddling Investigation-Sessions – 7 minutes, 55 seconds
California Elementary School Shooting – 6 minutes, 50 seconds
Tampa-Possible Serial Killer – 5 minutes, 55 seconds
Congress-Sexual Harassment Policy – 5 minutes, 15 seconds
Tax Reform Plan-Obamacare Repeal – 4 minutes, 35 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Roy Moore-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; Tax Reform Plan-Obamacare Repeal; California Elementary School Shooting; Zimbabwe Instability.

CBS: California Elementary School Shooting; Roy Moore-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; Russia Meddling Investigation-Sessions.

FOX: California Elementary School Shooting; Sandy Hook Shooting Families-Lawsuit; Roy Moore-Sexual Misconduct Allegations.

NPR: Roy Moore-Sexual Misconduct Allegations; Clinton Foundation-DOJ; Russia Meddling Investigation-Sessions; California Elementary School Shooting.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — No public events scheduled.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Joined by Governor Greg Abbott, Secretary of Energy Rick Perry, and FEMA Administrator Brock Long, participates in a briefing on Hurricane Harvey relief and recovery efforts in Texas; delivers remarks at the 2017 Republican Governors Association Annual Conference.

US Senate: 9:00 AM U.S.-China Economic and Security Review Commission releases Annual Report to Congress Location: U.S. Capitol, Rm 902, Washington, DC <http://www.uscc.gov/> https://twitter.com/USCC_GOV

9:00 AM Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee Business Meeting – Business Meeting, 'to consider, pursuant to 'H. Con. Res. 71, the Concurrent Resolution on the Budget for Fiscal Year 2018', reconciliation legislation to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to establish and administer a competitive oil and gas program in the non-wilderness portion of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, known as the '1002 Area' or Coastal Plain' Location: Rm 366, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC www.energy.senate.gov

9:30 AM Helsinki Commission hearing on Turkey's detention of U.S. citizens – Helsinki Commission hearing on 'Prisoners of the Purge: The Victims of Turkey's Failing Rule of Law', with witnesses – Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for European and Eurasian Affairs Jonathan Cohen, American Center for Law and Justice (ACLJ) Executive Counsel CeCe Heil, Jacqueline Furnari – daughter of detained pastor Andrew Brunson, and Freedom House Nations in Transit Project Director Nate Schenckan – examining the factors contributing to the detention of U.S. citizens (particularly Brunson) and U.S. consulate employees in Turkey, as well as the judicial processes to which they have been subject Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 124, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers James Ho and Don Willett to be U.S. Circuit Judges for the Fifth Circuit; Claria Horn Boom to be U.S. District Judge for the Eastern and Western Districts of Kentucky; John Broomes to be U.S. District Judge for the District of Kansas; Rebecca Grady Jennings to be U.S. District Judge for the Western District of Kentucky; and Robert Earl Wier to be U.S. District Judge for the Eastern District of Kentucky, with testimony from American Bar Association Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary Chair Pamela Bresnahan Location: Rm 226, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Surgeon general testifies to Senate HELP Committee – Hearing on 'Encouraging Healthy Communities: Perspective from the Surgeon General', with testimony from Surgeon General Vice Adm. Jerome Adams Location: Rm 430, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://help.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Environment Committee hearing on reducing air emissions – Hearing on 'Promoting American Leadership in Reducing Air Emissions Through Innovation', with testimony from University of Wyoming School of Energy Resources Director Kip Coddington; National Association of Manufacturers Vice President Ross Eisenberg; and BlueGreen Alliance Director Zoe Lipman Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

12:00 PM CAPAC and Dreamers urge passage of the DREAM Act – Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus members, including Democratic Reps. Judy Chu and Mark Takano, urge the passage of a bipartisan DREAM Act (which would allow certain immigrant youth, including tens of thousands of Asian American and Pacific Islander Dreamers, to gain lawful permanent residence and U.S. citizenship) before the end of the year, via press conference with Asian American and Pacific Islander Dreamers and community leaders Location: House Triangle,

Washington, DC <http://capac-chu.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/CAPAC>

2:00 PM POSTPONED: Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee hearing on attacks on U.S. diplomats in Cuba – POSTPONED: Western Hemisphere Transnational Crime, Civilian Security, Democracy, Human Rights and Global Women's Issues Subcommittee hearing on 'Attacks on U.S. Diplomats in Cuba: Response and Oversight', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of State for Western Hemisphere Affairs Francisco Palmieri; Diplomatic Security Service Assistant Director of International Programs Todd Brown; and State Department Bureau of Medical Services Medical Director Dr Charles Rosenfarb Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 419, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

2:00 PM Voice for Adoption launches its 2017 Adoptive Family Portrait Project – Voice for Adoption hosts Capitol Hill reception launching its 2017 Adoptive Family Portrait Project. The 13th annual signature project celebrates families who have adopted children from foster care, with the primary goal of raising awareness among Members of Congress about 'the real experiences and needs of families that have adopted children who were in the foster care system' Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC <http://voice-for-adoption.org/>

2:00 PM Helsinki Commission briefing on religious freedom – 'Religious Freedom Violations in OSCE Region: Victims and Perpetrators' Helsinki Commission briefing, discussing religious freedom victims, violators, and violations in the OSCE region, including recommendations for what govts and the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe institutionally should do to prevent and respond to violations, and featuring the intersection between security, a chronic justification for violations, and religious freedom. Panelists are State Department Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights, and Labor's Amb. Michael Kozak, U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom Chairman Dr Daniel Mark, University of Minnesota Associate Professor of Political Science Dr Kathleen Collins, and Jehovah's Witnesses General Counsel Philip Brumley Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 385, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

2:30 PM Senate Appropriations subcommittee hearing on VA efforts to prevent opioid overmedication – Military Construction, Veteran Affairs, and Related Agencies Subcommittee hearing on 'VA Efforts to Prevent and Combat Opioid Overmedication', with testimony from Department of Veterans Affairs Inspector General Michael Missal, and Acting National Program Director for Pain Management Dr Friedhelm Sandbrink; Veterans Health Administration Chief Officer for Specialty Care Dr Laurence Meyer; and Marvin Simcakoski – father of a vet who overdosed under VA care Location: Rm 124, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

2:30 PM Senate HELP Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Brig. Gen. (Ret.) Mitchell Zais to be Deputy Secretary of Education; James Blew to be Assistant Secretary of Education for Planning, Evaluation, and Policy; Timothy Kelly to be Assistant Secretary of Education for Career, Technical, and Adult Education; Kate O'Scannlain to be Department of Labor Solicitor; and Preston Rutledge to be Assistant Secretary of Labor for the Employee Benefits Security Administration Location: Rm 430, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://help.senate.gov/>

US House: 9:00 AM U.S.-China Economic and Security Review Commission releases Annual Report to Congress Location: U.S. Capitol, Rm 902, Washington, DC <http://www.uscc.gov/> https://twitter.com/USCC_GOV

9:00 AM Dem Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee co-hosts panel on eliminating violence against women and girls – Democratic Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee and the International Foundation for Electoral Systems briefing, 'Eliminate All Forms of Violence Against All Women and Girls', the second event of a new series exploring each element of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goal number 5, 'Achieve Gender Equality and Empower All Women and Girls'. Speakers include Futures Without Violence Senior International Policy Advocate Lelia Milani, journalist Rebecca Gale, International Labor Rights Forum Executive Director Judy Gearhart, AFL-CIO Global Worker Rights Specialist Cassandra Waters and Just Be Founder and Director Tarana Burke Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2045, Washington, DC www.ifes.org #SDG5

9:30 AM Helsinki Commission hearing on Turkey's detention of U.S. citizens – Helsinki Commission hearing on 'Prisoners of the Purge: The Victims of Turkey's Failing Rule of Law', with witnesses – Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for European and Eurasian Affairs Jonathan Cohen, American Center for Law and Justice (ACLU) Executive Counsel CeCe Heil, Jacqueline Furnari – daughter of detained pastor Andrew Brunson, and Freedom House Nations in Transit Project Director Nate Schenckan – examining the factors contributing to the detention of U.S. citizens (particularly Brunson) and U.S. consulate employees in Turkey, as well as the judicial processes to which they have been subject Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 124, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

9:30 AM VA Secretary Shulkin testifies to House Appropriations subcommittee on electronic health record – Military Construction, Veterans Affairs and Related Agencies Subcommittee oversight hearing on '2018 Veterans Affairs Electronic Health Record', with testimony from Secretary of Veterans Affairs David Shulkin; and Department of Veterans Affairs Electronic Health Record Modernization Program Executive John Windom, and Office of Information and Technology Executive in Charge Scott Blackburn Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2362-A, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:00 AM House Science, Space, and Technology Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H.R. 4376, the Department of Energy Research Infrastructure Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4377, the Accelerating American Leadership in Science Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4378, the Nuclear Energy Research Infrastructure Act of 2017', 'H.R. 4375, the STEM Research and Education Effectiveness and Transparency Act', 'H.R. 4323, the Supporting Veterans in STEM Careers Act', 'H.R. 4254, the Women in Aerospace Education Act', and 'H.R. 3397, the Building Blocks of STEM Act' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2318, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM House Foreign Affairs Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H. Res. 336, Reaffirming a strong commitment to the United States-Mexico Partnership', 'H. Res. 401, Urging China, South Korea, Vietnam, Thailand, the Philippines, Indonesia, Cambodia, Laos, India, and all nations to outlaw the dog and cat meat trade and to enforce existing laws against the trade', 'H. Res. 407, Condemning the persecution of Christians around the world', 'H.R. 1164, Taylor Force Act', 'H.R. 1415, End Neglected Tropical Diseases Act', 'H.R. 2712, Palestinian International Terrorism Support Prevention Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3542, Hamas Human Shields Prevention Act', 'H.R. 3776, Cyber Diplomacy Act of 2017', and 'H. Con. Res. 90, Condemning ethnic cleansing of the Rohingya and calling for an end to the attacks in and an immediate restoration of humanitarian access to the state of Rakhine in Burma' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

10:00 AM Markup hearing on 'H.R. 170, Protect and Grow American Jobs Act' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2141, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

10:00 AM House Energy and Commerce subcommittee markup hearing – Environment Subcommittee markup hearing on 'H.R. 1917, Blocking Regulatory Interference from Closing Kilns (BRICK) Act of 2017', 'H.R. 453, Relief from New Source Performance Standards Act of 2017', 'H.R. 350, Recognizing the Protection of Motorsports Act of 2017', and 'H.R. 1119, Satisfying Energy Needs and Saving the Environment (SENSE) Act' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Indian, Insular and Alaska Native Affairs Subcommittee legislative hearing on 'H.R. 212, Expediting Funding for Efficient Contracting Tribes Act' ('EFFECT Act'), 'H.R. 2320, Samish Indian Nation Land Conveyance Act of 2017', and 'H.R. 3225, Oregon Tribal Economic Development Act', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Indian Affairs John Tahsuda III; Samish Indian Nation Chairman Tom Wooten; Confederated Tribes of Coos, Lower Umpqua, and Siuslaw Indians Chairman Mark Ingersoll; Swinomish Indian Tribal Community Vice Chairman Brian Porter; and Council of Athabascan Tribal Governments Executive Director Charleen Fisher Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1324, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM House Government Reform Committee hearing on IGs' recommendations – Hearing on 'Recommendations and Reforms from the Inspectors General', with testimony from Council of the Inspectors General on Integrity and Efficiency Chair (and Department of Justice Inspector General) Michael Horowitz, and Legislation Committee Executive Chair (and Peace Corps Inspector General) Kathy Buller; and Department of Homeland Security Inspector General John Roth Location: Rm 2154, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

10:00 AM Labor Secretary Acosta testifies to House Education and Workforce Committee – Hearing on 'Examining the Policies and Priorities of the U.S. Department of Labor', with testimony from Secretary of Labor Alexander Acosta Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2175, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

10:30 AM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Federal Lands

Subcommittee legislative hearing on 'H.R. 801, Route 66 National Historic Trail Designation Act', 'H.R. 2888, Ste. Genevieve National Historical Park Establishment Act', 'H.R. 3979, Keep America's Refuges Operational Act', and 'H.R. 4266, Acadia National Park Boundary Clarification Act', with testimony from Republican Reps. Darin LaHood, Jason Smith, and Bruce Poliquin; National Park Service Acting Deputy Director for Operations Sue Masica; Rt. 66 Road Ahead Partnership Chairman William Thomas; National Wildlife Refuge Association Director of Government Affairs Caroline Brouwer; Ducks Unlimited Virginia State Chairman Dan Ross; and Eaton Peabody attorney Tim Woodcock Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:45 AM Pelosi to Hold Gabrielle Giffords–Leo J. Ryan Cloakroom dedication – Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi will host a dedication ceremony to name the House Democratic Cloakroom in honor of former Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords and the late Congressman Leo J. Ryan. Participants: Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi; Former Congresswoman Gabrielle Giffords (D-AZ); Patricia Ryan, daughter of the late Congressman Leo J. Ryan (D-CA); Senator Jeff Flake (R-AZ); Congresswoman Jackie Speier (D-CA); Congresswoman Frederica Wilson (D-FL). Location: H-207, Rayburn Room, The Capitol. <http://www.democraticleader.gov/> <https://twitter.com/NancyPelosi>

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee hearing on cybersecurity – Hearing on 'Federal Government and Small Businesses: Promoting Greater Information Sharing for Stronger Cybersecurity', with testimony from Threat Sketch founder and CEO Rob Arnold; e-Management CEO Ola Sage; ACT – The App Association President Morgan Reed; and McAfee Chief Public Policy Officer Thomas Gann Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2360, Washington, DC <http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

12:00 PM House meets for legislative business – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include consideration of 'H.R. 4174 – Foundations for Evidence-Based Policymaking Act of 2017', as amended, 'H.R. 2672 – To designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 520 Carter Street in Fairview, Illinois, as the 'Sgt. Douglas J. Riney Post Office', 'H.R. 2873 – To designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 207 Glenside Avenue in Wyncote, Pennsylvania, as the 'Staff Sergeant Peter Taub Post Office Building', 'H.R. 3369 – To designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 225 North Main Street in Spring Lake, North Carolina, as the 'Howard B. Pate, Jr. Post Office', and 'H.R. 3821 – To designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 430 Main Street in Clermont, Georgia, as the 'Zachary Addington Post Office' under suspension of the rules Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

12:00 PM House Rules Committee hearing – Hearing on 'H.R. 1 – Tax Cuts and Jobs Act' Location: U.S. Capitol, H-313, Washington, DC <http://www.rules.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/RulesReps>

12:00 PM CAPAC and Dreamers urge passage of the DREAM Act – Congressional Asian Pacific American Caucus members, including Democratic Reps. Judy Chu and Mark Takano, urge the passage of a bipartisan DREAM Act (which would allow certain immigrant youth, including tens of thousands of Asian American and Pacific Islander Dreamers, to gain lawful permanent residence and U.S. citizenship) before the end of the year, via press conference with Asian American and Pacific Islander Dreamers and community leaders Location: House Triangle, Washington, DC <http://capac-chu.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/CAPAC>

2:00 PM Helsinki Commission briefing on religious freedom – 'Religious Freedom Violations in OSCE Region: Victims and Perpetrators' Helsinki Commission briefing, discussing religious freedom victims, violators, and violations in the OSCE region, including recommendations for what govts and the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe institutionally should do to prevent and respond to violations, and featuring the intersection between security, a chronic justification for violations, and religious freedom. Panelists are State Department Bureau of Democracy, Human Rights, and Labor's Amb. Michael Kozak, U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom Chairman Dr Daniel Mark, University of Minnesota Associate Professor of Political Science Dr Kathleen Collins, and Jehovah's Witnesses General Counsel Philip Brumley Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 385, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

2:00 PM Congressional Israel Victory Caucus and their Israeli counterparts at Middle East Forum event – Middle East Forum hosts 'Organizing for Israel Victory' event, featuring the co-chairs of the Congressional Israel Victory Caucus – Republican Reps. Ron DeSantis and Bill Johnson – and the leading members of the Knesset Israel Victory Caucus – Oded Forer and Dr Avraham Neguise. The former discuss their efforts to advance the Israel victory agenda on Capitol Hill, their campaign against 'wasteful spending on the failed 'peace process', and their work with the Zionist movement in Israel, while the latter discuss their work in the Knesset to 'secure an Israel victory and their plans to advance a national movement in Israel to support this goal' * Both caucuses were organized by Middle East Forum Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://www.meforum.org/> <https://twitter.com/meforum>

2:00 PM House Homeland Security subcommittee hearing on cyber threat information sharing – Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Protection Subcommittee hearing on 'Maximizing the Value of Cyber Threat Information Sharing', with testimony from Council on Foreign Relations Senior Fellow Robert Knake (on behalf of Global Resilience Institute); American Express Vice President for Cyber Intel & Incident Response Ann Barron-Dicamillo; Anomali Federal Solutions Architect Manager Patricia Cagliostro; and USTelecom Association Senior Vice President for Cybersecurity Robert Mayer Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, HVC-210, Washington, DC homeland.house.gov <https://twitter.com/HouseHomeland>

2:00 PM House Oversight subcommittees joint hearing on the Federal Information Technology Acquisition Reform Act – Government Operations Subcommittee and Information Technology Subcommittee joint hearing on 'The Federal Information Technology Acquisition Reform Act (FITARA) Scorecard 5.0' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2154, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

2:30 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on development finance in Asia – Asia and the Pacific Subcommittee hearing on 'Development Finance in Asia: U.S. Economic Strategy Amid China's Belt and Road', with testimony from Center for Strategic and International Studies Project on Prosperity and Development Director Daniel Runde; National Bureau of Asian Research Senior Vice President for Research Roy Kamphausen; and U.S.-China Economic and Security Review Commission Commissioner (and former USAID Assistant Administrator for Asia) Jonathan Stivers Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

4:00 PM Events to mark the 150th anniversary of the National Center for Education Statistics – 'A Forum and Reception for the National Center for Education Statistics: Commemorating 150 Years of Innovation – and Exploring Future Opportunities', hosted by the American Educational Research Association, American Statistical Association, and Council of Professional Associations on Federal Statistics. Speakers include bipartisan Reps. Paul Mitchell and Suzanne Bonamici, former NCES Commissioner Jack Buckley, National Board of Education Sciences Chair Larry Hedges, and former National Board of Education Sciences Chair Bridget Terry Long Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rms 430 and 562, Washington, DC <http://www.aera.net> #NCES150

5:30 PM Blue Star Families launch Annual Military Family Lifestyle Survey – Blue Star Families present the findings of the Annual Blue Star Families Military Family Lifestyle Survey, which provides those who are serving with 'an opportunity to share what's really going on inside military families', with the results providing feedback to national decision-makers on the current state of the military family. Speakers include Congressional Military Family Caucus Co-chairs bipartisan Reps. Cathy McMorris Rodgers and Sanford Bishop, Blue Star Families CEO Kathy Roth-Douquet and Chair of the Board of Directors Sheila Casey, USAA Military Affairs Relationship Director Mike Kelly, and Syracuse University Vice Chancellor for Veterans and Military Affairs Michael Haynie Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Foyer, Washington, DC www.bluestarfam.org <https://twitter.com/BlueStarFamily>

Other: 9:00 AM National Academies convocation on 'revitalizing the university-industry-government partnership' – 'A National Convocation on Revitalizing the University-Industry-Government Partnership in Support of Research in Science, Engineering, and Medicine': National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine convene leaders of business and industry, federal and state govt, higher education, and other sectors of society. Speakers include bipartisan Reps. Daniel Lipinski and Virginia Foxx, as well as Celia Merzbacher (Oak Ridge National Laboratory), Rush Holt (American Association for the Advancement of Science), Jeannette Wing (Columbia University), Freeman Hrabowski (University of Maryland-Baltimore County), Neal Lane (Rice University), Michael McPherson (American Academy of Arts and Sciences), Chad Holliday (Royal Dutch Shell), and Marcia McNutt (NAS) Location: National Academy of Sciences, 2101 Constitution Ave NW, Washington, DC www.nas.edu/ <https://twitter.com/NASciences>

3:30 PM Congressional briefing on maternal mortality in the U.S. – American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists 'Maternal Mortality in the United States: Understanding the Problem and Finding Solutions' briefing, with ACOG President Haywood Brown, Preeclampsia Foundation Executive Director Eleni Tsigas, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Division of Reproductive Health Director Wanda Barfield, and physician and patient advocate Larry Bloomstein * Co-hosted with the Preeclampsia Foundation, the Society for Maternal-Fetal

Medicine, and the March of Dimes in cooperation with Congressional Caucus on Maternity Care Co-chairs Republican Rep. Jaime Herrera Beutler and Democratic Lucille Roybal-Allard Location: U.S. Capitol, HC-8, Washington, DC www.acog.org <https://twitter.com/acognews>

4:30 PM Conversation on climate change to mark opening of Quaker Welcome Center on Capitol Hill – Friends Committee on National Legislation marks the opening of the new Quaker Welcome Center marked with conversation about climate change and the environment, featuring Republican Rep. Ryan Costello and Democratic Rep. Anna Eshoo * The Quaker Welcome Center will host education and mobilization programs for Quakers and other like-minded advocates visiting Washington, helping them to comfortably and effectively lobby their representatives and senators Location: 205 C St NE, Washington, DC www.fcnl.org <https://twitter.com/FCNL>

7:00 PM U.S. ambassador to the U.N. keynotes U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum event on South Sudan – ‘Our Walls Bear Witness: South Sudan – Where Do We Go From Here?’ program organized by the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum Simon-Skjodt Center for the Prevention of Genocide, including keynote from U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations Amb. Nikki Haley, and panel featuring journalist and videographer Simona Foltyn, correspondent Jason Patinkin, South Sudan Young Leaders Forum member Nyagoah Tut Pur, and Simon-Skjodt Center visiting fellow Jon Temin Location: U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, 100 Raoul Wallenberg Place SW, Washington, DC <http://www.ushmm.org/> https://twitter.com/CPG_USHMM #SouthSudan

Education Reform Now hosts annual Camp Philos – Education Reform Now hosts 4th annual Camp Philos. Event is a gathering of stakeholders in the education reform movement to discuss policy, advocacy, and ‘how we can better deliver on the promise of a high-quality public education for every child’. Attendees include Democrats Sen. Maggie Hassan and Rep. Hakeem Jeffries, former Secretaries of Education Arne Duncan and John King, New Orleans Mayor Mitch Landrieu, Teach for America CEO Elisa Villaneuva Beard, Empower Schools CEO Chris Gabrieli, and Let America Vote President Jason Kander * An evening reception takes place at National Museum of Women in the Arts, 1250 New York Ave NW, Washington, DC (15 Nov) Location: The Fairmont Hotel, 2401 M St NW, Washington, DC <https://campphilos.org/>

WACA 2017 National Conference – World Affairs Councils of America (WACA) 2017 National Conference ‘The Future of American Leadership’, with speakers including Democratic Sen. Jeff Merkley and former New Mexico Governor Bill Richardson Location: Capital Hilton, 1001 16th St NW, Washington, DC <http://www.worldaffairsCouncils.org> <https://twitter.com/WACAmerica>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: “Donald Trump is back in Washington, where he has a lot of Fox & Friends to catch up on his DVR.”

Jimmy Kimmel: “The Senate Foreign Relations Committee had a hearing to discuss whether President Trump should continue to have the sole authority to launch a nuclear weapon or whether his iPad should have some parental controls put on it.”

Jimmy Kimmel: “Yesterday, we learned that Donald Trump Jr. ... was in regular contact with WikiLeaks during his father’s campaign, which might have something to do with why Donald Trump said he loved WikiLeaks during the campaign more times than he said he loved Melania.”

Stephen Colbert: “[Attorney General Jeff] Sessions’ testimony to the House Judiciary Committee covered a wide range of issues, and Sessions had the same answer for a lot of them. ‘I don’t recall. I don’t recall. I don’t recall it. I do not recall. I don’t recall it. I had not recalled.’”

James Corden: “Attorney General Jeff Sessions testified for hours on Capitol Hill today regarding the Trump campaign’s connections with Russia. During his testimony, it seemed Jeff Sessions had a bit of a memory problem. At one point, he was called out for saying ‘I don’t recall’ multiple times. ... He just said he doesn’t recall how many times he said ‘I don’t recall.’ I don’t recall the last time I saw someone who didn’t recall how many times they didn’t recall.”

James Corden: “Speaking of the Russia investigation, it was revealed today that Donald Trump Jr. did, in fact, exchange private messages with WikiLeaks during the campaign. ... In October 2016, WikiLeaks direct messaged Donald Jr. on Twitter, asking him to promote a negative story they put out about Hillary Clinton. Donald Jr. replied – and this is absolutely true – ‘Already did that earlier today.’ Man, these guys are so in sync, it’s like they’re...cooperating? No, that’s not it. Collaborating? No. Oh yeah, colluding. That’s the word.”

Trevor Noah: “This was the end of President Trump’s first Asian trip. According to the critics, it was amazing. And by critics, I mean Trump.”

Trevor Noah: “The Chinese government is subsidizing with hundreds of billions of dollars because they know renewable energy is a business opportunity that China can sell to the rest of the world like everything else at Wal-Mart.”

Seth Meyers: “According to a national poll, only 16 percent of Americans believe that Republican Alabama candidate Roy Moore should stay in the Senate race following allegations of sexual misconduct with teenagers. Sixteen percent, or as Moore calls it, old enough percent.”

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform’s terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva’s terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website’s information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, November 22, 2017
Date: Wednesday, November 22, 2017 6:02:32 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 2017 6:00 AM EST

Holiday Message

In observance of the U.S. Thanksgiving holiday, we will not publish on Thursday, November 23, 2017 and Friday, November 24, 2017. Service will resume on Monday, November 27, 2017. We wish our readers a safe and happy holiday.

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- The Hill: Zinke: 'The Only Thing I've Hunted In Africa Is Terrorists'.

- Marine Corps Times: Marine Corps War Memorial Finally Commemorates Iraq, Afghanistan.
- American Security News: Petty Tapped For Interior Department Post On Water And Science.
- Politico: FEC Probes Discrepancies At Former Zinke PAC.
- CNN: National Historic Site In Puerto Rico Reopens After Hurricane.
- St. Thomas Source: V.I. National Parks Reopen.
- WWBT-TV Richmond (VA): Richmond Congressman, Interior Secretary Tackle Sexual Harassmen.
- Government Executive: Senate Seeks Much Smaller Spending Cuts Than Trump And The House, At Some Agencies.
- CBS News: How Trump's National Monuments Decision Could Affect Massive Deposit Of Fossils.
- U.S. News & World Report: Yellowstone Mining Opponents Press Gianforte To Join Cause.
- Casper (WY) Star-Tribune: Forest Service Will Consider Changes To Sage Grouse Protections.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Tribal Leaders Take Aim At Oil And Gas Development.
- Calif. County Asks 9th Circ. To Rehear Tribal Casino Row.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Natural Gas Intelligence: Trump Administration, Enviros Urge Court To Leave BLM Frack Ruling Intact.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Las Vegas Children Study Birds On International Migratory Bird Day.

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

- Investment In Partnership Is Good For Energy Dominance.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Brush (CO) News-Tribune: Colorado Parks & Wildlife To Receive $100K Grant.
- Arizona Republic: How A Border Wall Could Drive The Jaguar Extinct In America.

National Park Service

- The Hill: Park Service Expands Comment Period For Proposed Entry Fee Price Hike.
- The Hill: National Park Store Sold Trump Wine, Says Feds Weren't Involved.
- Washington Post: Silence Again Surrounds A Police Shooting In Fairfax County, This Time By U.S. Park Police.
- U.S. News & World Report: JFK Birth Centennial Ending On Assassination Anniversary.
- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Arches Road Construction Nears End, Will Take A Break For Thanksgiving Weekend.
- Pensacola (FL) News Journal: Gulf Islands National Seashore Road Closures Cause Travel Headaches.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Saipan (MNP) Tribune: Over 460 Coconut Rhino Beetles, Larvae Collected.

Office Of Surface Mining

- Conservation Groups Argue Peabody Leases Were Improperly Approved.

US Geological Survey

- U.S. News & World Report: NASA's Discovery Of 'Water' On Mars Might Actually Be Sand, New Study Finds.
- Additional Reading.

Opinion Pieces

- The Voice Missing From The Elephant Trophy Debate? Africans.
- Realini: National Monuments Inspire Entrepreneurs.
- Congress Must Fix Wildfire Funding Problem.
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- NBC: Media Analyses: Trump Tacitly Endorses Moore.
- Reuters: Trump: AT&T Purchase Of Time Warner "Not A Good Deal For The Country."
- Politico: Murkowski Backs Individual Mandate Repeal's Inclusion In Tax Bill.

- Washington Times: Senate Security Spending Bill Includes Funds For Border Wall.
- Los Angeles Times: FCC Chairman Proposes Repeal Of Net Neutrality Rules.
- Washington Free Beacon: Gallup Poll Finds Worry About Economy At Lowest Level In 18 Years.
- New York Times: Whitefish Suspends Puerto Rico Work Over Unpaid Bills.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Who To Blame For Your Subway Nightmare."
- Washington Post.
 - "The United States Torments Its Poorest Neighbor."
 - "Jeff Sessions Keeps Waging His Failing War Against Sanctuary Cities."
 - "Why Would Trump Choose This Academic To Lead The Census Bureau."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Trump's Dubious Trust-Busting."
 - "Keystone XL On The Cusp."
 - "China's Burma 'Solution.'"

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Zinke: 'The Only Thing I've Hunted In Africa Is Terrorists'.

The Hill (11/21, Samuels) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Tuesday "pushed back against a photo circulating on the internet that purported to show him with a hunted elephant amid backlash on a decision to lift a ban on importing elephant trophies." Zinke tweeted, "The only thing I've hunted in Africa is terrorists." The article notes that "Zinke is not the man in the image, and the photo was first posted in 2016."

The Washington Examiner (11/21, Yilek) reports that "Snopes, a fact-checking website, has rated the claim as false. The man in the photo is actually Ian Evans, a Scottish farmer."

Additional coverage was provided by the Independent Journal Review (11/21, Fink).

Marine Corps War Memorial Finally Commemorates Iraq, Afghanistan.

The Marine Corps Times (11/21, Schogol) reports that a ceremony was held Tuesday at the U.S. Marine Corps War Memorial to unveil new engravings that recognize the Afghanistan and Iraq campaigns. The Washington Times (11/21, Harper) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said, "As the Deputy Commander of Special Forces in Iraq and retired Navy SEAL, I saw the commitment, patriotism, and fortitude that American service members and their families display while serving our country. Our warriors who serve in Iraq and Afghanistan see more frequent deployments as our nation has been at sustained combat for longer than in any previous point in our nation's history. The Iraq and Afghanistan veterans are warriors in the field and leaders in the community. I salute them and am grateful for their service."

Local TV coverage was provided by Raleigh-Durham \(NC\) Spectrum News , KNVN-TV Chico, CA (11/21), and WRLH-TV Richmond, VA (11/21).

Petty Tapped For Interior Department Post On Water And Science.

American Security News (11/21) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke lauded the selection of Timothy Petty as the next assistant secretary for water and science at the Interior Department. Zinke said, "Dr. Tim Petty brings years of quality service and experience to the team at the department, and we could not be happier with the President's choice for the position. Dr. Petty has served as the acting assistant secretary and deputy assistant secretary for Water and Science at the department before, and we are excited to put him back to work for the American people in the [President Donald] Trump Administration."

FEC Probes Discrepancies At Former Zinke PAC.

Politico (11/21, Lefebvre) reported that the Federal Election Commission is requesting “a leadership PAC previously affiliated with Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to provide more details about its direct mail spending and to account for a $200,000 discrepancy in its account, among other issues in its most recent campaign finance report. SEAL PAC, which Zinke launched after winning his first congressional race in 2014, has until Dec. 26 to address the issues identified by the FEC, according to a request sent Monday” that “also asks about incomplete information related to some donors, excess contributions and potentially misclassified spending, some of which occurred after Zinke’s affiliation with the leadership PAC ended when he joined President Donald Trump’s Cabinet in March.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington \(DC\) Examiner (11/21, Siegel).

National Historic Site In Puerto Rico Reopens After Hurricane.

CNN (11/21, Green) reports that “by next week, two important areas of a national historic site in San Juan, Puerto Rico, damaged by Hurricane Maria will be open to visitors and back to normal operations.” The National Park Service announced Tuesday that “public tours resumed Tuesday at the Castillo San Cristóbal area of San Juan National Historic Site, and officials expect Castillo San Felipe del Morro to reopen as early as next week.” Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said, “For over 400 years, Castillo San Felipe del Morro has stood as guardian and symbol of Puerto Rico’s heritage, and it’s also a major tourism attraction for visitors from all over the world. I’m incredibly proud of the National Park Service and entire Interior family, who have been working nonstop to reopen this important cultural and tourism attraction. Part of rebuilding communities means rebuilding revenue streams so folks can get back to work, earn a living and care for their families. The National Park Service will continue to work closely with the people of Puerto Rico to restore life into this vibrant community.”

V.I. National Parks Reopen.

The St. Thomas Source (11/21) reports that “Christiansted National Historic Site and Buck Island Reef National Monument on St. Croix and Trunk Bay Beach at V.I. National Park on St. John all reopened Monday, the U.S. Interior Department announced.” Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said, “I couldn’t be more proud of the hard work of National Park Service staff, volunteers, and their partners in the Virgin Islands. Their commitment to the park and to the community is inspiring. I’ve heard many stories of staff tending to the needs of the park and their neighbors before even taking care of themselves.” He added, “We have a long way to go, but every day we make progress toward getting these parks fully functional to visitors and back to providing important economic support to these communities as they return to normal.”

Richmond Congressman, Interior Secretary Tackle Sexual Harassmen.

WWBT-TV Richmond, VA (11/21, Sullivan) reports on the sexual harassment complaints among employees in the National Park Service. Congressman Don McEachin has “joined other lawmakers in demanding the National Park Service put a stop to it.” He has “called for another hearing on the issue,” saying to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke during a budget hearing in June, “You have declared a zero-tolerance policy with the promise of updating policies, including new training requirements and new reporting procedures, but I would suggest to you that that is not enough.”

Senate Seeks Much Smaller Spending Cuts Than Trump And The House, At Some Agencies.

Government Executive (11/21, Katz) reports that “Senate Republicans are poised to fund several key agencies at significantly higher levels than the Trump administration requested, though Democrats are still decrying what they see as overly harsh reductions.” Notably, “at the Interior Department, a Senate measure unveiled on Monday would cut spending from current levels by just 1 percent.” The cutback “would be $370 million less severe than the House proposal and $470 million less than the administration’s request.” The article notes that “while the House bill also included language supporting separation incentives at Interior, such provisions were not included in the Senate bill.” Also, “at components such as the National Park Service, the Senate actually proactively spoke out against any workforce cuts.”

How Trump’s National Monuments Decision Could Affect Massive Deposit Of Fossils.

CBS News (11/21) reports that scientists are raising concerns that a decision to downsize the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument "could damage one of the richest deposits of dinosaur bones in the world." The article notes that "in the two decades since the 1.9 million-acre patch of desert was designated a national monument, 25 new species of dinosaurs have been discovered in its sands." Paleontologist Andy Farke said, "There's a possibility that fossils may be lost or destroyed. Things like fossil theft and vandalism. Once that record of our planet's history is gone, you know, we've lost something from the American story."

Yellowstone Mining Opponents Press Gianforte To Join Cause.

The AP (11/21, Brown) reports that "opponents of two gold mines proposed near Yellowstone National Park pressed Tuesday for Montana's lone U.S. House member to seek federal legislation to withdraw public lands near the park from future mining." According to the article, "after a measure stalled in the Senate, businesses and conservation groups said the support of U.S. Rep. Greg Gianforte is crucial to making permanent a temporary mining ban enacted last year on 47 square miles (121 square kilometers) of land north of Yellowstone." Gianforte "said in a statement Tuesday that he intends to introduce legislation on the issue but did not specify when that would happen or offer details on its contents."

Forest Service Will Consider Changes To Sage Grouse Protections.

The Casper \(WY\) Star-Tribune (11/21, Richards) reports that the Forest Service is "considering changes to sage grouse management in the West, a charge led by the Interior Department since earlier this year due to what the Interior Secretary described as Western 'anger' about federal overreach." In Wyoming, the Forest Service plans may focus on "grazing rights, a key complaint from ranchers." A spokesman for the Forest Service "said opening up the plans in light of the BLM decision to do the same was 'prudent' so that practices are manageable for ranchers, industry and others."

Additional coverage of the sage grouse issue was provided by the Powell \(WY\) Tribune (11/21, Davis).

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Tribal Leaders Take Aim At Oil And Gas Development.

The AP (11/21, Bryan) reports that "Native American activists and tribal leaders from around New Mexico are joining the chorus of environmentalists who have been fighting for years to stop oil and gas development." According to the article, "they are part of a groundswell as tribes across the U.S. organize around land issues, from a pipeline in North Dakota and the disputed boundaries of a national monument in Utah to concerns about the encroachment of energy development in an area of the Southwest dotted with archaeological sites tied to a civilization that gave rise to many of the region's modern tribes."

Calif. County Asks 9th Circ. To Rehear Tribal Casino Row.

Law360 (11/21, Lidgett) reports that "a California county on Monday urged the Ninth Circuit to rethink a panel ruling backing a lower court's support of the U.S. Department of the Interior's decision to take land into trust for a proposed Lone Band of Miwok Indians casino." Amador County "asked the panel to review en banc an October decision that upheld the DOI's lower court win in a case in which the county argued the tribe's casino project near Sacramento shouldn't have been greenlit."

Bureau Of Land Management

Trump Administration, Enviros Urge Court To Leave BLM Frack Ruling Intact.

Natural Gas Intelligence (11/21, Passut) reports the Trump Administration and environmental groups are arguing on the same side, albeit for different reasons, over an Obama-era rule governing hydraulic fracturing on public and tribal lands. In separate filings, attorneys for the environmental coalition and the BLM ask the US Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit Court to reject calls from four western states, two industry groups, and an Indian tribe for a rehearing over the rule. The BLM is looking to keep the rule intact so it can rescind the regulation, perhaps as early as January. Environmental groups want the court to issue a mandate to officially vacate the district court ruling, which would temporarily revive the regulation.

Bureau Of Reclamation

Las Vegas Children Study Birds On International Migratory Bird Day.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal (11/21, Erickson) reports that “about 30 other local children gathered at Tuesday’s International Migratory Bird Day event, a collaboration by Clark County Parks and Recreation and local environmental groups to teach children about bird migration.” According to the article, “experts showed children different bird eggs and nests, led games and passed out coloring books with pictures of birds.” Nathan Lenon, a biologist with the Bureau of Reclamation, “helped a little girl with pigtails and big, black sunglasses look for birds through binoculars.”

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

Investment In Partnership Is Good For Energy Dominance.

The World Oil (11/21) reports that Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement Director Scott A. Angelle “participated in meetings with BSEE staff, industry, Air Force leadership, and other stakeholders Tuesday and Wednesday in California.” Angelle said, “BSEE continues to develop partnerships with all stakeholders, all in an effort to enhance the Nation’s energy program while not backing away from the requirements for safe and environmentally-sustainable operations. We need robust energy production from the OCS and it must be safe and environmentally-sustainable.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

Colorado Parks & Wildlife To Receive $100K Grant.

The Brush \(CO\) News-Tribune (11/21) reports that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced that it plans “to award a $100,000 cooperative agreement to the Colorado Parks and Wildlife for the restoration of Gunnison Sagegrouse habitat.” The project “includes mechanically treating (mowing) areas of encroaching pinyon-juniper trees that currently have healthy established sagebrush understory within Gunnison sage-grouse habitat.” Also, “the treatment will remove remnant tree skeletons that remain from fire where current understory exhibits sagebrush reestablishment.”

How A Border Wall Could Drive The Jaguar Extinct In America.

The Arizona Republic (11/21, Loomis) reports that “the jaguar’s fate could hinge on the fate of President Donald Trump’s border-wall proposal.” Biologists and wildlife advocates believe “jaguars could pair off north of the border someday, if Americans leave the trail open and if a female follows it.” However, building “an impenetrable wall” would mean “the species will go extinct in this country.”

National Park Service

Park Service Expands Comment Period For Proposed Entry Fee Price Hike.

The Hill (11/21, Henry) reports that the National Park Service is “giving the public an extra month to comment on its proposal to hike entry fees at popular parks.” The public comment period for the proposal was extended “Tuesday to allow for another month of input, according to the Park Service website.” The NPS was “originally due to take comments through Thanksgiving, but its new deadline is Dec. 22.”

The AP (11/21) reports that “the Park Service said it wanted to accommodate interest from Congress and the public. More than 65,000 comments already have been submitted.”

Also reporting are the Washington Examiner (11/21, Siegel), the Seattle Times (11/21, Mapes), the Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (11/21, Harris), the Loveland \(CO\) Reporter-Herald (11/21), and KTVH-TV Helena, MT (11/21).

National Park Store Sold Trump Wine, Says Feds Weren’t Involved.

The Hill (11/21, Cama) reports that “a store in Virginia’s Shenandoah National Park sold wine produced by the Trump Winery as recently as September." According to the article, "the stores are operated by Delaware North Cos., which agrees to pay fees to the National Park Service (NPS) based on the annual revenues of its operations on park property." Mark Leach, "who manages the Shenandoah stores for Delaware North, said NPS and park managers had no role in the wine purchase decisions." NPS spokesman Jeremy Barnum "stressed that it was Delaware North that decided to sell the wine, not the park." Barnum said, "The National Park Service authorizes concessioners to sell categories of retail goods and products like t-shirts, baseball hats, and in this case wine. However, the NPS does not specify what brands of these products should be sold."

Silence Again Surrounds A Police Shooting In Fairfax County, This Time By U.S. Park Police.

On Tuesday morning, the Washington Post (11/21, Jackman) reported that the U.S. Park Police "shot a man in Fairfax County, Va., on Friday night." The Post add: "The man is in critical condition. And that's about all we know." According to the Post, "The Park Police refuse to identify the man they shot. Or the officer who shot him. Or why the officer shot him."

On Tuesday night, the Washington Post (11/21, Weil) reported that the FBI said it is investigating the shooting. According to the Post, "Two Park Police officers opened fire after pursuing a car that they said was connected with a hit-and-run crash in Alexandria. The chase ended in the the Mount Verrnon area of the county at Fort Hunt Road and Alexandria Avenue."

JFK Birth Centennial Ending On Assassination Anniversary.

The AP (11/22) reports that "a year of events marking the 100th anniversary of President John F. Kennedy's birth is drawing to a close exactly 54 years after his assassination." National park rangers at the John Fitzgerald Kennedy National Historic Site will "lay a wreath outside Kennedy's childhood home in Brookline, Massachusetts, and a 21-gun salute by an honor guard will follow."

Arches Road Construction Nears End, Will Take A Break For Thanksgiving Weekend.

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (11/21, Wharton) reports that Arches National Park officials say a road construction project that "included resurfacing, restoring and rehabilitating 23 miles of roads and pullouts" is nearing completion. According to the article, "with favorable weather, the project could be completed by the end of November or early December."

Gulf Islands National Seashore Road Closures Cause Travel Headaches.

The Pensacola \(FL\) News Journal (11/21, Gabriel) reports that "ongoing roadwork in Gulf Islands National Seashore prompted 167 people to cancel campground reservations for the Thanksgiving holiday, the National Park Service said." Brent Everitt, a spokesman for Gulf Islands National Seashore, "said the park service was working to reopen the two roads as soon as possible."

Office Of Insular Affairs

Over 460 Coconut Rhino Beetles, Larvae Collected.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (11/22) reports that "combined efforts to eradicate the coconut rhinoceros beetle infestation on Rota have successfully thwarted over 439 grubs and 39 adult beetles." Ray Roberto, coordinator for the DLNR Invasive Species, "said that personnel have been tracking the CRB count since the beginning of October and that grubs have been collected and destroyed." Roberto said, "We are very appreciative of the combined efforts of our agencies and extend our gratitude to the grant funding that was recently awarded by the Office of Insular Affairs to continue these efforts."

Office Of Surface Mining

Conservation Groups Argue Peabody Leases Were Improperly Approved.

Wyoming Public Radio (11/21, McKim) reports that "conservation groups WildEarth Guardians and the Sierra Club recently filed a complaint with the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, OSMRE, over two coal leases approved in 2012." The groups claim "Peabody Energy's North and South Porcupine leases, which expanded the North Antelope Rochelle mine in the Powder River Basin, were improperly approved and that the company should no longer be allowed to mine there.” The complaint urges “OSMRE to investigate the leases, which were signed by a district manager of the Bureau of Land Management rather than a state manager.”

US Geological Survey

NASA’s Discovery Of ‘Water’ On Mars Might Actually Be Sand, New Study Finds.

The U.S. News & World Report (11/21, Newman) reports that “the water that NASA revealed might be on Mars is most likely sand, according to a new U.S. Geological Survey study.” In 2015, NASA scientists “confirmed they had strong evidence that dark streaks – known as ‘recurring slope lineae’ – cascading down mountainsides on the red planet were caused by water.” However, “on Monday, the journal Nature Geoscience published a study conducted by a team of researchers from the U.S. Geological Survey, the Planetary Science Institute, the University of Arizona and Durham University in England that revealed the darker streaks were more likely grains of sand and dust rather than seeping water.” USGS scientist and lead author Colin Dundas said in a statement, “We’ve thought of RSL as possible liquid water flows, but the slopes are more like what we expect for dry sand. This new understanding of RSL supports other evidence that shows that Mars today is very dry.”

Also reporting are the Los Angeles Times (11/21, Khan), Fox News (11/21, Cofield), Newsweek (11/21, Osborne), and the Economic Times \(IND\) (11/21).

Additional Reading.

- The Real Science Behind The Unreal Predictions Of Major Earthquakes In 2018. Washington Post (11/21, Kaplan).
- U.K. Water Companies Sometimes Use Dowsing Rods To Find Pipes. NPR (11/21, Domonosk).
- Parts Of A Deer With Chronic Wasting Disease Entered Oregon. Oregonian (11/21, Monroe).
- Geologists Keep Finding More Northwest Earthquake Faults. Oregon Public Broadcasting (11/21, Banse).
- Finding Fault(s): Geologists Keep Finding More Nearby Earthquake Makers. Ashland \(OR\) Jefferson Public Radio (11/21, Banse).

Opinion Pieces

The Voice Missing From The Elephant Trophy Debate? Africans.

Rosie Cooney, chair of the International Union for Conservation of Nature’s Sustainable Use and Livelihoods Specialist Group, writes in the Washington Post (11/21) that the debate over US elephant trophy imports from Zimbabwe and Zambia lacks voices from those living alongside the elephants. Cooney argues that the “first step” to resolving the issue “is to recognize that outrage from afar never solved a local problem. We need to hear the voices of local people. Well-meaning people in the West need to stop shouting and start listening.”

Realini: National Monuments Inspire Entrepreneurs.

In an op-ed for the Durango \(CO\) Herald (11/21, Realini), Carol Realini, a member of the Conservation for Economic Growth Coalition, supports “the protection of public lands for the quality of life they provide as well as their economic importance.” According to Realini, “not only do protected public lands like national parks and monuments support robust recreation and tourism industries, they also act like magnets for economic activity – drawing companies and talented employees alike, that seek out these incredible places.” Realini claims that the Trump Administration’s “attack on our national monuments is an affront to entrepreneurs who choose to live and work near America’s greatest asset: our protected public lands.”

Congress Must Fix Wildfire Funding Problem.

In an op-ed for the Tallahassee \(FL\) Democrat (11/21, Morgan), Temperince Morgan, the executive director for The Nature Conservancy in Florida, urges Congress to “provide funding for fire suppression and change the way the U.S. pays to fight wildfires.” Morgan notes that “when the U.S. Forest Service and Department of the Interior do their annual budgeting, they have to plan for costs based on past fire seasons, but fires are increasing.” According to Morgan, “fighting fires drains the agencies’ budgets of money that could go toward making sure forests are healthy and provide the benefits expected of our nation's public lands." As a result, "they are forced to borrow funds from programs like recreation and forest health to make up shortfalls."

Additional Reading.

- President Trump Puts His Indifference To The Environment On Hold For Elephants. Huffington Post (11/21, D'Angelo).
- Don't Trim Grand Staircase. If Anything, Expand It.. High Country \(CO\) News (11/22, Worthy).
- National Parks Belong To American People. Montana Standard (11/22, Abbey).
- Monument Expansion Result Of A Faulty Process. Eugene \(OR\) Register-Guard (11/22, Roberts).
- Elephants' Reprieve: How About The Rest Of The Animal Kingdom? The Baltimore Sun (11/21).
- Lifting Of Wildlife Trophy Ban Would Be Unacceptable. Palm Springs \(CA\) Desert Sun (11/21, Chumbley).
- Editorial: Study Of Surface Mining, Health Issues Should Resume. Williamson \(WV\) Daily News (11/21).
- Lindblom: Western Wildfires Hurt Virginia, Too, But Congress Can Help. Martinsville \(VA\) Bulletin (11/22, Lindblom).
- Drones Intrude On The Outdoor Experience. High Country \(CO\) News (11/21, McEachern).
- No Drilling In North America's Serengeti. Coastal View News \(CA\) (11/21, Graham).
- Protecting An Endangered Species. Keyser \(WV\) Mineral Daily News Tribune (11/21, Sanerib).
- A Troubling Look At The Human Toll Of Mountaintop Removal Mining. Yale University \(CT\) Environment 360 (11/21, Schiffman).

Top National News

Media Analyses: Trump Tacitly Endorses Moore.

Addressing reporters at the White House on Tuesday, President Trump publicly spoke for the first time about allegations that Alabama Senate candidate Roy Moore sexually assaulted teenage girls decades ago, saying that the Republican has denied the accusations. Trump also blasted the Democrat in the Dec. 12 special election, ex-US Attorney Doug Jones. Coverage casts Trump as having tacitly endorsed Moore.

On NBC Nightly News (11/21, story 2, 2:50, Holt), Lester Holt reported that Trump is "ending his silence, acknowledging Moore's denial [of the allegations] and extending him backhanded endorsement by urging voters not to support" Jones. NBC's Kristen Welker added, "About face. President Trump initially distanced himself from...Moore. But today, all but endorse[d] him. Is an accused child molester better than a Democrat?" Trump was shown saying, "He totally denies it. He says it didn't happen. You have to listen to him, also. You are talking about, he said 40 years ago, this did not happen."

In the lead segment for the CBS Evening News (11/21, lead story, 2:40, Mason), Anthony Mason flatly asserted that "Trump has decided it is better to have an accused serial sexual predator in the Senate than a Democrat." CBS broadcast a clip of Trump saying, "I can tell you one thing for sure, we don't need a liberal person in there, a Democrat." CBS' Margaret Brennan added that Trump "voiced support for...Moore, who is facing multiple sexual misconduct allegations, including with teen-aged girls when he was in his 30s." Trump: "Well, he denies. I mean, Roy Moore denies it. And by the way, he gives a total denial. And I do have to say 40 years is a long time. He has run eight races, and this has never come up."

USA Today (11/21, Jackson) reports that Trump "all but endorsed" Moore, telling reporters that "he doesn't want another Democrat in the US Senate and" emphasizing the GOP candidate's "denials of multiple allegations of sexual misconduct involving teenage girls. 'I can tell you one thing for sure: We don't need a liberal person in there, a Democrat,' Trump" said. And of the accusations, Trump said, "Roy Moore denies it; that's all I can say."

Under the headline "Trump Backs Roy Moore For Senate Seat Despite Sex Allegations," Bloomberg News (11/21, Sink) reports that Trump "effectively backed" Moore and "attacked Jones, a former federal prosecutor, declaring, 'You don't need somebody who's soft on crime, like Jones.' Trump also said Jones was 'bad on borders, bad with the military, bad for the Second Amendment.'" The New York Times (11/21, Shear) reports that "Trump's defense of Mr. Moore and his rejection of" Jones "in the race were tantamount to an endorsement of Mr. Moore, who has been abandoned by nearly all of the Republican establishment in Washington.”

The Hill (11/21, Fabian, Hagen) reported, “With Moore refusing to exit the race, Trump has apparently decided to give a tacit endorsement to the embattled candidate in the hopes that a victory in Alabama will keep his agenda on track. It’s a departure from just two weeks ago, when the White House sought to distance itself from Moore and even suggested he might need to step down.”

The Washington Post (11/21, Nakamura) reports that Trump “appeared to offer support” for Moore, “saying the former state judge ‘totally denies’ allegations that he sexually molested underage girls years ago.” Trump also blasted Jones “as being ‘terrible on crime, terrible on borders.’” Reuters (11/21, Mason) reports that Trump “defended” Moore, telling reporters the candidate “had denied allegations of sexual misconduct and emphasizing that he did not want” Jones “to win. Trump has previously said that Moore should step aside if the allegations were true.”

The AP (11/21, Miller) says that Trump “discounted allegations of sexual assault against...Moore,” addressing “the swirling controversy...for the first time since top Republican leaders called on Moore to step aside more than a week ago.” Trump “noted that the allegations concerned behavior alleged to have happened decades ago. ‘Forty years is a long time,’ Trump said, questioning why it took so long for Moore’s accusers to come forward.” The AP adds that White House press secretary Sarah Sanders “had said only that Trump ‘thinks that the people of Alabama should make the decision on who their next senator should be.’”

Under the headline “Trump Backs Moore, Saying Candidate ‘Totally Denies’ Allegations By Women,” the Washington Times (11/21, Boyer) reports that Trump “stood up for” Moore, while the Los Angeles Times (11/21, Bierman) says the President “even left the door open for campaigning on behalf of Moore. ‘I’ll be letting you know next week,’ he said.” The Washington Examiner (11/21, Westwood) says that Trump “seemingly sided with Moore” in saying “he believed the former state supreme court judge’s denials.” The Wall Street Journal (11/21, Radnofsky, Hook), New York Post (11/21, Fredericks), Breitbart (11/21, Spiering), Townhall (11/21, Brown), Politico (11/21, Tamborrino), and Roll Call (11/21, Bennett) are among the media outlets offering similar reports on Trump’s remarks.

In an online “analysis” for CNN (11/21, Cillizza), Chris Cillizza said that Trump’s remarks about Moore are “only likely to add to his party’s growing problems in the race.” Cillizza added, “Everything Trump said...about Moore and the Alabama Senate race runs directly opposite of what the leaders within the national GOP have said in recent weeks. Literally everything. The boost Moore will get from Trump’s comments will make it that much harder to remove the controversial judge from the race or to organize a serious write-in campaign against him.”

In another online analysis for CNN (11/21, Zeleny), Jeff Zeleny said that Trump’s “decision to embrace” Moore “was rooted in several factors, but one of the biggest: the noise and confusion from a recent tidal wave of sexual harassment and misconduct allegations from Hollywood to media to politics. ‘(It) made it easier and easier to stick with Moore,’ a Republican source close to the White House said.” Zeleny added that Trump’s comments “also reflect precisely what he has been arguing in the West Wing for the last few days: Moore is denying the charges. He isn’t wavering. So who are we to try and step in? Two Republicans familiar with the President’s thinking offered that explanation about his comments.”

Rep. Don Beyer (D-VA) said on CNN’s Situation Room (11/21), “It’s not surprising that Donald Trump would really defend all of Roy Moore’s denials, because he’s been denying all the 16 women that have come forward already. These are both men with long histories of women coming forward with these allegations.”

Rep. Mike Quigley (D-IL) said on CNN’s Situation Room (11/21), “To paraphrase [Trump’s] own daughter, there’s a special place in hell for those who back a child abuser for the United States Senate. There is absolutely no worse place we can go from here. It’s just unimaginable. ... Let’s just remember, this is a candidate, Trump, who has a lot of women alleging the same sorts of thing about him, so I think in his own mind this is okay, especially if time has passed.”

CNN political director David Chalian said on CNN’s Situation Room (11/21), “What is astonishing is that [Trump] has now basically endorsed an accused child molester for the United States Senate. He is going to go down there, perhaps, if he does, and...he’s going to help Roy Moore. ... The core Trump supporters who overlap a lot with the core Moore supporters are going to be feel energized to have the President on board with this campaign.”

Rep. Charlie Dent (R-PA) said on MSNBC’s Morning Joe (11/21) that “Moore would be a terrible addition to the Senate. He should not be elected. He was disqualified before the recent allegations of sexual misconduct. He should not be elected. I would never support a man like that."

Amy Walter of the Cook Political Report said on Fox News' Special Report (11/21), "What's remarkable about the way that Roy Moore has been running the campaign is he's been focused solely on Roy Moore and he has spent very little time talking about Doug Jones. Today, his campaign [is] going out and defending themselves, going after the credibility of these women. ... If you are Roy Moore and you're spending more time trying to defend and discredit women than you are talking about policies or about your opponent, that is not a great place to be a couple weeks out from Election Day."

Politico: In Private Talks, Trump Expressed Doubt About Moore Accusers' Allegations. Politico (11/21, Isenstadt) reported that Trump's "near-endorsement" of Moore came after "days of behind-the-scenes talks in which he vented about Moore's accusers and expressed skepticism about their accounts. During animated conversations with senior Republicans and White House aides," Trump "said he doubted the stories presented by Moore's accusers and questioned why they were emerging now, just weeks before the election, according to two White House advisers and two other people familiar with the talks. The White House advisers said the president drew parallels between Moore's predicament and the one he faced just over a year ago when, during the final weeks of the 2016 campaign, Trump confronted a long line of women who accused him of harassment" – allegations Trump "adamantly denied."

Poll: Moore Leads Jones 47%-45%. In an "exclusive," WBRC-TV Birmingham, AL (11/21, Journey) reported on its website that a Raycom News Network/Strategy Research poll of 3,000 likely Alabama voters shows Moore leading Jones 47%-45%, with 5% undecided and 3% saying they intended to write in a candidate. The report did not indicate when the new poll was in the field, but WBRC-TV said, "The new poll suggests allegations against Moore have chipped away at his lead, which was [11 points] in a November 8th Raycom News Network poll conducted by Strategy Research."

Poll By Firm That Has Worked For Moore: Moore Leads By Six Points. Breitbart (11/21, Boyle) reported that a WT&S Consulting (R) poll of 11,641 Alabama likely voters, taken Nov. 18-20, shows Moore leading Jones 46.4%-40.%, with 13% undecided. The poll "includes 60.9 percent Republicans and 39.1 percent Democrats – approximately the margins by which President Donald Trump defeated failed 2016 Democratic presidential nominee Hillary Rodham Clinton in Alabama." Breitbart said that WT&S Consulting "has done some work for the Moore campaign this election cycle, but before the runoff in the GOP primary where Moore" unseated appointed Sen. Luther Strange.

Nationwide Poll: 60% Say Moore Should Be Expelled From Senate If Elected. The Hill (11/21, Delk) reported that in a Quinnipiac University national poll of 1,415 US voters, taken Nov. 15-20, 60% of those surveyed said "Moore should be expelled from the chamber if he wins" the Dec. 12 election, while 28% said he "should not. Republicans were the only voter group in the survey to say Moore should not be expelled from the Senate, 49 to 33 percent, while the majority of voters in every other category of political party, gender, and education level said the Senate should remove him from office."

Under the headline "Nearly Half Of Republicans Do Not Want Roy Moore Expelled If He Wins: Poll," the Washington Times (11/21, Persons) quotes Quinnipiac's Tim Malloy as saying, "Roy Moore may make it to the Senate chambers, but an overwhelming majority of American voters would like to rip the welcome mat out from under him and send him packing back to Alabama."

Jones Ad Invokes Ivanka Trump, Sessions, Shelby. Politico (11/21, Strauss) reported that the Jones campaign is "airing two new television ads aimed at winning over Republicans who could be persuaded to cross over and vote for the Democrat. One ad, called 'Voices,' began airing Monday night and highlights Ivanka Trump, Sen. Richard Shelby (R-Ala.), and Attorney General Jeff Sessions saying they have no reason to doubt the accusations of a number of women who have accused Moore of pursuing them romantically while he was in his 30s and they were teenagers."

The Washington Post (11/21, Weigel, Scherer) reports that in that ad, the President's "daughter is quoted saying of the Moore allegations: 'There's a special place in hell for people who prey on children.' Sessions is quoted from a congressional hearing where he was asked about the Moore story: 'I have no reason to doubt these young women.' Shelby, who has been critical of Moore, is quoted on his plan to write in another name on the ballot." The Hill (11/21, Greenwood) reported that in the spot, a narrator adds, "Conservative voices putting children and women over party – doing what's right."

Woman In UAB Sex Abuse Case: Jones A Hypocrite For Stance On Moore Accusers. Alabama

Live (11/21, Yurkanin) reported that Brittany Benefield, “who sued her university in 2001 over sexual abuse she allegedly suffered as a 15-year-old,” says that “Jones questioned the timing and motivation of her accusations while defending employees of the University of Alabama at Birmingham in a $40 million lawsuit. ... Jones has said he finds Moore’s accusers credible. ‘I find it to be the height of hypocrisy that he sets his campaign to be on the moral high ground against Roy Moore,’ said Benefield. In public statements about the case, in his role defending university officials, Jones cast doubt on her claim that the university officials were responsible. ‘The charges against UAB administrators and coaches are entirely without merit and represent nothing more than a cynical attempt to extort money by slandering this institution and its employees,’ Jones said at the time.”

Moore Camp Offers “New Evidence” Undermining Accusers’ Claims. The Washington Examiner (11/21, Morrongiello) reported that supporters of Moore “offered several pieces of ‘new evidence’ on Tuesday that they claimed should discredit the two women who accused” Moore “of sexual assault.” For example, ex-Moore chief of staff Ben Dupree “said Leigh Corfman...was lying when she claimed” Moore “would pick her up around the corner from her mother’s house when she was barely a teenager and take her back to his home. ‘Corfman claims that Moore picked her up around the corner from her house. However, according to public records, we’ve been able to find that Corfman’s supposed pick-up place was more than a mile away from her mother’s house,’ Dupree said, claiming that Corfman was living with her father at the time.”

Trump: AT&T Purchase Of Time Warner “Not A Good Deal For The Country.”

President Trump on Tuesday “stood by his criticism” of AT&T’s deal to buy Time Warner, Inc., Reuters (11/21, Bartz) reports. As he left the White House for Florida, Trump said, “I’m not going to get involved in litigation, but personally I’ve always felt that that was a deal that’s not a good deal for the country. ... I think your pricing’s going to go up, I don’t think it’s a good deal for the country.” The Justice Department has sued to stop the deal, and Reuters says the case will get more attention than other merger challenges “because Trump has been a vocal critic of Time Warner’s CNN, and opposed AT&T’s purchase of Time Warner on the campaign trail last year.” A Wall Street Journal (11/21) editorial takes a negative view of the DOJ lawsuit, arguing that whether or not Trump inspired it, the suit misunderstands markets and undercuts the rule of law.

The Hill (11/21, Greenwood) reports that that DOJ “allegedly demanded earlier this month that AT&T sell off CNN’s parent company from Time Warner as a condition for regulatory approval of the sale,” which “immediately prompted questions about whether it was politically motivated, given Trump’s frequent criticism of CNN.” Bloomberg News (11/21, Sink) reports that during the campaign, Trump said his Administration would not allow the merger, and “he’s tweeted repeated criticism of CNN since assuming office. Lawyers for the two companies may argue that Trump’s statements indicate undue political influence over regulators considering the merger.” The Wall Street Journal (11/21, Radnofsky, Fitzgerald) also reports on Trump’s comments.

Murkowski Backs Individual Mandate Repeal’s Inclusion In Tax Bill.

Politico (11/21, Diamond) reports that Sen. Lisa Murkowski wrote in an op-ed for the Alaskan newspaper Daily News-Miner that she supports efforts to repeal the ACA’s individual mandate. Murkowski wrote, “I have always supported the freedom to choose. ... I believe that the federal government should not force anyone to buy something they do not wish to buy, in order to avoid being taxed.” Murkowski’s support “may be a boon for Senate Republicans’ tax legislation, which includes mandate repeal and is expected to be taken up on the Senate floor next week.” However, a Murkowski spokesperson “told POLITICO that the comments should not be construed as support for the tax bill, which does not yet appear to have sufficient support to pass the chamber.”

Senate Security Spending Bill Includes Funds For Border Wall.

The Washington Times (11/21, Dinan) reports that the new homeland security bill released by Senate Republicans this week includes “$1.6 billion for the first installment of President Trump’s border wall.” The measure does not use the term “wall” but “calls for $1.6 billion in funding for ‘physical barriers’ and border roads – matching Mr. Trump’s original request for money to build or repair fencing along 74 more miles of the U.S.-Mexico line.” A House security spending bill “with the money included” has already passed.

WPost Analysis: Administration Building A “Bureaucratic Wall” To Limit Immigration. The Washington Post (11/21, Sacchetti, Miroff) reports that while Trump’s vision of a wall along the US-Mexico border “may never be realized, and almost certainly not as a 2,000-mile physical structure spanning sea to sea," in "a systematic and less visible way, his administration is following a blueprint to reduce the number of foreigners living in the United States – those who are undocumented and those here legally – and overhaul the US immigration system for generations to come." According to the Post, "federal officials are wielding executive authority to assemble a bureaucratic wall that could be more effective than any concrete and metal one." The Administration has "moved to slash the number of refugees, accelerate deportations and terminate the provisional residency of more than a million people, among other measures." The White House, the Post adds, "is attempting to shift the country back toward the tighter controls on immigration in place before the 1960s."

FCC Chairman Proposes Repeal Of Net Neutrality Rules.

FCC Chairman Ajit Pai on Tuesday proposed repealing net neutrality rules, a move that media reports largely case as a victory for large Internet service providers like AT&T, Comcast, and Verizon. The Los Angeles Times (11/21, Puzanghera) says the move set up "a vote next month to roll back the controversial Obama-era initiative," and "triggered another round in a fight dating to 2003 over whether the government should be actively involved in assuring the unfettered flow of information on the internet or leave it to market forces." While Republicans, "who now have a 3-2 majority on the FCC, are poised to win this latest battle," marking "a significant victory in the party's deregulatory push since Trump took office," the fight "is probably headed to courts, assuming the FCC repeals the rules as expected in a vote on Dec. 14." Pai, the AP (11/21) reports, believes the net neutrality rules "discourage the ISPs from making investments in their network that would provide even better and faster online access." Pai said in a statement, "Under my proposal, the federal government will stop micromanaging the internet."

The New York Times (11/21, Kang) takes a decidedly negative tone toward Pai's proposal, saying it "clear[s] the way for companies to charge more and block access to some websites." The Times adds that the "clear winners" will be "the giant companies that provide internet access to phones and computers, which have fought for years against broadband regulations." To the Wall Street Journal (11/21, McKinnon, Knutson), the plan is a victory for cable and wireless companies that will make way for deals between ISPs and online media and other services. Similarly, the Washington Post (11/21, Fung) says Pai's move "hands a win to broadband companies such as AT&T, Verizon and Comcast."

Reuters (11/21, Shepardson) also calls the plan "a victory for big internet service providers such as AT&T Inc, Comcast Corp and Verizon Communications," and USA Today (11/21, Snider) reports that while passage of the plan "would be seen as a victory for big telecom and cable companies such as AT&T, Comcast and Verizon," consumer advocates and Net media companies "including Facebook, Google and Netflix are concerned that telecom and cable companies could give preferential benefit to their own services and content." Similarly, The Hill (11/21, Neidig) says that while the move "is a win for companies like Verizon, Comcast and AT&T," to "net neutrality supporters, repealing the rules means giving those companies a free pass to block, slow or favor certain internet content."

Politico (11/21, McGill) reports that the plan was "quickly blasted" by the FCC's two Democrats, Jessica Rosenworcel and Mignon Clyburn. Rosenworcel called it "ridiculous and offensive" to Americans and Clyburn "said it is a giveaway to the country's largest communications companies." The plan also drew fire from congressional Democrats. Rep. Frank Pallone and Sens. Ron Wyden, Ed Markey and Brian Schatz "all slammed the announcement, with Markey calling for a 'firestorm of opposition.'" to the plan. Bloomberg News (11/21, Shields) says House Minority Leader Pelosi blasted the proposal, saying in an email that it is "an all-out assault on the entrepreneurship, innovation and competition at the heart of the internet. ... The administration is moving to destroy the openness and dynamism of the internet." Meanwhile GOP Reps. Greg Walden and Marsha Blackburn praised Pai's plan, saying it shows the FCC "understands the importance of making sure the internet continues to flourish under a light-touch regulatory regime,"

The Washington Times (11/21, Richardson) describes "outrage" over the plan from "Democrats, progressives and celebrities who have made net neutrality a cause celebre." In addition to lawmakers, actor and comedian Patton Oswalt "posted a tweet calling on supporters to 'bombard' Mr. Pai, listing his email and phone number." NARAL Pro-Choice America said the proposal "would make it harder to get information on how & where to access abortion. And it will make it harder for activists to organize against Trump's anti-choice, racist, extremist agenda." ABC World News Tonight (11/21, story 11, 0:25, Muir) briefly reported on the proposal Tuesday evening.

A New York Times (11/21, Saba) analysis says the Administration is "scrambling its media signals" as DOJ sued to block the merger at the same time the FCC "intends to scrap rules that force internet providers to treat web traffic equally." The Times says Trump Administration "watchdogs...roaming all over the field," stands "in contrast to President Barack Obama's tenure, when the F.C.C. and the Justice Department looked to the same lodestar for guidance on competition." Meanwhile the Trump Administration's "confused approach makes for a blurry regulatory picture."

In an op-ed for Roll Call (11/21), Sen. Ted Cruz and FCC Commissioner Michael O'Rielly write that the Obama Administration "made the decision to set aside decades of bipartisan agreement and enact a radical proposal that reclassified the internet as a regulated public utility." Those regulations "give federal bureaucrats new authority to regulate pricing and terms of service and eventually even collect billions in new taxes." Pai "seeks to repeal the so-called Open Internet Order and return the internet to its original classification as an information service, which allowed the internet to flourish." However, there are already "scores of politicians and state and local regulators who have indicated an interest in replicating the Obama administration's fatally flawed rules at the state and local level," which is why "it is imperative that the FCC establish a strong deregulatory federal framework for broadband regulations and preempt state and local regulators from having the opportunity to implement the next internet power grab."

Gallup Poll Finds Worry About Economy At Lowest Level In 18 Years.

The Washington Free Beacon (11/21, Meyer) reports that a new Gallup poll found "Americans' worry about the economy are at the lowest level seen in 18 years, according to a poll from Gallup." According to the poll, "only 15 percent of Americans see the economy as a top problem facing the United States." However, Americans "are increasingly seeing poor government as a major problem." Twenty-three percent "say they are dissatisfied with government, which is a response that rates higher than any other issue and has remained the top problem for every month this year."

Whitefish Suspends Puerto Rico Work Over Unpaid Bills.

The New York Times (11/21, Robles) reports that Whitefish Energy Holdings, the power company hired to help restore power to Puerto Rico, will be "standing down" because of the tens of millions of dollars it is owed for several weeks of work. Despite being fired last month "after widespread criticism and multiple investigations of a $300 million contract it received to help repair the island's power grid," Whitefish and the workers it employed "were supposed to stay on the job until the end of the month." Whitefish "has billed about $103 million – and $83 million is still outstanding."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Who To Blame For Your Subway Nightmare." The New York Times (11/21) editorializes that the failure within New York's subway system "has plenty of fathers: governors and mayors who, one after another, siphoned money from mass transit to pay for whatever else suited their budgetary fancy." The Times ridicules the current system as featuring cars that "now wheeze along at the mercy of warped tracks, frayed cables and a signal system that was state of the art, maybe, when Americans were dancing the jitterbug." The Times points to George Pataki's tenure as New York governor as the beginning of a streak of elected officials who have been willing to divert money away from the system in favor of other priorities.

Washington Post.

"The United States Torments Its Poorest Neighbor." The Washington Post (11/21) editorializes that the Administration's decision "to expel nearly 60,000 Haitians who have lived legally in the United States since a massive earthquake devastated their homeland in 2010" means that "the world's richest and most powerful country is intentionally giving the Western Hemisphere's poorest and most vulnerable nation a gratuitous kick in the rear end." The Post calls DHS assertions that the number of displaced Haitians has decreased significantly and that Haiti can receive normal levels of returned citizens both "unsubstantiated" and "specious." The Post concludes by labeling the decision "a beggar-thy-neighbor policy unworthy of a great power and unsuited to a nation with a tradition of compassion."

"Jeff Sessions Keeps Waging His Failing War Against Sanctuary Cities." A Washington Post

(11/21) says that while the Trump Administration “is on an impressive judicial losing streak” against sanctuary cities, it “remains undeterred, as the Justice Department girds for more battles whose stakes – a few million dollars in federal funds withheld from offending cities – make a mockery of the dire rhetoric deployed by officials in Washington.” The Post argues that the Administration “has no valid legal justification for its insistence that state and local law enforcement officers act as proxies for federal immigration agents and no basis for threatening to withhold funding if they refuse.”

“Why Would Trump Choose This Academic To Lead The Census Bureau.” The Washington Post (11/21) editorializes that Thomas Brunell, President Trump’s reported preferred candidate for the role of deputy director of the Census Bureau, would be a poor choice for the position. The Post points to Brunell’s “political affiliations and previous work” as factors that could “harm perceptions of the bureau’s integrity, an institution in which Americans must have complete faith.” The Post asserts that Census Bureau leaders should be “seasoned in government operations and ready to take on a huge management challenge” due to the perennially underfunded nature of the bureau.

Wall Street Journal.

“Trump’s Dubious Trust-Busting.” A Wall Street Journal (11/21) editorial takes a negative view of DOJ’s lawsuit to block AT&T’s acquisition of Time-Warner, arguing that whether or not President Trump inspired it, the suit misunderstands markets and undercuts the rule of law.

“Keystone XL On The Cusp.” The Wall Street Journal (11/21) editorializes that the risks presented by the proposed Keystone XL pipeline are more than justified because of the project’s economic benefits. The Journal opines that the true agenda of critics of the pipeline is to keep oil from being removed from the ground at all, which the Journal finds to be an unrealistic goal. The Journal also asserts that pipelines are the safest way to deliver crude oil.

“China’s Burma ‘Solution.’” A Wall Street Journal (11/21) editorial says that as international calls for action against the Burmese army over the Rohingya humanitarian crisis intensify, Chinese Foreign Minister Wang Yi proposed a solution that would likely encourage the Burmese government to continue mistreating the Muslim minorities. The Journal says Wang’s remarks signal that Beijing’s support for the Burmese army remains steadfast, threatening to accelerate Burma’s shift toward extreme nationalism.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

FCC Plans To End Net Neutrality In Win For Cable, Wireless Firms
Waking Up Alone: How Elite Plotters Toppled Mugabe’s 37-Year Reign
Mueller Probes Jared Kushner’s Contacts With Foreign Leaders
Uber Reveals Data Breach And Cover-up, Leading To Two Firings
Harvard Faces DOJ Probe Over Affirmative-Action Policies

New York Times:

FCC Plans Net Neutrality Repeal In A Victory For Telecoms
How Trump’s Hands-Off Approach To Policing Is Frustrating Some Chiefs
Trump Defends Roy Moore, Citing Candidate’s Denial Of Sexual Misconduct
Democrats Move Swiftly Against Conyers Amid Latest Harassment Charges
Toronto Transit Chief Is Tapped To Run New York’s Ailing Subways
They Stayed Put, but Their City Disappeared
Robert Mugabe Resigns As Zimbabwe’s President, Ending 37-Year Rule
‘Hi, Drumstick.’ President Trump Pardons A Turkey, And Likes It.

Washington Post:

Trump Boosts Moore In Ala.
FCC Moves To End Net Neutrality Standard
Zimbabwe’s Longtime Leader Steps Down
Airbnb Takes Up Residence In DC’s Debate On Gentrification
How Trump Is Building A Wall Of Bureaucracy

Financial Times:

Robert Mugabe Steps Down As President Of Zimbabwe
Apple's iPhone X Assembled By Illegal Student Labor
Harassment In The Workplace: FT Readers Share Their Experiences
EU And UK Aim To Strike Brexit Divorce Deal Within 3 Weeks

Washington Times:

Courts Use Trump's Pontificating To Rule Against His Policies
Progressives Erupt Over FCC Proposal To Repeal Obama-Era Net Neutrality Rules
Pakistan's Islamic Schools Rife With Child Sex Abuse That Goes Unpunished
Putin's Plan To End Syrian War Strengthens Russian Influence In Middle East
South Korean Party Leader Choo Sees Promise In Trump's Hawkish Stand On North Korea
Brazil Nears Constitutional Ban On Abortion With No Exceptions

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Trump-Roy Moore; Charlie Rose Fired; Michigan Rep-Sexual Harassment Settlement; Holiday Travel Rush; Weather Forecast; Russia-Syria Meeting; Border Patrol Agents Attacked; Zimbabwe Dictator Resigns; Black Friday Shopping; Alabama-Escapee Manhunt; FCC-Net Neutrality Roll Back; HBO Cyber Attack Suspect Charged; Thanksgiving-American Turkey.

CBS: Trump-Roy Moore; Charlie Rose Fired; Charlie Rose Fired-CBS; Cleveland Rape Crisis Center; Michigan Rep-Sexual Harassment Settlement; Immigration Policy-Protected Status; Zimbabwe Dictator Resigns; TSA-New Screening Procedure; Uber-Security Breach; WH-Turkey Pardon; Workplace Harassment.

NBC: Uber-Security Breach; Trump-Roy Moore; Charlie Rose Fired; Michigan Rep-Sexual Harassment Settlement; Border Patrol Agents Attacked; Argentine Missing Sub; Holiday Travel Rush; Generic Drug Price; Harvard-Discrimination Lawsuit; Alaska-Northern Lights; WH-Turkey Pardon; High School Principal-Charity.

Network TV At A Glance:

Charlie Rose Fired – 11 minutes, 40 seconds

Trump-Roy Moore – 8 minutes, 45 seconds

Michigan Rep-Sexual Harassment Settlement – 3 minutes, 35 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: David Cassidy Dies; Uber-Security Breach; Trump-Roy Moore; Michigan Rep-Sexual Harassment Settlement.

CBS: David Cassidy Dies; Trump-Roy Moore; Charlie Rose Fired; Uber-Security Breach; Black Friday Shopping.

FOX: Michigan Rep-Sexual Harassment Settlement; Trump-Roy Moore; Charlie Rose Fired; David Cassidy Dies.

NPR: Trump-Roy Moore; Michigan Rep-Sexual Harassment Settlement; Federal Reserve Appointment; David Cassidy Dies; FCC-Net Neutrality Roll Back.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — No public events scheduled.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — No public schedule announced.

US Senate: On recess until 27 November.

US House: On recess until 27 November.

Other: No relevant event scheduled.

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Stephen Colbert: "First Cosby, then Weinstein, now Charlie Rose. Who's next? Yoda? 'Mmm, tense you seem, shoulders I will rub. Reported to HR I am.'"

Stephen Colbert: "But of all the recent sexual abuse allegations, the creme de la creep is Alabama Senate candidate and founder of 'take daughter from school day,' Roy Moore."

James Corden: "It was announced that the Donald J. Trump Foundation, the Trump family's charity, is shutting down. He's shutting down his charity right before Christmas. If Trump wasn't going to be visited by three ghosts on Christmas Eve before, he definitely is now. Apparently, Trump said he's closing the foundation because he already has his hands full with too many other charity cases like Eric, Donald Junior, Ivanka. Not Tiffany, she's out on her own, and she knows that."

James Corden: "The Attorney General says they can't shut down the charity because it's currently being investigated. I guess when they heard Trump was doing something nice for other people, they were, like, 'This sounds suspicious. We need to investigate.'"

James Corden: "The President pardoned two turkeys today and then immediately criticized them on Twitter for not being grateful enough."

James Corden: "Yesterday, Melania Trump welcomed the official White House Christmas tree. Take a look. That poor, lifeless thing, standing behind the tree."

Jimmy Fallon: "Today, the White House held its annual turkey pardon, and President Trump pardoned a turkey named Drumstick, which was nice until he told the turkey, 'Okay, now you pardon me.' No, sorry, he didn't mean that. That's not how it works."

Jimmy Fallon: "CBS just fired Charlie Rose after allegations of sexual harassment. Yep. They told him to clear out his desk, put on some pants, and leave."

Jimmy Fallon: "If all the sexual assault allegations coming out of the entertainment industry or news agency have got you down, you can take a break and distract yourself with the sexual assault allegations coming out of Washington."

Seth Meyers: "An Alabama pastor expressed his support for accused Senate candidate Roy Moore in a recent interview and said, quote, 'There are some 14-year-old who, the way they look, could pass for 20.' He's the pastor of the First Church of the Virgin Mary, according to her, anyway."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, November 29, 2017
Date: Wednesday, November 29, 2017 6:01:49 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 2017 6:00 AM EST

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Reuters: Trump To Visit Utah Next Week, Expected To Announce Monument Decision.
- Associated Press: Eni Receives Federal Permit For US Arctic Offshore Drilling.
- Wall Street Journal: GOP Closes In On Opening Arctic Wildlife Refuge To Drilling.
- E&E Publishing: Legal Challenges Mount As Clock Ticks On Elephant Decision.
- Great Falls (MT) Tribune: Greater Sage Grouse Management Comment Period Extended.
- Ashland (OR) Jefferson Public Radio: Utah Congressman Seeks To Re-Open Area In SW Oregon To Mining.
- FedTech: Interior, VA And DOJ Chart The Way Forward On IT Reform.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- House OKs Calif. Tribe Land Deal With Feds.
- DC Circ. Backs Toss Of Calif. County's Tribal Casino Fight.

Bureau Of Indian Education

- Alleged Haskell Rape Victim Settles With Federal Government In Civil Lawsuit.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Denver Post: Senate Committee Votes To Block Killing Healthy Wild Horses.
- Associated Press: Lawsuit Seeks To Block California Desert Water Project.
- Associated Press: Self-Taught Rocket Scientist Eyes Monday For New Launch Date.
- Ruidoso (NM) News: County Could Lose $32,020 In Federal Swap For State Trust Land.
- Billings (MT) Gazette: Agencies Cooperate To Improve Fence For Wyoming Pronghorns.
- Coos Bay (OR) World: Coos Bay Bureau Of Land Management Sells 3 Million Board Feet Of Timber.

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

- Cape Wind Fight Spins On.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Associated Press: Threatened Snake Long Gone From Colorado River Re-Appears.
- Joplin (MO) Globe: Neosho Fish Hatchery Awaits Ponds Completion.
- Lawrence (KS) Journal World: Prairie Park Nature Center Aids In National Efforts To Save Endangered Black-footed Ferret.
- New Richmond (WI) News: Erin Baillargeon Earns USFWS Volunteer Of The Year.

National Park Service

- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Have An Opinion About The Proposed Fee Hikes For Popular National Parks? The Comment Period Has Been Extended.
- E&E Publishing: Experiment Puts Mall Rats On Birth Control.
- Associated Press: Lawmakers Push For Historic Trail Status For Route 66.
- Anniston (AL) Star: Park Service Concerned About Courthouse Sites.
- Associated Press: Remains Of Ancient Sea Cow Unearthed On California Island.
- Associated Press: Rocky Mountain Park To Expand Native American Representation.
- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Utah's Famed Bighorn Sheep Thriving In Zion National Park, So State Plans To Move Some To Bears Ears.
- Ocala (FL) Star-Banner: Fort King: Reconstructed.
- Santa Rosa (CA) Press Democrat: Future Of Point Reyes Cattle Ranches At Stake In National Park Service Planning Process.
- Firehouse: Brian Johnson Named Structural Fire Branch Chief At National Park Service.
- Oneida (TN) Independent Herald: Black Creek Fire Tower Added To National Register Of Historic Places.
- St. Joseph (MO) News-Press: Benton Club On National Registry Of Historic Places.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- St. Thomas Source: WAPA Restores Power To 40 Percent Of Territory More Than Two Months After Hurricanes.
- Radio New Zealand: Palau Under Pressure From China Over Taiwan Link.
- Saipan (MNP) Tribune: CHCC Is Ready To Apply Green Cards For Its Longtime Nurses.
- New Zealand Herald: Marshall Islands: Concrete Dome Holding Nuclear Waste Could Leak.
- CNBC: Hawaii To Resume Cold War-era Nuclear Attack Warning Siren Tests Due To The North Korea Threat.
- Marianas Variety: Governor: CW Issue Needs US Congressional Action.
- Guam Daily Post: Calvo Uses Hearse To Call For Legislature To Hear $125M Borrowing, Tax Increase Proposal For GMH.
- Virgin Islands Consortium (VIR): Thousands Of Jobs May Be Headed To St. Croix And Texas Following Trump Deals With Chinese Oil And Gas Giant.
- Marianas Variety: More Independents Join GOP.
- Virgin Islands Consortium (VIR): VI Republicans Urging Trump And GOP Not To Give Blank Check To VI

Government.

US Geological Survey

- Washington Post: Bali Volcano Has A History Of Explosive Eruptions And Global Climate Impacts.
- Daily Mail: Methane Ecosystem Found In Caves Of The Yucatan Peninsula.

Opinion Pieces

- The Trump Judiciary Threatens Federal Public Lands.
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- NBC: Media Analysis: Most Powerful ICBM Yet Is North Korea's Response To Trump.
- ABC: Media Analyses: Judge's Ruling On CFPB Head A Victory For Trump.
- ABC: Trump Suggests Government Shutdown Possible After Democrats Skip Meeting.
- NBC: Tax Bill Closing In On 50 Votes After Trump Meets With Senate Republicans.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Senate Considers Making A Terrible Tax Bill Even Worse."
- Washington Post.
 - "What's One More Bad Thing In The GOP Tax Bill? Ask The Polar Bears."
 - "Egypt Answers Terrorism With Familiar Incompetence."
 - "Congress, Surprise Us."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "A Trigger Warning On Taxes."
 - "A Drama Queen Loses Her Head."
 - "Fourth Amendment Showdown."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Trump To Visit Utah Next Week, Expected To Announce Monument Decision.

Reuters (11/28, Holland, Rampton, Volcovici) reports that President Trump "is expected to announce his decision on whether to reduce the size of two national monuments" where drilling and mining are currently banned during a visit to Utah on Monday. Environmental groups and Native American tribal organizations are planning to protest Trump's visit, and legal challenges are expected over the decision. Meanwhile, industry groups like the American Petroleum Institute "have said in the past that both Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante were unfairly designated as monuments and needed to be reviewed."

The AP (11/28) reports that Sen. Orrin Hatch's spokesman Matt Whitlock "said Tuesday that the president accepted Hatch's invitation to visit Utah to discuss Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante national monuments." Hatch and Utah Gov. Gary Herbert "say Trump called them in October to announce he would approve Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's recommendation to downsize the two monuments protecting more than 3.6 million acres (14,600 square kilometers)."

Also reporting are the Washington Post (11/28, Eilperin), the Washington Examiner (11/28, Siegel), the Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (11/29, Burr), the San Juan \(UT\) Record (11/28), the Deseret \(UT\) News (11/28, Roche), the Aspen \(CO\) Times (11/28, Condon), the Colorado Springs \(CO\) Gazette (11/28, Burr), the Westerner (11/28, DuBois), KSL-TV Salt Lake City Salt Lake City (11/28, Roch), and KNRS-FM Salt Lake City Salt Lake City (11/28).

Eni Receives Federal Permit For US Arctic Offshore Drilling.

The AP (11/28, Joling) reports the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement has approved an application from Eni to drill exploratory wells in the Beaufort Sea. Drilling could begin next month from Spy Island as Eni plans to use extended-reach drilling methods to hit submerged land. BSEE's Alaska region director Mark Fesmire said the agency conducted a thorough review of Eni's well design, testing procedures and safety protocol before approving the plans.

Reuters (11/28, Gardner) reports BSEE director Scott Angelle said developing Arctic resources is a "critical component to achieving American energy dominance." Environmentalists criticized the move, with the legal director for oceans at the Center for Biological Diversity Kristen Monsell saying, "The Trump administration is risking a major oil spill by letting this foreign corporation drill in the unforgiving waters off Alaska."

The Hill (11/28, Henry) reports Eni already owns the leases that it is looking to explore. Angelle also said, "BSEE is committed to working with our Alaskan Native and industry partners by taking a thoughtful and balanced approach to oil and gas exploration, development and production in the Arctic." The Washington Examiner (11/28, Siegel) reports that this is the first time in two years that the BSEE has approved drilling exploration in the Arctic Ocean.

Also reporting are E&E Publishing (11/28), Offshore Engineer (11/28, Boman), E&P Magazine (11/28, Addison), the Alaska Public Radio Network (11/28, Harball), Alaska Dispatch News (11/28, DeMarban), the Spokane \(WA\) Spokesman-Review (11/28, Joling), CBS News, the Huffington Post (11/28, D'Angelo), and Alaska Dispatch News (11/28, DeMarban).

GOP Closes In On Opening Arctic Wildlife Refuge To Drilling.

The Wall Street Journal (11/28, Puko) reports the GOP is closer to opening the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge as the tax reform bill moves to the Senate floor. Sen. Lisa Murkowski's Committee on Energy and Natural Resources passed a bill to open ANWR drilling earlier this month and the Budget Committee approved the measure. However, the House has not passed a similar provision, but leaders from both chambers will likely negotiate over whether to include it in the final tax bill. The Seattle Times (11/28, Mapes, Bernton) reports Sen. Maria Cantwell has promised to make every effort to stop the measure. She said, "We are going to have to fight on the floor to try to stop this. ... It's a backdoor process that only needs 51 votes. They would never get it in the normal process."

The Hill (11/28, Cama) and Vox (11/28, Irfan) also provided coverage.

Legal Challenges Mount As Clock Ticks On Elephant Decision.

E&E Publishing (11/28, Doyle) reports that the Interior Department is "still struggling amid growing legal challenges to work out what to do about elephant trophy imports from Zimbabwe and Zambia." The decision by President Trump is likely to attract legal challenges. In a suit filed this week, Friends of Animals and the Zimbabwe Conservation Task Force "challenged the Fish and Wildlife Service's original decision earlier this month to lift the 3-year-old ban on the elephant trophy imports." And "a reversal of the Fish and Wildlife Service's extensively studied decision to lift the ban could invite a legal challenge from critics claiming the U-turn was 'arbitrary and capricious' and violated the Administrative Procedure Act."

Greater Sage Grouse Management Comment Period Extended.

The Great Falls \(MT\) Tribune (11/28, Dettmer) reports that "the public comment period for Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's Secretarial Order 3353, an order drafted to look at revisions to land management amendments for the greater sage grouse has been extended by the Bureau of Land Management to Dec. 1, 2017 —giving constituents four more days to provide feedback." The revisions, Zinke said, are intended to "protect sage-grouse and their habitat while also ensuring conservation efforts do not impede local economic opportunities." But "groups coming out against Zinke's proposed amendments say the amendments brings greater sage grouse protections back to square one and undermines the work already put in by stakeholders."

Utah Congressman Seeks To Re-Open Area In SW Oregon To Mining.

Ashland \(OR\) Jefferson Public Radio (11/28, Moriarty) reports that Rep. Rob Bishop "recently sent a letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue, urging them to review the validity of all Obama-era mineral withdrawals, and the Southwestern Oregon Mineral Withdrawal, in particular." Under Obama, Bishop's letter says, "millions of acres of Federal land were inappropriately withdrawn from mineral access due to false premises of environmental protectionism and the intentional misuse of statutory authority." In response, Sens. Jeff Merkley and Ron Wyden, and Rep. Peter DeFazio “wrote a three-page letter to Zinke and Perdue, urging them to disregard what they called Bishop’s ‘flawed’ request for a review.”

Interior, VA And DOJ Chart The Way Forward On IT Reform.

FedTech (11/28, Goldstein) reports that “agencies are still trying to figure out how they will respond” to the Modernizing Government Technology Act “and its promise of working capital funds to modernize IT.” To assist them “chart a course forward, the nonprofit Partnership for Public Service partnered with Accenture and released a blueprint earlier this month to spur improvements in federal technology management.” At an event in Washington earlier this month to discuss the blueprint, “several agency IT leaders discussed how they have put the ideas behind the report into practice in digital transformation initiatives.” At the Interior Department, CIO Sylvia Burns “said the agency got its senior leadership involved in discussions on how to comply with the Federal Information Technology Acquisition Reform Act.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

House OKs Calif. Tribe Land Deal With Feds.

Law360 (11/28, Macagnone) reports that “the House of Representatives approved a bill Tuesday that would greenlight a land deal between the federal government and the Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians that has been the subject of litigation in California.” The bill from Rep. Doug LaMalfa “retroactively recognizes the U.S. Department of the Interior’s decision earlier this year to take more than 1,400 acres of land into trust for the tribe, and passed on a voice vote Tuesday.”

DC Circ. Backs Toss Of Calif. County’s Tribal Casino Fight.

Law360 (11/28, Lidgett) reports that “the D.C. Circuit on Monday backed a lower court’s decision to toss a California county’s suit challenging a U.S. Department of the Interior decision supporting a proposed tribal casino, saying the tribe and the county agreed in a 1987 deal that the tribe would be treated as a federally recognized reservation.”

Bureau Of Indian Education

Alleged Haskell Rape Victim Settles With Federal Government In Civil Lawsuit.

The Lawrence \(KS\) Journal World (11/28, Shepherd) reports that “the U.S. government has paid to settle a lawsuit by a former Haskell Indian Nations University student who said she was raped by two fellow students in a dorm in 2014, her attorney says.” According to court documents, “the remaining portion of Jane Doe H versus Haskell et al was closed Tuesday, after the plaintiff and the federal government agreed to dismiss it with prejudice.”

Additional coverage was provided by KCUR-FM Kansas City, MO (11/28, Margolies).

Bureau Of Land Management

Senate Committee Votes To Block Killing Healthy Wild Horses.

The Denver Post (11/28, McGhee) reports that the Senate Appropriations Committee’s “vote to block killing healthy wild horses has heartened advocates for the free-roaming mustang herds who fear the Bureau of Land Management wants to eliminate thousands to manage exploding herd populations.” The action on Nov. 20, “followed a July vote by the House Appropriations Committee that would make it possible for the Interior Department’s BLM to euthanize healthy wild horses.” According to the article, “the final decision on the animals’ future will be made during negotiations between the House and the Senate to reach a consensus on the two versions of the spending bill for the Interior Department.”

Lawsuit Seeks To Block California Desert Water Project.

The AP (11/28, Jablon) reports that “environmental activists sued Tuesday to halt a plan to pump water from beneath the Mojave Desert and sell it to Southern California cities and counties.” The lawsuit takes aim at the decision by the Bureau of Land Management “allowing Cadiz Inc. to build a 43-mile pipeline to transfer the water from its desert wells into the Colorado River Aqueduct so it can be sold to water districts." The BLM "released guidelines during the Obama administration to block construction of the pipeline along an existing federal railroad right of way, but the Trump administration reversed them this year and the project is on a priority infrastructure list." The lawsuit claims "the new guidelines would illegally permit construction of the pipeline on public land, including the newly created Mojave Trails National Monument, 'while circumventing laws enacted to protect human health and the environment.'"

Also reporting are the Palm Springs \(CA\) Desert Sun (11/28, Roth), Courthouse News (11/28, Renda), and Law360 (11/28, Crosby).

Self-Taught Rocket Scientist Eyes Monday For New Launch Date.

The AP (11/28, Graham) reports that a man who plans to launch himself in a rocket to prove that the earth is flat has rescheduled his experiment for Monday. Mike Hughes was "scheduled to blast off last weekend, but he didn't have the proper permits from the Bureau of Land Management." Hughes has "relocated his launch pad about 4 miles from its original spot so he takes off and lands on private property." The BLM "said he still needs to fill out the permits." However, "Hughes contends that shouldn't be required since he's flying on private land and has permission."

County Could Lose $32,020 In Federal Swap For State Trust Land.

The Ruidoso \(NM\) News (11/28, Stallings) reports that "a proposed land swap between the federal Bureau of Land Management and the New Mexico State Land Office could result in 17,215 acres in Lincoln County switching ownership and the county losing $32,030 in annual compensation dollars for nontaxable federal land." In exchange, Deputy Land Commissioner Laura Riley "told commissioners last week the state will earn more revenue from the acreage than it did from the land that would be swapped to federal ownership in the Rio Grande Del Norte/Sabinoso Wilderness."

Agencies Cooperate To Improve Fence For Wyoming Pronghorns.

The Billings \(MT\) Gazette (11/28, Beckwith) reports that "the Bureau of Land Management Cody Field Office recently collaborated with the Wyoming Department of Transportation, Wyoming Game and Fish Department and Friends of a Legacy to replace the bottom strand of barbed wire with smooth wire on a fence east of Cody along State Highway 32." The fence is on the eastern edge of the McCullough Peaks Wild Horse Herd Management Area. According to the article, "the bottom wire was also raised to 16 inches off the ground to allow pronghorn, which need space to crawl under fences, to easily pass underneath."

Coos Bay Bureau Of Land Management Sells 3 Million Board Feet Of Timber.

The Coos Bay \(OR\) World (11/28) reports that "the Coos Bay District of the Bureau of Land Management sold 3.2 million board feet of timber, worth $450,242.70, at an oral auction on Nov. 17."

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

Cape Wind Fight Spins On.

The Cape Cod \(MA\) Times (11/28, Stening) reports that "opponents of the stalled Cape Wind project have appealed a federal agency's decision to allow the offshore wind energy developer to maintain its long-term federal lease in Nantucket Sound, where the company had planned to build 130 wind turbines." The notice of the appeal was filed on Nov. 21 with the Interior Board of Land Appeals.

Fish And Wildlife Service

Threatened Snake Long Gone From Colorado River Re-Appears.

The AP (11/29) reports that "a threatened snake that hasn't been seen along the lower Colorado River in a century has apparently repopulated an area south of Lake Havasu City." U.S. Fish and Wildlife service spokesman Jeff Humphrey "said Tuesday that biologists first spotted the northern Mexican gartersnake along the Bill Williams River in west-central Arizona." They later found it on the Colorado River at the Havasu National Wildlife Refuge.

Neosho Fish Hatchery Awaits Ponds Completion.

The Joplin \(MO\) Globe (11/28, Kagubare) reports that “the Neosho Fish Hatchery is within days of completing its six-month construction project to update three of its six fishing ponds.” Bruce Hallman, environmental education specialist, noted that “the last time the ponds were improved was in the 1930s.” He said, “It will just make everything look better here and more efficient.”

Prairie Park Nature Center Aids In National Efforts To Save Endangered Black-footed Ferret.

The Lawrence \(KS\) Journal World (11/28, Hlavacek) reports that black-footed ferrets are “making a modest comeback on the prairie they once freely roamed — thanks, in part, to the work of Prairie Park staff and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service biologists.” Marty Birrell, nature interpretive supervisor at Prairie Park, “feels optimistic after this month’s trip to the 1,100-acre tract in western Kansas, where she and her colleagues helped capture, tag and vaccinate wild-born ferrets.” The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has “yet to release data from this month’s survey, but Birrell said her team located at least 20 ferrets during her time on the site.”

Erin Baillargeon Earns USFWS Volunteer Of The Year.

The New Richmond \(WI\) News (11/28, Lindfors) reports that “New Richmond Middle School seventh grade science teacher Erin Baillargeon was presented with the prestigious Volunteer of the Year Award by U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Wildlife Biologist and Volunteer Coordinator Chris Trosen during a brief ceremony Thursday afternoon, Nov. 16.” Baillargeon, “along with her students, took on the responsibility for care and upkeep of several hundred wild lupine plugs in the middle school’s greenhouse during the school year.” At the end of the school year, Baillargeon, “minus her students’ help, became the sole caretaker for the army of plants.”

National Park Service

Have An Opinion About The Proposed Fee Hikes For Popular National Parks? The Comment Period Has Been Extended.

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (11/29, Maffly) reports that “in the face of intense public interest, much of it critical,” the National Park Service is has extended the public comment period to “on its controversial proposal to boost entrance fees to $70 per vehicle at its most popular parks.” The NPS is “now accepting comments for a second month, until Dec. 22, as it weighs whether to implement the proposal, amend it or abandon it in favor of solutions that don’t rely so heavily on visitors.”

Meanwhile, Arizona Public Media (11/28, Sieg) reports that Arizona Attorney General Mark Brnovich has “joined 10 of his counterparts in other states across the country in opposition to the price hike.” According to the article, “in a letter addressed to the acting director of the National Park Service, the attorneys general quote naturalist John Muir, who once wrote that people need ‘beauty as well as bread.’”

Experiment Puts Mall Rats On Birth Control.

E&E Publishing (11/28, Hotakainen) reports that “under a pilot project set to begin in the coming weeks, a contraceptive bait called ContraPest will be fed to rats around the food kiosk at the Thomas Jefferson Memorial.” The project is “the brainchild of Arizona-based SenesTech Inc., which says it makes more sense to target the reproductive capabilities of rats to try to eliminate them in the long run instead of relying on toxic poisons to kill them immediately.” Mike Litterst, chief of communications for the National Parks Service’s National Mall and Memorial Parks, said, “This has been approved by the EPA and has been used in other metropolitan areas, including Chicago and New York City.”

Lawmakers Push For Historic Trail Status For Route 66.

The AP (11/28) reports that “lawmakers are pushing Congress to give historic trail status to Route 66 to help preserve the iconic roadway, which passes through Missouri and seven other states.” The U.S. House Natural Resources subcommittee considered legislation on Nov. 15. Rep. Darin LaHood, who introduced the bill, said, “The federal government already recognizes the importance of Route 66. If signed into law, it (the bill) will designate Route 66 as a National Historic Trail ensuring that the National Park Service will have the authority to assist and support states and local communities in preserving, promoting and economically developing Route 66 for generations to come.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Williams \(AZ\) Grand Canyon News (11/28, Windes).

Park Service Concerned About Courthouse Sites.

The Anniston \(AL\) Star (11/28, Cunningham) reports that “the city of Anniston and the National Park Service differ on the best site for a new federal courthouse, but officials with the two bodies say they may yet find common ground.” The NPS, “in a letter commenting on assessments of three proposed downtown sites for the courthouse, said it supports one just west of Zinn Park.” The agency “wrote that it has concerns about two other sites, both near its new Freedom Riders National Monument.”

Remains Of Ancient Sea Cow Unearthed On California Island.

The AP (11/28) reports that “scientists say they’ve unearthed fossil remains of a sea cow that lived in the shallow waters off Southern California’s Channel Islands some 25 million years ago.” The National Park Service announced Tuesday that “the fossil skull and rib cage were discovered this summer on Santa Rosa Island, about 50 miles northwest of Los Angeles.” According to Yvonne Menard of the NPS, “two researchers from the U.S. Geological Survey found the skull and rib cage in a steep ravine while mapping earthquake faults.”

Additional coverage was provided by USA Today (11/28, Carlson), Southern California Public Radio (11/28), KTLA-TV Los Angeles Los Angeles (11/28, Bloom), and KNBC-TV Los Angeles Los Angeles (11/28).

Rocky Mountain Park To Expand Native American Representation.

The AP (11/28) reports that Rocky Mountain National Park is “expanding its representation of Native Americans with the help of indigenous-focused University of Colorado groups and tribal representatives.” According to the article, “meetings began in the fall to devise a plan to expand representation of indigenous people’s lives.” The article says that “tribal members from Wyoming and Oklahoma were able to attend, while members from Utah, Colorado and Montana tribes have upcoming meetings with park officials.”

Utah’s Famed Bighorn Sheep Thriving In Zion National Park, So State Plans To Move Some To Bears Ears.

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (11/28, Maffly) reports that “a multi-year relocation program” of bighorn sheep in Zion National Park is “set to begin next month after more than three years of study.” In the coming weeks, “state wildlife workers will capture 50 Zion sheep, mostly females, fit them with radio collars and release them in San Juan County, according to Rusty Robinson, Utah Division of Wildlife Resources big game coordinator.” The aim is “to augment Utah’s most imperiled bighorn herd, which inhabits a unit called San Juan North located west of the Abajo Mountains in Bears Ears National Monument and the Needles district of Canyonlands National Park. ”

Fort King: Reconstructed.

The Ocala \(FL\) Star-Banner (11/28, Cundiff) reports that the grand opening of the newly reconstructed Fort King at the Fort King National Historic Landmark will be held this weekend. Events will “feature a reenactment of the December 1835 attack by Seminole chief Osceola and his men that triggered the Second Seminole War.”

Future Of Point Reyes Cattle Ranches At Stake In National Park Service Planning Process.

The Santa Rosa \(CA\) Press Democrat (11/28, Kovner) reports that “the future of cattle ranching and herds of tule elk in the Point Reyes National Seashore is at stake in a policy-setting process that will culminate in four years and is already attracting thousands of public comments.” The National Park Service has “received about 2,800 comments on a list of six tentative management alternatives, including one that maintains the status quo for 24 families engaged in beef and dairy cattle ranching and three others that would eliminate or reduce ranching.”

Brian Johnson Named Structural Fire Branch Chief At National Park Service.

The Firehouse (11/28) reports that “Brian Johnson has been named Structural Fire Branch Chief for the National Park Service Division of Fire and Aviation Management. He succeeds Hal Spencer, who retired earlier this year.”

Black Creek Fire Tower Added To National Register Of Historic Places.

The Oneida \(TN\) Independent Herald (11/28) reports eight properties across Tennessee have added to the National Register of Historic Places. They include the Black Creek Fire Lookout Tower, "a fire lookout tower in Carroll County, the Tennessee War Memorial Building in Nashville, the Mt. Zion Negro School in Gibson County, the Blue Springs Lutheran Church and Cemetery in Greene County, the Farmers and Merchants Bank in Lawrence County, the Harrison Mill Farm in Maury County and Pottsville General Store in Maury County."

Benton Club On National Registry Of Historic Places.

The St. Joseph \(MO\) News-Press (11/28, Welch) reports that "the Benton Club of St. Joseph has been added to the National Register of Historic Places by the National Park Service."

Office Of Insular Affairs

WAPA Restores Power To 40 Percent Of Territory More Than Two Months After Hurricanes.

The St. Thomas Source (11/28) reports that "about 40 percent of the Water and Power Authority's electrical customers, more than 49,000 of them, have been re-energized since Hurricanes Irma and Maria battered the territory in September, officials said Monday at a Government House news conference." Gov. Kenneth Mapp has "set a target date of Christmas for 90 percent electricity, while Water and Power Authority Executive Officer Julio Rhymer's estimate was year-end." That prompted Mapp to challenge, "I'm not giving him that extra week."

Palau Under Pressure From China Over Taiwan Link.

Radio New Zealand (11/28) reports that Taiwan observers are "warning the country's allegiance with Palau could be disastrous for the Micronesian nation." Last week, China reportedly "banned its travel agencies from arranging visits to Palau, where Chinese tourists were more than half of its visitors last year." The Taiwan Strategy Research Association's Fabrizio Bozzato "said China was partly responding to the visit of Taiwan's president, Tsai Ing-wen, to several Pacific allies including Palau last month."

CHCC Is Ready To Apply Green Cards For Its Longtime Nurses.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (11/28, Cabrera) reports that "even before U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services made a 3,000 cut in the number of slots for foreign workers in fiscal year 2018, the Commonwealth Healthcare Corp. is already in the midst of plans to apply for permanent residency visas for its long-term nurses." CHCC CEO Esther Muña "said the corporation is looking for appropriate visa categories for its nurses and staff, either H-1B or EB-2 visas." Muña "said the Commonwealth Health Center, which CHCC operates, already has a nurse that CHCC had applied for an EB-2 visa. Many of CHC's nurses are Filipino nationals."

Marshall Islands: Concrete Dome Holding Nuclear Waste Could Leak.

The New Zealand Herald (11/27, Killalea) reports that "rising sea levels and climate change threaten to unleash highly radioactive plutonium into the Pacific Ocean in a nightmare scenario for those who live in the Marshall Islands where dozens of nuclear blasts took place in the 1940s." Water has begun to penetrate a massive concrete dome "containing the toxic waste with radioactive material leaking out."

Hawaii To Resume Cold War-era Nuclear Attack Warning Siren Tests Due To The North Korea Threat.

CNBC (11/28) reports that "Hawaii this week will resume monthly statewide testing of its Cold War-era nuclear attack warning sirens for the first time in about 30 years, in preparation for a potential missile launch from North Korea, emergency management officials said on Monday." According to officials, "wailing air-raid sirens will be sounded for about 60 seconds from more than 400 locations across the central Pacific islands starting at 11:45 a.m. on Friday, in a test that will be repeated on the first business day of each month thereafter."

Governor: CW Issue Needs US Congressional Action.

Marianas Variety (11/27, Todiño) reports that Gov. Ralph D.L.G. Torres on Thursday "reiterated the need for U.S. congressional action to address the CNMI's lack of workers." Last week,

“despite the pleas of the CNMI government and business community to reduce it by only one, the U.S. Department of Homeland Security reduced the number of CW-1 permits for fiscal year 2018 by 3,000 — to 9,998 from 12,998.” Torres “said he will continue to communicate with U.S. Congressman Gregorio Kilili Camacho Sablan ‘make every effort to introduce’ legislation in the U.S. Congress”

Calvo Uses Hearse To Call For Legislature To Hear $125M Borrowing, Tax Increase Proposal For GMH.

The Guam Daily Post (11/16) reports that Gov. Eddie Calvo’s staff “this morning parked a hearse right at the entrance to the Guam Congress building and posted messages on the vehicle to call for legislature to hear a $125M borrowing and tax increase proposal for Guam Memorial Hospital.” Calvo’s press release said the hearse “symbolizes the consequence of the legislature’s inaction to hold a public hearing on two life-saving GMH bills.” It stated, “The bills, if passed, would fully fund the Guam Memorial Hospital every year. They would modernize medical equipment and facilities so that all the people of Guam, rich and poor, have access to quality healthcare right here at home.”

Thousands Of Jobs May Be Headed To St. Croix And Texas Following Trump Deals With Chinese Oil And Gas Giant.

The Virgin Islands Consortium \(VIR\) (11/17) reports that “the talk of additional jobs at Limetree Bay Terminals through Sinopec is more promising” following President Trump’s trip to China, “where he worked to broker billions of dollars in energy deals.” According to the article, St. Croix’s economy “could benefit greatly from the hundreds — if not over a thousand — additional job opportunities to be made available at Limetree Bay.”

More Independents Join GOP.

Marianas Variety (11/17, Erediano) reports that “more politicians who previously ran as independents are joining the NMI Republican Party, according to the local GOP chairman, Department of Public Works Secretary James Ada.” Ada noted that “besides House minority bloc member Lorenzo I. Deleon Guerrero, former independent Rep. Roman C. Benavente of Precinct 1 has submitted his letter of intent to run on the GOP slate next year.” Ada added “Sen. Justo S. Quitugua, a former Democrat who ran as an independent in 2014, also wants to seek reelection as a Republican.”

VI Republicans Urging Trump And GOP Not To Give Blank Check To VI Government.

The Virgin Islands Consortium \(VIR\) (11/15) reported that Republican leaders from the U.S. Virgin Islands were in Washington earlier this month “telling the White House and Congress not to write a blank check to the Government of the Virgin Islands.” According to the article, “in a series of meetings, GOP leadership from the hurricane-devastated islands of St. Croix, St. Thomas and St. John are pushing for greater federal scrutiny of the territorial government, which the GOP says was in shambles before hurricanes Irma and Maria struck.”

US Geological Survey

Bali Volcano Has A History Of Explosive Eruptions And Global Climate Impacts.

The Washington Post (11/28, Fritz) reports that “a giant, suffocating ash cloud hovers over the island of Bali in Indonesia, and neither geologists nor local officials know what the simmering volcano will do next.” According to the article, “if Agung’s eruptions become more intense,” it could “alter global temperature for months — maybe years.” The U.S. Geological Survey said, “A pyroclastic flow will destroy nearly everything in its path. With rock fragments ranging in size from ash to boulders traveling across the ground at speeds typically greater than [50 mph], pyroclastic flows knock down, shatter, bury or carry away nearly all objects and structures in their way.”

Methane Ecosystem Found In Caves Of The Yucatan Peninsula.

The Daily Mail (11/28, Borkhataria) reports that “researchers have discovered a methane-fueled ecosystem that feeds bacteria in the underground rivers and flooded caves of Mexico’s Yucatan Peninsula.” The study, “conducted by researchers at Texas A&M University at Galveston, the US Geological Survey and a team of collaborators from Mexico, The Netherlands, Switzerland and other US institutions, claims to be the most detailed ecological study ever for a coastal cave ecosystem that is always underwater."

Opinion Pieces

The Trump Judiciary Threatens Federal Public Lands.

In an op-ed for The Hill (11/28, Leshy, Echeverria), John D. Leshy, a distinguished professor of law emeritus at the University of California, Hastings College of the Law, and John D. Echeverria, a professor of law at Vermont Law School, writes that judges that President Trump appoints to federal courts pose a threat to public land. They point to a Nov. 3 decision handed down by Susan Braden of the U.S. Court of Federal Claims, which said "that cattle ranchers using public lands with the permission of the U.S. Forest Service are entitled to financial compensation from U.S. taxpayers because the government's efforts to protect endangered species on those lands allegedly took their water rights in violation of the U.S. Constitution." The professors of law take issue with Braden's statement of the facts, as well as her legal reasoning, and conclude that "it represents a klaxon alarm about what may be in store for the public lands, the courts and the rule of law under the current president."

Additional Reading.

- Hunting Can Be Good For Lions And Elephants. Wall Street Journal (11/28, Anderson, Downey).
- Zinke Remains Trump Cabinet's Most Deplorable Member. Newsmax (11/28, Carlson).
- The West Grapples With History Through Its Place Names. High Country \(CO\) News (11/28, Lydon).
- Are Minnesota's Public Lands Up For Sale?. St. Cloud \(MN\) Times (11/28, Zabokrtsky) .
- American Horror Show: Trophies From Canned Lion Hunts Continue To Flow Into The U.S. Despite ESA Protection. Wisconsin Gazette (11/27, Pacelle).
- Congress Needs To Treat Wildfires Like The Disasters They Are. Poughkeepsie \(NY\) Journal (11/28, Mahar).
- Proposed National Park Fees Need Modification. Westminster \(CO\) Window (11/28, Christopher).
- OUR OPINION: Sign Online Petition In Support Of Historic Tax Incentives. Sioux City \(IA\) Journal (11/29).

Top National News

Media Analysis: Most Powerful ICBM Yet Is North Korea's Response To Trump.

North Korea's launch of another Intercontinental ballistic missile garnered extensive media, including the lead stories on all three networks last night. Outlets highlighted that the missile launched Tuesday was the most advanced yet for Pyongyang, and cast the launch as a response to recent comments by President Trump and actions by the Administration. For example, Richard Engel, noting that this was the first launch by the North "in months," said on NBC Nightly News (11/28, story 3, 2:35, Holt), "Why now? Political payback. President Trump threatened the regime while in South Korea earlier this month. The President followed up with a tweet saying he would never call Kim Jong-Un short or fat." Likewise, in its lead story, Fox News' Special Report (11/28) reported that "the latest provocation comes more than a week after President Trump put North Korea back on the state sponsor of terrorism list," and "after Trump warned North Korea, 'do not try us,' in a speech in South Korea earlier this month."

AFP (11/28) calls Tuesday's launch "a major challenge to...Trump after he slapped fresh sanctions on Pyongyang and declared it a state sponsor of terrorism," and Bloomberg News (11/28, Kong, Tweed, Wadhams) similarly calls it North Korea's "first provocation since...Trump labeled the country a state sponsor of terrorism earlier this month."

In its lead story, ABC World News Tonight (11/28, lead story, 2:25, Muir) called the launch a "direct provocation to the US President." The ICBM tested Tuesday that flew "higher and longer than any [North Korea] has launched before." The missile flew 2,800 miles, remaining in the air for 50 minutes before falling into the Sea of Japan. Experts "say if angled for distance instead of altitude, the same missile could reach deep into the US mainland, including Washington, DC." USA Today (11/28, Bacon, Michaels) reports the missile "appeared to have a range of 8,100 miles, the longest tested, and capable of reaching Washington, DC."

The Washington Free Beacon (11/28, Heretik) reports Defense Secretary Mattis told reporters the missile "went higher, frankly, than any previous shot they've taken. It's a research and development effort on their part to continue building ballistic missiles that can threaten everywhere in the world basically." The AP (11/28, Pennington, Kim) says the "big unknown, however, is the missile's payload. If, as expected, it carried a light mock warhead, then its effective range would have been shorter, analysts said."

Politico (11/28, Klimas, Morgan) reports that "some experts viewed the latest test as noteworthy because it was conducted in the middle of the night in North Korea," which made it "harder for the US to track." The Wall Street Journal (11/28, Cheng) reports Abraham Denmark, a former senior Asia policy official at the Pentagon during the Obama Administration and now a director at the Wilson Center, said, "Firing at night, from a potential mobile missile, demonstrates that North Korea is closer than ever to a credible nuclear deterrent against the United States."

The Los Angeles Times (11/28, Stiles) reports the President, addressing reporters at the White House, "seemed to brush off the significance of the launch," and the CBS Evening News (11/28, lead story, 2:20, Mason) said that after the North "defied" the US, Trump told reporters, "We will take care of it," and while "he did not say how," Secretary of State Tillerson responded to the launch by "call[ing] for stricter enforcement of UN sanctions...including the right to stop, board, and search vessels transporting goods to and from the North." Politico (11/28, Tamborrino) reports Tillerson condemned the launch in a statement saying, "All nations must continue strong economic and diplomatic measures." USA Today (11/28, Bacon, Michaels) reports the State Department announced it is launching "an international effort to step up pressure on North Korea that could include interdicting ships carrying goods to and from that country." Spokeswoman Heather Nauert said, "We have always been very clear that we would be open to talks with North Korea. But North Korea is not showing it is willing to sit down and talk."

Counselor to the President Kellyanne Conway said on Fox News' Hannity (11/28), "North Korea is everybody's problem. And anybody who doubted that saw that today. This President in bringing on board and talking to Japan and China and South Korea and...the UN Security Council voting twice unanimously in unprecedented fashion to sanction North Korea shows that the world is responding to Donald Trump's leadership as President and commander-in-chief."

The Washington Post (11/28, Fifield) reports the "74-day break in missile testing, the longest pause in a year that has been marked by big advances and a steady salvo of launches, had generated some hope that diplomatic efforts could gain traction." A Washington Post (11/28, Taylor) analysis says Tuesday's launch "seems to dash the idea that Pyongyang's lull in weapons testing over the past two months indicated a willingness to negotiate." Instead, the Post says the "slowdown in testing in the last quarter of each year seems to be due to seasonal changes."

The New York Times (11/28, Choe) reports that "six minutes after the launch, South Korea conducted its own missile test off its east coast, demonstrating its ability to strike North Korean missile launching sites," and Reuters (11/28, Kim, Stewart) reports the UN Security Council is scheduled to meet on Wednesday to discuss the latest missile launch.

Sen. Lindsey Graham said on CNN's Situation Room (11/28) that the North Koreans are "clearly...not listening to the Chinese." He also said he does not agree with Trump that Russian President Vladimir Putin can help in dealing with the North. Graham added that he hopes North Korea understands that Trump "is not going to allow" it to have nuclear weapons that can reach the US, because "if we have to go to war to stop this, we will."

Sen. Dan Sullivan said on CNN's Situation Room (11/28) that he's "very concerned" about the possibility that North Korea could launch a missile that could hit "not just" Alaska, but the US mainland. Sullivan called for "more sanctions, credible military options" to back up diplomacy, and "more robust missile defense."

Tom Rogan of the Washington Examiner said on Fox News' Special Report (11/28), "What you do see in specific terms here is the North Koreans showing a capability that far exceeds anything we've seen up until this point. I think there will be some shock in the White House and the Pentagon and the intelligence community about what has happened. For President Trump now, the critical decision is, do you exert pressure on China, specifically Chinese financial entities, or do you take military action because what we have seen here with this test is the failure of – or the unwillingness I think more likely – of the Chinese government to put the kind of pressure on Kim Jong-un's regime that would be necessary to force him to the table."

Matt Schlapp of The Hill said on Fox News' Special Report (11/28), "I don't blame Donald Trump for this. You can say his diplomatic approach has not worked yet, but he inherited a 20 year problem which was to kick the can down the road. ... He is faced with terrible options and he's got to do something that takes away this nuclear menace from reaching our allies and maybe even our own shores."

Adam B. Ellick and Jonah M. Kessel of the New York Times (11/28) write, "This is the story of two novice and reckless leaders — one 33 years old, the other 71 years old — taking their countries toward what we fear is a needless collision. The risk of war is greater than the public appreciates," and "now, with war more likely than ever, talks are even more urgent."

Recent Meetings Raise Fresh Concern Over Possible Iran-North Korea Ties. The Washington Times (11/28, Taylor) reports that a "series of recent high-level meetings between Iranian and North Korean officials has prompted fresh concern in US national security circles about the depth of military and ballistic missile technology cooperation between the two American adversaries," according to the Washington Institute for Near East Policy. The think tank, which is "known for its critical posture toward Iran's government, says in an analysis that US intelligence has spotted Iranian defense officials in North Korea over the past year — raising the specter that Pyongyang and Tehran might be sharing certain military technological advances with each other."

Media Analyses: Judge's Ruling On CFPB Head A Victory For Trump.

In a ruling that is universally cast as a victory for the Administration, a federal judge ruled Tuesday that President Trump can install his own director at the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. On ABC World News Tonight (11/28, story 7, 0:30), the only network newscast to cover the ruling, David Muir said, "President Trump winning the battle over control of the nation's top consumer financial watch dog," while USA Today (11/28, McCoy, Johnson) says US District Judge Timothy Kelly "sid[ed] with the Trump Administration" and "refused to block the appointment of Mick Mulvaney as interim director."

Politico (11/28, Guida) describes "a big victory" for Trump, adding that Kelly "said there was not a substantial likelihood that the case would succeed on its merits." Reuters (11/28) reports that Kelly "said the agency was part of the executive branch and he saw nothing in the law that prevented budget director Mick Mulvaney from holding the two positions."

The Washington Post (11/28, Hsu, Heath) also says Kelly "refused to block" Mulvaney's appointment, adding that by denying CFPB deputy director Leandra English's request for a temporary restraining order, Kelly "acknowledged that the case raised constitutional issues." The Los Angeles Times (11/28, Puzanghera) says Kelly, who President Trump nominated this year, "hand[ed] a victory to President Trump and opponents of the independent watchdog agency."

The New York Times (11/28, Rogers, Bernard) reports that Kelly "deliver[ed] a legal victory to the White House," and gave "a boost" to Trump's "deregulation push," while Bloomberg News (11/28, Harris) says Kelly "rebuffed English, who sued to Nov. 26, contending she is entitled to the provisional post," in an outcome that "cast a shadow over her contention the 2010 Dodd-Frank Wall Street reform legislation controls the line of temporary succession at the agency and not the broader federal statute relied upon by the president to designate Mulvaney."

While the Wall Street Journal (11/28, Clozel) reports that English's attorney, Deepak Gupta, said she would appeal Kelly's decision, the New York Post (11/28, Fredericks) reports that the ruling drew praise from the White House. Spokesman Raj Shah said, "The Administration applauds the court's decision, which provides further support for the president's rightful authority to designate Director Mulvaney as Acting Director of the CFPB. ... It's time for the Democrats to stop enabling this brazen political stunt by a rogue employee and allow Acting Director Mulvaney to continue the bureau's smooth transition into an agency that truly serves to help consumers."

The Washington Times (11/28, Boyer) reports Competitive Enterprise Institute General Counsel Sam Kazman said CEI was "glad to see this attempt at bureaucratic self-perpetuation fail," and Consumer Bankers Association President and CEO Richard Hunt said his group looks forward "to working with acting CFPB Director Mick Mulvaney to bring transparent and balanced consumer protections to all customers and small businesses."

A USA Today (11/28) editorial casts the dispute as "proof of how desperately Republicans want to defang the aggressive agency," and says Kelly's ruling leaves Trump "in position to nominate a new director," which means "efforts to undermine this strong consumer champion are well underway." Dana Milbank argues in the Washington Post (11/28) that "under the statute that created the CFPB...it should now be rightfully run by Leandra English." Nevertheless, "a Trump-appointed federal judge, to nobody's surprise, ruled in Trump's favor." Milbank adds that "ultimately, the 'coup' will succeed" because Trump "will eventually be able to install a director who can defang the watchdog — and Wall Street bankers and corporate lobbyists will plant their flag of conquest at another agency."

However, the Wall Street Journal (11/28) takes a different view, editorializing that Kelly's denial of English's petition constituted a hilarious development in the ongoing struggle for leadership of the bureau. The Journal mocks English for staging photo-ops with Sen. Elizabeth Warren before the ruling from Kelly, and asserts that she must now decide whether to walk away in embarrassment or stay on as deputy under Mulvaney.

"Anonymous Donors" Financing English's Lawsuit. According to the Daily Caller (11/28, Pollock), English's lawsuit is being financed by "secret donors." In an interview with CNBC's Power Lunch (11/27), Gupta "confirmed...that English is not paying for his hourly fees, but rather unknown anonymous donors are." Gupta "appeared caught off guard when CNBC hosts asked who was financing his effort," and "stumbled over his words in his first answer and said some form of unidentified 'structure' was being put in place to accept funds from anonymous donors." He said, "Well, uh, it's, it's not, um, Miss, um English, um, ah. There are ethics lawyers that we've consulted, and we have a structure set up that is with ethics rules and, um, we'll and we'll be talking about that once we have that." Asked "repeatedly...who is paying for the case," Gupta replied, "It's just not appropriate for me to be talking about that right now."

CBA President: CFPB Should Be Run By A Commission. In an op-ed for USA Today (11/28, Hunt), Richard Hunt, president and CEO of the Consumer Bankers Association, does not address Kelly's ruling but argues that the CFPB's mission "is far too vast and far too important for a single director to play both judge and jury for nearly every financial decision Americans make." Hunt writes that "a sole director at the CFPB is unworkable" and calls on Congress "to fix it with legislation to create a bipartisan, Senate-confirmed commission."

WSJournal Sees Hilarity In Court Ruling Against Leandra English. The Wall Street Journal (11/28) editorializes that federal judge Timothy Kelly's denial of Leandra English's petition to block Mick Mulvaney from serving as acting director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau constituted a hilarious development in the ongoing struggle for leadership of the bureau. The Journal mocks English for staging photo-ops with Sen. Elizabeth Warren before the ruling from Kelly, and asserts that she must now decide whether to walk away in embarrassment or stay on as deputy under Mulvaney. The Journal opines that the controversy has been humiliating for English.

Trump Suggests Government Shutdown Possible After Democrats Skip Meeting.

On ABC World News Tonight (11/28, story 4, 2:10, Muir), Jonathan Karl reported, "It was just a couple of months ago that President Trump was chumming around in the Oval Office with Democratic leaders Chuck Schumer and Nancy Pelosi, striking a temporary spending deal on their terms. ... But today, the President found himself flanked by empty chairs," with Schumer and Pelosi "boycotting a planned bipartisan sit-down after Trump attacked them on Twitter." Schumer: "The President said, 'I don't see a deal' three hours before our meeting, before he heard anything we had to say." Karl: "Schumer and Pelosi said, thanks, but no thanks." Trump: "They've been all talk, and they've no action. And now it's even worse. Now it's not even talk."

Politico (11/28, McCaskill) reports that Trump "taunted them on Twitter." At 9:17 a.m., Trump tweeted, "Meeting with 'Chuck and Nancy' today about keeping government open and working. Problem is they want illegal immigrants flooding into our Country unchecked, are weak on Crime and want to substantially RAISE Taxes. I don't see a deal!"

On the CBS Evening News (11/28, story 2, 1:10, Mason), Nancy Cordes reported, "They were supposed to discuss government funding, which is set to run out next week. ... You're never going to stop the President from tweeting, so does this mean that going forward you're not planning to sit down with him?" Schumer: "All he has to do is say he's serious and wants to undergo a real negotiation, and we'll sit down with him."

Breitbart (11/28, Key) reports that Schumer told reporters, "There are serious issues in front of us. We don't have time to waste. We don't have games to play. ... If the President reverses course and decides he wants to be a constructive force, working with both sides to forge a bipartisan deal, we're happy to meet with him anytime, anywhere, any place."

The Hill (11/28, Fabian) reports that Trump "tore into" them for skipping the meeting. USA Today (11/28, Collins) reports that Trump told reporters that "he was 'not that surprised'" that the Democrats canceled. The Washington Times (11/28, Miller) reports that Trump warned that a government shutdown after December "could be unavoidable, and he blamed Democratic leaders for forcing it."

Breitbart (11/28, Key) reports that Trump said of a shutdown, "I would absolutely blame the Democrats if it happens it's going to be over illegals pouring into the country, crime pouring into the country, no border wall, which everybody wants. I got elected partially because of a border wall. ... They want high taxes. We want low taxes. So there are a lot of big differences. So we'll see what happens as to shutdown." Kellyanne Conway said on Fox News' Hannity (11/28) that Schumer and Pelosi "are not there representing the opposition party. They are there as the minority leaders of the two chambers in Congress."

The Washington Post (11/28, O'Keefe, Sullivan) reports that the "breakdown in talks between Trump and Democrats will put more pressure" on Senate Majority Leader McConnell and House Speaker Ryan, "who both attended the White House meeting, to find a way forward on spending negotiations while they also race to wield their majorities to try to pass a sweeping tax bill this month." The Wall Street Journal (11/28, Peterson) reports that a short-term spending measure keeping the government operational through the end of December is expected to pass soon.

The Los Angeles Times (11/28, Bennett, Bierman) writes that Trump "runs the risk of alienating partners he needs to move his agenda forward. And he needs Democrats in coming weeks as much as at any time in his presidency." Senate Majority Whip Cornyn "noted that it will take 60 votes in the Senate to pass the spending bill. 'We have 52 Republicans. We can't do it by ourselves,' he said."

Reuters (11/28), the Washington Times (11/28, Dinan), and Roll Call (11/28, Bennett) also report.

Trump Says Democrats Holding "Troop Funding Hostage." Politico (11/28, Lima) reports that in a later tweet, the President accused the Democrats "of holding military funding 'hostage' in their end-of-year negotiations to avert a government shutdown." Trump tweeted, "After North Korea missile launch, it's more important than ever to fund our gov't & military! Dems shouldn't hold troop funding hostage for amnesty & illegal immigration. I ran on stopping illegal immigration and won big. They can't now threaten a shutdown to get their demands."

WPost Analysis: Long Trump-Schumer Relationship Not Enough To Overcome Differences. On the front page of the Washington Post (11/28, A1, Fisher), Marc Fisher looks at the long relationship between Trump and Schumer, who "were never pals," but "got along fine, two power players who had never quite been accepted in the inner circle of their chosen fields, two sharp-elbowed guys who led with their mouths and won power in part by mastering the art of being in the news." While "people in both parties thought" that their relationship "might provide a path out of Washington's political paralysis," Tuesday's events revealed "the limits of that relationship."

Tax Bill Closing In On 50 Votes After Trump Meets With Senate Republicans.

NBC Nightly News (11/28, lead story, 2:40, Holt) opened by reporting that "Senate Republicans made headway" on their tax plan on Tuesday, with the measure passing through committee.

President Trump is "putting in face time to try to move the bill forward." The CBS Evening News (11/28, story 3, 1:20, Cordes) reported that the President lunched with Senate Republicans, "where he sparred with senators who still have concerns about the party's tax plan. Wisconsin's Ron Johnson thinks the tax cuts favor corporations at the expense of small businesses." Johnson: "I thought it was a fine-and-dandy exchange. I didn't feel threatened at all."

The AP (11/28, Fram, Taylor) reports that the Senate Budget Committee advanced the measure on "a party-line 12-11 vote...as a pair of wavering Republicans – Wisconsin's Ron Johnson and Tennessee's Bob Corker – fell into line, at least for the moment. In more good news for the GOP, moderate Sen. Susan Collins of Maine said it was a 'fair assumption' that she was likelier to support the bill" after saying that the President had "agreed to make property taxes up to $10,000 deductible instead of eliminating that break entirely." Reuters (11/28, Morgan, Cornwell) reports that Republicans "rammed forward" the measure.

Bloomberg News (11/28, Kapur, Wasson) reports that the outlook for the bill "brightened" after the President "addressed GOP Senate holdouts in a closed-door, lunchtime session. The GOP meeting was 'somewhat of a lovefest,' Trump said later Tuesday." USA Today (11/28, Shesgreen, Fair) reports that GOP leaders "remained optimistic" that the bill would pass "in the next few days, while at the same time acknowledging that the vote will likely be very close." The Wall Street Journal (11/28, A1, Rubin, Peterson) reports that both Collins and Corker said they are closer to backing the final measure. Politico (11/28, Kim, Becker, Wilhelm) reports that "key GOP swing votes inched closer to backing the legislation" on Tuesday.

The Washington Post (11/28, A1, Debonis, Werner, Paletta) reports that though Trump "clashed with Johnson," he "appeared to make substantial progress toward winning" Collins' vote. The President "signaled openness to Collins's demands, which include paying federal subsidies to help lower-income Americans afford health coverage." Johnson's opposition "is based on his complaints that the bill would not sufficiently lower taxes for millions of businesses that are effectively taxed through the individual income tax code."

The Los Angeles Times (11/28, Mascaro) reports that Senate Majority Leader McConnell "acknowledged that changes were still being made to win over votes." He said, "We do have a few members who have concerns and we're trying to address them. We know we will not be able to go forward until we get 50 people satisfied, and that's what we're working on." McClatchy (11/28, Clark) reports that third-ranking Senate Republican Sen. John Thune predicted a vote this week "and said leadership was negotiating 'a path forward' with Collins and the others." Sen. Lindsey Graham said on CNN's Situation Room (11/28), "I think they're very close to a deal."

The New York Times (11/28, A1, Rappeport, Kaplan) writes that "passage of the tax overhaul, which seemed uncertain on Monday, strengthened considerably on Tuesday." But "several hurdles remain," including "resolving differences with the House version of the tax bill, which differs in significant ways from that of the Senate. Both bills cut taxes on businesses and individuals, but differ in the scope and timing of those cuts."

The New York Times (11/28) editorializes, "This is how Senate Republicans compromise these days: They could make their enormously unpopular tax bill, which lavishes benefits on corporations and wealthy families, more generous to real estate tycoons and hedge fund billionaires to win over" Johnson and Sen. Steve Daines, "who say the legislation doesn't do enough for small businesses." McConnell "is trying to rush the bill to a vote by the end of the week...to give lawmakers and the public as little time as possible to analyze and understand the bill."

The Washington Times (11/28, Sherfinski), The Hill (11/28, Bolton, Weixel), and Roll Call (11/28, McPherson) also have reports.

Trump Tells Senators That He Backs Alexander-Murray ACA Bill. Bloomberg News (11/28, Kapur) reports that the President told the senators that he backs the Affordable Care Act market stabilization bill offered by Sens. Lamar Alexander and Patty Murray, "which may help bolster support for the tax-cut legislation headed for a vote this week." However, the Washington Times (11/28, Miller) reports that Trump said that is contingent on passage of "a tax cut bill that eliminates the individual mandate."

Fate Of Bill Could Rest With McCain. The New York Times (11/28, Rappeport) reports that "once again, it could all come down to" Sen. John McCain, who was responsible for killing the GOP healthcare bill earlier this year. McCain "has been fairly tight-lipped about his views on the tax overhaul speeding through the Senate, saying he sees some problems with the existing bill but is waiting for a final plan before making a decision."

WSJournal Opposes Corker's Proposed Trigger. In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (11/28) opposes Corker's proposal for a trigger to return some rates to current levels six years from now if revenues are lower than expected. The Journal warns that no one can predict when a recession might hit, and forcing such an increase could exacerbate one.

Vulnerable Democrats Oppose Tax Bill. The Washington Post (11/28, Weigel) reports that though some moderate Democrats up for re-election next year in states won by Trump in 2016 were once viewed as possible yes votes, all 48 members of the Democratic caucus are expected to oppose the plan. Sen. Joe Manchin, "who has voted with the Trump administration more than any other Democrat in Congress, described a repetitive drama that had played out for months. He'd sit for productive conversations with the Trump administration, then watch as none of his ideas appeared in the Republican product." Sens. Joe Donnelly and Heidi Heitkamp had also been seen as possible supporters.

GOP, Democratic Senators Debate Bill On CNN. CNN on Tuesday evening hosted a debate on tax reform featuring two Republican senators and two Democratic senators. Sen. Ted Cruz said, "If you're a taxpayer, this bill benefits you. ... We should be working to cut taxes for every single taxpayer in America." Sen. Tim Scott said, "Our goal in this tax reform conversation is to deliver your money back in your paychecks. So that as my mother had to struggle paycheck to paycheck, those single mothers struggling paycheck to paycheck will be able to have more of their hard-earned money so that they can take care of their families and, at the same time, create an economy that creates the jobs of the future here in America, here at home. That's what this tax reform does."

The Democrats took a much different view of the bill. Sen. Bernie Sanders said, "Mark my words. The day after or soon after this legislation passes, if it does...these guys are going to come back and they are going to say, 'Oh my goodness, the deficit is soaring. We have got to cut Social Security. We have got to cut Medicare and Medicaid and education and programs that the middle class and working families desperately need.' This is a disastrous piece of legislation."

Sen. Maria Cantwell said, "Raising taxes on the middle class is wrong. And that's what this bill does. It is also wrong to cut the cooperative tax rate without having a promise of how that is really going to raise wages and impact productivity."

ABC World News Tonight (11/28, story 3, 2:30, Muir) and NBC Nightly News (11/28, story 2, 2:15, Holt) both ran features on the possible impact of the bill on Americans of various income levels. The New York Times (11/28, Casselman) looks at "What The Tax Bill Would Look Like For 25,000 Middle-Class Families" via a chart representing "how big a tax cut (or tax increase)" each of 25,000 household "in the broadly defined middle class...would get under the bill in 2018."

Protesters Arrested Outside Senate Budget Committee Hearing. The Hill (11/28, Delk) reports that Capitol Police "arrested 36 people protesting outside a Senate Budget Committee hearing on the GOP tax bill" on Tuesday morning, arresting "all 36 on charges of disrupting Congress in their protest."

WPost Opposes ANWR Drilling Measure Added To Tax Bill On Tuesday. In an editorial, the Washington Post (11/28) notes that "on Tuesday, Republicans on the Senate Budget Committee added to their already malformed tax legislation a provision that would open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil and natural gas drilling. This is a poor idea that senators should resist sneaking into law while most of Washington is preoccupied with a major tax overhaul."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Senate Considers Making A Terrible Tax Bill Even Worse." The New York Times (11/28) editorializes, "This is how Senate Republicans compromise these days: They could make their enormously unpopular tax bill, which lavishes benefits on corporations and wealthy families, more generous to real estate tycoons and hedge fund billionaires to win over" Sens. Ron Johnson and Steve Daines, "who say the legislation doesn't do enough for small businesses." Majority Leader McConnell "is trying to rush the bill to a vote by the end of the week...to give lawmakers and the public as little time as possible to analyze and understand the bill."

Washington Post.

"What's One More Bad Thing In The GOP Tax Bill? Ask The Polar Bears." In an editorial, the Washington Post (11/28) notes that "on Tuesday, Republicans on the Senate Budget Committee added to their already malformed tax legislation a provision that would open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil and natural gas drilling. This is a poor idea that senators should resist sneaking into law while most of Washington is preoccupied with a major tax overhaul."

"Egypt Answers Terrorism With Familiar Incompetence." A Washington Post (11/28) editorial says Egyptian President Abdel Fatah al-Sissi's response to the "merciless attack" on a mosque last Friday was "familiar: an angry television speech promising 'brute force,' a showy bombing raid, and attacks on media reporting." The Post argues Sissi's government "has used terrorism as a pretext for the most severe political repression in Egypt's modern history," offering "a textbook example of how not to respond to Islamist extremism." The Post notes President Trump nonetheless "remains a fan" of Sissi. Trump "called the strongman after the Sinai attack and tweeted, inexplicably, that it showed the need for 'the WALL' and 'the BAN.'" The Post concludes in saying Trump and Sissi "are partners in obtuseness" in the fight against ISIS in Egypt.

"Congress, Surprise Us." A Washington Post (11/28) editorial says Congress has failed to act on banning bump stocks, so "some states and cities are trying to fill the gap." The Post notes that this week the Supreme Court "let stand a Maryland law banning the sale of these weapons," and says, "Hopefully that will encourage more states to take similar action while they wait for Congress to do its job."

Wall Street Journal.

"A Trigger Warning On Taxes." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (11/28) opposes Sen. Bob Corker's proposal for a trigger to return some rates to current levels six years from now if revenues are lower than expected. The Journal warns that no one can predict when a recession might hit, and forcing such an increase could exacerbate one.

"A Drama Queen Loses Her Head." The Wall Street Journal (11/28) editorializes that federal judge Timothy Kelly's denial of Leandra English's petition to block Mick Mulvaney from serving as acting director of the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau constituted a hilarious development in the ongoing struggle for leadership of the bureau. The Journal mocks English for staging photo-ops with Sen. Elizabeth Warren before the ruling from Kelly, and asserts that she must now decide whether to walk away in embarrassment or stay on as deputy under Mulvaney. The Journal opines that the controversy has been humiliating for English.

“Fourth Amendment Showdown.” The Wall Street Journal (11/28) editorializes about a case the Supreme Court will hear today, Carpenter v. US, which the Journal claims challenges decades of Fourth Amendment law. In an investigation of a string of armed robberies, investigators obtained location data from a suspect’s wireless carrier. The Journal argues that the collection of such data does not constitute an unreasonable search under the Fourth Amendment, since it does not reveal the content of any communication. The Journal also notes that Congress has created the legal framework for the collection and use of such data, and argues that lawmakers, not the courts, should make these decisions.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Senate Tax Revamp Gains Traction

Strange Bedfellows: Democrats And Trump Blow Up 20-Year Consensus On Trade

Korean Missile Test’s Trajectory Puts Washington In Range

Oil Prices Chase \$60 After A Year Of Surging Demand

Uber Ex-Employee Alleges Covert Tactics To Steal Rivals’ Secrets

New York Times:

Republicans Clear Major Hurdle As Tax Bill Advances

Trump Feuds With Democrats Ahead Of A Possible Government Shutdown

North Korea Fires A Ballistic Missile, In A Further Challenge To Trump

Trump Once Said The ‘Access Hollywood’ Tape Was Real. Now He’s Not Sure.

Olympic Doping Diaries: Chemist’s Notes Bolster Case Against Russia

Pushing New Yorkers Beyond The End Of The Line

Washington Post:

Tax Bill Advances In Senate As Skeptics Signal Their Support

In Recession-Hit Venezuela, Even Sex Is In Crisis

Schumer And Trump Share The Schmooze. Is It Enough?

Libyan Found Guilty In 2012 Attacks In Benghazi

Missile Launch Appears To Put DC In Range

Financial Times:

Pope Avoids Word ‘Rohingya’ As He Calls For Peace In Myanmar

Uber Accused Of Running Secret Competitive Intelligence Unit

Irish Deputy PM Resigns To Save Government

UK Bows To EU Demands With Breakthrough Offer On Brexit Bill

Washington Times:

More North Korean Tests Likely To Come After Launch Of Most Sophisticated Missile So Far

Iranian-North Korean Talks Raise Specter Of Cooperation On Military, Ballistic Missile Technology

Judge Rules In Favor Of Trump In Battle Over CFPB Leadership

Benghazi Suspect Convicted On 4 Of 18 Criminal Charges, Acquitted Of Murder

Supreme Court Case On Same-Sex Wedding Cakes: Artistic Expression Vs. Civil Rights

Democrats Move Toward Showdown By Refusing To Meet With Trump

Story Lineup From Last Night’s Network News:

ABC: North Korea Missile Test; Tampa-Serial Killer; Tax Reform Plan-Effects; Government Funding Meeting; Libya US Consulate Attack Trial; Washington Post-Failed Conservative Sting; CFPB Appointment; Prince Harry Engagement; Florida-Missing Teen; Marriage-Dementia; Pets-Bone Product Recall; Wingsuit Jumpers; Climate Change-Polar Bears.

CBS: North Korea Missile Test; Government Funding Meeting; White House-Tax Reform Plan; John Conyers Sexual Allegations; Roy Moore Campaign; Washington Post-Failed Conservative Sting; Texas Church Shooting-Lawsuit; YouTube-Child Videos; Weinstein-Sexual Allegations; Russia-Celebrity Politician; Prince Harry Engagement.

NBC: White House-Tax Reform Plan; Tax Reform Plan-Effects; North Korea Missile Test; Ivanka Trump-India Trip; State Dept Turmoil; Libya US Consulate Attack Trial; Prince Harry Engagement; Drones-Flight Danger; Jerusalem-Sacred Site; Indonesia-Volcano Eruption; Grammys Nominations; Climate-Personalities; Holiday Shopping; Young Adults Charity.

Network TV At A Glance:

Tax Reform Plan – 8 minutes, 45 seconds

North Korea Missile Test – 7 minutes, 20 seconds

Prince Harry Engagement – 5 minutes, 35 seconds

Washington Post-Failed Conservative Sting – 4 minutes, 50 seconds

Government Funding Meeting – 3 minutes, 20 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: North Korea Missile Test; Tax Reform Plan; Government Funding Meeting; CFPB Appointment; Wall Street News.

CBS: North Korea Missile Test; Tax Reform Plan; John Conyers Sexual Allegations; Tampa-Serial Killer; Pope-Myanmar Visit.

FOX: North Korea Missile Test; John Conyers Sexual Allegations.

NPR: North Korea Missile Test; Tax Reform Plan; Rep. Gutierrez Retirement; John Conyers Sexual Allegations.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Gives remarks on tax reform.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — No public schedule announced.

US Senate: 9:30 AM Prosecutors Against Gun Violence hold emergency summit in Washington, DC – Prosecutors Against Gun Violence hold legislation-focused emergency summit in Washington, DC, with topics including the Gun Violence Prevention Order Act and the Concealed Carry Reciprocity Act. Participants include Democratic Sen. Dianne Feinstein, Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus Vance Jr., Los Angeles City Attorney Mike Feuer, district attorneys / county attorneys / prosecutors / city attorneys / state attorneys from New York, Nevada, Missouri, Minnesota, Massachusetts, Indiana, California, Colorado, Washington state, Georgia, Wisconsin, Florida, Michigan, and Pennsylvania, and members of law enforcement Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm G-11, Washington, DC <http://www.prosecutorsagv.org/>

9:30 AM Senate HELP Committee considers HHS secretary nominee – Nominations hearing considers Alex Azar to be Secretary of Health and Human Services * President Donald Trump announced the nomination of the pharmaceutical company executive earlier this month, following the resignation of Tom Price over his use of chartered aircraft * Azar has been criticized over his career, having previously spoken out in defense of drug prices and in support of private companies that audit federal health care programs to locate overpayments to health care providers Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 430, Washington, DC <http://help.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Stuart Kyle Duncan to be U.S. Circuit Judge for the Fifth Circuit; David Ryan Stras to be U.S. Circuit Judge for the Eighth Circuit; Fernando Rodriguez Jr. to be U.S. District Judge for the Southern District of Texas; and Andrei Iancu to be Under Secretary of Commerce for Intellectual Property and U.S. Patent and Trademark Office Director * Consideration of the Duncan and Stras nominations has proved controversial, because Committee Chairman Chuck Grassley has gone against the tradition of requiring 'blue slips' of approval from the senators of judicial nominees' states, instead arguing that the slips are a tradition rather than a rule and that most previous chairmen of the committee have not stuck to it strictly Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 226, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Environment and Public Works Committee Business Meeting – Business Meeting, with agenda including consideration of nominations of Kathleen Hartnett White to be a Council on Environmental Quality member; and Andrew Wheeler to be Environmental Protection Agency Deputy Administrator, as well as 19 General Services Administration resolutions Location:

Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

10:00 AM Congressional briefing on 'Voices of Women and Girls on Menstruation, Dignity, and the Issue of Access' – Congressional briefing on 'Voices of Women and Girls on Menstruation, Dignity, and the Issue of Access', presented by BRAWS: Bringing Resources to Aid Women's Shelters in cooperation with Democratic Sens. Tim Kaine and Gerry Connolly and the University of the District of Columbia David A. Clarke School of Law Legislation Clinic. Girls in schools, women and girls in shelters, and women who were formerly incarcerated share their personal experiences with limited or restricted access to menstrual products, with the event highlighting 'the need for thoughtful public policy solutions to this pervasive problem' Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, Rm 203-202, Washington, DC <http://www.braws.org> #MenstruationMatters

10:15 AM Senate Dems on Tax bill and families – The Senate Democrats will call on the Republicans to come back to the negotiating table and work with Democrats on tax reform that will "bring tax relief to the middle class". Speakers: Senator Bob Casey (D-PA); Senator Mazie Hirono (D-HI); Nina Borgia-Aberle from Tuscon, Arizona; Jamie Davis Smith from Washington, D.C. Contacts: Jacklin Rhoads (Casey), (202) 228-6367; Will Dempster (Hirono), (202) 224-9813. Location: LBJ Room U.S. Capitol Building, Room S-211

10:30 AM Nominations hearing considers Barry Lee Myers to be Under Secretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 253, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

11:45 AM Domestic violence organizations and law enforcement speak in support of Fix NICS Act – Domestic violence organizations and law enforcement 'show strong support for the Fix NICS Act – a bipartisan bill that would address the deadly connection between domestic violence fatalities and an abuser's ability to access firearms' via press conference. Participants include Fix NICS Act co-sponsors bipartisan Sens. John Cornyn (invited) and Chris Murphy, National Network to End Domestic Violence President and CEO Kim Gandy, domestic and gun violence survivors, and National Sheriffs' Association Executive Director Jonathan Thompson Location: Senate Swamp, Washington, DC www.nnedv.org <https://twitter.com/nnedv>

2:00 PM Dem Sen. Ron Wyden and small business owners discuss the tax bill – Democratic Sen. Ron Wyden speaks on Main Street Alliance press call on the Senate tax bill, discussing the long and short-term impacts of the tax bill for small businesses and their communities with Main Street Alliance Legislative Policy Director Sapna Mehta, O'Neill Construction Group Owner Maurice Rahming (Portland, OR), The Coronado and Dark Hall Coffee Co-Owner Emily Spetrino (Phoenix), Good Karma Farms Owner Amy Grant (Belfast, ME), and Popcorn Heaven Owner ReShonda Young (Waterloo, IA Location: TBD mainstreetalliance.org <https://twitter.com/mainstreettweets>

2:30 PM Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee Business Meeting – Business Meeting, with agenda including consideration of a committee print of 'S.XXXXX, Caring for our Veterans Act of 2017' Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 418, Washington, DC <http://veterans.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/VACChair>

3:00 PM Closed Briefing: Intelligence Matters Location: Rm 219, Hart Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.senate.gov>

US House: 10:00 AM House Judiciary Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H.R. 38, Concealed Carry Reciprocity Act', 'H.R. X, Fix NICS Act', and 'H.R. 2666, AMBER Alert in Indian Country Act' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2141, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

10:00 AM House Government Reform subcommittees latest joint hearing on Regulatory Reform Task Forces – Interior, Energy, and Environment Subcommittee and Intergovernmental Affairs Subcommittee joint hearing on 'Regulatory Reform Task Forces Check-In Part III' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2157, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

10:00 AM House Financial Services subcommittee latest hearing on housing finance – Housing and Insurance Subcommittee hearing on 'Sustainable Housing Finance: The Role of Ginnie Mae in the Housing Finance System', with testimony from Government National Mortgage Association Acting President Michael Bright Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources Committee oversight hearing on modernizing NEPA – Oversight hearing on 'Modernizing NEPA for the 21st Century', with testimony from former Council on Environmental Quality General Counsel Dinah Bear; Longview/Kelso Building and Construction Trades Council President Mike Bridges; Common Good Chairman Philip Howard; and Converse County, WY, Commissioner Jim Willox Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1324, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee hearing on 'Examining VA's Failure to Address Provider Quality and Safety Concerns' Location: Cannon House Office Building, Rm 334, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

10:00 AM House Transportation subcommittee hearing on UAS – Aviation Subcommittee hearing on 'Unmanned Aircraft Systems Integration: Emerging Uses in a Changing National Airspace', with testimony from aeronautics and astronautics professor Dr Juan Alonso; Southern Company Executive Vice President and Chief Transmission Officer Billy Ball; AirMap General Counsel William Goodwin; The Association for Unmanned Vehicle Systems International President and CEO Brian Wynne; and Federal Aviation Administration Deputy Administrator Daniel Elwell, and Unmanned Aircraft Systems Integration Office Director Earl Lawrence Location: Rm 2167, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://transportation.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/Transport>

10:00 AM House Science subcommittee hearing on the WOTUS rule – Environment Subcommittee hearing on 'The Future of WOTUS: Examining the Role of States', with testimony from Arizona State Land Department Deputy Commissioner Wesley Mehl; Chilton Ranch rancher James Chilton Jr.; American University Washington College of Law Adjunct Associate Professor Ken Kopocis; and Pacific Legal Foundation Senior Attorney Reed Hopper Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2318, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on algorithms – Digital Commerce and Consumer Protection Subcommittee hearing on 'Algorithms: How Companies' Decisions About Data and Content Impact Consumers', with testimony from University of Chicago Law School Professor Dr Omri Ben-Shahar; University of Pennsylvania Department of Computer and Information Science Professor Dr Michael Kearns; Yale Law School Information Society Project Resident Fellow Kate Klonick; Georgetown Law Center on Privacy and Technology Deputy Director Laura Moy; University of Maryland Francis King Carey School of Law Professor Frank Pasquale; and MIT Sloane School of Management Distinguished Professor of Management Science and Professor of Marketing Dr Catherine Tucker Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on USDA's role in disaster recovery – Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Subcommittee hearing on 'USDA's Role in Disaster Recovery', with testimony from Acting Deputy Under Secretary of Agriculture for Farm Production and Conservation Rob Johansson; USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service Acting Chief Leonard Jordan; and USDA Farm Service Agency Acting Administrator Steve Peterson Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2362-A, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:00 AM House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on U.S. Forest Service supplemental budget – Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies Subcommittee hearing on 'Supplemental Oversight – US Forest Service', with testimony from U.S. Forest Service Chief Tony Tooke Location: Rm 2007, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:00 AM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Saudi Arabia and Lebanon – Middle East and North Africa Subcommittee hearing on 'The Latest Developments in Saudi Arabia and Lebanon', with testimony from Council on Foreign Relations Senior Fellow for Middle Eastern Studies Elliott Abrams; Middle East Institute Vice President for Policy Analysis, Research, and Programs Dr Paul Salem; and Brookings Institution Center for Middle East Policy Senior Fellow Dr Tamara Cofman Wittes Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

10:00 AM House Workforce subcommittee hearing on the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation – Health, Employment, Labor, and Pensions Subcommittee hearing on 'Financial Challenges Facing the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation: Implications for Pension Plans, Workers, and Retirees' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2175, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

10:15 AM House Energy subcommittee hearing on financial trading in the electricity markets – Energy Subcommittee hearing on 'Powering America: Examining the Role of Financial Trading in the Electricity Markets', with testimony from Red Wolf EnergyTrading CEO Wesley Allen (on behalf of Financial Marketers Coalition); PJM Interconnection Senior Vice President and General Counsel Vince Duane; California ISO Director of Market Monitoring Dr Eric Hildebrandt; Jenner & Block partner Max Minzner; NRG Energy Senior Vice President of Operations Chris Moser; and TPC Energy CEO Noha Sidhom (on behalf of Power Trading Institute) Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2322, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/>

<https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:30 AM House Democratic Leaders to Hold Post-Caucus Press Conference – Participants: Joe Crowley (D-NY), Chairman of the Democratic Caucus; Linda Sánchez (D-CA), Vice Chair of the Democratic Caucus Location: HVC Studio A — Capitol Visitor Center crowley.house.gov
<https://twitter.com/repjoecrowley>

11:00 AM Congressional briefing on hurricane recovery in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands – PICO National Network, National Latino Evangelical Coalition (NaLEC), and Democratic Rep. Darren Soto host Capitol Hill briefing on the ongoing humanitarian crisis in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands following the September hurricanes. Speakers/participants include Ponce, Puerto Rico, Mayor Mayita Melendez, Caguas, Puerto Rico, Mayor William Miranda Torres, representatives from the U.S. Virgin Islands, PICO National Network chief of staff Denise Collazo, and NaLEC president Rev. Dr Gabriel Salguero Location: Cannon House Office Building, Rm 441, Washington, DC www.piconetwork.org <https://twitter.com/PICOnetwork>

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee hearing on federal regulations on the small trucking industry – Hearing on ‘Highway to Headache: Federal Regulations on the Small Trucking Industry’, with testimony from B.L. Reeve Transport President Monte Wiederhold (on behalf of Owner-Operated Independent Drivers Association); True Blue Transportation owner Marty DiGiacomo (on behalf of National Association of Small Trucking Companies); Atlas PyroVision Entertainment Group CEO Stephen Pelkey (on behalf of American Pyrotechnics Association); and National Ready Mixed Concrete Association President Robert Garbini Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2360, Washington, DC <http://smallbusiness.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

12:00 PM House aims to pass bill on mandatory training in workplace rights for everybody in the chamber – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda including consideration of ‘H.Res. XXXX – Requiring each Member, officer, and employee of the House of Representatives to complete a program of training in workplace rights and responsibilities each session of each Congress, and for other purposes’ under suspension of the rules, as well as ‘H.R. 3905 – Minnesota’s Economic Rights in the Superior National Forest Act’ Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

2:00 PM House Oversight subcommittees joint hearing on cybersecurity of voting machines – Information Technology Subcommittee and Intergovernmental Affairs Subcommittee joint hearing on ‘Cybersecurity of Voting Machines’, with testimony from Acting Under Secretary of Homeland Security for National Protection & Programs Christopher Krebs; Louisiana Secretary of State Tom Schedler; Virginia Department of Elections Commissioner Edgardo Cortes; University of Pennsylvania Associate Professor of Computer and Information Science Dr Matthew Blaze; and Brookings Institution Governance Studies Fellow in National Security Law Susan Klein Hennessey Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2154, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

2:00 PM House Financial Services subcommittees joint hearing on legislation to counter terrorism and illicit finance – Financial Institutions and Consumer Credit Subcommittee and Terrorism and Illicit Finance Subcommittee joint hearing on ‘Legislative Proposals to Counter Terrorism and Illicit Finance’, with testimony from Webster Bank Executive Vice President and Chief Risk Officer Daniel Bley (on behalf of Mid-Size Bank Coalition of America); Condor Consulting President John Byrne; Bank of America Global Head of Financial Crimes Compliance William Fox (on behalf of The Clearing House); Global Witness US Office Deputy Head Stefanie Ostfeld; and Financial Integrity Network President and co-founder Chip Poncy Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov>
<https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Alzheimer’s – Africa, Global Health, Global Human Rights, and International Organizations Subcommittee hearing on ‘A Global Update on Alzheimer’s Disease’, with testimony from NIH National Institute on Aging Deputy Director Marie Bernard; NIH Fogarty International Center Director Roger Glass; New York University Alzheimer’s Disease and Related Dementias Family Support Program Research Professor Dr Mary Mittelman; Global Alzheimer’s Platform Foundation Chief Scientific Officer Dr Richard Mohs; and Splaine Consulting Principal Michael Splaine Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

2:00 PM House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on SBA and GSA supplemental budgets – Financial Services and General Government Subcommittee hearing on ‘Supplemental Oversight – Small Business Administration and General Services Administration’, with testimony from GSA Acting Administrator Timothy Horne; and SBA CFO and Associate Administrator for Performance Management Timothy Gribben Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2359,

Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

3:00 PM House Rules Committee hearing – Hearing on ‘H.R. 1699, the Preserving Access to Manufactured Housing Act of 2017’ and ‘H.R. 4182, the Ensuring a Qualified Civil Service Act of 2017’ Location: U.S. Capitol, H-313, Washington, DC <http://www.rules.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/RulesReps>

4:00 PM House Natural Resources Committee markup hearing begins – Markup hearing begins (Wednesday – Opening Statements Only) on ‘H.R. 1778, To provide that an order by the Secretary of the Interior imposing a moratorium on Federal coal leasing shall not take effect unless a joint resolution of approval is enacted, and for other purposes’, ‘H.R. 2630, La Paz County Land Conveyance Act’, ‘H.R. 3117, Transparency and Honesty in Energy Regulations Act of 2017’, ‘H.R. 3607, To authorize the Secretary of the Interior to establish fees for medical services provided in units of the National Park System, and for other purposes’, ‘H.R. 3979, Keep America’s Refuges Operational Act’, ‘H.R. 4299, To provide for the indefinite duration of certain military land withdrawals, to improve the management of lands currently subject to such withdrawals and to make the management of such lands more transparent, and for other purposes’, and ‘H.R. 4300, Admiral Lloyd R. ‘Joe’ Vasey Pacific War Commemorative Display Establishment Act’ * Concludes tomorrow Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1324, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

Other: 8:45 AM POLITICO Playbook Interview with GOP Sen. Marco Rubio – POLITICO Playbook Interview with Republican Sen. Marco Rubio, hosted by POLITICO’s Anna Palmer and Jake Sherman, with welcome remarks from Financial Services Roundtable CEO Tim Pawlenty Location: The Liaison Capitol Hill, 415 New Jersey Ave, NW, Washington, DC www.politico.com <https://twitter.com/POLITICOEvents>

10:00 AM Media Equality Project on Congressional harassment and calls for resignations – The Media Equality Project is bringing “Bill Clinton’s victims, other luminaries, including Dr. Alveda King, niece of the late Martin Luther King, and others to Washington to confront Senator Franken, (D-MN) Congressman John Conyers, (D-MI) and Congressman Joe Barton (R) TX”. Media interview requests available. The group is also calling for the resignation of Franken, Conyers and Barton. Contact: aj.publius@gmail.com Location: National Press Club, First Amendment Room, 529 14th Street, NW Washington, D.C.

10:00 AM Cuba Trade magazine releases study on trade benefits with Cuba to U.S. farm states – Cuba Trade Magazine and U.S. Agriculture Coalition for Cuba release new white paper ‘Trade with Cuba: A White Paper on Trade Benefits to U.S. Farm States’, via conference call with participants including Republican Rep. Rick Crawford, U.S. Agriculture Coalition for Cuba Co-Chair Paul Johnson, and Cuba Trade magazine Publisher Richard Roffman and Editor-in-Chief JP Faber Location: TBD <http://www.cubatrademagazine.com/>

11:00 AM House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on U.S. Army Corps of Engineers supplemental budget – Energy and Water Development, and Related Agencies Subcommittee hearing on ‘Supplemental Oversight – US Army Corps of Engineers’, with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of the Army for Civil Works Ryan Fisher; and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Deputy Commanding General for Civil and Emergency Operations Maj. Gen. Ed Jackson Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2362-B, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

11:30 AM AG Sessions and Acting DEA Administrator Patterson announce new tools to combat the opioid crisis – Attorney General Jeff Sessions and Acting Drug Enforcement Administration Administrator Robert Patterson announce new tools to combat the opioid crisis, via press conference Location: Department of Justice, 950 Pennsylvania Ave, Washington, DC www.justice.gov <https://twitter.com/TheJusticeDept>

1:00 PM NASA discusses science investigations launching on the next SpaceX commercial resupply flight to the ISS – NASA discusses select science investigations launching on the next SpaceX commercial resupply flight to the International Space Station – targeted for launch next week at the earliest – via media teleconference featuring Made in Space president and CEO Andrew Rush, LaunchPad Medical CEO Brian Hess and CFO Grayson Allen, NASA Goddard Space Flight Center project scientist Dong Wu, University of Colorado-Boulder lead scientist Peter Pilewskie, NASA Johnson Space Center principal investigator Joseph Hamilton, and NASA Ames Research Center mission scientist Yasaman Shirazi Location: TBD <http://www.nasa.gov> <https://twitter.com/NASA>

6:00 PM Bipartisan Reps. Adriano Espaillat and Mia Love speak at The Hill event – The Hill host ‘Leadership in Action: The Hill’s Newsmaker Series’ event with Democratic Rep. Adriano Espaillat and Republican Rep. Mia Love discussing how to cut through bipartisan gridlock Location: Constitution Hall, 3501 Nebraska Ave NW, Washington, DC thehill.com

#TheHill #TheHillNewsmaker

6:00 PM World Affairs Council Embassy Series event with Singapore Ambassador to the U.S. Amb. Ashok Kumar Mirpuri Location: 3501 International Place, NW, Washington, DC
<http://www.worldaffairsdc.org> https://twitter.com/wac_dc

6:00 PM Norwegian Christmas tree lighting ceremony at Union Station – Annual Norwegian Christmas tree lighting ceremony at Union Station in Washington, DC, featuring Norway Ambassador to the U.S. Amb. Kare Aas and special guests * Tree is a gift from the people of Norway to the people of the U.S. as thanks for assistance during and after World War II and for continued friendship since then Location: Union Station, 50 Massachusetts Ave NE, Washington, DC <http://www.norway.org/> <https://twitter.com/NorwayUS>

7:30 PM Sarah Sanders keynotes APPF Annual Red, White and Blue Gala – American Principles Project Foundation Annual Red, White and Blue Gala, with keynote from Press Secretary Sarah Sanders Location: Mayflower Hotel, 1127 Connecticut Ave NW, Washington, DC www.americanprinciplesproject.org <https://twitter.com/approject>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Trevor Noah: “Republicans have set a goal of passing their tax bill through the Senate this week. This plan would cut taxes for everyone as long as your last name is ‘Corporation.’”

Jimmy Fallon: “I read that Trump lied about his own heritage for decades, claiming that his family was Swedish to help sell apartments. And he’s still claiming that he’s Swedish so IKEA will build his wall.”

Jimmy Fallon: “It’s been rough for the President. In fact, his first wife Ivana says he really misses his old life. You remember Trump’s old life, where he played golf, watched ‘Fox & Friends,’ and sent crazy tweets all day.”

Jimmy Fallon: “Get this, I read that the White House may ban staffers from using their smartphones while at work. In related news, President Trump just resigned from office. ‘That’s it, I quit. That is finally enough.’”

Seth Meyers: “Newt Gingrich recently said that the best way to communicate with President Trump is through the Fox News shows ‘Fox & Friends’ and ‘Hannity,’ while the worst way to communicate with Trump is to marry him.”

Seth Meyers: “President Trump commented on North Korea’s missile launch today, saying, quote, ‘We will take care of it.’ That’s it? I have to say, I don’t find it comforting that the President talked about enemy missiles the same way a dermatologist talks about a weird mole.”

Seth Meyers: “Bernie Sanders was nominated for a Grammy today for the audio book of ‘Our Revolution: Future To Believe In.’ He was nominated in the ‘Shouted Word’ category.”

Seth Meyers: “Vice President Mike Pence announced today that he will travel to Israel next month to address its legislative body. And this is scary: While he’s out of the country, Trump will be in charge.”

Conan O’Brien: “Bernie Sanders has been nominated for a Grammy Award for best audio book. Of course, Bernie supporters are already complaining that the Grammys are rigged so that Hillary will win.”

Conan O’Brien: “Prince Harry is getting married. That’s exciting news. Genealogy experts say that Prince Harry and his fiancée, Meghan Markle, are actually distant cousins. After hearing they were related, Queen Elizabeth finally gave the couple her blessing.”

Jordan Klepper: “So Project Veritas floated a fake Roy Moore accuser in front of the Washington Post to see if they’d bite. And they didn’t. They did not. Fishing is not always about catching fish. It’s just about baiting hooks and hanging out with bros and trying to get an honest, God-fearing cowboy into the Senate, regardless of what nine women allege.”

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform’s terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva’s terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, October 4, 2017
Date: Wednesday, October 04, 2017 7:02:53 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 4, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Reuters: Interior Secretary Investigated Over Speech To Donor's Hockey Team.
- Wall Street Journal: Government To Reopen Sage Grouse Lands For Potential Mining Projects.
- Flathead (MT) Beacon: Blackfeet Leaders Skeptical Of Zinke's Monument Recommendation.
- Fence Post: ITIF, Independent Scientists Call On Interior To Reverse Policy Against GM Seeds.
- Federal Computer Week: Do Agencies Need More Flexibility For Reorgs?
- High Country (CO) News: What's Driving An Interior Whistleblower To Dissent?
- The East Oregonian: Lawmakers Focus On Air Pollution From Wildfire.
- Eastern Arizona Courier: Opinion: We Need More Westerners In Key Positions.

- U.S. News & World Report: Ryan Zinke's Royalty Police Committee Needs An Advocate For Taxpayers.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Calif. Group Aims For Quick Win In Tribal Casino Land Row.
- Wind Farm Cos. Say 10th Circ. Wrong On Tribal Mineral Lease.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Elko (NV) Daily Free Press: Wild Horse Advisers To Meet In Colorado.
- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Latest Federal Oil And Gas Leases Mired In Protests Over Pollution Worries For Utah's Uinta Basin.
- Associated Press: Durango-area Residents Say No Notice Of Possible Oil, Gas Field.
- Associated Press: BLM Wants Land Near National Park Included In Oil Lease Sale.
- San Pedro Valley (AZ) News-Sun: Court Case Will Shape County's Future.
- KFDX-TV Wichita Falls (TX): BLM Settlement Sent To Justice Department.
- Rawlins (WY) Times: BLM Rounding Up Horses At Red Desert Complex.

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

- NY Officials Seek To Expand Offshore Wind Energy Projects.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Farmers Lose $30M Suit Against Gov't Over Water Rights, Fish.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- E&E Publishing: Protection For Tiny Darter Contrasts Admin Moves On Grizzlies.
- U.S. News & World Report: New England Gets Over $1.2M In Grants For Fish, Wildlife.
- The Hill: Don't Create Safe Haven For Wildlife Trafficking — Reject SAVES Act.
- Washington Examiner: A Law To Eliminate Federal Subsidies And Wasteful Spending That Nobody Will Even Introduce.

National Park Service

- Washington Post: This 45-foot Statue Of A Naked Woman Could Be Coming To The Mall For Four Months.
- DCist: Norton Will Introduce A Bill To Remove Statue Of Confederate General In Judiciary Square.
- U.S. News & World Report: Kuster Bill Passed To Rename Saint-Gaudens A National Park.
- KNDU-TV Yakima (WA): African American History At Hanford Nuclear Site Focus Of WSU Tri-Cities, National Park Service Project.
- Florida Keys Citizen: Fee Changes At Park On Hold.
- Finger Lakes (NY) Times: Carrying The Torch Girl Scout Convention In SF.
- U.S. News & World Report: Park To Demolish Yurt On North Rim As Health Precaution.
- Knoxville (TN) News Sentinel: Chimney Tops Trail In Smokies, Where Gatlinburg Fire Began, To Reopen.
- Marquette (MI) Mining Journal: Park Service Releases Plan For Public Review Regarding Use Of Personal Watercraft.
- Grand Canyon (AZ) News: Lisa Carrico Named Deputy Superintendent At Grand Canyon.
- Alaska Public Radio Network: Additional Coverage: Ban On Hovercraft Use Within Alaska Preserve Stands, Another Appeal May Come Up.
- Washington Post: Additional Coverage: A Rare Moment: Roughly 100 Baby Loggerhead Sea Turtles Hatch In Maryland.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- NBC: Trump Praises Federal Response In Puerto Rico, Calls For Debt To Be Forgiven.
- Virgin Islands Daily News: Federal, Local Auditors Find V.I. Public Finance Authority Practices Led To $150 Million In Questionable Expenses.

Office Of Surface Mining

- Lawmakers Try Again On Miners' Pension Bill.

US Geological Survey

- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- CNN: Trump: Gun Laws Will Be Discussed "As Time Goes By."
- Associated Press: Pence Touts Administration Tax Plan In Arizona.
- Washington Times: Study: Trump "The Least Regulatory President Since Ronald Reagan."

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "On Guns, Nevada's Leaders Are Overruling Their Voters."
 - "Chaos In Catalonia."
- Washington Post.
 - "The Lives We Have Lost."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Trump And The Fed."
 - "Evening The Cuban Score."
 - "Supreme Court 'Gobbledygook.'"

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Interior Secretary Investigated Over Speech To Donor's Hockey Team.

Reuters (10/3, Volcovici) reports that the Office of Special Counsel "is investigating whether Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke broke the law when he gave a speech to a professional hockey team owned by a political donor in June, the agency said on Tuesday." Zinke "is already being investigated by the Interior Department's inspector general in connection with his travels and the use of private charter flights, amid heightened scrutiny into private plane use by administration officials." The Campaign for Accountability "complained last week that a speech Zinke gave on June 26 to the Vegas Golden Knights, a National Hockey League team based in Las Vegas, violated the Hatch Act barring executive branch employees from engaging in political activity." The team "is owned by Bill Foley, chairman of Fidelity National Financial Inc and a donor to Zinke's congressional campaigns."

Interior, EPA Chiefs: No Plans To Pay For Charter Flights. The AP (10/3, Daly) reports that "two of President Donald Trump's Cabinet members say they do not plan to reimburse the government for charter flights costing tens of thousands of dollars." Representatives of Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and Environmental Protection Agency chief Scott Pruitt "say the trips were pre-approved by ethics officials in their respective agencies and were part of their official duties." Heather Swift, a spokeswoman for Zinke, "said Tuesday all of Zinke's travel – including a military flight with Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue to view wildfires in Montana in August – were approved by career officials at the department."

What About Lola? Politico Morning Energy (10/3, Andragna) reports that "two House Democrats want Interior's inspector general to expand its newly announced investigation into Secretary Ryan Zinke's non-commercial travel to also include his wife, Lola, in light of her involvement with a GOP Senate campaign in Montana." Raul Grijalva and Donald McEachin wrote in a letter Monday, "Because the secretary's spouse is leading a Senate campaign in Montana, tax-payer funded travel for Mrs. Zinke, especially to or from Montana, deserves heightened scrutiny."

Government To Reopen Sage Grouse Lands For Potential Mining Projects.

The Wall Street Journal (10/4, Carlton) reports that the Interior Department has scrapped an Obama-era planned mining ban covering 10 million acres in Western states that was aimed at protecting the greater sage grouse. The decision reopens areas in Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming to mining and is expected to be announced in a Bureau of Land Management press release on Friday morning. Bureau of Land Management acting Director Mike Nedd said in a statement, "Secretary Zinke has said from the beginning that by working closely with the states, who are on the front lines and a valued partner in protecting the health of these lands, we can be successful in conserving greater sage grouse habitat without stifling economic development and job growth."

Blackfeet Leaders Skeptical Of Zinke's Monument Recommendation.

The Flathead \(MT\) Beacon (10/3, Scott) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's recommendation to add the Badger-Two Medicine area near Glacier National Park to the list of monuments was met with "mixed reactions." Harry Barnes, chairman of the Blackfeet Tribal Business Council, "said while furnishing the Badger with permanent protection is among his top priorities, he's leery of a federal designation that could trammel the tribe's sovereign rights." Lou Bruno, who "has been advocating for protections in the Badger-Two Medicine area for more than 30 years," urged "Zinke to reaffirm his department's lease cancellations and previous lease buybacks rather than add it to the diminishing list of national monuments."

ITIF, Independent Scientists Call On Interior To Reverse Policy Against GM Seeds.

The Fence Post (10/3) reports that the Information Technology and Innovation Foundation, "one of the world's top science and technology think tanks, along with a group of independent scientists, yesterday submitted a letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke calling on the department to reverse a Fish and Wildlife Service policy that phased out the use of genetically modified seeds." The letter "argues that the policy was improperly adopted three years ago and stands at odds with the conservation objectives of the Fish and Wildlife Service." The group writes, "The prohibition of 'genetically modified' crops is a wrong-headed and anti-environmental policy, and the conceit that it is being advanced out of respect for a 'land ethic' is indefensible."

Do Agencies Need More Flexibility For Reorgs?

Federal Computer Week (10/3, Gunter) reports that "expansion of shared services and reductions in workforce are expected to feature prominently in the White House's plan to reorganize the federal government, but agencies may need some legislative help to fully implement their proposals." The article says that "when it comes to the workforce, the current administration differs sharply from its predecessor, with widespread cuts proposed for civilian agencies," but "realizing those staff reductions could also require process changes." Scott Cameron, the Interior Department's principal deputy assistant secretary for policy, management and budget, said he "can't help but wonder if they're going to need a significant number of early outs or buyouts used governmentwide as part of reshaping the workforce." If so, Cameron proposed "that delegating the Office of Personnel Management's authority to review buyouts on a person-by-person basis to the agency level would be remarkably more efficient."

What's Driving An Interior Whistleblower To Dissent?

The High Country \(CO\) News (10/3, Shogren) reports on what is motivating Joel Clement, "until recently the department's top climate change official," to be a "vocal dissident inside a cabinet agency in the Trump administration." In July, Clement "started publicly criticizing the new administration and filed a whistleblower complaint," and "now he's urging other civil servants to join him in exposing the ways the Trump administration is betraying the core missions of federal agencies." After being reassigned to the Office of Natural Resource Revenue, "Clement hasn't quit, he says, because of the 'very slim chance' he could return to his previous position and help the Interior Department take climate change seriously." He says, "Every one of the bureaus is going to have mission failure if we don't pay attention to climate change."

Lawmakers Focus On Air Pollution From Wildfire.

The East Oregonian (10/3, Plaven) reports that the House Committee on Energy and Commerce, chaired by Rep. Greg Walden, "will hold a hearing Wednesday examining the impacts of large fires on air quality, releasing massive amounts of particulate matter and greenhouse gases into the atmosphere." Walden said "he is looking forward to hearing more from the panel Wednesday on what they can do about the fire situation moving forward." He said, "Enough is enough. It's time that decisions about when and how to fight these fires takes into account the impact they have on air quality and human health."

Opinion: We Need More Westerners In Key Positions.

In an op-ed for the Eastern Arizona Courier (10/3, Flake), Sen. Jeff Flake is pleased to see that the Interior Department is “well stocked with Westerners.” He notes that “there are still more spots to fill at the Department of the Interior, including director of the Bureau of Land Management, assistant secretaries for Fish, Wildlife and Parks, and for Water and Science.” Flake has “prioritized filling these roles as soon as possible,” and is “hopeful we will soon see even more Arizonans and Westerners in these and other positions.”

Ryan Zinke’s Royalty Police Committee Needs An Advocate For Taxpayers.

In an op-ed for U.S. News & World Report (10/3, Alexander), Ryan Alexander, president of Taxpayers for Common Sense, raises concerns that the newly re-established Royalty Policy Committee has no one “to advocate or speak up on behalf of the taxpayer.” Alexander writes “that is a problem for a group charged with assessing how public resources are valued and reviewing policies to determine whether taxpayers are fairly compensated for those resources, through rents, royalties and fees.” She concludes: “For the sake of making a dent in our daunting national debt, we hope that despite the absence of a taxpayer advocate, the new committee will put the nation’s resource owners – federal taxpayers – first.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Calif. Group Aims For Quick Win In Tribal Casino Land Row.

Law360 (10/3, Phillis) reports that “a California community group asked the D.C. district court for a quick win in its bid to block the U.S. Department of the Interior’s decision to acquire land in trust for a tribe for the purposes of gaming, arguing that the wrong government official made the decision.” Stand Up for California! “along with three individuals said Sunday the law specifies who can make the decision to approve the Wilton Rancheria’s request to have land acquired in trust for gaming.”

Wind Farm Cos. Say 10th Circ. Wrong On Tribal Mineral Lease.

Law360 (10/3, Rodriguez) reports that “wind energy developers on Monday asked the Tenth Circuit to reconsider a panel’s ruling that they should have gotten a mineral lease from the Osage Nation and approval from the Bureau of Indian Affairs before engaging in surface construction of an Oklahoma wind farm.”

Bureau Of Land Management

Wild Horse Advisers To Meet In Colorado.

The Elko \(NV\) Daily Free Press (10/3) reports that “the Bureau of Land Management’s National Wild Horse and Burro Advisory Board will meet Oct. 18-19 in Grand Junction, Colorado, to discuss the pressing challenges of wild horse and burro overpopulation on public lands and the impacts they are having on the range.” Acting BLM Director Michael Nedd said, “The rapid growth rate and chronic overpopulation of the West’s wild horses are already affecting the health of the animals and the resources on which they and many other species depend. To be effective in solving this challenge, we must work together to explore a wide variety of solutions to an unsustainable situation.”

Latest Federal Oil And Gas Leases Mired In Protests Over Pollution Worries For Utah’s Uinta Basin.

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (10/3, Maffley) reports that the Bureau of Land Management’s upcoming oil and gas lease sale in Utah is facing opposition from public health, wilderness, and environmental groups. The main concern is that the upcoming Dec. 11 lease sale could negatively impact the Uinta Basin’s ozone levels. The US EPA is set to place Duchesne and Uintah Counties in non-compliance over ozone emissions, a move that is expected on Oct. 15 or later. The EPA action could put a “damper on future drilling and require industry to stem the clouds of fumes rising from the oil patch.” Utah Physicians for a Healthy Environment President Dr. Brian Moench said, “A pollution crisis will inevitably lead to a public health crisis, and there is preliminary evidence that one may already be occurring with high rates of perinatal deaths in the Uinta Basin.”

Durango-area Residents Say No Notice Of Possible Oil, Gas Field.

The AP (10/4) reports some southwestern Colorado residents are saying they did not receive notice of a possible gas and oil field development next to several homes. Residents of the Shenandoah subdivision near Durango say they were not notified of a public comment period that ends October 10. Bureau of Land Management spokeswoman Shannon Borders said there was a news release and letters sent to affected property owners in June.

BLM Wants Land Near National Park Included In Oil Lease Sale.

The AP (10/3) reports that the Bureau of Land Management has recommended that a 120-acre plot of land bordering the Theodore Roosevelt National Park be leased for oil and gas. The lease sale has been recommended for March of 2018. BLM said that the "administration's goals of promoting America's energy independence" are consistent with the proposed lease sale. Public comments are open through Oct. 20.

Court Case Will Shape County's Future.

The San Pedro Valley \(AZ\) News-Sun (10/3, Petermann) reports that "legal proceedings will begin this month in a Maricopa County Superior Court to decide federal water rights in the San Pedro Riparian National Conservation Area (SPRNCA), with the outcome of the case expected to shape the future of Cochise County." The Bureau of Land Management has "petitioned for the right to 44,000 annual acre-feet of water in the SPRNCA, drawing a legal challenge from state and local authorities." According to the article, "trial dates are scheduled into January 2018 and a final decision in the case may not be rendered for more than a year after the proceedings end, local officials have said."

BLM Settlement Sent To Justice Department.

KFDX-TV Wichita Falls, TX (10/3, Cottingham) reports that "the proposed settlement terms are still pending the approval of the U.S. Department of Justice in the Bureau of Land Management settlement." Robert Henneke, the attorney representing the landowners, "who accuse the BLM of executing an 'arbitrary seizure' of land along the 116-mile strip of the red river said the DOJ is supposed to file a status update with the court Tuesday."

BLM Rounding Up Horses At Red Desert Complex.

The Rawlins \(WY\) Times (10/3, Lease) reports that the Bureau of Land Management office in Rawlins "decided to curb the number of wild horses at the Red Desert Complex." The BLM's Sarah Beckwith "said the removal of horses could occur in 2018."

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

NY Officials Seek To Expand Offshore Wind Energy Projects.

The AP (10/3) reports officials in New York "are seeking to expand offshore wind generation in the Atlantic Ocean." New York "has proposed four new sites for wind energy projects to the federal Bureau of Ocean Energy Management" and "officials say they are asking federal regulators to expedite the process." Each of the "four proposed sites announced Monday are in areas south of Long Island and closer to New Jersey."

E&E Publishing (10/3) reports director of the New York Offshore Wind Alliance Joe Martens said, "If New York State continues on this path, it will be the national leader in renewable energy and offshore wind, with Long Island at the center of a new clean energy economy. ... Other states are vying for this status, so New York needs to move aggressively and smartly."

Bureau Of Reclamation

Farmers Lose $30M Suit Against Gov't Over Water Rights, Fish.

Law360 (10/3, Rodriguez) reports that "a federal judge on Friday tossed a lawsuit filed by a group of southern Oregon and northern California farmers who sought $30 million from the U.S. government for withholding water from their operations and sending it to rivers that provide the habitat for several endangered fish species." E&E Publishing (10/3, Doyle) reports that "in a 75-page opinion, U.S. Court of Federal Claims Judge Marian Blank Horn concluded the farmers' long-ago loss of irrigation water in southern Oregon and Northern California did not amount to a taking for which compensation was owed." Horn "concluded that the Bureau of Reclamation's shut-off of water to the farmers was, however painful, in service to the 'senior water rights' held by the region's Klamath, Yurok and Hoopa Valley tribes." Horn wrote, "The government's actions in 2001, did not, therefore, constitute a taking of these plaintiffs' property under the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution."

Fish And Wildlife Service

Protection For Tiny Darter Contrasts Admin Moves On Grizzlies.

E&E Publishing (10/3, Doyle, Lunney) reports that "kicking off a series of long-awaited decisions," the Fish and Wildlife Service yesterday proposed listing the trispot darter as threatened under the Endangered Species Act. Separately, FWS officials are "proposing that the candy darter found in Virginia and West Virginia also be listed as threatened." Meanwhile, "the populations of two other species, the holiday darter and the bridled darter, were deemed stable enough to not need ESA protections." The article compares the decisions on the darter with the announcement in July that Yellowstone-area grizzly bears would lose ESA protections.

Additional coverage was provided by Courthouse News (10/3, YOUNG-GRINDLE).

New England Gets Over $1.2M In Grants For Fish, Wildlife.

The AP (10/3) reports that New England is "getting over $1.2 million in grants from the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation to restore forest and river habitat for native bird and freshwater fish populations." The projects "supported by the 10 grants will open 117 miles of streams for eastern brook trout, river herring and Atlantic salmon by modifying and replacing 24 failing culverts, and other barriers." They will also "improve nearly 1,000 acres of habitat for birds, engage at least 485 community volunteers in restoration and deliver technical assistance to over 2,500 landowners." The grants, announced Tuesday, were awarded through the New England Forests and Rivers Fund.

Don't Create Safe Haven For Wildlife Trafficking — Reject SAVES Act.

In an op-ed for The Hill (10/3, Hemley), Ginette Hemley, senior vice president for Wildlife Conservation at World Wildlife Fund, "marks the one-year anniversary of the signing into law of the END Wildlife Trafficking Act." The legislation, "which promotes international cooperation to curb poaching and wildlife trafficking, and increases federal penalties for wildlife crimes, enjoyed overwhelming bipartisan support." However, "a bill now making its way through the House of Representatives could give relief to wildlife traffickers just when we have them on the ropes, while also damaging America's credibility on the world stage." According to Hemley, "the deceptively named 'SAVES' Act, or H.R. 2603, would strip existing Endangered Species Act protections from species 'not native to the United States.'" Hemley claims that the bill "would leave many of the most trafficked species on the planet more vulnerable, including elephants, rhinos, tigers, and hundreds of other species of mammals, birds, reptiles and fish."

A Law To Eliminate Federal Subsidies And Wasteful Spending That Nobody Will Even Introduce.

In an op-ed for the Washington Examiner (10/3, Smith), Cameron Smith, general counsel and vice president of implementation for the R Street Institute, writes that an update to the Coastal Barrier Resources Act is the kind of legislation that should garner bipartisan support. According to Smith, "environmentalists should want to update the law because it protects sensitive habitats." And "fiscal conservatives should support the modernization because the law eliminates wasteful federal spending and subsidies." However, "nobody in Congress has introduced the necessary legislation to make that happen."

National Park Service

This 45-foot Statue Of A Naked Woman Could Be Coming To The Mall For Four Months.

The Washington Post (10/3, Stein) reports that activists want to install "a 45-foot-tall statue of a nude woman, weighing in at 16,000 pounds," on the National Mall. The statute would be the main attraction at the annual "Catharsis on the Mall" in November and would be in place through March. Mike Litterst, a spokesman for the National Park Service, "said the agency is reviewing permits for the statue, adding that it's 'plausible' that the agency would allow such a large and striking sculpture to remain through the winter months."

Norton Will Introduce A Bill To Remove Statue Of Confederate General In Judiciary Square.

DCist (10/3, Sadon) reports that D.C. Delegate Eleanor Holmes Norton plans to introduce legislation to remove the statue of Albert Pike this week, "with the blessing of the Freemasons themselves." According to the article, "as the polarized debate about monuments and statues honoring Confederate generals grew in the wake of the violence in Charlottesville, local activists pointed to Pike and demanded his likeness come down, too." The National Park Service, "which has no recent records of removing a statue from land it controls, says it is agency policy not to remove a statue for any reason unless directed by Congress."

Kuster Bill Passed To Rename Saint-Gaudens A National Park.

The AP (10/3) reports that the House has passed a bill by Rep. Annie Kuster "that would redesignate the Saint-Gaudens National Historic Site in New Hampshire as a national park, in recognition of its artifacts and properties." Kuster "said Tuesday that by renaming the site a national park, it is her hope that more visitors will be encourage to visit the site in Cornish to learn about sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens' impact on America's artistic heritage." Sens. Maggie Hassan and Jeanne Shaheen "introduced a similar bill in the Senate."

African American History At Hanford Nuclear Site Focus Of WSU Tri-Cities, National Park Service Project.

KNDU-TV Yakima, WA (10/3) reports that Washington State University Tri-Cities was "recently awarded a $73,000 grant in partnership" with the National Park Service "to research and document the African American migration, segregation and overall civil rights history at the Manhattan Project National Historical Park, Hanford." Michael Mays, WSU Tri-Cities director of the Hanford History Project, "said the African American story and perspective remains largely undocumented and untold at the Hanford nuclear site, which is one of three locations of the Manhattan Project National Historical Park." According to Mays, the plan for the project is "to examine existing documentation, conduct new research and interview African American community members throughout the Pacific Northwest in order to better understand the African American experience at Hanford."

Fee Changes At Park On Hold.

The Florida Keys Citizen (10/4) reports that "due to Hurricane Irma's impact on South Florida, the U.S. Department of the Interior has put on hold making changes to Everglades National Park's recreation and commercial use authorization fees until further notice." Everglades National Park Superintendent Pedro Ramos said, "While we are steadfast in our long-term commitment to enhance our visitor amenities while decreasing our maintenance backlog, our immediate attention will be to work with the community around us on our recovery efforts."

Carrying The Torch Girl Scout Convention In SF.

The Finger Lakes \(NY\) Times (10/3, SHAW) reports that "Girl Scouts from New York and Pennsylvania will celebrate the 100th anniversary of women's right to vote in New York state Oct. 13 and 14." The Carrying the Torch Girl Scout convention will be held at the Women's Rights National Historical Park, the Seneca Falls Community Center and the Gould Hotel. Ami Ghazala, park superintendent, said, "The National Park Service at the Women's Rights National Historical Park is thrilled to partner with Girl Scouts of NYPENN Pathways for this exciting project. It is our goal to remind all that girl's and women's stories have always been part of the American story."

Park To Demolish Yurt On North Rim As Health Precaution.

The AP (10/4) reports that Grand Canyon National Park officials "plan to demolish a yurt that had been available for backcountry hikers and backpackers to use on the North Rim." Park officials "say the yurt located at CC Hill will be demolished this fall as a precaution to protect park visitors and employees from conditions conducive to rodent exposure and the accompanying risk of medical infections such as hantavirus." According to officials, "there's no diagnosis or indication of infectious disease relating to rodent exposure from the yurt."

Chimney Tops Trail In Smokies, Where Gatlinburg Fire Began, To Reopen.

The Knoxville \(TN\) News Sentinel (10/3, Ahillen) reports that "the Chimney Tops Trail near the location where the disastrous Gatlinburg wildfires began will be reopened to the public Friday, the National Park Service announced in a news release Tuesday." Acting park Supt. Clay Jordan said, "We are excited to complete the work on the Chimney Tops Trail in time for the fall color season in Great Smoky Mountains National Park. We understand that many people have a strong emotional tie to the Chimney Tops Trail and its reopening has been a priority for moving forward in our recovery from the fire event."

Additional coverage was provided by the AP (10/4).

Park Service Releases Plan For Public Review Regarding Use Of Personal Watercraft.

The Marquette \(MI\) Mining Journal (10/3) reports that the National Park Service has "released an Environmental Assessment regarding the use of personal watercraft on the surface of Lake Superior, within Pictured Rocks National Lakeshore." The agency's "preferred alternative in the EA would allow the continued limited use of PWC on the surface of Lake Superior within the park, between the park's western boundary near Sand Point, to the east end of Miners Beach." The public comment period ends Nov. 2.

Lisa Carrico Named Deputy Superintendent At Grand Canyon.

The Grand Canyon \(AZ\) News (10/3) reports that Lisa Carrico, "a 33-year veteran of the National Park Service (NPS), has been selected as deputy superintendent of Operations and Science at Grand Canyon National Park." Grand Canyon Superintendent Christine Lehnertz said, "We are so pleased that Lisa will join us at Grand Canyon; her strong leadership skills and dedication to employees will help us as we continue to build a respectful and inclusive workplace. Lisa's passion for the mission of the National Park Service and experience across the service make her the ideal candidate to advance the park into its second century."

Additional Coverage: Ban On Hovercraft Use Within Alaska Preserve Stands, Another Appeal May Come Up.

Additional coverage that a federal Appeals Court ruled Monday that the National Park Service can ban hovercraft operating on Alaska rivers that flow through national preserves was provided by the Alaska Public Radio Network (10/3, Bross).

Additional Coverage: A Rare Moment: Roughly 100 Baby Loggerhead Sea Turtles Hatch In Maryland.

Additional coverage of the hatching of about 100 loggerhead sea turtles at Assateague Island was provided by the Washington Post (10/3, Hedgpeth) and the Baltimore Sun (10/3, Dance).

Office Of Insular Affairs

Trump Praises Federal Response In Puerto Rico, Calls For Debt To Be Forgiven.

President Trump's visit Tuesday to Puerto Rico is overshadowed in the media by the latest developments in Las Vegas. While all three networks covered the President's trip, they all led with the shooting investigation and dedicated twice the amount of airtime (just under 14 minutes versus just under seven minutes) to the story. Media coverage of his visit to Puerto Rico, nevertheless, is heavy with coverage highly critical of the President's remarks about the death toll on the island from the storm and its debt. Ron Mott reported on NBC Nightly News (10/3, story 6, 2:20, Holt), for example, that the President "rais[ed] eyebrows when comparing the death toll Puerto Rico to Hurricane Katrina in 2005." The President "also raised the cost of the disaster," and "left Puerto Rico more than an hour ahead of schedule, no reason given for that." The AP (10/3, Colvin) reports that "at least parts of the itinerary were drawn to ensure a friendly reception: Trump was visiting the houses of pre-selected families waiting on their lawns." At the same, the AP says "large-scale protests against Trump, talked about in advance, failed to materialize," and USA Today (10/3, Dorell) reports from San Juan that Trump's visit "drew thanks from victims of Hurricane Maria who said it would shine a light on their problems, but some faulted him for playing politics with their island's disaster."

The Washington Times (10/3, Morton) reports the President also called Tuesday "for Puerto Rico to have its crippling debt forgiven and said it's tough luck for the Wall Street holders of the debt." Trump, it says, "took considerable political heat" for tweeting after the storm that Puerto Rico was already suffering because of its huge debt burden, "which liberals interpreted as blaming the victim." But the Times says Trump "may have meant something else – that post-hurricane rebuilding may require that debt to be eliminated." Trump said in an interview with Geraldo Rivera on Fox News' Hannity (10/3), "We are going to work something out. We have to look at their whole debt structure. They owe a lot of money to your friends on Wall Street. We will have to wipe that out. It's going to have to be, you can say good-bye to that. I don't know if it's Goldman Sachs, but whoever it is, you can wave good-bye to that. The debt was massive on the island."

The Washington Post (10/3, Parker) says Trump's "focus" during Tuesday's visit was on the "unbelievable" and "incredible" job that his Administration has done so far. He "repeatedly played down the destruction to the island," telling local officials they should feel "very proud" they haven't lost hundreds of lives like in "a real catastrophe" like Hurricane Katrina. The Post says Trump was "upbeat and, at times, playful during the visit, often sounding more like an athletic coach congratulating his team after a winning season than a president addressing American citizens at a moment of crisis."

On ABC World News Tonight (10/3, story 4, 2:20, Muir), Jonathan Karl said that "at a church in San Juan, President Trump tossed paper towels to hurricane victims as if he were playing basketball. ... Sitting right next to Puerto Rico's governor, he touted the death count as if he were keeping score." Trump was shown saying: "If you look at a real catastrophe like Katrina, and you look at the tremendous, hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of people that died, what is your death count as of this moment? Seventeen?" Karl added, "And even as he talked up the federal recovery effort...the President couldn't help but bring up the high cost." Trump: "I hate to tell you, Puerto Rico, but you've thrown our budget a little out of whack."

The CBS Evening News (10/3, story 6, 2:05, Mason) showed the President saying, "Flashlights! You don't need the them anymore!" David Begnaud added, "President Trump seemed unaware that 94 percent of the island is still without power. He handed out supplies like prizes, lobbing paper towels into the crowd." While the Administration "has been criticized for a slow response following Hurricane Maria...the President awarded himself an 'A+,'" before "remind[ing] the island of its debts." The Wall Street Journal (10/3, Nicholas, Campo-Flores) reports the President reiterated that he believes Puerto Rico must step up its efforts. "On a local level, they have to give us more help," Trump told reporters. "But I will tell you, the first responders, the military, FEMA, they have done an incredible job in Puerto Rico."

Reuters (10/3, Rampton, Stargardter) reports the President "expressed satisfaction on Tuesday with the federal response," while the Washington Times (10/3, Miller) says he "strenuously objected to portrayals in the news media and from the San Juan mayor of a lackluster emergency response on the island." The Los Angeles Times (10/3, Hennessy-Fiske, King) reports Trump "lavished praise on local officials who spoke highly of him, while taking a veiled swipe at San Juan's mayor, who had previously characterized initial recovery efforts as ineffective." Trump said Mayor Carmen Yulin Cruz had "come back a long way," but "without detailing what in Cruz's stance had changed." Cruz, the Times notes, "was among those who shook hands with the president on his arrival, but she was not invited to speak."

CNN (10/3, Diamond) reports on its website that the "bulk of Trump's remarks on Tuesday" "focused on praising his administration's response to the destructive hurricane, even as more than half of residents still lack access to potable water and as nearly all of the island remains without power." The President, reports the AP (10/3, Colvin), said his visit was "not about me" but then "praised local officials for offering kind words about his administration's recovery effort and invited one to repeat the 'nice things' she'd said earlier."

In an interview with Geraldo Rivera on Fox News' Hannity (10/3, 9:48 p.m. EST, Rivera) on Tuesday night, Trump said, "We may have done our best work here, but it hasn't been appreciated. But actually, if you see over the last couple of days, people are seeing what we've done. The runways are open. The ships are pouring in. A lot of things are happening. It's great."

Miami Herald (10/3) columnist Andres Oppenheimer writes that when Trump "playfully threw paper towels to the crowd of Hurricane Maria victims during his visit to Puerto Rico – as if he were a rock star tossing T-shirts to a concert crowd – he reminded me of late Venezuelan populist leader Hugo Chavez." Populist leaders, he writes, "put themselves at center stage and make it look as if people in need are getting their goodies thanks to them, rather than as a result of the government's duty to take care of them in extreme situations." Also "like Chavez," he adds, Trump "is an incompetent leader who constantly brags about things that, in reality, are often total fiascos."

CNN political director David Chalian said on CNN's Situation Room (10/3), "I thought it was a great thing the President went to Puerto Rico and he was there," but his comments seemed "a bit awkward at times because everything, as is the case with Donald Trump, very often is about the reflection back on him, his grading and his performance and his reviews."

Boris Sanchez said on CNN's Situation Room (10/3) that "there was an expectation that he might change the tone from the very aggressive one that he took this weekend, questioning the leadership abilities of Puerto Rico officials and being less than receptive to offering aid to the island. We didn't see a full change from the President today. Instead, we saw some colorful moments."

Former Clinton campaign manager John Podesta writes in the Washington Post (10/3, Podesta) that as Trump visits Puerto Rico, "he has a lot to answer for, given his tone-deaf tweets," and argues that the President "would do well to abandon his Trump First agenda and finally put the people of Puerto Rico who need his help first."

The Washington Post (10/3, Hui), meanwhile, reports that Oxfam America "took the unusual step Tuesday of criticizing the US government for its 'slow and inadequate' response" in Puerto Rico, "saying that the Trump administration's faltering relief efforts has forced it to intervene." In a statement, Oxfam America President Abby Maxman said, "We're hearing excuses and criticism from the administration instead of a cohesive and compassionate response."

San Juan Mayor Hopeful After Trump Visit. The AP (10/3) reports San Juan Mayor Carmen Yulin Cruz said "she's hopeful" that President Trump and his Administration "have a better handle on the island's needs after visiting Tuesday." Cruz tweeted that the meetings between local officials and White House staff were "productive," and said she "hopes new channels of communication with the White House 'put in motion what is needed' to save lives." However, Cruz "was critical of Trump himself in an interview with CNN," saying he sometimes "spouts" comments "that really hurt the people of Puerto Rico."

Asked on CNN's Situation Room (10/3) if Trump's visit will help the people of Puerto Rico, Cruz said, "I think his staff understands now and have all the data they need. I would hope the President of the United States stops spouting out comments that really hurt the people of Puerto Rico because rather than commander-in-chief in chief he sort of becomes mis-communicator-in-chief."

The Washington Times (10/3, Persons) reports that responding to Trump's comment about Puerto Rico throwing "our budget out of whack," Cruz said, "It doesn't make you feel good. I would hope that the president of the United States stops spouting out comments that really hurt the people of Puerto Rico because rather than commander-in-chief he sorta becomes mis-communicator-in-chief."

Trump Meets Offshore With Governor Of Virgin Islands. The New York Times (10/3, Fausset) reports that on Tuesday, as President Trump prepared to meet with Virgin Islands Gov. Kenneth Mapp "on a Navy amphibious assault ship offshore, the residents of the island of St. Croix were busy putting together lives and neighborhoods wrenched apart by Hurricane Maria." DHS officials "said it would have been logistically challenging for President Trump to visit because of the widespread destruction."

Sources: White House To Seek $29B Disaster Aid Package. According to the AP (10/4, Taylor), a "senior Administration official and top Capitol Hill aides" say the Administration is "finalizing a $29 billion disaster aid request that combines $16 billion to shore up the government-backed flood insurance program and almost $13 billion in new relief for hurricane victims." The request is expected on the Hill "as early as Wednesday."

House Republicans Seek $1 Billion In Medicaid Funds For Puerto Rico. A congressional aide told Reuters (10/3) on Tuesday that Puerto Rico could receive $1 billion in additional funding for Medicaid under a proposal from House Republicans. Republicans on the House Energy and Commerce Committee "included the request for more Medicaid funding for Puerto Rico as part of a separate bill to reauthorize the Children's Health Insurance Program." The measure is scheduled to be voted on in committee Wednesday.

Aid Distribution Delayed By "Bureaucratic Choke Points." The New York Times (10/3, Healy, Robles, Nixon) reports that two weeks after Hurricane Maria, "basic aid is now trickling into towns," but many residents are "still receiving just meager portions, and delivery is being hampered by bureaucratic choke points that have put ill-equipped and overburdened local mayors in charge of figuring out how to haul supplies from regional drop-off points to their storm-ravaged towns." Governor Ricardo Rosselló "acknowledged at a news conference on Tuesday that officials were still working out kinks that have prevented the distribution of relief supplies sent to the island," and "announced that the government would provide trucks to the municipalities that needed them."

David Muir reported on ABC World News Tonight (10/3, story 5, 3:10) that over the weekend, he visited a neighborhood just 15 minutes from the airport in San Juan. Muir spoke to residents in an apartment building who “were still without power and running water.” Muir asked residents if they have “seen any emergency officials or members of the government” or received any aid. They said they had not.

Death Toll In Puerto Rico Rises To 34. The New York Times (10/3, A1, Landler) reports that “shortly after Mr. Trump departed the island,” Gov. Ricardo Rosselló told reporters that the death toll had risen to 34. The AP (10/4) reports Rosselló said the death toll “included 19 people who died as a direct result of the storm and 15 whose deaths were caused indirectly by the storm.”

Clinton: Puerto Rico “Most Tragic” Example Of Trump Only Serving His Base. The Hill (10/3, Thomsen) reports Hillary Clinton called President Trump’s response to Hurricane Maria in Puerto Rico “the most tragic example” of him only catering to his supporters. Asked by Michele Jawando, a host of the Center for American Progress’ “Thinking Cap” podcast, how Trump’s response to the hurricane showed his “neglect of communities of color,” Clinton responded, “I think we’ve seen it for months now. And I think Puerto Rico is the latest and most tragic example of having a president who is only the president for people who agree with him. There’s not any real attempt to reach out beyond that base that he’s cultivated.”

Economics Professor: “Price Gouging” After Disasters Good For The Public. George Mason University economics professor Donald J. Boudreaux argues in the Wall Street Journal (10/3) that criticisms of price gouging in the wake of natural disasters are misplaced. Boudreaux says high prices are an essential way to ensure that resources get where they are desperately needed.

Federal, Local Auditors Find V.I. Public Finance Authority Practices Led To $150 Million In Questionable Expenses.

The Virgin Islands Daily News (10/4, O’CONNOR) reports that “a joint federal and territorial audit of the Public Finance Authority raises questions about as much as $150 million in fiscal mismanagement over seven years.” The audit revealed “$50 million in discrepancies between how money was spent and an additional $101.1 million in questionable expenditures between the years 2009 and 2015.” The reports were “released publicly Monday, as territorial officials began to make the case for hundreds of millions of dollars in federal recovery aid for the aftermath of hurricanes Irma and Maria.”

Don’t Write A Check To The Virgin Islands Government. In an op-ed for the Washington Examiner (10/3, Lennox), Dennis Lennox, a public affairs consultant and political commentator, and former executive director of the Republican Party of the Virgin Islands, writes that fiscal crisis in the Virgin Islands is “most certainly worse” after “category five hurricanes Irma and Maria devastated America’s Caribbean.” Lennox argues that “the Virgin Islands should get its fair share of federal assistance, but it’s doubtful that the territorial government can responsibly administer all the money that will be transferred from the federal treasury.” However, instead of giving money to Gov. Kenneth E. Mapp, Lennox urges President Trump and Republican appropriators in Congress to “direct money for the Virgin Islands to the Department of Interior, which oversees the U.S. territories.” He argues that “Interior could then directly distribute the money, ensuring it actually goes toward recovery and isn’t mismanaged by the V.I. territorial government.”

Office Of Surface Mining

Lawmakers Try Again On Miners’ Pension Bill.

The Hill (10/3, Cama) reports that “coal-country lawmakers launched a new effort Tuesday to pass legislation to shore up pensions for thousands of coal miners and their families.” The bipartisan group spearheaded by Sen. Joe Manchin “introduced a new bill that would use excess funds meant for mine cleanups and borrow some general Treasury money to pay for pension checks.” The legislation, the American Miners Pension Act, “would shift some money out of the Abandoned Mine Land (AML) fund and into the pension fund.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette (10/3, Moore).

US Geological Survey

Additional Reading.

- Biologists On The Trail Of ‘Brain-eating Amoebae’. Phys \(UK\) (10/3, Fulton-Bennett).
- Colorado’s Gore Range Was Named After A Bloodthirsty 19th Century Aristocrat. Is It Time For A Change? Summit \(CO\) Daily (10/3, Fixler).

- Risk Of Human-Triggered Earthquakes Laid Out In Biggest-Ever Database. Scientific American (10/3, Witze).

Top National News

Trump: Gun Laws Will Be Discussed “As Time Goes By.”

While ongoing coverage of the mass shooting in Las Vegas focused primarily on the investigation, the renewed debate over gun control is also getting coverage. President Trump briefly addressed the matter before departing for Puerto Rico, but on Capitol Hill, Republican leaders said that it was too soon to discuss possible legislation. Analyses indicate that the prospects for gun control legislation are extremely slim.

CNN (10/3, Landers) reports that the President “said Tuesday that the US will ‘be talking about gun laws as time goes by’ in the wake of the Las Vegas shooting.” The President “was asked about a gun bill currently making its way through the House that would loosen restrictions on purchasing gun silencers. Trump said that he would talk about that later.” The President’s remarks were mostly overlooked by the broadcast network newscasts, with Hallie Jackson on NBC Nightly News (10/3, story 5, 2:00, Holt) saying that “gun laws seem unlikely, and President is not engaging, at least not yet.” ABC and CBS did not report on the President’s comments.

The Washington Times (10/3, Boyer) writes that Trump “has consistently spoken out for Second Amendment rights as a candidate,” and the Washington Examiner (10/3, Morrongiello) reports that “White House talking points circulated to allies of the Trump administration on Tuesday urged Republicans to resist new gun control measures that would ‘curtail the freedoms of law abiding citizens.’”

USA Today (10/3, Przybyla) reports that when Trump arrives in Las Vegas today, he “is likely to offer sympathy to the victims – but not propose any changes to gun laws. ... According to a White House statement about the trip, Trump is going ‘to offer his support to those recovering from their wounds, and to thank the courageous first responders.’”

NBC Nightly News (10/3, story 5, 2:00, Holt) reported, “Tragedy here has plunged this country back into one of the most heated debates of our time, the fight over the gun laws. Specifically the device used by this killer to modify his guns into machine guns.” NBC’s Hallie Jackson: “Reignited gun debate now centers on a piece of plastic like this. It’s a bump stock, and the Las Vegas shooter purchased two before the attack. The device allows a semiautomatic gun to fire faster...almost like an automatic. They’re legal, but Congress may reconsider.” Sen. John Thune: “Turn semiautomatic weapons into virtually automatic weapons, that’s something I think we’ll take a look at.” Sen. Lindsey Graham: “All things that make America safer and don’t infringe on the Second Amendment, count me in.” Jackson: “So you think it’s time to have policy debate?” Graham: “Yeah, I think so, I think it’s a good time have a hearing.”

However, the AP (10/3, Daly) reports that “Republican leaders made clear Tuesday that Congress will take no action on gun legislation in the wake of the massacre in Las Vegas. They refused to entertain Democratic demands to expand background checks for gun purchases and tighten restrictions on semi-automatic weapons, but also shelved their own House bill that would have loosened access to gun silencers.” Senate Majority Leader McConnell told reporters, “I think it’s premature to be discussing legislative solutions, if there are any.”

The Washington Post (10/3, Debonis, Snell) reports that House Speaker Ryan said that GOP leaders “have no plans to advance a bill that would make it easier for Americans to buy gun silencers.” Ryan said, “That bill is not scheduled now; I don’t know when it’s going to be scheduled.” But Townhall (10/3, Pavlich) writes that reports that imply that Ryan “shelved a vote” due to Las Vegas “are false. The bill in question...was never scheduled for a vote this week.”

House Majority Whip Scalise, who recently returned to Congress after being shot, was asked on Fox News’ The Story (10/3) if his own experience and the situation in Las Vegas have changed his views on the Second Amendment. Scalise said that some of the gun control proposals “wouldn’t have done anything to stop this. The gunman actually cleared background checks. To promote some kind of gun control I think is the wrong way to approach this.”

Marc Thiessen writes in his Washington Post (10/3) column, “The speed with which some on the left rushed to politicize this incident was pathetic but not surprising. ... Should we have another debate about gun control? Sure. But not while bodies were still in the streets and we still did not know what weapons were used or how they were acquired.”

USA Today (10/3, Gaudiano) reports, “Democrats are calling for passage of expanded background checks legislation and they want GOP leaders to appoint a bipartisan select committee on gun violence to address gun violence." The New York Times (10/3, Stolberg) reports that Democrats are "frustrated by years of futility on gun safety legislation." Rep. Linda Sanchez (D-CA) said, "We are stuck. We have asked time and time again of our Republican counterparts to please engage in this discussion of how do we stop gun violence, and they are completely unwilling to do anything to help us out on that issue."

Sen. Chris Murphy said on MSNBC's Morning Joe (10/3), "I think it's a very convenient tool of the gun lobby to say there's got to be a 24, 48-hour waiting period before we talk about change. The fact of the matter is the entire country is focused on why this happened. And the reality is that much of it is rooted in the evil inside this one individual, but much of it is also rooted in our laws which allowed him to get his hands on weapons that are illegal in almost every other civilized country."

Rep. Jim Himes (D-CT) said on MSNBC's Morning Joe (10/3), "Waiting is one of the many tools that the folks who would have us do absolutely nothing on gun safety employ. They say it's too soon. It's too soon to politicize. It's too soon to act. I don't remember after 9/11 when people flew airplanes have buildings, I don't remember thinking what we need to do is wait and not take action."

The New York Times (10/3, Ember) reports that the satirical website The Onion published the headline "'No Way to Prevent This,' Says Only Nation Where This Regularly Happens" for the fifth time on Monday.

Shooter's Girlfriend A "Person Of Interest" In Investigation. ABC World News Tonight (10/3, story 2, 2:00, Muir) reported that shooter Stephen Paddock's "long-time girlfriend...is now being called a person of interest." ABC's Brian Ross: "Authorities tonight labeled the shooter's girlfriend, Marilou Danley, as central to the ongoing investigation, much more than simply a witness...especially after the discovery by police of so many weapons, so much ammunition, and explosives at the home they shared in Mesquite, Nevada." The CBS Evening News (10/3, lead story, 3:15, Mason) reported that Clark County Sheriff Joseph Lombardo "called her 'a person of interest,' and said he expects substantial information in the next 48 hours." The AP (10/3, Ritter, Balsamo) reports that Lombardo said that Danley "has been speaking with police from the Philippines."

On NBC Nightly News (10/3, story 2, 2:20, Holt), Stephanie Gosk reported that Danley "flew to the Philippines around September 25, around the same time Paddock wired $100,000 to a bank in that country. ... Danley is an Australian citizen who appears to have traveled multiple times to the Philippines, where she was born." Reuters (10/3, Kumar, Sage) reports that one official "said the working assumption of investigators was that the money was intended as a form of life insurance payment for Danley." CNN's Situation Room (10/3) said Danley is cooperating with authorities. The New York Times (10/4, Gabler, Dougherty) reports that Danley arrived in the US from the Philippines late Tuesday night, according to officials.

Paddock Remains "An Enigma" To Investigators. Considerable coverage is devoted to emerging background on Paddock, as well as on the timeline of his actions. ABC World News Tonight (10/3, lead story, 3:40, Muir) reported that he "was firing for nine minutes after that first 911 call came in," and "had a camera attached to a cart in the hallway, so he would know when police were moving in." Lester Holt said on NBC Nightly News (10/3, lead story, 3:30) that it was an "intricate setup, his weapons modified for maximum killing, and strategically placed cameras."

The Las Vegas Review-Journal (10/3, Breaun) reports that Lombardo said that "when police and security officers closed in" on Paddock, "he may have been watching their every move through cameras placed in the hallway." The Los Angeles Times (10/3, Pearce, Carcamo) reports that Paddock "apparently 'pre-planned extensively' for the attack, Lombardo said." The Washington Post (10/3) reports that the "massacre was possibly in the planning stages for days."

The New York Times (10/3, Medina, Pérez-Peña, Goldman) reports that Paddock "created a ring of surveillance around him, with video cameras in his suite and in the hallway, law enforcement officials said on Tuesday." At least one of his rifles "was outfitted with a 'bump stock,' a device that enables a gun to fire hundreds of rounds per minute, like a machine gun." The Wall Street Journal (10/3, Kamp, Frosch, Lazo) reports that authorities have found 49 guns linked to Paddock, including 23 they say he brought to his hotel room. On the CBS Evening News (10/3, story 2, 2:15, Mason), Jeff Pegues reported that Paddock may "initially had a different target. A source briefed on the police investigation said he tried to get a hotel room near a music festival featuring Chance the Rapper and Lorde, a week earlier. But the specific suites he'd requested weren't available."

USA Today (10/3, Johnson, Madhani) says that Paddock "remains very much an enigma to authorities." The 64-year-old "was older than the typical assailant in a mass shooting incident," and "investigators also have not indicated that the gunman exhibited any warning ahead of the assault." His brother said that he had "lived a comfortable life and had no-known mental health illnesses or other problems." The New York Times (10/3, Times) calls Paddock "a wealthy gambler and amateur golfer."

Among the other network coverage, ABC World News Tonight (10/3, story 3, 4:15, Muir) covered the medical response, and the CBS Evening News (10/3, story 8, 0:40, Mason) and NBC Nightly News (10/3, story 3, 2:20, Holt) response from the community.

US Easily Leads Worlds In Civilian Firearms. USA Today (10/3, Hjelmggaard) reports under the headline "Americans Really Like Their Guns" that "Americans own 42% of about 650 million civilian firearms worldwide, according to the Small Arms Survey" – 90 firearms per every 100 residents. Yemen, "the country with the second highest number of firearms per 100 people – 55 – is one of the Arab world's poorest countries and is fighting a bloody civil war."

NYTimes Calls AEI Chart On Gun Violence "Spurious." The New York Times (10/3, Qiu) fact-checks what it calls a "spurious chart" published "by the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative-leaning think tank in Washington, to argue that more guns don't necessarily translate to more gun homicides." UCLA Second Amendment expert Adam Winkler said the AEI's "point that more permissive gun laws did not lead to a huge spike in gun violence has merits...but the chart itself, he said, 'is a bunch of hokey.'" While its data "on the spike in the number of firearms and the decline in the homicides by firearms are accurate," there is "no proof that these two trends are connected. Crime, whether or not committed with guns, has generally declined over the past two decades."

Gunmaker Share Increases More Modest Than After Past Incidents. The New York Times (10/3, Hsu) reports that though stock prices for firearm companies rose this week in "an apparent continuation of a morbid trend linked to mass shootings," investors "were more muted than they had been in recent years, a sign of Wall Street's increasing skepticism about how much influence mass shootings can exert on gun control legislation, especially in a Trump administration."

Democrats To Target Heller On Gun Control In 2018 Race. The Hill (10/3, Bolton) reports that Sen. Dean Heller "will be at the center of a new fight over gun control following the mass shooting" in his home state. Democrats "and liberal activists plan to scrutinize Heller's record on gun control and his co-sponsorship of a controversial bill to deregulate suppressors." Meanwhile, the Washington Free Beacon (10/3, Scher) reports that during a Tuesday appearance on MSNBC, businessman Danny Tarkanian, who is mounting a GOP primary challenge to Heller, said "that he would consider gun control legislation if elected to the Senate next year."

Statistician Says Research Changed Her Mind About Gun Control. In a Washington Post (10/3) op-ed, Leah Libresco, a statistician and former writer for FiveThirtyEight, writes that her research into "the strictly tightened gun laws in Britain and Australia" led her to conclude "that they didn't prove much about what America's policy should be. Neither nation experienced drops in mass shootings or other gun related-crime that could be attributed to their buybacks and bans. ... We save lives by focusing on a range of tactics to protect the different kinds of potential victims and reforming potential killers, not from sweeping bans focused on the guns themselves."

WPost Lists Mass Shooting Victims In Editorial. The Washington Post (10/3) lists the fatalities of various mass shootings dating back to 1999 in a 1,600-word editorial, displaying a list of some 300 names that does not include all of those killed on Monday. The CBS Evening News (10/3, story 4, 2:45, Mason) and NBC Nightly News (10/3, story 4, 2:40, Holt) reported on some of Monday's victims.

Pence Touts Administration Tax Plan In Arizona.

The AP (10/3, Christie) reports that Vice President Pence was in Arizona Tuesday "to tout the administration's tax overhaul plan." During a discussion with local business and community leaders "on the need for tax reform," Pence said, "Our plan is based on four simple principles. ... Reducing taxes for working families, simplifying the tax code, cutting taxes for businesses large and small, and making it possible for American companies to bring profits home to American to create jobs and opportunities here." The Arizona Republic (10/3, Sanchez, Gardiner) says Pence and Arizona Gov. Doug Ducey "pitched Republicans' tax proposal to a pre-selected group of small-business owners and supporters." They "said the plan would lower tax rates for small businesses, allowing owners to hire more employees and pay higher wages."

Study: Trump "The Least Regulatory President Since Ronald Reagan."

The Washington Times (10/3, Harper) quotes an “analysis by Wayne Crews, vice president of policy at the Competitive Enterprise Institute,” as saying, “President Trump is the least regulatory president since Ronald Reagan. His administration has only proposed 1,241 rules, 13 percent less than Barack Obama’s first year, 42 percent lower than George W. Bush’s, and 72 percent lower than Bill Clinton’s.” The Times adds, “The Federal Register – which literally contains government agency rules and notices, now stands at 45,678 pages. Last year at this time...Obama’s Federal Register contained 67,900 pages, and ultimate[ly] ended up with 97,110 pages for 2016, an ‘all-time record,’ Mr. Crews says.”

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

“On Guns, Nevada’s Leaders Are Overruling Their Voters.” The New York Times (10/4, Board) editorializes that in November, Nevada residents voted in favor of requiring “background checks for most private gun sales, closing a loophole in federal law.” Those measures have not yet been implemented, however, “because state officials have claimed, with little evidence, that there’s no way to carry out the policy.” The Times concedes that such background checks may “not have prevented the massacre in Las Vegas on Sunday night,” but ultimately Gov. Brian Sandoval is “thwarting the will of Nevada voters.” The Times adds that “members of Congress offer thoughts and prayers after mass shootings without doing anything to prevent gun violence,” a response that has “become a maddening ritual.”

“Chaos In Catalonia.” The New York Times (10/2) says in an editorial that the actions of Spanish police “succeeded mostly in deepening a political crisis.” Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy “had the law largely on his side,” but Barcelona “now has the television images and the solidarity and sympathy they generate, leaving the prime minister looking like an intransigent bully and rendering any possible political resolution of the conflict more remote.” The Times argues that while “political solutions, probably involving greater autonomy for Catalonia,” exist, “so long as Mr. Rajoy and Mr. Puigdemont remain intransigent, these will remain out of reach.”

Washington Post.

“The Lives We Have Lost.” The Washington Post (10/3) lists the fatalities of various mass shootings dating back to 1999 in a 1,600-word editorial, including some 300 names that does not include all of those killed on Monday.

Wall Street Journal.

“Trump And The Fed.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (10/3) wonders if President Trump will select Janet Yellen or Jay Powell as the next Federal Reserve chair and embrace a monetary policy that favors the affluent but does little to help the economy – a monetary policy against which Trump campaigned. The Journal argues that Trump instead needs to select an outsider and reformer, such as former Fed Governor Kevin Warsh or economist John Taylor, as the next Fed Chairman in order to ensure his economic growth agenda will not be at odds with monetary policy.

“Evening The Cuban Score.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (10/3) says so-called apologists for the Cuban regime complain that the US’ response to the health attacks on American diplomats in Havana will make it more difficult to secure visas and visit family members in both nations, but this frustration should be directed at Raúl Castro, not the Administration. For Castro’s regime to be viewed as a respected member of the civilized international community, the Journal asserts, it must first act in a civilized manner, meaning it must comply with its obligation under the Vienna Convention to ensure foreign diplomats’ safety and well-being.

“Supreme Court ‘Gobbledygook.’” The Wall Street Journal (10/3) editorializes that the key question in the arguments in the Wisconsin gerrymandering case before the Supreme Court Tuesday came from Chief Justice Roberts, who concentrated on the risks to the judiciary if the court invalidated a state electoral map on political grounds.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Yahoo Triples Estimate Of Breached Accounts To 3 Billion
Las Vegas Gunman Planned 'Extensively'
Buffett Invests In Pilot Flying J
The Downside Of Baseball's Data Revolution—Long Games, Less Action

New York Times:

Kennedy's Vote Is In Play On Voting Maps Warped By Politics
Meticulous Planning By Las Vegas Gunman Before He Opened Fire
Drawn To Las Vegas For The Music, Victims' Retreat Turned Into A Trap
Aid Is Getting To Puerto Rico. Distributing It Remains A Challenge.
Trump Lobs Praise, And Paper Towels, To Puerto Rico Storm Victims
US Expels 15 Cuban Diplomats. In Latest Sign Détente May Be Ending
Lincoln Center Scraps A \$500 Million Geffen Hall Renovation

Washington Post:

Self-Driving Cars Make You Uneasy? Meet Iris.
Gunman In Vegas Seemed To Plan Each Move
Flood Of Wounded Brought Injuries Rarely Seen In US
Hunting For A Killer, Using The Geometry Of Gunfire
New Friends And Old Lovers Alike Feel The Loss

Financial Times:

Donald Trump In Puerto Rico Defends Response To Disaster
EU To Hit Amazon With Bill For Luxembourg Back Taxes
Fidelity International To Link Fees To Performance In Overhaul

Washington Times:

Trump's Voter Base On The Line With Talk About Gun Control 'As Time Goes By'
Supreme Court Struggles With Judges' Role In Drawing Political Maps
Administration Officials Push DACA Path To Citizenship, Contradict Trump's Stance
Republicans Signal Compromise To Retain State And Local Tax Deduction
Mattis Demands More Transparency From Iran But Says Nuclear Deal In U.S. Best Interest

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Las Vegas Shooting-Gunman; Las Vegas Shooting-Person Of Interest; Las Vegas Shooting-Medical Responses; Hurricane Recovery-Trump Puerto Rico Visit; Hurricane Recovery-Puerto Rico; Tom Petty Dies; New York City-Bomb Explosion Video; Cuba-US Diplomats Withdrawal; Health-Obesity And Cancer; Las Vegas Shooting-Heroic Efforts.

CBS: Las Vegas Shooting; Las Vegas Shooting-Gunman; Las Vegas Shooting-Eyewitness; Las Vegas Shooting-Victims; Las Vegas Shooting-Weapons; Hurricane Recovery-Trump Puerto Rico Visit; Tom Petty Dies; Las Vegas Shooting-Citizen Responses.

NBC: Las Vegas Shooting-Gunman; Las Vegas Shooting-Person Of Interest; Las Vegas Shooting-Citizen Responses; Las Vegas Shooting-Victims; Las Vegas Shooting-Gun Control Debate; Hurricane Recovery-Trump Puerto Rico Visit; Yahoo-Cyber Security Breach; Tom Petty Dies; Las Vegas Shooting-Community.

Network TV At A Glance:

Las Vegas Shooting – 37 minutes, 15 seconds
Hurricane Recovery-Trump Puerto Rico Visit – 6 minutes, 45 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Las Vegas Shooting; Las Vegas Shooting-Person Of Interest; Hurricane Recovery-Trump Puerto Rico Visit; Cuba-US Diplomats Withdrawal.

CBS: Las Vegas Shooting; Las Vegas Shooting-Person Of Interest; Las Vegas Shooting-Gun Control Debate; Hurricane Recovery-Trump Puerto; Cuba-US Diplomats Withdrawal; Iran Nuclear Deal-Mattis.

FOX: Las Vegas Shooting; Las Vegas Shooting-Gun Control Debate.

NPR: Las Vegas Shooting; Hurricane Recovery-Trump Puerto Rico Visit; US Car Sales; Equifax Breach-House Hearing.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Arrives in Las Vegas, Nevada; Visits with patients and medical professionals; visits with civilian heroes and first responders.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — No public schedule announced.

US Senate: 9:00 AM Senate Aging Committee hearing on robocalls – Hearing on 'Still Ringing Off The Hook: An Update on Efforts to Combat Robocalls', with testimony from Federal Trade Commission Bureau of Consumer Protection Division of Marketing Practices Associate Director Lois Greisman; Pennsylvania Attorney General Josh Shapiro; USTelecom Vice President for Law & Public Policy Kevin Rupy; and BBB Institute for Marketplace Trust President Genie Barton
Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 562, Washington, DC <http://aging.senate.gov/>

9:15 AM Senate Foreign Relations Committee top secret briefing on withdrawal of personnel from the U.S. Embassy in Cuba – Closed / Top Secret briefing on 'Ordered Departure of Personnel from the U.S. Embassy in Havana, Cuba', given by Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Diplomatic Security and State Department Bureau of Diplomatic Security Assistant Director for International Programs Christian Schurman; Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Western Hemisphere Affairs John Creamer; State Department Bureau of Medical Services Medical Director Dr Charles Rosenfarb; and a senior CIA official * Last week, the State Department ordered over half the staff at the embassy in Havana to return to the U.S. – having previously given staff the option to do so – in the wake of a series of mysterious 'health attacks' that has left U.S. members of the diplomatic community and intelligence operatives with hearing loss and brain damage, following reports of unidentified high-pitched noises and other sensations Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, SVC-217, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

9:30 AM Markup hearing on 'S. 1827, the Keeping Kids' Insurance Dependable and Secure (KIDS) Act' Location: Rm 215, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://finance.senate.gov>

10:00 AM Senate Environment and Public Works Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Michael Dourson, Matthew Leopold, David Ross, and William Wehrum to be Environmental Protection Agency Assistant Administrators; and Jeffery Baran to be a Nuclear Regulatory Commission member Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

10:00 AM Former Equifax head due to testify to Senate Banking Committee – Hearing on 'An Examination of the Equifax Cybersecurity Breach', with testimony due from Richard Smith, who retired as Equifax chairman and CEO with immediate effect between the announcement of the hearing and today Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 538, Washington, DC
<http://banking.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Stephanos Bibas to be U.S. Circuit Judge for the Third Circuit; Liles Clifton Burke to be U.S. District Judge for the Northern District of Alabama; Michael Joseph Juneau to be U.S. District Judge for the Western District of Louisiana; A. Marvin Quattlebaum Jr. and Tilman Eugene Self III to be U.S. District Judges for the Middle District of Georgia; and John Demers to be Assistant Attorney General for the National Security Division Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 226, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee Business Meeting – Business Meeting, with agenda including consideration of nomination of John Mitnick to be Department of Homeland Security General Counsel, as well as legislation including 'S. X, TSA LEAP Pay Reform Act of 2017', 'S. 146, Border Security Technology Accountability Act of 2017', 'S. X, Direct Hire of Students and Recent Graduates Act of 2017', 'S. X, Temporary and Term Appointments Act of 2017', 'S. X, Voluntary Separation Incentive Payment Adjustment Act of 2017', 'S. 1847, Homeland Security for Children Act', 'S. X, FITARA Enhancement Act of 2017', 'S. X, Reporting Efficiently to Proper Officials in Response to Terrorism Act of 2017', 'S. 1281, Hack the Department of Homeland Security Act', 'S. 1769, Connected Government Act', 'S. X, Whistleblower Protection Coordination Act', 'S. 1305, U.S. Customs and Border Protection Hiring and Retention Act of 2017', 'S. 1791, Presidential Allowance Modernization Act of 2017', and 'H.R. 70, Federal Advisory Committee Act Amendments of 2017' Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 342, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

10:00 AM Senate Commerce, Science, & Transportation Committee Executive Session – Executive Session, with agenda including self-driving vehicle legislation (to be introduced), 'S

1872, TSA Modernization Act', 'S. 1015, the National Suicide Hotline Improvement Act of 2017', and 'S. 1534, Amateur Radio Parity Act of 2017', and the nominations of Ann Marie Buerkle to be Consumer Product Safety Commission Chairman and Commissioner, Walter Copan to be Under Secretary of Commerce for Standards and Technology, Howard Elliott to be Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration Administrator, Timothy Gallaudet to be Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere, and David Redl to be Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Communications and Information Location: Hart Senate Office Building, Rm 216, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

10:30 AM Senate Foreign Relations Committee nominations hearing, hearing on the future for Iraq's minorities – Senate Committee on Foreign Relations nominations hearing * Immediately followed by hearing on 'The Future of Iraq's Minorities: What's Next After ISIS', with testimony from 21st Century Wilberforce Initiative Distinguished Senior Fellow Frank Wolf; and National Defense University Institute for National Strategic Studies Center for Strategic Research Director Dr Denise Natali Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

12:15 PM Senate Select Committee on Intelligence leaders update on Russia inquiry – Senate Select Committee on Intelligence Chairman Richard Burr and Vice Chairman Mark Warner update on the status of the Committee's inquiry into Russian interference in the 2016 U.S. elections, via press conference Location: U.S. Capitol, S-325, Washington, DC burr.senate.gov <https://twitter.com/SenatorBurr>

1:30 PM Bicameral Dems call for Congress to reject 'Ryan-McConnell' tax plan – Congressional Progressive Caucus and Democratic Members of Congress and advocates call on Congress to reject the 'Ryan-McConnell' tax plan, via press conference with House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer and Democratic Reps. Mark Pocan, Raul Grijalva, Lloyd Doggett, Rosa DeLauro, Barbara Lee, Jan Schakowsky, Keith Ellison, and Pramila Jayapal, Winnie Stachelberg (Center for American Progress), Nicole Gill (Not One Penny), Frank Clemente (Americans for Tax Fairness) and MomsRising Member Suzanne Greenwood Location: House Triangle, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://pocan.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/repmarkpocan>

2:00 PM Bipartisan Sens. Dick Durbin and Lindsey Graham and over 100 DREAMers call for passage of DREAM Act – Bipartisan Sens. Dick Durbin and Lindsey Graham and other bipartisan elected representatives call on their colleagues to join them in supporting the DREAM Act – which would protect DACA recipients and provide them with protection from deportation and work authorization – via press conference with over 100 DREAMers, who are in Washington, DC, to call on their Members of Congress to pass the legislation Location: U.S. Capitol, Senate Swamp, Washington, DC www.fwd.us https://twitter.com/fwd_us

2:30 PM Business Meeting, to consider 'S. 943, Johnson-O'Malley Supplemental Indian Education Program Modernization Act' Location: Hart Senate Office Building, Rm 216, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

2:30 PM Senate Budget Committee begins marking up FY'18 Budget Resolution – Markup hearing begins on the Senate Budget Resolution for Fiscal Year 2018 * Concludes tomorrow Location: Rm 608, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://budget.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateBudget>

2:30 PM Closed Briefing: Intelligence Matters Location: Rm 219, Hart Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.senate.gov>

2:30 PM Former Equifax head testifies to Senate Judiciary Committee – Privacy, Technology and the Law Subcommittee hearing on 'Equifax: Continuing to Monitor Data-Broker Cybersecurity', with testimony from former Equifax Chairman and CEO Richard Smith; Arizona State University Global Security Initiative Director of Strategic Research Initiatives Jamie Winterton; and University of Tulsa Tandy School of Computer Science Assistant Professor of Cyber Security & Information Assurance Tyler Moore * Follows data breach at Equifax that potentially exposed the personal information of 143 million Americans Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 226, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Senate Indian Affairs Committee oversight hearing on gaming – Oversight hearing on 'Doubling Down on Indian Gaming: Examining New Issues and Opportunities for Success in the Next 30 Years', with testimony from National Indian Gaming Commission Chairman Jonodev Osceola Chaudhuri; Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Indian Affairs John Tahsuda III; Fort Yuma Quechan Indian Tribe President Keeny Escalanti; Forest County Potawatomi Chairman Gus Frank; and National Indian Gaming Association Chairman Ernest Stevens Jr. Location: Hart Senate Office Building, Rm 216, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

2:30 PM Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Melissa Sue Glynn to be Assistant Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Enterprise Integration; Cheryl Mason to be Board of Veterans' Appeals Chairman; and Randy Reeves to be Under Secretary of Veterans Affairs for Memorial Affairs Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 418, Washington, DC <http://veterans.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/VACChair>

3:00 PM Senate HELP Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Cheryl Stanton to be Department of Labor Wage and Hour Division Administrator; David Zatezalo to be Assistant Secretary of Labor for Mine Safety and Health; and Peter Robb to be National Labor Relations Board General Counsel Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 430, Washington, DC <http://help.senate.gov/>

3:00 PM Helsinki Commission co-hosts briefing on attacks on journalists in Russia – 'Systematic Attacks on Journalists in Russia and Other Post-Soviet States' joint Helsinki Commission / House Freedom of the Press Caucus briefing, addressing 'key questions regarding journalists in Russia and other post-Soviet states: their important role and impact; concerns over their rights, safety, and protection; and future support and promotion of media freedom in the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) region'. Panelists are Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty President and CEO Thomas Kent, Voice of America Director Amanda Bennett, Committee to Protect Journalists Europe and Central Asia Program Coordinator Nina Ognianova, and Echo of Moscow Washington DC Correspondent Karina Orlova Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, SVC-208, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

US House: 9:00 AM House Dems Press Event Honoring Las Vegas Shooting Victims; Demand Commonsense Gun Violence Prevention Legislation – House Democrats hold press event to honor the victims of the horrific mass shooting in Las Vegas and to demand commonsense gun violence prevention legislation. Democrats call for the immediate passage of the bipartisan King-Thompson legislation to "strengthen life-saving background checks, and establishing a bipartisan Select Committee on Gun Violence to study and report back common sense legislation". Participants: House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi; Rep. John Lewis (D-GA); Former Congresswoman Gabby Giffords; Rep. Mike Thompson, Chair, Gun Violence Prevention Task Force (D-CA); Rep. Robin Kelly (D-IL); House Democrats. Location: House East Front Steps U.S. Capitol. <http://www.democraticleader.gov/> <https://twitter.com/NancyPelosi>

9:00 AM Oversight Subcommittee hearing on 'IRS Reform: Challenges to Modernizing IT Infrastructure' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2020, Washington, DC <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

9:00 AM GOP Rep. David Schweikert keynotes 'Paying for Tax Reform' Capitol Hill event – 'Paying for Tax Reform' Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget Capitol Hill event, focused on the prospects for tax reform. Republican Rep. David Schweikert keynotes, on 'the need for fiscally responsible tax reform', before panels of experts – former Senate Budget Committee Chief Economist and Senior Tax Advisor Jim Carter, former Senate Committee on Finance Deputy Staff Director and General Counsel Mac Campbell, former House Committee on Ways and Means Majority Chief Tax Counsel Dave Olander, American Action Forum's Gordon Gray, Tax Foundation's Kyle Pomerleau, Tax Policy Center's Eric Toder, American Sustainable Business Council's John O'Neill, and CRFB's Marc Goldwein – discuss options to pay for tax reform and lessons learned from past tax reform efforts Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2325, Washington, DC crfb.org <https://twitter.com/BudgetHawks>

9:30 AM House Agriculture Committee Business Meeting – Business Meeting, to consider 'H.R. 2936, Resilient Federal Forests Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2521, South Carolina Peanut Parity Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2921, National Forest System Vegetation Management Pilot Program Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2941, Kisatchie National Forest Land Conveyance Act', and 'H.R. 3567, To authorize the purchase of a small parcel of Natural Resources Conservation Service property in Riverside, California, by the Riverside Corona Resource Conservation District, and for other purposes' Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1300, Washington, DC <http://agriculture.house.gov/>

10:00 AM Markup hearing on 'H.R. 3441, Save Local Business Act' Location: Rm 2175, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources Committee markup hearing concludes – Markup hearing concludes on 'H.R. 210, Native American Energy Act', 'H.R. 424, Gray Wolf State Management Act of 2017', 'H.R. 717, Listing Reform Act', 'H.R. 1274, State, Tribal and Local Species Transparency Act and Recovery Act', 'H.R. 1488, The Indiana Dunes National Park Act', 'H.R. 2600, To provide for the conveyance to the State of Iowa of the reversionary interest held by the United States in certain land in Pottawattamie County, Iowa, and for other purposes', 'H.R. 2603, Saving America's Endangered Species Act' ('SAVES Act'), 'H.R. 2897, To authorize the Mayor of the District of Columbia and the Director of the National Park Service to enter into cooperative management agreements for the operation, maintenance, and management of units of the National Park System in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes', and 'H.R. 3131, Endangered Species Litigation Reasonableness Act' * Began yesterday Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov>

<https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM Markup hearing on 'H.R. 3711, Legal Workforce Act' and 'H.R. X, Agricultural Guestworker Act' Location: Rm 2141, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

10:00 AM House Space subcommittee hearing on radioisotope production and NASA's Cassini spacecraft – Space Subcommittee hearing on 'Powering Exploration: An Update on Radioisotope Production and Lessons Learned from Cassini', with testimony from NASA Planetary Science Division Deputy Director David Schurr; Deputy Assistant Secretary of Energy for Nuclear Infrastructure Programs Tracey Bishop; Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory chief scientist for space science in the space exploration sector Dr Ralph McNutt Jr.; and Government Accountability Office Director of Natural Resources and Environment Shelby Oakley Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2318, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov>
<https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on State Department Antiterrorism Assistance Program – Middle East and North Africa Subcommittee hearing on 'State Department's Antiterrorism Assistance Program: The GAO Review', with testimony from Government Accountability Office Assistant Director of International Affairs and Trade Jason Bair Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov>
<https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

10:00 AM House Financial Services Committee hearing on the SEC – Hearing on 'Examining the SEC's Agenda, Operations, and Budget', with testimony from Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman Jay Clayton Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM House Energy and Commerce subcommittee hearing on air quality impacts of wildfires – Environment Subcommittee hearing on 'Air Quality Impacts of Wildfires: Perspectives of Key Stakeholders', with testimony from Oregon State University College of Forestry Professor Dr John Bailey; Florida State Forester Jim Karels; Murphy Company Vice President of Resources Knox Marshall; and The Nature Conservancy Director of Restoring America's Forests Dr Christopher Topik Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC
<http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Infrastructure subcommittee hearing on rail stakeholders' perspectives – Railroads, Pipelines, and Hazardous Materials Subcommittee hearing on 'Building a 21st Century Infrastructure for America: Rail Stakeholders' Perspectives', with testimony from Association of American Railroads President and CEO Edward Hamberger; Amtrak Co-CEO Wick Moorman, and Executive Vice President for Planning, Technology, and Public Affairs Stephen Gardner; American Short Line and Regional Railroad Association President Linda Darr; Loram Maintenance of Way Senior Advisor of Industry Relations Tom DeJoseph; and AFL-CIO Transportation Trades Department President Larry Willis Location: Rm 2167, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://transportation.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/Transport>

10:00 AM Markup hearing on 'H.R. 3548, the Border Security for America Act' Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, HVC-210, Washington, DC homeland.house.gov
<https://twitter.com/HouseHomeland>

10:30 AM CANCELED: Disability Assistance and Memorial Affairs Subcommittee markup hearing Location: Cannon House Office Building, Rm 334, Washington, DC
<http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

10:30 AM Markup hearing on 'H.R. 849, Protecting Seniors' Access to Medicare Act of 2017' Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1100, Washington, DC
<http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee hearing on tax reform – Hearing on 'Small Business Tax Reform: Modernizing the Code for the Nation's Job Creators', with testimony from Small Business & Entrepreneurship Council Entrepreneur-In-Residence and Small Business Counsel Kristie Arslan; MotionMobs President Taylor Peake; Shared Economy CPA partner Miguel Centeno; and American University Kogod School of Business Tax Policy Center Managing Director Caroline Bruckner Location: Rm 2360, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC

<http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

12:00 PM Rep. Waters To Unveil Legislation To Hold Megabanks Like Wells Fargo Accountable – Press conference on Ranking Member Waters' new legislation, the Megabank Accountability and Consequences. Participants: Rep. Maxine Waters (D-CA), Ranking Member of the Committee on Financial Services; Rep. Al Green (D-TX), Ranking Member of the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations; Rep. Marcy Kaptur (D-OH) ; Rep. Pramila Jayapal (D-WA). Media RSVP to Kalina. Francis@mail.house.gov Location: 421 Cannon House Office Building <http://www.house.gov/waters/> <https://twitter.com/MaxineWaters>

12:00 PM House expected to begin debate on 'FY' 18 Republican Budget Resolution' – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include beginning consideration of 'H.Con.Res. 71 – Fiscal Year 2018 Republican Budget Resolution' Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

1:00 PM House Commerce subcommittee markup hearing – Health Subcommittee markup hearing on 'H.R. 849, Protecting Seniors' Access to Medicare Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2465, Steve Gleason Enduring Voices Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2557, Prostate Cancer Misdiagnosis Elimination Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3120, To amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to reduce the volume of future electronic health record-related significant hardship requests', 'H.R. 3245, Medicare Civil and Criminal Penalties Update Act', 'H.R. 3263, To amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to extend the Medicare independence at home medical practice demonstration program', 'H.R. 1148, FAST Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3271, Protecting Access to Diabetes Supplies Act of 2017', 'H.R. XX, HEALTHY KIDS Act', and 'H.R. XX, CHAMPION Act' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

1:30 PM Bicameral Dems call for Congress to reject 'Ryan-McConnell' tax plan – Congressional Progressive Caucus and Democratic Members of Congress and advocates call on Congress to reject the 'Ryan-McConnell' tax plan, via press conference with House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer and Democratic Reps. Mark Pocan, Raul Grijalva, Lloyd Doggett, Rosa DeLauro, Barbara Lee, Jan Schakowsky, Keith Ellison, and Pramila Jayapal, Winnie Stachelberg (Center for American Progress), Nicole Gill (Not One Penny), Frank Clemente (Americans for Tax Fairness) and MomsRising Member Suzanne Greenwood Location: House Triangle, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://pocan.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/reppmarkpocan>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on 'Iranian-backed militias in the Middle East' – Terrorism, Nonproliferation, and Trade Subcommittee hearing on 'Iranian Backed Militias: Destabilizing the Middle East', with testimony from The Washington Institute for Near East Policy Fellow Dr Michael Knights; Center for Strategic and International Studies Senior Associate Aram Nerguizian; American Enterprise Institute Resident Scholar Dr Kenneth Pollack; and Center for Strategic and International Studies International Security Program Senior Fellow and Deputy Director Melissa Dalton Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

2:00 PM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Indian, Insular and Alaska Native Affairs Subcommittee legislative hearing on 'H.R. 146, Eastern Band Cherokee Historic Lands Reacquisition Act', 'H.R. 2402, San Juan County Settlement Implementation Act', and 'H.R. 2606, Stigler Act Amendments of 2017', with testimony from Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians Principal Chief Richard Sneed; Navajo Nation President Russell Begaye; and Cherokee Nation Principal Chief Bill John Baker Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

3:00 PM House Natural Resources Committee member forum on supporting recovery in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands – House Committee on Natural Resources member forum on potential legislative actions within the Committee's jurisdiction to reinforce ongoing rescue and recovery efforts in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

3:00 PM Helsinki Commission co-hosts briefing on attacks on journalists in Russia – 'Systematic Attacks on Journalists in Russia and Other Post-Soviet States' joint Helsinki Commission / House Freedom of the Press Caucus briefing, addressing 'key questions regarding journalists in Russia and other post-Soviet states: their important role and impact; concerns over their rights, safety, and protection; and future support and promotion of media freedom in the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) region'. Panelists are Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty President and CEO Thomas Kent, Voice of America Director Amanda Bennett, Committee to Protect Journalists Europe and Central Asia Program Coordinator Nina Ognianova, and Echo of Moscow Washington DC Correspondent Karina Orlova Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, SVC-208, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov>

<https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

5:30 PM Pet Night on Capitol Hill – Pet Night on Capitol Hill, hosted by the Human Animal Bond Research Institute and the Pet Leadership Council to give members of Congress and their staff an opportunity to meet with pet care industry leaders, the veterinary community, animal welfare advocates and research organizations. Includes presentation of 'Pets' Best Friend' awards to several members of Congress, and announcement of the Cutest Pets on Capitol Hill contest winners by the Animal Health Institute Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2043, Washington, DC petnightoncapitolhill.com https://twitter.com/HABRITweets

Other: 8:00 AM The Hill hosts forum on health care – The Hill hosts forum on 'Innovating to Improve Patient Health: A Solutions Conversation', featuring policymakers, health industry leaders, employers, and providers discussing strategies to improve health outcomes. Headliner conversations from Democratic Rep. Ami Bera and Republican Rep. Bill Johnson. Panel includes CVS Health Executive Vice President and Chief Medical Officer Troyen Brennan, Continental Realty Corporation Vice President of Human Resources Crystal Frey, American Association of Nurse Practitioners President Joyce Knestrick, and National Coalition on Health Care President and CEO John Rother Location: Newseum, 555 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC thehill.com https://twitter.com/TheHillEvents #WhatsNextHealth

8:25 AM Microsoft CEO Satya Nadella speaks at an Economic Club of Washington, DC event Location: Mandarin Oriental Hotel Group, 1330 Maryland Avenue Southwest 1250, Washington, DC www.economicclub.org https://twitter.com/TheEconomicClub

9:00 AM GOP Sen. Mike Lee and Rep. Rob Bishop discuss national monuments at the Heritage Foundation – 'National Monuments and the Communities They Impact: Views Beyond the Beltway' Heritage Foundation event, co-hosted with The Sutherland Institute, with Republicans Sens. Mike Lee and Rep. Rob Bishop, Navajo Nation's Ryan Benally, Maine Snowmobile Association Executive Director Bob Meyers, Atlantic Offshore Lobsterman's Association President Grant Moore, The Sutherland Institute President Boyd Matheson, The Sutherland Institute Coalition of Self-Government in the West Director Matthew Anderson, and Property and Environment Research Center Research Fellow Hannah Downey Location: Heritage Foundation, 214 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC www.heritage.org https://twitter.com/Heritage

9:00 AM CIA / GW public conference on national security with current and former CIA directors – CIA's fourth public conference on national security, 'The Ethos and the Profession of Intelligence', co-hosted by the George Washington University Center for Cyber and Homeland Security. This year's theme is 'Achieving Strategic Advantage', with speakers including CIA Director Mike Pompeo and former CIA Directors John Brennan, Michael Hayden, Porter Goss and William Webster Location: George Washington University, 730 21st St NW, Washington, DC http://www.gwu.edu/index.cfm https://twitter.com/GWtweets

10:00 AM Black Methodist United unveil action plan on jobs at NPC – Black Methodist United hold press conference and unveil 'Action Plan on Issues of Jobs of the Unemployed and Underemployed' at the National Press Club, featuring Democratic Rep. Maxine Walters Location: National Press Club, 529 14th St, NW, Washington, DC

10:30 AM POSTPONED: OMB Director Mulvaney speaks at The Washington Post – POSTPONED: Office of Management and Budget Director Mick Mulvaney speaks at The Washington Post, interviewed by the newspaper's James Hohmann, about White House plans to overhaul the tax code and broader efforts to cut federal regulation * Event held as part of The Daily 202 Live event series Location: The Washington Post Live Center, 1301 K St NW, Washington, DC http://www.washingtonpost.com/ https://twitter.com/washingtonpost

12:00 PM Dem Sen. Chris Murphy speaks on Iran at CAP Action Fund – 'On the Brink with Iran and North Korea' Center for American Progress Action Fund discussion, with opening remarks from Democratic Sen. Chris Murphy on the upcoming Trump administration decision on Iran and its implication for U.S. national security on two fronts. Followed by panel discussion with former Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs Wendy Sherman, former National Security Adviser to Vice President Joe Biden, Jake Sullivan, and former Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Asian and Pacific Security Affairs Kelly Magsamen Location: Center for American Progress, Action Fund, 1333 H St NW, Washington, DC www.americanprogressaction.org https://twitter.com/CAPaction

3:00 PM House Speaker Paul Ryan discusses tax reform in Facebook Q&A session with former House Speaker Newt Gingrich Location: TBD www.speaker.gov https://twitter.com/SpeakerRyan

U.S.-China Law Enforcement and Cybersecurity Dialogue – U.S.-China Law Enforcement and Cybersecurity Dialogue, with delegations chaired by Attorney General Jeff Sessions and Acting

Secretary of Homeland Security Elaine Duke, and State Councilor and Minister of Public Security Guo Shengkun, respectively. Agenda includes increasing cooperation on repatriations, fugitives, counternarcotics, and cybercrime * Marks the conclusion of the first round of cabinet-level dialogues agreed to by Presidents Donald Trump and Xi Jinping in April, following the earlier U.S.-China Diplomatic and Security Dialogue, Comprehensive Economic Dialogue, and Social and Cultural Dialogue Location: Washington, DC www.justice.gov <https://twitter.com/TheJusticeDept>

U.S.-Korea FTA Joint Committee second special session – Joint Committee under the U.S.-Korea (KORUS) Free Trade Agreement second special session * U.S. Trade Representative Amb. Robert Lighthizer called the first special session – held in Seoul, South Korea, in August – at the direction of President Donald Trump, as a dialogue to consider matters affecting the operation of the agreement, including ‘possible amendments and modifications to resolve several problems regarding market access in Korea for U.S. exports and, most importantly, to address the significant trade imbalance’ Location: Washington, DC www.ustr.gov <https://twitter.com/USTradeRep>

Under Secretary of State Shannon attends working lunch with South Korean ambassador – Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs Thomas Shannon attends a working lunch with South Korea Ambassador to the U.S. Amb. Ahn Ho-young, and meets Norway Ambassador to the U.S. Amb. Kare Aas and Norwegian First Secretary of the Embassy Thomas Bruusgard at the State Department Location: Washington, DC www.state.gov <https://twitter.com/StateDept>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Stephen Colbert: “Today is the 13th day after Hurricane Maria, yet another disaster struck Puerto Rico. Donald Trump visited the island.”

James Corden: “President Trump finally traveled to Puerto Rico today amid criticism of his response to Hurricane Maria. Ninety-five percent of the island is still without power. So to make sure the people of Puerto Rico don’t miss out on his crazy tweets, Donald Trump went there to deliver them in person.”

James Corden: “Officials have discovered yet another personal email account that Jared Kushner and Ivanka Trump have been using for official White House business, bringing the total to three. They have three accounts. ... This is either a massive breach of protocol, or Jared Kushner is like the rest of us and can’t remember passwords.”

James Corden: “Apparently, a data breach that Yahoo previously said affected just a portion of their users actually affected all three billion Yahoo accounts. I know, even crazier, all three billion Yahoo email accounts belong to Jared Kushner.”

Trevor Noah: “But first, as we all know, two weeks ago, Puerto Rico was devastated by a category five hurricane and, today, President Trump went to the island to finish them off.”

Trevor Noah: “Moving on to the mass shooting in Las Vegas. The shooter was a 64-year-old man from Florida with no criminal record and he owned 42 guns. Oh, and also, apparently, he was a multi-millionaire, which means, right now, he doesn’t fit any profile of any mass shooter. And you know who’s having a hard time processing all that information? The good people at Fox News.”

Jimmy Fallon: “Today, President Trump flew to Puerto Rico. He was like, ‘These conditions are horrible, how can anyone live like this?’ And then they said, ‘Sir, this is LaGuardia. We’re just refueling.’”

Jimmy Fallon: “That’s right, today, Trump went to Puerto Rico to survey the damage done by the hurricane, and Mike Pence will go there tomorrow to survey the damage done by the President.”

Seth Meyers: “President Trump visited Puerto Rico today, where he met with hurricane survivors. ‘We love you, Donald,’ said banner he brought from home.”

Seth Meyers: “Politico has published a new profile on Robert Mueller and the ongoing Russia investigation. We have one reporter saying that asking Mueller for inside information would be like asking him to watch a porn movie with you. 'I'll watch a porn movie with you,' said Ted Cruz."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, October 11, 2017
Date: Wednesday, October 11, 2017 7:12:31 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 11, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- NBC: At Least 15 Dead In Northern California Wildfires.
- Daily Caller: GOP Pushes Overhaul To Antiquities Act.
- E&E Daily: Lawmakers To Revisit Revenue-Sharing Fight.
- E&E Daily: Panel To Consider Bill To Expand Western Renewables.
- Politico: Zinke's Travels: Ski Resort And Alaskan Steakhouse.
- Huffington Post: Trump's Interior Head: If We Take Down Confederate Statues, American Indians Will Complain Next.
- WRNI-FM Providence (RI): Environmentalists Oppose Commercial Fishing Within Northeast Marine

National Monument.

- Las Vegas Sun: Additional Coverage: Sage Grouse Lands Reopening For Mineral Development.
- Washington Times: Saving Public Lands For Working Americans.
- Florida Times-Union: Mark Woods: Some Swamps (and Rivers And Lakes) We Shouldn't Drain.
- Billings (MT) Gazette: Guest Opinion: Hot Lotto And Selling Our Public Lands.
- Washington Post: Interior Secretary Zinke's Claim That The U.S.Has Struggled To Produce 'Low-Cost, Abundant And Reliable Energy'.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- DOI, Calif. Tribe Urge End To Group's Anti-Casino Suit.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Associated Press: Suit Seeks To Stop Oil-Gas Drilling On 9 Public Land Parcels.
- Natural Gas Intelligence: BLM Green Lights Up To 146 NatGas Wells In Long-Disputed Colorado Area.
- Uintah Basin Standard (UT): BLM Fracking Rules On Ute Tribal Lands Remains Uncharged.
- E&E Publishing: Landowners Call On BLM To Probe Well Plugging .
- KTVB-TV Boise (ID): Idaho Inmates Work To Restore Sage Grouse Habitat.
- Elko (NV) Daily Free Press: Thomas Mitchell: Jobs And Wildlife Can Coexist.

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

- SLO Council Opposes Offshore Oil And Gas Drilling After Trump Order.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Big Water Tunnels Project OK'd By Southern California Agency.

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

- Gas Prices Inching Lower After Hurricanes.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- E&E Publishing: Little Owl Sparks A Large ESA Flap.
- Newsweek: Thousands Of Bats Slaughtered Annually In Asia End Up On EBay And Etsy For Artsy Americans.
- Scottsbluff (NE) Star-Herald: Ex-US Fish And Wildlife Worker Takes Plea Deal In Theft Case.
- Mount Desert (ME) Islander: Dealer Pleads Guilty To Buying Poached Elvers.
- Moscow-Pullman (ID) Daily News: Our View: Walruses Are In Danger, But Not Enough For Feds To Care.

National Park Service

- WTOP-FM Washington: Lasers Vs. Grime: Park Service Says Treatment Wiped Out Jefferson Memorial's Black Film.
- Naples (FL) Daily News: Florida DEP Renews Oil Exploration Permit In Big Cypress.
- Flathead (MT) Beacon: Glacier Park Attracts More Than 3 Million Visitors In 2017.
- U.S. News & World Report: Traffic Accident Kills 4 Bison In Grand Teton National Park.
- Alaska Public Radio Network: State And Park Service Look To Make Parks Highway Safety Improvements.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Washington Post: WPost Analysis: Video Trump Tweeted Out Overstates Federal Role In Puerto Rico Recovery.
- KKTU-TV Colorado Springs (CO): Dog Hailed A Hero In Puerto Rico Recovery Efforts.

US Geological Survey

- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Will 'Negro' Name Stick To Utah Canyon?
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- ABC: Trump Again Hits Corker On Twitter Amid Concerns About Impact On GOP Agenda.
- Fox News: Administration Moves To Repeal Clean Power Plan.
- USA Today: Trump Says He Will Sign Order Allowing Health Insurance Purchases Across State Lines.
- USA Today: Supreme Court Dismisses Travel Ban Challenge.

- Philly (PA): Trump To Push Tax Plan In Pennsylvania Wednesday.
- Bloomberg News: Trump Says Changes To Tax Plan Coming In Next Few Weeks.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Mr. Trump Nails Shut The Coffin In Climate Relief."
- Washington Post.
 - "Erdogan Is Bullying America. Trump Should Do Something."
 - "Trump's Moves On NAFTA Risk Massive Damage."
 - "DC Is Right To Stand Down On Its Concealed-Carry Law."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Tax Reform And Deficits."
 - "An Outrageous Prosecution."
 - "Alien Torts Unlimited."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

At Least 15 Dead In Northern California Wildfires.

NBC Nightly News (10/10, lead story, 2:50, Holt) reported in its lead story that "at least 15 people have died" in Northern California "amid the blitz of wildfires in a scale not seen there in decades." NBC (Fryer) added that "seventeen large explosive wildfires are burning, scorching more than 115,000 acres, prompting federal government to declare a major disaster." The Los Angeles Times (10/10, Kohli, Willon, Sahagun) reports that Vice President Pence visited California's emergency management headquarters, where he said that President Trump has approved a "major disaster declaration" for the state. USA Today (10/10, Weise, Bacon) reports that President Trump said from the White House, "The federal government will stand with the people of California, and we will be there for you."

In its lead story, The CBS Evening News (10/10, lead story, 2:45, Blackstone) reported that some "200 people are still missing in the Northern California fires." CBS added that "there's a fear that winds just now beginning to pick up, that they could spread this destruction even further." ABC World News Tonight (10/10, lead story, 3:45, Gutman) reported in its lead story that "there is zero percent containment on all the major fires here in Northern California." In a separate story, ABC World News Tonight (10/10, story 2, 4:15, Muir) reported on the "apocalyptic" devastation in one Santa Rosa neighborhood.

The New York Times (10/10, Hsu) says the fires "have dealt a devastating blow to the important wine and tourism industries, destroying several historic wineries and threatening the remaining grape harvest in the Napa and Sonoma valleys." The CBS Evening News (10/10, story 10, 1:40, Villarreal) reported on the Paradise Ridge Winery, where "nearly 100,000 bottles of wine were destroyed Sunday night." CBS added that "at least six other wineries in this area have burned to the ground."

The New York Times (10/10, A1, Fuller, Pérez-Peña, Bromwich) reports that the Northern California fires are "part of an outbreak of blazes stretching almost the entire length of the state." In a separate story, The CBS Evening News (10/10, story 2, 1:55, Strassmen) reported that wildfires in Southern California "have followed a similar pattern. In Anaheim Hills, south of Los Angeles, Canyon Heights Drive lost five homes in three hours." ABC World News Tonight (10/10, story 3, 0:20, Muir) reported that thousands were forced to evacuate.

The Wall Street Journal (10/10, A1, Ailworth, Lovett) reports that Ken Pimlott, chief of California's firefighting agency, CAL-FIRE, anticipates that one of the fires will be among the 20 most destructive in the state's history.

UMF Professor Studying Western Megafires. The Franklin County \(ME\) Daily Bulldog (10/10) reports that Drew Barton, a professor of biology at the University of Maine at Farmington, and his collaborator, Helen Poulos of Wesleyan University, have “received a continuing grant of nearly $30,000 from the National Park Service and the Western National Parks Association to examine 30 years of changes in the forests in Arizona’s Chiricahua Mountains and how these fires are changing the nature of the forests.” Barton’s and Poulos’ research is looking at “megafires and providing land managers with critical information.” First, they’re examining “how these fires are changing the nature of the forest – large pine forested areas are being lost and replaced by scrubby oaks.” Also, “they are developing a model and map of the remaining live trees and dead wood in the Chiricahua National Monument so land managers can predict where the next fire is likely to occur and how large, intense and dangerous it is likely to be.”

Trump Is Ignoring How Fires Spread In The West. In an op-ed for the San Luis Obispo \(CA\) Tribune (10/10, Miller), Char Miller, a professor of environmental analysis at Pomona College, writes that with “major fires erupting across the West this summer – and now into fall” – it “seems the right time to carefully assess wildland fire, its climate drivers and forest health consequences.” But the Trump Administration’s “key wildfire officials – Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue and EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt – have refused to acknowledge the primary role that dangerous climatological factors, such as drought, heat and wind, play in energizing and propelling wildland fire.” Instead, the officials are “fingering ‘radical environmentalists’ who allegedly have scuttled timber sales that would have removed trees and reduced ignition sources.” Miller acknowledges that “thinning forests to create defensible space near communities has a place among the strategies required to respond intelligently to wildland fire.” However, “decades of data show that intense logging creates more destructive fires than the ones that burn through roadless areas, parkland and wilderness.”

GOP Pushes Overhaul To Antiquities Act.

The Daily Caller (10/10, Pearce) reports that “the House Committee on Natural Resources will markup a bill to make major reforms to the Antiquities Act Wednesday. Rep. Rob Bishop, “who chairs the committee, announced his bill and the scheduled markup session in a statement Monday.” Bishop said in a statement, The 1906 Antiquities Act was originally intended as an executive tool to protect historical and archeological artifacts and structures under threat. Regrettably, this worthy goal has been manipulated for ulterior political purposes.”

Antiquities Act Is A Menace To Constitutional Government. In an op-ed for the Washington Examiner (10/10, Bishop), Rep. Rob Bishop writes that “there is no more flagrant violation of this principle of our government than the repeated abuse of the Antiquities Act in the designation of national monuments.” Bishop argues that “any honest reading reveals that it was created to protect ‘landmarks,’ ‘structures,’ and ‘objects’ – not vast swaths of land.” He concludes that “the time has come for Congress to reform the Antiquities Act and rein in the president.”

Lawmakers To Revisit Revenue-Sharing Fight.

E&E Daily (10/10) reports that a House subcommittee will meet on Wednesday to review a draft bill that would “ease offshore drilling in federal waters while also steering revenues to certain coastal states.” Known as the “Accessing Strategic Resources Offshore (ASTRO) Act,” the bill would direct “50 percent of the revenue from offshore oil and gas production to the general treasury, with another 50 percent directed to a separate account to be distributed to certain coastal states.”

Panel To Consider Bill To Expand Western Renewables.

E&E Daily (10/10, Smith-Schoenwalder) reports that “a House Natural Resources subcommittee will hear four bills this week on public land issues, including one that would facilitate renewable energy and promote economic development in the West.” H.R. 2630, from Rep. Paul Gosar, “would authorize the Interior secretary to convey about 8,000 acres of Bureau of Land Management land to La Paz County, Ariz., a move that would allow the county to ‘take advantage of one of their best assets, sunshine,’ according to Gosar.” The Subcommittee on Federal Lands will “hear testimony on three other bills: H.R. 219, from Rep. Don Young (R-Alaska), to correct the Swan Lake hydroelectric project survey boundary and to convey the remaining land within the corrected boundary to Alaska. H.R. 3373, from Del. Eleanor Holmes Norton (D-D.C.), to amend the District of Columbia Stadium Act of 1957 to add 50 years under the lease that allows D.C. to use the parking facilities and underground area of the Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium. H.R. 3607, from Rep. Tom McClintock (R-Calif.), to authorize the Interior secretary to establish fees for medical services provided in units of the National Park System.”

Zinke's Travels: Ski Resort And Alaskan Steakhouse.

Politico (10/10, Whieldon, Lefebvre) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has "attended at least two additional political fundraisers while traveling for official business, including a weekend ski getaway less than three weeks after he was sworn in where donors paid up to $3,000 to attend, according to sources and documents reviewed by POLITICO." The article says that "Zinke's previously undisclosed attendance at the events adds to scrutiny he is facing over his habit of mixing political activities with official business when traveling outside of Washington, D.C., and to questions over travel expenses incurred by members of President Donald Trump's Cabinet." Politico adds that "in addition to the fundraisers, Zinke has held at least a half-dozen other events with big donors or influential conservative organizations while on official trips."

Additional coverage was provided by the New York Post (10/11, Tacopino) and Business Insider (10/10, Abadi).

Ethics Chief 'Deeply Concerned' About Actions By Top Federal Officials. The New York Times (10/10, Lipton) reports that David J. Apol, the acting head of the Office of Government Ethics, "sent a letter to all federal agencies late last week warning that he is 'deeply concerned that the actions of some in government leadership have harmed perceptions about the importance of ethics.'" The letter, which called on federal workers to act honorably, did "not include specifics about what actions by Trump administration employees have elevated his concerns." The Times notes that the two-page memo came six days after former Health and Human Services Secretary Price announced his resignation following questions over his use of private and government planes.

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington Post (10/10).

Trump's Interior Head: If We Take Down Confederate Statues, American Indians Will Complain Next.

The Huffington Post (10/10, D'Angelo, Liebelson) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "says that if Confederate monuments are taken down, there's no telling how far America might go – Native Americans could call for the removal of statues commemorating leaders who orchestrated violence against their ancestors." In an interview with Breitbart published Sunday, Zinke said, "Where do you start and where do you stop? It's a slippery slope. If you're a native Indian, I can tell you, you're not very happy about the history of General Sherman or perhaps President Grant." Zinke "told Breitbart that the Trump administration will not remove any monuments from federal land, including Confederate monuments." He said, "When you try to erase history, what happens is you also erase how it happened and why it happened and the ability to learn from it."

Additional coverage was provided by the Daily Intelligencer \(NY\) (10/10, Levitz).

Environmentalists Oppose Commercial Fishing Within Northeast Marine National Monument.

WRNI-FM Providence, RI (10/10, Brookins) reports that "local environmentalists are worried allowing commercial fishing within the boundaries" of the Northeast Canyons and Seamounts Marine National Monument "would harm the area's ecosystem and biodiversity." Advocacy group Environment America "believes commercial fishing should remain banned because they said the monument is home to hundreds of species, including deep-sea corals and migratory fish, and serves as an entanglement-free zone for endangered marine mammals." On the other hand, the New England Fishery Management Council supports Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's recommendations. Janice Plante, spokeswoman for the council, "said the agency is best equip to regulate New England fisheries because that's what they were designed to do."

Additional Coverage: Sage Grouse Lands Reopening For Mineral Development.

Additional coverage that the Interior Department is "reopening 10 million acres of federal lands in Nevada and five other Western state for mineral development after finding that mining has no impact on sage grouse populations" was provided by the Las Vegas Sun (10/10).

Saving Public Lands For Working Americans.

In an op-ed for the Washington Times (10/10, Barron), Christopher R. Barron, the president of Right Turn Strategies, writes that "from the moment he descended that escalator to announce his candidacy in 2015, Donald Trump vocally and forcefully broke with establishment Republican orthodoxy on a number of issues – including the issue of public lands." But despite his "pledges, and at the urging of special interests and a handful of disgruntled members of Congress, President Trump issued an executive order this spring instructing Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke to review all presidential designations or expansions of national monuments of greater than 100,000 acres since Jan. 1, 1996." Barron asserts that "for tens of millions of working-class Americans, the folks who were the backbone of the Trump revolution, public lands are an essential part of their life." He concludes that "as President Trump weighs how to move forward on the question of public lands, monuments and national parks, he should once again put the interests of working-class Americans above those of the establishment elites."

Mark Woods: Some Swamps (and Rivers And Lakes) We Shouldn't Drain.

In his column for the Florida Times-Union (10/10, Woods), Mark Woods writes that he doesn't doubt that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "loves the outdoors." But he raises concerns about the Trump Administration's stance on public lands, in light of Zinke's recommendations following the review of recently designated national monuments.

Guest Opinion: Hot Lotto And Selling Our Public Lands.

In an op-ed for the Billings \(MT\) Gazette (10/10, Bucks), Dan Bucks, who served as Montana Director of Revenue from 2005-2013, likens Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's pursuit of "energy dominance" on federal lands to the 2015 "Hot Lotto" scandal. Bucks claims that they both "rig outcomes in violation of the law, and unfairly hand over the American people's wealth to only a favored few." According to Bucks, "Interior is now picking coal, oil and gas companies as the predetermined winners and ceding control of our public lands to them." He warns that "it is rushing to sell coal, oil and gas to companies at bargain basement prices and under lax rules—shortchanging the American people both now and for years to come."

Interior Secretary Zinke's Claim That The U.S.Has Struggled To Produce 'Low-Cost, Abundant And Reliable Energy'.

The Washington Post (10/11, Lewis) analyzes Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's claim that "our country has inherited an energy-dependent country from previous generations, and in recent years, we've struggled to be self-sufficient in producing low-cost, abundant and reliable energy," which was made during a speech at the Heritage Foundation on Sept. 29, 2017. The article finds that "Zinke's claim that the U.S. has struggled to produce 'low-cost, abundant, and reliable energy sources' just doesn't square with the current state of domestic energy production." It notes that "even though the United States does not produce 100 percent of its energy domestically, in 2016, domestic energy production increased to 86 percent after hitting historic lows in 2005." According to the article, "the crux of Zinke's claim is that regulation increases the cost of U.S. production, and to achieve his vision of becoming an 'energy superpower,' the United States needs to cut the red tape." However, "instead of focusing on all the gains made by the energy industry over the past several years, Zinke obscures the reality of the domestic energy production." For this, Zinke is given "Four Pinocchios."

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

DOI, Calif. Tribe Urge End To Group's Anti-Casino Suit.

Law360 (10/10, Posses) reports that the Interior Department and the North Fork Rancheria of Mono Indians have "doubled down on quick-win requests in litigation challenging an off-reservation casino, telling a federal court that taking an advocacy group's view would essentially eviscerate the department's authority to issue procedures allowing gambling when a state refuses to negotiate." The parties "offered reply briefs on Friday in further support of their summary judgment bids and in opposition to a quick win request by individual citizens and community groups."

Bureau Of Land Management

Suit Seeks To Stop Oil-Gas Drilling On 9 Public Land Parcels.

The AP (10/10) reports that three environmental groups and San Miguel County in Colorado have filed suit against the federal government over nine oil and gas lease sales in the state that could threaten the Gunnison sage grouse. The lawsuit accuses the Bureau of Land Management of not consulting wildlife managers and not conducting required reviews prior to selling the leases this year. Plaintiff environmental groups include Rocky Mountain Wild, the San Juan Citizens Alliance, and Conservation Colorado.

BLM Green Lights Up To 146 NatGas Wells In Long-Disputed Colorado Area.

Natural Gas Intelligence (10/10, Nemec) reports that the Bureau of Land Management approved SG Interests Ltd to develop natural gas operations near Paonia, Colorado in the North Fork Valley. BLM approved the company for up to 146 natural gas wells as part of the Bull Mountain Unit Master Development Plan that spans almost 20,000 acres.

BLM Fracking Rules On Ute Tribal Lands Remains Uncharged.

The Uintah Basin Standard \(UT\) (10/10) reports on the impact of the Wyoming v. United States court ruling regarding Obama administration-era hydraulic fracturing rules for the Ute Indian Tribe. As a result of the ruling, "federal regulations that existed before March 2015 will remain in effect while the United States completes the procedural steps to formally repeal those same rules." The Ute Tribal Business Committee released a statement saying: "We hope that the Tenth Circuit will take this opportunity to decide this important issue of federal Indian law now, instead of allowing BLM to continue to violate both tribal sovereignty and federal law."

Landowners Call On BLM To Probe Well Plugging .

E&E Publishing (10/10, King) reports that landowner advocates requested that federal and state regulators make additional information available about abandoned and plugged gas wells in Wyoming in a September 22 letter to the Bureau of Land Management. Gas wells in Pavillion, Wyoming have shown evidence of corroded casings, which has sparked concerns that Encana Corp.'s gas wells may be leaking gas into water supplies, according to Pavillion Area Concerned Citizens Chairman John Fenton.

Idaho Inmates Work To Restore Sage Grouse Habitat.

KTVB-TV Boise, ID (10/10, Parris) reports that "after months of hard work, a group of women at the South Boise Women's Correctional Center are putting the final touches" on a project "to keep the greater sage grouse off the Endangered Species List." They are "helping grow native plants that will be used to restore the birds' native habitat." . The seedlings will be delivered to the Bureau of Land Management "to help restore sage grouse habitats that were destroyed by recent wildfires."

Thomas Mitchell: Jobs And Wildlife Can Coexist.

In his column for the Elko \(NV\) Daily Free Press (10/11, Mitchell), Thomas Mitchell writes that "the Interior Department under Montanan Ryan Zinke is displaying an uncommon outbreak of common sense." Mitchell supports the Bureau of Land Management's move to cancel the Obama Administration's "prohibition of mining on 10 million acres of federal lands across six Western states, including Nevada." Mitchell asserts that "jobs and wildlife can coexist when just a little common sense is applied."

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

SLO Council Opposes Offshore Oil And Gas Drilling After Trump Order.

The San Luis Obispo \(CA\) Tribune (10/10, Wilson) reports that the San Luis Obispo City Council has "resolved to oppose any new oil and gas drilling off the California Coast, in response to an executive order signed in April by President Donald Trump that could open the door to offshore leases." According to the article, "citing climate action as a major city goal and joining a campaign led by the Center for Biological Diversity, the council unanimously passed a resolution voicing opposition to any new or expanded fossil fuel extraction in the Pacific Ocean." The resolution states, "Oil drilling presents a clear and ever-present danger to the health and safety of residents, businesses and economies, with the threat of an oil spill potentially wreaking havoc on ecosystems, on human health, and economic activities. Fracking and related techniques, where water and chemicals are injected under high pressure to crack rock formations and free up petroleum products, are linked to water and air pollution, health concerns, and harm to marine wildlife."

Bureau Of Reclamation

Big Water Tunnels Project OK'd By Southern California Agency.

The AP (10/10, Melley) reports that "the powerful Metropolitan Water District voted Tuesday to pay its share of the $16 billion project to build two massive tunnels to pipe water from Northern California to Southern California cities." The AP says that "the 28-6 vote gives Gov. Jerry Brown's ambitious project an important boost of support – and guarantees more than a quarter of the funding – after an influential agricultural group withdrew its backing last month." However, the fate of the tunnels "remained somewhat uncertain."

Also reporting are the Los Angeles Times (10/10, Boxall), the Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (10/10, Sabalow, Kasler), the Los Angeles Daily News (10/10, Chou), and the Orange County \(CA\) Register (10/10).

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

Gas Prices Inching Lower After Hurricanes.

UPI (10/10, Graeber) reports that according to AAA, despite 90 percent idle oil production due to Hurricane Nate, US motorists will see gas prices decrease. AAA spokesperson Jeanette Casselano said "the latest demand figures show the lowest since the week Hurricane Harvey hit and can likely be the beginning of a downward demand trend indicating even cheaper gas prices to come this fall." UPI states that "the federal government said it expected gas prices to be around $2.40 for most of the month and drop to $2.23 per gallon by December."

Fish And Wildlife Service

Little Owl Sparks A Large ESA Flap.

E&E Publishing (10/10, Doyle) reports that the Fish and Wildlife Service is "scrambling to save its interpretation of a crucial but notoriously ambiguous phrase in the Endangered Species Act." What Arizona U.S. District Judge Rosemary Márquez "next decides in a lawsuit over the pygmy-owl could buffet officials and other species alike." The ESA phrase in question is "significant portion of its range." According to the article, "a decision is pending, even as attorneys disagree over the current status of Márquez's original order."

Thousands Of Bats Slaughtered Annually In Asia End Up On EBay And Etsy For Artsy Americans.

Newsweek (10/10, Hugo) reports that "bats are being killed in Southeast Asia specifically to sell to American dead-bat enthusiasts, much of the supply on eBay and Etsy." According to the article, "between mid-2000 and 2013, the United States imported 114,927 bats," and "a total of 113,200 of those bats were dead—that's nearly 9,000 slaughtered bats per year." These figures "may be conservative because many imports are simply never seen." William Karesh, executive vice president for health and policy at EcoHealth Alliance, said, "I think it's under-reported because all they know is what they find. Fish and Wildlife doesn't have the staffing levels to monitor every bag, every suitcase, every box, every container that comes to every port."

Ex-US Fish And Wildlife Worker Takes Plea Deal In Theft Case.

The AP (10/9) reports that "a December sentencing is scheduled for a former U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service worker who'd been charged with burglarizing the service office in Wood River." According to court records, John Cochnar "pleaded no contest Thursday to two counts of theft after prosecutors dropped two burglary counts." His sentencing is set for Dec. 8.

Dealer Pleads Guilty To Buying Poached Elvers.

The Mount Desert \(ME\) Islander (10/10, Rappaport) reports that "last March, a federal grand jury indicted Woolwich elver dealer William Sheldon, now 71, on seven charges relating to buying and selling illegally harvested juvenile eels over a four-year period beginning in 2011." Last Thursday, Sheldon plead guilty "to one count of violating the federal Lacey Act, admitting to buying elvers from an undercover U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agent in April 2013 that had been illegally harvested in South Carolina and elsewhere."

Our View: Walrus Are In Danger, But Not Enough For Feds To Care.

The Moscow-Pullman \(ID\) Daily News (10/10, Malott) editorializes that "climate change has forced the walrus to adapt and save itself for the time being," but "rather than step up to help solve the problem, Fish and Wildlife has decided the walruses aren't worth the money or effort because they're hanging on for now." The paper says that "listing the walrus on the endangered species list was an opportunity to shine a light on the reality of climate change." However, it concludes that "unless it starts affecting how we humans get our food, our current federal government clearly isn't going to care."

National Park Service

Lasers Vs. Grime: Park Service Says Treatment Wiped Out Jefferson Memorial's Black Film.

WTOP-FM Washington (10/10, Moore) reports that "a high-tech method using lasers to clean a grimy black coating on the Jefferson Memorial's dome has proved so successful, officials now want to give the rest of the monument a laser scrub-down, the National Park Service said Tuesday." WRC-TV Washington (10/10, Vesoulis) reports that "the test's success will allow them to clean the rest of the memorial." Justine Bello, an architectural conservator, said, "The level of clean that was achieved exceeded our expectations. We were able to clean the stone in a safe manner that protected both this cultural resource and the surrounding natural environment as well."

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington Post (10/11, Weil).

Florida DEP Renews Oil Exploration Permit In Big Cypress.

The Naples \(FL\) Daily News (10/10, Staats) reports that Florida has "renewed a permit to allow a Texas company to continue a controversial search for oil in the Big Cypress National Preserve." Environmental groups had urged the Department of Environmental Protection to not allow Burnett Oil Co. "to resume the work, which has left behind muddy ruts and damaged trees." Burnett's "new permit, which is dated Friday, expires Oct. 5, 2018, and is subject to a 21-day challenge period."

Florida Politics (10/10, Powers) reports that "Democratic gubernatorial candidate Gwen Graham on Tuesday blasted a state decision to renew an oil exploration permit in the Big Cypress National Preserve in the Everglades." Graham said, "Protecting Big Cypress National Preserve is vital to preserving and restoring Florida's Everglades. The state should be working to end oil drilling in the Everglades, not expand it. As governor, I will fight to protect our clean land and water from oil drilling and fracking."

Glacier Park Attracts More Than 3 Million Visitors In 2017.

The Flathead \(MT\) Beacon (10/10, Franz) reports that "more than 3 million people have visited Glacier National Park in 2017 making it the busiest year in park history." The article says that "according to data released by the National Park Service on Tuesday, 3.3 million people had visited the park through September, a 12.9 percent increase during the same nine-month period in 2016." The article notes that "total visitation in Glacier Park was down in September compared to the same month last year due to the Sprague Fire, which closed a large swath of the west side of the park, including the popular Going-to-the-Sun Road."

Additional coverage was provided by the AP (10/11) and KTVQ-TV Billings, MT (10/10, Bragg).

Traffic Accident Kills 4 Bison In Grand Teton National Park.

The AP (10/10) reports that Grand Teton National Park rangers are "investigating a traffic accident that left four bison dead in northwest Wyoming." The incident "occurred Oct. 2 in the park on a foggy night on U.S. 26/89/191 when a pickup truck hit one bison on the highway, rolled and then struck and killed three more nearby bison." According to the National Park Service, "the Casper woman who was driving alone escaped with minor injuries."

State And Park Service Look To Make Parks Highway Safety Improvements.

The Alaska Public Radio Network (10/10, Bross) reports that the state of Alaska and the National Park Service are "teaming up to improve safety on the Parks Highway near the entrance to Denali." According to Alaska Department of Transportation project engineering manager Carl Heim, "the area around milepost 231 where the highway crosses a bridge over the Nenana River, is a popular place with park visitors walking to trails on the other side." Heim "said the state plans to rebuild the bridge with an attached sidewalk.”

Office Of Insular Affairs

WPost Analysis: Video Trump Tweeted Out Overstates Federal Role In Puerto Rico Recovery.

Jenna Johnson of the Washington Post (10/10, Johnson) writes that a nine-minute video “about Puerto Rico relief efforts that President Trump tweeted out this week...provides the kind of narrow, positive view of relief efforts in Puerto Rico that the president has been trying to convey amid the humanitarian crisis there – a montage of stacks of bottled water, helicopters moving concrete slabs and supplies, boats carrying medical items and trucks hauling diesel.” But the “selectively edited compilation” overstates the federal role, including clips of local efforts without identifying them as such. Johnson says that the video “shows the extent to which Trump and his administration are portraying the federal government’s handling of the disaster in Puerto Rico in the best possible light, despite the enduring power, water and health problems there.”

Puerto Rico Health System In Critical Condition. The New York Times (10/10, A1, Robles) reports that numerous sick people in Puerto Rico are in “mortal peril” almost three weeks after Hurricane Maria’s destruction. HHS Assistant Secretary for Preparedness and Response Robert Kadlec said, “The devastation I saw, I thought was equivalent to a nuclear detonation. Whatever you do, will be almost insufficient to the demand and need that is out there for these 3.5 million Americans in Puerto Rico. We are doing everything we can with what we have, and we have a lot.”

Island Still 84% Without Power. The CBS Evening News (10/10, story 7, 2:10, Mason) reported, “It is a slow road to recovery in Puerto Rico, nearly three weeks after Hurricane Maria hit. FEMA says commercial airline service is back to 100%, and 78% of gas stations are open. But only about a third of cell towers are working, and 84% of the power is still out. The death toll is up to 45.” The New York Times (10/10, Caron) reports that Gov. Ricardo Rosselló said Friday that “the goal is to have 25 percent of the electrical system restored ‘within the next month.’”

FreedomWorks’ Tamny Opposes Puerto Rico Debt Forgiveness. John Tamny of the Center for Economic Freedom at FreedomWorks writes in the Wall Street Journal (10/10) that forgiving Puerto Rico’s debt would only make the territory’s situation worse by letting inept leaders off the hook. He argues that in order to pay off the debt, Puerto Rico will need to strengthen private enterprise to promote growth, which will help all residents.

Dog Hailed A Hero In Puerto Rico Recovery Efforts.

KKTV-TV Colorado Springs, CO (10/10) reports that “a small pup is being hailed a hero for leading a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) employee to her owner in Puerto Rico during recovery efforts.” USFWS employee James Casey was “conducting a security assessment of a closed hospital in Humaco when he noticed Agua the dog. Casey, from Texas, was with 30 Interior Department responders on a mission for the Federal Emergency Management Agency.” According to the article, “Casey and the rest of the team followed Agua,” and “when they got to the bottom of a hill, they found a woman, the dog’s owner.”

US Geological Survey

Will ‘Negro’ Name Stick To Utah Canyon?

The Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (10/10, Maffly) reports that the fight over the name of Negro Bill Canyon “remains a sore point of contention in Utah, one that may finally be put to rest this week.” The U.S. Board on Geographic Names is “expected to vote Thursday whether to change the canyon’s name, using the pioneer’s surname rather than a race-based nickname that no one ever called him during his lifetime.” The Board on Geographic Names “voted down a name change in 2001, citing a lack of support.” However, “officials with the Bureau of Land Management and Grand County have since reversed their stances, while the Utah Committee on Geographic Names voted against a name change.”

Additional Reading.

- Earthquake: Magnitude 3.0 Quake Strikes Near Salton Sea. Los Angeles Times (10/10, Quakebot).

- Magnitude 6.3 Quake Hits Northern Chile: USGS. Reuters (10/10).

Top National News

Trump Again Hits Corker On Twitter Amid Concerns About Impact On GOP Agenda.

Coverage of President Trump's criticisms of Sen. Bob Corker continues for a third day, but the volume of reporting has declined. Corker has not been responding to the President's ongoing Twitter gibes, and while some of the most recent reporting focuses on the President's Tuesday dubbing of the Tennessean as "Liddle Bob Corker," there is more space given to analysis of the potential damage to the GOP agenda. Reporting also includes speculation that Corker's concerns about Trump are widely shared among Capitol Hill Republicans who have not been as outspoken.

ABC World News Tonight (10/10, story 6, 2:00, Muir) reported on "the war of words" between the two. ABC's Jonathan Karl reported that Corker "infuriated the President by saying this to New York Times." Corker: "He doesn't realize that, you know, that we could be heading towards World War III with the kinds of comments that he's making." Karl: "'The Failing @nytimes set Liddle' Bob Corker up by recording his conversation,' the President tweeted today. 'Was made to sound a fool, and that's what I am dealing with!' But...it was, in fact, Corker who asked the New York Times to record the interview."

The CBS Evening News (10/10, story 5, 1:50, Mason) called it "the latest episode of the Republican family feud." CBS' Margaret Brennan: "In this audio clip, the Senator clearly consents to being taped." Corker: "I know they're recording it, and I hope you are, too." Brennan: "In that interview, Corker said Mr. Trump may be headed towards World War III. Today, White House spokesperson Sarah Sanders weighed in." Sanders: "Sen. Corker is certainly entitled to his own opinion, but he's not entitled to his own facts." Brennan: "She then repeated the erroneous claim that Corker supported the Iran nuclear deal, even though he voted against it."

On NBC Nightly News (10/10, story 3, 2:15, Holt), Kristen Welker reported that "party leaders are urging both sides to cool it. The family feud could derail the entire fall GOP agenda." Breitbart (10/10, Spiering) reports that "White House reporters repeatedly asked" Sanders "about Trump's feud with Corker, wondering how it would help the president pass his big-ticket items in the Republican-led Senate."

The AP (10/10, Werner) reports that Trump "lashed out" at Corker, "continuing a feud with the Tennessee Republican. ... Fellow GOP senators, treading carefully, avoided siding with Trump or Corker. But leading lawmakers called on both men to end a quarrel that could imperil the Republican agenda on Capitol Hill." The New York Times (10/10, Baker) reports that Trump "escalated his attack" on Corker "by ridiculing him for his height, even as advisers worried that the president was further fracturing his relationship with congressional Republicans just a week before a vote critical to his tax cutting plan." However, the Washington Times (10/10, Boyer) reports that the President said that his tax reform plan is not in jeopardy. He told reporters, "The people of this country want tax cuts."

USA Today (10/10, Jackson) reports that Trump also "waved off...Corker's recent claim that his threats against other countries and reckless rhetoric could put the nation 'on a path to World War II,' telling reporters that 'we were on the wrong path before' he took office." CNN's Situation Room (10/10) reported that during a meeting in the Oval Office with former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Trump said, "We were on the wrong path before. All you have to do is take a look. If you look over the last 25 years through numerous administrations, we were on a path to a very big problem – a problem like this world has never seen. We're on the right path right now, believe me."

The Tennessean (10/10, Boucher) reports that the White House "won't weigh in" on whether Corker should resign. Sanders "said it is up to Corker and the people of Tennessee to decide" if he should leave office early. Roll Call (10/10, Bennett) says that Tuesday was "the third full day of the Trump-Corker feud." However, Politico (10/10, Everett) reports that Corker "had no response to Trump's latest taunt as of Tuesday; he and his office have kept quiet since giving a lengthy interview to the New York Times on Sunday. Corker's remarks – aside from saying the president could trigger World War III, Corker accused him of treating his job like a reality show – marked the harshest criticism by a sitting Republican senator of Trump yet."

Paul Kane of the Washington Post (10/10, Kane) writes that on Tuesday, "a collective, if private, acknowledgment emerged that Corker was speaking for most Senate Republicans when he stood up to a Trump taunt," but "you wouldn't know it from senators' public pronouncements. After Corker tweeted on Sunday that the White House had been turned into 'an adult day-care center,' most Republicans were silent – deciding to ride out this moment with the belief that it would fade away."

Rep. Elijah Cummings (D-MD) was asked on MSNBC's Morning Joe (10/10) what he hears from his Republican colleagues in the House about Trump. Cummings said, "I hear the same things that Sen. Corker said. And I have been asking them, why don't they say these things in public? I think many of them are concerned about being the victim of a tweet. Other ones are worried about having somebody run against them from the right."

Rep. Eric Swalwell (D-CA) said on CNN's Situation Room (10/10), "If Sen. Corker is indeed correct that other senators have expressed this concern, if you have seen something, it's time to say something. He shouldn't be the only one. We need other patriots to come forward because the stakes are too great if we don't stop this president from taking us to a nuclear war."

Leonard Pitts writes in his Miami Herald (10/10) column, "Yes, he's childish and incompetent. Is that really news by now? But of course, it wasn't that assessment...that made jaws drop over the weekend so much as it was the person making it. ... But whatever satisfaction one might derive from hearing Trump hammered by his own troops is insufficient to blunt the anger that rises close behind." Pitts also writes that Corker was an enthusiastic supporter of Trump during the 2016 campaign.

NYTimes Analysis: Administration's Claims On Corker's Iran Deal Role Are "Misleading." The New York Times (10/10, Qiu) writes under the headline "Trump Misleadingly Blames Bob Corker For Iran Deal" that Trump's blaming of Corker for the Iran nuclear deal "is a misleading charge: Mr. Corker...repeatedly spoke out against the accord to limit Tehran's nuclear program before it was brokered by world powers in 2015." Sanders said Monday, "Sen. Corker worked with Nancy Pelosi and the Obama Administration to pave the way for that legislation, and basically rolled out the red carpet for the Iran deal." That was a reference to a 2015 bill that Corker "sponsored and pushed through...to give Congress some say over the deal, as Republicans demanded at the time." The bill ultimately passed 98-1 in the Senate and 400-25 in the House.

LA Times Analysis: Trump Resisting Kelly's Efforts To Rein In His Impulses. The Los Angeles Times (10/10, Bierman, Decker, Bennett) reports that the President "by many accounts has bristled" at efforts at management imposed by White House Chief of Staff Kelly "and continues – usually alone on mornings, nights and weekends – to act on his own gut sense, using his own lines to contact allies outside the White House and, using Twitter, to reach those millions of supporters he calls 'my people.'" This continued on Tuesday as Trump "tweeted a schoolyard taunt about Corker's height." The Times writes, "Allies see signs that Trump is frustrated with Kelly and increasingly unwilling to be managed, even just a little."

Administration Moves To Repeal Clean Power Plan.

EPA Administrator Pruitt on Tuesday issued a proposed rule that would eliminate the Obama-era climate rule known as the clean power plan. Pruitt said on Fox News' Special Report (10/10), "The President made a promise to the American people that the EPA would not be an agency that picks winners and losers as we generate electricity in this country. The past administration made a commitment to declare war on coal. And effectively yesterday and today, that war is over. The war on coal is over." The Washington Post (10/10, Eilperin) quotes a statement from Pruitt, which said, "We are committed to righting the wrongs of the Obama administration by cleaning the regulatory slate. ... Any replacement rule will be done carefully, properly, and with humility, by listening to all those affected by the rule."

The Hill (10/10, Cama) reports that the action is "a win to fossil fuel companies, business groups and Republicans – including Pruitt, the former Oklahoma attorney general – who fought the climate plan from the start."

The Washington Times (10/10, Wolfgang) says the move, which follows through on one of the President's "vows to coal country," will be "challenged in court, with environmental groups and Democrats quickly vowing to fight any move to repeal the CPP." But Pruitt "says he's on solid legal footing, and that repeal will save as much as $33 billion over the next 13 years." The Washington Free Beacon (10/10, Harrington) likewise cites "senior Trump administration officials" who said the repeal "would save $33 billion in avoided compliance costs by 2030."

Reuters (10/10, Gardner, Flitter) says the EPA "did not issue a timeline on replacing the plan, only saying it would issue a rule in the 'near future,'" which "could delay fresh investment in electricity generation, an industry rife with aging plants, analysts said." The New York Times (10/10, Friedman) reports that "those adept at reading between the lines of dense federal documents say the subtext reads more like: 'Don't hold your breath,'" adding that "industry leaders and environmental activists predict that...nothing will take its place for possibly years to come." A New York Times (10/10) editorial calls the move "deeply disheartening," and argues that if Pruitt offers a substitute plan, "it won't amount to much, surely not the closing of any coal-fired plants."

The Wall Street Journal (10/10, Puko) reports that despite the Administration's plans to repeal the rules, some of the nation's biggest power companies including American Electric Power Co., NRG Energy Inc. and Southern Co., say they will move forward with investments in renewable and gas-fired electricity and will make climate change part of their corporate strategy.

CNN: Pruitt Lifted Environmental Restrictions On Bristol Bay After Meeting With Mining CEO. On CNN's Anderson Cooper 360 (10/10), Cooper highlighted EPA Administrator Pruitt's "decisions to lift the protections of a pristine area in Alaska that could pave the way for a massive new mine there." Pruitt "made the decision after meeting with a mining executive." Senior investigative correspondent Drew Griffin added that at the May 1 meeting at EPA headquarters, the CEO of Pebble Ltd. Partnership asked Pruitt "to withdraw environmental restrictions on Alaska's Bristol Bay" imposed by the Obama Administration "to stop that company from building a massive mine." Pruitt "quickly agreed" and "little more than an hour" after the meeting, "EPA staffers were shocked to receive this email obtained exclusively by CNN which says, 'We have been directed by the administrator to withdraw the restrictions.'" Griffin added that "multiple sources" say Pruitt "made that decision without a briefing from any of EPA's scientists or experts."

Trump Says He Will Sign Order Allowing Health Insurance Purchases Across State Lines.

USA Today (10/10, Korte) reports that President Trump said Tuesday that he will bypass Congress and sign an executive order to allow consumers to buy health insurance across state lines. Trump said, "They'll be able to cross state lines, and they will get great, competitive healthcare, and it will cost the United States nothing. ... But it will be great, great healthcare for many, many people — a big percentage of the number of people that we were talking about for failed Obamacare." The Post points out that with the executive action, Trump "is doing something he often criticized Obama doing," but White House press secretary Sarah Sanders "said Trump has a clear mandate to take action with or without Congress."

Reuters (10/10, Abutaleb, Mason) says the order "is expected to allow Americans to buy stripped-down health insurance policies, a step some experts say would further undermine the Obamacare law that Trump opposes." The AP (10/10, Murphy) says the coverage "could wind up costing some shoppers less if the policies don't have to meet the coverage requirements of individual states or the Affordable Care Act. But that's true largely for customers with good health."

The Los Angeles Times (10/10, Levey) reports that the Administration is "reportedly looking specifically at ways to loosen health insurance regulations and promote wider use of a form of insurance known as association health plans." The Times provides "a rundown of how these plans work and what the administration's moves could mean for Americans and their health insurance."

Supreme Court Dismisses Travel Ban Challenge.

USA Today (10/10, Wolf, Korte) reports that the Supreme Court on Tuesday "dismissed a major challenge to President Trump's travel ban on majority-Muslim countries" because "it has been replaced by a new version, sending the controversy back to the starting block." According to USA, "the ruling is a victory for the Trump administration, which had asked the court to drop the case after Trump signed a proclamation Sept. 24 that replaced the temporary travel ban on six nations with a new, indefinite ban affecting eight countries," an action that the justices ruled "made the court challenge moot." The decision "effectively wipes the record clean in" the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, "one of two federal appeals courts that had struck down major portions of Trump's travel ban." USA notes that a separate case from the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals "remains pending because it includes a ban on refugees worldwide that won't expire until later this month," but the Supreme Court "is likely to ditch that case."

The New York Times (10/10, Liptak) reports that if the 9th Circuit case is dismissed, "a politically charged clash between presidential power and claims of religious discrimination that could have produced a blockbuster decision will instead end with a whimper." According to the Times, "a new wave of litigation aimed at" the Trump Administration's "latest policies, announced last month, is already underway, and appeals in those cases may yet reach the Supreme Court," but for now, "what could have been one of the marquee cases of a busy term was removed from the docket."

The Washington Times (10/10, Dinan) reports that while the 4th Circuit "had only ruled Mr. Trump's 90-day pause unconstitutional, the 9th Circuit had also ruled the president's 120-day halt on refugee admissions to be illegal," and "that 120-day period expires later this month, suggesting that at least, for now, it remains a live controversy." Justice Sonia Sotomayor "dissented from the court's order, saying she would have instead just sent the case back to the lower appeals court to be continued."

Trump To Push Tax Plan In Pennsylvania Wednesday.

Philly \(PA\) (10/10, Tamari) reports that President Trump will visit Pennsylvania Wednesday, to tout his tax reform plan, "the best remaining chance for a major legislative victory in his first year, when a president's power is typically highest." When Trump delivers a speech outside Harrisburg, "the script calls for him to explain how the plan would help middle-class workers like truck drivers, according to a senior White House official who briefed reporters on the condition of anonymity." However, there "would be little surprise if festering battles with fellow Republicans or NFL players feature just as prominently...as taxes."

Trump Says Changes To Tax Plan Coming In Next Few Weeks.

Bloomberg News (10/10, Sink) reports that President Trump said Tuesday that he will make changes to his tax plan in the next few weeks. Speaking to reporters in the Oval Office, Trump said, "We'll be adjusting a little bit over the next few weeks to make it even stronger, but I will tell you it's become very, very popular." However, Trump "didn't specify what kind of changes he expects to make to the plan." Reuters (10/10) says Trump said his ongoing feud with Sen. Bob Corker will not hurt his push for tax reform. Asked if the "spat with Corker would affect the tax effort," Trump said, "I don't think so, no."

Politico: Trump Repeats False Claim That US Is Highest-Tax Nation In The World. Politico (10/10, Nussbaum) says Trump reiterated a claim he has "repeated over and over again," that the US is the highest-taxed nation in the world. However, the claim is "false – something fact checkers have been pointing out since 2015, when Trump first began declaring it on the campaign trail." Politico adds that White House press secretary Sarah Sanders "sought for the second time in less than a week to defend the comment by saying, in effect, that Trump did not mean what he said." Sanders argued, "We are the highest taxed corporate tax [sic] in the developed economy. That's a fact." When a reporter pointed out that that the President said "we're the highest taxed nation in the world," Sanders replied, "The highest taxed corporate nation. Seems pretty consistent to me. Sorry, we're just going to have to agree to disagree."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Mr. Trump Nails Shut The Coffin In Climate Relief." A New York Times (10/10) editorial calls the Administration's move to repeal the Clean Power Plan "deeply disheartening," and argues that if EPA Administrator Pruitt offers a substitute plan, "it won't amount to much, surely not the closing of any coal-fired plants."

Washington Post.

"Erdogan Is Bullying America. Trump Should Do Something." A Washington Post (10/10) editorial says President Recep Tayyip Erdogan's Turkey "appears well on its way to becoming an outlaw state," and argues that there's "no question" that the Administration, "which has persisted in describing Mr. Erdogan as a close ally, must now stand up to his bullying." The Post writes that while the "long-standing US alliance with Turkey should be preserved, to the extent that is possible with Mr. Erdogan in power," it "cannot come at the expense of tolerating hostage-taking and assaults on the US rule of law. Mr. Erdogan should be made to understand that he is risking a rupture of relations that will do far more harm to his regime than to the United States."

"Trump's Moves On NAFTA Risk Massive Damage." A Washington Post (10/10) editorial says that "the future of the U.S. economy" will be at stake Wednesday when "representatives of the United States, Canada and Mexico will begin a fourth and possibly pivotal round of negotiations on overhauling" NAFTA. The Post argues that if President Trump, who it describes as "a demagogic NAFTA critic," makes "an unwise move on NAFTA, he could seriously hurt workers on all sides, and he would be directly responsible. And so far, he seems to be sticking to dangerous positions on the trade agreement."

"DC Is Right To Stand Down On Its Concealed-Carry Law." In an editorial, the Washington Post (10/10) writes that DC city officials were right when they decided last week not to appeal a July court ruling that struck down the city's requirement that people have a "good reason" to obtain a concealed-carry permit. The Post argues that given the makeup of the Supreme Court and its decision to expand the individual right to bear arms in the city under District of Columbia v. Heller, "the District's caution in not wanting to be the prod for further loosening of gun laws is understandable." The Post adds that there are still appropriate checks on carrying a concealed firearm in the city, such as 16 hours of training and an extensive background check.

Wall Street Journal.

"Tax Reform And Deficits." A Wall Street Journal (10/10) editorial cites the CBO's reports Friday that the fiscal 2017 budget deficit grew for the second consecutive year to $668 billion and argues that unless economic growth accelerates the federal budget will never be balanced.

"An Outrageous Prosecution." A Wall Street Journal (10/10) editorial decries reporter Ayla Albayrak's conviction by a Turkish court, which it says is the consequence of the repressive environment President Recep Tayyip Erdogan has created in Turkey since a failed coup in 2016.

"Alien Torts Unlimited." The Wall Street Journal (10/10) editorializes that in a case the Supreme Court will hear today, foreign citizens are claiming the right to sue foreign corporations for injuries that occur on foreign soil in US courts. The Journal argues that such a right would unduly expand corporate liability for torts, as well as the jurisdiction of US courts. In Jesner v. Arab Bank, 6,000 foreign plaintiffs sued the Jordanian Arab Bank for injuries caused by Hamas and other terrorist groups in Israel, arguing that Arab Bank approved automatic electronic wire transfers through the US-based CHIPS system for foreign terrorists. Plaintiffs invoked the 1789 Alien Tort Statute. The Journal argues that in 1980 the Supreme Court erred in holding that US courts could review cases involving foreigners for violations of international norms, and that the court should not allow the claims in Jesner.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

P&G Says Peltz Has Lost Bid For Board Seat: He Presses On

The Reason Investors Love Spinoffs: Juicier Returns

Deadly California Wildfires Rip Through Once-Safe Areas

Family Ties, Leaks And A Wedding: Inside The Political Scandal Rocking South Africa

New York Times:

Wildfires Burn Out Of Control Across Northern California: 17 Are Dead

Kobe Steel's Falsified Data Is Another Blow To Japan's Reputation

Gwyneth Paltrow, Angelina Jolie And Others Say Weinstein Harassed Them

Puerto Rico's Healthcare Is In Dire Condition, Three Weeks After Maria

He Excelled As A Detective, Until Prosecutors Stopped Believing Him

Washington Post:

Black Man Beaten At Va. Rally Now Faces Charges

Lebanese Turn Against Refugees After Brutal Killing

3 Women Accuse Weinstein Of Rape

Thousands Flee As California Wildfires Rage On

How Sean Hannity Learned To Channel Red-State Rage

Financial Times:

Catalan Leader Steps Back From Immediate Independence Declaration

P&G Says Nelson Peltz Has Lost Battle For Board Seat

Theresa May Silent On How She Would Vote In Second Brexit Poll

Global Childhood Obesity Rises 10-Fold In 40 Years

Washington Times:

Trump Unsettles Allies By Picking Fights With Republicans

Trump Threatens To Kill Tax Breaks For NFL Stadiums: Goodell Tells Teams To Stand For Anthem

'Baffling' Gun-Free Zones In D.C. Thwart Concealed-Carry Permit Holders

Trump Will Try To Sell Tax Plan In Pennsylvania, But Political Base Begins To Fray

Weinstein's Sexual Harassment Scandal Tarnishes Hollywood, Democratic Party
Catalonia's President Proposes Cooling-Off Period Before Secession Talks With Spain

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: West Coast Wildfires-Northern California; West Coast Wildfires-Impacted Family; West Coast Wildfires-Southern California; West Coast Wildfires-Tracking; Weinstein-Sexual Harassment Scandal; Trump-Republicans Relations; Las Vegas Shooting-Security Guard; North Carolina-Airport Bombing Attempt; Texas Tech-Officer Shot; NFL-National Anthem Standing Rule; West Coast Wildfires-Recovery.

CBS: West Coast Wildfires-Northern California; West Coast Wildfires-Southern California; Weinstein-Sexual Harassment Scandal; Las Vegas Shooting-Security Guard; Trump-Republicans Relations; Syria-Raqa Assault; Puerto Rico Hurricane Recovery; North Carolina-Airport Bombing Attempt; Texas Tech-Officer Shot; West Coast Wildfires-Impacted Family.

NBC: West Coast Wildfires; Weinstein-Sexual Harassment Scandal; Trump-Republicans Relations; North Korea-Cyber Attacks; Opioid Epidemic; NFL-National Anthem Standing Rule; WHO-Child Obesity; UK Royal Family-Baby Number Three; Charitable Marathon Runner.

Network TV At A Glance:

West Coast Wildfires – 18 minutes, 15 seconds

Weinstein-Sexual Harassment Scandal – 8 minutes, 40 seconds

Trump-Republicans Relations – 6 minutes, 5 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: West Coast Wildfires; Las Vegas Shooting Investigation; Weinstein-Sexual Harassment Scandal; Navy-Destroyer Collision Investigation.

CBS: West Coast Wildfires; Weinstein-Sexual Harassment Scandal; North Korea Threats; Magazine Companies-Lacking Sales; Baseball News.

FOX: West Coast Wildfires; Weinstein-Sexual Harassment Scandal; US Team-World Cup.

NPR: West Coast Wildfires; Las Vegas Shooting Investigation; North Korea Threats; Wall Street News.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Leads an expanded bilateral meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada; gives remarks on tax reform in Harrisburg, PA.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — No public schedule announced.

US Senate: 3:30 PM Congressional briefing on 'The Intersection of Trademarks and Brands' – U.S. Chamber of Commerce Global Intellectual Property Center, in collaboration with INTA and the Congressional Trademark Caucus, hosts Congressional briefing on 'The Intersection of Trademarks and Brands: A Dialogue with Famous Brands and Law Enforcement'. Bipartisan Sens. Chris Coons and Chuck Grassley and Reps. John Ratcliffe and Ted Deutch lead the discussion, with other speakers including National Intellectual Property Rights Coordination Center Deputy Director William Ross, U.S. Patent and Trademark Office Commissioner for Trademarks Mary Boney Denison, and NBA Properties Executive Vice President and Deputy General Counsel Ayala Deutch Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, Congressional Meeting Room South, Washington, DC www.uschamber.com <https://twitter.com/USChamber>

On recess until 16 October.

US House: 10:00 AM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on 'how covered entities utilize the 340B Drug Pricing Program' – Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee hearing on 'Examining How Covered Entities Utilize the 340B Drug Pricing Program', with testimony from Northside Hospital Director of Finance and System Controller Shannon Banna; AIDS Resource Center of Wisconsin President and CEO Mike Gifford; Mission Health Systems President and CEO Dr Ronald Paulus; Johns Hopkins Hospital Executive Vice President and COO Charles Reuland; and Carolina Health Centers President and CEO Sue Veer Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Financial Services Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on legislation including 'H.R. 1645, the Fostering Innovation Act of 2017', 'H.R. 1699, the Preserving

Access to Manufactured Housing Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2148, the Clarifying Commercial Real Estate Loans', 'H.R. 2201, the Micro Offering Safe Harbor Act', 'H.R. 3072, the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection Examination and Reporting Threshold Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3299, the Protecting Consumers' Access to Credit Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3312, the Systemic Risk Designation Improvement Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3758, the Senior Safe Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3857, the Protecting Advice for Small Savers Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3903, the Encouraging Public Offerings Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3911, the Risk-Based Credit Examination Act', 'H.R. 3948, the Protection of Source Code Act', 'H.R. 3971, the Community Institution Mortgage Relief Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3972, the Family Office Technical Correction Act of 2017', and 'H.R. 3973, the Market Data Protection Act of 2017' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC
<http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM House Oversight subcommittee hearing on U.S. Govt role in protecting international religious freedom – National Security Subcommittee hearing on 'Review of the U.S. Government's Role in Protecting International Religious Freedom' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2154, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Federal Lands Subcommittee legislative hearing on 'H.R. 219, Swan Lake Hydroelectric Project Boundary Correction Act', 'H.R. 2630, La Paz County Land Conveyance Act', 'H.R. 3373, To amend the District of Columbia Stadium Act of 1957 to extend for an additional 50 years the lease under which the government of the District of Columbia uses the ground under and the parking facilities associated with Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium', 'H.R. 3607, To authorize the Secretary of the Interior to establish fees for medical services provided in units of the National Park System, and for other purposes', with testimony from Republican Rep. Paul Gosar; Southeast Alaska Power Agency CEO Trey Acteson; Events DC President and CEO Gregory O'Dell; National Park Service Acting Deputy Director for Operations Bob Vogel; and La Paz County, AZ, Chairman of the Board of Supervisors D.L. Wilson Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM House Foreign Affairs Committee hearing on Iran – Hearing on 'Confronting the Full Range of Iranian Threats', with testimony from The Washington Institute for Near East Policy Distinguished Visiting Fellow (and former U.S. Ambassador to Iraq, to Turkey, and to Albania) James Jeffrey; Jewish Institute for National Security of America Gemunder Center Iran Task Force Co-Chair (and former U.S. European Command Deputy Commander) Gen. (Ret.) Charles Wald; and Carnegie Endowment for International Peace Geoeconomics and Strategy Program Senior Fellow (and former Vice President's National Security Adviser / former State Department Director of Policy Planning) Jake Sullivan Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

10:00 AM House Infrastructure subcommittee hearing on highways and transit stakeholders' perspectives – Highways and Transit Subcommittee hearing on 'Building a 21st Century Infrastructure for America: Highways and Transit Stakeholders' Perspectives', with testimony from Missouri Department of Transportation Director Patrick McKenna (on behalf of American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials); Granite Construction President and CEO James Roberts (on behalf of Transportation Construction Coalition); North America's Building Trades Unions Secretary-Treasurer Brent Booker; Associated Industries of Missouri President and CEO Ray McCarty (on behalf of National Association of Manufacturers); and Sound Transit CEO Peter Rogoff Location: Rm 2167, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://transportation.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/Transport>

10:00 AM CFTC Chairman Giancarlo testifies to House Agriculture Committee on 2017 agenda – Hearing on 'Examining the 2017 Agenda for the Commodity Futures Trading Commission', with testimony from CFTC Chairman J. Christopher Giancarlo Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1300, Washington, DC <http://agriculture.house.gov/>

10:00 AM House Technology subcommittees joint hearing on undercover GAO review of NIST security vulnerabilities – Oversight Subcommittee and Research and Technology Subcommittee joint hearing on 'NIST's Physical Security Vulnerabilities: A GAO Undercover Review', with testimony from Deputy Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Administration Lisa Casias; National Institute of Standards and Technology Acting Director Dr Kent Rochford; and Government Accountability Office Forensic Audits & Investigative Service Director of Audit Services Seto Bagdoyan Location: Rm 2318, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:15 AM House Dems call for removal of 'job outsourcing provisions' within NAFTA – Democratic Reps. Rosa DeLauro, Marcy Kaptur, Keith Ellison, and Debbie Dingell call for Investor-

State Dispute Settlement rules be eliminated from the North American Free Trade Agreement during renegotiation, via press conference. The lawmakers say ISDS 'makes it less risky for big corporations to outsource good paying American jobs' Location: House Triangle, Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/delauro/> <https://twitter.com/rosadelauro>

10:30 AM Hearing on 'Transforming GPO for the 21st Century and Beyond: Part 4' Location: Rm 1310, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://cha.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAdmnGOP>

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee latest hearing on the Paperwork Reduction Act – Hearing on 'Evaluating the Paperwork Reduction Act Part II: Are Burdens Being Reduced?', with testimony from Environmental Protection Agency Acting Assistant Administrator and Acting CIO Dr Steven Fine; U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Deputy Director for Policy Stephen Guertin; Department of Labor CIO Gundeep Ahluwalia; and Food and Drug Administration CIO Todd Simpson Location: Rm 2360, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

12:00 PM House expected to begin debate on whistleblower protection bill – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include beginning consideration of 'S. 585 – Dr. Chris Kirkpatrick Whistleblower Protection Act of 2017', plus consideration of 'H.R. 2105 – NIST Small Business Cybersecurity Act of 2017', as amended, 'H.R. 2763 – The Small Business Innovation Research and Small Business Technology Transfer Improvements Act of 2017', as amended, 'S. 190 – Power And Security Systems (PASS) Act', 'S. 920 – National Clinical Care Commission Act', 'H.R. 378 – Bonuses for Cost-Cutters Act of 2017', as amended, 'H.R. 2196 – To amend title 5, United States Code, to allow whistleblowers to disclose information to certain recipients', 'H.R. 2229 – All Circuit Review Act', 'H.R. 2989 – Frederick Douglass Bicentennial Commission Act', as amended, 'H.R. 3031 – TSP Modernization Act of 2017', as amended, and 'H.R. 3243 – FITARA Enhancement Act of 2017' under suspension of the rules Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

2:00 PM House Veterans' Affairs subcommittee legislative hearing – Economic Opportunity Subcommittee legislative hearing, on legislation including a draft bill entitled 'To amend title 38, United States Code, to eliminate the applicability of certain provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act to housing and business loan programs of the Department of Veterans Affairs', a draft bill entitled 'To amend title 38, United States Code, to make certain improvements to the use of educational assistance provided by the Department of Veterans Affairs for flight training programs', a draft bill entitled 'To authorize the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to make grants to eligible organization for the provision of transition assistance to members of the Armed Forces recently separated from active duty service', and a draft bill entitled 'To amend title 38, United States Code, to provide for the designation of State approving agencies for multi-State apprenticeship programs for purposes of the educational assistance programs of the Department of Veterans Affairs' Location: Cannon House Office Building, Rm 334, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

2:00 PM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Energy and Mineral Resources Subcommittee legislative hearing on a discussion draft of 'H.R. XXXX, Accessing Strategic Resources Offshore Act' ('ASTRO Act'), with testimony from Van Ness Feldman Senior Policy Advisor Mary Landrieu; South Carolina State Sen. Stephen Goldfinch; American Petroleum Institute Director of Upstream and Industry Operations Erik Milito; and The Bromwich Group founder and Managing Principal Michael Bromwich Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

2:00 PM Trade Subcommittee hearing on 'Opportunities to Expand U.S. Trade Relationships in the Asia-Pacific Region' Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1100, Washington, DC <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Lebanon – Middle East and North Africa Subcommittee hearing on 'U.S. Policy Toward Lebanon', with testimony from Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs Michael Ratney; and USAID Acting Deputy Assistant Administrator for the Middle East Jeanne Pryor Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on State Department / USAID budget for Africa – Africa, Global Health, Global Human Rights, and International Organizations Subcommittee hearing on 'The State Department and USAID FY 2018 Africa Budget', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Donald Yamamoto; and USAID Acting Assistant Administrator for Africa Cheryl Anderson Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2200, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HFACRepublicans>

2:00 PM Government Operations Subcommittee hearing on 'Security Clearance Investigation Challenges and Reforms' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2154, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

2:00 PM House Commerce subcommittee markup hearing – Communications and Technology Subcommittee markup hearing on 'H.R.XXX, a bill to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to reauthorize appropriations for the Federal Communications Commission, to provide for certain procedural changes to the rules of the Commission to maximize opportunities for public participation and efficient decisionmaking, and for other purposes' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

3:30 PM Congressional briefing on 'The Intersection of Trademarks and Brands' – U.S. Chamber of Commerce Global Intellectual Property Center, in collaboration with INTA and the Congressional Trademark Caucus, hosts Congressional briefing on 'The Intersection of Trademarks and Brands: A Dialogue with Famous Brands and Law Enforcement'. Bipartisan Sens. Chris Coons and Chuck Grassley and Reps. John Ratcliffe and Ted Deutch lead the discussion, with other speakers including National Intellectual Property Rights Coordination Center Deputy Director William Ross, U.S. Patent and Trademark Office Commissioner for Trademarks Mary Boney Denison, and NBA Properties Executive Vice President and Deputy General Counsel Ayala Deutch Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, Congressional Meeting Room South, Washington, DC www.uschamber.com <https://twitter.com/USChamber>

4:00 PM House Natural Resources Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H.R. 3990, National Monument Creation and Protection Act' and 'H. Res. 555, Of inquiry requesting the President and directing the Secretary of the Interior to transmit, respectively, certain documents and other information to the House of Representatives relating to the executive order on the review of designations under the Antiquities Act' Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

Other: 8:15 AM The Hill forum on prospects for tax reform – The Hill hosts 'Cracking the Tax Code: Prospects for Reform' forum, on the latest tax overhaul proposals and their potential impact on taxpayers, the economy, and beyond, with speakers including Council of Economic Advisers Chairman Kevin Hassett, Democratic Rep. Richard Neal, Republican Rep. Peter Roskam, U.S. Chamber of Commerce Vice President for Tax Policy and Chief Tax Counsel Caroline Harris, Small Business & Entrepreneurship Council President and CEO Karen Kerrigan, EY Americas Tax Policy Leader and partner Cathy Koch, and Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget President Maya MacGuineas Location: Newseum, 555 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC thehill.com <https://twitter.com/TheHillEvents> #TaxRateTalk

8:30 AM G24 Deputies Meeting – G24 Deputies Meeting, ahead of tomorrow's G24 Ministerial Meeting Location: Washington, DC <http://www.g24.org>

8:30 AM Bipartisan Reps. Don Bacon and Rick Larsen speak on U.S. defense needs – Republican Rep. Don Bacon and Democratic Rep. Rick Larsen speak at Brookings Institution Foreign Policy program discussion on U.S. defense needs and priorities Location: Johns Hopkins University SAIS, 1740 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.brookings.edu> <https://twitter.com/BrookingsInst>

9:00 AM CSIS and the Canadian Govt host symposium on the Multilateral Development Bank systems – 'Towards a Shareholder Consensus on the MDB System' Center for Strategic and International Studies symposium, hosted with the Canadian Govt, with panel discussions on optimizing the financials of the Multilateral Development Bank systems and improving development outcomes as a system. Speakers include Canadian Finance Minister Bill Morneau, African Development Bank Chief Risk Officer Tim Turner, Center for Global Development Senior Fellow and President Emeritus Nancy Birdsall, former U.S. Executive Director to the World Bank Sara Aviel, European Bank for Reconstruction and Development Chief Evaluator Joe Eichenburger, Canadian Deputy International Development Minister Diane Jacovella, and World Bank Vice President for Operations Policy and Country Services Manuela Ferro Location: Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1616 Rhode Island Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

10:00 AM Dem Rep. Richard Neal keynotes BPC discussion on retirement policy – 'An Issue for All Ages: Retirement in America' Bipartisan Policy Center discussion, on where retirement policy stands and where it is headed, with keynote from Democratic Rep. Richard Neal and panel discussion with former Public Trustees of the Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds Charles Blahous III and Robert Resichauer, State Street Global Advisors President and CEO Ronald O'Hanley, Young Invincibles Director of Regional Strategy Eve Rips, and UnidosUS Office of Research, Advocacy and Legislation Vice President Eric Rodriguez Location: Bipartisan Policy

Center, 1225 I St NW, Washington, DC www.bipartisanpolicy.org
https://twitter.com/BPC_Bipartisan

10:30 AM Pakistani interior minister speaks at SAIS – Pakistani Federal Minister for Interior Ahsan Iqbal speaks on ‘Pakistan’s Efforts in Internal and Regional Security’ at SAIS Dean’s Forum
Location: SAIS, 1619 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.sais-jhu.edu>
<https://twitter.com/SAISHopkins>

11:30 AM GOP Rep. Patrick McHenry speaks at FSR roundtable on tax reform – Financial Services Roundtable hosts ‘America’s Tax Reform Opportunity – A CEO Conversation on Igniting the Economy’, with Republican Rep. Patrick McHenry, American Action Forum President Doug Holtz-Eakin, Business Roundtable President and CEO Joshua Bolten, and Financial Services Roundtable President and CEO Tim Pawlenty
Location: Financial Services Roundtable, 600 13th St NW, Washington, DC www.fsround.org <https://twitter.com/fsroundtable>

1:30 PM Dem Rep. Bill Pascrell discusses impact of GOP tax plan on small businesses – Democratic Rep. Bill Pascrell discusses how the Republican tax plan does ‘very little for the vast majority of small businesses’, via press call with Main Street Alliance Legislative Policy Director Sapna Mehta, Center for American Progress Action Fund Senior Director of Tax Policy Alexandra Thornton and Foley-Waite Associates Owner (Bloomfield, NJ) Kelly Conklin
Location: TBD
www.americanprogressaction.org <https://twitter.com/CAPaction>

5:30 PM World Bank President Kim and IMF Managing Director Lagarde speak at Civil Society Townhall – World Bank President Jim Yong Kim and International Monetary Fund Managing Director Christine Lagarde speak at a Civil Society Townhall meeting ahead of this weekend’s IMF / World Bank Annual Meetings
Location: The World Bank, 1818 H St NW, Washington, DC www.worldbank.org <https://twitter.com/WorldBank>

7:00 PM Congressional Football Game – Congressional Football Game, with members of Congress and NFL legends facing the U.S. Capitol Police, with proceeds benefiting the United States Capitol Police Memorial Fund, Our Military Kids and A Advantage 4 Kids. Participating lawmakers including bipartisan Reps. Pete Aguilar, Don Bacon, Nanette Barragan, Jack Bergman, Mike Bishop, Mike Bost, James Comer, Rick Crawford, Carlos Curbelo, Rodney Davis, Jeff Denham, Chuck Fleischmann, Richard Hudson, Evan Jenkins, Joe Kennedy, Roger Marshall, Martha McSally, Alex Mooney, Markwayne Mullin, Jimmy Panetta, Tom Reed, Cedric Richmond, Pete Sessions, David Valadao, Marc Veasey, Mark Walker, Tim Walz and Bruce Westerman * Prior to the game, the NFL host a Play Football Clinic for area youth, including the Boys and Girls Club of Greater Washington, the DC Department of Parks and Recreation and students who attend Gallaudet University’s elementary and middle schools (5:45 PM EDT)
Location: Gallaudet University, Hotchkiss Field, 800 Florida Ave NE, Washington, DC congressionalfootballgame.com
<https://twitter.com/nfl>

Fortune Most Powerful Women Summit concludes – Fortune Most Powerful Women Summit – ‘premiere gathering of women leaders in business, govt, academia, philanthropy, and the arts’. Speakers today include White House Counselor to the President Kellyanne Conway
Location: Mandarin Oriental, Washington DC, 1330 Maryland Avenue Southwest, Washington, DC
<http://www.fortuneconferences.com/> <https://twitter.com/FortuneMPW>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: [Referring to President Trump’s comment that he would compare his IQ with Secretary of State Rex Tillerson] “No intelligent person would get into an IQ contest with his own Secretary of State, right? Just that rules you out right there. ... I guarantee the next day, Kellyanne Conway would be saying that the lower the number, the better the score.”

Stephen Colbert: [Referring to Sen. Bob Corker’s interview with New York Times] “All this time, we’ve been worried the next war would be caused by artificial intelligence. Turns out the real danger is natural stupidity.”

James Corden: [Referring to President Trump’s tweet calling Sen. Bob Corker ‘Little Bob’] “So Donny made fun of little Bobby for being short. If you’re just joining us, no, I’m not reporting things my six-year-old saw on the playground today. I’m sharing news from the White House.”

James Corden: “Let’s face it, once a grown man challenges another grown man to a head-tohead IQ test, we don't really need to see the results of the IQ test. They're both idiots."

Jimmy Fallon: "President Trump is back to golfing. And he played with Lindsey Graham yesterday and said that it was wet and windy. Luckily, some people from Puerto Rico came and threw their paper towels at him."

Jimmy Fallon: "Meanwhile, I read that the US is suspending visa applications from Turkey. Trump was like, 'Don't worry, we'll have them back for Thanksgiving.'"

Seth Meyers: "The New Yorker today released an audio of fired Hollywood movie producer Harvey Weinstein begging a model to come into his room to watch him shower. And by the looks of him, I'm guessing that shower never happened. I mean, the rest of us need one."

Seth Meyers: "House Speaker Paul Ryan will visit Puerto Rico this Friday. Wow. First Trump gave them paper towels, now he's giving them a wet blanket."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, October 18, 2017
Date: Wednesday, October 18, 2017 7:06:38 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 18, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- NBC News: GOP Lawmakers Open Door To Arctic Drilling.
- U.S. News & World Report: Alaska Native Leader Nominated For Indian Affairs Post.
- Reuters: U.S. Congressman Seeks Information On Interior Dept. Coal Study Funds.
- New York Times: Drilling Near Dinosaur National Monument Draws Criticism.
- Washington Examiner: Former National Parks Employees Bash Zinke Monument Review.
- Washington Post: The Energy 202: This Hunter Helped Zinke Get His Job. Now He Says Zinke Is Putting "Our Public Lands At Risk."
- Library Wins Award And Attracts Scholars.

- Courthouse News: California, New Mexico Challenge White House Favors To Oil, Gas & Coal.
- Law360: Interior Dept. Moves For Quick Win In Canceled Lease Suit.
- U.S. News & World Report: Idaho Wary Of Obama 'Leftovers' Working On Sage Grouse Plan.
- Denver Post: Colorado Ranked Best For Outdoor Recreation, Energy, Public Lands.
- Billings (MT) Gazette: Gazette Opinion: It May Be A Flag, But Not One We'll Salute.
- Elko (NV) Daily Free Press: Commentary: Zinke Taking First Step To Reduce Fires.
- High Country (CO) News: An 'Ill-conceived' Road Through Alaskan Wilderness.
- Inland Valley (CA) Daily Bulletin: Together We Can Protect Our Cherished National Parks.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Interior Dept., Warm Springs Tribes In Land Buy-back Program.
- Federal Agency Backs Montana Tribe's Ouster Of Its President.
- 10th Circ. Won't Revisit Osage Nation Wind Farm Lease Case.

Bureau Of Land Management

- E&E Publishing: Interior Clears Calif. Project With Friends In High Places.
- U.S. News & World Report: Public, Private Land Boundaries Blur In Rural Central Ore.
- Salem (OR) Capital Press: BLM Experiments With 'Flexible' Grazing Permits.
- Salem (OR) Capital Press: Oregon Ranchers Petition For Supreme Court Review.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Folsom Auxiliary Spillway Is Complete.
- Brown Administration Says It Will Consider One-tunnel Delta Project.
- Etna High Students Assist With Weather Balloon Launch.
- Legislation Aimed At Saving Snake River Dams Is Sound.

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

- Gulf Of Mexico Oil Spill Triggers BSEE Panel Investigation.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Missoulian (MT): Grizzly Advocates Can't Agree On What's Best For The Bear.
- Miami Herald: Neighbors File Lawsuit To Stop Walmart In Endangered Pine Rockland.
- Victoria (TX) Advocate: Wells Important To Endangered Species To Be Repaired.
- Citrus County (FL) Chronicle: Shatz Saga Ends With Public Win.

National Park Service

- U.S. News & World Report: Crew Completes Stabilization Efforts On Montana Dormitory.
- U.S. News & World Report: National Park In North Dakota To Reduce Bison Herd.
- U.S. News & World Report: 7 Historic Tlingit Pieces Returned To Southeast Alaska.
- Saratogian (NY): Groundbreaking Held For Surrender At Saratoga Project.
- KTLA-TV Los Angeles: In First, Mountain Lion P-55 Crosses Back Over 101 Freeway To Return To Santa Monica Mountains.
- West Plains (MO) Daily Quill: MSU-WP Receives $200,000 Grant For New Amphitheater.
- New London (CT) Day: Hodges Square Listed On National Register Of Historic Places.
- Knoxville (TN) News Sentinel: National Park Service Legacy Act Addresses Underfunding.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Reuters: U.S. Official Says Not Ruling Out Eventual Direct Talks With North Korea.

US Geological Survey

- U.S. News & World Report: Agency Urges Committee To Properly Fund Stream Gauges.
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- ABC: Trump Open To Senate Deal On ACA Subsidies, But GOP Noncommittal.
- Associated Press: Trump Calls For "Massive Tax Relief" In Heritage Foundation Speech.
- ABC: Judge Blocks Trump's Latest Travel Ban.
- Roll Call: Bipartisan House Climate Solutions Caucus Gains Influence.
- Washington Examiner: Appeals Court Urged To Rule On Obama-Era Climate Rules By States, Environmental Groups.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Mr Trump Outdoes Himself In Picking A Conflicted Regulator."
- Washington Post.
 - "Janet Yellen Deserves A Second Term As Fed Chair."
 - "The Hope For Change In Venezuela Suffers A Crushing Blow."
 - "Saying Farewell To A Local Icon Of National Renown."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "The Realtors Take A Tax Hostage."
 - "Jerry Brown's Title IX Veto."
 - "Prosecutorial Impunity."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

GOP Lawmakers Open Door To Arctic Drilling.

NBC News (10/17, Seitz-Wald) reports that the Senate budget bill contains a provision that could allow drilling in Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. Environmentalists are especially concerned because the measure is part of a filibuster-proof legislative process that Republican lawmakers hope to use to pass tax reform. Sen. Lisa Murkowski said, "This provides an excellent opportunity for our committee to raise $1 billion in federal revenues while creating jobs and strengthening our nation's long-term energy security."

Reuters (10/17, Gardner) reports Senate Democrats promised to fight the measure, saying it would destroy a pristine wilderness. Sen. Edward Markey said, "This Republican budget scam to hand over the wildest place left in America to Big Oil should be removed from the budget and put on ice." Democrats are hoping Republican Sens. John McCain and Susan Collins will support the effort to block drilling.

The Hill (10/17, Cama) reports the Senate Democrats are planning an amendment to prevent the GOP from using the budget process to allow ANWR drilling. Markey said, "We're going to work together with our colleagues to determine just the right moment in this budgetary process to make this amendment. ... But we are going to do so, and we are reaching out to Republicans to try to make this as bipartisan as we can. It should be a bipartisan issue." Sen. Maria Cantwell said, "It tells you something that this idea does not stand on its own. It tells you that every time it has to be paired with something else as almost a sneak attack, you have to vote for this because of these other issues."

The AP (10/17, Daly), Bloomberg News (10/18, Natter, Dlouhy), the Washington \(DC\) Examiner (10/17, Siegel), and Hull \(MA\) Times (10/17, Norton) also provide coverage.

Protect Alaska's Last Great Wilderness From Oil Drilling. In an op-ed for the New York Times (10/18, Robards, Schaller), Martin Robards, regional director for the Arctic Beringia program at the Wildlife Conservation Society, and George Schaller, a senior conservationist at W.C.S. and vice president of Panthera, oppose drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. They assert that "the Arctic refuge must continue to be preserved as a symbol of America's natural heritage." The authors urge Congress to "stop its headlong rush to open up the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil and gas exploration and extraction."

Alaska Native Leader Nominated For Indian Affairs Post.

The AP (10/17) reports that "federal officials say Arctic Slope Regional Corp. official Tara Sweeney has been nominated by President Donald Trump to be the next assistant Indian Affairs secretary." Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke announced the nomination Tuesday. Sweeney, executive vice president for external affairs for the regional Native corporation, "says would strive to develop strong relationships with tribes and 'create a more effective voice' for them."

The Alaska Dispatch News (10/17, Demer, Martinson) reports that "the announcement about Sweeney came on the eve of the Alaska Federation of Natives' annual convention in Anchorage, the biggest representative gathering of Native people." According to the article, "the reaction on Tuesday bordered on ecstatic."

Also reporting are the Alaska Public Radio Network (10/17, Ruskin), Alaska Native News (10/17), the Native American Times (10/17), and Law360 (10/17, Lidgett).

U.S. Congressman Seeks Information On Interior Dept. Coal Study Funds.

Reuters (10/17, Flitter) reports that Rep. Raul Grijalva is asking the Interior Department "to explain what happened to $400,000 officials there said they were withholding from a study about the health impacts of coal mining," according to a letter to the agency released to the public on Tuesday. In his letter, Grijalva "said time had already run out for the department to spend the money, which it received during the 2016 fiscal year as a grant from the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine and was obligated to spend within two years." Grijalva "said it appeared the department had decided not to spend it on the coal mining study 'because of fears that it would conclusively show that mountaintop removal coal mining is a serious threat to the health of people living in Appalachia.'" In a statement, Heather Swift, an Interior Department spokeswoman, "said agency began reviewing all of its grants and partnerships worth more than $100,000, 'in order to ensure the department is using tax dollars in a way that advances the department's mission and fulfills the roles mandated by Congress.'" Swift "said the grant for the study was put on hold as part of the review."

Drilling Near Dinosaur National Monument Draws Criticism.

The New York Times (10/18, Nash) reports that critics say that possible new drilling leases near Dinosaur National Monument is "emblematic of changes that will affect a wide range of other parks and monuments, as well as those who visit them." The Bureau of Land Management has "announced that in December it will auction gas and oil drilling rights on 94,000 acres, or 146 square miles, of land, some of it near the park's entrance road." The BLM "said it would take steps to minimize visibility, including light shields, noise mufflers and 'placement of exhaust systems to direct noise away from noise sensitive areas' and 'avoiding unnecessary flaring of gas.'" The article notes that "more gas and oil drilling is part of the Trump administration's announced goals of what the president has referred to as 'energy dominance.'"

Former National Parks Employees Bash Zinke Monument Review.

The Washington Examiner (10/17, Siciliano, Seigel) reports that "more than 350 former National Park Service employees sent a letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke Tuesday opposing his review of national monuments." Members of the Coalition to Protect America's National Parks wrote to Zinke, "Your approach to the national monuments under review is antithetical to Teddy Roosevelt's conservation legacy and what President Roosevelt believed should be done for present and future generations."

The Energy 202: This Hunter Helped Zinke Get His Job. Now He Says Zinke Is Putting "Our Public Lands At Risk."

The Washington Post (10/17, Grandoni) reports that Backcountry Hunters & Anglers Executive Director Land Tawney backed fellow Montanan Ryan Zinke's nomination to lead the Interior Department, but is now raising concerns about Zinke's stance on public lands and his "approach to national monuments." Tawney "still has kind words for Zinke, calling him 'a proven leader.'" But "as to the question of whether he still regards him as an ally, Tawney split the difference." He said, "What we've always done is we've applauded [Zinke] for the things that we think he's doing that are beneficial to hunters and anglers, then we've held him accountable on the other end of that."

Library Wins Award And Attracts Scholars.

The E&E (10/17) reports that the Government Publishing Office has named the Interior Department's newly refurbished library the 2017 "Library of the Year" for the Federal Depository Library Program. The article notes that "the award is the first time a government department has been singled out, among the roughly 1,150 federal depository libraries nationwide." The award arrives "as the facility formally reopened Oct. 4 following a 3 ½-year building renovation."

California, New Mexico Challenge White House Favors To Oil, Gas & Coal.

Courthouse News (10/17, Iovino) reports that “on the heels of two victories over efforts to roll back Obama-era regulations, California and New Mexico launched a fresh challenge Tuesday against the Trump administration’s repeal of higher royalty payments to states for oil, gas and coal leases on public lands.” On Oct. 5, U.S. Magistrate Judge Elizabeth Laporte “overturned a rule that delayed an emissions-reducing, waste-prevention regulation for oil and gas wells on federal land,” and in August, Laporte “found the Interior Department unlawfully postponed another rule that boosted royalty payments to states for fossil fuels extracted on federal and Indian lands.” In their lawsuit filed Tuesday, California and New Mexico “claim the Interior Department’s latest repeal of the royalties rule was arbitrary and capricious because the agency ‘failed to supply a reasoned basis’ for its decision.”

Interior Dept. Moves For Quick Win In Canceled Lease Suit.

Law360 (10/17, Lidgett) reports that the Interior Department on Monday “moved for a quick win in a suit accusing it of arbitrarily canceling a mineral lease in northwestern Montana, telling a D.C. federal judge that it had actually given ample notice before terminating the lease.” The federal government “filed a cross-motion for summary judgment in a suit from W.A. Moncrief, a family-owned oil and gas business based in Texas, which challenged the ‘wrongful cancellation’ of a 35-year-old lease in an area of Lewis and Clark National Forest.”

Idaho Wary Of Obama ‘Leftovers’ Working On Sage Grouse Plan.

The AP (10/17, Ridler) reports that “Idaho has to be vigilant monitoring the federal government’s creation of a new sage grouse conservation plan because of federal employees who worked on the previous plan that’s too restrictive, Gov. C.L. ‘Butch’ Otter said.” At an Idaho Land Board meeting Tuesday, Otter told state workers, “You have to know and you have to realize that there are a lot of prior administration folks still in those bureaus. We have to recognize that we also have a lot of leftovers that were designers of the sage brush focal areas.”

Colorado Ranked Best For Outdoor Recreation, Energy, Public Lands.

The Denver Post (10/17, Blevins) reports that the Center for Western Priorities ranked Colorado as the best at protecting and enhancing the state’s public lands. Fourteen factors were considered as Colorado beat Montana, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, Nevada, Arizona, and Idaho regarding “policies governing outdoor recreation, energy development and access to public lands.” Colorado ranked second for energy development and outdoor recreation.

Gazette Opinion: It May Be A Flag, But Not One We’ll Salute.

In an editorial, the Billings \(MT\) Gazette (10/17) criticizes Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke for ordering that the Department of the Interior Secretary flag “be flown above the Interior’s office building when he is there, and taken down when he leaves.” The paper asserts that “the gesture isn’t symbolic, as Zinke’s staff would have you believe, it’s exactly what’s wrong with government.” It argues that “having the heraldry of a flag announcing that Zinke is in the building is an elitism that seems more fit for royalty and demonstrates that Zinke believes a certain amount of genuflection is order.” The paper also takes issue that Zinke’s personalized commemorative coins that he hands out to staff and visitors. It says that “these actions are pompous and a betrayal of his Montana roots.”

Commentary: Zinke Taking First Step To Reduce Fires.

In an op-ed for the Elko \(NV\) Daily Free Press (10/17, Hartman), attorney Jim Hartman writes that “while climatological factors like drought, heat and wind are primary factors in the wildfires currently raging throughout Northern California, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke last month took important steps to begin reversing nearly three decades of federal neglect in prevention of forest wildfires.” Zinke “issued a memo instructing his land managers and park superintendents to use their ‘full authority’ to begin clearing the dead and dying trees and vegetation that clog federal lands and are a tinderbox for Western wildfires.” Hartman says that “beyond Zinke’s memo, Congress will need to pass legislation to make it easier to thin excess timber out of forests and to salvage fire-killed timber while it still has value.”

The piece also appears at the Gardnerville \(NV\) Record Courier (10/17, Hartman).

An ‘Ill-conceived’ Road Through Alaskan Wilderness.

In a piece for the High Country \(CO\) News (10/17, Whitehill), Barry Whitehill, a board member for the Alaska chapter of Backcountry Hunters & Anglers, opposes a road through the Izembek National Wildlife Refuge, which “offers waterfowl and brown bear hunting that are unsurpassed.” He argues that the refuge is “rich with sensitive wildlife that should remain protected.” He concludes that “with the science saying that no road should be built through the Izembek Refuge, it’s time for Alaska to agree.”

Together We Can Protect Our Cherished National Parks.

In an op-ed for the Inland Valley \(CA\) Daily Bulletin (10/17, Torres), Rep. Norma Torres pledges “to do everything I can to uphold national monument designations and make sure local communities and economies are not hurt by the administration’s proposed changes.” Torres wants “to increase Latino participation in the national parks and ensure that monuments inspired by Latino leaders like César E. Chávez are protected, so future generations of Americans can visit them and become inspired by their meaning.” Torres concludes that her “goal is to make sure all Americans, no matter their religion, race or sexual orientation feel welcome and have access to our national parks and monuments, and that the parks reflect the history, culture and heritage of our great country.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Interior Dept., Warm Springs Tribes In Land Buy-back Program.

KTVZ-TV Bend, OR (10/17) reports that acting Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs John Tahsuda “announced Tuesday that the Interior Department has signed an agreement with the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon to guide implementation of the Land Buy-Back Program for Tribal Nations.” Tahsuda said, “Following the department’s announcement of its revised strategy to maximize the consolidation of fractional interests, I am pleased to announce the agreement with the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs to implement the Buy-Back Program.”

Federal Agency Backs Montana Tribe’s Ouster Of Its President.

The AP (10/17) reports that the Bureau of Indian Affairs “says officials with a Montana Indian tribe acted within their authority when they removed the tribe’s president from office for reportedly neglecting his duties.” The BIA “declared its backing for the decision to remove President Jace Killsback in a letter to the Northern Cheyenne Tribal Council.” The council “said in a statement that the BIA decision ‘removes any doubt’ that its members were within their rights to remove Killsback.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Billings \(MT\) Gazette (10/17, Wilson) and KTVQ-TV Billings, MT (10/17, Goare).

10th Circ. Won’t Revisit Osage Nation Wind Farm Lease Case.

Law360 (10/17, Phillis) reports that “the Tenth Circuit on Tuesday declined to revisit its decision that said wind farm developers should have obtained a mineral lease from the Osage Nation along with Bureau of Indian Affairs approval before starting surface construction for an Oklahoma wind farm.” The decision “means that the Tenth Circuit panel’s decision from September in favor of the Osage Nation through the Osage Minerals Council will hold.”

Bureau Of Land Management

Interior Clears Calif. Project With Friends In High Places.

E&E Publishing (10/17, Jacobs, Doyle) reports that the Trump Administration has “cleared the way for a controversial project that would suck groundwater from under Southern California’s Mojave Desert and sell it to water providers.” On Friday, the Bureau of Land Management “wrote that Cadiz Inc.’s plan to build a 43-mile pipeline along a railroad right of way did not require the agency’s approval.” BLM acting Director Michael Nedd “wrote that the agency’s new legal opinion concludes that the owner of the right of way, the Arizona and California Railroad, may lease part of it for the pipeline.”

Additional coverage was provided by the High Country \(CO\) News (10/17, Shogren).

Public, Private Land Boundaries Blur In Rural Central Ore.

U.S. News & World Report (10/17, Hamway) reports that in rural central Oregon, "the lines between public and private property" sometimes "get blurred." Incursions, "known as trespasses," are "common in this part of eastern Central Oregon, where even surveyors with the BLM aren't always entirely sure where public land ends and private property begins." Some cases grab "local headlines," but "in most cases of trespass, the infraction goes unnoticed for long periods of time, and unattended to for even longer."

BLM Experiments With 'Flexible' Grazing Permits.

The Salem \(OR\) Capital Press (10/17, O'Connell) reports that Mike Courtney, manager for the Bureau of Land Management's Twin Falls District, "may finally get the chance to implement a more common-sense grazing approach to controlling weeds and minimizing the wildfire risk in the Berger Resource Conservation Area." Courtney will "apply to include the grazing area south of Buhl in a BLM pilot project, testing a new approach intended to increase flexibility in grazing permits." The BLM is "offering funding for Western states to implement and study about a dozen 'outcome-based grazing' pilot projects, hoping the outcomes will support enacting the philosophy on a much broader scale."

Oregon Ranchers Petition For Supreme Court Review.

The Salem \(OR\) Capital Press (10/17, Perkowski) reports that "an Oregon ranching couple is asking the U.S. Supreme Court to revive their lawsuit against the U.S. Bureau of Land Management over grazing and water rights." A decision by the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals "upheld the dismissal of the case earlier this year, effectively allowing BLM to shirk its obligations, according to Jesse and Pamela White of Malheur County." Lawyers "for the federal government have until Nov. 9 to respond to the White's petition to the Supreme Court."

Bureau Of Reclamation

Folsom Auxiliary Spillway Is Complete.

The Folsom \(CA\) Telegraph (10/17, Zirin) reports that "after nine years, the completion ceremony for the Folsom Dam Auxiliary Spillway was held Tuesday morning with various representatives and officials who played a large role in its development." The event was hosted by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Sacramento District and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. Rep. Doris Matsui, who "played a major role with the idea of the project," said, "I knew how important it was. I feel like I have been the project manager to a certain degree, but I have to say the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation, as well as all the partners with the state and locals, worked together to make this possible."

Additional coverage was provided by Engineering News-Record (10/17, Aragon).

Brown Administration Says It Will Consider One-tunnel Delta Project.

The Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (10/17, Kasler, Sabalow) reports that the Santa Clara Valley Water District "rejected Gov. Jerry Brown's plan to build twin tunnels beneath the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta but said it would support a smaller, less expensive project. A top state official said the Brown administration is willing to consider such an approach." The board "voted 7-0 to give the Delta plan 'conditional support,' but only if it involves one tunnel instead of two." According to the article, "the board's vote indicated the district would be willing eventually to commit more than $200 million to the project," but "that's well below the $600 million or more in support it had been considering."

Etna High Students Assist With Weather Balloon Launch.

The Siskiyou \(CA\) Daily News (10/17) reports that "students at Etna High School recently had an opportunity to assist National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation personnel with the launch of weather balloon sent up to collect wildfire related data."

Legislation Aimed At Saving Snake River Dams Is Sound.

The Walla Walla \(WA\) Union-Bulletin (10/17) editorializes that the Interior Department "made a wise decision to support the goals of legislation proposed by U.S. Rep. Cathy McMorris Rodgers, R-Spokane, U.S. Rep. Dan Newhouse, R-Sunnyside, and others to protect the four Lower Snake River dams from a federal judge's overzealous ruling." The paper argues: "Allowing a judge's ruling to usurp federal control of the dams is bad public policy. Allowing Congress to establish control and work within the agreed-upon framework makes sense.”

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

Gulf Of Mexico Oil Spill Triggers BSEE Panel Investigation.

World Oil (10/17) reports that a panel investigation was started Monday by BSEE Gulf of Mexico Region Director Lars Herbst following a LLOG Exploration Offshore subsea oil flowline releasing oil into the Gulf of Mexico. Herbst said “BSEE places great emphasis on making certain all oil and gas operations on America’s Outer Continental Shelf are safe.” Herbst also said “this panel investigation is a critical step in ensuring BSEE determines the cause, or causes, of the incident and develops recommendations to prevent similar events from occurring in the future.” The panel consists of incident investigators, inspectors, and engineers.

Newsweek (10/17, Sinclair) also reports.

Fish And Wildlife Service

Grizzly Advocates Can’t Agree On What’s Best For The Bear.

The Missoulian \(MT\) (10/17, Chaney) reports that “with heated exchanges and soft warnings, a roomful of deeply invested wildlife advocates forecast stormy passage of a coming effort to end federal protection of grizzly bears in the northern Rocky Mountains.” The article says that “in a preview of what faces the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee’s Missoula meetings in November and December, an informal gathering on Tuesday debated what remains to be done before those northern continental divide bears reach recovery.” The Northern Continental Divide Ecosystem Subcommittee is scheduled to November 29 in Missoula. According to the article, “its decisions get forwarded on to the full Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee meeting on December 12 and 13, also in Missoula.”

Additional coverage was provided by Montana Public Radio (10/17, Whitney).

Neighbors File Lawsuit To Stop Walmart In Endangered Pine Rockland.

The Miami Herald (10/17, Staletovich) reports that “four years ago when Miami-Dade County took out a newspaper ad to rezone part of the Richmond pine rocklands...it listed special exceptions requested by the developer,” but it didn’t include “a Walmart-anchored shopping center, including an LA Fitness, and 900 apartments.” This week, neighbors sued, “claiming the ‘layman’s’ description in the public notice failed to adequately tell them just what was planned for the 138-acre parcel off Coral Reef Drive — the largest piece of the globally imperiled forest outside Everglades National Park.” In a statement Tuesday, Palm Beach County developer Peter Cummings “said through a spokesman that the project followed all requirements.” The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is “reviewing the habitat conservation plan Cummings submitted and expects to have a decision by year’s end, spokesman Ken Warren said.”

Wells Important To Endangered Species To Be Repaired.

The Victoria \(TX\) Advocate (10/17, Priest) reports that “water wells needed during droughts by endangered whooping cranes will be repaired thanks to a $75,000 grant.” The wells were damaged by Hurricane Harvey. According to Wade Harrell, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Services’ whooping crane recovery coordinator, “the grant comes from the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation and is part of a larger grant given to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to cover Harvey’s damage to its southwest region.”

Shatz Saga Ends With Public Win.

In an editorial, the Citrus County \(FL\) Chronicle (10/17) lauds the transfer of Shatz Island to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to become part of the Crystal River National Wildlife Refuge. The paper says that “the change in ownership greatly increases the chances that the land will be shielded from development for public enjoyment, and citizens should feel privileged to call such a scenic spot their own.” The paper hopes “the USFWS ownership helps Shatz Island become a place the public can enjoy respectfully and legally, a reminder that while development is necessary and unstoppable, preservation is sometimes of greater benefit.”

National Park Service

Crew Completes Stabilization Efforts On Montana Dormitory.

The AP (10/17) reports that “the efforts to stabilize the remains of a historic Montana dormitory that was severely damaged by an Aug. 31 wildfire are done.” According to the article, “a 10-person national park crew was flown from the Sperry Chalet hotel building on Monday after working for two weeks to brace the structure in a race against winter conditions.” The Glacier National Park Conservancy “covered the cost of stabilization efforts by raising $111,200 from private donors.”

National Park In North Dakota To Reduce Bison Herd.

The AP (10/17) reports that Theodore Roosevelt National Park is “reducing the size of its bison herd this week in a move that will benefit several Native American tribes.” A majority of the animals from park will “help supplement tribal herds through the InterTribal Buffalo Council.” According to wildlife biologist Blake McCann, “the reduction roundup is to prevent the bison herds from getting too large to ensure there’s enough available forage for the grazing animals.”

7 Historic Tlingit Pieces Returned To Southeast Alaska.

The AP (10/18) reports that “seven historic Tlingit pieces that were in East Coast museums for decades have been returned to Southeast Alaska.” The relics were brought back to Alaska through the efforts of the Central Council of Tlingit and Haida Indian Tribes of Alaska. According to the article, “they will be stored through the National Park Service, with access being granted to the Tlingit clans.”

Groundbreaking Held For Surrender At Saratoga Project.

Saratogian \(NY\) (10/17, Post) reports that “officials on Tuesday held a ceremonial groundbreaking for a project designed to educate and inspire future generations about the Surrender at Saratoga on Oct. 17, 1777.” According to the article, “plans call for a memorial park at the exact spot, about a mile south of Schuylerville, where British General John Burgoyne turned over his sword to American General Horatio Gates, following the history-changing Battles of Saratoga.” Amy Bracewell, Saratoga National Historical Park superintendent, said, “Our ancestors started something big here. Our work to develop this site will keep the fire of freedom alive for generations to come.”

In First, Mountain Lion P-55 Crosses Back Over 101 Freeway To Return To Santa Monica Mountains.

KTLA-TV Los Angeles (10/17, Pamer) reports that “about 2 1/2 months after he crossed the 101 Freeway for the first time, a young male mountain lion has successfully ventured over those 10 lanes of divided pavement a second time.” The mountain lion, “known as P-55, is believed to have crossed the 101 Freeway last week, according to the National Park Service, which has been studying local cougars for 15 years.” The passage “marked the first time wildlife biologists are aware of a mountain lion crossing the 101 Freeway twice.”

MSU-WP Receives $200,000 Grant For New Amphitheater.

The West Plains \(MO\) Daily Quill (10/17) reports that “Missouri State University-West Plains (MSU-WP) has been awarded a $202,137 grant from the Missouri Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to help fund the construction of an outdoor amphitheater just west of the Smith-London Centennial Bell Tower between Franklin and Pennsylvania avenues.” The article notes that “the 50/50 matching grant is being funded through the Land and Water Conservation Fund (LWCF) administered by the National Park Service (NPS).”

Hodges Square Listed On National Register Of Historic Places.

The New London \(CT\) Day (10/17) reports that the Hodges Square Historic District has been officially listed on the National Register of Historic Places by the National Park Service. The designation was made on Oct. 10.

National Park Service Legacy Act Addresses Underfunding.

In an op-ed for the Knoxville \(TN\) News Sentinel (10/17, Bryant), Michael J. Bryant, chair of the Tennessee Council of Trout Unlimited, writes that his group “recently delivered a letter to the Tennessee congressional delegation in support of the National Park Service Legacy Act.” The chapter is “deeply concerned about the backlog of badly needed repairs in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park and in national parks across the country." The group is urging members of Congress to support the legislation, "which would tackle this chronic underfunding."

In an op-ed for the Bakersfield \(CA\) Californian (10/18, Graber), David Graber, who represents the Coalition to Protect America's National Park, also urges Congress to pass the National Park Legacy Act. He writes that "the bill also will open up opportunities for partnerships between the public and private sectors to bring about needed park repairs. Deferred maintenance of our parks will be properly addressed."

Office Of Insular Affairs

U.S. Official Says Not Ruling Out Eventual Direct Talks With North Korea.

Reuters (10/17, Kelly, Nichols) reports Deputy Secretary of State John Sullivan said Tuesday that the US is not ruling out the eventual possibility of direct talks with North Korea. "Eventually, we don't rule out the possibility of course of direct talks," Sullivan said in Tokyo after talks with his Japanese counterpart. "Our focus is on diplomacy to solve this problem. ... We must, however, with our allies, Japan and South Korea and elsewhere, be prepared for the worst, should diplomacy fail."

US Geological Survey

Agency Urges Committee To Properly Fund Stream Gauges.

The AP (10/17) reports that "members of the Joint Legislative Committee on Flooding have heard warnings that West Virginia needs more comprehensive funding for the stream gauges that help warn residents of impending high waters." West Virginia Conservation Agency Executive Director Brian Farkas "told the committee Monday that several state and federal agencies scramble annually to fund a network of stream gauges." The article notes that "this year's current stream gauge network cost is about $1.8 million, with over three-quarters of funding coming from the U.S. Geological Survey and other federal agencies."

Additional Reading.

- Students From Across Maine Take Part In Science Day In Augusta. Central Maine (10/17, Pafundi).
- Sea Level Rise Summit Draws Big Crowd, Renews Attention To Resiliency. Naples \(FL\) Daily News (10/17, Staats).
- 28 Years After Loma Prieta: Is The Bay Area Ready For 'The Big One'? Huffington Post (10/17, Littman).
- Earthquake: 3.2 Quake Strikes Near Santa Ysabel. Los Angeles Times (10/17, Quakebot).
- Small Earthquake Hits New Hampshire. Boston Globe (10/17, McDonald).
- Small Quake In Northeast Arkansas; No Damage Or Injuries. KATV-TV Little Rock, AR (10/16).
- Get Ready For Earthquake Drills During Great Central U.S. ShakeOut. WKRN-TV Nashville, TN (10/17).
- The Hunt For The Brain-Eating Amoebas Of Yellowstone. Wired (10/18, Simon).

Top National News

Trump Open To Senate Deal On ACA Subsidies, But GOP Noncommittal.

Coverage of the bipartisan deal reached by the leaders of the Senate Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee to extend Affordable Care Act subsidies for two years while giving states greater latitude in permitting bare-bones policies is straightforward, sticking to the basic outline of the deal. Analyses say that prospects are unknown, with Democrats quickly embracing the idea and Republicans remaining noncommittal. President Trump's remarks expressing openness to the plan are portrayed as a reversal from the hard-line stance he had expressed hours earlier.

ABC World News Tonight (10/17, story 2, 2:35, Muir) reported that the President "seem[ed] to reverse course, earlier today calling Obamacare virtually dead after his decision to slash more than $7 billion in subsidies to help working class families. Then, two senators announcing they have a bipartisan fix to save those subsidies for now. And late today, the President says he now supports the idea." ABC's Mary Bruce: "In the Oval Office this morning, President Trump declared [that] Obamacare is on its last leg...but just minutes later, he seemed to back a new bipartisan deal to restore" the subsidies. On NBC Nightly News (10/17, story 2, 0:30, Holt), Peter Alexander reported that Trump has "repeatedly insisted Obamacare is dead, but tonight he appears to be signaling an openness to this deal."

The AP (10/17, Werner, Fram) reports that Senate Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Chairman Lamar Alexander and ranking member Sen. Patty Murray "joined in announcing a plan Tuesday aimed at stabilizing America's health insurance markets in the wake of" Trump's "order to terminate" the subsidies. Trump "spoke approvingly of the deal, but some conservatives denounced it as an insurance company bailout, making its future uncertain."

USA Today (10/17, Berry) reports that the agreement "would involve a two-year extension of federal payments to insurers that Trump halted last week." Alexander said, "This agreement avoids chaos. Over the next two years, I think, Americans won't have to worry about the price of health [insurance] and being able to buy insurance in the counties where they live." The Los Angeles Times (10/17, Mascaro) reports that the plan would allow ACA payments to insurers, and "in return, Congress would make changes to allow states greater ability to waive certain insurer policy requirements to allow for cheaper plans."

The New York Post (10/17, Fredericks) reports Trump said during Rose Garden appearance with Greek Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras, "This is a short-term deal, because we think ultimately block grants going to the states is going to be a very good solution." Reuters (10/17, Abutaleb, Cowan) reports the President "said it would help get Obamacare through a 'very dangerous little period.'" However, USA Today (10/17, Jackson) reports that earlier in the Oval Office, Trump had said, "Obamacare is a disgrace to our nation." Politico (10/17, Haberkorn, Cancryn) says that for the compromise to succeed, Trump "will have to agree to prop up a law he just spent months trying to repeal."

The New York Times (10/17, Kaplan) reports that Alexander said the deal would "give states 'more flexibility in the variety of choices they can give to consumers,' which should appeal to Republican lawmakers." The Wall Street Journal (10/17, A1, Armour, Peterson) reports that the compromise would expand eligibility to the ACA's limits on bare-bones "catastrophic plans" that offer low premiums but high deductibles, something that Republicans have sought. The Washington Post (10/17, A1, Sullivan, Eilperin) reports, "Republican leaders did not immediately endorse the Alexander-Murray framework, raising new questions about whether it would find any traction." Senate Majority Leader McConnell said at his weekly news conference, "We haven't had a chance to think about the way forward yet."

But the Washington Examiner (10/17, King, Leonard) reports that Senate Minority Leader Schumer said the proposal "received 'broad support' during a lunch with Democrats." Politico (10/17, Haberkorn) reports that at that lunch meeting, Sen. Chris Murray "described the agreement as a deal 'in principle' and [said that] Democrats seemed 'receptive.'" Sen. Angus King told CNN's Situation Room (10/17, 6:17 p.m. ET) that the Democrats are making "significant concessions," but said he that would vote in favor of the compromise to keep healthcare premiums from rising drastically. Sen. Edward Markey told CNN's Situation Room (10/17, 5:11 p.m. EDT) that he supported the "wise, sensible, and bipartisan" short-term fix.

Bloomberg News (10/17, Edney, Wasson, Litvan), the Washington Times (10/17, Boyer), and The Hill (10/17, Fabian) have similar reports on the compromise plan.

States, Insurers Scramble To Raise Rates Following Trump's Subsidies Move. Carolyn Johnson writes in the Washington Post (10/17) "Wonkblog" that on Monday, state insurance regulators and insurers "scrambled to raise premiums for insurance plans sold on" ACA exchanges. Some insurers are only now raising prices following Trump's decision to end ACA subsidy payments, but in several states, "insurance companies had already priced in a possible end" of the subsidies "to their rate requests, anticipating President Trump's move."

Trump Calls For "Massive Tax Relief" In Heritage Foundation Speech.

The AP (10/17, Colvin) reports that President Trump "took his tax sales pitch to a conservative think tank Tuesday evening," telling the Heritage Foundation's President's Club that his plan "would be a boon to the economy, boosting growth and jobs." Trump said, "Let's give our country the best Christmas present of all: massive tax relief." Politico (10/17, Cook, Lima) reports that Trump delivered "a speech filled with economic optimism to a receptive audience of donors." Trump said, "Working closely with the Heritage Foundation, Ronald Reagan cut taxes to unleash the economic miracle of the 1980s. You understand that lower taxes mean bigger paychecks, more jobs and stronger growth. At the heart of our plan is a tax cut for everyday working Americans.”

The Washington Examiner (10/17, Lawler) reports that Trump “said he is almost enticed back into the corporate world by his own tax plan.” The Washington Times (10/17, Boyer) reports, “Saying that the plan to cut corporate taxes would result in the lowest rates for small businesses in 80 years, the president said to laughter, ‘It makes me want to immediately go back into business.’” Breitbart (10/17, Spiering) reports that Trump also “celebrated the recent economic high of the stock market, pointing out that it had reached 23,000 for the first time in history.”

W. James Antle III writes in the Washington Examiner (10/17) that “with healthcare stalled indefinitely, despite Trump’s confident predictions they finally have the Senate votes to overhaul Obamacare, getting a tax bill passed ahead of next year’s midterm elections has taken on greater importance.”

WPost Analysis: Tax Code Overhaul Increasingly Unlikely. Tory Newmyer of the Washington Post (10/17) writes that Republicans “are aiming this week to take a significant stride toward their goal of a tax code rewrite,” but that goal “is both shrinking and moving away from them.” The GOP is aiming at “fundamentally remaking the tax system – including a permanent reduction in business tax rates.” But the “dim outlook is only growing dimmer” because the GOP needs to “raise an enormous amount of revenue to pay for those lowered rates, and they don’t have anything approaching a consensus about how to do that.”

Judge Blocks Trump’s Latest Travel Ban.

ABC World News Tonight (10/17, story 6, 0:25, Muir) reported that US District Judge Derrick Watson in Hawaii blocked “President Trump’s latest version of his travel ban” just hours before it was set to take effect. The CBS Evening News (10/17, story 8, 0:25, Mason) said Hawaii had sued over the executive order, “arguing the ban on citizens from Syria, Libya, Iran, Yemen, and Chad is an unlawful attempt to exclude Muslims from the US.” Hawaii did not, however, challenge travel restrictions involving North Korea or Venezuela. The Wall Street Journal (10/17, Kendall) reports the judge issued a nationwide temporary restraining order that stops the Administration from enforcing the ban on people from the six countries.

NBC Nightly News (10/17, story 6, 0:30, Holt) reported the judge who stopped enforcement of the latest order is the same judge who blocked an “earlier version of the travel ban.” NBC added that there’s another challenge pending in Maryland, “and both undoubtedly will ultimately wind up before the Supreme Court.”

The Los Angeles Times (10/17, Kaleem) says that the DOJ, “which has argued that the ban is needed to protect Americans from potential terrorism, is expected to challenge the ruling.” Reuters (10/17, Levine, Torbati) reports the DOJ “called Watson’s ruling ‘incorrect’ and said it would appeal ‘in an expeditious manner.’”

USA Today (10/17, Wolf, Gomez) reports that in a statement, the White House “called Watson’s ruling ‘dangerously flawed’ and a threat to national security,” asserting “the latest version of the travel ban was a carefully constructed measure implemented after a thorough review by the departments of Homeland Security, State, Defense and Justice.” The statement read, “These restrictions are vital to ensuring that foreign nations comply with the minimum security standards required for the integrity of our immigration system and the security of our Nation.” Fox News’ Special Report (10/17) paraphrased White House press secretary Sarah Sanders as saying “the decision undercuts the President’s efforts to keep the American people safe.”

The AP (10/17) says Hawaii had argued “the updated ban is a continuation of President Donald Trump’s ‘promise to exclude Muslims from the United States.’” The Washington Post (10/17, Zapotosky) reports that in his 40-page decision, Watson wrote that the latest ban “suffers from precisely the same maladies as its predecessor: it lacks sufficient findings that the entry of more than 150 million nationals from six specified countries would be ‘detrimental to the interests of the United States.’” Watson also wrote that the executive order “plainly discriminates based on nationality” in contravention of federal law and “the founding principles of this Nation.”

The New York Times (10/17, Yee) quotes Watson as writing, “Professional athletes mirror the federal government in this respect: they operate within a set of rules, and when one among them forsakes those rules in favor of his own, problems ensue.” Politico (10/17, Gerstein) says this line “may be an oblique reference to Trump’s recent criticism of National Football League players for kneeling in protest during the National Anthem.”

The Washington Times (10/17, Dinan) quotes Watson as writing, “Although national security interests are legitimate objectives of the highest order, they cannot justify the public’s harms when the President has wielded his authority unlawfully.”

Bipartisan House Climate Solutions Caucus Gains Influence.

Roll Call (10/17, Nawaguna) reports that the growing House Climate Solutions Caucus demonstrated its effectiveness for the first time when the all but one member of the bloc voted against an effort to strip the 2018 defense spending bill of its requirement to plan for global warming. “We know for sure that we can block bad policy,” said Rep. Carlos Curbelo (R), “and that’s significant.” Although only three Republican members of the caucus signed an Oct. 13 letter affirming the group’s support for the Clean Power Plan, caucus members “are confident the group will grow to a point where it can make legislative changes.” Right now Rep. Curbelo said he views the group’s role as a “blocking minority within the majority,” and moving forward, “he wants the coalition to be an ‘ideas factory.’”

Republican Losses In 2018 Could Cripple Climate Solutions Caucus. E&E Daily (10/17) reports that Democrats are singling out 79 Republican-head seats to target in 2018 elections, 24 of whom are GOP members of the Climate Solutions Caucus. If the Democrats succeed in taking back the House, it could “come at the cost of the bipartisan Climate Solutions Caucus,” which “can only add members in bipartisan pairs, so a Republican loss drops a Democrat from the body.”

Appeals Court Urged To Rule On Obama-Era Climate Rules By States, Environmental Groups.

The Washington Examiner (10/17, Siciliano) reports “environmental groups and aligned states” on Tuesday urged the DC Circuit Court of Appeals “to issue its long-awaited decision on the Clean Power Plan and reject the Trump administration’s arguments for holding its ruling in permanent suspension after proposing to repeal the centerpiece of the Obama administration’s climate agenda last week.” The coalition said in a brief filed with the court, “This court should deny respondent Environmental Protection Agency’s latest request for indefinite abeyance. ... Because EPA has not established the necessary grounds for the requested abeyance and because the case involves a time-sensitive statutory obligation to protect the public health and welfare from grave threats, the court should decide this fully briefed and argued case on the merits.”

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

“Mr Trump Outdoes Himself In Picking A Conflicted Regulator.” A New York Times (10/17) editorial says President Trump has “made a habit of filling important jobs with people dedicated to undermining the laws they’re supposed to administer while pampering the industries they’re supposed to regulate,” and “yet no nomination has been as brazen, as dangerous to public health and as deserving of Senate rejection as that of Michael Dourson to run the EPA office in charge of reviewing chemicals used in agriculture, industry and household products.” Dourson’s nomination is “enthusiastically endorsed by the chemical industry,” but “horrifies environmental groups, public health advocates, firefighters and scientists.” The Times says it “would take just a few Republicans to block the nomination,” and urges senators to “think hard about the impact their votes could have on the health of Americans for years to come.”

Washington Post.

“Janet Yellen Deserves A Second Term As Fed Chair.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (10/17) writes that President Trump should select Janet Yellen for a second term as Federal Reserve Chairman because of her experience with steadily raising interest rates and with the unwinding of the Fed’s asset purchasing program, her encouragement and defense of safeguards on financial institutions, and her relative flexibility compared with the other candidates. The Post concludes that her selection would signal the preservation of the Federal Reserve’s independence from politicization and “would send a reassuring message of continuity.”

“The Hope For Change In Venezuela Suffers A Crushing Blow.” A Washington Post (10/17) editorial says “hopes that Venezuela could emerge from its catastrophic political and economic collapse by democratic means suffered a crushing and perhaps terminal blow on Sunday” when the government of Nicolás Maduro staged elections for provincial governors. Polls showed the opposition, “which reluctantly agreed to participate, would win up to two-thirds of the races,” and yet the results “announced by pro-regime election authorities were nearly the opposite.” The Post argues that Sunday's result suggests that a free and fair democratic election in Venezuela "is no longer possible."

"Saying Farewell To A Local Icon Of National Renown." In an editorial, the Washington Post (10/17) writes offers a farewell message for The Post's former vice president of communications, Vincent E. Reed, who died Tuesday at the age of 89. The Post says Reed "leaves a rich legacy" in the lives of the students who benefited from the school he created – Benjamin Banneker Academic High School – and the educators "helped by the support and guidance he provided from his position at The Post."

Wall Street Journal.

"The Realtors Take A Tax Hostage." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (10/17) writes that The National Association of Realtors' attack on GOP tax legislation is based upon their desire to keep middle-class tax rates high to preserve their mortgage interest deduction subsidy. The Journal concludes that Republicans should stand firm against the housing lobby's efforts against the GOP plan.

"Jerry Brown's Title IX Veto." The Wall Street Journal (10/17) editorial board praises California Governor Jerry Brown's (D) Sunday veto of a bill that would have codified the Obama Administration's "Dear Colleague" guidance, which said universities would lose federal funds if they did not create courts to litigate Title IX campus sexual assault claims. The Journal urges politicians to stay focused on their principles in spite of desire to buck the Trump Administration.

"Prosecutorial Impunity." The Wall Street Journal (10/17) editorializes about Tuesday's ruling by the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals that absolved prosecutors for the use of false information in the prosecution of hedge fund founder David Ganek. Ganek had sued the prosecutors, seeking damages after the prosecution had put his hedge fund out of business. The appeals court ruled that the prosecutors were immune from liability. The Journal calls this another example of abusive behavior by prosecutors, and it urges the Justice Department to investigate the incident and to discipline the prosecutors.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Senators Reach Deal To Shore Up Health Markets
Soros Transfers \$18 Billion To Foundation, Creating Instant Giant
US-Backed Forces Say They Have Taken Last Islamic State Urban Stronghold
The Other Brother: Bob Weinstein Was An Abusive Boss

New York Times:

2 Senators Strike Deal On Health Subsidies That Trump Cut Off
Raqqa, ISIS 'Capital,' Is Captured, US-Backed Forces Say
As Party Gathers, Xi Jinping Displays A Firm Grip On Power
Inside A Secretive Group Where Women Are Branded
Navy SEALs Were Ready If Pakistan Failed To Free Family Held As Hostages
Women Denounce Harassment In California's Capital

Washington Post:

Latest Healthcare Effort Quickly Stalls
US-Backed Force Says Raqqa Free Of ISIS
Despite Decision Against Uber, London's Rivalry Between Traditional, Modern Transit Continues
Drug Czar Pick Bows Out Amid Criticism Of Law
Judge Largely Halts Latest Version Of Travel Ban

Financial Times:

US-Backed Forces Claim Victory Over ISIS In Raqqa As Jihadis Flee
Airbus Challenges Boeing With Vow To Create US Jobs
Wall St Banks Boosted By Lending To Rich Clients

Washington Times:

Trump Supports Bipartisan Short-Term Fix To Stabilize Obamacare

Judge Blocks Trump's Travel Ban For Third Time
Islamic State's 'Caliphate' Dissolves, But Ideology, Operations Spread Around World
New York Times' Social Media Policy Only Hides Political Bias, Doesn't Eliminate It
Biden And Kasich Claim Political Center, Turn Bipartisan Talk Against Trump
After Year In Coffin, Thai King's Body Prepared For Royal Cremation

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: NFL Owners Meeting; Bipartisan Healthcare Plan; White House-Fallen Soldiers Call; Weinstein Sexual Harassment Scandal; California Wildfires; Travel Restriction Blocked; Syria-Raqqa Assault; Ohio-Police Violence; Cold Medicine Murder; Texas Air Balloon Crash Investigation; Ford Explorers-Call For Recall; Aspiring Kid.

CBS: Opioid Epidemic-Marino Nomination Withdrawn; Opioid Epidemic-Hard Hit Area; Texas Air Balloon Crash Investigation; McCain, Biden-Trump Criticisms; White House-Fallen Soldiers Call; Syria-Raqqa Assault; Ford Explorers-Call For Recall; Travel Restriction Blocked; Weinstein Sexual Harassment Scandal; Young Political Candidates.

NBC: White House-Fallen Soldiers Call; Bipartisan Healthcare Plan; Wall Street Records; Opioid Epidemic-Marino Nomination Withdrawn; Opioid Epidemic-Chinese Imports; Travel Restriction Blocked; Weinstein Sexual Harassment Scandal; United Overbooking Investigation; Texas Air Balloon Crash Investigation; Syria-Raqqa Assault; Ford Explorers-Call For Recall; NFL Owners Meeting; GMO Apple; Brooklyn-Loose Cow; Creative Chemistry Class.

Network TV At A Glance:

White House-Fallen Soldiers Call – 8 minutes, 15 seconds
Opioid Epidemic – 6 minutes, 25 seconds
Syria-Raqqa Assault – 6 minutes, 15 seconds
Weinstein Sexual Harassment Scandal – 4 minutes, 50 seconds
Ford Explorers-Call For Recall – 4 minutes, 20 seconds
Travel Restriction Blocked – 1 minute, 20 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Travel Restriction Blocked; Bipartisan Healthcare Plan; NFL Owners Meeting; Maryland-Hate Crime Trial; Wall Street News.

CBS: Bipartisan Healthcare Plan; Travel Restriction Blocked; Opioid Epidemic; White House-Fallen Soldiers Call; California Wildfires.

FOX: Bipartisan Healthcare Plan; California Wildfires; Weinstein Sexual Harassment Scandal.

NPR: Travel Restriction Blocked; California Wildfires; NFL Owners Meeting; Amazon Sexual Harassment Scandal.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Speaks with Governor Kim Reynolds of Iowa by telephone; participates in a meeting with the Senate Finance Committee; has lunch with Vice President Mike Pence.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — No public schedule announced.

US Senate: 9:30 AM Senate HELP Committee Executive Session – Executive Session, with agenda including nominations of Patrick Pizzella to be Deputy Secretary of Labor; Cheryl Stanton to be Department of Labor Wage and Hour Division Administrator; David Zatezalo to be Assistant Secretary of Labor for Mine Safety and Health; Janet Dhillon and Dr Daniel Gade to be Equal Employment Opportunity Commission members (with Dhillon to be chair, upon confirmation); Carlos Muniz to be Department of Education General Counsel; Peter Robb to be National Labor Relations Board General Counsel; and Gerald Fauth III, Kyle Fortson, and Linda Puchala to be National Mediation Board members Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 430, Washington, DC <http://help.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Hearing on 'Oversight of the U.S. Department of Justice', with testimony from Attorney General Jeff Sessions Location: Hart Senate Office Building, Rm 216, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Governmental Affairs Committee considers nominees for OPM and GSA heads – Nominations hearing considers Jeff Pon to be Office of Personnel Management Director, and Michael Rigas to be Deputy Director; and Emily Murphy to be General Services Administration

Administrator Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 342, Washington, DC
<http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

10:00 AM Senate Environment and Public Works Committee Business Meeting – Business Meeting, with agenda including nominations of Michael Dourson, William Wehrum, Matthew Leopold, and David Ross to be Environmental Protection Agency Assistant Administrators; Paul Trombino III to be Federal Highway Administration Administrator; and Jeffery Baran to be a Nuclear Regulatory Commission member (reappointment) Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

2:00 PM Helsinki Commission briefing on Nagorno-Karabakh – ‘Averting All-out War in Nagorno-Karabakh: The Role of the U.S. and OSCE’ Helsinki Commission briefing, with former Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) Minsk Group Co-Chairs Carey Cavanaugh and James Warlick and International Crisis Group Europe & Central Asia Program Director Magdalena Grono assessing the current state of the dispute over the region in the South Caucasus, the Minsk Group format, and the prospects for achieving a lasting peace Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 188, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

2:30 PM Senate Foreign Relations Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Thomas Carter for the rank of ambassador during his tenure of service as U.S. Representative on the Council of the International Civil Aviation Organization; Jennifer Gillian Newstead to be State Department Legal Adviser; and Manisha Singh to be Assistant Secretary of State for Economic and Business Affairs Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee hearing on federal support for research – Federal Spending Oversight and Emergency Management Subcommittee hearing on ‘Broken Beakers: Federal Support for Research’, with testimony from University of Virginia Center for Open Science Executive Director Dr Brian Nosek; Cato Institute Adjunct Scholar Dr Terence Kealey; and University of Michigan Office of Research Health Sciences Associate Vice President for Research Rebecca Cunningham Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 342, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

US House: 2:00 PM Helsinki Commission briefing on Nagorno-Karabakh – ‘Averting All-out War in Nagorno-Karabakh: The Role of the U.S. and OSCE’ Helsinki Commission briefing, with former Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) Minsk Group Co-Chairs Carey Cavanaugh and James Warlick and International Crisis Group Europe & Central Asia Program Director Magdalena Grono assessing the current state of the dispute over the region in the South Caucasus, the Minsk Group format, and the prospects for achieving a lasting peace Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 188, Washington, DC <http://www.csce.gov> <https://twitter.com/HelsinkiComm>

On recess until 23 October.

Other: 8:00 AM Bipartisan Sens. Lamar Alexander, Bill Cassidy and Tim Kaine discuss next steps on healthcare – ‘Healthcare: What’s Next?’ Axios360 conversation on the next steps in healthcare policy, with Republican Sens. Lamar Alexander and Bill Cassidy and Democratic Sen. Tim Kaine Location: AJAX, 1011 4th St NW, Washington, DC www.axios.com #Axios360

9:00 AM Washington Post hosts ‘Addiction in America: A Nation Responds’ event – ‘Addiction in America: A Nation Responds’ Washington Post discussion on how the nation is responding to America’s opioid epidemic, with Office of National Drug Control Policy Acting Director Richard Baum discussing the Trump administration’s approach to the crisis, Democratic Sen. Maggie Hassan and Republican Sen. Rob Portman addressing legislative options and regulatory challenges, CVS Health President and CEO Larry Merlo speaking on the search for solutions to the crisis, and Leidos Chairman and CEO Roger Krone on understanding the opioid crisis and next steps. Other speakers include The Washington Post Health and Medicine Reporter Lenny Bernstein and Video Reporter Alice Li Location: The Washington Post, 1301 K St NW, Washington, DC <http://www.washingtonpost.com/> <https://twitter.com/washingtonpost>

2:30 PM Greek PM Tsipras speaks on ‘Greece in a new era’ at Brookings – Brookings Institution Hutchins Center on Fiscal and Monetary Policy and Foreign Policy host Alan and Jane Batkin International Leaders Forum, with Greek Prime Minister Alexis Tsipras delivering a keynote address on ‘Greece in a new era: Pillar of stability and economic hub in the crossroads of three continents’ Location: The Brookings Institution, 1775 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.brookings.edu> #FutureEU

5:30 PM Dem Sen. Elizabeth Warren speaks at National Women’s Law Center Awards Dinner – National Women’s Law Center Awards Dinner, honoring NWLC Founders and Co-Presidents

Emerita Nancy Duff Campbell and Marcia Greenberger. This year's keynote speakers is Democratic Sen. Elizabeth Warren Location: Marriott Marquis, 901 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC www.nwlc.org <https://twitter.com/nwlc>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: "They have a policy where if an animal escapes a slaughterhouse, it gets to go free. Isn't that great? The bull is being sent to a rehabilitation facility for misbehaving cows. That's the good news. The bad news is it is also where they sent Harvey Weinstein."

Trevor Noah: "Speaking of hairy creatures, yesterday President Trump held a surprise press conference with Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, which is kind of the worst surprise ever. 'Surprise, I brought Mitch McConnell!' Boo! What kind of surprise party is [with] Mitch McConnell?"

Trevor Noah: "I don't know, something's fishy here. They sound less like real friends and more like Trump trying to get Mitch a green card. 'This gentleman, I'm going to say Mitch, right, Mr. Immigration Officer, this relationship is special, it's so special.' 'That's what you said about Melania.'"

Trevor Noah: "See what [President Trump] said? 'President Obama never called. I call and I write. I also haven't called and I didn't write. But I do, except when I don't, which is now.'"

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, October 25, 2017
Date: Wednesday, October 25, 2017 6:02:49 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 25, 2017 6:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- ABC: Democrats Call For Investigation Of $300 Million Contract For Firm With Ties To Zinke.
- The Hill: Interior Proposes Raising Fees At Popular National Parks.
- Washington Post: Trump To Auction Off A Vast Swath Of The Gulf Of Mexico To Oil Companies.
- The Hill: Alaska Senators Tell Trump Not To Change Name Of Mountain.
- Associated Press: Government Accountability Office Says Climate Change Already Costing U.S. Billions.
- Associated Press: Congressional Democrats Want Probe Of Delta Tunnels Project.
- E&E Publishing: Can Solar Save A Huge Coal Plant? Zinke's Thinking About It.
- Washington Examiner: Ryan Zinke's Ties To 'Scam PAC' Being Scrutinized By GOP.

- Grand Junction (CO) Business Times: Event To Feature Deputy Interior Secretary.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Iron Eyes To Ask For Necessity Defense In DAPL Case
- Lawsuit Filed To Block County Board Of Supervisors' Approval Of Camp 4 Agreement.
- Bill To Build Grand Canyon Tram Goes Before Navajo Lawmakers.
- Navajo Nation 'Rejects' DOJ Move Not To Prosecute Ex-Officer.

Bureau Of Land Management

- The Hill: Poll: Utah Voters Divided On Future Of Two National Monuments.
- Associated Press: 2 In Nevada Standoff Case Take Plea Deals, Avoid 3rd Trial.
- Associated Press: Federal Land Manager To Idaho National Guard: Stop Building.
- Durango (CO) Herald: BLM Pulls Plan To Auction Oil And Gas Lease Near Shenandoah.
- E&E Publishing: Enviro Warn Of No More Parks; Critics Say 'Ridiculous.'
- E&E Publishing: Trump's 'Energy Independence' Order: Where Do Things Stand?

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

- Developers Plan Wind Farms Off Jersey as Christie Era Ends.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- California Makes Critical Repairs In Century-Old Levee System.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Houston Chronicle: Texas Researchers Hope Grants Will Stop Spread Of Disease Threatening State's Bats.
- Tri-City Herald (WA): Fish And Wildlife Police Seize Pot On Hanford Reach National Monument.
- NW News Network: Fishermen, Researchers Try To Outsmart Bait-Robbing Seabirds To Save Them.

National Park Service

- Arizona Daily Sun: Losing Lake Powell's Quagga Mussel Invasion Battle, But Trying To Win The War.
- Washington Post: Celebrity Ambassadors Put Lesser-Known U.S. National Parks In The Limelight.
- Forbes: Burt's Bees Cofounder On Why She Gave Away 87,000 Acres In Maine.
- Washington Free Beacon: Park Service Cancels Funding For Project 'Honoring Legacy' of Black Panther Party.
- Reading (PA) Eagle: Help Support National Parks.
- Southwest Colorado Journal: Wild Burros Raft Grand Canyon Rapids.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Associated Press: Guam Delegate Suggests Options To Save Chamorro Land Trust.

US Geological Survey

- Torrington (WY) Telegram: 100-Year Floods Prompt Drone Visit At Historic Site.
- Pasadena (CA) Now: Pasadena Earthquake Expert Kenneth Hudnut to Receive National Award for Service, Leadership in Geodesy.
- Oregonian: How Will 'Really Big One' Earthquake Shake Out? Researchers Run 50 Simulations.

Top National News

- Associated Press: Largest US Grid Operator Rips Perry Plan To Subsidize Coal, Nuclear Power.
- Washington Examiner: Senate Dems Question Why Unconfirmed EPA Nominee Dourson Is Already Working.
- Bloomberg News: Trump Order Allows Refugee Admittance, Imposes Stricter Vetting.
- The Hill: Costs Of Security For EPA Administrator On The Rise.
- Washington Times: Ross: Congress Will Work Out Details Of Tax Reform Plan.
- Reuters: Reuters/Ipsos Poll: Fewer Than Third Support Trump Tax Plan.
- New York Times: NYTimes Analysis: Climate Change Causing Fluctuations In Europe's Olive Oil Production.
- New York Times: Industry Representatives Lobby Senators To Preserve NAFTA.
- New York Times: Bureau Of Labor Statistics: Manufacturing Job Market Will Further Decline In Next Decade.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Public Art Takes Flight."
- Washington Post.
 - "Jeff Flake's Diagnosis Is Right But It's Not Enough."
 - "Interpol Should Not Be Abused As Putin's Tool Of Revenge."
 - "The Government Needs To Get Its Act Together In Puerto Rico."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "A Bipartisan Drug Cartel?"
 - "Terrorists And Travel."
 - "Illinois's Latest Criminals."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Democrats Call For Investigation Of $300 Million Contract For Firm With Ties To Zinke.

There was significant coverage of Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's ties to an small company from his hometown that was awarded a major contract to help restore power to Puerto Rico's power grid. ABC World News Tonight (10/24, story 7, 2:10, Muir) reported a "Montana company [was] given the contract to get the power back on" in Puerto Rico "with just two workers when it landed that contract." ABC (Thomas) added, "Whitefish Energy, a private Montana company with just two full-time employees, awarded a $300 million contract by the Puerto Rico Electric Power Authority. The company showcasing its work on Twitter," but "some Democrats are already calling for an investigation into that contract" to Whitefish Energy – a firm from the "hometown of Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke."

The Washington Post (10/23, A1, Mufson, Gillum, Davis, Hernández) first reported the story which said that the company had "only two full-time employees on the day Hurricane Maria hit Puerto Rico." Whitefish Energy "signed the contract...with the Puerto Rico Electric Power Authority (PREPA) to fix the island's electrical infrastructure." The company "has 280 workers on the island...a majority of whom are subcontractors." Former DOE official Susan Tierney said, "The fact that there are so many utilities with experience in this and a huge track record of helping each other out, it is at least odd why [the utility] would go to Whitefish. ... I'm scratching my head wondering how it all adds up."

The AP (10/24, Daly) reports the Interior Department "denied that Zinke, a former Montana congressman, played any role in the contract award. Zinke's son had a summer job at a Whitefish construction side." The department said in a statement, "Neither the secretary nor anyone in his office have taken any meetings or action on behalf of this company." Furthermore, the statement said Zinke knows Whitefish CEO Andy Techmanskis "because they both live in a small town where everyone knows everyone." Techmanskis visited Puerto Rico on vacation in late summer "and established contact with PREPA and discussed potential future work, company spokesman Chris Chiames said Tuesday. When Maria hit Sept. 20, Whitefish was one of the companies that power authority officials were able to reach by satellite phone." Chiames said in a telephone interview, "We got here quicker than anybody else and we built a plan that PREPA had confidence in."

PREPA's executive director Ricardo Ramos told reporters that Whitefish was the first company "available to arrive, and they were the ones that first accepted terms and conditions for PREPA," according to the AP (10/24, Daly). Ramos added, "The doubts that have been raised about Whitefish, from my point of view, are completely unfounded." NPR (10/24, Ouellet) reports Ramos explained Whitefish's selection was a matter of timing and convenience. He told NPR, "We knew there was going to be a direct hit, so we wanted as much resources as possible." He said Whitefish's name "popped up on several fronts." According to Ramos, PREPA received bids from several companies in the period between Hurricane Irma and Hurricane Maria. PREPA shortlisted two companies, including Whitefish. He also pointed out Whitefish did not ask for a payment guarantee, and it was awarded the PREPA contract. NBC Nightly News (10/24, story 6, 1:50, Gutierrez) showed Ken Luce, a Whitefish Energy spokesperson, defending the company by saying, "Others were just not willing to take the risk and get on a plane to go ask for business."

The New York Times (10/24, Acosta, Healy) reports "the House Committee on Natural Resources said on Tuesday that it was looking into the contract." Parish Braden, the panel's communications director, "said that members of the panel would travel to Puerto Rico this week to seek more answers about the details of the contract and how it was reached." Moreover, "Sen. Maria Cantwell, Democrat of Washington, asked the Government Accountability Office to investigate the circumstances surrounding Whitefish's contract."

The AP (10/24, Daly) reports Rep. Raul Grijalva of Arizona, senior Democrat on the House Natural Resources Committee, said Tuesday that "Congress needs to understand why the Whitefish contract was awarded and whether other, more cost-effective options were available." Grijalva said lawmakers also need to understand why the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the Army Corps of Engineers and public sector utilities "failed in Puerto Rico to conduct the disaster-response planning they carried out ahead of other disasters this year" in Texas, Florida and other states.

In a statement to ABC News (10/24, Dooley, Ebbs, Hoyos), Democratic Rep. Luis Gutierrez of Illinois added, "There is something very fishy about the Whitefish deal. I have been here 25 years and this doesn't pass the smell test." In contrast to such skepticism, Sen. Marco Rubio (R-FL) said Whitefish "showed up at the right place at the right time and that's how they got the contract." Rubio added, "We want to see restoration pick up. Every day that they're without power is a day that economy isn't functioning and it's another day people are suffering."

Additional coverage is available at The Hill (10/24, Savransky), NPR (10/24), ABC News (10/24), Talking Points Memo (10/24), Daily Beast (10/24), Daily Beast (10/24), Huffington Post (10/24), MSNBC (10/24, Benen), The Week (10/24, Weber), Salon (10/24, Rozsa), Slate (10/24, Olmstead), Vanity Fair (10/24, Levin), Esquire Magazine (10/24, Pierce), Vice (10/24, Lubben), Mic (10/24, Smith), MLive \(MI\) (10/24, Raven), New York Post (10/24, Moore), Independent \(UK\) (10/24, York), Daily Mail (10/24, Earle), Public Radio International (10/24, Shankar), and Splinter News (10/24, Sheehan).

Sources that picked up AP reporting include the Washington \(DC\) Post (10/24, Daly), ABC News (10/24, Dooley, Ebbs, Hoyos), Arizona Daily Star (10/24), Chicago \(IL\) Daily Herald (10/24), Daily Mail (10/24), Fox Business (10/24), Minneapolis \(MN\) Star Tribune (10/24), MSN (10/24), New York Daily News (10/24), Philly \(PA\) (10/24), U.S. News & World Report (10/24), Washington \(DC\) Times (10/24, Daly), and Yahoo! Finance (10/24).

WPost: Contract "Deserving Of More Scrutiny." The Washington Post (10/24) editorializes that in contrast to the situation in Texas and Florida, "more than a month after Maria made landfall on" Puerto Rico "roughly 8 out of 10 residents are still without power." While "the sorry, preexisting state of Puerto Rico's power system...clearly accounts for some of the delay...that doesn't excuse the bad planning and questionable decisions that have marked the response to a calamity that was so clearly anticipated." To the Post, "giving a no-bid $300 million contract to a company that had just two full-time employees on the day Maria struck is, at best, curious and deserving of more scrutiny."

Governor Slams Army Corps Of Engineers. NBC Nightly News (10/24, story 6, 1:50, Gutierrez) reported that amid the continuing power outages, Puerto Rico's governor "slammed the Army Corps of Engineers' response so far." Gov. Ricardo Rosselló was shown saying, "There's no sense of urgency." NBC added, "The Army Corps insists it's working hard to meet the governor's goal to restoring power to 95 percent of the island by mid-December."

Interior Proposes Raising Fees At Popular National Parks.

The Hill (10/24, Henry) reports the Interior Department is considering higher peak-season fees at 17 of its most popular national parks "during their busiest five-month periods." The agency said the increased fees would "help ensure that they are protected and preserved in perpetuity and that visitors enjoy a world-class experience that mirrors the amazing destinations they are visiting." In a statement, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said, "The infrastructure of our national parks is aging and in need of renovation and restoration." Zinke added, "We need to have the vision to look at the future of our parks and take action in order to ensure that our grandkids' grandkids will have the same if not better experience than we have today. Shoring up our parks' aging infrastructure will do that." President Trump proposed trimming the National Park Service's budget by 12.9 percent this year, "despite concerns from officials with the department and in Congress about the state of the Park Service's infrastructure."

The AP (10/24, Fonseca) reports visitors to the Grand Canyon, Yosemite, Yellowstone, and other popular parks "would be charged $70 per vehicle, up from the fee of $30 for a weekly pass. At others, the hike is nearly triple, from $25 to $70." The National Park Service estimates it will raise $70 million a year with the proposal "at a time when national parks repeatedly have been breaking visitation records and putting a strain on park resources." According to the AP, the proposal would not affect selected free weekends and holidays at parks throughout the year.

The Los Angeles Times (10/24, Martin) reports NPS will accept public comment on the proposal until Nov. 23 at its public comment website. The proposal could go into effect as early as next spring. It would also increase fees for commercial vehicles entering the parks. Money (10/24, Calfas) reports NPS has not "proposed any price increases for its America the Beautiful passes, which are $80 and grant access to more than 2,000 federal sites, including those potentially getting a comparable price tag for just one visit."

The Huffington Post (10/24) reports Democrats were "quick to slam the park free proposal." Rep. Raúl Grijalva (D-AZ), the ranking member of the House Natural Resources Committee, said in a statement, "We should be encouraging more people to get outdoors and enjoy our great natural wonders instead of discouraging them by raising park entrance fees." Meanwhile, Sen. Maria Cantwell (D-WA) said in a statement, "While Secretary Zinke flies around on private jets using our taxpayer dollars, he is hiking up the fees all American families pay to enjoy our National Parks."

Additional coverage is available at Reuters (10/24, Coffman), Axios (10/24, Britzky), Washington \(DC\) Examiner (10/24, Siciliano), CNN (10/25, Park), USA Today (10/25, Cummings), Oregonian (10/24, Hale), Tri-City Herald \(WA\) (10/24), Billings \(MT\) Gazette (10/24, Friesen), Denver \(CO\) Post (10/24, Blevins), Flathead \(MT\) Beacon (10/24, Franz), Belleville \(IL\) News-Democrat (10/24, Donald), Deseret \(UT\) News (10/24, O'Donoghue), Alaska Dispatch News (10/24, Martinson), Palm Springs \(CA\) Desert Sun (10/24, Simon), KTLA-TV Los Angeles \(CA\) Los Angeles (10/24, Pamer), and KTVX-TV Salt Lake City \(UT\) Salt Lake City (10/24, Francis).

Sources that picked up AP reporting include the Washington \(DC\) Post (10/24, By Felicia Fonseca |, Ap), ABC News (10/24), Arizona Daily Star (10/24), Arizona Republic (10/24), Chicago \(IL\) Tribune (10/24, Fonseca), Daily Mail (10/24), Fox Business (10/24), Minneapolis \(MN\) Star Tribune (10/24), New York Daily News (10/24), Philly \(PA\) (10/24), Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (10/24), Springfield \(OH\) News Sun (10/24), U.S. News & World Report (10/24), Washington \(DC\) Times (10/24, Fonseca), and Waterloo-Cedar Falls \(IA\) Courier (10/24).

Trump To Auction Off A Vast Swath Of The Gulf Of Mexico To Oil Companies.

The Washington Post (10/24, Fears) reports the Trump Administration "made history Tuesday in proposing that nearly 77 million acres in the Gulf of Mexico be made available for companies wanting to purchase federal oil and gas leases – the largest offering ever in the United States." The Post adds that "in announcing the sale, the Interior Department compared the targeted waters to 'about the size of New Mexico' and said the first lease sales off Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida are scheduled for March next year." The Bureau of Ocean Energy Management (BOEM) "offered assurances that the environment would be protected as additional leases are sold in the gulf." Vincent DeVito, Interior's counselor for energy policy, touted the benefits of the sale, saying, "People need jobs, the Gulf Coast states need revenue, and Americans do not want to be dependent on foreign oil." According to the Post, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "first broached such a sale shortly after he took office in March, proposing to offer 73 million acres for leases."

The Washington Times (10/24, Wolfgang) reports Zinke "announced the massive lease sale, slated for March 2018, on Tuesday morning, and said the move is a key component of the administration's effort to tap US energy reserves and reap the economic benefits that come along with them." Said Zinke, "In today's low-price energy environment, providing the offshore industry access to the maximum amount of opportunities possible is part of our strategy to spur local and regional economic dynamism and job creation and a pillar of President Trump's plan to make the United States energy dominant."

The AP (10/24, Daly) reports the sale "includes all available unleased areas on the Gulf's Outer Continental Shelf, a reflection of the Trump administration's strategy to maximize oil and gas drilling on federal lands and waters." Nevertheless, only a few of the available tracts are expected to receive bids. "A similar lease sale in August drew bids on just 90 offshore tracts totaling about a half-million acres – less than 1 percent of the 76 million acres available," the AP said. The proposed sale sparked criticism from Rep. Raul Grijalva of Arizona, the top Democrat on the House Natural Resources Committee, who “said Zinke and congressional Republicans were taking credit for an Obama-era policy to offer oil and gas leases from all available tracts in the Gulf, rather than separating the western and eastern Gulf areas from the more productive” central Gulf region.

According to the Houston \(TX\) Chronicle (10/24), “Many Gulf coast lawmakers and political leaders praised the new lease sale.” Reuters (10/24) reports BOEM spokesman John Filostrat said, “We’re hoping to get a healthy number of bids, more so than we did in August.”

Also covering this story are the Washington \(DC\) Examiner (10/24, Siegel), Rigzone (10/24, Veazey) and Offshore Magazine (10/24). Sources that picked up AP reporting include ABC News (10/24), Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (10/24), Baton Rouge \(LA\) Advocate (10/24), Boston \(MA\) Herald (10/24), Bristol \(VA\) Herald Courier (10/24), Daily Mail (10/24), Fox Business (10/24), Minneapolis \(MN\) Star Tribune (10/23), New York Daily News (10/24), Philly \(PA\) (10/24), Tampa \(FL\) Tribune (10/24), U.S. News & World Report (10/24), and the Washington \(DC\) Times (10/24, Daly).

Alaska Senators Tell Trump Not To Change Name Of Mountain.

In continuing coverage, The Hill (10/24, Anapol) reports on Alaska Sen. Dan Sullivan (R) recalling during a speech at the Alaska Federation of Natives’ annual conference that during a meeting in March with Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, President Trump offered to reverse the Obama-era order that changed the name of Mt. McKinley to Denali. According to the Alaska Dispatch News, Sullivan said of Trump, “He looked at me and said, ‘I heard that the big mountain in Alaska also had – also its name was changed by executive action. Do you want us to reverse that?’” Sullivan said he and fellow Alaska Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R) “jumped over the desk” and told the president, “No! No. Don’t want to reverse that.”

The AP (10/24) reports Alaska spent decades trying to get North America’s tallest mountain recognized as Denali, an Athabascan word meaning “the high one,” which Alaskans widely used. As a presidential candidate, Trump tweeted his displeasure with then-Interior Secretary Sally Jewell issuing an order in 2015 ordering the name change.

Sources that picked up AP reporting include ABC News (10/24), Daily Mail (10/24), Minneapolis \(MN\) Star Tribune (10/17), MSN (10/24), Philly \(PA\) (10/24), Stamford \(CT\) Advocate (10/24), U.S. News & World Report (10/24), and Washington \(DC\) Times (10/24, Bohrer).

Government Accountability Office Says Climate Change Already Costing U.S. Billions.

The Associated Press (10/24, Biesecker) reports a Government Accountability Report released Monday said climate change is costing US taxpayers billions of dollars each year, “with those costs expected to rise as devastating storms, floods, wildfires and droughts become more frequent in the coming decades.” The report found “the federal government has spent more than $350 billion over the last decade on disaster assistance programs and losses from flood and crop insurance,” a figure that does not include the “massive toll from this year’s wildfires and three major hurricanes, expected to be among the most costly in the nation’s history.” The authors “reviewed 30 government and academic studies examining the national and regional impacts of climate change” and also “interviewed 28 experts familiar with the strengths and limitations of the studies, which rely on future projections of climate impacts to estimate likely costs.” The AP mentions that President Trump, EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and Energy Secretary Rick Perry “question the scientific consensus that carbon released into the atmosphere from burning fossil fuels is the primary driver of global warming.”

Sources that picked up AP reporting include CBS News, (10/24) Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (10/24), Austin \(TX\) American Statesman (10/24), Chicago \(IL\) Tribune (10/23, Biesecker), Daily Mail (10/23), Houston \(TX\) Chronicle (10/24, Biesecker), Globe and Mail \(CAN\) (10/24), and San Francisco \(CA\) Chronicle (10/24).

Congressional Democrats Want Probe Of Delta Tunnels Project.

The AP (10/24) reports five Congressional Democrats from California and one Arizona Democrat on Tuesday requested a new federal probe of Gov. Jerry Brown’s $16 billion proposal to build two giant water tunnels. The request followed a federal audit that “found that the U.S. Interior Department improperly used taxpayer money to help fund planning for the project.” The Democrats are asking the US General Accounting Office “to determine whether that funding was legal.”

Sources that picked up AP reporting include Kansas City \(MO\) Star (10/24), Sacramento

(CA) Bee (10/24), U.S. News & World Report (10/24), and Washington \(DC\) Times (10/24).

Can Solar Save A Huge Coal Plant? Zinke's Thinking About It.

E&E Publishing (10/24, Patterson, Storrow) reports Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke met with South African billionaire Dr. Patrick Soon-Shiong and two members of his company, NantWorks, to discuss the possibility of using high-powered solar technology at the Navajo Generation Station, one of America's largest coal plants, "as the Trump administration searches for a way to keep the facility from closing." The northeast Arizona facility is "scheduled to retire in 2019 after four utilities with a stake in the facility voted to close it earlier this year." The Interior Department is a minor owner in the plant, which the Trump Administration opposes shuttering. According to the article, Zinke's meeting "appeared to catch some of the administration's allies off guard." For example, the "economies of the Navajo and Hopi tribes are heavily reliant on the coal industry, and tribal leaders have loudly opposed plans to close NGS." In an email, Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift wrote that the department is interested "in an economic pathway where NGS operates post-2019."

Ryan Zinke's Ties To 'Scam PAC' Being Scrutinized By GOP.

The Washington Examiner (10/24, Siegel, Siciliano) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "has helped raise money for political operatives in Washington that conservatives are now accusing of misleading donors, Politico reported Tuesday." The report found Zinke "has donated to groups linked to Scott Mackenzie," who runs a Virgin Islands GOP political action committee that hosted Zinke at a fundraiser in March. The Politico investigation found many Republicans have distanced themselves from Mackenzie "because critics say he operates 'scam PACs' that generate small donations from conservative voters, and spend the money on overhead and consultants." For example, Republican Texas Rep. Will Hurd said many of Mackenzie's firms "are preying on seniors." According to the Examiner, there is no evidence linking Zinke's relationship with Mackenzie to anything illegal, "but the relationship with the consultants and PACs is raising eyebrows, Politico reports."

Event To Feature Deputy Interior Secretary.

The Grand Junction \(CO\) Business Times (10/24) reports the Grand Junction Petroleum and Mining Club is hosting a presentation featuring Kate MacGregor, deputy assistant secretary for land and minerals management at the Department of the Interior, Nov. 15. According to the article, McGregor's presentation is titled, "The Department of the Interior's Role in Energy Dominance."

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Iron Eyes To Ask For Necessity Defense In DAPL Case

. The Bismarck \(ND\) Tribune (10/24, Dura) reports that a Standing Rock Sioux tribe member Chase Iron Eyes was charged with a felony for inciting a riot and a misdemeanor for criminal trespass, to which, he will be raising the necessity defense on November 3. Chase Iron Eyes is an attorney himself and was a candidate for the US House in 2016. Iron Eyes said "given the Dakota Access Pipeline's imminent threat to my tribe's and my family's only water supply, I ultimately had no choice but to resist on the front lines." The Bismarck Tribune adds that "Iron Eyes faces up to five years in prison, if convicted. He is scheduled for a felony jury trial on Feb. 8."

The Minneapolis Star Tribune (10/24, Nicholson, Karnowski) reports that "an American Indian activist and former U.S. congressional candidate in North Dakota accused of inciting a riot during protests against the Dakota Access oil pipeline says he'll seek to present a "necessity defense" — justifying a crime by arguing it prevented a greater harm."

Lawsuit Filed To Block County Board Of Supervisors' Approval Of Camp 4 Agreement.

The Lompoc \(CA\) Record (10/24, Hodgson) reports a Santa Ynez Valley ranch "filed a complaint against the Santa Barbara County Board of Supervisors as a whole and its members individually seeking to prevent their approval of a memorandum of agreement with the Santa Ynez Band of Chumash Indians." The lawsuit involves "the 1,427-acre Camp 4 property east of Highway 154 and west of Highway 246 that was purchased by the Chumash tribe in 2010 with the intent of building tribal housing, a community center and other improvements." The Bureau of Indian Affairs, at the tribe's request, "issued a decision to take the land into trust, which would allow the tribe to develop the property outside the jurisdiction of county and state laws, result in a loss of tax revenues to the county and fail to compensate the county for services provided." The lawsuit alleges the tribe's proposed development "of 415 residences and a 12,000-square-foot community center fails to meet all provisions of the Santa Ynez Valley Community Plan, which the supervisors have admitted."

Bill To Build Grand Canyon Tram Goes Before Navajo Lawmakers.

The AP (10/25) reports the Navajo Nation Council will review legislation to build an aerial tram into the Grand Canyon during Tuesday's special session. The legislation "has struggled to gain widespread support." Developers claim it will "revitalize the region's economy," but opponents argue "it would desecrate the area." The Navajo Nation would need to invest $65 million to start the project.

Navajo Nation 'Rejects' DOJ Move Not To Prosecute Ex-Officer.

The AP (10/24) reports from Tse Bonito, NM that "the Navajo Nation says it's angered by a U.S. Justice Department decision not to prosecute a former Winslow, Arizona, officer who fatally shot a 27-year-old Navajo woman." Navajo Nation Attorney General Ethel Branch said on Tuesday "the tribe is planning to sue over the matter early next year. The tribe had asked the Justice Department to look into the March 2016 shooting of Loreal Tsingine." Justice Department spokesman Devin O'Malley said on Tuesday that "the evidence thoroughly was reviewed but officials couldn't prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Austin Shipley willfully used excessive force when he shot Tsingine."

Bureau Of Land Management

Poll: Utah Voters Divided On Future Of Two National Monuments.

The Hill (10/24, Henry) reports a poll released Tuesday by the Salt Lake Tribune and the University of Utah found 51 percent of respondents supported shrinking the Bears Ears National Monument. However, 53 percent of voters "also said the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument should be preserved and not split into smaller monuments, something supported by 27 percent of those polled." Bear Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante are two of nearly 30 large national monuments that the Interior Department is considering changes for. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "has said he will recommend President Trump shrink Bears Ears, a 1.3-million acre expanse established by the Obama administration late last year containing cultural sites from Native American tribes." Zinke is also expected to "recommend Trump shrink Grand Staircase-Escalante, a 1.8-million acre monument established by President Clinton in 1996."

2 In Nevada Standoff Case Take Plea Deals, Avoid 3rd Trial.

The AP (10/24) reports two defendants pleaded guilty to lesser charges to "avoid a third trial and the possibility of more time in federal custody for bearing assault-style weapons during a 2014 confrontation with federal agents near a ranch owned by Nevada cattleman and states' rights figure Cliven Bundy." According to the AP, their plea deals "narrow the focus of an upcoming trial for Bundy, two adult sons and a close associate," who are accused of "leading a conspiracy to enlist a self-styled militia to prevent federal Bureau of Land Management agents from enforcing court orders to remove Bundy cattle from desert rangeland in what is now Gold Butte National Monument."

Sources that picked up AP reporting includes Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (10/24), Minneapolis \(MN\) Star Tribune (10/19), Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (10/24) and U.S. News & World Report (10/24).

Federal Land Manager To Idaho National Guard: Stop Building.

The AP (10/24, Boone) reports the Bureau of Land Management sent a formal cease and desist letter ordering the Idaho National Guard to cease construction of a "tank crossing on a road in a national conservation area in the state until an environmental analysis is finished and the BLM decides whether to grant a permit." Both sides called the issue a "rare misunderstanding in a long-standing positive relationship in the area that contains key habitat for eagles, falcons and hawks." BLM's Snake River Birds of Prey Manager Amanda Hoffman said in an email, "The Guard is an active and positive partner with the BLM in their environmental stewardship of the Orchard Combat Training Center."

BLM Pulls Plan To Auction Oil And Gas Lease Near Shenandoah.

The Durango \(CO\) Herald (10/24, Romeo) reports a spokesman with the Bureau of Land Management said the agency has pulled a 40-acre tract on the southern border of the Shenandoah subdivision from an oil and gas lease sale set for March in response to “public backlash earlier this month when Shenandoah residents said the agency did not properly notify them of the sale or a public comment period.” The potential development of the land “also drew concern over noise, traffic and general health risks associated with nearby oil and gas development.”

The AP (10/24) also reports on this story.

Enviros Warn Of No More Parks; Critics Say ‘Ridiculous.’

In a 2,500-word piece, E&E Publishing (10/24, Yachnin) reports critics of House Natural Resources Chairman Rob Bishop’s legislation to overhaul the Antiquities Act claim it will not only “mandate strict guidelines for the creation of national monuments but would lessen the chances for new national parks in the decades ahead.” Bishop “has dismissed such correlations as unfounded.” Before a Natural Resources panel passed the bill along party lines earlier this month, Bishop stated, “The idea that Grand Canyon or Zion National Park would never have been created without this is misinformation.” However, conservation advocates “have seized on that data to argue that Bishop’s new legislation would have prevented the creation of sites like the former Grand Canyon and Arches national monuments, and potentially derailed the process through which those lands became national parks.”

Trump’s ‘Energy Independence’ Order: Where Do Things Stand?

E&E Publishing (10/24) reports that this month, the Trump administration “hit two milestones in their wide-ranging examination of Obama-era rules” that could be considered burdensome to U.S. energy producers. EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt “formally proposed a repeal of the Clean Power Plan” just days after the Bureau of Land Management “unveiled its plan to postpone key parts of a rule the Obama administration introduced to limit venting, flaring and leakage of natural gas from energy operations on public and tribal lands.” President Trump is also credited with disbanding “an interagency working group that focused on the social cost of carbon and related tools that put a dollar amount on the impacts of carbon, nitrous oxide and methane.”

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

Developers Plan Wind Farms Off Jersey as Christie Era Ends.

Bloomberg News (10/24, Ryan) reports, “after years of being sidelined by New Jersey Governor Chris Christie, wind farm developers are dusting off plans for massive offshore turbines that may someday generate more electricity than a nuclear reactor.” As governor, Christie “effectively blocked wind farms off his state’s coast by never fully implementing a program that would subsidize the projects.” Bloomberg writes that Christie’s departure “presents a potentially rich market for offshore wind,” with low power prices and a geographical position “midway between offshore wind development sites in New England and the Southeast, making the state a potential hub for ferrying supplies to build projects in other states.” The article quotes US Wind Director of Project Development Paul Rich, “New Jersey has all the classic elements for offshore wind to work. The time is right, and the market is ripe.”

Bureau Of Reclamation

California Makes Critical Repairs In Century-Old Levee System.

The Salem \(OR\) Capital Press (10/24, Hearden) reports California wader agencies spent $80 million this summer to repair “30 of the most critically impaired levees after last winter’s rains, but there were 10 others that they couldn’t get to, officials said.” According to the Capital Press, a “sense of urgency prevailed this summer after high river levels during a historically wet winter exposed weak spots in roughly 1,600 miles of levees in the Central Valley.” Among the most troubled areas “is the Feather River below the Oroville Dam, whose spillways nearly failed in February.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

Texas Researchers Hope Grants Will Stop Spread Of Disease Threatening State's Bats.

The Houston Chronicle (10/24, Stuckey) reports that the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation on Tuesday announced the award of $1.3 million in grant funding for six initiatives to halt the spread of white nose syndrome, which "has killed millions of North American bats." Around $600,000 will fund projects in Texas, where researchers just recently discovered the first incidence of the disease. Southern Company is listed among the partners that funded the grants. The AP (10/24) also covers the announcement of the grant funding from the "Bats for the Future Fund," which "includes the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, U.S. Forest Service, Shell Oil and Southern Co."

Fish And Wildlife Police Seize Pot On Hanford Reach National Monument.

The Tri-City Herald \(WA\) (10/24, Cary) reports officials seized a marijuana crop on the Hanford Reach National Monument. A US Fish and Wildlife Service scientist "surprised a person carrying a weapon earlier this month in a remote area north of the Columbia River near Saddle Mountain Lake, an area that is closed to the public." The Washington State Department of Fish and Wildlife "responded to what initially was suspected of being an illegal hunt," but instead found an active marijuana growing operation where 200 to 300 plants "had been harvested, dried and prepared for transportation, according to officers."

Fishermen, Researchers Try To Outsmart Bait-Robbing Seabirds To Save Them.

NW News Network (10/23, Banse) reports researchers from Oregon and Washington published a report recommending the best tactics to avoid bycatch, particularly endangered species such as the short-tailed albatross. The report "recommends either fishing at night or deploying bird-scaring streamers on a line towed from a mast." The US Fish and Wildlife Service, citing the research, "recently directed regulators at NOAA Fisheries to require the West Coast longline fleet use one of the two options." According to a FWS report published earlier this year, "there has been one confirmed case of a short-tailed albatross being killed in longline gear since 2002 off the Oregon, Washington and California coasts."

National Park Service

Losing Lake Powell's Quagga Mussel Invasion Battle, But Trying To Win The War.

The Arizona Daily Sun (10/22, Gardner) reports on the futile attempts by researchers over a decade to keep adult quagga mussels from taking over Lake Powell. Experts believe it is "impossible to entirely eradicate the" invasive species from taking over Lake Powell. According to the article, the "mussels latch on to the walls of Glen Canyon Dam and the hundreds of boats skimming the lake's waters." More than $1 million each year has been spent on containment efforts since researchers first discovered the invading mussels. Organizations in the surrounding states are "working together on containment efforts that include inspecting boats, educating boaters [about] the infestation, bolstering staff, levying costly fines to uncooperative boaters and investing in decontamination equipment."

Celebrity Ambassadors Put Lesser-Known U.S. National Parks In The Limelight.

The Washington Post (10/23, Sachs) reports that for its 101th birthday, the National Parks Service and National Park Foundation "launched Parks 101, an ongoing online series that will introduce the masses to lesser-known destinations within the 417-site system." The goal of the series is to encourage visitors to start attending its minor locations. "The places that are iconic are well worth visiting," said Will Shafroth, president and chief executive of the foundation, "but we wanted to spark interest in the places that hardly anyone knows about." He explained the series includes videos and social media posts by celebrity ambassadors and focuses on destinations that offer a diversity of experiences.

Burt's Bees Cofounder On Why She Gave Away 87,000 Acres In Maine.

Forbes (10/24, Wang) reports that Roxanne Quimby, the co-founder of lip balms and lotions manufacturer Burt's Bee, used her fortune to purchase "thousands of acres of land across the country, aiming to preserve the land rather than develop it." Last year, Quimby "donated roughly

$75 million worth of her holdings to the National Park Service – over 87,000 acres overall – and $6 million to other causes.” As part of her entrepreneurship, Quimby “learned about a problem in national parks called inholding – parcels of privately-held land sitting inside of government-owned parks.” As a result, she “decided to allocate $10 million towards a project that will buy up then donate inholdings in various parks in the U.S.” When NPS’ 100th anniversary occurred in 2016, she “turned over $10 million worth of inholdings (150 acres in all) she acquired over the years to the federal government, and donated around 87,500 acres of land in Maine to create a national monument called Katahdin Woods and Waters.”

Park Service Cancels Funding For Project ‘Honoring Legacy’ of Black Panther Party.

The Washington Free Beacon (10/24, Harrington) reports the National Park Service said it will no longer provide funding for a project “honoring the legacy” of the Black Panther Party after the agency was criticized for spending taxpayer money on the controversial group. NPS said in the grant awarded for the project, “Committed to truthfully honoring the legacy of [Black Panther Party] BPP activists and the San Francisco Bay Area communities they served, the project seeks to document the lives of activists and elders and the landscapes that shaped the movement.”

Help Support National Parks.

The Reading \(PA\) Eagle (10/25, Banowetz) reports Brooks Sports continues to support the US National Park System “with the introduction of its National Parks Collection, a series of its Cascadia 12 trail running shoes, socks and T-shirts that raise money for the National Park Service.” Interested runners can select from “special editions of the shoe that are designed to honor Yellowstone, Yosemite, Mount Rainier and Great Smoky Mountain National Park, and a technical T-shirt designed for each of those parks is also available.” Five percent of the wholesale cost of each item will be donated to the NPS.

Wild Burros Raft Grand Canyon Rapids.

The Southwest Colorado Journal (10/24, Mimiaga) reports on the story of the National Park Service transporting wild burros on rafts or by helicopter out of Grand Canyon in 1980-81. Back then, the NPS “had long wanted to get rid of the growing burro population in the Grand Canyon because they competed with native wildlife for grazing lands.” The “unconventional round-up” of the beasts of burden “involved custom-built rafts with corrals and ramps, professional boaters.”

Office Of Insular Affairs

Guam Delegate Suggests Options To Save Chamorro Land Trust.

The AP (10/24) reports Guam Del. Madeleine Bordallo “has proposed five options to save the Chamorro Land Trust program, which has been challenged in court by the federal government.” According to the Pacific Daily News, the US Department of Justice lawsuit claims the local government violated the federal Fair Housing Act “for discriminating against non-Chamorros.” The program “aims to hold public land for indigenous Chamorros, who can lease 1-acre tracts for $1 a year for 99 years. The Land Trust Commission also leases land for commercial use to non-Chamorros.” The AP explains the Federal government “sued after a Caucasian Tamuning resident earlier this year filed a complaint with federal housing officials, stating he was prohibited from applying for a lease under the Chamorro Land Trust.”

US Geological Survey

100-Year Floods Prompt Drone Visit At Historic Site.

The Torrington \(WY\) Telegram (10/24, Albers) reports that after experiencing 100-year flood events the past two years, Fort Laramie National Historic Site superintendent Tom Baker reached out for help. Don Weeks, physical resources program manager for the Intermountain Region of the National Park Service, recalled Baker asking, “Is this the new normal? I think what I need is some sort of river management plan.” To assist in the flood management planning, the team turned to Mark Bauer and Todd Burton of the US Geological Survey’s Unmanned Aircraft Systems Project Office. Project planning started in February, “and last week, Bauer and Burton brought an $80,000 drone to the park – complete with an estimated $70,000 LiDAR payload.” According to the Telegram, Bauer and Burton “completed a total of 11 flights, most of which were at 150 feet above ground level, with a few flights at 400 feet above ground level." Bauer estimated "USGS will take a few weeks to process and deliver its findings back to the National Park Service, which will then perform additional data analysis and begin making flood plain management decisions."

Pasadena Earthquake Expert Kenneth Hudnut to Receive National Award for Service, Leadership in Geodesy.

Pasadena \(CA\) Now (10/24) reports USGS geophysicist Kenneth Hudnut was chosen to receive the 2017 Ivan I. Mueller Award for Distinguished Service and Leadership at the 2017 American Geophysical Union Fall Meeting this December in New Orleans. The award acknowledges "major achievements in service to and/or leadership within the field of geodesy." According to the article, Hudnut "applies new technologies such as GPS and lidar (light detection and ranging) to earthquake research as a geophysicist for the USGS in Pasadena."

How Will 'Really Big One' Earthquake Shake Out? Researchers Run 50 Simulations.

The Oregonian (10/24) reports a University of Washington research project ran 50 simulations on how a massive earthquake could disrupt the Northwest. The simulations used combinations "of three factors: The quake's epicenter, how far inland it would rupture and which parts of the fault would produce the most intense shaking, according to the university." Erin Wirth, a postdoctoral researcher who led the project, explained in a statement, "There had been just a handful of detailed simulations of a magnitude-9 Cascadia earthquake, and it was hard to know if they were showing the full range. With just a few simulations you didn't know if you were seeing a best-case, a worst-case or an average scenario. This project has really allowed us to be more confident in saying that we're seeing the full range of possibilities."

Top National News

Largest US Grid Operator Rips Perry Plan To Subsidize Coal, Nuclear Power.

The AP (10/24, Levy) reports that PJM Interconnection, the nation's largest electric grid operator, "said a Trump administration plan to change the way electricity is priced to reward coal and nuclear power is both unworkable and potentially against the law." PJM operates the grid "covering 65 million people from Illinois to Washington, D.C." It "submitted formal comments on the plan late Monday to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission." PJM's president and CEO, Andy Ott said in a conference call with reporters, Energy Secretary Rick Perry's plan is not "workable." In fact, Ott added, "we do believe it's contrary to law and, again, will not really solve any problems." PJM "said the plan would undermine the reliability of markets, intrude on state policies and represent a radical departure from the commission's policies."

Bloomberg News (10/23, Traywick) reports PJM Interconnection CEO Andrew Ott, said, "I don't know how this proposal could be implemented without a detrimental impact on the market," adding that Perry's proposal is "discriminatory" and inconsistent with federal law. Ott's remarks "echo concerns raised by other grid operators, which on Monday asked the commission to reject Perry's proposal. The New York Independent System Operator, ISO New England and the Midcontinent Independent System Operator filed comments jointly with a coalition of organizations that wouldn't be affected," including the "Electric Reliability Council of Texas, the California Independent System Operator, and the Southwest Power Pool." In their comments the group said, "The proposal threatens to undermine price formation and competition in the nation's organized electricity markets."

EnergyWire (10/24, Kuckro) reports that Ott "said PJM...has been discussing for a year 'the need to properly value' reliability in the context of energy price formation." Ott said, "A better and least-cost solution would be to do proper valuation of resource attributes through a market construct rather than the proposed approach to do a regulatory construct." Ott said that providing compensation to a "subset of generators" is "discriminatory in the sense that it tries to differentiate between resources providing very similar or the same services to the grid." Ott added, "We think it is discriminatory and inconsistent with the Federal Power Act."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer (10/24, Funk) reports that the trade groups "counter that there is just no evidence that allowing the old plants to shut down and retire would in any way weaken the reliability of the high-voltage grid, echoing an earlier PJM analysis that the grid it manages in Ohio and 12 other states would be fine if 86 percent of the power came from gas turbines."

Crain's Cleveland Business (10/24) reports that even though the "rule appears to target PJM specifically," Ott said, "the PJM market is more diverse and reliable today than we've seen."

Tesla Urges FERC To Drop Coal, Nuclear Subsidy Plan. Bloomberg News (10/23, Doan) reports that Elon Musk's Tesla Inc. "waded into an intensifying debate" this week over whether US coal and nuclear plants "should be paid for their ability to supply around-the-clock power." Last month, Energy Secretary Rick Perry outlined a plan to "create special payments for plants capable of stockpiling 90 days' worth of fuel at their sites." In a filing to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission Monday, "Tesla urged the agency to dismiss Perry's proposal, saying it 'completely excludes the benefits of energy storage and distributed energy resources.'" Tesla instead urged the agency to "reprioritize" its efforts to "allow for more energy storage to compete in wholesale power markets" and "criticized Perry's plan for 'pre-determining' the kinds of resources that should receive payments."

Even Some Coal Generators Lukewarm To Perry Plan. Bloomberg News (10/24, Traywick) reports that while some coal generators including Dynegy Inc., are "poised to profit from Energy Secretary Rick Perry's plan to change power market rules" – that "doesn't mean they've thrown their full support behind it." Dynegy, "with about 9.5 gigawatts of coal-fired capacity, went as far as to file comments opposing it." Dynegy said, "Even from the perspective of a coal generator, the proposed rule should not be adopted because it would substantially, and potentially irreversibly, harm the nation's competitive electricity markets." NRG Energy, with "nearly 9 gigawatts of coal capacity" and Entergy Corp., with 2.2 gigawatts of coal capacity "also urged the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to proceed with caution."

Senate Dems Question Why Unconfirmed EPA Nominee Dourson Is Already Working.

The Washington Examiner (10/24, Siegel) reports that Democratic senators want to know why Michael Dourson, President Trump's unconfirmed nominee to lead the EPA's toxic chemicals office, is already working at the agency as a top advisor to Administrator Scott Pruitt. In a letter, the senators wrote, "Your appointment creates the appearance, and perhaps the effect, of circumventing the Senate's constitutional advice and consent responsibility for the position to which you have been nominated."

Trump Order Allows Refugee Admittance, Imposes Stricter Vetting.

Bloomberg News (10/24, Sink) reports President Trump "has ended his ban on admitting refugees to the US but will enact stricter vetting procedures for them, administration officials said." The Washington Times (10/24, Dinan) says the "new restrictions" will be imposed on "refugees from 11 mostly-Muslim target countries," who officials said "still pose too much of a danger to be admitted without a compelling national interest." Trump "issued a new executive order re-starting general worldwide refugee processing, updating the policy after a 120-day pause he ordered earlier this year as part of his "extreme vetting" policy."

The Washington Post (10/24, Miroff) reports "Administration officials said the State Department took the lead in developing the new vetting procedures, along with the Department of Homeland Security and the Office of the Director of National Intelligence." These "new rules do not adjust the number of refugees the United States will accept in the next 12 months, which Trump has limited to 45,000, the lowest level since the Refugee Act was created in 1980." USA Today (10/24, Korte) reports "acting Secretary of Homeland Security Elaine Duke said the new screening measures 'provide an opportunity for the United States to welcome those in need into our country, while ensuring a safer, more secure homeland.'" Reuters (10/24, Torbati, Rosenberg) indicates that according to a memo seen by Reuters, sent by the Administration to Congress on Tuesday "ahead of the government announcement on new refugee vetting measures, the administration also will place on hold a program that allows for family reunification for some refugees resettled in the United States."

The New York Times (10/24, Baker, Liptak) reports "refugee advocates said the new order is objectionable, noting that refugee applicants were already carefully screened and that no American has been killed in a terrorist attack by a refugee in the current era of concern over foreign-sponsored terrorism dating to the Sept. 11 attacks." The Wall Street Journal (10/24, Meckler, Harris), which broke the story about the new rules, quotes Eric Schwartz, President of Refugees International, who ran the refugee program at the State Department during the Obama Administration, as saying, "My fear and my expectation is that this will not be heightened scrutiny but rather an outright ban against refugees that have represented a majority of those coming into the United States in recent years."

In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (10/24) defends the concept of increasing scrutiny of would-be refugees, but worries that the new policy seems to have a different aim: to reduce their number. To the Journal, that may reflect the government's lack of confidence in its inability to properly identify potential terrorists from the pool of asylum applicants.

Supreme Court Dismisses Last Remaining Travel Ban Appeal. The New York Times (10/24, Liptak) reports that the Supreme Court on Tuesday dismissed “the last remaining appeal in a pair of cases challenging President Trump’s executive order, issued in March, that sought to limit travel to the United States.” The March order was replaced in September with broader restrictions that have “already been blocked by federal district courts in Hawaii and Maryland,” so Tuesday’s dismissal “mostly amounted to judicial housekeeping, clearing out challenges to the March order as the justices await eventual appeals from the one issued in September.” In its brief, unsigned disposition, the court said the March order had expired, “making the case moot.”

Reuters (10/24, Hurley) notes “the justices had been scheduled to hear arguments in the two consolidated on Oct. 10.” The Washington Examiner (10/24, Lovelace), The Hill (10/24, Wheeler) and Daily Caller (10/24, Daley), among other news outlets, also report the story.

The Washington Times (10/24, Dinan, Noble) reports, meanwhile, that “the Trump administration on Tuesday filed a notice that [it] intends to appeal the Hawaii judge’s ruling to the 9th US Circuit Court of Appeals.” Hawaii Attorney General Doug Chin, “who filed the case, said ‘we stand ready to defend it.’” Costs Of Security For EPA Administrator On The Rise.

The Hill (10/24, Shelbourne) reports that according to a report by CNN the Environmental Protection Agency’s “security expenses” are rising to “an unprecedented level.” The agency “is adding security personnel for its administrator, Scott Pruitt, the report said, citing more threats against him than individuals who held the Cabinet position in prior administrations.” The Hill adds, “Salaries for Pruitt’s security personnel will total $2 million alone, the network calculated.” EPA spokeswoman Liz Bowman said, “We decline to comment on security measures taken months ago to protect the administrator.”

Ross: Congress Will Work Out Details Of Tax Reform Plan.

The Washington Times (10/24, Persons) reports Commerce Secretary Ross “said Tuesday that details of President Trump’s tax plan need to be ‘ironed out.’” Ross told Bloomberg Daybreak, “What the president put forward is a framework. It’s a conceptual framework. It’s his objectives. ... But there are lots and lots of details to be ironed out, and that, very appropriately, is the work of Congress.”

Reuters/Ipsos Poll: Fewer Than Third Support Trump Tax Plan.

Reuters (10/24, Becker, Kahn) reports “fewer than a third of Americans support Donald Trump’s tax-cut plan, according to a Reuters/Ipsos poll released on Tuesday.” Moreover, “the poll found that more than two-thirds of registered voters said reducing the US federal budget deficit is more important than cutting taxes for the wealthy or for corporations.” Reuters adds that “Trump’s plan would balloon the deficit and add to the $20 trillion national debt, according to critics and independent analysts.”

NYTimes Analysis: Climate Change Causing Fluctuations In Europe’s Olive Oil Production.

The New York Times (10/24, Sengupta) reports, “The heat wave that swept across southern Europe this summer, which scientists say bore the fingerprints of human-induced climate change,” has transformed the olive oil industry “into an increasingly risky business – at least in the Mediterranean, the land of its birth.” Rabobank analyst Vito Martielli credited the bad harvests in three of the last five years to what he “called weather-related ‘shocks.’” While vacillations in the olive oil supply may not impact global hunger, the Times says, “the impact of climate change on such a hardy and high-end product is a measure of how global warming is beginning to challenge how we grow food.”

Industry Representatives Lobby Senators To Preserve NAFTA.

The New York Times (10/24, Swanson, Kitroeff) reports that more than “130 representatives” from the automotive, retail, and other industries “stormed Capitol Hill on Tuesday in an extraordinary show of force against a Republican president they fear will cripple or kill the North American Free Trade Agreement.” The industry representatives “met with senators on Tuesday to ratchet up pressure on lawmakers — many of whose constituents work for companies dependent on Nafta — to keep the deal intact.” Tuesday’s effort, which was organized by the US Chamber of Commerce, comes as Administration proposals to rewrite the agreement “have triggered alarm bells among automakers, retailers, agricultural companies and other businesses, who say the provisions the United States is pushing are 'poison pills' that would hurt American companies and jobs."

In an op-ed for the Wall Street Journal (10/24), Jim Bair, president of the US Apple Association, argues that while President Trump has called NAFTA the "worst trade deal ever made," the US apple industry has thrived under the agreement. Terminating it, he writes, could result in a large tariff on exported apples and reduced earnings for apple growers and their employees.

Bureau Of Labor Statistics: Manufacturing Job Market Will Further Decline In Next Decade.

The New York Times (10/24, Casselman) reports that according to a study by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, "a decade from now, the American economy could look much the way it does today – only more so," increasingly "dominated by the service sector amid the continued erosion of manufacturing jobs." It will also be "more polarized in both earnings and geography," and "more tilted toward jobs that require at least a bachelor's degree." The Washington Free Beacon (10/24, Meyer) notes the study also found "employment is projected to grow by 11.5 million from .156,100,000 to 167,600,000, an increase of 0.7 percent. This is greater than the 0.5 percent growth seen in the previous decade from 2006 through 2016, which included the recession that began in December 2007."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Public Art Takes Flight." A New York Times (10/24) editorial.

Washington Post.

"Jeff Flake's Diagnosis Is Right But It's Not Enough." The Washington Post (10/24) says in an editorial that conservatives may be "chastened by [Sen. Jeff Flake's] example." Republicans "who fancy themselves true conservatives...should stand up against Mr. Trump's noxious politics" But they must also "fashion an agenda and a political style that can compete successfully in primaries against Trumpism. Until they do, all the eloquence in the world will not be enough."

"Interpol Should Not Be Abused As Putin's Tool Of Revenge." A Washington Post (10/24) editorial says Interpol "has been attempting to halt abuse of the red-notice system," but argues that the reform effort "needs to run deeper and guard against politicization of the Interpol diffusion notices, too. The United States should also be on guard against diffusion notices intended to silence dissent. It is wrong to allow Mr. Putin's vengeful rants to be translated into action. Magnitsky's legacy is that violations of human rights will not be tolerated, and those who speak out will not be silenced."

"The Government Needs To Get Its Act Together In Puerto Rico." The Washington Post (10/24) editorializes that in contrast to the situation in Texas and Florida, "more than a month after Maria made landfall on" Puerto Rico "roughly 8 out of 10 residents are still without power." While "the sorry, preexisting state of Puerto Rico's power system...clearly accounts for some of the delay...that doesn't excuse the bad planning and questionable decisions that have marked the response to a calamity that was so clearly anticipated." To the Post, "giving a no-bid $300 million contract to a company that had just two full-time employees on the day Maria struck is, at best, curious and deserving of more scrutiny."

Wall Street Journal.

"A Bipartisan Drug Cartel?" A Wall Street Journal (10/24) editorial takes issue with a Washington Post and "60 Minutes" investigation which implied that the Ensuring Patient Access and Effective Drug Enforcement Act, which was sponsored by Rep. Tom Marino, who recently withdrew from consideration to be director of ONDCP, ended the DEA's authority to go after illegal shipments of prescription drugs, noting that the main source for the story was former DEA official Joe Rannazzisi who is now a consultant for lawyers suing the opioid industry.

"Terrorists And Travel." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (10/24) defends the concept of increasing scrutiny of would-be refugees, but worries that the new policy seems to have a different aim: To reduce their number. To the Journal, that may reflect the government's lack of confidence in its inability to properly identify potential terrorists from the pool of asylum applicants.

"Illinois's Latest Criminals." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (10/24) criticizes Illinois

State Senate Democrats and seven Republicans for voting to override Gov. Bruce Rauner's veto of the "Collective Bargaining Freedom Act," which bans right-to-work zones in the state and threatens officials who enact them with a class-A misdemeanor.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Rift Widens Within GOP In Battle For Control Of Party

Wealthier Depositors Pressure Banks To Pay Up

China Boosts Powers Of Xi Jinping As Equal To Mao

Buildings Across US Are Wrapped In Same Panels That Fueled Deadly London Fire

New York Times:

Jeff Flake, A Fierce Trump Critic, Will Not Seek Re-Election For Senate

Another Republican Call To Arms, But Who Will Answer?

Consumer Bureau Loses Fight To Allow More Class-Action Suits

Across Myanmar, Denial Of Ethnic Cleansing And Loathing Of Rohingya

China Enshrines 'Xi Jinping Thought.' What Does That Mean?

US Must Let Undocumented Teenager Get An Abortion, Appeals Court Says

Some Schools Reopen In Puerto Rico, Making Do Without Power

Washington Post:

Amid Politics Of Extremes, Northam Sticks To Solid Résumé And Mild Image

China Puts Xi On Par With Mao In Party Pantheon

Clinton Campaign, DNC Funded Russia Info

Republicans' Dilemma: Speak Out Or Hope Silence Pays Off

2 GOP Senators Issue Blunt Warnings On Trump

Financial Times:

AfD Accuses Bundestag Rivals Of Nazi-Era Tactics

Strong US Earnings Lift Confidence In Global Outlook

Surge In Morocco Migrants Raises Alarm In Spain

Xi Jinping Confirmed As China's Most Powerful Leader Since Mao

Washington Times:

Congress Launches 2 Investigations Into Obama Administration Dealings

Trump's Republican Unity Luncheon Backfires As Sen. Jeff Flake Quits, Unleashes Wrath

Conservative Groups Get Behind Bannon Revolt Against Republican Establishment

Court Dismisses Government Objections, Says Illegal Immigrant Has Right To Immediate Abortion

Trump Signs New Order Restricting Refugees From 11 'High Risk' Countries

Thousands Of Islamic State Fighters Return To Home Countries; Russia No. 1 Source

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: GOP Senators-Trump; Niger US Casualty Investigation; Severe Weather; Weather Forecast; Tampa-Serial Killer Manhunt; SF Airport Close Call Investigation; Puerto Rico Hurricane Recovery; Hillary Clinton Email Investigation; Michigan-Highway Prank Murder; Cleveland Police Standoff; Pittsburgh Bank Robbery; Lottery Policy Change; Young Basketball Player.

CBS: GOP Senators-Trump; Niger US Casualty Investigation; SF Airport Close Call Investigation; Severe Weather; Sandy Hook Shooting Investigation Report; Las Vegas Shooting Investigation; Exercise-Health Benefits; Hollywood Director Sexual Harassment; Hawaii-Walking And Texting Fine; Robert Guillaume Dies; NFL Player Training.

NBC: GOP Senators-Trump; GOP Senators-Expert Comment; Niger US Casualty Investigation; Cuba-US Embassy Sonic Attack Investigation; Michigan-Highway Prank Murder; Puerto Rico Hurricane Recovery; Heath-Cancer Gene Therapy; Robert Guillaume Dies; Sears-Discontinuing Whirlpool; Lottery Policy Change; Baseball World Series.

Network TV At A Glance:

GOP Senators-Trump – 12 minutes, 35 seconds

Niger US Casualty Investigation – 6 minutes, 50 seconds
Puerto Rico Hurricane Recovery – 4 minutes
SF Airport Close Call Investigation – 3 minutes, 30 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Consumer Protection Law Repeal; Hurricane Relief Bill; GOP Senators-Trump; Manafort-Money Laundering; Baseball World Series; Wall Street News.

CBS: GOP Senators-Trump; Tax Reform Bill; Baseball World Series; Consumer Protection Law Repeal; Russian Dossier Investigation.

FOX: 2010 Nuclear Deal Investigation; Michigan-Highway Prank Murder; Vaccination Study.

NPR: GOP Senators-Trump; White House-Refugee Resettlement Plan; Baseball World Series; Wall Street News.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Receives a briefing on hurricane recovery efforts in Dallas, TX; participates in a roundtable with Republican National Committee (RNC) supporters; gives remarks at a Dallas Trump victory reception.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Participates in a Gillespie for Governor event; delivers keynote remarks at In Defense of Christians' annual Solidarity Dinner for Christians in the Middle East.

US Senate: 9:15 AM Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Seapower CLOSED hearing – Subcommittee hearing on Major Threats Facing Naval Forces and the Navy's Current and Planned Capabilities to Meet Those Threats. Witnesses: Admiral William F. Moran, USN, Vice Chief of Naval Operations; Jason A. Reynolds, Director, Special Programs Office of the Chief of Naval Operations. <https://www.armed-services.senate.gov/hearings/17-10-25-major-threats-facing-naval-forces-and-the-navys-current-and-planned-capabilities-to-meet-those-threats> Location: Room SVC-217, The Office of Senate Security in the Capitol Visitor Center

9:30 AM Arctic Refuge Day of Action and rally – Gwich'in leaders and conservationists call on Congress to 'keep the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge out of the budget process', at rally with Democratic Reps. Jared Huffman and Raul Grijalva, Alaska Wilderness League Executive Director Adam Kolton, and Gwich'in Steering Committee Executive Director Bernadette Demientieff Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC www.alaskawild.org <https://twitter.com/alaskawild>

10:00 AM POSTPONED: Senate Intelligence Committee holds hearing with President Trump's personal attorney invited to testify – POSTPONED: Senate Select Committee on Intelligence holds hearing with Michael Cohen – personal attorney to President Donald Trump – having been invited to appear * Cohen was originally scheduled to speak with the committee in a closed interview, but defied committee requests to refrain from public comment and released a public statement, leading the committee to postpone the interview and reschedule his appearance in an open session Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.senate.gov>

10:00 AM Senate Environment and Public Works Committee Business Meeting, legislative hearing – Business Meeting, with agenda including nominations of Michael Dourson, William Wehrum, Matthew Leopold, and David Ross to be Environmental Protection Agency Assistant Administrators; Paul Trombino III to be Federal Highway Administration Administrator; and Jeffery Baran to be a Nuclear Regulatory Commission member (reappointment) * Immediately followed by legislative hearing on 'S. XXXXXX, the Wildfire Prevention and Mitigation Act of 2017' Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

10:00 AM Hearing on 'The Economic Outlook with CEA Chairman Kevin Hassett' Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1100, Washington, DC www.jec.senate.gov <https://twitter.com/JointEconCmte>

10:00 AM Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee top secret briefing on Nigeria – Africa and Global Health Policy Subcommittee closed / top secret briefing on 'Nigeria Security Update', given by Acting Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Donald Yamamoto; and State Department Regional and Arms Transfers Office Director Mike Miller Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, SVC-217, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Commerce, Science, & Transportation Committee hearing on the commercial satellite industry – Hearing on 'The Commercial Satellite Industry: What's Up and What's on the Horizon', with testimony from SpaceX Vice President of Satellite Government Affairs Patricia Cooper; ViaSat CEO Mark Dankberg; Intelsat CEO Stephen Spengler; and OneWeb founder and Executive Chairman Greg Wyler Location: Rm 253, Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

10:30 AM Senate Veteran's Affairs committee business meeting – Business Meeting: Meeting to Consider Pending Nominations: Melissa Sue Glynn, Nominee to be Assistant Secretary for Enterprise Integration; Randy Reeves, Nominee to be Under Secretary for Memorial Affairs; Cheryl L. Mason, Nominee to be Chairman of the Board of Veterans' Appeals.

<https://www.veterans.senate.gov/hearings/business-meeting-meeting-to-consider-pending-nomination-10252017> Location: S-216 U.S. Capitol

10:30 AM House and Senate Dems Call for Passage of the Bipartisan Dream Act – Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL), House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-CA), Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA), Chair of the House Democratic Caucus Rep. Joe Crowley (D-NY), Senator Kirsten Gillibrand (D-NY), Rep. Judy Chu (D-CA), and Senator Kamala Harris (D-CA) join university presidents and chancellors to call for urgent passage of the bipartisan Dream Act. Speakers will highlight the contributions of Dreamers to campuses throughout the country and the positive impact Dreamers have on higher education. Additional speakers: Nejvi Bejko, Dreamer; Leezia Dhalla, Dreamer; Michael J. Sheeran, S.J., President of the Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities (AJCU); Gary May, Chancellor for the University of California, Davis; Kristina Johnson, State University of New York Chancellor; Satish Tripathi, President of the University at Buffalo; Havidan Rodriguez, President of the University at Albany. Location: SVC 208 durbin.senate.gov <https://twitter.com/SenatorDurbin>

10:30 AM Senate Governmental Affairs Committee votes on nominees for OPM and GSA heads – Business Meeting, with agenda including consideration of nominations of Jeff Pon to be Office of Personnel Management Director, and Michael Rigas to be Deputy Director; and Emily Murphy to be General Services Administration Administrator Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 342, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

11:00 AM Congressional Gold Medal presented to Filipino WWII vets – House of Representatives and Senate leadership present a Congressional Gold Medal in honor of Filipino veterans of World War II, for their service and sacrifice during the war. Event participants include House Speaker Paul Ryan, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, Secretary of Veterans Affairs David Shulkin, vets and their next of kin, and other Members of Congress * Congressional Gold Medal is the highest civilian honor Congress can bestow. A single medal has been struck to honor all the vets Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, Emancipation Hall, Washington, DC <http://speaker.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SpeakerRyan>

12:00 PM Childhood cancer research foundation hosts Congressional briefing – St. Baldrick's Foundation luncheon briefing on Capitol Hill, with panels discussing advances in immunotherapy and pediatric oncology research and the challenges and opportunities in drug development and treatment. Bipartisan Sens. Marco Rubio and Michael Bennet act as honorary Congressional hosts * Time approximate * Foundation is the largest private funder of childhood cancer research grants Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, SVC-212-210, Washington, DC <http://www.stbaldricks.org/> <https://twitter.com/stbaldricks>

2:30 PM Business Meeting, to consider 'S. 1223, Klamath Tribe Judgement Fund Repeal Act' Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 628, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

2:30 PM Senate Aging Committee hearing on working and aging with disabilities – Hearing on 'Working and Aging with Disabilities: From School to Retirement', with testimony from Indiana University Professor Emeritus Dr David Michael Mank; University of Illinois-Chicago Professor Dr Tamar Heller; Jeff Smith; and Spurwink President and CEO Eric Meyer Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 562, Washington, DC <http://aging.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Senate Indian Affairs Committee legislative hearing – Legislative hearing on 'S. 1870, the Securing Urgent Resources Vital to Indian Victim Empowerment Act 2017', 'S. 1953, the Reauthorization of the Tribal and Law Order Act of 2010', and 'S. 1942, a bill to direct the AG to review, revise and develop law enforcement and justice protocols appropriate to address missing and murdered Indians', with testimony from U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Oklahoma R. Trent Shores; Bureau of Indian Affairs Director Bryan Rice; Sisseton Wahpeton Oyate of the Lake Traverse Reservation Chairman Dave Flute; Confederated Tribes of the Colville Reservation Business Councilman Joel Boyd; and Native Women's Society of the Great Plains Director Carmen O'Leary Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 628, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

US House: 10:00 AM House Judiciary Committee markup hearing continues – Markup hearing continues on 'H.R. X, Agricultural Guestworker Act' and 'H.R. 3711, Legal Workforce Act' * Began yesterday Location: Rm 2141, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC

<http://judiciary.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseJudiciary>

10:00 AM House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on housing finance reform – Housing and Insurance Subcommittee hearing on ‘Sustainable Housing Finance: Private Sector Perspectives on Housing Finance Reform’, with testimony from BlackRock Managing Director Kevin Chavers (on behalf of Securities Industry and Financial Markets Association); First Federal Savings Senior Vice President Brenda Hughes (on behalf of American Bankers Association); First State Bank President and CEO Samuel Vallandingham (on behalf of Independent Community Bankers of America); Center for Responsible Lending Executive Vice President Nikitra Bailey; and Tower Federal Credit Union President and CEO Rick Stafford (on behalf of National Association of Federally-Insured Credit Unions) Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM House Commerce subcommittees joint hearing on combating the opioid crisis – Health Subcommittee and Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee joint hearing on ‘Federal Efforts to Combat the Opioid Crisis: A Status Update on CARA and Other Initiatives’, with testimony from Drug Enforcement Administration Deputy Assistant Administrator for Diversion Control Neil Doherty; Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Dr Scott Gottlieb; Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) Assistant Secretary for Mental Health and Substance Use Dr Elinore McCance-Katz; CDC Principal Deputy Director Dr Anne Schuchat; and NIH National Institute on Drug Abuse Director Dr Nora Volkow Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Appropriations subcommittee hearing on Down syndrome – Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Subcommittee hearing on ‘Down Syndrome: Update on the State of the Science and Potential for Discoveries Across Other Major Diseases’, with testimony from bipartisan Reps. Cathy McMorris Rodgers, Cheri Bustos, and Pete Sessions; Global Down Syndrome Foundation founder, CEO, and President Michelle Sie Whitten; University of California-San Diego Down Syndrome Center for Research and Treatment Executive Director Dr William Mobley; University of Colorado School of Medicine Linda Crnic Institute for Down Syndrome Executive Director Dr Joaquin Espinosa; and Global Down Syndrome Foundation’s Frank Stephens Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2358-C, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAppropsGOP>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources Committee oversight hearing on greater sage grouse recovery – Oversight hearing on ‘Empowering State Based Management Solutions for Greater Sage Grouse Recovery’, with testimony from Idaho House Speaker Scott Bedke; Utah Division of Natural Resources Deputy Director Darin Bird; Montana Department of Natural Resources and Conservation Director John Tubbs; and Board of Eureka County Commissioners (NV) Chairman J.J. Goicoechea Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1324, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM House Technology subcommittee holds hearing on Russian software allegedly used for hacking – Oversight Subcommittee hearing on ‘Bolstering the Government’s Cybersecurity: Assessing the Risk of Kaspersky Lab Products to the Federal Government’, with testimony from National Institute of Standards and Technology Chief Cybersecurity Advisor Donna Dodson; General Services Administration CIO David Shive; Play-Action Strategies President James Norton; and International Institute for Strategic Studies Director of Future Conflict and Cyber Security Sean Kanuck * Follows reports alleging that Russian hackers could use Kaspersky Lab’s software to conduct espionage Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2318, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM Hearing on ‘The Economic Outlook with CEA Chairman Kevin Hassett’ Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1100, Washington, DC www.jec.senate.gov <https://twitter.com/JointEconCmte>

10:00 AM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on the president’s Iran decision – Middle East and North Africa Subcommittee hearing on ‘The President’s Iran Decision: Next Steps’, with testimony from Foundation for Defense of Democracies Senior Advisor on Science and Nonproliferation (and former International Atomic Energy Agency Deputy Director General) Dr Olli Heinonen; United Against Nuclear Iran CEO (and former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations for Management and Reform) Mark Wallace; and Council on Foreign Relations Senior Fellow in U.S. Foreign Policy (and former White House Coordinator for the Middle East, North Africa, and the Gulf Region) Dr Philip Gordon * Earlier this month, President Donald Trump announced his strategy on Iran, including withdrawing certification of the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA) on Tehran’s nuclear program, which he has previously described as ‘one of the worst deals I've ever seen' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

10:30 AM House and Senate Dems Call for Passage of the Bipartisan Dream Act – Senator Dick Durbin (D-IL), House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi (D-CA), Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA), Chair of the House Democratic Caucus Rep. Joe Crowley (D-NY), Senator Kirsten Gillibrand (D-NY), Rep. Judy Chu (D-CA), and Senator Kamala Harris (D-CA) join university presidents and chancellors to call for urgent passage of the bipartisan Dream Act. Speakers will highlight the contributions of Dreamers to campuses throughout the country and the positive impact Dreamers have on higher education. Additional speakers: Nejvi Bejko, Dreamer; Leezia Dhalla, Dreamer; Michael J. Sheeran, S.J., President of the Association of Jesuit Colleges and Universities (AJCU); Gary May, Chancellor for the University of California, Davis; Kristina Johnson, State University of New York Chancellor; Satish Tripathi, President of the University at Buffalo; Havidan Rodriguez, President of the University at Albany. Location: SVC 208 durbin.senate.gov <https://twitter.com/SenatorDurbin>

10:30 AM House Veterans' Affairs subcommittee hearing on VBA overpayments – Disability Assistance and Memorial Affairs Subcommittee hearing on 'Examining How VBA Can Effectively Prevent and Manage Overpayments', with testimony from Veterans Benefits Administration Deputy Under Secretary for Field Operations Willie Clark, and Compensation Service Director Beth Murphy; Department of Veterans Affairs Office of Management Debt Management Center Acting Director Roberta Lowe; The American Legion National Veterans Affairs and Rehabilitation Division Deputy Director David Spivey; Disabled American Veterans Assistant National Legislative Director Shane Liermann; and Veterans of Foreign Wars National Legislative Service Deputy Director John Towles + written submission from National Association of County Veterans Service Officers Location: Cannon House Office Building, Rm 334, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

11:00 AM Congressional Gold Medal presented to Filipino WWII vets – House of Representatives and Senate leadership present a Congressional Gold Medal in honor of Filipino veterans of World War II, for their service and sacrifice during the war. Event participants include House Speaker Paul Ryan, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer, House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi, Secretary of Veterans Affairs David Shulkin, vets and their next of kin, and other Members of Congress * Congressional Gold Medal is the highest civilian honor Congress can bestow. A single medal has been struck to honor all the vets Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, Emancipation Hall, Washington, DC <http://speaker.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SpeakerRyan>

11:00 AM House Small Business subcommittee hearing on GAO report – Contracting and Workforce Subcommittee hearing on 'GAO Audit Reveals Half-Measures Taken by Small Business Advocates', with testimony from Government Accountability Office Director of Financial Markets and Community Investment William Shear; Small Business Administration Associate Administrator for Government Contracting and Business Development Robb Wong; and Department of Homeland Security Office of Small and Disadvantaged Business Utilization Director Kevin Boshears Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2360, Washington, DC <http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

11:00 AM House Administration Committee hearing on state voter registration list management – Hearing on 'State Voter Registration List Management', with testimony from Indiana Secretary of State Connie Lawson; and American Civil Liberties Union Voting Rights Project Director Dale Ho Location: Rm 1310, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://cha.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseAdmnGOP>

12:00 PM House expected to vote on Sunshine for Regulations and Regulatory Decrees and Settlements Act – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include completion of consideration of 'H.R. 469 – Sunshine for Regulations and Regulatory Decrees and Settlements Act of 2017', as amended, plus consideration of legislation (possibly including 'H.R. 1698 – Iran Ballistic Missiles and International Sanctions Enforcement Act', as amended, 'H.Res. 359 – Urging the European Union to designate Hizballah in its entirety as a terrorist organization and increase pressure on it and its members', as amended, 'H.R. 3342 – Sanctioning Hizballah's Illicit Use of Civilians as Defenseless Shields Act', as amended, and 'H.R. 3329 – Hizballah International Financing Prevention Amendments Act of 2017', as amended) under suspension of the rules Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

2:00 PM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on FCC oversight – Communications and Technology Subcommittee hearing on 'Oversight of the Federal Communications Commission (FCC)', with testimony from FCC Chairman Ajit Pai, and Commissioners Brendan Carr, Mignon Clyburn, Michael O'Rielly, and Jessica Rosenworcel Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm

2322, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>
2:00 PM Dem Reps. Alma Adams and Nydia Velazquez host 'Necessity as a Driver of Women's Entrepreneurship' roundtable – Democratic Reps. Alma Adams and Nydia Velazquez host 'Small Business Roundtable: Necessity as a Driver of Women's Entrepreneurship' – during National Women in Small Business Month – focusing on 'how the unique factors that drive women to become small business owners (including child care, career opportunity, and gender discrimination in the workplace) have an outsized influence over minority women and their need to start their own small businesses to continue providing for their families'. Witnesses are WANDA – Women Advancing Nutrition Dietetics and Agriculture founder and CEO Tandra Raye Stevenson, Esteem Logic President/CEO Kristina Francis, Create& co-founder and Chief Design Strategist Maia Sciupac, National Women Business Council Executive Director Esther Morales, and National Women Business Council Director of Policy and Research Anna Rorem Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2360, Washington, DC <http://adams.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/RepAdams>

2:00 PM House Ways and Means subcommittee hearing on the Miscellaneous Tariff Bill process – Trade Subcommittee hearing on 'Miscellaneous Tariff Bill: Providing Tariff Relief to U.S. Manufacturers Through the New MTB Process' Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1100, Washington, DC <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

2:00 PM Economic Opportunity Subcommittee markup hearing Location: Cannon House Office Building, Rm 334, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

2:00 PM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Indian, Insular and Alaska Native Affairs Subcommittee legislative hearing on 'H.R. 215, American Indian Empowerment Act of 2017', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Indian Affairs John Tahsuda III; Navajo Nation Vice President Jonathon Nez; Santa Clara Pueblo Governor J. Michael Chavarria; Tribal Economic Growth Alliance representative Henry Cagey; Indian Land Tenure Foundation President Cris Stainbrook; and Compass Lexecon Executive Vice President Eric Henson Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1324, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

2:00 PM House Oversight subcommittees joint hearing on the IRS – Health Care, Benefits, and Administrative Rules Subcommittee and Government Operations Subcommittee joint hearing on 'Ongoing Management Challenges at IRS', with testimony from Department of the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration J. Russell George, and Deputy Inspector General for Inspections and Evaluations Gregory Kutz; and Internal Revenue Service Deputy Commissioner for Operations Support Jeffrey Tribiano, and CIO Gina Garza Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2154, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

2:00 PM House Financial Services Committee hearing on the Equifax data breach continues, following call from Dem members – Hearing continues on 'Examining the Equifax Data Breach', with testimony from Massachusetts Assistant Attorney General Sara Cable; National Consumer Law Center Staff Attorney Chi Chi Wu; TransUnion President and CEO James Peck; Equifax Interim CEO Paulino do Rego Barros Jr.; Experian CEO Brian Cassin; Georgetown University Law Center Center on Privacy and Technology Deputy Director Laura Moy; and U.S. PIRG Consumer Advocate Mike Litt * The additional day to the hearing was demanded by the Committee's Democratic members under the committee's rules, and they have selected the witnesses Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

7:00 PM House Dems speak on chamber floor on General Baptist State Convention of North Carolina 150th annual session – Democratic Reps. G. K. Butterfield, David Price, and Alma Adams deliver remarks on the House of Representatives floor recognizing the upcoming (30 Oct – 1 Nov) 150th annual session of the General Baptist State Convention of North Carolina * Time approximate Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC Butterfield.house.gov <https://twitter.com/GKButterfield>

Other: 8:30 AM Inter-American Dialogue hosts Latin America Energy Conference – Inter-American Dialogue hosts Latin America Energy Conference, discussing 'the most critical energy policy issues in the region', with keynotes from White House Special Assistant to the President for International Energy and Environment David Banks and Mexican Deputy Secretary of Energy Cesar Emiliano Hernandez Ochoa, Inter-American Dialogue President Michael Shifter, Republican Rep. Jeff Duncan, Verisk Maplecroft Head of Oil & Gas Risk RoseAnne Franco, Holland & Knight Partner Jose Vicente Zapata Lugo, Eurasia Group Latin America Director Risa Grais-Targow, Inter-American Development Bank Energy Division Chief Ariel Yepez, State Department Bureau of

Energy Resources Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary Sue Saarnio, and Berkeley Research Group Managing Director Adam Borison Location: Inter-American Dialogue, 1155 15th St NW, Washington, DC www.thedialogue.org https://twitter.com/The_Dialogue #DialogueEnergy

8:30 AM GOP Sen. Bob Corker speaks on 'Ending Modern Slavery' at CSIS – 'Ending Modern Slavery' Center for Strategic and International Studies discussion, with Republican Sen. Bob Corker and Principality of Liechtenstein Financial Intelligence Unit Director Daniel Thelesklaf Location: Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1616 Rhode Island Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

9:00 AM Bipartisan Sens. Chris Murphy and Bill Cassidy speak at Health 202 Live launch – The Washington Post launches The Health 202 Live series, which will 'bring a sharp analysis of The Health 202 newsletter to stage featuring in-depth, live interviews with policymakers and industry leaders in Washington, DC and outside the Beltway'. Event speakers discuss 'the current status of health care reform efforts, the future of Medicare and Medicaid and the state of the insurance marketplace'. Speakers include Democratic Sen. Chris Murphy, Republican Sen. Bill Cassidy, Kentucky Governor Matt Bevin, America's Health Insurance Plans President and Chief Executive Marilyn Tavenner, Covered California Executive Director Peter Lee, Florida Covering Kids and Families Project Director Jodi Ray, National Viral Hepatitis Roundtable Executive Director Ryan Clary, and Harvard Law School professor and Law School's Center for Health Law and Policy Innovation Faculty Director Robert Greenwald Location: The Washington Post, 1301 K St NW, Washington, DC <http://www.washingtonpost.com/> <https://twitter.com/washingtonpost>

9:15 AM Dem Sen. Ben Cardin speaks on senior leadership and diversity at CSIS – 'Transformational Leadership in International Affairs' Center for Strategic and International Studies discussion on senior leadership and diversity. The conference examines 'strategic imperatives for diversifying the senior ranks of U.S. national security agencies and look at new talent management approaches in leading U.S. global companies'. Speakers include Democratic Sen. Ben Cardin, Diversity and Leadership in International Affairs Project Executive Director Deborah McCarthy, former State Department Director General Ruth Davis, and CSIS President and CEO Dr John Hamre Location: Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1616 Rhode Island Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

9:30 AM Labor Secretary Acosta attends Kemp Forum on 'Opportunity in the New Digital Economy' – Jack Kemp Foundation, in partnership with the Internet Association, hosts 'Opportunity in the New Digital Economy' Kemp Forum, with Secretary of Labor Alexander Acosta, Republicans Sens. Ben Sasse and Tim Scott, and Rep. Will Hurd, President's Assistant for Strategic Initiatives Chris Liddell, Federal Trade Commission Commissioner Terrell McSweeney, Walmart Senior Vice President of Global Public Affairs and Government Relations Dan Bryant, former FCC transition team lead Mark Jamison, Progressive Policy Institute's Michael Mandel, Economists Incorporated's Hal Singer, Entropy Economics' Bret Swanson, Jack Kemp Foundation's Jimmy Kemp, and Internet Association President and CEO Michael Beckerman Location: 101 Constitution Ave NW, Washington, DC www.jackkempfoundation.org <https://twitter.com/kempfoundation>

12:30 PM 'Stop the Rollback of Our Clean Car Standards' campaign launched – 'Forward, Not Backward: Stop the Rollback of Our Clean Car Standards' campaign launched, to 'protect vehicle fuel efficiency and greenhouse gas emission standards' and educate and mobilize the public to call out and halt automakers' rollback efforts. Speakers on press call include Democratic Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse, Sierra Club Executive Director Michael Brune, Environment America Executive Director Margie Alt, Public Citizen President Robert Weissman, Greenpeace Projects Director Leila Deen, and Safe Climate Campaign Director Dan Becker Location: TBD www.sierraclub.org <https://twitter.com/sierraclub>

12:30 PM Singaporean PM Lee speaks at Council on Foreign Relations – Council on Foreign Relations hosts Singaporean Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong, discussing U.S.-Singapore bilateral relations as well as strategic challenges and opportunities in the Asia-Pacific region Location: Council on Foreign Relations, 1777 F St NW, Washington, DC www.cfr.org https://twitter.com/CFR_org

1:30 PM Annual Attorney General's Awards Ceremony – 65th Annual Attorney General's Awards Ceremony, recognizing Department of Justice employees and others for distinguished public service. Attorney General Jeff Sessions and Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein deliver remarks Location: DAR Constitution Hall, 1776 D St NW, Washington, DC <http://www.usdoj.gov> <https://twitter.com/TheJusticeDept>

Annual Congressional Correspondents' Dinner – 73rd Annual Congressional Correspondents' Dinner, including announcement of the winners of the Joan S. Barone Award, David Bloom Award, and Jerry Thompson Award. Event features keynote speaker House Speaker Paul Ryan, and 'The Daily Show with Trevor Noah' correspondent Roy Wood Jr. and guest emcee Bobby Bones

Location: National Building Museum, 401 F St NW, Washington, DC rtcacaphill.org
<https://twitter.com/rtcadinner>

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: "Donald Trump's merchandise team is trying to make Halloween great again. For real. They have a new hat. ... The hat goes for $45. It is already sold out. Like the Trump Administration, it is only available for a limited time."

Stephen Colbert: "You might recall that [Sen. Bob] Corker called the White House 'an adult daycare center.' Okay, clever, but not entirely accurate. With Trump, you also need a night shift."

Stephen Colbert: "It came out that [Bill] O'Reilly settled a sixth sexual harassment claim, paying $32 million to a longtime Fox News analyst for, among other things, allegedly sending her gay pornography. But because it was from Bill O'Reilly, all of those gay porn stars said 'Merry Christmas' before coming down your chimney."

James Corden: "In a series of tweets, Trump called Corker a 'lightweight.' He called him 'incompetent,' and he mocked his height by once again calling him 'Little Bob Corker.' So, looks like the First Lady's anti-bullying initiative still has a ways to go."

James Corden: "At one point, Corker told reporters that Trump's legacy will be, 'the debasement of our nation.' Yeah, debasement. As in, when Trump starts a war, I'll be hiding in the-basement."

Jimmy Fallon: "Republican Senator Jeff Flake announced that he will not seek reelection and said the GOP was headed in the wrong direction. Or as Trump calls it, 'Flake news.'"

Seth Meyers: "A protester posing as a journalist threw Russian flags at President Trump as he arrived at the Capitol today and shouted, 'Trump is treason!' Then she went back to her book tour."

Seth Meyers: "Tomorrow is Ivanka Trump and Jared Kushner's eighth wedding anniversary. If you're wondering what to get them, how about out? Get them out."

Conan O'Brien: "President Trump and Bob Corker are in a feud after Corker compared the White House to a daycare center. When they heard this, 3-year-olds everywhere said, 'Oh, no, do not lump us in with that guy.'"

Conan O'Brien: "Bill O'Reilly revealed that he is mad at God for putting him through his sexual harassment scandal. Today, God refused to comment."

Conan O'Brien: "A California elementary school was under fire for putting up a Donald Trump scarecrow. Even worse, 30 percent of the crows still think that Trump scarecrow is doing a great job."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, September 6, 2017
Date: Wednesday, September 06, 2017 7:02:25 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Associated Press: National Monuments Could Benefit Rural Economies In The West.
- Bismarck (ND) Tribune: North Dakota's Congressional Delegation Expected To Attend Trump Speech.
- NPR: Western Wildfires Endanger Beloved Sites At National Parks.
- The Hill: Week Ahead: Lawmakers To Consider Harvey Aid.
- Daily Caller: OIG Finds Millions In Possible DOI Fraud.
- Colorado Springs (CO) Gazette: Vince Bzdek: Don't Drain The Swamp; Move It From Washington, D.C., To Colorado.
- Helena (MT) Independent Record: Time To End Recreation Welfare On Public Lands.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- New Court Aims To Keep Native American Foster Kids Connected To Family, Culture.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Associated Press: North Dakota Minerals May Be Included In Oil Lease Sale.
- U.S. News & World Report: Burning Man Says US Tried To Stop Sunday Fire After Death.

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

- Gulf Refineries Start To Come Back Online.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Law360: Feds, Enviros Agree To End ESA Suit Over Minn. Forest.
- Ronan Valley (MT) Journal: Comment Period Extended For Bison Range.
- U.S. News & World Report: Quino Checkerspot Butterfly: The Unlikely Latest Angle To Trump's Border Wall Fight.

National Park Service

- U.S. News & World Report: Washington Monument To Get $10M Upgrades, Reopen Spring 2019.
- Fox News: Trump Fans And 'Juggalos' Will Share National Mall In DC On Sept.
- Jackson Hole (WY) News & Guide: Jackson To Welcome Six New U.S. Citizens.
- Associated Press: Idaho Racing To Combat Deadly Bat Fungus.
- U.S. News & World Report: Yosemite Ranger: Falling Tree Branch Injures 2 Park Visitors.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- ABC: Trump Signals Willingness To Boost Arms Sales To Asia Allies.

Top National News

- ABC: Administration Moves To Phase Out DACA As Trump Calls On Congress To "Legalize" It.
- Bloomberg News: Trump Tells GOP Leaders Tax Reform Will Create "Millions Of New Jobs."
- Washington Times: WTimes Analysis: Time Running Short For Republicans To Repeal ACA.
- Politico: McCarthy: GOP Won't Start Wall Fight Until "Later In The Year."
- Washington Post: WPost A1: Conservative Charities Fueled Trump's Exit From Climate Accord.
- Washington Free Beacon: DOJ Won't Appeal Ruling Against Obama-Era Overtime Rule.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Donald Trump's Cowardice On 'Dreamers.'"
 - "An Incoherent Strategy On North Korea."
 - "Myanmar Intensifies Its Abuse Of Rohingya."
 - "City To The News: Hang In."
- Washington Post.
 - "Trump's Heartless Decision."
 - "A Welcome Change Of Course From The Trump Administration."
 - "Montgomery County Should Approach Council Changes With Care."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "The Dreamer Debacle."
 - "The Godfather Of Missile Defense."
 - "Making Canada Great Again."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

National Monuments Could Benefit Rural Economies In The West.

The AP (9/5, McPhillips) reports that experts say “the presence of national monuments – and their size – can help bolster” rural, local economies. In 2016, a group of more than 100 economists, including three Nobel laureates, urged then-President Obama to protect federal lands in the West’s future economic interests. The group wrote a letter stating, “The rivers, lakes, canyons, and mountains found on public lands serve as a unique and compelling backdrop that has helped to transform the western economy from a dependence on resource extractive industries to growth from in-migration, tourism, and modern economy sectors such as finance, engineering, software development, insurance, and health care.” Headwaters Economics published a report analyzing 11 rural counties in western states, which showed that income per capita was $436 more for every 10,000 acres of protected lands within their boundaries. Headwaters Economics Policy Director Chris Mehl said, “It’s the story of the West: 90 percent, if not all, job creation is in services. Non-service jobs – manufacturing, construction and extraction like timber and mining – have remained flat, and service jobs – like accounting, law and hospitality – have grown.”

Trump’s Monument Review Is As Secretive As Obama’s Designations. For the “Pundits” blog of The Hill (9/5, McKenna, Contributor), Kara McKenna, counsel at the Cause of Action Institute, writes that “it seemed like a positive step when President Trump in April issued an executive order seeking public input for a review of national monument designations over the last two decades.” However, “it now appears that any hope for additional transparency may have been premature.” McKenna criticizes Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke for choosing “to submit only a draft report to the White House” instead of submitting a “publicly available report.” According to McKenna, this adds “more fuel to one of the biggest criticisms of the Antiquities Act – a total lack of transparency in the process.”

North Dakota’s Congressional Delegation Expected To Attend Trump Speech.

The Bismarck \(ND\) Tribune (9/5, Dalrymple) reports that “North Dakota’s Congressional delegation is expected to attend Wednesday as President Donald Trump gives a speech from the Mandan refinery.” Sen. John Hoeven (R-ND) said that Energy Secretary Rick Perry, Environmental Protection Agency Administrator Scott Pruitt, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, and Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin also are expected to attend. The Tribune adds, “Kathy Neset, a geologist and owner of Neset Consulting, said she was asked to be part of a small group to greet Trump at the refinery on behalf of the North Dakota Petroleum Council.” A separate article by the Bismarck \(ND\) Tribune (9/5, Dalrymple) reports Trump is expected to say, “I want all of America to be inspired by the North Dakota example. ... This state is a reminder of what can happen when we promote American jobs instead of obstructing them.” The Washington Examiner (9/5, Siciliano) reports Trump’s address will be delivered “in the shadow of a large oil refinery owned by the company Andeavor, which recently went from being the fifth to the fourth largest refiner in the nation.” The White House approached the company “about using the refinery for the speech last Thursday.”

Western Wildfires Endanger Beloved Sites At National Parks.

NPR (9/5, Wamsley) reports that “wildfires burning in the Western U.S. are threatening some of America’s most treasured national parks.” The article highlights fires in Glacier National Park and Yosemite National Park. Meanwhile, “a cold front moving through the Eastern U.S. is carrying smoke from the Western fires.”

The AP (9/5, FLACCUS, GERANIOS) reports that “dozens of wildfires burning in western U.S. states” have “sent smoke into cities from Seattle to Denver — prompting health warnings and cancellations of outdoor activities for children by many school districts.”

Additional coverage was provided by Newsmax (9/5, Krausz).

Facing Another Catastrophic Wildfire Season, Congress Must Act. For the “Pundits” blog of The Hill (9/5, Smith, Contributor), Nick Smith, the executive director of Healthy Forests, Healthy Communities, urges Congress “to turn its attention to reforming forest management policies.” Smith argues that the practice of “fire borrowing” should be stopped “because it has an enormously disruptive effect on the agency and its ability to manage public lands.” Smith argues urges Congress to pass the bipartisan Resilient Federal Forests Act of 2017, which “shows that it’s possible to expedite projects under existing federal environmental laws, while promoting collaboration among diverse stakeholders and resolving disputes without costly litigation.” He concludes that “new policies are needed to promote science-based, active forest management that is desperately needed on federal lands to protect our forests and communities.”

Week Ahead: Lawmakers To Consider Harvey Aid.

The Hill (9/5, Henry, Cama) reports that the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee will “hold a confirmation hearing for four Trump nominees on Thursday.” Notably, the committee will hear from Joseph Balash, “the nominee to be assistant Interior Secretary for Land and Mineral Management, and Ryan Nelson, the Interior Solicitor nominee.”

OIG Finds Millions In Possible DOI Fraud.

The Daily Caller (9/5, Pearce) reports that “two GOP representatives are demanding answers from the Department of the Interior (DOI) after a report revealed the potential for widespread fraud in $815 million worth of DOI grants awarded in 2014 and 2015, a Tuesday letter read.” Reps. Rob Bishop and Bruce Westerman “want documents detailing the procedures of a DOI program that awards grants to federal agencies for the purpose of purchasing land, according to the letter.” The lawmakers are “concerned unreported grant money from taxpayers may be used to repeat past abuses such as using grant money to build swimming pools and bars on federally protected land, the letter says.”

Vince Bzdek: Don’t Drain The Swamp; Move It From Washington, D.C., To Colorado.

In his column for the Colorado Springs \(CO\) Gazette (9/5, Bzdek), Vince Bzdek supports moving “the headquarters of the Bureau of Land Management, the Fish and Wildlife Service and the Bureau of Reclamation out of Washington to Denver,” as proposed by Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke. Calling the move “logical,” and pushing for relocating other agencies in the federal bureaucracy, Bzdek argues that “if the federal government were less concentrated and more integrated into the population it governs, perhaps it would be seen as more equitable and in tune.” Bzdek concludes that “if we really believe in government of, by and for, now might be the best time to put that government out, around and among us all.”

Time To End Recreation Welfare On Public Lands.

In an op-ed for the Helena \(MT\) Independent Record (9/5, Anderson), Terry L. Anderson, a fellow at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University, dismisses arguments that the “outdoor economy depends on our federal lands.” Instead, citing a study by the Property and Environment Research Center, Anderson, claims that “the outdoor industry and its customers are heavily subsidized.” He also notes that “the same study showed that our federal lands take in almost $20 for every dollar spent on mineral land management.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

New Court Aims To Keep Native American Foster Kids Connected To Family, Culture.

The Billings \(MT\) Gazette (9/5, Tollefson) reports that “in July, Montana’s 13th Judicial District began operating the nation’s fifth Indian Child Welfare Act court.” Officials are hoping the court will “improve outcomes for all Native American kids experiencing abuse or neglect.” According to the article, “those involved say poor communication and lack of relationships in the past stymied progress on the cases, but all that is changing.”

Bureau Of Land Management

North Dakota Minerals May Be Included In Oil Lease Sale.

The AP (9/5) reports that Bureau of Land Management (BLM) “officials are taking public input on whether to include” federally owned minerals in a March lease sale. The agency received an “expression of interest” to lease the federally owned minerals, a bureau spokesman said. An environmental assessment will be publicly available starting on Sept. 30.

Burning Man Says US Tried To Stop Sunday Fire After Death.

The AP (9/5) reports that “a co-founder of the Burning Man countercultural festival has said U.S. officials urged event organizers to cancel a Sunday burning ceremony or beef up security after a man died from a fire the night before.” Burning Man co-founder Crimson Rose “said the Bureau of Land Management intervened in light of the death of Aaron Joel Mitchell, 41.” Rose said the BLM

“urged organizers to cancel the Sunday night burning of a temple but allowed the event on the condition that the festival set up a metal fence and deploy 350 security guards to prevent people from approaching the fire.”

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

Gulf Refineries Start To Come Back Online.

The Houston Chronicle (9/5, Blum) reports Flint Hills Resources confirmed that its Corpus Christi refinery is fully back online, one day after Valero Energy said it resumed normal operations. Citgo’s Corpus refinery is almost back to full capacity, as a spokeswoman said, “Corpus Christi Refinery personnel are now working diligently to restore operations to normal.” The Houston Business Journal (9/5) reports Marathon’s Galveston Bay refinery is operating at reduced capacity because of closures along the Houston Ship Channel. Phillips 66 has restarted operations at its terminals in Freeport, Beaumont and Pasadena, but it is still working to reopen its Sweeny refinery. The AP (9/5) reports Valero is also working to restart operations at its Port Arthur refinery. Total’s Port Arthur plant remains shut-in. The Daily Caller (9/5) reports the Department of Energy said eight refineries, representing 11.4 percent of US refining capacity, are starting restart procedures.

Natural Gas Intelligence (9/5) reports, refining should be the most affected subsector, as outages are widespread and supply concerns remain. Midstream companies with Gulf Coast exposure continue to have outages, “but structure damage appears to be mild.” Output in the Gulf of Mexico was returning to normal over the weekend, and the BSEE said only 14 production platforms remained evacuated. Enterprise Products Partners said the Mont Belvieu complex resumed commercial operations. Enterprise said, “While a final assessment of certain locations is still underway, the company has not incurred significant physical damage to facilities. ... Operationally, the partnership continues to face challenges resulting from curtailments or allocations by some critical third-party service providers.”

Additional coverage was provided by Platts (9/5, Magill).

Fish And Wildlife Service

Feds, Enviros Agree To End ESA Suit Over Minn. Forest.

Law360 (9/5, Sieniuc) reports that “environmentalists and the federal government have agreed to withdraw from a suit accusing the U.S. Forest Service of violating the Endangered Species Act by using an outdated biological review to approve projects that could harm animals in Minnesota’s Superior National Forest.” U.S. District Judge Tanya Chutkan “ordered the case tossed on Friday after plaintiffs Center for Biological Diversity and Earthworks and defendants including the Forest Service, the U.S. Department of the Interior and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service filed a stipulation of voluntary dismissal.”

Comment Period Extended For Bison Range.

The Ronan Valley \(MT\) Journal (9/5, Soptelean) reports that “the public comment period for a new comprehensive conservation plan for the National Bison Range, Ninepipe Wildlife Refuge and other area conservation lands in Lake and Flathead counties has been extended.” According to Bernardo Garza, a planning team leader with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Denver, “a 30-day extension began Aug. 30.”

Quino Checkerspot Butterfly: The Unlikely Latest Angle To Trump’s Border Wall Fight.

In a piece for U.S. News & World Report (9/5, Nesbit), Jeff Nesbit that “the U.S. Department of Homeland Security and U.S. Customs and Border Patrol agency last week awarded contracts for the first four prototypes of The Wall along America’s southern border, which Trump continues to place at the top of his domestic agenda in talks with budget leaders in Congress.” But “the only thing now standing in the way of initial construction of those four prototypes for Trump’s border wall near San Diego is an environmental and scientific review lawsuit brought by the Center for Biological Diversity that focuses largely on the plight of the Quino checkerspot butterfly and two other threatened species (the coastal California gnatcatcher and the San Diego fairy shrimp) that would be impacted by it.”

National Park Service

Washington Monument To Get $10M Upgrades, Reopen Spring 2019.

The AP (9/6) reports that the Washington Monument is “modernizing its elevator and a getting permanent area for safety checks and visitor screenings.” The National Park Service “said Tuesday it awarded a contract for the more than $10 million project to a Maryland construction company following a months-long process.” According to officials, “the monument is expected to reopen in spring 2019 after reliability issues with the elevator caused it to close in August 2016.”

Also reporting are the Washington Post (9/5, Hedgpeth), the Washington Business Journal (9/5, Sernovitz), and WRC-TV Washington (9/5, Barnes).

Trump Fans And ‘Juggalos’ Will Share National Mall In DC On Sept.

16. Fox News (9/6, Mikelionis) reports that “the National Park Service staff in Washington, D.C., is bracing for a busy day Sept. 16.” On that day, “supporters of President Trump will be sharing space on the National Mall with fans of the hip hop act Insane Clown Posse.” NPS spokesman Mike Litterst “said the agency is prepared to ensure public safety despite multiple events on the same day – a liberal march and a wedding are also planned – and to protect free-speech rights on the federal property.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Washington Post (9/5, Stein).

Jackson To Welcome Six New U.S. Citizens.

The Jackson Hole \(WY\) News & Guide (9/5, Gross) reports that 43 new citizens will be naturalized on Wednesday at this year’s annual ceremony at Yellowstone National Park, according to the U.S. Citizen and Immigration Services. The National Park Service and United States Citizen and Immigration Services “first signed an agreement in 2006 to connect America’s newest citizens to national parks and enhance the meaning and stature of citizenship ceremonies, according to a USCIS press release.”

Idaho Racing To Combat Deadly Bat Fungus.

The AP (9/5) reports “officials are scrambling to slow a deadly fungal disease that has killed millions of bats before it eventually spreads to Idaho.” The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is working with the “National Park Service, Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service, Idaho Power Co. and Idaho National Laboratory to monitor for the fungus.” The fungus “kills bats during hibernation, when their energy reserves are critically low.”

Yosemite Ranger: Falling Tree Branch Injures 2 Park Visitors.

The AP (9/5) reports that “officials at Yosemite National Park say two people were injured when a tree branch broke loose during strong wind gusts and crashed down onto a family’s car.” Ranger Jamie Richards “said Tuesday that an adult and child were flown by a medical helicopter Sunday evening to a nearby hospital for treatment.” According to Richards, “park officials immediately sent a work crew to the area to cut down dead trees along the roadside and remove other dangerous tree limbs.”

Office Of Insular Affairs

Trump Signals Willingness To Boost Arms Sales To Asia Allies.

ABC World News Tonight (9/5, story 6, 1:45, Muir) reported President Trump, “after approving South Korea’s request for more powerful warheads on its own missiles, signaled that more hardware is on the way to the region.” The President tweeted, “I am allowing Japan and South Korea to buy a substantially increased amount of highly sophisticated military equipment from the United States.” The Wall Street Journal (9/5, Cheng) reports that the Pentagon declined to provide specifics, but is unaware of any pending sales.

On NBC Nightly News (9/5, story 6, 2:10, Holt), Richard Engel said, “South Korea today bearing its teeth at North Korea in live fire drills that are now almost daily. North Korea making threats, too, at the US, warning more ‘gift packages’ will be headed towards the United States.”

The CBS Evening News (9/5, story 7, 2:10, Mason) reported that a “top North Korean diplomat today described his country’s recent missile and nuclear tests as ‘gift packages’ addressed to the US, and he warned more are on the way, even in the face of international condemnation.” USA

Today (9/5, Michaels) reports that despite the threats, North Korea “probably can’t yet reach US cities with nuclear-tipped missiles, analysts say.” There is, however, little debate that North Korea “is on a path to being able to reach US targets.”

Meanwhile, ABC World News Tonight (9/5, story 6, 1:45, Muir) reported Russian President Vladimir Putin warned the US on Tuesday “to tone down the rhetoric.” Putin is “suggesting that belligerence won’t work,” and “urged dialogue to solve this crisis.” NBC Nightly News (9/5, story 6, 2:10, Holt) said Putin is “expressing support for North Korea, saying Russia won’t back new sanctions, instead blasting military hysteria, and saying North Korea would rather eat grass than give up its nuclear weapons.” USA Today (9/5, Hjelmggaard) reports Putin warned that “ramping up military hysteria in such conditions is senseless” and called for a diplomatic solution.

Reuters (9/5, Nebehay, Kim) reports Russia’s UN Ambassador Vassily Nebenzia also said Tuesday that a US bid for the Security Council to vote on Sept. 11 on new sanctions is “a little premature.” Nebenzia told reporters, “I don’t think we’ll be able to rush it so fast.”

An AP (9/5, Lederman) analysis of the US’ options says Sunday’s nuclear test and “recent missile tests suggest Kim is undeterred” by sanctions, and “there’s strong reluctance from countries including China and Russia, both permanent Security Council members, to do more sanctioning.”

The New York Times (9/5, Perlez) reports the Trump Administration has “bet on China to stop North Korea’s nuclear program...but in doing so, the White House may be misreading the complexity of China’s relationship with North Korea, one that successive generations of Chinese leaders have struggled to manage.” The Times says “there is growing resentment against Mr. Kim inside China, both in the general public and the policy establishment.”

Another New York Times (9/5, Perlez) piece says that the Trump Administration is “expected to press China to impose an oil embargo on the North,” which the US has called for before, but “Beijing has almost always refused.” However, “no previous American administration has pressed the case as an implicit choice between cutting off the fuel and potential military action. That puts President Xi Jinping of China in a particularly difficult position.”

Sen. Ben Cardin said on MSNBC’s Morning Joe (9/5), “China is the country that can change the equation in North Korea’s calculation. I understand that China may have a different agenda than the United States. China wants to make sure that there is a communist North Korea. The United States wants to make sure that North Korea doesn’t develop a nuclear capacity that could endanger the United States. Both China and the United States would like this done without a military option. We got to find a common agenda working with China, and maybe Russia, that can tone down this crisis.”

Sen. Ed Markey said on MSNBC’s Morning Joe (9/5), “We have to basically deal with China, say we do not want to collapse the North Korean regime. That’s their greatest fear, that there will be an influx of refugees from North Korea, and ultimately, the Korean Peninsula will be united and there will be a democracy on the Chinese border. We have to tell them that’s not our goal, that if they cooperate...then we have a chance to really put pressure on this North Korean government. But we have to go to the table with the North Koreans, as the Chinese have been insisting that we do.”

A Washington Post (9/5, Fifield) analysis, meanwhile, examines “why is Kim Jong Un so hell-bent on joining the nuclear club?” The Post concludes that since the Korean War, North Korea has existed “in a state of insecurity, with the totalitarian regime telling the population that the United States is out to destroy them – again,” and “it is in this context that...the Kim regime has sought” nuclear weapons.

The AP (9/5, Klapper, Burns, Pennington) reports that “as worrying as North Korea’s nuclear advance is for America,” it “might be even more unnerving for South Korea and Japan,” who are “ponder[ing] if they’ll one day need atomic arsenals of their own.” South Korean Defense Minister Yoon Young-kwan on Monday “suggested bringing back the US nuclear weapons was worth consideration,” and Japan’s “defense planners are weighing if they need an offensive, conventional missile strike capability to respond to a North Korean attack.”

USA Today (9/5, Maresca) reports that as tensions rise with North Korea, “many analysts believe information — rather than military force — can be the key to bring about change in North Korean society from the inside.” While the regime’s nuclear and military threat “must be taken seriously, an overly confrontational approach by Trump plays into dictator Kim’s hands, said Sokeel Park, country director of Liberty in North Korea, an organization that helps rescue and resettle refugees.” Kim Seung Chul, a defector who came to South Korea in 1994, “also believes that information is key to changing his homeland.”

David Ignatius writes in his Washington Post (9/5) column, “Is Kim’s position a charade?”

Let's find out. No new US-South Korean exercises are scheduled until next March. That offers a six-month window to push Pyongyang to explore options. As history shows, the consequences of making a mistake in war are calamitous."

Washington Post (9/5) columnist Kathleen Parker writes that the "can-kicking strategy (i.e., containment and diplomacy) seems a not-irrational substitute for mutual annihilation," and a Wall Street Journal (9/5) editorial argues that antimissile defense systems can protect the US from the threat posed by North Korea.

Top National News

Administration Moves To Phase Out DACA As Trump Calls On Congress To "Legalize" It.

To condemnation from Democrats, immigration activists and CEOs, among others, the Administration announced yesterday that it has begun phasing out the Obama-era DACA program – even as it asked Congress to pass legislation addressing the fate of the 800,000 affected migrants. A number of media analyses, however, cast doubt on Congress' ability to fulfill President Trump's mandate. ABC World News Tonight (9/5, story 5, 1:40, Bruce), for example, pointed out that "lawmakers have already tried and failed more than 10 times to act on this issue," and the CBS Evening News (9/5, story 2, 2:10, Cordes) that "congressional inaction was what led President Obama to resort to DACA in the first place." Moreover, the New York Times (9/5, Shear, Davis) notes White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders "would not say whether the president would support a stand-alone bill," and indicated instead that he "would support legislation to protect" the "young immigrants...as part of a broader immigration overhaul to strengthen the border, protect American jobs and enhance enforcement." McClatchy (9/5, Kumar, Ordoñez) also says "the White House...is willing to trade protections of Dreamers for money that would fund a wall on the southern border."

Another New York Times (9/5, Alcindor, Stolberg) story also reports that "Republican leaders indicated" yesterday that in order to pass DACA, "they will need sweeteners" such as "funding for a border wall," but the Washington Post (9/5, O'Keefe, Weigel) reports that "senior Democratic aides said" they "will oppose any attempt to spend federal dollars" on the wall, and will also "oppose the RAISE Act." Politico (9/5, Kim, Bade, Caygle) notes Sens. Dick Durbin and Lindsey Graham yesterday "urged Congress to take up a DACA fix this month," but "the Senate's second-ranking Senate Republican quickly dismissed that possibility." Said Majority Whip John Cornyn, "There's no way. ... We will take that up. I'm confident. But there's no way that it will stand alone." Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Chuck Grassley "concurred, saying he doesn't believe a standalone bill granting legal status to Dreamers can pass Congress by itself."

In the President's words, as noted by USA Today (9/5, Jackson, Johnson, Gomez), "the legislative branch, not the executive branch, writes these laws." The Los Angeles Times (9/5, Bennett, Tanfani) notes that Trump also said in a White House statement, "I do not favor punishing children, most of whom are now adults, for the actions of their parents." Reuters (9/5, Holland), meanwhile, indicates that Trump "denounced Obama's program as an 'amnesty-first approach' toward illegal immigrants and pressed his nationalist 'America First' message."

Trump had taken to Twitter earlier in the morning to address the issue, writing, "Congress, get ready to do your job – DACA!" The President added, "Make no mistake, we are going to put the interest of AMERICAN CITIZENS FIRST! The forgotten men & women will no longer be forgotten." He later tweeted, "I look forward to working w/ D's + R's in Congress to address immigration reform in a way that puts hardworking citizens of our country 1st." Breitbart (9/5, Munro) runs a story on Trump's remarks titled "Donald Trump: 'Young Americans Have Dreams Too.'" The Washington Examiner (9/5, Quinn) says the President "further defended his decision to rescind DACA during his remarks Tuesday afternoon and said lawmakers he's spoken to are eager to draft legislation addressing DACA beneficiaries." Said Trump, "I can tell you, speaking to members of Congress, they want to be able to do something and do it right. ... And really we have no choice, we have to be able to do something, and I think it's going to work out very well, and long-term it's going to be the right solution."

Finally, in the evening, Trump tweeted, "Congress now has 6 months to legalize DACA (something the Obama Administration was unable to do). If they can't, I will revisit this issue!" Breitbart (9/5, Pollak) calls that last tweet "a rare negotiating blunder" by the President, who "may have backed himself into signing whatever form of DACA Congress passes," while Axios (9/6, Lawler) says "hinting at a way out would seem to undermine Trump's efforts to pressure Congress to act."

Beyond the grim forecast on a potential legislative solution, media coverage of Trump's decision was overwhelmingly unfavorable. The CBS Evening News (9/5, lead story, 2:50, Mason) opened its broadcast stating, "A promise kept by... Trump is a dream lost for thousands of undocumented immigrants brought to the United States as children." To USA Today (9/5, Korte), Trump faced a "stark choice: Seek consensus and move to the middle, or... side with his economic nationalist base." To the Washington Post (9/5, Nakamura), Trump's decision "comes as the president... seeks to rally his conservative base." Philip Bump, meanwhile, titles his online analysis – also for the Washington Post (9/5, Bump) – "With DACA, Trump Again Prioritizes His Base Over What's Politically Popular." On NBC Nightly News (9/5, story 4, 2:25, Holt), on the other hand, Kristen Welker said Trump's "base is accusing" him "of punting on a core campaign promise."

Chris Cillizza headlined its piece for CNN (9/5) "DACA Decision Confirms It: Trump Has Killed The Bush Version Of The GOP," and says the Administration's "view – that the rule of law trumps (ahem) all else when it comes to the nation's immigration problems – is a massive reversal from views espoused by George W. Bush in his two terms as president and in the autopsy document produced by the Republican National Committee in the wake of the party's disastrous 2012 presidential election loss." Jason Sattler warns Republicans in USA Today (9/5) that "when we need a shortcut to explain why it's a bad long-term strategy to scapegoat immigrants for short-term gain, we point to California – where the GOP has become a sloppy karaoke version of its old self, a larger third-party that may not even field a candidate for governor in next year's general election." To Sattler, the GOP's demise began with its support of Prop. 187 in 1994.

Writing for National Review (9/5, Bauer), Fred Bauer argues that politically, the Administration is engaging in "a huge gamble. If the Republican caucus tries to pass a stand-alone fix along the lines of the DREAM Act (which would give full legal status to those covered by DACA), it could be in a lose-lose situation: Either it will succeed and infuriate the GOP base, or it will fail, as numerous attempts to pass the DREAM Act have in the past." But if "the caucus unifies around a deal trading the DREAM Act for center-right immigration reforms, it could advance conservative policy goals and strengthen its political hand."

The AP (9/5, Colvin, Gurman) reports "Trump's announcement came the same day as a deadline set by a group of Republican state officials who said they would challenge DACA in court unless the Trump administration rescinded the program." The AP adds that Sanders "said the president had been given a choice between the 'likely sudden cancellation of the program by a judge' or 'an orderly wind-down that preserved the rule of law,' and made the best decision in light of those options." Likewise, the Washington Times (9/5, Dinan, Noble) reports, DHS "portrayed the decision as the lesser of two evils, saying that the program's legality was so tenuous that a judge could have ended the program instantly, throwing hundreds of thousands of Dreamers into immediate chaos."

Texas Attorney General Ken Paxton said on CNN's The Lead (9/5) that he is withdrawing the threat of litigation against the Administration. Paxton added, "We are pleased with the result. We are grateful that he rescinded this and that we are now under a President that is actually following the Constitution and acting within the scope of his authority." Kansas Secretary of State Kris Kobach said on Fox News' Fox & Friends (9/5), "DACA violates the United States Constitution in two different ways. It also violates three different federal statutes and it's not just my opinion. You've had lower federal courts already say that. So it is illegal and should end now. We shouldn't say we recognize it is illegal and we recognize it is violating our constitution but let's keep on violating the constitution for six months or however long. We need to end it and we need to start looking after United States citizens first."

The Los Angeles Times (9/5, Bennett, Tanfani) reports, meanwhile, that "notably," the President "left it to" Attorney General Sessions "to make the announcement, not himself," and the New York Times (9/5, Apuzzo, Ruiz) that the AG "not only served as the administration's spokesman, he also spoke directly to Mr. Trump's base in a blunt, uncompromising way that the president himself was uncomfortable doing."

The Washington Post (9/5, Nakamura) notes that "in announcing the decision at the Justice Department," Sessions "said that former president Barack Obama, who started the program in 2012 through executive action, 'sought to achieve specifically what the legislative branch refused to do.'" Sessions referred to Obama's move as an "open-ended circumvention of immigration law through unconstitutional authority by the executive branch," and "said the program was unlikely to withstand court scrutiny."

Bloomberg News (9/4, Talev, Olorunnipa, Edgerton) reports that "rejecting calls to show compassion for the young immigrants covered by the program," Sessions said, "The compassionate thing to do is end the lawlessness, and enforce our laws and if Congress chooses to make changes to those laws, to do so through the process enforced by our founders in a way that advances the interests of the American people." Sanders "echoed the point," telling reporters, "It's not cold-hearted for the president to uphold the law."

To Sessions, Roll Call (9/5, Bennett) reported, "the immigration program 'contributed to a surge of minors' coming across America's southern border," sparking "'terrible' consequences across the country." Sessions also "contended the Obama program put the country at greater risk of 'crime, violence and terrorism.'" The Chicago Sun-Times (9/5, Sweet), the New York Post (9/5, Schultz), Townhall (9/5, O'Brien), and the Wall Street Journal (9/5, Meckler), among other news outlets, also report the announcement along similar lines. ABC World News Tonight (9/5, story 4, 3:20, Vega), meanwhile, reported that in a "memo obtained by ABC News, the Trump Administration urges members of Congress to say Dreamers should prepare to self-deport, saying, they should prepare for and arrange their departure from the United States, including proactively seeking travel documentation." The "backlash" was "immediate."

McClatchy (9/5, Ordoñez, Kumar) recounts that Sessions "walked into the White House two weeks ago with a blunt message for his boss: The Obama-era program that keeps hundreds of thousands of people safe from deportation is unconstitutional. And setting aside any sentimentality, the attorney general told the president he would not defend the program in court." And "that was when Donald Trump decided he had no choice." A "source familiar with the conversation" tells McClatchy, "Once Sessions told Trump he would not defend DACA in court, he left Trump without any other legal options."

On its front page, the New York Times (9/5, A1, Jordan) profiles several successful Dreamers. For example, the Times reports that "as Mr. Sessions spoke, Marcela Zhou, a Dreamer and third-year medical student at the University of California, Los Angeles, paused between patients she was seeing at a clinic to watch the announcement."

In a blog post for the Washington Post (9/5, Capehart), Jonathan Capehart wrote that "listening to Sessions prattle on about respect for the rule of law after his boss ignored it last month to pardon a racist former sheriff is World Series-level gall." The move "fits with the reprehensible zeitgeist that has always enveloped Sessions since before he took the helm of the justice department." Rep. Maxine Waters "was as unsparing in her assessment of him as she has been on the president during an interview on my podcast 'Cape Up' in May." Said Waters, "I think he's a racist, and I think that he absolutely believes that it's his job to keep minorities in their place."

USA Today (9/5, Jackson, Johnson, Gomez) reports DHS "will immediately stop accepting applications to the DACA program – but current recipients would not be affected until March 5 of next year." This "gives Congress time to find a legislative solution to replace the program, which currently shields some 800,000 young immigrants from deportation." According to The Hill (9/5, Lillis, Bernal, Savransky), "the new guidelines still allow for DACA enrollees to remain in the program and retain work permits well beyond that date, in some cases." The Hill added that "for those whose eligibility is set to expire within the next six months, DHS is accepting renewal applications until Oct. 5 – creating the potential for enrollees to remain in the program almost two years after the so-called phaseout." The New York Post (9/5, Moore, Schultz) outlines a similar timeline in its report.

Sean Hannity said in his opening monologue on Fox News' Hannity (9/5) that the "destroy Trump establishment media" is "predictably" in "freak out mode about the President's decision," but, "what they won't tell you is that DACA was, in fact, unconstitutional. The President is right to let Congress decide on the issue of immigration laws in this country. That's how a system of checks and balances is supposed to work. The executive branch can't usurp power from the legislative branch. You remember how President Obama himself admitted this many, many times before ever signing this executive order on DACA. He admitted it was unconstitutional, for him to change immigration laws all on his own."

Jonah Goldberg of National Review said on Fox News' Special Report (9/5), "I think on the constitutional or civic merits...Trump made exactly he right decision. I don't think – even the Obama administration said it was supposed to be temporary program. The title 'D' in DACA is 'deferred.' It was always supposed to be followed up by real legislation. Presidents aren't supposed to make law. ... On the other hand, politically, I think this is a hot mess. I think that Donald Trump is setting up Congress for potentially disastrous failure and at the same time – he wants to punt this so that he doesn't have to make this very hard decision that puts him either on the wrong side of the base or on the wrong side of everybody else."

Jeff Zeleny said on CNN's Situation Room (9/5), "I am told by a senior White House official it was like a tug-of-war in the West Wing of the White House. All these advisers and outside advisers who the President listens to were largely telling him different things, but business leaders and others were urging him not to do anything draconian here. We're told he's not happy necessarily with this decision but was trying to find a spot in the middle."

Cotton said on Fox News' Special Report (9/5), "Trump was put in this situation by...Obama," who "created this program without congressional approval five years ago even though he himself said he didn't have the legal authority. I think...Trump struck a sensible middle ground and said that in six months he's going to stop renewing these work permits for illegal immigrants in their 20s and 30s who were brought here through no fault of their own. That should give Congress time to pass legislation that would not only perhaps codify that program but also address some of the consequences of the action like encouraging future illegal immigration or allowing those people who might get legal status to also make their parents, the people who created the situation, citizens as well."

Rep. Mark Meadows said on CNN's Situation Room (9/5), "Obviously I support the President's decision. One of the things that's perhaps is not getting reported a whole lot is the jurisprudence that is out there would suggest this was going to go away, anyway. So it is incumbent upon Congress to act. So, the President took a decisive action. He did it in a way that gave Congress six months to deal with it. You saw Dick Durbin and Lindsey Graham working together already trying to try to look at some legislative fix. But more importantly, any solution is going to have to start, really, with securing our southern borders."

Rep. Paul Gosar writes in USA Today (9/5), "I applaud the president's work in upholding the rule of law and his decision to cease the Obama administration's unconstitutional amnesty program."

Meanwhile, notes USA Today (9/5, Shesgreen, King), "Rep. Mike Coffman, a Colorado Republican who represents suburban Denver, plans to make an end-run around House GOP leaders by filing a 'discharge petition' on the Bridge Act, a bipartisan bill that would grant DREAMers legal status for three years."

Trump Evangelical Advisers Claim Credit For Six-Month Delay. The Washington Post (9/5, Sellers) reports "members of the president's Evangelical Advisory Board claimed credit" for Trump's decision on DACA including "a built-in six-month delay." Said Tony Suarez, executive vice president of the National Hispanic Christian Leadership Conference, "We are responsible for this extension [the president] is offering. That's our work." Suarez "said he and NHCLC President Samuel Rodriguez have worked on behalf of the so-called 'dreamers' since the advisory board was formed during the campaign last summer and stepped up pressure on the White House last week, making calls and delivering letters signed by Hispanic pastors to the president. Then, on Friday, a handful of the evangelical pastors met with Trump," and "at that Oval Office meeting, which neither Rodriguez nor Suarez was able to attend, Jentezen Franklin, a white pastor from a multi-ethnic church near Atlanta, made a personal plea to the president on behalf of the dreamers."

Decision Sparks Protests. The CBS Evening News (9/5, story 3, 2:00, Blackstone) reported that "the decision to end DACA sparked protests across the country," with "thousands" gathering "near the White House and outside Trump Tower in New York." High school students, moreover, "staged a walkout in downtown Denver, and in Los Angeles." NBC Nightly News (9/5, story 4, 2:25, Holt) referred to "protests erupting nationwide," and (Welker) to "sound and fury with protesters storming major cities all across the country."

The Bergen \(NJ\) Record (9/5, Alvarado) reports "nearly a dozen people were arrested during an immigration demonstration outside Trump Tower," and the Washington Post (9/5, Sacchetti, Stein) that "undocumented immigrants and their supporters yelled, 'Shame!' in front of the White House and got arrested in front of Trump Tower in New York City."

Obama: Trump Move "Cruel," "Self-Defeating," "Wrong." Reuters (9/5) reports Obama said on Facebook yesterday that "the Trump administration's decision to rescind a program Obama instituted to protect from deportation illegal immigrants who were brought to the United States as children was 'cruel,' 'self-defeating' and 'wrong.'" The Washington Post (9/5, Johnson) quotes Obama as writing, "Ultimately, this is about basic decency." USA Today (9/5, Estepa) notes that Obama also said that "now that the issue has been punted back to Congress" lawmakers should "protect these young people and our future." The Washington Times (9/5, Boyer), the New York Post (9/5, Moore), McClatchy (9/5, Welsh), the AP (9/5, Holland), Politico (9/5, Dove), The Hill (9/5, Thomsen), and Breitbart (9/5, Spiering), among other news outlets, also report Obama's post.

In an analysis piece, Politico (9/5, Dove) says Obama is "purposefully keeping quiet – even as his team was already quietly consulting on steps forward Tuesday with activists and strategists." Yesterday's "statement – written in his Washington office on Tuesday and so much in Obama's voice that it even includes his 'let's be clear' tic – there's nothing about what to put in a bill, only the principles at stake and the need to do something." While he "sees protecting Dreamers as a major part of his legacy, but doesn't want Republicans to back away from a bill because they're supporting something that their base's favorite bogeyman wants."

Vox (9/5, Stein) noted, meanwhile, that former Vice President Biden also "condemned the Trump administration's decision," writing on Facebook, "These people are all Americans. ... So let's be clear: throwing them out is cruel. It is inhumane. And it is not America."

In Apparent Break With Party, Feinstein Says DACA Was "On Shaky Legal Ground." The Los Angeles Times (9/5, Mehta) reports Sen. Dianne Feinstein "signaled Tuesday that she believes...Obama's executive order to protect young immigrants who were brought into the US as minors was on shaky legal ground, and said that is why Congress must act." The senator told MSNBC, "DACA was executive order. Legal is the law of passage of something. ... You know there are 10 attorneys general that are prepared to sue. I don't want to get into that. The point is DACA is here and we've got 800,000 young people who depend on this." Chuck Todd "said that Feinstein's answer implied that the program was 'on shaky legal ground,'" to which Feinstein replied, "It is. ... That's why we need to pass a law, and we should do it." The Times adds that "Feinstein's remarks are likely to fuel criticism among the most liberal members of her party."

Gutierrez: Trump Moving Toward "Full-Throated Endorsement Of White Supremacy," Kelly "Has No Honor." The Chicago Tribune (9/5, Skiba) reports that "Rep. Luis Gutierrez, a Chicago Democrat and longtime advocate on immigration issues, were among the most pointed," yesterday "accused the Trump administration of being on a 'very dangerous trajectory towards the full-throated endorsement of white supremacy – the likes of which we haven't seen in the open from a sitting president for a century.'"

The Washington Post (9/5, Weigel) notes Gutierrez also said, "General Kelly is a hypocrite who is a disgrace to the uniform he used to wear. ... He has no honor and should be drummed out of the White House along with the white supremacists and those enabling the president's actions by 'just following orders.' "

Emanuel To Incoming High School Students: Chicago Schools A "Trump-Free" Zone. The Washington Times (9/5, Chasmar) reports Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel yesterday "assured incoming high schoolers that they need not to worry about...Trump ending the 'Dreamers' program, saying Chicago Public Schools are a 'Trump-free' sanctuary for young illegal immigrants." Said the mayor, "Chicago, our schools, our neighborhoods, our city, as it relates to what President Trump said, will be a Trump-free zone. You have nothing to worry about."

The Chicago Sun-Times (9/5, Dudek, Fitzpatrick) reports, "It was no accident that the mayor, who's been courting Hispanic voters as his popularity has flagged among the African-Americans who elected him, chose Solorio Academy High School to ring in the new school year because nearly a third of Solorio's students are undocumented immigrants."

Mexico "Profoundly Laments" Trump Decision. The Washington Post (9/5, Partlow) reports the Mexican government "said Tuesday that it 'profoundly laments' the decision by the Trump administration to phase out the program that protects hundreds of thousands of young immigrants from deportation." The Washington Times (9/5, Dinan) notes that in a statement, Mexico also "said it will take back the hundreds of thousands of its citizens currently living in the US without permission." Said the government, "Mexico will receive Dreamers who return to our country with open arms. ... In accordance with instructions from President Enrique Peña Nieto, the agencies of the federal government are strengthening their efforts to offer them the greatest support, take advantage of their talents and skills, and fully integrate them into our society and national economy."

WPost, NYTimes, USA Today Blast Trump; WSJournal Blames Both Parties. The Washington Post (9/5) writes in an editorial that Trump "ducked, dodged and shunted the issue to Congress." His "order is an assault on economic logic," and "unless Congress acts, the United States will suffer along with the dreamers."

The New York Times (9/5) editorializes that "Trump didn't even have the guts to do the job himself. Instead, he hid in the shadows and sent his attorney general...to do the dirty work." Adds the Times, "Contrast that with President Obama's willingness to defend a policy that has always had detractors."

USA Today (9/5) editorializes that "in six months...the president is likely to find himself right where he is today. He could inflict real damage on himself, his party and his country by letting the deportations go into effect. He could institute another delay. Or he could try to negotiate some face-saving deal with Democrats and Republican pragmatists to pass a DACA law." But "in the meantime" he "is playing right into the hands of Democrats, who might otherwise be troubled by their internal divisions and inability to win elections between the two coasts."

On its editorial page, the Wall Street Journal (9/5) criticizes Trump's campaign rhetoric threatening to end DACA, but argues that Obama should not have moved unilaterally in establishing it – and that the former president acted cynically in a bid to score political points and put Republicans in a bind. The Journal goes on to criticize both parties' handling of the issue, and suggests a deal could be made whereby Congress approves the program in exchange for added border security.

More Condemnation Of Administration. Bloomberg News (9/5, Bass) reports "companies from a broad range of industries, including technology, finance and retail, swiftly condemned the Trump administration's decision to end a program preventing the deportation of immigrants illegally brought to the US as children." Wrote Facebook Chief Executive Officer Mark Zuckerberg, "It is particularly cruel to offer young people the American Dream, encourage them to come out of the shadows and trust our government, and then punish them for it." Politico (9/5, Overly) also says "Trump's decision to end the Dreamers program is inflaming his rift with America's corporate leaders – a group he once touted as a key ally for his business-friendly administration." Politico adds "a slew of top CEOs and business groups slammed the move – warning of the human toll and its impact on the nation's economy."

USA Today (9/5, Guynn) reports, "Don't mess with DACA. That was the message from major technology companies." Apple and Microsoft, "two of the companies to come out swinging against the president's decision to dump Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, or DACA, pledged to shield employees who could face legal troubles or deportation."

Townhall (9/5, O'Brien) indicated "Trump just lost his CEO for the United States Hispanic Chamber of Commerce after his decision." Javier Palomarez, "who announced his resignation Tuesday, explained" that "Sessions's DACA announcement was the last straw," saying, "This disgraceful action goes against not only the values of this country, but also against the promise of this administration to focus homeland security resources towards individuals who have committed violent crimes and pose a threat to communities across the country."

The Washington Post (9/5, Balingit) says "education leaders Tuesday swiftly condemned...Trump's decision...warning the move will disrupt the lives of hundreds of thousands of students."

The Washington Times (9/5, Persons), meanwhile, notes "US Conference of Bishops President Cardinal Daniel N. DiNardo of Galveston-Houston blasted...Trump's plan to remove protections from children brought to the US illegally as 'reprehensible.'"

Rep. John Garamendi said on CNN's Situation Room (9/5) that this is a "quid pro quo. It's a deal. The President has structured a deal putting 800,000 young men and women, young Dreamers, on the line in exchange for his border wall. That's what this is all about. He is putting at risk those 800,000 people."

Maggie Haberman of the New York Times said on CNN's The Lead (9/5) that Trump "had very few good options here given what he was facing, given what he had promised. You could argue he shouldn't have campaigned on a platform that included ending DACA. But he was all over the map in terms of what he wanted to do with this program. I do believe he was genuinely conflicted about this. I don't think that changes the feelings on what they're doing. I think that punting it over to Congress – he knows full well that Congress could not do a healthcare repeal. ... This is basically pushing the blame off to someone else, and I don't know how well that flies when his whole thing during the campaign was, I alone can fix this broken system."

Political commentator Paul Begala said on CNN's The Lead (9/5), "Who knows...what happens in that desperately mangled brain of his, and I think the only way to read it, 'I love these young people, and I have heart, but I'm going to kick them all out of the country – 800,000 of them who have done nothing wrong.' It's incoherent. I think politically he couldn't have hurt himself more. Even the Trump voters, most Trump voters don't want to kick these young people out of the country. And the notion that Ken Paxton, the Attorney General of Texas...is pushing Donald Trump around is pretty appalling."

Rep. Ruben Gallego said on CNN's Situation Room (9/5), "You're basically destabilizing their lives. These young men and women have started families, bought homes, started businesses, some of them are police officers, firefighters, some have joined the military and are now veterans and we're going to cruelly take them away from this life." Gallego added that if Congress does not "act to stop the President," Dreamers "will be deported. The way ICE is operating right now, they don't care who they are nabbing and grabbing. They'd rather go for the easiest targets. They're going to go for people that they know are good citizens. They know they have steady routines. They're going to...start taking these young men and women and their families, anyone they encounter. At the end of the day all they want to do is hit their quotas and that's what's going to happen."

Gloria Borger said on CNN's Situation Room (9/5), "I think the real story here is the President was faced with a real problem. He had been on the campaign trail consistently saying that he wanted to end DACA, and then he had also said since he came into office, he spoke to President Obama about it, he spoke to others about it and he said that he really cared about the dreamers. Well, how do you square those two things? It's very difficult. So, what he did was he said, 'Okay, I'm going to pass the buck. I'm going to pass the buck here to Congress and let's see if Congress can resolve it.'"

Dreamer Killed Trying To Rescue Harvey Victims. The CBS Evening News (9/5, story 6, 2:25, Villafranca) reported that Harvey's death toll "includes a 31-year-old undocumented immigrant who could have faced deportation next year. Instead, he died a hero." CBS (Villafranca) added that Alonso Guillen "came to the US from Mexico when he was 15 to live with his dad, a permanent resident. He signed up for DACA, and as a Dreamer was working towards citizenship." He "and a friend drove 120 miles from Lufkin, Texas to Houston, to rescue people stuck in an apartment. They were in a boat that hit a bridge and capsized." His body was found downstream four days later.

Daily Caller Says Most Dreamers Are Adults; NYTimes Says "Typical" Dreamer Came To US At Age Six. The Daily Caller (9/5) reported that "CNN and MSNBC are repeating the false claim that DACA recipients are 'children' or 'kids,' while actually most are adults." DACA "recipients were illegally brought to the United States by their parents when they were children," but "the minimum age to apply for the program is 15 years old," and "in fact, the majority of the applicants were over the age of 20 based on 2014 data from the US government. Some have estimated that the average age of dreamers is 25 or 26 years old – hardly children." USA Today (9/5, Gomez), meanwhile, reports "those affected were brought illegally to the United States as children. Now, at an average of 25, many know no other country than the US."

The New York Times (9/5, Parlapiano, Yourish), meanwhile, analyzes the program in a story headlined "A Typical 'Dreamer' Lives In Los Angeles, Is From Mexico And Came To The US At 6 Years Old."

Poll: 58% Support Allowing Dreamers To Stay, 15% Want Them Removed. Politico (9/5, Shepard) reports that according to a POLITICO/Morning Consult poll, "voters overwhelmingly support allowing undocumented immigrants brought to the U.S. as children to stay in the country." Fifty-eight percent "think these undocumented immigrants...should be allowed to stay and become citizens if they meet certain requirements – a sentiment which goes well beyond the existing DACA program." Meanwhile, "another 18 percent think they should be allowed to stay and become legal residents, but not citizens," and "only 15 percent of voters think these undocumented immigrants should be removed or deported from the country." Politico adds that "support for allowing these immigrants to remain in the U.S. spans across party lines: 84 percent of Democrats, 74 percent of independents and 69 percent of Republicans think they should stay."

Newsweek: Melania Trump's Immigration Attorney A Supporter Of DACA. Writing on the website of Newsweek (9/5), Melina Delkic said that first lady Melania Trump's attorney, Michael Wildes, "who once vouched for the former model regarding her immigration status, is 'prayerful' that President Barack Obama's Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) immigration program won't be dismantled by the Trump administration and Congress. He says he works to help DACA beneficiaries, whom he calls 'good souls.'" Delkic added that Wildes' "father, Leon Wildes, planted the seeds of DACA when he represented the musician John Lennon in his deportation trial and clarified the meaning of deferred action in a court of law."

After Having Opposed DREAM Act, Tester Criticizes Trump Over DACA Repeal. The Washington Free Beacon (9/5, Griswold) reported that Sen. Jon Tester (D-MT), who was among "the five Democratic senators who joined Republicans to defeat the DREAM Act," on Tuesday chided Trump "for revoking similar protections of so-called 'Dreamers.' In 2010," the Montana Democrat "voted against the Development, Relief, and Education for Alien Minors (DREAM) Act, which would have granted legal residency status to illegal immigrants who were brought to the United States as minors. Tester voted against a similar bill in 2007." In a Tuesday statement, Tester said of Trump's decision to revoke DACA protections, "America's immigration system is badly broken and needs fixing, but breaking a promise to these children-who are here through no fault of their own-is not the solution." Tester faces reelection next year.

Trump Tells GOP Leaders Tax Reform Will Create “Millions Of New Jobs.”

During a White House meeting Tuesday with “the so-called Big Six tax negotiators – National Economic Council Director Gary Cohn, Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, House Speaker Paul Ryan, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, and the leaders of the congressional tax-writing committees,” President Trump “promoted a tax overhaul as essential to boosting economic growth,” Bloomberg News (9/5, Sink) reports. Politico (9/5, Conway) quotes Trump as saying, “We’re going to reduce taxes for companies, and those companies are going to produce jobs. ... Tax reform that follows these principles will create millions of new jobs and ensure that more products are stamped with the very beautiful letters and words, ‘Made in the U.S.A.’” Trump added, “It’s time to lower our taxes, bring back our wealth and make America the jobs magnet that it can become, and pretty quickly.”

Politico (9/5, White, Cook) describes Trump as “increasingly fixated on slashing the top corporate tax rate to 15 percent,” which “pretty much no one else working on the issue in the White House or Congress thinks is workable.” During Tuesday’s meeting, Trump “again expressed his strong desire to hit the 15 percent target, from today’s 35 percent.” However, “a senior official working on tax reform,” said, “You can’t get to 15 percent and anyone who has a back of an envelope can make that calculation. ... And he may not like that truth, but it’s the truth. It’s just math.”

Roll Call (9/5, Bennett) reports that “Trump and top aides say they want any eventual tax measure to receive some Democratic support,” but adds that “the effort will be an uphill fight even if it becomes a Republican-only push” due to divisions “among GOP members and the president about where to set individual and corporate rates; if and how any rate cuts would be paid for; and whether the plan could be permanent or would require an expiration date,” as well as “differences about how it might affect the deficit.”

In a story posted before Tuesday’s meeting, the Wall Street Journal (9/5, Rubin) said that with Republicans eyeing completion of tax reform before year’s end, the “Big Six” have little time to tackle a number of difficult decisions concerning the details of the plan. The Journal adds that if they fail to get the measure through Congress, it will be a political defeat.

Heitkamp To Fly To North Dakota With Trump Today On Air Force One. On its website, CNN (9/5, Diamond) reported that Trump “is giving his efforts to wrangle red state Democrat support for his tax reform push the Air Force One treatment.” CNN added that Heitkamp, “the first Democrat to join Trump on the presidential jet, will travel with him Wednesday for the flight to her state of North Dakota, where Trump will continue his push to drive up public support for tax reform. ‘Pending any critical votes in the US Senate, Sen. Heitkamp plans to join President Trump for his visit to North Dakota. She also plans to travel with the President on Air Force One,’ Heitkamp spokeswoman Julia Krieger said.” Politico (9/5, Everett) reported that the President is offering “Heitkamp far warmer treatment than he gave” Sen. Claire McCaskill (D-MO) during his visit to Missouri last week. Politico said the fact that Heitkamp will join the President on Air Force One suggests “Trump won’t attack the vulnerable Heitkamp as he did similarly imperiled McCaskill.”

The Washington Post (9/5, Rucker) reports that the White House is touting Heitkamp’s planned travel with Trump on Air Force One “as the first indication of bipartisan support for overhauling the tax code. Trump will be touting his tax plan at the Andeavor oil refinery in Heitkamp’s hometown of Mandan.” The Post adds, “In his speech Wednesday, Trump intends to pressure Heitkamp to support his tax-reform agenda – in part by reminding North Dakotans that the last time Congress passed meaningful tax reform, in 1986, during Ronald Reagan’s presidency, their Democratic senator voted yea,” according to excerpts of the President’s planned remarks.

The Washington Times (9/5, Miller) reports that according to “prepared remarks provided by the White House,” Trump will say in today’s speech, “Both of the Reagan tax cuts passed by a Democratic majority in the House, a Democratic speaker and the vast majority of Democrats in the Senate, including a Democratic senator from the great state of North Dakota.” Trump will further say, “If Democrats continue their obstruction, if they don’t want to bring back your jobs, raise your pay and help America win, voters should deliver a clear message: Do your job to deliver for America or find a new job.”

Reuters (9/5, Rampton, Holland) reports that in Heitkamp, Trump “has found at least one Democrat willing to entertain his tax reform pitch.” Reuters adds that Heitkamp on Friday “said both parties need to work together on tax reform, which she views as critical for businesses and families in her state.” USA Today (9/6, Jackson) reports that Trump “won 63% of the vote in North Dakota in November, and Heitkamp’s bid for re-election next year is rated a tossup by the nonpartisan Inside Elections.”

WTimes Analysis: Time Running Short For Republicans To Repeal ACA.

The Washington Times (9/5, Howell) reports that congressional Republicans are facing “a swiftly closing window to repeal Obamacare using GOP votes alone.” While Republican leaders began the year by passing a budget written with the purpose repealing the ACA “while avoiding a Democratic filibuster,” according to the Senate parliamentarian their ability to do so “will expire when the fiscal year ends Sept. 30, meaning it’s time for the GOP to use it or lose it.” The Times says it appears “the clock will run out on their efforts, as bipartisan leaders pivot toward a short-term bill to shore up the markets before sign-ups begin this fall.”

McCarthy: GOP Won’t Start Wall Fight Until “Later In The Year.”

Politico (9/5, Conway) reports that House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy said Tuesday on Fox Business Mornings with Maria that House Republicans plan to pass a three-month continuing resolution to fund the government in September and “will push any fight over President Donald Trump’s border wall until later this year.” McCarthy also “said Republicans still intend to pass a budget this month because ‘it allows us to go to reconciliation to start tax reform.’”

WPost A1: Conservative Charities Fueled Trump’s Exit From Climate Accord.

The Washington Post (9/5, A1, O’Harrow) reports on its front page that “for nearly two decades...the Cooler Heads Coalition, an umbrella group of tax-exempt public charities and other nonprofit organizations,” led efforts to “cast doubt on the gravity of climate change and thwart government efforts to address it.” Their efforts were “part of a wave that crested with [President] Trump’s rejection on June 1 of the Paris agreement.” The Coalition’s leader, Myron Ebell, told the Post, “He made the decision. We helped create the circumstances. When you are persistent, good things can happen.” The Post says the “story behind the coalition illuminates the influential, little-known role that tax-exempt public charities play in modern campaigns to sway lawmakers and shape policy in the nation’s capital, while claiming to be nonpartisan educational organizations.”

DOJ Won’t Appeal Ruling Against Obama-Era Overtime Rule.

The Washington Free Beacon (9/5, McMorris) reports that, ending “one of the most controversial regulatory decisions from the Obama era,” the Justice Department will not appeal Judge Amos Mazzant’s decision striking down the Obama Labor Department’s move to increase the salary threshold of white collars and administrative workers who have to be paid overtime from the current below $23,660 to $47,476. Mazzant held the rule was “unlawful” because classes of workers Congress exempted from overtime considerations would have received benefits.

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

“Donald Trump’s Cowardice On ‘Dreamers.’” Regarding President Trump’s decision on DACA, The New York Times (9/5) editorializes that “Trump didn’t even have the guts to do the job himself. Instead, he hid in the shadows and sent his attorney general...to do the dirty work.” Adds the Times, “Contrast that with President Obama’s willingness to defend a policy that has always had detractors.”

“An Incoherent Strategy On North Korea.” A New York Times (9/6, Board) editorial warns President Trump’s approach so far to North Korea “have not only produced zero positive results but they have also sowed confusion about his intentions,” as Trump “and his team seem unable or unwilling to put together a realistic and coherent strategy that goes beyond pressure tactics and harsh rhetoric to include a serious effort to engage the North Koreans.” The Times points to “some inexplicable errors along the way,” and says while Kim Jong-un has not signaled whether he “is interested in talking,” the President “needs to test the possibility before design or miscalculation leads to war.”

“Myanmar Intensifies Its Abuse Of Rohingya.” In an editorial, the New York Times (9/5) writes that Burma’s government has intensified violence against the Muslim Rohingya minority in its Rakhine State – killing nearly 400 people and causing tens of thousands of Rohingya to flee the state since the government began its most recent operation on August 25. The Post condemns the government’s actions as “a colossal moral failure” and argues that Burmese leader Aung San Suu Kyi must give her people their rights.

“City To The News: Hang In.” In an editorial, the New York Times (9/5) expresses hope that the New York Daily News, recently acquired by Tronc, will continue to retain its “New York-ness” and “brashness” as a tabloid newspaper that for “nearly a century” has offered blunt assessments of politics and current events.

Washington Post.

“Trump’s Heartless Decision.” The Washington Post (9/5) writes in an editorial that President Trump “ducked, dodged and shunted the issue to Congress.” His order on DACA “is an assault on economic logic,” and “unless Congress acts, the United States will suffer along with the dreamers.”

“A Welcome Change Of Course From The Trump Administration.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (9/5) applauds the Administration for announcing new rules in the Department of Housing and Urban Development to rein in what the Post describes as a “dubious” and “non-transparent” program that diverts resources “from less affluent first-time home buyers to seniors who already own homes” – the Federal Housing Administration’s Home Equity Conversion Mortgage program, more commonly known as the “reverse mortgage.”

“Montgomery County Should Approach Council Changes With Care.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (9/5) writes that Montgomery County’s Charter Review Commission – which is considering proposals to reshape the nine-member Montgomery County Council by reducing or eliminating the four at-large members whom some see as carrying unequal voting advantage – should consider any council changes carefully, given that it has been 27 years since the last change and that any changes would require a referendum.

Wall Street Journal.

“The Dreamer Debacle.” On its editorial page, the Wall Street Journal (9/5) criticizes President Trump’s campaign rhetoric threatening to end DACA, but argues that Obama should not have moved unilaterally in establishing it – and that the former president acted cynically in a bid to score political points and put Republicans in a bind. The Journal goes on to criticize both parties’ handling of the issue, and suggests a deal could be made whereby Congress approves the program in exchange for added border security.

“The Godfather Of Missile Defense.” A Wall Street Journal (9/5) editorial argues that antimissile defense systems can protect the US from the threat posed by North Korea.

“Making Canada Great Again.” A Wall Street Journal (9/5) editorial writes that according to the Globe and Mail, Canadian NAFTA negotiators spent Sunday’s talks trying to persuade their US counterparts to pass a federal law negating right-to-work laws, which they argue are stealing job through lower-cost labor. The Journal notes that this is the same argument President Trump makes against Mexico.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Array Of Threats Stir Up Markets

Trump Rescinds Protections For DACA Immigrants

Automation Kills Jobs In Retail—And Replaces Them With Better Ones

Lego Hits Brick Wall With Sales, Sheds 8% Of Workforce

New York Times:

Trump Moves To End DACA And Calls On Congress To Act

After 16 Futile Years, Congress Will Try Again To Legalize ‘Dreamers’

Worried And Frustrated, ‘Dreamers’ Say They Won’t Give Up

North Korea’s Nuclear Arsenal Threatens China’s Path To Power

Crisis Is Over At Texas Plant, But Chemical Safety Flaws Remain

Red Sox Used Apple Watches To Help Steal Signs Against Yankees

Washington Post:

Trump Orders DACA’s End, Challenges Congress

‘This Is Our Country,’ Program’s Beneficiaries Say, Promising A Fight

Syrians Break An ISIS Siege In A Victory For Assad
Fla. Areas Evacuate As Irma Strengthens
‘A Disaster On Top Of A Disaster’
How Charities’ Long Fight Fueled Climate-Pact Exit

Financial Times:

Trump Ends ‘Dreamers’ Immigration Program
Putin Says Sanctions Drive Against North Korea Is Pointless
UTC And Rockwell Eye Economies Of Scale From \$30bn Deal
Lego Suffers First Drop In Revenues In A Decade

Washington Times:

Trump Phaseout Of DACA Gives Congress Six Months To Devise Solution For Dreamers
Congressional Path To Dreamer Protections Unclear
Al Franken Will Use Senate Blue-Slip Tradition To Block Trump Judiciary Nominee
U.S. Poised To Sell Military Weapons To Pacific Allies In Response To North Korean Nuclear Tests
Democrat Heitkamp To Appear With Trump Wednesday

Story Lineup From Last Night’s Network News:

ABC: Hurricane Irma-Forecast; Hurricane Irma-Florida Preparation; Hurricane Irma-Puerto Rico Preparation; DACA Repeal-White House; DACA Repeal-Congress; North Korea Threats; Hurricane Harvey-Vehicle Damages; West Coast-Wildfires; Tokyo-NYC Flight Bird Strike; North Carolina-Cold Medicine Murder; Drunk Driving-Social Media Post; Elderly-Children Community Connection.

CBS: DACA Repeal-White House; DACA Repeal-Congress; DACA Repeal-Reactions; Hurricane Irma-Forecast; Hurricane Irma-Preparation; Hurricane Harvey-Dreamer; North Korea Threats; British Royal-Paparazzi Ruling; MLB-Cheating Scandal; Berry Gordy Jr Mansion On Sale; Elderly Sailor.

NBC: Hurricane Irma-Florida Preparation; Hurricane Irma-Puerto Rico Preparation; Hurricane Irma-Forecast; DACA Repeal-White House; DACA Repeal-Reactions; North Korea Threats; Hurricane Harvey-Recovery; North Carolina-Cold Medicine Murder; West Coast-Wildfires; MLB-Cheating Scandal; Surviving WW2 Veterans.

Network TV At A Glance:

DACA Repeal – 16 minutes
Hurricane Irma – 15 minutes, 5 seconds
North Korea Threats – 6 minutes, 5 seconds
Hurricane Harvey – 5 minutes, 30 seconds
West Coast-Wildfires – 55 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning’s Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Hurricane Irma; DACA Repeal; Arizona-F15 Crash.

CBS: Hurricane Irma; DACA Repeal; NAFTA Renegotiation; MLB-Cheating Scandal; Hurricane Harvey-Gasoline Price.

FOX: DACA Repeal; Hurricane Irma.

NPR: DACA Repeal; Hurricane Irma; Hurricane Harvey-Recovery; North Korea Threats.

Washington Schedule

Today’s Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Speaks with President Xi Jinping of China; participates in a tax reform event with workers from the energy sector.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Joins the President to meet with congressional leadership; joins Director of the National Security Agency (NSA) Michael Rogers to tour the agency and participate in a series of briefings.

US Senate: 10:00 AM Senate Finance Committee Executive Session – Executive Session, to consider the nominations of Gilbert Kaplan to be Under Secretary of Commerce for International Trade; Matthew Bassett to be Assistant Secretary of Health and Human Services; and Robert Charrow to be Department of Health and Human Services General Counsel Location: 215 Dirksen, U.S. Capitol <http://finance.senate.gov>

10:00 AM Senate Commerce Committee hearing on the FCC Lifeline program – Hearing on

'Addressing the Risk of Waste, Fraud and Abuse in the Federal Communications Commission's Lifeline Program', with testimony from Government Accountability Office Forensic Audits & Investigative Service Director of Audit Services Seto Bagdoyan; South Dakota Public Utilities Commission Commissioner Chris Nelson; Citizens Against Government Waste Director of Technology and Telecommunications Policy Deborah Collier; George Mason University School of Law Adjunct Professor Dr Jeffrey Eisenach; and Free Press Deputy Director and Senior Counsel Jessica Gonzalez Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 253, Washington, DC
<http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Amy Coney Barrett to be U.S. Circuit Judge for the Seventh Circuit; Joan Louise Larsen to be U.S. Circuit Judge for the Sixth Circuit; Eric Dreiband to be Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division; William Campbell Jr. to be U.S. District Judge for the Middle District of Tennessee; and Thomas Lee Robinson Parker to be U.S. District Judge for the Western District of Tennessee Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 226, Washington, DC
<http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate HELP Committee hearing on the individual health insurance market for 2018 – Hearing on 'Stabilizing Premiums and Helping Individuals in the Individual Insurance Market for 2018: State Insurance Commissioners', with testimony from Oklahoma Department of Insurance Commissioner John Doak; Washington State Insurance Commissioner Mike Kreidler; Tennessee Department of Commerce and Insurance Commissioner Julie Mix McPeak; Insurance Commissioner of Pennsylvania Theresa Miller; and Alaska Division of Insurance Director Lori Wing-Heier Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 430, Washington, DC
<http://help.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Governmental Affairs Committee hearing on the U.S. health care system – Hearing on 'The History and Current Reality of the U.S. Health Care System', with testimony from Miami University Department of Economics Professor and Director of Graduate Studies Dr Melissa Thomasson; University of Chicago Harris School of Public Policy Dean Dr Katherine Baicker; and Georgetown University Health Policy Institute Center on Health Insurance Reforms Research Professor Sabrina Corlette Location: Rm 342, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC
<http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

10:30 AM Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing on the U.S.-Turkey relationship – Hearing on 'Priorities and Challenges in the U.S.-Turkey Relationship', with testimony from Council on Foreign Relations Senior Fellow for Middle East and Africa Studies Dr Steven Cook; and Harvard Kennedy School Democracy in Hard Places Initiative Fellow Dr Amanda Sloat Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 419, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

11:00 AM Senate Appropriations subcommittee markup hearing – Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Subcommittee markup hearing on Fiscal Year 2018 appropriations bill Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 124, Washington, DC
<http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

2:00 PM State, Foreign Operations, and Related Programs Subcommittee markup hearing on Fiscal Year 2018 appropriations bill Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 124, Washington, DC <http://appropriations.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateApprops>

US House: 10:00 AM POSTPONED: House Homeland Security subcommittee hearing on the future of FEMA – POSTPONED: Emergency Preparedness, Response, and Communications Subcommittee hearing on 'The Future of FEMA: The Administrator's Perspective' Location: CVC 210, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC homeland.house.gov <https://twitter.com/HouseHomeland>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources subcommittee legislative hearing – Energy and Mineral Resources Subcommittee legislative hearing on 'H.R. 2661, State Mineral Revenue Protection Act', 'H.R. 2907, Planning for American Energy Act', and 'H.R. 3565, Federal Land Freedom Act', with testimony from Oklahoma Independent Petroleum Association Vice President of Regulatory Affairs A.J. Ferate; Interstate Oil and Gas Compact Commission Executive Director Mike Smith; Petroleum Association of Wyoming Vice Chairman Paul Ulrich; University of Utah S.J. Quinney College of Law Associate Professor John Ruple Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM House Ways and Means subcommittee hearing on challenges facing the SSA over disability benefits – Social Security Subcommittee hearing on 'Determining Eligibility for Disability Benefits: Challenges Facing the Social Security Administration' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2020, Washington, DC <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

10:00 AM House Science subcommittees joint hearing on EPA's IRIS Program – Environment Subcommittee and Oversight Subcommittee joint hearing on 'Examining the

Scientific and Operational Integrity of EPA's IRIS Program', with testimony from Ramboll Environ principal Dr Kenneth Mundt; Exponent senior managing scientist Dr James Bus; and Johns Hopkins University's Dr Thomas Burke Location: Rm 2318, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://science.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseScience>

10:00 AM House Energy Committee hearing on the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act – Hearing on 'Powering America: Reevaluating PURPA's Objectives and its Effects on Today's Consumers', with testimony from Kent County, MI, Department of Public Works Director Darwin Baas; Solar Energy Industries Association counsel Todd Glass; Alliant Energy Vice President for Iowa Operations Terry Kouba; Xcel Energy Vice President for Policy and Federal Affairs Frank Prager; Idaho Public Utilities Commission Commissioner Kristine Raper; and Domtar Paper Company Senior Manager for Energy Contracts Stephen Thomas Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM Hearing on 'The Sharing Economy: Creating Opportunities for Innovation and Flexibility' Location: Rm 2175, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

10:15 AM Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee hearing on 'EPA Oversight: Unimplemented Inspector General and GAO Recommendations' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2322, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee hearing on streamlining federal permitting – Hearing on 'Expediting Economic Growth: How Streamlining Federal Permitting Can Cut Red Tape for Small Businesses', with testimony from Covington & Burling Senior Counsel Philip Howard; Springfield Underground President Louis Griesemer (on behalf of National Stone, Sand and Gravel Association); Missoula Electric Cooperative General Manager Mark Hayden; and U.S. Women's Chamber of Commerce CEO Margot Dorfman Location: Rm 2360, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

2:00 PM House Ways and Means subcommittee hearing on declining employment among working-age men – Human Resources Subcommittee hearing on 'Missing from the Labor Force: Examining Declining Employment among Working-Age Men' Location: Rm 1100, Longworth House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

2:00 PM House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on combating the financing of small terrorist attacks – Terrorism and Illicit Finance Subcommittee hearing on 'Low Cost, High Impact: Combating the Financing of Lone-Wolf and Small-Scale Terrorist Attacks', with testimony from The Washington Institute for Near East Policy Stein Program on Counterterrorism and Intelligence Director Dr Matthew Levitt; Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft partner Joseph Moreno; George Washington University Program on Extremism Deputy Director Seamus Hughes; and Barclays Global Head of Financial Crime Frederick Reynolds Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

Other: 9:00 AM CSIS discussion on 'How to Organize Military Space' – 'How to Organize Military Space' Center for Strategic and International Studies Aerospace Security Project symposium, exploring 'how military space enterprise should be organized with the increasing importance of space as a warfighting domain'. Speakers include Republican Rep. Mike Rogers, Lockheed Martin Space Security Vice President Marc Berkowitz, former Secretary of the Air Force Deborah Lee James, former U.S. Strategic Command and U.S. Air Force Space Command Commander Gen. (Ret.) C. Robert Kehler, and Senate Committee on Armed Services Professional Staff Member Daniel Lerner Location: Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1616 Rhode Island Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

12:00 PM House votes on Hurricane Harvey relief funding package – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda including consideration of 'H.R. X – Making supplemental appropriations for disaster relief requirements for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2017' – funding to deliver relief in the wake of the impacts of Hurricane Harvey on Texas and nearby states – under suspension of the rules * Secretary of the Treasury Steven Mnuchin has said he and President Donald Trump believe that Congress should combine any vote on a $7.9 billion disaster relief package with a vote on extending the debt limit – having previously said that the nation would exhaust emergency borrowing measures around 29 Sep (with the statutory borrowing limit having been reached in March), Secretary Mnuchin recently said the costs of Hurricane Harvey have brought that deadline forward and that funding rebuilding could be difficult without extending the limit. The House relief package, however, is a

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: "I hope you had a good Labor Day. In case you don't know history, Labor Day was established all the way back in 1894 as a way to give Americans an extra day to dread going back to work after the weekend. And it's been very successful. ... When we left, we were busy reliving the Civil War. Now we're back with the good old-fashioned Korean War."

Jimmy Kimmel: "It seems like [President Trump's] main agenda is just to undo everything Obama did. I hope he doesn't bring Bin Laden back to life."

Jimmy Kimmel: "The President's spokesperson said it was a difficult decision, the President's been debating it for months, but ultimately Donald Trump believes that if these kids want to be American, they have to do it the right way, by marrying Donald Trump."

Stephen Colbert: "According to reporters on the scene, 'the President didn't meet a single storm victim, see an inch of rain, or get near a flooded street.' It was surprising. He's been closer to a flood in a Russian hotel room."

James Corden: "This morning, Donald Trump decided to end DACA, a program that protects young undocumented immigrants from being deported. So, now, this means a lot of immigrants may get sent back to their native countries. When she heard this, Melania said, 'I volunteer as tribute.'"

James Corden: "The immigrants who have benefited from DACA are called dreamers. [Attorney General Jeff] Sessions explained that the kids will still be 'dreamers,' but more of a 'Nightmare On Elm Street' sort of way."

James Corden: "'Not my bride.' Of course, Putin and Trump aren't married. Trump would never marry someone who is only seven years younger than him."

Trevor Noah: [Referring to Attorney General Jeff Sessions' announcement of DACA repeal] "Very smart, President Trump. How do you soften the blow when telling the kids the bad news? You get one of Santa's elves to do it. Nicely played."

Trevor Noah: "Even the big tech companies are strongly against sending these kids back to their birth countries. I'm telling you this, if Amazon says you can't return something, then you know you're doing something wrong."

Trevor Noah: "You know, if you really love someone, putting their fate in the hands of Congress is a pretty weird way to show it. I wouldn't even trust Congress to water my plants while I'm away. Mitch McConnell would be giving excuses, like, 'We intended to water the plants, but the plant watering initiative included 'Planned Parenthood,' so we had to let it die.'"

Jimmy Fallon: "It was announced today that President Trump is ending the DACA program, and may deport immigrants who came to the US decades ago. Many people are outraged, while Melania was like, 'Well, rules are rules. So, see ya. Take care.'"

Jimmy Fallon: "But first, Trump wants the end the DACA program, but only after a six-month delay. You know, because by then, it will be President Pence's problem."

Jimmy Fallon: "In fact, President Obama called Trump's decision to end DACA wrong and cruel, but if Obama really wants to save DACA, he should say he hates it. Then Trump will say, 'In that case, I love it.'"

Seth Meyers: "Former President Obama today criticized President Trump's decision to end the DACA program. Of course, the only reason Trump wants to end it is because he thinks DACA is Obama's middle name."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, September 13, 2017
Date: Wednesday, September 13, 2017 7:12:11 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- U.S. News & World Report: Zinke Directs More Aggressive Approach To Prevent Wildfires.
- Washington Post: Interior's 'Unusual' Transfer Of Senior Executives Spurs Official Probe.
- Grand Junction (CO) Business Times: Survey: Wildlife Activities Big Business.
- High Country (CO) News: Sally Jewell Defends Interior Department Legacy.
- The Hill: No, President Trump, National Monuments Are Not A 'Land Grab'.
- Independent Journal Review: Want To Put 'America First'?

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Ongoing Problems Land Tribal Oversight Agencies On GAO 'High-risk' List.
- New Agreement With Feds Sparks Nooksack Election: 'We've Got A Lot Riding On This'.
- US Judge Cites Tribal Sovereignty In Dismissing Coal Lawsuit.

Bureau Of Indian Education

- Education Secretary Betsy DeVos Tells Casper Audience That Country 'Must' Rethink Schools.

Bureau Of Land Management

- KTVH-TV Helena (MT): Tri-County Fire Safe To Expand Fuel Reduction Work With New Federal Grant.
- Santa Fe New Mexican: Chaco Canyon Needs Protection.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Bureau Of Reclamation Seeks Help With Colorado River Data Flow.
- Watchdog Group Blasts U.S. Bureau Of Reclamation.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Detroit News: Bills Would Remove Protections For Gray Wolf Population.
- Minneapolis Star Tribune: Wildlife Managers Seek To Regain Authority To Kill Problem Cormorants.
- U.S. News & World Report: National Bison Range Roundup Postponed Amid Montana Smoke.
- U.S. News & World Report: Tennessee Hasn't Updated Endangered Species List In 16 Years.
- MLive (MI): Man Caught In Probe Of Lake Trout Trade On Lake Michigan.
- Daily Caller: It's Time To Limit Abusive, Taxpayer-Fun.

National Park Service

- Knoxville (TN) News Sentinel: Hurricane Irma: Smoky Mountains 'Minimally' Damaged.
- Washington Post: The Petersen House, Where Lincoln Died, Will Close For Six Months In December.
- Cody (WY) Enterprise: Eclipse Helps Make Past Month Busiest August Ever For Yellowstone.
- Flathead (MT) Beacon: 'It's Not Over Yet'.
- Yellowstone Insider: Feds Seek Forfeiture Of Money Seized In Yellowstone National Park.
- Joplin (MO) Globe: Carver Bust Back On Display At Monument.
- Atlanta Journal-Constitution: MasterChef Jr. Winner Appears At Upcoming Festival.
- Las Vegas Review-Journal: Windstorm Damages Buildings, Vehicles At Death Valley.
- Santa Barbara (CA) Independent: Smokejumpers Mop Up Potato Fire On Santa Cruz Island.
- Oil City Wyoming: Concessioner Selected For Boat Services At Grand Teton's Jenny Lake.
- Allentown (PA) Morning Call: Chip Minemyer: Flight 93 Site's Champions Pass Baton To Future Tellers Of 'Monumental' Story.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- Virgin Islands Consortium (VIR): Dept. Of Interior Expedites Release Of $223 Million In Advance Payments To USVI In Wake Of Irma.
- ABC: More Than 2,000 Americans Evacuated From Caribbean.
- Associated Press: Trump: North Korea Sanctions "Nothing Compared To What Will Have To Happen."
- Matangi Tonga: Commonwealth Supports Universal Health Coverage For Pacific Islands.
- Radio New Zealand: Pacific Leadership Focussed On Improving Lives Of Islanders.

US Geological Survey

- U.S. News & World Report: Tribes Plan Protest To Change Yellowstone Valley, Peak Names.
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- USA Today: Trump To Travel To Florida Thursday To Survey Hurricane Damage.
- Washington Examiner: GOP Senators To Introduce "Last-Ditch" ACA Repeal Measure Wednesday.
- Reuters: Short: Trump May Not Tie Fate Of DREAMers To Wall Funding.
- Washington Times: Media Analyses: Trump Seeking Deal With Democrats On Taxes.
- New York Times: Median Household Income Up, Job Openings At Record High.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
- "Senators In Search Of A Foreign Policy."

- "How Not To Sustain Prosperity."
- Washington Post.
 - "The Supreme Court Should Strike Down Wisconsin's Gerrymandering."
 - "Tom Price Decides He Doesn't Want Medicare To Save Money."
 - "Metro Gets A Sudden Lifeline."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "How Florida Saved Taxpayers"
 - "The AI Franken Standard."
 - "Joseph Rago And A Disease Called Sarcoidosis."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Zinke Directs More Aggressive Approach To Prevent Wildfires.

The AP (9/12, Daly) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Tuesday "directed all land managers and park superintendents to be more aggressive in cutting down small trees and underbrush to prevent wildfires as the smoke-choked West faces one of the worst fire seasons in a decade." In a memo, Zinke said the Trump Administration will "take a new approach and work proactively to prevent fires 'through aggressive and scientific fuels reduction management' to save lives, homes and wildlife habitat." According to the article, "Zinke's memo did not call for new spending, but he said federal officials 'must be innovative' and use all tools available to prevent and fight fires."

The Washington Times (9/12, Richardson) reports that Zinke in a statement, "This Administration will take a serious turn from the past and will proactively work to prevent forest fires through aggressive and scientific fuels reduction management to save lives, homes, and wildlife habitat." The move was welcomed by "Western Republicans frustrated with the 'let it burn' approach." They said "Zinke's more aggressive directive on forest management was long overdue."

Coverage by the AP was also picked up by the Washington Post (9/12, Daly), the Brownsville \(TX\) Herald (9/12, Daly), the Minneapolis Star Tribune (9/5, Daly), the New Canaan \(CT\) News (9/12, Daly), the New Haven \(CT\) Register (9/12, Daly), Philly \(PA\) (9/12, Daly), the Washington Times (9/12, Daly), the Daily Mail (9/12, Daly), the Japan Times (9/12), and KHO-TV Spokane \(WA\) Spokane, WA (9/12).

Additional coverage was provided by the Deseret \(UT\) News (9/12, O'Donoghue).

FEMA Approves Grants To Help With Strawberry Fire. The Great Falls \(MT\) Tribune (9/12) reports Montana Sen. Jon Tester (D) and Gov. Steve Bullock said Tuesday that "the Strawberry Fire in northcentral Montana has been approved to receive disaster aid" from a Fire Management Assistance Grant that "makes FEMA funding available to pay 75 percent of the state's eligible firefighting costs." The Tribune notes that "Bullock met with FEMA Administrator Brock Long last week to ask that grant requests be expedited and approved and to help Montanans impacted by the fires."

The Los Angeles Times (9/12, Etehad) provides in-depth coverage of the wildfires.

Interior's 'Unusual' Transfer Of Senior Executives Spurs Official Probe.

The Washington Post (9/12, Davidson) reports that "in response to a request from eight Democrats on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee," the Interior Department's Office of Inspector General "is examining the extraordinary and politically suspect reassignment of dozens of Senior Executive Service (SES) members." The Democrats' request came "after one Interior senior executive, Joel Clement, wrote a Washington Post article that said he was reassigned and 'retaliated against for speaking out publicly about the dangers that climate change poses to Alaska Native communities.'" On Monday, Sen. Maria Cantwell, one the Democrats seeking probe “welcomed the review, saying ‘there are serious questions that need to be answered about the treatment of public servants who have dedicated their careers to the Department of the Interior.’”

Survey: Wildlife Activities Big Business.

The Grand Junction \(CO\) Business Times (9/12) reports that the Interior Department “released the preliminary results of the latest Fish and Wildlife Service survey tracking participation and spending in wildlife-related activities. The agency has conducted the survey nearly every five years since 1955.” The survey said that “Americans spent more than $150 billion participating in fishing, hunting and other wildlife-related activities in 2016.” For 2016, the survey “found 101.6 million Americans – about 40 percent of the population aged 16 years and older – participated in wildlife-related activities.”

Sally Jewell Defends Interior Department Legacy.

In an interview with the High Country \(CO\) News (9/12, Calvert), former Interior Secretary Sally Jewell defended the policies of the Obama Administration, which included undertaking “a ‘forward-looking reform agenda,’ emphasizing science-based land and water conservation, renewable energy development on public land, and better relations with Native American tribal nations.” Among the achievements that Jewell touted were building “a strong nation-to-nation relationship with Indian Country across the board” and “engaging the next generation broadly” on public land issues.

No, President Trump, National Monuments Are Not A ‘Land Grab’.

In an op-ed for The Hill (9/12, McGinty), Katie McGinty, the former chairwoman of the White House Council on Environmental Quality, disputes the characterization of recent national monument designations as a “federal land grab” by the Trump Administration. McGinty points out that “national monument designations can only be had for properties already part of federal landholdings.” She also notes that “any use allowed on the property before a designation – like grazing and logging for example – is retained.”

Want To Put ‘America First’?

Protect Our Public Lands For The Millions Of Americans Who Rely On Them. In an op-ed for the Independent Journal Review (9/12, Barron), Chris Barron, President of Right Turn Strategies and the former organizer of LGBT for Trump, writes that “in the coming battles over the future of our public lands, President Trump should listen to those around him who both understand the importance of our heritage and who share the President’s America First agenda.” One person is his son Donald Trump, Jr., who has asserted, “We have to keep public lands public.” Barron concludes that “instead of bowing to the will of those who oppose his vision and worked against his election, President Trump should continue to listen to the voices of outdoorsmen like Don Jr. and protect public lands for the tens of millions of working class Americans who rely on them.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Ongoing Problems Land Tribal Oversight Agencies On GAO ‘High-risk’ List.

Cronkite News (9/12, Clair) reports that “federal agencies that oversee tribal schools, lands and health care still suffer from weak leadership, a lack of oversight and mismanaged resources, despite nearly a decade of prodding from the Government Accountability Office.” The article says “that lack of progress landed the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Bureau of Indian Education and Indian Health Services on the GAO’s ‘high-risk list’ earlier this year, and will be the focus of a Senate hearing Wednesday on the agencies’ ongoing shortcomings.” The article notes that “a lack of sufficient funding is one area out of the control of the agencies that was cited by the GAO, which also said ‘sustained congressional attention’ to the agencies would help bring about change.” However, “other problems – including a lack of leadership and cumbersome bureaucracy that has stifled tribal economic development – were laid directly at the feet of the agencies.”

New Agreement With Feds Sparks Nooksack Election: ‘We’ve Got A Lot Riding On This’.

The Seattle Times (9/12, Shapiro) reports that “the Nooksack tribe may finally be on the verge of solving a long-running, disenrollment dispute that sparked lawsuits, a showdown with the federal government and an order to close the tribe’s last remaining casino.” According to the article, “a memorandum of agreement between Nooksack Chairman Bob Kelly and Michael Black, the U.S. Department of the Interior's acting assistant secretary for Indian affairs, calls for temporarily restoring the tribe's federal funding and a special election Dec. 2 for four council seats." The agreement "paved the way for the reopening, over the weekend, of the Northwood Casino in Lynden."

Feds Allow Nooksack Tribe To Reopen Northwood Casino. The AP (9/12) reports that "the Nooksack Tribe has reopened its casino north of Bellingham." The Nooksack Northwood Casino "reopened Saturday with limited operations after a June closure ordered by the National Indian Gaming Commission." A commission spokeswoman "said Monday the tribal chairman and the commission had reached a settlement, but details weren't immediately available."

US Judge Cites Tribal Sovereignty In Dismissing Coal Lawsuit.

The AP (9/12, Bryan) reports that "a U.S. district judge cited tribal sovereignty in dismissing a lawsuit aimed at shutting down a coal-fired power plant and adjacent mine near the Arizona-New Mexico border." The lawsuit by environmental groups was "targeting the 2015 approval by the U.S. government of a lease extension for the Navajo Mine and the Four Corners Power Plant." The groups claimed that the Interior Department and other agencies "did not consider clean-energy alternatives or possible effects on endangered species in the region when they approved the 25-year extension." In the order issued Monday, Judge Steven Logan of Phoenix "tossed the case since the mine is owned by a corporation created by the Navajo Nation, which makes it immune from such legal challenges." Logan "said the case could not move forward without the mine as a defendant."

Bureau Of Indian Education

Education Secretary Betsy DeVos Tells Casper Audience That Country 'Must' Rethink Schools.

The Casper \(WY\) Star-Tribune (9/12, Klamann) reports that Education Secretary Betsy DeVos, speaking Tuesday in Casper, Wyoming as she kicked off a six-state "Rethink Schools" back-to-school tour, praised local school choice policies "while urging nationwide educators to move away from what she called an outdated model for educating students." The paper quotes DeVos saying, "It's time to rethink schools. For far too many kids, this year's first day back to school looks and feels a lot like last year's first day back to school. And the year before that, and the generation before that, and the generation before that."

U.S. News & World Report (9/12, Camera) reports that DeVos "slammed the established 'education system' Tuesday," saying the tour's purpose is to "highlight innovative ways educators are meeting the needs of students in K-12 and higher education." DeVos will travel to Wyoming, Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, and Indiana, visiting "a variety of schools, including traditional and charter public schools, religious and other private schools, home school cooperatives, traditional four-year colleges and universities, as well as community colleges and other career-focused certification programs." This piece reports that Woods Learning Center uses "a 'teacher-powered' model that does not employ a principal. Students enrolled in the school move through lessons at their own pace using a competency-based learning model."

The Billings \(MT\) Gazette (9/12, Hoffman) reports that DeVos' second stop of the day was at St. Stephens Indian School in Arapahoe, Wyoming. Superintendent Frank No Runner told DeVos that "students still carry historical trauma from the boarding school era and other abuses," but stressed that "that's not an excuse for low student achievement." DeVos "made no sweeping statements about the schools or...policies," but "consistently praised mentions of parent and student involvement in school planning."

Additional coverage was provided by Politico Morning Education (9/12, Leonor).

Bureau Of Land Management

Tri-County Fire Safe To Expand Fuel Reduction Work With New Federal Grant.

KTVH-TV Helena, MT (9/12, Ambarian) reports that the nonprofit Tri-County Fire Safe Working Group will be "able to help more homeowners in Lewis and Clark, Broadwater and Jefferson Counties protect themselves from wildfires, thanks to an additional federal grant." The group has received $50,000 from the Bureau of Land Management. The award "comes after the group got a larger grant from the BLM earlier this year.”

Chaco Canyon Needs Protection.

In an editorial, the Santa Fe New Mexican (9/12) warns that leasing land near Chaco Culture National Historical Park “could have devastating consequences for New Mexico’s cultural treasures.” The paper asserts that “until it is better understood what drilling for oil and gas — including the use of the fracking process — might do to the irreplaceable archaeology of Chaco Canyon, these leases should not go forward.” It concludes that if the Trump Administration “does not agree, then tribes, activists and all concerned people will have to fight this.”

Bureau Of Reclamation

Bureau Of Reclamation Seeks Help With Colorado River Data Flow.

FedScoop (9/12, Chappellet-Lanier) reports that the Bureau of Reclamation “would like to better handle the streams of data that describe and support the Colorado River Basin, so the bureau and its partners have taken to Challenge.gov to search for innovative data visualization solutions.” Participants in the “Colorado River Basin Data Visualization Challenge” should take historical, current and projected data on weather, climate conditions, streamflows and more and then develop data visualization approaches that will “improve data exploration, analysis, interpretation, and communication.” The agency is “laying $60,000 on the line for the competition — individual awards will range from $5,000 to $20,000 for successful solutions, the Bureau said.”

Watchdog Group Blasts U.S. Bureau Of Reclamation.

The Central Valley \(CA\) Business Times (9/11, Reclamation) reports that “three recent federal investigations have found the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation misspending more than $100 million in funds but the agency has not committed to significant reforms nor to punishing any responsible officials, charges the environmental watchdog organization Public Employees for Environmental Responsibility.” PEER Senior Counsel Paula Dinerstein said, “At Reclamation, even massive misappropriation means never having to say you are sorry. Reclamation’s posture of denying wrongdoing but promising not to do it again merely suggests it will seek out other shady ruses rather than genuinely reform its grant process.” The group has “been pressing both Reclamation’s parent agency, the Department of Interior, as well as the U.S. Congress to step in, but so far there has been no action, it says.”

Who’s Watching Out For Taxpayers On Twin Tunnels? In an editorial, the Chico \(CA\) Enterprise-Record (9/12) calls the “audit by the federal government about the twin tunnels,” released last week, “very damning.” But the paper expects that “the state will move doggedly ahead, insisting it has done nothing wrong; Brown will assiduously avoid any questions or give any speeches about the twin tunnels; the state will reimburse the federal government with taxpayer money; the federal government will ease up because the No. 2 person in the federal Department of the Interior under Donald Trump used to work as a lobbyist at the huge Westlands Water District in the San Joaquin Valley; and LaMalfa and other politicians will back off as soon as the heat subsidies because, well, those water districts in the bottom half of the state make very nice campaign contributions.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

Bills Would Remove Protections For Gray Wolf Population.

The Detroit News (9/12, Burke) reports that “a U.S. House committee is expected to vote Wednesday to advance two bills that would remove the gray wolf in Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin from the federal endangered species list.” The Sportsmen Heritage and Recreational Enhancement Act “in part would ‘take wolf recovery and delisting out of the hands of the courts and will return wolf management and conservation to the states, where they belong,’ said Anna M. Seidman, director of government affairs and director of litigation for the Safari Club International.” Seidman testified at a Tuesday hearing before the Federal Lands Subcommittee of the House Natural Resources Committee hearing on the bill.

The Detroit Free Press (9/12, Spangler) reports that during the hearing, “Democrats voiced deep concerns about other portions of the legislation, including measures that would make it easier for people to buy firearm silencers and put more of a legal and financial burden on law enforcement when stopping a vehicle suspected of potentially transporting a firearm across state lines." According to the article, "with so much before Congress between now and the end of the year, it could be caught in a logjam and Democratic members of the U.S. House, while outnumbered with Republicans in the majority, will likely try to do all they can to slow it, especially because of the firearm portions of the bill."

Wildlife Managers Seek To Regain Authority To Kill Problem Cormorants.

The Minneapolis Star Tribune (9/13, Kennedy) reports that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is "about to take its first major step to regain the authority to kill problematic cormorants via depredation permits, a move that could reopen site-specific shooting of the aquatic birds in Minnesota and other Great Lakes states by next spring." Tom Cooper, regional chief of the Fish and Wildlife Service's Migratory Bird Program in Bloomington, "said the agency will publish a draft environmental assessment within weeks for a plan that would provide more accountability and a new, big-picture look at cormorant population effects before fish farmers, lakeshore property owners, bait suppliers and others can receive authority to kill cormorants." He "said the first step in regaining permitting authority deals with depredation related to human health and safety, damage to aquaculture, damage to private property and concern for nesting species crowded out by cormorants."

National Bison Range Roundup Postponed Amid Montana Smoke.

The AP (9/13) reports that "wildfire smoke and the danger of new fires have prompted federal wildlife managers to postpone the annual roundup at the National Bison Range." The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service "said Tuesday the roundup was scheduled for Oct. 2 and 3." No new date has been set.

Tennessee Hasn't Updated Endangered Species List In 16 Years.

The AP (9/12) reports that "an audit has found that the Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency has not updated the state's endangered species list in 16 years, even though it is required to do so every two years." Comptroller Justin Wilson's office "said in the audit released Tuesday that the state is also running afoul of an agreement with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to annually submit additions and deletions from the list of threatened species." The audit "finds that the failure to update the list since 2000 could put more species at risk of becoming extinct and could cause Tennessee to lose federal grants." According to the article, "the head of the state wildlife agency's biodiversity division was unaware of the reporting requirement until 2013, and officials are in the process of creating a new endangered species list."

Man Caught In Probe Of Lake Trout Trade On Lake Michigan.

MLive \(MI\) (9/12) reports that "a Ludington fish dealer who bought and sold Lake Michigan lake trout that was illegally harvested by a tribal fisherman has agreed to plead guilty to a felony charge of false labeling of fish." The charge is "linked to a three-year, undercover investigation by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, an effort to protect the sought-after game fish whose population is maintained primarily by stocking."

It's Time To Limit Abusive, Taxpayer-Fun.

In a piece for the Daily Caller (9/12, Mooney), Kevin Mooney writes that "instead of allowing environmental groups with hundreds of millions of dollars in assets to file an endless chain of lawsuits at taxpayer expense, Congress should move decisively to end abusive practices that subtract from local conservation efforts, according to recent testimony delivered before House committees." Mooney supports "reforming both the Endangered Species Act (ESA) and the Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA)."

National Park Service

Hurricane Irma: Smoky Mountains 'Minimally' Damaged.

The Knoxville \(TN\) News Sentinel (9/12, Ahillen, Hickman) reports that "National Park Service personnel have begun assessing the damage from the hurricane and reopening roads and facilities around the Great Smoky Mountains National Park on Tuesday morning." Park spokeswoman Dana Soehn said, "Overall, the park was minimally impacted by winds and rain associated with Hurricane Irma. Crews are still clearing downed trees and limbs along Newfound Gap Road and Clingmans Dome Road, but most lower elevation roads have reopened."

Charleston's Fort Sumter Still 3 Feet Deep In Water From Tropical Storm Irma. The Charleston \(SC\) Post and Courier (9/12, Kropf) reports that Fort Sumter "remains filled with 3 feet of water from Tropical Storm Irma's rains and tidal surge, the National Park Service said Tuesday afternoon." According to the article, "there was some damage to the fort's docking pier and to some of the interior facilities but no artifacts appear to be harmed." Dawn H. Davis, public affairs officer for Fort Sumter National Monument and the Charles Pinckney National Historical Site, said that "it will be several days before the fort will be open to the public."

Blue Ridge Parkway Closed In NC As Irma Remnants Hit Mountains. WNCN-TV Raleigh-Durham, NC (9/12) reports that "as the remnants of Hurricane Irma hit western North Carolina many downed trees meant the closure of the Blue Ridge Parkway, officials said." The National Park Service "Tweeted several photos of trees blocking the parkway."

The Petersen House, Where Lincoln Died, Will Close For Six Months In December.

The Washington Post (9/12, Ruane) reports that "Washington's Petersen House, where Abraham Lincoln died after being shot in Ford's Theatre, will close Dec. 25 for six months of historic preservation work and upgrades, the National Park Service and the Ford's Theatre Society said Tuesday." The project will "replace the existing fire suppression system, update historic furnishings and wallpaper, and perform general preservation and maintenance, the groups said in a statement." The house is "expected to reopen in June, 2018."

Eclipse Helps Make Past Month Busiest August Ever For Yellowstone.

The Cody \(WY\) Enterprise (9/12) reports that Yellowstone National Park "had its busiest August ever, attracting 916,166 visits last month." According to the article, "the nearly 9 percent increase over the same period in 2016 was partly attributable to the solar eclipse of Aug. 21."

Additional coverage was provided by the AP (9/12).

'It's Not Over Yet'.

The Flathead \(MT\) Beacon (9/12, Franz) reports that "while many thought record-shattering visitation" at Glacier National Park "would be how history books remember 2017, it will likely be overshadowed by the fires that brought that historic season to an early end." Superintendent Jeff Mow at a packed public meeting in West Glacier last week, said, "The summer of 2017 was already a remarkable one in so many ways. It's been a long summer, and it's not over yet." According to the article, "while many in attendance at the Sept. 6 public meeting wanted to know what was next for the three major fires in the park, many also wanted to know what would happen with the remains of Sperry Chalet and what was being done to protect Lake McDonald Lodge, both beloved structures built in the 1910s." Mow "said that as soon as it's safe, the park will conduct a structural assessment on Sperry Chalet and record what is left of the National Historic Landmark." He added that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "called for a full investigation into how the chalet burned."

Feds Seek Forfeiture Of Money Seized In Yellowstone National Park.

Yellowstone Insider (9/12, Reichard) reports that "federal authorities are asking to keep over $20,000 in money seized earlier this summer in Yellowstone National Park." The U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Wyoming "filed a civil complaint last Wednesday seeking said forfeiture." According to Assistant U.S. Attorney Stephanie Hambrick, "who presented the complaint, the cash should be forfeited because it was 'furnished and intended to be furnished in exchange for a controlled substance.'"

Additional coverage was provided by the Powell \(WY\) Tribune (9/12, Baker).

Carver Bust Back On Display At Monument.

The Joplin \(MO\) Globe (9/12, Kagubare) reports that a bust of George Washington Carver was reinstalled last Friday at George Washington Carver National Monument "after a two-month restoration." According to the article, "the bust's upgrade was intended to resemble the original sculpture." The project cost the park $6,500.

MasterChef Jr. Winner Appears At Upcoming Festival.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution (9/12, Brett) reports that Family Day/Culture Festwill be held Sept. 23 at and around the Martin Luther King Jr. National Historic Site. National Park Service Superintendent Judy Forte said in a statement, "Visitors from across the country and the world are invited to spend a day of fun, educational, enriching and participatory experiences." The festival is "a joint venture of the National Black Arts Festival, National Park Service, Historic District Development Corporation and Sweet Auburn Works, and sponsored by Georgia Pacific."

Windstorm Damages Buildings, Vehicles At Death Valley.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal (9/12, Brean) reports that "powerful wind from an isolated thunderstorm tore the roof off a historic building and caused other damage in Death Valley National Park on Monday." According to the article, "the sudden microburst struck Stovepipe Wells and the park's administrative and staff housing area at Cow Creek, blowing the windows out of four employee-owned vehicles and damaging at least six structures, including an office building dating back to the Civilian Conservation Corps era of the 1930s." The article says that "after the winds subsided, park rangers discovered the missing roof of the historic building and covered computers and office equipment inside to protect them from the rain."

Additional coverage was provided by the Los Angeles Times (9/12, Tchekmedyan).

Smokejumpers Mop Up Potato Fire On Santa Cruz Island.

The Santa Barbara \(CA\) Independent (9/12, Hamm) reports that "U.S. Forest Service smokejumpers — three out of Redding and one from Alaska — are now mopping up the Potato Fire on Santa Cruz Island, inland from Potato Harbor." The article notes that "this is the first time smokejumpers have battled a fire at Channel Islands National Park, according to a statement from the National Park Service." Superintendent Russell Galipeau added, "We greatly appreciate the rapid response by the U.S. Forest Service smokejumpers to suppress this remote island fire in its early phases, especially given the many wildfires currently burning in the West."

Concessioner Selected For Boat Services At Grand Teton's Jenny Lake.

The Oil City Wyoming (9/12) reports that National Park Service Intermountain Regional Director Sue Masica "announced the selection of Jenny Lake Boating, Inc. to provide boat shuttle service, scenic interpretive boat tours, and non-motorized boat rentals at Jenny Lake in Grand Teton National Park." The new ten-year concession contract is expected to start January 1, 2018.

Chip Minemyer: Flight 93 Site's Champions Pass Baton To Future Tellers Of 'Monumental' Story.

In a piece of the Allentown \(PA\) Morning Call (9/13, Minemyer), Chip Minemyer, editor of The Tribune-Democrat in Johnstown, writes that during the anniversary activities held Monday at the Flight 93 National Memorial near Shanksville, park leaders recognized the efforts behind a "$62 million project that will be complete when the Tower of Voices is standing near the park entrance next September." This year's activities included the "soundbreaking" on Sunday for the Tower of Voices near the park entrance on Route 30.

Office Of Insular Affairs

Dept. Of Interior Expedites Release Of $223 Million In Advance Payments To USVI In Wake Of Irma.

The Virgin Islands Consortium \(VIR\) (9/12) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "announced on Friday that Interior will be expediting the rum-cover over advance payment of $223,925,000 for estimated FY 2018 collections in the U.S. Virgin Islands." The move follows President Trump's "Thursday approval and signing of a disaster declaration for the territory, which unlocks emergency federal funding for those affected by Hurricane Irma." Zinke said, "These funds will be critical to operations in the USVI as the Governor and emergency teams work to recover from the impacts of Hurricane Irma. The people of the U.S.VI will need all the support they can get."

Additional coverage was provided by the Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (9/11).

Trump To Visit U.S. Virgin Islands In Wake Of Irma; More Police, National Guard, Arrive On St. John. The Virgin Islands Consortium \(VIR\) (9/12) reports that President Donald will "visit the U.S. Virgin Islands 'within the next six or seven days,' Governor Kenneth Mapp said during a press conference at Government House late Monday." Mapp said he had a conversation with Trump, and Trump "expressed his full support for the territory in providing disaster relief, following the calamitous state Hurricane Irma left St. Thomas and St. John in."

Additional coverage was provided by the Conde Nast Traveler (9/11, Carey) and WBUR-FM

Boston (9/10, Dwyer).

On The U.S. Virgin Islands, Anger And Resentment After Irma. The Think Progress (9/12, CRUNDEN) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “applauded the White House for its efforts in the U.S. Virgin Islands specifically.” Zinke in a press release, “The Department of the Interior actions in the USVI are part of our responsibility for federal policy related to the U.S. territories. We commend the cooperative actions of the White House, USVI government, FEMA and the whole federal family to provide urgent relief to the Virgin Islands.”

More Than 2,000 Americans Evacuated From Caribbean.

ABC World News Tonight (9/12, story 3, 1:35, Muir) reported that “more than 2,000 Americans” who were caught in the Caribbean when Hurricane Irma hit “have now made it out onto US military planes and on private cruise ships, as conditions on those islands continue to deteriorate.” The CBS Evening News (9/12, story 3, 3:00, Mason) reported that the Puerto Rico National Guard evacuated an estimated 300 to 400 Americans from St. Martin. CBS said that while “all the major airports in Florida have reopened...most are operating at about half the normal capacity, and there is still a huge backlog of travelers. More than 17,000 flights in the US and the Caribbean were canceled because of Irma.”

Trump: North Korea Sanctions “Nothing Compared To What Will Have To Happen.”

The AP (9/12, Pennington) reports President Trump said that the new UN sanctions on North Korea “are nothing compared to what ultimately will have to happen” to stop its nuclear program. The ban on textile exports and the crude oil import cap “fell short of Washington’s goals: a potentially crippling ban on oil imports and freezing the international assets of Kim and his government.” Trump called the sanctions “just another very small step – not a big deal.” Meanwhile, Susan Thornton, America’s top diplomat for East Asia, told the House Foreign Affairs Committee, “The success of the pressure strategy will depend on cooperation from international partners, especially Beijing.”

Reuters (9/12, Rampton, Brunnstrom) reports Trump said, “I don’t know if [the sanctions vote] has any impact.” US Ambassador to the United Nations Nikki Haley said, in Reuters’ word, the new sanctions could cost North Korea “an additional $500 million or more in annual revenue.” She added, “If North Korea continues its dangerous path, we will continue with further pressure.”

Mnuchin Warns Of Additional Measures Against China If It Doesn’t Abide By Sanctions.

Bloomberg News (9/12, Mohsin, John) reports Treasury Secretary Mnuchin, during an event at CNBC’s Delivering Alpha conference in New York, warned that if China doesn’t follow the new UN sanctions against North Korea, “we will put additional sanctions on them and prevent them from accessing the U.S. and international dollar system – and that’s quite meaningful.” At a House Foreign Affairs Committee hearing, Chairman Ed Royce called for targeting, in Bloomberg’s words, “major Chinese banks, including Agricultural Bank of China Ltd. and China Merchants Bank Co., for aiding Kim’s regime.” Additionally, Assistant Treasury Secretary Marshall Billingslea said in prepared remarks that North Korean bank representatives “operate in Russia in flagrant disregard of the very resolutions adopted by Russia at the UN.”

The Washington Free Beacon (9/12, Johnson) reports Billingslea said, “Unfortunately, I cannot tell the committee today that we’ve seen sufficient evidence of China’s willingness to truly shutdown North Korea’s revenue flows, to expunge North Korean illicit actors from its banking system, or to expel the various North Korean middlemen and brokers who are continuing to establish webs of front companies.” The Wall Street Journal (9/12, Talley) reports Billingslea said that recent sanctions against Chinese companies sent a “message to China,” and that China “urgently needs to take demonstrable public steps to eliminate North Korea’s trade and financial access” to avoid future measures.

Reuters (9/12, Rampton, Brunnstrom) reports that, when asked about cutting off Chinese banks from the US financial system, White House spokeswoman Sarah Sanders said, “All options are on the table.”

North Korea Condemns New Sanctions. The Washington Post (9/12, Lee) reports North Korea “condemned” the new UN sanctions and “doubled down on its warning that” for its role in economically pressuring the country, “the United States would ‘suffer the greatest pain’ it has ever experienced.” North Korean Ambassador Han Tae Song said Washington “fabricated the most vicious sanction resolution.”

Greg Palkot reported on Fox News’ Special Report (9/12) that as the “world is trying to head off a conflict with North Korea,” the UN Security Council on Monday approved a new set of sanctions against Kim Jong-un’s regime. Fox showed Defense Secretary Mattis saying, “These are the most severe sanctions yet. We will see what choices the North Koreans make." According to Palkot, North Korea's "early choice" is "defiance." Fox showed Han Tae Song, North Korea's Ambassador to the UN, saying: "The DPRK is ready to use in the form of ultimate means. The first countermeasures by DPRK will make the US suffer the greatest pain it's ever experienced in its history."

From Pyongyang, Will Ripley reported on CNN's Situation Room (9/12) that North Korea's government is condemning the new sanctions "in the strongest possible terms, and they are threatening to redouble their efforts to develop weapons of mass destruction." Ripley said that in his 15 trips to North Korea, he hasn't seen any significant impact from previous sanctions. He said in his travels in the country, "the people who we are allowed to see" are "not starving or at least they don't appear to be." He said he's seen more cell phones, more products on store shelves, and more cars in the streets. Ripley added that the North's economy actually grew nearly four percent last year "despite this mounting economic pressure. But of course, sanctions do take a long time to kick in."

South Korea To Establish "Decapitation Unit." The New York Times (9/12, Choe) reports South Korea, seeking "to keep the North on edge and nervous about the consequences of further developing its nuclear arsenal," is establishing a brigade-size special forces "decapitation unit," the Spartan 3000, to target the North's leadership. The publicly announced move is part of an effort to deter Kim Jong-un from hostilities. Additionally, "the South's increasingly aggressive posture is meant to help push North Korea into accepting President Moon Jae-in's offer of talks." However, such a measure can be used preemptively and raise questions about whether South Korea and the United States "are laying the groundwork to kill or incapacitate Mr. Kim and his top aides before they can even order an attack." Additionally, "many say they doubt that the threat is enough to deter Mr. Kim" and that only possible "nuclear retaliation will suffice."

US, South Korea Conducting Live Fire Exercise. Meanwhile, on Fox News' Special Report (9/12), Greg Palkot reported that the US and South Korea are "prepar[ing] for the military option" against North Korea, with US marines joining South Korean forces in a live fire exercise. Palkot said the marines he spoke with "told us these exercises are purely defensive in nature." Palkot said that while those marines "don't pay much attention to the offense of words and actions of North Korea, many US officials do, no doubt a reason why the marines are out there."

Commonwealth Supports Universal Health Coverage For Pacific Islands.

Matangi Tonga (9/12) reports that "an agreement to achieve universal health coverage and address non-communicable diseases in the Pacific region was signed by the Commonwealth Secretariat and the Pacific Community (SPC) on 8 September in Apia, Samoa." The Memorandum of Understanding "means both parties will work together using their resources and networks for health protection and promotion in the region."

Pacific Leadership Focussed On Improving Lives Of Islanders.

Radio New Zealand (9/11) reports that New Zealand's Foreign Minister Gerry Brownlee "says Pacific leaders are determined to develop the economic potential of each of their island countries." Brownlee "made this comment after attending the Pacific Islands Forum leaders summit in Apia, where he was standing in for New Zealand's prime minister Bill English." Brownlee said "that the Pacific Islands' leadership is well focussed on interacting with other countries to improve living standards for their own people."

US Geological Survey

Tribes Plan Protest To Change Yellowstone Valley, Peak Names.

The AP (9/12, Gruver) reports that "two tribes plan to demonstrate in favor of renaming a valley and a mountain in Yellowstone National Park, places they say are associated with one man who advocated slaughter of Native Americans and another who carried it out." Leaders of the Blackfoot Confederacy and Great Sioux Nation will "gather Saturday at Yellowstone's North Entrance near Gardiner, Montana, tribal officials said Tuesday." The tribes aim "to change the name of Hayden Valley, a subalpine valley just north of Yellowstone Lake, to Buffalo Nations Valley." They also seek "to change the name of Mount Doane, a 10,550-foot (3,216-meter) peak five miles east of the lake, to First People's Mountain." The U.S. Geological Survey's Board on Geographic Names has "received several emails on the issue but no official proposal to change the names of Hayden Valley or Doane Mountain, Geological Survey officials said."

Additional Reading.

- Scientists Say Damage To Florida's Coral Reef Has Made The State More Vulnerable To Storm Surges. Washington Post (9/12, Harvey)
- Using Data Analytics To Make Chicago's Beach Water Safer. Government Technology (9/12, Thornton)
- 'Yikes, This Is Bad Press': Internal Emails Show Federal Employees Asking Why A Climate Scientist's Meeting With Mark Zuckerberg Was Canceled. Motherboard (9/12, Emerson)
- For Charleston, Chainsaws, Muck And Mosquitoes Come With The Sun In Irma's Aftermath. The Charleston \(SC\) Post and Courier (9/12, Smith)
- Farmers, Beekeepers Put Aside Differences To Aid Bees. Salem \(OR\) Capital Press (9/12, Gunderson)
- 32 Animal Conservationists Nominated For 2018 Indianapolis Prize. WXIN-TV Indianapolis (9/12)
- Small Earthquake Recorded In NW Oklahoma. KWTW-TV Oklahoma City (9/12)

Top National News

Trump To Travel To Florida Thursday To Survey Hurricane Damage.

USA Today (9/12, Jackson) reports the White House announced that President Trump will travel to Florida on Thursday to survey the damage from Hurricane Irma. Press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders told reporters, "The president and the entire administration continue to monitor the situation in Puerto Rico, the United States Virgin Islands, Florida, Texas and all areas affected by Hurricanes Irma and Harvey." She also said that "details of the trip – including the exact location – are still being worked out." The Hill (9/12, Fabian), however, reports that the FAA "posted a travel advisory Tuesday that covers Fort Myers, on Florida's west coast," which "typically issued before the president travels to a destination in the US."

Jim Acosta said on CNN's Situation Room (9/12), "We're hearing through our sources that it appears at this point that [the President] will be in the Ft. Myers area, that part of southwest Florida that was so hard hit. ... This will obviously be another test for the President when he arrives on the ground down there."

NBC Nightly News (9/12, lead story, 3:10, Holt) and the CBS Evening News (9/12, lead story, 2:50, Mason) both briefly mentioned the President's trip in their lead stories, and Reuters (9/12) also reports briefly on the announcement by Sanders. The White House also tells NBC Nightly News (9/12, story 4, 2:40, Holt) that the President "is looking into possibility, down the line, of making a trip [to the US Virgin Islands], but at a time when it won't imperil those relief efforts." The New York Post (9/12, Rachman, Fears) reports Virgin Islands Gov. Kenneth Mapp "said late Monday night" that Trump is planning to visit "within the next six or seven days." On its front page, the Washington Post (9/12, A1, Faiola) likewise reports on Mapp said in a telephone interview that "Trump...called him Monday and was due to survey the Virgin Islands damage this week. He would find, the governor said, an efficient response."

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution (9/12, Dupree) notes that "this would be the second trip in recent weeks to an area hit hard by a tropical system; Mr. Trump made two trips to the Gulf Coast, stopping in Texas and Louisiana, to get a look at damage and recovery efforts after Hurricane Harvey."

The New York Post (9/12, Perez) similarly notes that the President, joined by First Lady Melania Trump, made two visits to Texas last month following Hurricane Harvey. "My concern continues for all impacted by the hurricanes," the first lady tweeted Tuesday. "Will fly to #Florida on Thursday w @potus to survey the damages from #HurricaneIrma." Politico (9/12, Nelson) reports that shortly after Sanders' announcement, Stephanie Grisham, a spokeswoman for Melania Trump, tweeted, "@flotus will travel to #Florida w POTUS on Thurs to survey aftermath of #HurricaneIrma."

Administration Earns "Bipartisan Praise." The Washington Post (9/12, Nakamura) reports that "facing off against a pair of historic storms," the Trump Administration "has earned bipartisan praise for coordinating the federal response with state and local officials, avoiding the type of catastrophe that marked the Bush administration's response to Katrina." While the pair of storms "wreaked widespread destruction that will take years and billions of dollars to recover from," the Post says that "for a Trump administration whose first eight months has been marked by internecine squabbles and a lack of legislative accomplishments, the initial competence in managing the storms represented a relief — and a rare chance to take credit.” Overall, “emergency management veterans said, Trump and his team deserve acknowledgment for getting through the first phase of the crisis in a way that inspired public confidence.”

Virgin Islands Delegate Stacey Plaskett said on CNN's Situation Room (9/12) that Irma “hit us almost direct impact while it was a Category 5. ... So St. Thomas and St. John have been tremendously affected by it. ... But I have to say we’ve had great support from FEMA, from the Department of Defense. Our governor has been working very closely with the federal government, along with our local emergency management agencies, first to prepare for this and now in the aftermath.”

NBC Nightly News (9/12, story 4, 2:40, Holt) reported that a Coast Guard cutter loaded up with supplies traveled to St. Thomas on Tuesday. Also on board, TSA officers “with the critical goal of getting airport back up and running.”

Without mentioning the Trump Administration, the New York Times (9/12, A1, Fausset) reports on its front page that Hurricanes Harvey and Irma “may have revealed a largely unnoticed truth often buried under the news of unfolding tragedy: The United States appears to be improving in the way it responds to hurricanes, at a time when climate scientists say the threats from such storms, fueled by warming oceans, are growing only more dire.” The Times says the 9/11 attacks “revolutionized the way American government coordinated disaster response,” and Hurricane Katrina “stimulated a new and robust conversation about the power of natural disasters, and, more specifically, forced Americans to rethink the growing threats from floodwater.”

Politico Analysis: Democrats Refrain From Using Storms To Criticize Trump's Climate Policies. Politico (9/12, Holden, Schor) reports Hurricanes Harvey and Irma have “handed Democrats their most potent opportunity in half a decade to hammer Republicans on climate change – with the massive storms giving tens of millions of Americans an up-front glimpse of the types of devastation the world faces if the warming planet spawns a surge in extreme weather. But instead, they’re mostly keeping quiet.” For now, Democrats “appear to be heeding the warnings of Trump appointees” like EPA Administrator Pruitt, who said last week that it’s “very, very insensitive to the people in Florida” to talk about climate change now. Sen. Sheldon Whitehouse (D-RI), “said he doesn’t view the immediate aftermath of Harvey and Irma as heightening the sense of urgency to talk about global warming.”

WPost Analysis: Trump's Praise Of Coast Guard Gives Service "Much-Needed" Boost. The Washington Post (9/12, Horton) reports that on Sunday, President Trump “singled out the Coast Guard for its suddenly high profile amid dueling catastrophic hurricanes, first during Harvey in Texas and now its early work providing assistance in the Florida region” in the wake of Hurricane Irma. The Post says Trump’s “praise for the Coast Guard is a much-needed confidence boost for the service, which was roiled by early Trump administration proposals to cut $1.3 billion from its budget to help pay for the planned wall on the US-Mexico border.”

USA Today (9/12, Moniuszko), however, reports that during Late Night on Monday, host Seth Meyers “didn’t hold back while making fun of President Trump’s comments on the storm,” which praised the Coast Guard’s “branding.” “You’d think applauding the bravery of emergency responders like the Coast Guard would be one of the easiest things a president could do – but even that, it seems, is too much to ask of Donald Trump,” Myers said. “Branding? The Coast Guard doesn’t need to improve their brand, they’re the Coast Guard. They’re not Arby’s.”

Daily Caller Analysis: Telethon Gets "Political." In a report that was the lead story on Drudge Report Tuesday night, the Daily Caller (9/12) reports Stevie Wonder kicked off Tuesday’s “Hand In Hand” telethon to raise money for hurricane recovery “by getting political.” Wonder started the telethon, which was broadcast on every major network, by saying, “Anyone who believes that there’s no such thing as global warming must be blind or unintelligent.”

GOP Senators To Introduce “Last-Ditch” ACA Repeal Measure Wednesday.

The Washington Examiner (9/12, Ferrechio) reports that Sens. Lindsey Graham, Bill Cassidy, Dean Heller, and Ron Johnson “will introduce legislation Wednesday that would provide the Senate with a last-ditch opportunity to repeal and replace Obamacare before a Sept. 30 deadline.” The measure “would provide the $1.2 trillion for Obamacare’s Medicaid expansion and tax credits to states in an attempt to get the states to develop their own healthcare programs.”

However, Politico (9/12, Everett, Haberkorn) describes Republicans as “paralyzed” over how to deal with healthcare, as they are “caught between a bipartisan effort to shore up Obamacare and the opportunity to take one last swing at their years-long promise to repeal the law.” While Graham, Cassidy, Heller and Johnson are “making a last gasp effort to repeal some of the law and replace it with a block grant program to the states,” Sen. Lamar Alexander is trying to work with Sen. Patty Murray “on a bill to shore up the insurance markets, but the two health committee leaders are already at odds over including looser regulations with the package.” Senate Majority Leader McConnell on Tuesday “refused to rule out votes on either a repeal or a fix of Obamacare, wary of picking sides among his caucus and aware that both proposals divide the Senate GOP.”

Short: Trump May Not Tie Fate Of DREAMers To Wall Funding.

In what Reuters (9/12, Oliphant, Cowan) describes as “the latest signal that the Republican president wants to see if he can engage Democrats as well as Republicans in trying to enact his agenda,” White House legislative director Marc Short told reporters at Christian Science Monitor breakfast Tuesday that President Trump “will not necessarily insist on including funding for a border wall with Mexico in legislation to address” the DACA program. Short said that while the President is still committed to his campaign promise to build the wall, “whether or not that is specifically part of a DACA package or a different legislative package, I am not going to prejudge here today. ... I don’t want to bind ourselves into a construct that makes reaching a conclusion on DACA impossible.” The Washington Times (9/12, Dinan) says Short “said the president is not backing off his determination to see barriers erected along the US-Mexico line, but said where that pops up in the legislative process remains to be seen.”

USA Today (9/12, Przybyla) says the White House “appears to be clearing the way for a deal on protecting DREAMers, a move which could have bipartisan backing in Congress.” Senate Minority Leader Schumer “said it’s a ‘very, very good thing and good progress’ if Trump separates wall funding and DACA.”

To Breitbart (9/12, Munro), Short “appeared to trade a quick DACA amnesty in exchange for a pro-business tax break – not a border wall or the wage-boosting, merit immigration RAISE Act – by declaring there is a ‘new season of bipartisanship’ after Trump reached out to Democrats following his decision to end Obama’s amnesty.”

Politico (9/12, Kim, Restuccia) says the President is “sending public and private signals that he is ready to deal on legislation protecting young undocumented immigrants and won’t demand funding for a border wall.” In addition to Short’s comments, House Minority Leader Pelosi said Tuesday that “Trump told her in private that he would sign the Dream Act – a bill that would provide a path to permanent legal status for so-called Dreamers – and that he wants ‘some border security.’” According to Pelosi, she and Schumer “pressed Trump on protection for Dreamers during the Oval Office meeting last week.” Said Pelosi, “‘You pass it, I’ll sign it, I want some border stuff.’ That’s what he said. ... We always want border stuff, so that’s not a problem. Especially with all the technologies.” The Los Angeles Times (9/12, Mascaro, Bennett) reports that Pelosi said Democrats are seeking a vote on such legislation “as soon as this month.”

Meanwhile, the New York Times (9/12, Alcindor) reports that while Republicans promised “quick work to shield young, undocumented immigrants from President Trump’s decision to end their federal protections, lawmakers have tied themselves in knots trying to figure out how to proceed – with only six months to find a way forward.” Rep. Mike Coffman “pulled back a petition he had initiated to force the House to take up legislation to protect so-called Dreamers,” a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on the matter “was canceled this week,” and House Judiciary Committee Chairman Rep. Bob Goodlatte “said he would not move on any such legislation before he addressed criminal alien gangs and border security.”

Author: Many Claims About DREAMers Are “PR-Style Hooey.” In an op-ed for the Washington Post (9/12), author Mickey Kaus argues that “a lot of what’s said about the dreamers is PR-style hooey.” While many were, as former President Obama said, “brought to this country by their parents,” the only requirement to “qualify as a protected dreamer under the various plans,” is that one must “have entered the country illegally before age 16.” Moreover, the claim that “dreamers are college-bound high school grads or military personnel” is “an exaggeration,” as the only requirement “is that the dreamer enroll in a high school course or an ‘alternative,’ including online courses and English-as-a-second-language classes.” Kaus adds that “dreamers are not especially highly skilled” and “their median hourly wage is only $15.34, meaning that many are competing with hard-pressed lower-skilled Americans.”

DHS Grants Waiver To Allow Replacement Of Border Fencing In California. The Washington Times (9/12, Dinan) reports that DHS on Tuesday issued a new waiver allowing the Administration “to breach environmental laws to replace border fencing in southern California – though officials said they still intend to try to comply with as much of the law as possible.” The move “will help Customs and Border Protection (CBP) replace several miles of fencing near the Calexico port of entry.” DHS said in a statement, “While the waiver eliminates DHS’s obligation to comply with various laws with respect to covered projects, the Department remains committed to environmental stewardship with respect to these projects."

Ryan Told Private Dinner Only One Member Wants Border Wall. Breitbart (9/12, Mason) reports in an exclusive that House Speaker Ryan told a private dinner earlier this year that "he thought only 'one member' wanted to build a wall across the entire US-Mexico border," according to "multiple sources with direct knowledge of the comments," including former Rep. Tom Tancredo. Tancredo told Breitbart, "Ryan told a group of Republicans he met with...that only one person wants a wall. ... Of course he means only one person in his entourage and of the leadership. ... I know several people in Congress who want a wall and I know that there are millions of Americans who want a wall."

Media Analyses: Trump Seeking Deal With Democrats On Taxes.

The Washington Times (9/12, Miller) reports "President Trump is ready to" work with Democrats on tax reform, starting by hosting Democratic Sens. Heidi Heitkamp, Joe Donnelly, and Joe Manchin at a White House dinner. White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders said that the belief that Americans should have lower taxes "is a common goal that a lot of people want to come together on" and has, in the Times' words, "widespread agreement on both sides of the aisle." While Democrats and Republicans are "starkly divided" on tax cuts to the wealthiest Americans, Sanders said, "The president, I think, has demonstrated both in the business world and as president that he can make deals and that certainly is what he is planning to do."

Politico (9/12, Becker, Lorenzo) reports the dinner could be Trump's "biggest step yet in reaching out to Democrats on" taxes and "a wake-up call to Republicans." Manchin, Donnelly, and Heitkamp are willing to see if they can find "common ground on issues like retirement security and stopping the offshoring of jobs" and "see little political downside" in seeking a deal – all three are seeking reelection next year "in states the president won handily." In a statement, Donnelly said he wanted to work with Trump on using tax reform to prevent companies from moving jobs offshore. Heitkamp has said tax overhaul must protect working families and retirees. Manchin said he won't support a tax overhaul that adds to the federal debt and opposes passing it using reconciliation, but "broke with his party by saying he was open to cutting taxes for the wealthy and corporations in a revamped system."

The New York Post (9/12, Schultz, Moore) casts the dinner as a continuation of Trump's "push for bipartisanship." Sen. John Thune, who was also invited to the dinner, said the White House is realizing "it's always easier to get things done if you have bipartisan cooperation."

Asked on Fox News' Fox & Friends (9/12) about President Trump's deal with Democratic leaders, Sen. Joni Ernst said, "I don't have anxiety over that. I think tax reform is a must do. And if we are in the chair steering that conversation, I'm okay with that." Ernst added, "I don't want to see another situation where we fail to get our policies across the finish line. If it takes a couple more moderate members of the Democratic Party joining us in this effort, I'm happy to have them along."

Rep. Jim Jordan said on MSNBC's Morning Joe (9/12), "The biggest focus for me is to make sure we do not function in a revenue-neutral world," which he called "Washington speak for the tax burden stays the same, we're going to shift around who pays what. ... Under that scenario what always happens is the connected class, with all the high paid lobbyists, they get a good deal and middle class families get the shaft. So let's just lower taxes for families and let's construct a tax code that's conducive for economic growth."

Dinner Invitation May Expose Divide Among Democrats. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch (9/12, Rassch) reports that while Sens. Heidi Heitkamp, Joe Donnelly, and Joe Manchin "are getting the open-door treatment from the Trump White House," the other seven Democratic senators up for reelection in states won by President Trump last year are not, revealing "a potential divide" among Democrats that "could have a big effect on policy debates" and the 2018 mid-term elections, as "Democrats who oppose a tax-reform bill that gets Democratic votes would be ripe 2018 campaign advertising targets in states won by Trump." The Post-Dispatch focuses on Sen. Claire McCaskill, who the President has cast as one of the "'obstructionists' he said are thwarting his agenda."

Pence To Travel To Indiana To Woo Donnelly. Politico (9/12, Nussbaum) reports that, in an effort to court Democratic Sen. Joe Donnelly on tax reform, Vice President Pence will travel to Indiana twice in September and once in October to "turn up the heat on one of the most vulnerable Democrats heading into the 2018 midterms."

Divided GOP Presents Obstacles For Tax Overhaul. The Washington Post (9/12, Paletta, Sullivan, Snell) reports the White House and Republican leaders are seeking "more agreement upfront" on a tax overhaul "rather than risk late defections that doom the entire process," in contrast to their strategy on repealing the ACA. However, the efforts "are coming up against the same obstacle that has vexed President Trump all year: divided Republican lawmakers."

Negotiators have been "forced...to consider scaling back their plan" even before presenting it to the rank and file. The White House and GOP congressional leaders haven't agreed on which tax breaks to eliminate to pay for tax cuts. While Trump advisers "are pressing to eliminate or reduce several popular tax deductions," such as interest on corporate debt, state and local income taxes, and the mortgage interest deduction, "Congressional leaders, for instance, believe the mortgage deduction is too popular to reduce, according to several officials familiar with the discussions."

GOP Urged To Create Tax Plan Helping Average Workers. Former chief of staff to Rep. Jack Kemp David M. Smick, in an op-ed in the Wall Street Journal (9/12), writes that the rules of reconciliation and fears of losing the votes of Republican outliers in the Senate mean that tax changes helping middle-class families have little chance of becoming long-term policy and the GOP will be tempted to seek modest changes to help corporations. However, business has done well since the financial crisis while wage earners have fared poorly, and Smick argues the GOP should seek robust tax-reform that will help middle-class families and create robust economic growth. In particular, Smick warns against allowing tax loopholes through pass throughs such as S-class corporations. Smick warns that if the GOP doesn't produce a tax plan that helps average workers, Trump may turn to Democrats to pass tax reform.

Median Household Income Up, Job Openings At Record High.

The Census Bureau said Tuesday that the median US household income increased 3.2 percent in 2016 to $59,039, marking its second straight yearly increase "as the long-running economic recovery generated broad gains in prosperity," the New York Times (9/12, A1, Appelbaum) reports. For the American middle class, the Washington Post (9/12, Long) says, 2016 was the "highest-earning year ever." According to the Census Bureau, "the uptick in earnings occurred because so many people found full-time jobs – or better-paying jobs – last year." The Post adds that the poverty rate "also fell to 12.7 percent, the lowest since 2007, the year before the financial crisis hit." The Wall Street Journal (9/12, Leubsdorf) reports that the percentage of Americans lacking health insurance also declined from 9.1 percent in 2015 to 8.8 percent in 2016.

USA Today (9/12, Davidson) says the Census Bureau report "underscores that in the final two years of the Obama administration, low- and middle-income Americans made noticeable progress after struggling in the early years of the economic recovery." USA Today adds that during his 2016 campaign, President Trump argued that President Obama "had left working Americans behind" and "appealed to a base of blue-collar households with an agenda centered on tax cuts and a get-tough trade policy aimed at reclaiming manufacturing jobs." However, Trump "also has proposed cutting federal assistance for low-income households and rolling back the Affordable Care Act, which has provided health insurance to millions more Americans."

Reuters (9/12), meanwhile, reports the monthly Job Openings and Labor Turnover Survey (JOLTS) released by the Labor Department Tuesday shows that job openings in the US reached a record high in July, "suggesting a slowdown in job growth in August was an aberration and that the labor market was strong before the recent disruptive hurricanes." Job openings "increased by 54,000 to a seasonally adjusted 6.2 million," their "highest level since the data series started in December 2000." The report, says Reuters, "showed the labor market continued to tighten amid a scarcity of workers."

Gallup Analyst: 80 Percent Of Americans "Satisfied" With Their Standard Of Living. The Washington Times (9/12, Harper) reports that Gallup analyst Jim Norman says that "80 percent of the nation say they are 'satisfied' with their current standard of living, and the pollster's complex but revealing 'well-being index' now stands at 54, a record high." According to Norman, "The percentage of Americans saying their standard of living is getting better has risen from 62 percent in 2016 to 64 percent so far this year, with a corresponding drop in the percentage saying it is getting worse, from 22 percent to 19 percent."

Stocks Indexes Close At Record Highs. Reuters (9/12, Carew) reports that the major stock indexes posted record highs Tuesday. The Dow added 61.49 points to close at 22,118.86. The S&P 500 climbed 8.37 points to 2,496.48 and the Nasdaq ended the day 22.018 points higher at 6,454.28.

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

“Senators In Search Of A Foreign Policy.” In an editorial, the New York Times (9/13, Board) outlines a “range of problems facing the United States abroad,” and laments “a robust foreign policy led by a reinvigorated State Department that right now is suffering from presidential neglect, poor leadership and an absence of professional firepower in pivotal positions.” The Times says Sens. Lindsey Graham and Patrick Leahy, two lawmakers who “understand the urgency of helping” the State Department “recover from the damages inflicted by” President Trump, have “won unanimous committee approval for a $51 billion bill for the State Department and foreign aid, about $11 billion more than the administration requested.” Because there “is no sign that Mr. Trump and his team understand its core mission and its importance in a turbulent world,” the Times argues, “The rest of Congress should ensure that a strong version of it becomes law.”

“How Not To Sustain Prosperity.” Citing the 2016 Census report, a New York Times (9/13) editorial says “President Trump clearly inherited an economy on the upswing,” but “The question is whether his administration and the Republican-controlled Congress will sustain the momentum, or even reverse it.” The Times explains that despite the economy’s improvement, “broad prosperity remains elusive,” but “Republican policy makers seem determined to undo the progress that has been made.” For example, the Times says, the Administration “opposed Obama-era rules to update the nation’s overtime-pay protections for salaried workers, arguably the single most important policy option to raise middle-class pay,” and both Trump and the House Budget Committee “issued budget proposals for 2018 that call for deep spending cuts to safety-net programs.” These “giant steps backward,” the Times argues, would result in “greater income inequality” by shifting “income up the economic ladder.”

Washington Post.

“The Supreme Court Should Strike Down Wisconsin’s Gerrymandering.” The Washington Post (9/12) editorializes that the Supreme Court “has long kept a distance from arguments over gerrymandering,” but early next month, “the justices will hear a challenge to the 2011 redrawing of Wisconsin’s state legislative map by Republican lawmakers – a demonstration of how increasingly powerful technology allows partisan mapmakers to distort representation with ever-greater precision.” The Post adds that “using computer modeling, Wisconsin’s Republican-controlled legislature produced districts so unbalanced that, in 2012, Republicans won a supermajority in the state assembly even after losing the popular vote.” The Post argues that “while the question of just where to draw the line between acceptable and unconstitutional partisan gerrymanders may be far from simple in many instances, Wisconsin’s is an extreme case,” and contends that “the judiciary cannot and should not be the sole solution to this crisis, but it has a valuable role to play in reassuring Americans that their votes matter.”

“Tom Price Decides He Doesn’t Want Medicare To Save Money.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (9/12) laments “the coming crisis” if Medicare is not reformed and says “waste scored a victory when Health and Human Services Secretary Tom Price decided to stop or scale back ‘bundled payment’ experiments the Obama administration had begun.” Under the program, hospitals would be given “a flat payment covering the duration of a procedure and recovery.” Those “whose costs came in under the fee could keep the difference. Those whose did not would lose money.” The Post argues that “Price should be expanding the programs he is trying to end.”

“Metro Gets A Sudden Lifeline.” A Washington Post (9/12) editorial.

Wall Street Journal.

“How Florida Saved Taxpayers” The Wall Street Journal (9/12, Board) editorializes that reforms undertaken by taxpayer-backed Citizens Property Insurance Corp. have allowed it to cover all the claims from Hurricane Irma. Next, the Journal urges Florida to move on tort reform before the next big hurricane hits the state.

“The Al Franken Standard.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (9/12) writes that in light of Sen. Al Franken’s recent announcement that he will refuse to return his blue slip on the nomination of a judge to the Eight Circuit, Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley should suspend Sen. Franken’s blue slip. The Journal contends that Grassley has full authority to suspend the blue slip tradition on a case-by-case should senators obstruct the nomination process.

“Joseph Rago And A Disease Called Sarcoidosis.” A Wall Street Journal (9/12, Board) editorial.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Goldman Banks On Lending To Grow

Herculean Task As Crews Race To Restore Power

Apple Unveils New iPhone X To Fend Off Growing Competition

There's A Speeding Mass Of Space Junk Orbiting Earth, Smashing Into Things

New York Times:

Amid Chaos Of Storms, US Shows It Has Improved Its Response

South Korea Plans 'Decapitation Unit' To Try To Scare North's Leaders

White House Weighs Lowering Refugee Quota To Below 50,000

Median US Household Income Up For 2nd Straight Year

Edith Windsor, Whose Same-Sex Marriage Fight Led To Landmark Ruling, Dies At 88

De Blasio, Seeking Second Term, Wins An Easy Victory

After More Than 20 Years, Newark To Regain Control Of Its Schools

Washington Post:

Paychecks Hit High For Middle Class

Push For Tax Cuts Runs Into Old Problem: A Divided GOP

Apple Edges Closer To Fraught Age Of Facial Recognition Tech

42 Years Later, A Guilty Plea In Murder Of Md. Sisters

Florida Prepares For Days — And Maybe Weeks — Without Power

After Irma, A Former Gem In The US Virgin Islands Is Reduced To A Wasteland

Financial Times:

UK Cites Fox News As Hurdle To Rupert Murdoch's Sky Deal

Thousands Protest In France Against Macron's Labour Reforms

North Korea's Opaque Trading Network Keeps Economy Afloat

South Africa Businesses Under Pressure To Cut KPMG Ties

Washington Times:

Liberals With Eye On Presidency Rush To Support Sanders's 'Medicare For All' Bill

Trump Punishes Sanctuary Countries, Halts Visas For Nations That Refuse To Cooperate On Deportations

Islamic State's Rumiya Magazine Glosses Over Losses To Boost Terrorist Morale

Stunning Testimony: Voting Machines Can Be Hacked Without A Trace Of Evidence

Ken Burns Goes Back To War: Vietnam Documentary Tells Uneasy Story From All Sides

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: Hurricane Irma-Florida Keys; Hurricane Irma-Utility Damage; Hurricane Irma-Caribbean; Hurricane Jose-Forecast; Hurricanes-Vehicle Damages; Baltimore Police Violence Trial; Steve Bannon Interview-Comey Firing; Maryland Abduction Cold Case; Apple-New Product Announcement; California-Street Vendor Police Bribery; Parking Lot Plane Crash; Edith Windsor Dies; Hurricane Irma-Recovery.

CBS: Hurricane Irma-Florida Keys; Hurricane Irma-Utility Damages; Hurricane Irma-Caribbean; Hurricane Harvey-Recovery; Equifax-Cyber Security Breach; Russia Meddling-Special Council Investigation; New Hampshire Police Violence Investigation; Edith Windsor Dies; Parking Lot Plane Crash; Apple-New Product Announcement.

NBC: Hurricane Irma-Florida Keys; Hurricane Irma-US Navy Rescue Missions; Hurricane Irma-Utility Damages; Hurricane Irma-Caribbean; Equifax-Cyber Security Breach; Edith Windsor Dies; Menopause-Hormone Therapy Safety; Parking Lot Plane Crash; Trump-Grand Child; Sleeping Together With Dog; Apple-New Product Announcement.

Network TV At A Glance:

Hurricane Irma – 29 minutes, 20 seconds

Apple-New Product Announcement – 4 minutes, 50 seconds

Equifax-Cyber Security Breach – 4 minutes, 35 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Hurricane Irma; Baltimore Police Violence Trial; Philadelphia Amtrak Crash Trial.

CBS: Hurricane Irma; UN-North Korea Sanctions; Edith Windsor Dies; Apple-New Product Announcement; Wall Street News.

FOX: Trump-Tax Reform; Hurricane Irma; Amazon HQ-Boston.

NPR: Hurricane Irma; Macron-Caribbean Aid Pledge; Sen. Sanders-Healthcare Bill; Trump-Tax Reform; Seattle Mayor Resigns.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Meets with the Domestic Policy Council; meets with Senator Tim Scott; participates in a bipartisan meeting.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Joins the President to meet with the Domestic Policy Council; joins Director of National Intelligence Dan Coats and Director of the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency Robert Cardillo to tour the National Geospatial-Intelligence Agency and participate in a series of briefings.

US Senate: 10:00 AM POSTPONED: Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on long-term impacts of immigration – POSTPONED: Hearing on 'The Long-term Impact of Immigration: Exploring Reforms to our Nation's Guest Worker Programs and Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, and their Potential Impact on the American Economy and Local Communities', with testimony from Assistant Secretary of Homeland Security for Border, Immigration, and Trade Michael Dougherty; Department of Labor Employment and Training Administration Senior Policy Advisor John Martin; Economic Policy Institute Director of Immigration Law and Policy Research Daniel Costa; Howard University Department of Political Science Associate Professor Dr Ron Hira; Center for Immigration Studies Director of Policy Studies Jessica Vaughan; AFL-CIO Department for Professional Employees President Paul Almeida; U.S. Chamber Of Commerce Senior Vice President for Labor, Immigration and Employee Benefits Randel Johnson; and American Action Forum President Dr Douglas Holtz-Eakin Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 226, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee latest hearing on OMB memo on the federal workforce – Regulatory Affairs and Federal Management Subcommittee hearing on 'Examining OMB's Memorandum on the Federal Workforce, Part II: Expert Views on OMB's Ongoing Government-wide Reorganization', with testimony from Grant Thornton Public Sector Principal Robert Shea; Heritage Foundation Research Fellow Rachel Greszler; Cato Institute Director of Tax Policy Studies Christopher Edwards; and National Treasury Employees Union National President Tony Reardon Location: Rm 342, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenRonJohnson>

10:00 AM Senate Environment Committee hearing on CCUS – Hearing on 'Expanding and Accelerating the Deployment and Use of Carbon Capture, Utilization, and Sequestration', with testimony from Office of the Wyoming Governor Policy Advisor Matthew Fry; NRG Energy Vice President of Development David Greeson; and Energy Futures Initiative Distinguished Associate Dr S. Julio Friedmann Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

10:00 AM Senate Commerce Committee hearing on automated trucks – Hearing on 'Transportation Innovation: Automated Trucks and Our Nation's Highways', with testimony from Colorado State Patrol Chief Scott Hernandez; Navistar CEO Troy Clarke; International Brotherhood of Teamsters General Secretary-Treasurer Ken Hall; National Safety Council President and CEO Deborah Hersman; and American Trucking Associations President and CEO Chris Spear Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 253, Washington, DC <http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

11:30 AM GOP Sen. James Lankford's public schedule – Republican Sen. James Lankford meets with Archbishop of Oklahoma City Paul Coakley (11:30 AM CDT); and accepts National Religious Broadcasters' 'Faith and Freedom Award', Willard Hotel, 1401 Pennsylvania Ave NW, Washington, DC (5:30 PM CDT) Location: Washington, DC <http://www.lankford.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenatorLankford>

11:30 AM Bicameral GOP and new USFS chief 'press for urgent forest management reforms' – Senate Western Caucus Chairman Steve Daines and Congressional Western Caucus Chairman Paul Gosar 'press for urgent forest management reforms' via media availability with new U.S. Forest Service Chief Tony Tooke, and Republican Rep. Bruce Westerman Location: Senate Swamp, Washington, DC <http://www.daines.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SteveDaines>

12:00 PM AACR release 'Cancer Progress' report at Congressional briefing – American Association for Cancer Research host Congressional briefing to unveil the AACR Cancer Progress Report 2017, which 'showcases progress against cancer from the past year, and underscores the importance of robust, sustained, and predictable growth in funding for the National Institutes of Health, National Cancer Institute, and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration'. Speakers include AACR President Michael Caligiuri and CEO Margaret Foti, University of Southern California Keck School of Medicine Department of Translational Genomics Chair John Carpten, and cancer survivors Carrie Best and Terri Woodhull * Briefing is held in cooperation with Democratic Sen. Chris Van Hollen Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 485, Washington, DC <http://www.aacr.org> <https://twitter.com/aacr>

2:00 PM Independent Sen. Bernie Sanders introduces Medicare for All bill – Independent Sen. Bernie Sanders and Senate co-sponsors announce the introduction of the Medicare for All Act of 2017 Location: Hart Senate Office Building, Rm 216, Washington, DC sanders.senate.gov <https://twitter.com/SenSanders>

2:30 PM Senate Indian Affairs Committee Business Meeting, oversight hearing on GAO recommendations on high-risk programs – Business Meeting, to consider 'H.R. 984, Thomasina E. Jordan Indian Tribes of Virginia Federal Recognition Act of 2017', 'S. 1285, Oregon Tribal Economic Development Act', and 'S. 1333, Tribal HUD-VASH Act of 2017' * Immediately followed by oversight hearing on 'High Risk Indian Programs: Progress and Efforts in Addressing GAO's Recommendations' Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 628, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

5:30 PM Dem Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand hosts annual New York Farm Day on Capitol Hill – Democratic Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand hosts 16th annual New York Farm Day on Capitol Hill, bringing together over 40 farmers and producers from every corner of New York State. Event includes a meeting with the Agriculture working group, and a reception in the evening Location: 325 Russell Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://gillibrand.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenGillibrand>

Senate Democratic Rural Summit, titled 'A Better Deal for Rural America' Location: Hart Senate Office Building, Rm 902, Washington, DC <http://www.democrats.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateDems>

US House: 10:00 AM POSTPONED – House Foreign Affairs subcommittees joint hearing on budget proposal for AfPak – Asia and the Pacific Subcommittee and Middle East and North Africa Subcommittee joint hearing on 'The President's FY 2018 Budget Request for Afghanistan and Pakistan', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of State for South and Central Asian Affairs Alice Wells; and USAID Office of Afghanistan and Pakistan Affairs Administrator's Assistant Gregory Huger Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

10:00 AM House Oversight and Government Reform Committee Markup. – Markup: H.R. 3731 Secret Service Recruitment and Retention Act of 2017; H.R. 3739 Presidential Allowance Modernization Act of 2017; H.R. 1701 Eliminating Government-funded Oil-painting Act; H.R. 3019 Promoting Value Based Procurement Act of 2017; H.R. 3737 Social Media Use in Clearance Investigations Act of 2017; H.R. 3071 Federal Acquisition Savings Act of 2017; and H.R. 2331 Connected Government Act. H.R. 294 To designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 2700 Location: 2154 Rayburn. <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

10:00 AM House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on North Korea – Monetary Policy and Trade Subcommittee hearing on 'A Legislative Proposal to Impede North Korea's Access to Finance', with testimony from Institute for Science and International Security President David Albright; Foundation for Defense of Democracies Senior Fellow Anthony Ruggiero; Heritage Foundation Senior Fellow for Northeast Asia Bruce Klingner; and Center for a New American Security Energy, Economics, and Security Program Director Elizabeth Rosenberg Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

10:00 AM House Workforce subcommittees joint hearing on the Save Local Business Act – Workforce Protections Subcommittee and Health, Employment, Labor, and Pensions Subcommittee joint hearing on 'H.R. 3441, Save Local Business Act', with testimony from Proskauer Rose partner Zachary Fasman; Twin City T.J.'s President Tamra Kennedy (on behalf of International Franchise Association); MacDonald Companies CEO Granger MacDonald (on behalf of National Association of Home Builders); and Altshuler Berzon partner Michael Rubin Location: Rm 2175, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://edworkforce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/EdWorkforce>

10:00 AM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on 'Big Relief for Small Business' – Environment Subcommittee hearing on 'Big Relief for Small Business: Legislation Reducing Regulatory Burdens on Small Manufacturers and Other Job Creators', with testimony from Penn State College of Medicine Professor Dr Rebecca Bascom (on behalf of American Thoracic Society); Olympus Power Director of Environmental Affairs Vincent Brisini; Hardy Manufacturing Company President and owner Frank Moore; Sonoma Raceway President and General Manager Steve Page; Endicott Clay Products President and CEO Ryan Parker; and AT Strategies Principal Alexandra Teitz (on behalf of Sierra Club) Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:00 AM House Infrastructure subcommittee hearing on economic development stakeholders' perspectives – Economic Development, Public Buildings, and Emergency Management Subcommittee hearing on 'Building a 21st Century Infrastructure for America: Economic Development Stakeholders' Perspectives', with testimony from SEDA-Council of Governments Assistant Executive Director Bill Seigel; Land of Sky Regional Council Executive Director Justin Hembree; Great Falls Development Authority President and CEO Brett Doney; Hartford Mutual Insurance Company President and CEO Steve Linkous; and Georgetown Climate Center Adaption Program Manager Jessica Grannis Location: Rm 2167, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://transportation.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/Transport>

10:00 AM House Ways and Means Committee markup hearing – Markup hearing on 'H.R. 3726, Stark Administrative Simplification Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3727, To amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to include additional telehealth services for purposes of MA organization bids, and for other purposes', 'H.R. 3729, Comprehensive Operations, Sustainability, and Transport Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2824, Increasing Opportunity through Evidence-Based Home Visiting Act', and 'H.R. 2792, Control Unlawful Fugitive Felons Act of 2017' Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1100, Washington, DC <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

10:00 AM House Natural Resources Committee markup hearing concludes – Markup hearing concludes on 'H.R. 210, Native American Energy Act', 'H.R. 424, Gray Wolf State Management Act of 2017', 'H.R. 717, Listing Reform Act', 'H.R. 1274, State, Tribal and Local Species Transparency and Recovery Act', 'H.R. 2603, Saving America's Endangered Species Act' ('SAVES Act'), 'H.R. 3131, Endangered Species Litigation Reasonableness Act', and 'H.R. 3668, Sportsmen's Heritage and Recreational Enhancement Act' ('SHARE Act') * Began yesterday Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

10:00 AM House Homeland Security subcommittee hearing on suspicious activity reporting – Counterterrorism and Intelligence Subcommittee hearing on 'Sixteen Years After 9/11: Assessing Suspicious Activity Reporting Efforts', with testimony from Acting Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security for Intelligence Operations Robin Taylor; New Jersey State Police Superintendent Rick Fuentes; Boston Police Commissioner Bill Evans; and Northern Virginia Regional Intelligence Center Deputy Director Joseph Flynn Location: HVC 210, U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC homeland.house.gov <https://twitter.com/HouseHomeland>

10:00 AM House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform Business Meeting Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

10:15 AM House Commerce subcommittee hearing on modernizing FDA regulation of over-the-counter drugs – Health Subcommittee hearing on 'Modernizing FDA's Regulation of Over-the-Counter Drugs', with testimony from American Academy of Pediatrics Chair Bridgette Jones; Consumer Health Products Association President and CEO Scott Melville; Pew Charitable Trusts Health Care Products Project Director Kirsten Moore; Pharma and Biopharma Outsourcing Association President Gil Roth; Holland and Knight partner Michael Werner (on behalf of Public Access to SunScreens Coalition); and Food and Drug Administration Center for Drug Evaluation and Research Director Dr Janet Woodcock Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2322, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

10:30 AM House Veterans' Affairs subcommittee legislative hearing – Disability Assistance and Memorial Affairs Subcommittee legislative hearing, on legislation including a draft bill entitled 'Veterans Fair Debt Notice Act of 2017' Location: Rm 334, Cannon House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

11:00 AM House Small Business Committee hearing on the HUBZone program – Hearing on 'Serving Small Businesses: Examining the Effectiveness of HUBZone Reforms', with testimony from GCC Technologies co-owner, Executive Vice President, and COO Shirley Bailey (on behalf of HUBZone Contractors National Council); attorney at law Robert Schuerger II; TDEC President

Dennis DuFour; and Wovenware COO and co-founder Carlos Melendez Location: Rm 2360, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://smallbusiness.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SmallBizGOP>

11:30 AM Bicameral GOP and new USFS chief 'press for urgent forest management reforms' – Senate Western Caucus Chairman Steve Daines and Congressional Western Caucus Chairman Paul Gosar 'press for urgent forest management reforms' via media availability with new U.S. Forest Service Chief Tony Tooke, and Republican Rep. Bruce Westerman Location: Senate Swamp, Washington, DC <http://www.daines.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SteveDaines>

12:00 PM House expected to continue debate on omnibus govt funding bill – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include continued consideration of 'H.R. 3354 – Make America Secure and Prosperous Appropriations Act, 2018', and beginning consideration of 'H.R. 3697 – Criminal Alien Gang Member Removal Act' * Administration has said it supports passage of 'H.R. 3354' and that President Donald Trump would sign it if it reached his desk * Last week, Congress passed a short-term continuing resolution to extend govt funding through early December Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

1:00 PM House Commerce subcommittee markup hearing – Health Subcommittee markup hearing on 'H.R. 1148, Furthering Access to Stroke Telemedicine (FAST) Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2465, Steve Gleason Enduring Voices Act of 2017', 'H.R. 2557, Prostate Cancer Misdiagnosis Elimination Act of 2017', 'H.R. 3120, to reduce the volume of future electronic health record-related significant hardship requests', 'H.R. 3245, Medicare Civil and Criminal Penalties Act', 'H.R. 3263, to extend the Medicare Independence at Home Medical Practice Demonstration program', and 'H.R. 3271, Protecting Access to Diabetes Supplies Act of 2017' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2123, Washington, DC <http://energycommerce.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HouseCommerce>

2:00 PM Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on 'Multi-Sector Partnerships to Combat Human Trafficking' – Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on 'Multi-Sector Partnerships to Combat Human Trafficking', with witnesses – State Department Office to Monitor and Combat Trafficking in Persons Acting Deputy Director Laura Rundlet, Electronic Industry Citizenship Coalition Director of Public Policy Carlos Busquets, International Justice Mission Policy Director Tim Gehring, and Human Rights First Anti-Trafficking Campaign Senior Associate Annick Febrey – presenting testimony on their experiences and sharing recommendations on how best to strengthen efforts against trafficking by fostering multi-sectoral initiatives Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2255, Washington, DC <http://tlhrc.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/TLHRCommission>

2:00 PM Oversight Subcommittee hearing on 'IRS Reform: Resolving Taxpayer Disputes' Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1100, Washington, DC <http://waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysandMeansGOP>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Venezuela – Western Hemisphere Subcommittee hearing on 'The Venezuela Crisis: The Malicious Influence of State and Criminal Actors', with testimony from Center for Strategic and International Studies Americas Program Senior Associate Dr R. Evan Ellis; Caracas Chronicles Executive Editor Francisco Toro; and Stanford University Freeman Spogli Institute for International Studies Center for International Security and Cooperation Senior Research Scholar and Associate Director for Research Dr Harold Trinkunas Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2200, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Liberia – Africa, Global Health, Global Human Rights, and International Organizations Subcommittee hearing on 'The Future of Democracy and Governance in Liberia', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Donald Yamamoto; USAID Acting Assistant Administrator for Africa Cheryl Anderson; National Endowment for Democracy Senior Director of Africa Programs Dave Peterson; Weeks Educational and Social Advocacy Project founder and Executive Director Aurelia Curtis; International Foundation for Electoral Systems Regional Director for Africa Rusdhi Nackerdien; and National Democratic Institute Senior Associate and Regional Director for Central and West Africa Dr Christopher Fomunyoh Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

Other: 8:00 AM Republican Sen. Joni Ernst hosts 'Coffee with Joni' for Iowans in Washington, DC Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 111, Washington, DC www.ernst.senate.gov <https://twitter.com/senjoniernst>

8:30 AM GOP Sen. Rob Portman and Dem Rep. Paul Tonko discuss strategies to tackle opioid epidemic at The Hill event – The Hill hosts 'America's Opioid Epidemic: Search for Solutions', with Republican Sen. Rob Portman and Democratic Rep. Paul Tonko discussing national and local strategies to tackle the nation's opioid epidemic. Other speakers include Association of State and Territorial Health Officials Executive Director Michael Fraser, Shatterproof Founder and CEO Gary Mendell, Johns Hopkins Broadway Center for Addiction Director Kenneth Stoller, Victory Bay Recovery Center Outreach Coordinator Vanessa Vitolo and National Institute on Drug Abuse Director Nora Volkow Location: AJAX, 1011 4th St NW, Washington, DC thehill.com <https://twitter.com/TheHillEvents> #OpioidSolution.

9:00 AM Rory Staunton Foundation National Forum on Sepsis – Rory Staunton Foundation Fourth National Forum on Sepsis, 'Keeping our Children Safe from Sepsis', including keynote from Democratic Sen. Chuck Schumer Location: American Federation of Teachers, 555 New Jersey Ave NW, Washington, DC www.rorystauntonfoundationforsepsis.org

10:30 AM Dem Rep. Ro Khanna discusses proposed bill to reform H-1B and L-1 visas at Atlantic Council – Atlantic Council South Asia Center hosts a discussion with Democratic Rep. Ro Khanna, who addresses his proposed bill centered on reforming the H-1B and L-1 visas for high-skilled workers Location: Atlantic Council, 1030 15th Street Northwest, Washington, DC <http://www.atlanticcouncil.org/> <https://twitter.com/ACSouthAsia> #ACSouthAsia

10:45 AM House Speaker Paul Ryan participates in the AP Newsmaker Interview Series to discuss tax reform Location: AP Bureau, 1100 13th St NW Washington, DC www.speaker.gov <https://twitter.com/SpeakerRyan>

12:00 PM Tax Foundation hosts GOP Sen. Ted Cruz for a discussion on tax reform – Tax Foundation hosts 'A Path to Consensus Tax Reform: An Address From Senator Ted Cruz With Panel Discussion', with Republican Sen. Ted Cruz delivering a keynote address outlining his path forward for achieving consensus tax reform. Speech followed by a panel discussion with Tax Policy Center Director Mark Mazur, American Action Forum Director of Fiscal Policy Gordon Gray, and Tax Foundation Director of Federal Projects Kyle Pomerleau * Sen. Cruz's Twitter account recently 'liked' an explicit video. The 'like' was in place for approximately 40 minutes before being removed Location: Hillsdale College Kirby Center, 227 Massachusetts Ave NE, Washington, DC <http://www.taxfoundation.org/> <https://twitter.com/taxfoundation>

12:00 PM 'National Save the U.S. EPA Day' press conference at NPC – Save the U.S. EPA holds 'National Save the U.S. EPA Day' press conference at the National Press Club, with speakers including Democratic Rep. Debbie Dingell, Sierra Club's Beyond Coal Campaign Director Mary Anne Hitt, National Wildlife Federation President and CEO Collin O'Mara, AFGE Council 238 President John O'Grady and American Federation of Government Employees Chief of Staff Brian DeWyngaert Location: National Press Club, 529 14th Street NW, Washington, DC savetheusepa.org <https://twitter.com/SavetheUSEPA>

4:30 PM CSIS discussion on 'Hurricane Irma: The Aftermath and Caribbean Disaster Response' – 'Hurricane Irma: The Aftermath and Caribbean Disaster Response' Center for Strategic and International Studies discussion on the consequences of Hurricane Irma and how the international community can best respond. Speakers include Antigua and Barbuda Ambassador to the U.S. Amb. Sir Ronald Sanders, Netherlands Ambassador to the U.S. Amb. Henne Schuwer, and Caribbean Central American Action Executive Director Sally Yearwood Location: Center for Strategic and International Studies, 1616 Rhode Island Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.csis.org> <https://twitter.com/CSIS>

6:00 PM GW hosts town hall discussion on the state of politics and media in 2017 – George Washington University hosts town hall discussion on the state of politics and media in 2017, about 'the state of the union in this era of fake news, what the future holds, and what role the media plays'. Topics include the Trump administration's decisions on the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program, North Korea, and other major issues. Speakers include Democratic Rep. Brendan Boyle, communication strategist Howard Opinsky, Brilliant Corners Research & Strategies President Cornell Belcher, The Communication Center Executive Communication Coach Jeffrey Blount, NPR national political correspondent Mara Liasson, and CNN European politics reporter Hadas Gold Location: George Washington University School of Media and Public Affairs, Washington, DC /www.gwu.edu <https://twitter.com/GWTweets>

Airlines for America Annual Commercial Aviation Industry Summit – Airlines for America (A4A) Annual Commercial Aviation Industry Summit. Speakers include Republican Rep. Paul Mitchell, American Airlines Chairman and CEO Doug Parker, Alaska Airlines President and CEO Brad Tilden, Southwest Airlines Chairman and CEO Gary Kelly, former Secretary of Transportation James Burnley, and UPS Director of Safety, Global Aviation Strategy and Public Policy Capt. Houston Mills Location: National Press Club, 529 14th Street NW, Washington, DC <http://summit.airlines.org/> <https://twitter.com/AirlinesDotOrg> #A4ASummit NAFCU Congressional Caucus concludes – NAFCU Congressional Caucus concludes.

Speakers today include U.S. Rep. Tom Emmer, Republican Sens. Tom Cotton Location: Hyatt Regency Washington on Capitol Hill, 400 New Jersey Avenue Northwest, Washington, DC
<http://www.nafcu.org> <https://twitter.com/NAFCU> #NAFCUCaucus

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: "Hillary Clinton's new book came out today. It is called 'What Happened.' That's not a joke. That's what it is called. This is why Hillary lost. A real President doesn't write books. They write tweets."

James Corden: "Texas Senator Ted Cruz is coming under fire because, late last night, his official Twitter account liked a pornographic video. So, if you ever meet Ted Cruz on the campaign trail, you might want to think twice before shaking that hand."

Trevor Noah: "Everyone is freaking out about this and calling it a possible scandal all because a politician may have watched porn. Come on, people. No big deal. Everyone watches porn. Alright? It's part of being a norm human being, which is exactly why we know Ted Cruz didn't do it."

Jimmy Fallon: "I guess Hillary Clinton's book 'What Happened' came out today, and I heard that it's almost 500 pages long. Unfortunately, the only person with enough time to read it is Hillary Clinton."

Seth Meyers: "Hillary Clinton's new book titled 'What Happened' was released today, as was Putin's new book 'Me.'"

Seth Meyers: "President Trump will reportedly visit China in November. 'Oh, can you pick up my handbags?' asked Ivanka."

Conan O'Brien: "On Twitter last night, someone discovered that Republican Senator Ted Cruz liked a tweet from a porn account. As you can imagine, that was one very embarrassing day for that porn account."

Conan O'Brien: "The new iPhone will be able to track stair climbing and mountain hiking. The big question is, will it have any features for Americans?"

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, September 20, 2017
Date: Wednesday, September 20, 2017 7:02:48 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 20, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- The Hill: Zinke Puts 'Big Buck Hunter' In Interior Dept Cafeteria To Promote Hunting.
- The Hill: Senate Panel Approves Trump Energy Nominees.
- Farmington (NM) Daily Times: Company Named To Build Next Step Of Navajo-Gallup Water Supply Project.
- Joplin (MO) Globe: Wonders Of Wildlife Prepares For Opening.
- Cleveland Plain Dealer: Trump Promise To Restore Mount McKinley Name Is Up In The Air.
- Portland (OR) Tribune: ODOT Gets $1 Million To Clean Up Wildfire Damage.
- Black Hills (SD) Pioneer: SD Congressional Delegation Continues To Fight For DC Booth.

- Federal News Radio (DC): Kevin Bogardus: Obama Appointees Negotiated Next Job While On The Job At Interior.
- The Hill: Preserving An American Tradition: Maintaining Access And Increasing Opportunities On Our Public Lands.
- Sacramento (CA) Bee: More Logging On Public Land Means More Wildfires.
- Bend (OR) Bulletin: Editorial: Cascade-Siskiyou Should Be Shrunk.
- Las Vegas Review-Journal: A Smaller Gold Butte No Big Deal.
- The Guardian (UK): Bears Ears Is Sacred To Native Americans.
- Concord (NH) Monitor: Don't Mess With National Monuments.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Hearing Scheduled For Act That Would Grant Lumbee Full Federal Recognition.
- Island Near NE Tip Of Minnesota Returned To Chippewa Band.
- Stink Over Acme Sewer.

Bureau Of Land Management

- Daily Caller: Obama Turned 'A Blind Eye' To Fired Interior Official's Corruption, GOP Rep Says.
- Grand Junction (CO) Daily Sentinel: BLM Rounds Up 86 Horses Near Rangely.
- Las Cruces (NM) Sun-News: BLM And Partners Sponsor National Public Lands Day Events.

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

- Block Island Wind Farm Tracking Birds and Bats.
- Fishing Industry Takes More Action Against New York Offshore Wind Lease.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- Westlands Water District Says It Won't Help Pay For Delta Tunnels.

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

- Scott Angelle Says The Country Should Focus On 'Energy Dominance'.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Arizona Republic: The Wall — Eminent Domain May Claim Private Property For Trump Wall.
- Associated Press: Federal Officials Designate Mississippi Fish As Threatened.
- Big Island (HI) Now: 'I'iwi Receives Protection Under Endangered Species Act.
- Palm Beach (FL) Post: West Palm Sues US Agencies Over State Road 7 Extension Approval.
- Watertown (NY) Daily Times: Ritchie Calls On Federal Government To Move Quickly On Cormorant Management.
- Chinook (WA) Observer: Refuge Plans New 'Gateway To The Outdoors'.
- Daily Inter Lake (MT): DNRC Faces Tough Questions At Bottling-plant Hearing.
- U.S. News & World Report: California Condor Takes Flight In Wild After Near Extinction.
- Los Angeles Times: The Oil-Drunk Trump Administration Needs To Leave Alaska Refuge Alone.
- San Jose (CA) Mercury News: Airbnb For Monarch Butterflies Can Prevent Demise.

National Park Service

- Washington Times: National Mall Faces Space Crunch For Global War On Terror Memorial.
- Newsweek: Man Arrested For Using Penny To Deface Lincoln Memorial.
- WAMU-FM Washington: D.C. Councilmember Says National Park Service Would Charge Him With Trespassing For Removing Confederate Statue.
- Fox News: NAACP Pushes To Remove Battle Of Chickamauga Monument In Tennessee.
- Baltimore Patch: Federal Grant To Send Baltimore Students On Field Trips To 3 Historical Sites.
- U.S. News & World Report: Docks, Marinas Get Repaired After Microburst On Lake Powell.
- WNEP-TV Scranton (PA): Fly Fishing On A Day Of Healing For Veterans.
- KMPH-TV Fresno (CA): 49 Become U.S. Citizens At Yosemite National Park.
- Napa Valley (CA) Register: New Muir Woods Reservation System Aims To Reduce Overcrowding, Traffic Congestion.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- ABC: Trump Declares Emergency As Hurricane Maria Heads Toward Puerto Rico.

US Geological Survey

- ABC: Earthquake Outside Mexico City Kills At Least 226.

Top National News

- ABC: Trump Slams "Rocket Man" At UN, Threatens To "Totally Destroy" North Korea.
- ABC: Trump At UN: Iran Nuclear Deal An "Embarrassment."
- CBS: Trump Calls Out Venezuela, Cuba In UN Speech.
- CBS: In UN Speech, Trump Vows To Always Put America First.
- ABC: White House Joins Graham-Cassidy Push, But Bill's Prospects Remain Uncertain.
- Associated Press: Senate Republicans Tentatively Agree On $1.5 Trillion Tax Cut Plan.
- Washington Free Beacon: Report: Cutting Wasteful Spending Would Balance Budget In Three Years.
- Fox News: Pruitt Questions Whether Climate Change Is An "Existential Threat."
- E&E Publishing: Federal Report On Climate To Be Released In November.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "Warmongers And Peacemakers At The UN."
 - "Even College Doesn't Bridge The Racial Income Gap."
- Washington Post.
 - "Another Execrable Healthcare Bill Proves Bad Ideas Never Die."
 - "Trump Undermines His Own Advocacy For Human Dignity."
 - "Who Pays For The White House To Lawyer Up?"
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Trump Shock At Turtle Bay."
 - "James Madison Weeps."
 - "All Mr. Comey's Wiretaps."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Zinke Puts 'Big Buck Hunter' In Interior Dept Cafeteria To Promote Hunting.

In its "Blog Briefing Room" blog, The Hill (9/19, Delk) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke added the "Big Buck Hunter" arcade game to the Interior Department's cafeteria this week. Zinke installed "the hunting themed arcade game in the cafeteria in an effort to promote hunting, announcing the addition in a tweet on Tuesday." Zinke tweeted, "To highlight #sportsmen contributions 2 conservation I installed Big Buck Hunter in the employee cafeteria. Get excited for #hunting season!"

Also reporting are the Washington Examiner (9/19, Siciliano), CNN International (9/19, Tatum), USA Today (9/19, King), the Shreveport \(LA\) Times (9/19, King), WENY-TV Elmira \(NY\) Elmira, NY (9/19, Tatum), and WZVN-TV Fort Myers \(FL\) Fort Myers, FL (9/19, Tatum).

Senate Panel Approves Trump Energy Nominees.

The Hill (9/19, Cama) reports the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee on Tuesday "approved five of President Trump's nominees for energy positions in the federal government." The Hill says senators "easily approve[d]" Federal Energy Regulatory Commission nominees Kevin McIntyre and Richard Glick, "Ryan Nelson to be the Interior Department's solicitor, Joseph Balash to be Interior's assistant secretary for land and mineral management and David Jonas to be general counsel at the Energy Department." The votes "send all of the nominees to the full Senate for a confirmation vote, which has not yet been scheduled." DOE and Interior "currently have only two Senate-confirmed officials, making it difficult for the Trump administration to move on some of its major policy priorities at those departments.”

Also reporting are the Washington Examiner (9/19, Siciliano, Seigel), Alaska Dispatch News (9/19, Martinson), the Grand Junction \(CO\) Daily Sentinel (9/20, Harmon), Law360, and Natural Gas Intelligence (9/19, Bradley).

Company Named To Build Next Step Of Navajo-Gallup Water Supply Project.

The Farmington \(NM\) Daily Times (9/19) reports that the Bureau of Reclamation has “awarded a $62 million construction contract to build a section of pipeline for the Navajo-Gallup Water Supply Project.” The Interior Department “announced on Sept. 15 that the contract was awarded to Oscar Renda Contracting Inc., a subsidiary of Southland Holdings in Roanoke, Texas.” Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said in a release, “The project is critical to providing a much-needed, long-term, sustainable water supply for people on the Navajo and Jicarilla Apache reservations and the City of Gallup. It is also the cornerstone of our commitments under the Navajo Nation San Juan River Water Rights Settlement.”

Wonders Of Wildlife Prepares For Opening.

The Joplin \(MO\) Globe (9/20, Goodwin) reports that the Wonders of Wildlife National Museum and Aquarium will “open to the public on Friday, but it was open Tuesday for a media preview at its adjoining location with Bass Pro Shops at East Sunshine and South Campbell avenues in Springfield.” A gala Wednesday is “expected to be attended by former Presidents George W. Bush and Jimmy Carter; U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke; Missouri Gov. Eric Greitens; conservation leaders; and celebrities.”

Trump Promise To Restore Mount McKinley Name Is Up In The Air.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer (9/19, Eaton) reports that after promising to reverse the name change of Mount McKinley to Denali while campaigning, President Trump has “been silent on whether the mountain’s name should be changed.” The article notes that earlier this year, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “told Alaskan media the peak should keep the name Denali.”

ODOT Gets $1 Million To Clean Up Wildfire Damage.

The Portland \(OR\) Tribune (9/19) reports the Oregon Department of Transportation will receive a $1 million emergency relief grant from the US Department of Transportation “to clean up roads and highways damaged or threatened by the summer’s wildfires.” The Tribune attributes the grant to the work of Oregon’s Congressional delegation, particularly Sens. Ron Wyden and Jeff Merkley. KATU-TV Portland, OR (9/19) and KPTV-TV Portland, OR (9/19) also reported on the grant.

SD Congressional Delegation Continues To Fight For DC Booth.

The Black Hills \(SD\) Pioneer (9/19, Watson) reports that “South Dakota’s congressional delegation has requested vacant employee positions at the D.C. Booth Historic National Fish Hatchery and Archives be filled.” A letter sent Monday to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service “outlined the importance of the hatchery as well as the staffing decline since officials at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service began discussing the closure of the hatchery in June 2013.” The delegation of Sens. John Thune, and Mike Rounds, and Rep. Kristi Noem, wrote, “The D.C. Booth Fish Hatchery is critically important to the Spearfish community, its economy, and its residents, as more than 160,000 people visit the Hatchery each year. The Hatchery has provided jobs and volunteer opportunities in the community, and it exemplifies a successful federal public lands partnership.”

Kevin Bogardus: Obama Appointees Negotiated Next Job While On The Job At Interior.

Federal News Radio \(DC\) (9/19) reports that “a half dozen Interior Department appointees were negotiating private sector jobs toward the end of the Obama administration.” According to the report, “they recused themselves from important policy deliberations.”

Preserving An American Tradition: Maintaining Access And Increasing Opportunities On Our Public Lands.

For the “Congress” blog of The Hill (9/19, Bishop), Rep. Rob Bishop, chairman of the House Committee on Natural Resources, writes that “to ensure conservation and economic growth can be created by our federal lands, it is important to have access to outdoor activities on America’s public lands, and to have secure Second and Tenth Amendment rights.” Bishop urges Congress to pass the “Sportsmen’s Heritage and Recreational Enhancement (SHARE) Act.” According to Bishop, “maintaining access and increasing opportunities on our public lands will help ensure our natural resources are conserved in perpetuity, and helps sustain good, family supporting jobs for millions of Americans.”

More Logging On Public Land Means More Wildfires.

In an op-ed for the Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (9/19, Ambrose, Baxter), Anthony Ambrose and Wendy Baxter, both with the Department of Integrative Biology at UC Berkeley, highlight “the remarkable differences in wildfires in unlogged areas versus clear-cut forestland.” They argue that “protecting Giant Sequoia National Monument doesn’t just make scientific sense, it reduces risk of mega-fires – a risk that is now amplified in Cascades-Siskiyou National Monument in Oregon, which has been recommended for significant cutbacks.” They are dismayed that “timber industry executives – and now the Trump administration – continue to pursue their logging agenda that will leave forests irreversibly damaged and open to fire.” The authors warn that “increased commercial logging in these forests will result in the removal of the largest, most ecologically important and fire-resistant trees.”

Editorial: Cascade-Siskiyou Should Be Shrunk.

In an editorial, the Bend \(OR\) Bulletin (9/19) agrees with Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke’s recommendation that the Cascade-Siskiyou National Monument should be shrunk. The paper highlights that in his recommendation, “Zinke notes that the expanded monument contains more than 40,000 acres of Oregon and California Railroad Revested Lands (O&C Lands) that were set aside by Congress in 1937 to provide sustained timber harvest funds for Klamath County and every county west of the Cascade Mountains summit but Clatsop.” The paper concludes that “unlike his predecessors, Zinke clearly sees the value of keeping public land open to the public and assuring that earlier promises such as those given when the O&C Lands were set aside in 1937 be honored.”

A Smaller Gold Butte No Big Deal.

In an editorial, the Las Vegas Review-Journal (9/20) supports downsizing the Gold Butte National Monument. The paper notes that “monuments designated under the Antiquities Act are supposed to be confined to the ‘smallest’ area necessary to protect the objects deserving of protection.” It concludes that “the idea that a slight reduction in Gold Butte’s size will result in environmental catastrophe — particularly in a state where some 85 percent of the land is already under the domain of distant Beltway bureaucrats — is patently ridiculous.”

Bears Ears Is Sacred To Native Americans.

But Heritage Isn’t All Equal For Trump. In an op-ed for The Guardian \(UK\) (9/19, NoiseCat), Julian Brave NoiseCat, criticizes Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke’s recommendation to shrink the Bears Ears National Monument. According to NoiseCat, “Bears Ears is one of the most powerful and historic cultural and spiritual centers of the first peoples of the south-west.”

Don’t Mess With National Monuments.

In an editorial, the Concord \(NH\) Monitor (9/20), credits Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke for visiting “most or all of the 27 monuments on Trump’s list before making his recommendations.” The paper notes that “the nation should keep the Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument, he said, but he went on to suggest that the park allow ‘active timber management.’” The editorial says that “if Zinke means commercial logging, his plan should be opposed. If it’s instituted, lawsuits should be launched.”

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Hearing Scheduled For Act That Would Grant Lumbee Full Federal Recognition.

WBTW-TV Florence-Myrtle Beach, SC (9/19, McGee) reports that the House Natural Resources Subcommittee on Indian, Insular, and Alaska Native Affairs “announced Tuesday that a hearing has been scheduled for Congressman Robert Pittenger’s Lumbee Recognition Act.” Pittenger said, “This is the next step in bringing Lumbee recognition up for a vote. We are working closely with the Lumbee Tribe and other leaders to ensure a strong showing next Tuesday.” The hearing was scheduled for September 26.

Island Near NE Tip Of Minnesota Returned To Chippewa Band.

The AP (9/19) reports that an island off the northeast tip of Minnesota has been returned to the Grand Portage Band of Lake Superior Chippewa. Grand Portage Chairman Norman Deschampe “says the band appreciates the role The Nature Conservancy played in restoring the island to tribal ownership.” The Bureau of Indian Affairs “agreed to place the island in trust on the band’s behalf.”

Also reporting are the Duluth \(MN\) News Tribune (9/19, Myers) and WDIO-TV Duluth \(MN\) Duluth, MN (9/19).

Stink Over Acme Sewer.

The Traverse City \(MI\) Record-Eagle (9/19, Troutman) reports that “an Acme Township development likely won’t be impacted by a letter from Gov. Rick Snyder’s office to a federal agency.” However, “the two-page note sent in June could delay Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians officials’ bid to put 158 acres of land near Meijer into trust — an action that will make it effectively tax exempt.” According to the article, “the letter informs the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs of a long-standing sanitary sewer permit violation on the property.”

Bureau Of Land Management

Obama Turned ‘A Blind Eye’ To Fired Interior Official’s Corruption, GOP Rep Says.

The Daily Caller (9/19, Pearce) reports that Rep. Rob Bishop “accused the Obama administration of ignoring the unethical and illegal behavior of a former Department of the Interior official Monday.” Bishop “made the charge after Bureau of Land Management (BLM) law enforcement official Dan Love was fired Friday.” Bishop said in a statement, “The previous administration turned a blind eye to corruption and promoted a culture of mismanagement at the Department of the Interior. I applaud Interior for taking a strong stand and reasserting the basic principle that there are consequences for federal employees who blatantly disregard the law and steamroll elected officials and public trust. Love’s exit is welcome.”

BLM Rounds Up 86 Horses Near Rangely.

The Grand Junction \(CO\) Daily Sentinel (9/20, Webb) reports that the Bureau of Land Management has “wrapped up a wild-horse removal project south of Rangely after capturing 86 animals.” The BLM “ended the helicopter-based operation Monday.” According to the article, “eighty-five of the horses were shipped to the BLM’s Cañon City holding facility and will be made available for adoption or sale.” The article says that “one colt that was about 4 months old was euthanized based on an on-scene veterinarian’s recommendation because it had a pre-existing severe leg injury.”

BLM And Partners Sponsor National Public Lands Day Events.

The Las Cruces \(NM\) Sun-News (9/19) reports that “the Bureau of Land Management, Friends of the Organ Mountains and Southern New Mexico Trail Alliance are sponsoring three events Saturday, Sept. 30, to celebrate National Public Lands Day.” The events will be held at the Dripping Springs Natural Area.

Bureau Of Ocean Energy Management

Block Island Wind Farm Tracking Birds and Bats.

Offshore Wind (9/19) reports that Deepwater Wind has “installed a wildlife tracking station on the easternmost foundation platform at the Block Island wind farm, America’s first offshore wind farm, to assist researchers in their studies of bird and bat activity off the Atlantic Coast.” The project, funded by the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management, will “provide researchers from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the University of Rhode Island (URI) and the University of Massachusetts (UMass) Amherst with data on offshore movement of high priority species to inform conservation efforts.”

Additional coverage was provided by North American Windpower (9/19, Lillian) and Power Engineering (9/19).

Fishing Industry Takes More Action Against New York Offshore Wind Lease.

North American Windpower (9/19, Lillian) reports that “a group of fishing organizations, businesses and communities, led by the Fisheries Survival Fund (FSF), has taken more action to halt the lease of Statoil’s planned wind farm off the coast of New York.” The suit, filed against the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management, is “seeking summary judgment and requesting the court to invalidate the lease, which was awarded to Norwegian firm Statoil to develop the New York Wind Energy Area (NY WEA) late last year.” The groups claim “BOEM’s process for awarding the lease failed to properly consider the planned wind farm’s impact on area fish populations and habitats, shoreside communities, safety, and navigation.”

Bureau Of Reclamation

Westlands Water District Says It Won’t Help Pay For Delta Tunnels.

The Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (9/19, Kasler, Sabalow) reports that “an influential group of San Joaquin Valley farmers Tuesday voted against helping to pay for the Delta tunnels, denying Gov. Jerry Brown crucial financial support for the $17.1 billion project.” Westlands Water District’s board of directors “voted 7-1 against participating in the project, known officially as California WaterFix.” Westlands is “the first major water agency to vote on the project, and other big districts are expected to make their decisions in the coming weeks.”

In an editorial, the Stockton \(CA\) Record (9/19) says that the audit that showed the Interior Department, “secretly, and improperly, contributed nearly $85 million” toward the Delta tunnels erodes the public’s trust. The paper questions why people should believe proponents who “say the project will not have a detrimental impact on the Delta.” The editorial concludes that “state officials should realize these tunnels are not the way to solve California’s water woes and that underhanded dealings will only continue to erode any efforts to solve this problem.”

Additional coverage was provided by the AP (9/19, Smith) and the Ventura County \(CA\) Star (9/19).

Bureau Of Safety And Environmental Enforcement

Scott Angelle Says The Country Should Focus On ‘Energy Dominance’.

The Lafayette \(LA\) Daily Advertiser (9/19, Stickney) reports that Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement director Scott Angelle spoke Tuesday to the Louisiana Oil & Gas Association autumn meeting. He said, “The country can find its energy vision by not settling for the 1980s goal of energy independence. We’re seeking energy dominance.” Angelle asserted that the Trump Administration can promote energy development without “relaxing environmental protections.” He said, “One-hundred percent of the people in this room enjoy the beach, clean air, a morning hunt or walking in the park. I refuse to believe this group cares less about the environment than others.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

The Wall — Eminent Domain May Claim Private Property For Trump Wall.

In a series of comprehensive pieces, the Arizona Republic examines various issues with the border, including the proposed border wall, the danger faced by border crossers, and the work of Border Patrol agents, among other issues. In a 3,000-word piece, the Arizona Republic (9/19) reports on the potential use of eminent domain to claim private property for the border wall. In another piece, the Arizona Republic (9/19) reports on the death of Border Patrol agent Brian Terry, and his family’s quest to ensure more security along the border. The Arizona Republic (9/19) separately reports in a 9,000-word piece about a “mission...to film the border, evaluate the existing fences, document this invisible line as it exists in 2017 – before any construction begins on what President Donald Trump has repeatedly called ‘a big, beautiful wall.’” The Arizona Republic (9/19) also reports on commerce along the border and the possibility that a tax on Mexican imports may be used to pay for the border wall. The Arizona Republic (9/19) also features an examination of the endangered species in the border area and how a border wall could affect the species. The Arizona Republic (9/19) reports on the dangers faced by border crossers in a separate piece, including environmental and dealing with human smuggling organizations tied to the cartels. The Arizona Republic (9/19) separately reports on deaths of migrant crossers who take “risky” paths to avoid Border Patrol agents. The Arizona Republic (9/19) also reports on US ranchers along the border and their “run-ins with border crossers and drug mules.” The Arizona Republic (9/19) reports on the presence of vigilantes who patrol the border looking for “smugglers or drug traffickers,” specifically the Arizona Border Recon Group who “volunteer to patrol border land” and are “armed with rifles and guns.” In a separate piece, the Arizona Republic (9/19) reports on the Tohono O’odham people and the effect a border wall may have in dividing the tribe. Finally, the Arizona Republic (9/19) reports on the work and risks faced by the Border Patrol, who are often alone and can “go without seeing another living being” during patrol shifts.

Federal Officials Designate Mississippi Fish As Threatened.

The AP (9/19, Amy) reports that the pearl darter will “soon be designated as threatened, federal authorities said Tuesday.” The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service “proposed the listing last year and will make it official on October 20.” According to FWS spokeswoman Connie Dickard, “the listing will have little impact on private property owners.”

‘I’iwi Receives Protection Under Endangered Species Act.

Big Island \(HI\) Now (9/19) reports that “the ‘i’iwi, also known as the scarlet honeycreeper, will be protected as a threatened species under the Endangered Species Act, the US Fish and Wildlife Service announced.” The FWS “determined that listing was warranted based on a review of the best information available for the ‘i’iwi, gained through exhaustive research, public comments and independent scientific peer reviews.” Mary Abrams, project leader for the Service’s Pacific Islands Fish and Wildlife Office, said, “In recent years, the ‘i’iwi population has been in sharp decline, due to threats from habitat loss, invasive species and avian diseases, particularly avian malaria. These threats have affected all forest birds, not just the ‘i’iwi. Conservation that benefits the ‘i’iwi will undoubtedly benefit other Hawaiian forest birds.”

Also reporting is the Maui \(HI\) Time Weekly (9/19, Pignataro).

West Palm Sues US Agencies Over State Road 7 Extension Approval.

The Palm Beach \(FL\) Post (9/19, Kennedy) reports that the city of West Palm Beach, Florida “filed in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia on Sept. 12, against the Army Corps of Engineers, Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior, Federal Highway Administration and Environmental Protection Agency” for approvals made on the State Road 7 project. The city sued the agencies for approving the “unnecessary and environmentally harmful roadway project in violation of multiple environmental laws.”

Also reporting is WPEC-TV West Palm Beach \(FL\) West Palm Beach, FL (9/19, Maradiaga).

Ritchie Calls On Federal Government To Move Quickly On Cormorant Management.

The Watertown \(NY\) Daily Times (9/20, Block) reports that state Sen. Patricia A. Ritchie is “calling on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to move more quickly to give states the ability to manage double-crested cormorants.” Ritchie said, “This is something that needs to be dealt with now. The data is out there, I don’t think any more data is needed to confirm the cormorant population was out of control and affecting the fishing industry.” Meanwhile, the FWS is “planning to release a draft environmental assessment “within weeks” that could give some authority for local residents to kill the birds in select circumstances.”

Refuge Plans New ‘Gateway To The Outdoors’.

The Chinook \(WA\) Observer (9/19, Nile) reports that the Willapa National Wildlife Refuge has “rough designs for a new headquarters and visitor center that could be built at either one of the two sites being considered on the federal preserve.” Manager Jackie Ferrier “said the staff has long outgrown its offices in a cramped 1940s building at 3888 U.S. Highway 101.” According to the article, “although the project has yet to be funded, officials have been taking in design and site ideas at public meetings.”

DNRC Faces Tough Questions At Bottling-plant Hearing.

The Daily Inter Lake \(MT\) (9/19, Reilly) reports that “the Montana Artesian Water Company’s plan to bottle Creston’s groundwater drew fresh scrutiny Tuesday morning.” Montana’s Department of Natural Resources and Conservation “opened a multi-day hearing to decide whether to grant the company, founded by Flathead resident Lew Weaver, a water-use permit to tap the aquifer.” Representatives of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service were among those that raised concerns.

Also reporting are Montana Public Radio (9/19, Kreimer) and KTVO-TV Billings \(MT\) Billings, MT (9/19, Miller).

California Condor Takes Flight In Wild After Near Extinction.

The AP (9/20, Chea) reports that “three decades after being pushed to the brink of extinction, the California condor is making a comeback in the wild, but constant vigilance is needed to ensure the endangered bird doesn’t reverse course.” Notably, plans also “underway to release some captive-bred condors in Redwood National Park in 2019 to establish a population near the California-Oregon border.”

The Oil-Drunk Trump Administration Needs To Leave Alaska Refuge Alone.

In an editorial, the Los Angeles Times (9/19) says that the Trump Administration needs to leave the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge alone and not allow seismic testing to assess the oil potential because it is a bad idea for both environmental policy and energy strategy. The editorial says, “The future of the global environment hinges on the decisions we make now about our energy sources, and taking even a baby step toward developing new sources of fossil fuels — especially in one of the harshest climate zones in the world — would be foolhardy and dangerous.”

E&E Publishing (9/19) also provides coverage of the move towards the Arctic Refuge.

Airbnb For Monarch Butterflies Can Prevent Demise.

In an op-ed for the San Jose \(CA\) Mercury News (9/19, Festa), David Festa, senior vice president of ecosystems programs at Environmental Defense Fund, writes that “there is a new wildlife solution that taps into the sharing economy to create new habitat for butterflies.” Festa calls for investing “in farmers and ranchers who already manage much of the habitat appropriate for milkweed.” According to Festa, “farmers and ranchers from California to Texas to Missouri now have the opportunity to participate in an emerging program called the Monarch Butterfly Habitat Exchange, which rewards them for restoring and enhancing monarch habitat in field edges, buffer zones, marginal lands and rangelands – areas that would not decrease productivity.”

National Park Service

National Mall Faces Space Crunch For Global War On Terror Memorial.

The Washington Times (9/19, Richardson) reports that “more memorials are seeking space on and near the National Mall as their sponsors seek to ensure that honoring the past never gets old.” According to the article, “the latest project vying for turf in the country’s most exclusive real estate district is the Global War on Terror Memorial, which got off to a fast start last week with a $1 million donation from NewDay USA toward a goal of raising $40 million to $50 million in seven years.” The article notes that “other high-visibility projects in the pipeline include those commemorating former Presidents John Adams and Dwight D. Eisenhower, the doughboys of World War I, the Peace Corps and those who fought in Operation Desert Storm against Iraq.”

Man Arrested For Using Penny To Deface Lincoln Memorial.

Newsweek (9/19, Perez) reports that “a man was arrested after he vandalized the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C. with a penny on Monday afternoon, authorities said.” U.S. Parks Police “say they caught Nurtilek Bakirov, 21, as he tried to write an ‘M’ into two pillars on the famous shrine.” However, “closer inspection revealed the words ‘HYPT’ and ‘MEAK’ carved into the memorial to the 16th president, police said.”

Also reporting are the New York Daily News (9/19, Brennan) and WTTG-TV Washington Washington (9/19, McGrady).

D.C. Councilmember Says National Park Service Would Charge Him With Trespassing For Removing Confederate Statue.

WAMU-FM Washington (9/19, Lefrak) reports that on Tuesday, the D.C. Council members Jack Evans and Mary Cheh introduced a resolution to remove a monument to Confederate Brigadier General Albert Pike from Judiciary Square. However, the article notes that “the statue was erected by an act of Congressional approval, and transferred to the jurisdiction of the National Park Service in 1977.” Therefore, “for it to be removed, Congress must pass a bill authorizing the removal, and the Park Service must oversee the process.”

NAACP Pushes To Remove Battle Of Chickamauga Monument In Tennessee.

Fox News (9/19) reports that “the local chapter of the NAACP is pushing a petition, that’s already garnered more than 2,000 signatures, calling for the removal of a Confederate statute commemorating one” of the Civil War Battle of Chickamauga’s “main players – Confederate Lt. Gen. Alexander P. Stewart – from outside Tennessee’s Hamilton County Courthouse.” But “since the monument is part of the National Park Service, and therefore federally protected, it’s not going anywhere anytime soon.” Kim Coons, who works with the park, said, “The monuments will stay here. And the reason they exist is because both sides reunified here to place the markers to tell the stories of the people who fought here.”

Federal Grant To Send Baltimore Students On Field Trips To 3 Historical Sites.

The Baltimore Patch (9/19) reports that Rep. John Sarbanes on Tuesday announced that the National Park Foundation will “award $142,820 to support field trips for Baltimore City fourth graders to visit Fort McHenry National Monument and Historic Shrine, Gwynn Falls in Baltimore National Heritage Area and Hampton National Historic Site.” Funding comes from NPF’s Open Outdoors for Kids program. In addition to Baltimore, the program will “provide $2 million in grant funding to 130 National Park Service sites around the country and help bring more than 200,000 students to national parks for outdoor educational field trips during the 2017-2018 school year.”

Docks, Marinas Get Repaired After Microburst On Lake Powell.

The AP (9/20) reports that “authorities say repairs are nearly finished to property in the Glen Canyon National Recreation Area that was damaged by last week’s microburst along the Arizona-Utah border.” According to the article, “a sudden, powerful downward gust of wind swamped or sank dozens of powerboats and jet skis last Thursday on Lake Powell and resulted in damages to the park’s docks and marinas.” Also, “at the Wahweap Marina, water, power and sewer weren’t available and the dock was damaged.” National Park Service officials “say most of the piers and docks have been repaired as of Tuesday and the Wahweap Marina should be reopened soon.”

Fly Fishing On A Day Of Healing For Veterans.

WNEP-TV Scranton, PA (9/19, Mataloni) reports that a group of veterans spent a “beautiful, late-summer day fly fishing on the Delaware River in the Poconos” as part of “Project Healing Waters Fly Fishing.” It was “the first time the National Park Service has teamed up with ‘Project Healing Waters.’” The NPS “hopes to host ‘Project Healing Waters’ during both the spring and fall seasons.”

49 Become U.S. Citizens At Yosemite National Park.

KMPH-TV Fresno, CA (9/19, Vang) reports that “the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services and the National Park Service joined to present a naturalization ceremony Tuesday at Glacier Point Amphitheater in Yosemite National Park.” According to a USCIS spokesperson, the 49 new U.S. citizens came “from 15 countries that included United Kingdom, Australia, Bulgaria, Zambia, China, India and Mexico.”

New Muir Woods Reservation System Aims To Reduce Overcrowding, Traffic Congestion.

The Napa Valley \(CA\) Register (9/19) reports that the National Park Service has “selected a new parking and shuttle reservation system at the Muir Woods National Monument in Marin County.” Ace Parking Management Inc. will “manage on-site parking at the popular tourist destination.”

Office Of Insular Affairs

Trump Declares Emergency As Hurricane Maria Heads Toward Puerto Rico.

ABC World News Tonight (9/19, story 2, 2:20, Muir) reported that Hurricane Maria is “already deadly and battering the Caribbean.” Maria made landfall in Dominica with 160 mph winds. Dominica Prime Minister Roosevelt Skerrit: “I believe we caught a very bad blow. There appears to be a lot of destruction.” The New York Times (9/19, Semple, Ramzy) reports that Skerrit said Dominica “sustained ‘mind boggling’ damage.” Skerrit wrote on Facebook, “So far we have lost all what money can buy and replace. ... My greatest fear for the morning is that we will wake to news of serious physical injury and possible deaths as a result of likely landslides triggered by persistent rains.” The CBS Evening News (9/19, story 3, 2:00, Mason) reported the Caribbean island of Tortola is “bracing for the worst.”

The Washington Examiner (9/19, Correll) reports that President Trump has “issued an emergency declaration for the US Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, making the territories eligible for federal funding for disaster relief.” In a tweet Tuesday evening, Trump wrote, “Puerto Rico being hit hard by new monster Hurricane. ... Be careful, our hearts are with you – will be there to help!”

ABC World News Tonight (9/19, story 2, 2:20, Muir) said that as Puerto Rico braces for impact, more than three million US citizens are “at risk” there, with some “warned to evacuate or risk death.” NBC Nightly News (9/19, story 2, 2:30, Holt) reported that the San Juan airport is shutting down as Puerto Rico Gov. Ricardo Rossello “warns of catastrophic impact.” Rossello said on CNN’s Anderson Cooper 360 (9/19) that “conditions are deteriorating rapidly. We are expecting a very tough hurricane, the worst hurricane in modern history in Puerto Rico. So for the past couple of days, we’ve been organizing so that we can get people out of harms way.”

Rep. Jennifer Gonzalez-Colon said on CNBC’s Closing Bell (9/19) that Puerto Rico has “never been hit by a hurricane of this category before since 1928. At that time, there were more than 5,000 people who lost their lives in that kind of hurricane. So we’re very concerned. The Governor has taken measures. I’ll tell you that FEMA and all the Federal agencies in the island are doing a wonderful job moving people and actually we got more than 500 shelters this time and asking people to move and be safe.”

Meteorologist Eric Fisher said on the CBS Evening News (9/19, story 4, 0:35, Mason) that Maria “has a very tight core, meaning the winds, the most destructive ones are right around the eye, but that eye bearing down on St. Croix, as well as Puerto Rico, as we head into early on Wednesdays morning, just before daylight, crossing the island as a catastrophic hurricane.” The Washington Post (9/19, Samenow) says a warning statement from the National Weather Service “carried an apocalyptic tone,” warning people to expect “‘catastrophic damage’ from winds to 160 mph, including ‘structural damage to sturdy buildings, some with complete roof and wall failures.’” The statement “also predicts ‘devastating to catastrophic flooding’ from rainfall amounts of 12 to 18 inches, with isolated totals exceeding 25 inches.”

NBC Nightly News (9/19, story 3, 1:10, Holt) reported that Puerto Rico could see a storm surge of six to nine feet before Maria continues to Turks and Caicos on Friday. ABC World News Tonight (9/19, story 3, 0:55, Zee) reported that Maria will keep “well east of Florida and...away from the Carolinas in all of the computer modeling as we go into next week.”

US Geological Survey

Earthquake Outside Mexico City Kills At Least 226.

On Tuesday, less than two weeks after suffering a magnitude 8.1 earthquake, Mexico was again struck by a powerful quake. Reporting on the quake led all network news outlets. Coverage focused predominately on the rising death toll, devastation, and domestic rescue efforts.

In its lead story, ABC World News Tonight (9/19, lead story, 3:05, Muir) reported the “massive” 7.1 earthquake struck less than 100 miles from Mexico City on Tuesday afternoon. Dozens of deaths have already been reported, and “authorities say this death toll will go much higher.” Meanwhile, rescuers are trying to reach people trapped in the rubble. In its lead story, the CBS Evening News (9/19, lead story, 2:00, Mason) reported dozens of children remain trapped in a collapsed school in Mexico City. Elsewhere, “The roofs of a shopping center caved in. The airport runway is cracked. A government building sits tilted on its side. Many, many people are injured, and even more still feeling panicked.” Leading NBC Nightly News (9/19, lead story, 2:40, Holt), correspondent Miguel Almaguer similarly reported the quake “toppled buildings in Mexico City,” and while “thousands” fled into the streets, “untold numbers of people are trapped or missing.” Mexico has declared a state of emergency as it braces for aftershocks.

At the end of its broadcast, the CBS Evening News (9/19, story 11, 0:40, Mason) updated the death toll to at least 100. On Tuesday night, the head of Mexico’s Civil Defense agency, Luis Felipe Puente, increased the confirmed death toll to 149, but the AP (9/19, Stevenson) in updated coverage said at least 226 people have been confirmed dead. The New York Times (9/19, Semple, Malkin) reports the death toll included “scores in the state of Morelos, close to the epicenter of the quake, and dozens here in the capital, Mexico City.” On Twitter, Mexican President Enrique Peña Nieto announced he had immediately returned to Mexico City. Earlier on Tuesday, “Peña Nieto attended a memorial service for those killed in the 1985 earthquake.”

The Washington Post (9/19, Partlow) reports the US Ambassador to Mexico, Roberta Jacobson, said one US Embassy staffer broke an elbow in the earthquake, but that no other Embassy workers were harmed. While Mexico City has a large American expatriate community, she said there have been no reports of affected US citizens. The embassy building "did not appear to sustain structural damage, Jacobson added."

Top National News

Trump Slams "Rocket Man" At UN, Threatens To "Totally Destroy" North Korea.

Media coverage of President Trump's address Tuesday to the UN General Assembly is widespread, with most reports focusing on his comments about North Korea. Outlets overwhelmingly cast the President as toughening his stance on Pyongyang, threatening to "totally destroy" North Korea and repeating his "Rocket Man" nickname for leader Kim Jong-Un.

All three networks covered the President's speech, dedicating seven-and-a-half minutes of total airtime, but none of them led with it. Jonathan Karl said on ABC World News Tonight (9/19, story 4, 2:25, Muir) that while he "has spoken of fire and fury...today, President Trump went even further, raising the possibility of wiping North Korea off the map." Trump was shown saying: "The United States has great strength and patience, but if it is forced to depend itself or its allies, we will have no choice but to totally destroy North Korea." Trump then "directly referred to North Korean dictator...by his new nickname: 'Rocket Man.'" Trump: "Rocket Man is on a suicide mission for himself and for his regime."

On NBC Nightly News (9/19, story 4, 2:40, Holt), Hallie Jackson said the comment was "met with gasps inside the room." Jim Sciutto said on CNN's The Lead (9/19) that "a senior UN diplomat in the room" said that "when Trump uttered those words...the diplomats in the room were taken aback. It, in his words, 'felt like a wind had swept through the room,' an emotional response from those present unlike anything they had heard from an American President before." According to CNN's Situation Room (9/19), "an official" says the comment was added to the President's speech Tuesday morning.

The CBS Evening News (9/19, story 5, 2:25, Mason) said that during "his debut," Trump "vowed to work with [world leaders] for peace, but threatened to wipe one nation off the face of the earth." Trump, Bloomberg News (9/19, Talev, Wadhams) says, "bluntly threatened North Korea with annihilation," and the Los Angeles Times (9/19, Wilkinson, Bierman) says he "delivered a forceful inaugural speech" that "ranged from warlike to flowery and that challenged some long-cherished tenets of US foreign policy." In particular, he "caused a stir when he mocked...Kim...as 'Rocket Man on a suicide mission' and threatened his 'depraved regime.'" The Hill (9/19, Fabian) similarly says that the President's comments "caused a stir among the crowd of leaders and diplomats at the UN and represented his starkest ultimatum yet against North Korea," while the Wall Street Journal (9/19, Stokols, Fassih) was more measured, saying that the speech drew a mixed reaction.

USA Today (9/19, Jackson) writes that "even as he addressed deadly serious issues that could involve American forces, the reality television star-turned-president deployed a colorful array of Trumpian phrases to make his points before the traditionally staid United Nations delegates." With regards to Kim, Bloomberg News (9/19, Talev, Wadhams) says Trump "at times cast aside conventions of political and diplomatic dialogue in favor of the aggressive dialect of social media," and McClatchy (9/19, Hadley) says he "used harsh and mocking language when addressing" the North Korean leader. John Roberts said on Fox News' Special Report (9/19) that Trump "left no room for interpretation or ambiguity, demanding Kim Jong-un give up his nuclear program or else."

Reuters (9/19) says Trump "escalated his standoff with North Korea...threatening to 'totally destroy' the country of 26 million people and mocking its leader." His remarks, Reuters adds, "rattled world leaders." Using what the AP (9/19, Lemire, Superville) calls "dark language reminiscent of his 'American carnage' inaugural address," Trump delivered a "combative debut speech to the UN General Assembly, threatened to 'totally destroy' North Korea." The AP adds that while his "lashing was a vigorous restatement of what's been said by US leaders before," it was "likely to hit home harder for being intensely delivered in diplomatic prime time at the UN General Assembly."

The New York Times (9/19, Baker, Sengupta) says the "bellicose speech...drew a series of good-versus-evil lines that forecast confrontations to come," but the President "singled out North Korea for his harshest words, broadening his indictment of the Pyongyang government beyond just its pursuit of nuclear weapons to its treatment of its own people and captured foreigners." And "without mentioning it by name," Trump also "chastised China for continuing to deal with its rogue neighbor," saying, "It is an outrage that some nations would not only trade with such a regime, but would arm, supply and financially support a country that imperils the world with nuclear conflict." The New York Post (9/19, Moore) reports that while Trump "thanked members of the UN Security Council, which has imposed several rounds of sanctions against North Korea," he also "chided those countries that still do business with Pyongyang."

The Washington Post (9/19, Nakamura, Gearan) reports that following the speech, White House press secretary Sarah Huckabee Sanders "sought to temper the idea that Trump's remarks about North Korea were a break from past US policy."

The Washington Times (9/19, Boyer) reports Sen. Dianne Feinstein criticized Trump for using his UN address "as a stage to threaten war," while Sen. David Perdue said he is "glad" that Trump and Ambassador Haley are getting more aggressive with the UN. Sen. Ben Cardin said on CNN's Situation Room (9/19), "I don't think his remarks were well received by our allies." He added that the "international community should be there to help us" deal with the threat posed by the North, but "the President's comments put a wedge in our international coalition."

House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Ed Royce said on CNN's The Lead (9/19), "These aren't the words I would have used. But what I'll share with you here is that in point of fact our biggest challenge right now is applying full diplomatic and financial pressure on North Korea and getting compliance from these other countries to do it."

Rep. Andre Carson said on CNN's Situation Room (9/19) that Trump was being his "provocative" self in his threats to North Korea. Carson added that "to President Trump's credit...you have to be firm with those who threaten to do us harm," but "having said that, in our firmness we should not ostracize those trying to keep the peace."

The CBS Evening News (9/19, story 7, 2:50, Mason) reported on an interview with former New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg, who said "you can't deal with a rogue state like" North Korea "by yourself. You have to have great, tight relationships with all, or lots of other countries, particularly the surrounding countries. And, unfortunately, America is going in the other direction."

A Washington Post (9/19, Blake) analysis says Trump's "oddly chosen colloquialisms masked what was a pretty astounding escalation of his rhetoric when it comes to North Korea. Just to be clear: The president of the United States threatened to wipe a country of 25 million people off the map." James Rubin, however, writes in a Politico Magazine (9/19) analysis headlined "Trump's UN Speech Was Bad, But Let's Not Lose Our Heads" that despite "the screaming headlines about Trump's threat to destroy North Korea, that comment was merely a somewhat blunter statement of US declaratory policy going back decades."

The Washington Examiner (9/19, Scarry) reports that Trump "disturbed some in the press" after vowing to "destroy" North Korea. MSNBC host Lawrence O'Donnell tweeted that Trump "threatened to commit a war crime" by threatening North Korea, while a reporter for the Huffington Post "seemed to suggest Trump's harsh comments may justify the rogue state's actions," saying, "Gee, Kim Jon-un is so irrational for wanting nuclear weapons."

A USA Today (9/19) editorial calls the President's threat to "destroy" North Korea "deeply unsettling," and argues that though he "rightly called upon all nations to isolate Kim's murderous regime," he "undermined that goal with the kind of man-to-man tabloid bombast...that raises Kim's stature and makes him more, rather than less, likely to cling to the nuclear arsenal that he thinks will guarantee his survival."

David Ignatius writes in his Washington Post (9/19) column that the "most surprising thing" about Trump's address "was how conventional it was. He supported human rights and democracy; he opposed rogue regimes; he espoused a global community of strong, sovereign nations. Pretty shocking stuff." But "because he's Trump, the zingers got the headlines: He repeated his childish, snarky (but sort of funny) playground denunciation of North Korean leader Kim Jong Un," as well as his "bombastic threat" to "totally destroy" North Korea. Ignatius writes that what worries him about Trump's speech is "that it was so conventional. If Trump is going to deal successfully with North Korea, he'll truly have to think outside the box."

Poll: 82% Of Republicans Back Military Strike Against North Korea If Diplomacy Fails. The Washington Times (9/19, Harper) reports that a new Gallup poll shows the "American attitude toward North Korea appears to be evolving – and not necessarily in a docile direction." The poll shows that the number of Americans who would support a US military response is "significantly higher" these days. While the percentage of Democrats who favor military action "has hardly changed since 2003: 37 percent now vs. 41 percent then," the "major shift has been among Republicans, whose support for military action is up 23 percentage points.”

Bolton: Tillerson Pursuing “Wrong Policy” On North Korea. The Washington Examiner (9/19, Gehrke) reports former Ambassador John Bolton said Tuesday that Secretary of State Tillerson backs “the wrong policy” on North Korea. Hours after the President’s UN address, Bolton “dismissed” Tillerson’s assertion that the US has imposed sanctions on North Korea in order to induce a “constructive, productive dialogue” with the regime. Said Bolton, “We’ve had constructive dialogue with North Korea for 25 years; it doesn’t work. That’s the wrong policy.”

Colin Powell: Ignore North Korea When It Launches Missiles. The Detroit Free Press (9/19, Jesse) reports that hours after President Trump threatened to “totally destroy” North Korea if it launched nuclear weapons, former Secretary of State Colin Powell “said a different tactic would be better.” Speaking at the University of Michigan, Powell said, “Let’s not go crazy every time they shoot missiles. Start ignoring them and maybe you can find a different way to solve this. It would probably drive them crazy if we ignored one of their launches and after the media interest went away, it would die down.”

Trump At UN: Iran Nuclear Deal An “Embarrassment.”

President Trump’s criticism of the Iran nuclear deal during Tuesday’s address to the UN General Assembly also receives significant media attention, including mentions on all three networks last night. ABC World News Tonight (9/19, story 4, 2:25, Muir) reported Iran’s delegation listened as Trump accused the country “of funding terrorism and lashed out at the nuclear agreement negotiated with President Obama and America’s European allies.” Trump: “The Iran deal was one of the worst and most one-sided transactions the United States has ever entered into. Frankly, that deal is an embarrassment to the United States.” Trump, who ABC noted didn’t say if the US would withdraw from the agreement, “cast this moment as a turning point for the UN.” Trump: “It is entirely up to us, whether we lift the world to new heights or let it fall into a valley of disrepair. If the righteous many do not confront the wicked few, then evil will triumph.” The CBS Evening News (9/19, story 5, 2:25, Mason), however, said Trump “implied he might pull out” of the deal.

The Hill (9/19, Chalfant) reports Trump insisted that “it is time for the entire world to join us in demanding that Iran end its pursuit of death and destruction.”

Fox News’ Special Report (9/19) reported Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu “loved” Trump’s comments on Iran. Fox showed Netanyahu saying of Trump’s address: “I have listened to countless speeches in this hall. I can say this: none were bolder, none were more courageous and forthright than the one delivered by President Trump today. President Trump rightly called the nuclear deal with Iran, he called it an embarrassment. I couldn’t agree more.” Breitbart (9/19, Danan) also reports Netanyahu’s reaction.

On NBC Nightly News (9/19, story 4, 2:40, Holt), Hallie Jackson reported that Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif, by contrast, accused Trump “of ignorant hate speech.” Fox News’ Special Report (9/19) reported Zarif tweeted, “Trump’s ignorant hate speech belongs in medieval times, not the 21st century. UN -unworthy of a reply.”

Iran, Reuters (9/19) reports, denounced Trump’s remarks as “shameless and ignorant” and “said his speech on Tuesday showed his lack of knowledge about Tehran’s fight against terrorism.” State media quoted Zarif as saying, “Trump’s shameless and ignorant remarks, in which he ignored Iran’s fight against terrorism, displays his lack of knowledge and unawareness.”

CNN’s Situation Room (9/19) reported Trump’s assertion that the Iran nuclear deal is “one of the worst and one-sided transactions the United States has ever entered into” was also “a cause of concern” for French President Emmanuel Macron, who said, “If we simply throw out this agreement, there is nothing to replace it. And if you have nothing, then it’s the same situation as North Korea, and I don’t want to find myself in a no man’s land.”

Politico (9/19, Toosi) reports that “in public, in private, and with few exceptions,” world leaders gathered at the UN this week are urging Trump “not to follow through on his threat to derail the Iran nuclear deal. But so far, Trump shows no sign of listening to them.” The issue, Politico says, will “take center stage on Wednesday,” when Secretary of State Tillerson joins a multinational meeting on the nuclear deal that will also be attended by Iranian Foreign Minister Javad Zarif, marking “the first time the two men will meet face-to-face.”

CNN (9/19, Watkins) reports on its website that House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Ed Royce said Tuesday that the US “should focus on enforcing the nuclear agreement with Iran instead of renegotiating it.” Speaking to CNN’s Jake Tapper, Royce said, “I think we should enforce the hell out of the agreement and thereby force compliance on the part of Iran.”

Rep. Andre Carson said on CNN’s Situation Room (9/19) that withdrawing from the deal would be a “tremendous mistake” that “brings us closer to war.” Carson commended the Obama Administration for securing the pact, and said he thinks the “deal is working” and “is worth it.” Sen. Ben Cardin said on CNN's Situation Room (9/19) said “our concern” is that Trump will “rip up” the nuclear agreement despite Iran not being in violation of the deal. He said if Trump did tear up the deal, “we would be the ones walking away,” and “our allies would be scratching their heads.”

Tillerson: Deal's Sunset Provisions “Not A Sensible Way Forward.” Reuters (9/20, Mohammed, Irish) reports Secretary of State Tillerson said Tuesday that the nuclear agreement's “sunset” clauses, under which some restrictions against Iran's nuclear program are slated to expire in 2025, “simply is not a sensible way forward.” Said Tillerson, “It's just simply...kicking the can down the road again for someone in the future to have to deal with.”

Rouhani: “No One Will Trust America Again” If It Leaves Nuclear Deal. “Minutes before” Trump “ripped Iran,” Lester Holt of NBC Nightly News (9/19, story 5, 3:00) sat down with Iranian President Hassan Rouhani, who warned that if the US pulls out of the nuclear deal, “no one will trust America again. ... Because after such a possible scenario, which country would be willing to sit across the table from the United States of America and talk about international issues?” When asked if he'd ever sit down with President Trump, Rouhani replied, “When the United States government in very transparently speaks of an aim of regime change in Iran, talking in bilateral fashion becomes very meaningless. In the current atmosphere, I do not see the current requirements for such a meeting.” Rouhani also dismissed the Trump Administration's attempts to put Iran in the same basket as North Korea, saying, “North Korea has said in very straightforward manner that it seeks nuclear weapons. ... Iran is completely the opposite point.”

Families Of Americans Imprisoned In Iran Welcome Trump's Call For Their Release. The Washington Free Beacon (9/19, Crabtree) reports that “families and advocates for Americans imprisoned in Iran applauded President Trump for demanding the release of all US prisoners and others unjustly detained in Tehran” during his speech Tuesday. Family members of Siamak and Baquer Namazi, a father and son who are being held in Iran, “also urged Trump to take urgent action to try to secure their release. ”

Former Iranian Political Prisoner Urges Regime To Acknowledge 1988 Executions. Former Iranian political prisoner Shabnam Madadzadeh writes in the Wall Street Journal (9/19) that in 1988, an estimated 30,000 Iranians – mostly members of the opposition group Mujahedin-e Khalq (MEK) – were executed. Madadzadeh calls on Iran's leaders to acknowledge the killings and hold the mullahs responsible for them accountable. The first step, he says, is the establishment of an independent international investigation.

Trump Calls Out Venezuela, Cuba In UN Speech.

The CBS Evening News (9/19, story 5, 2:25, Mason) reported in his address to the UN General Assembly on Tuesday, President Trump “called Cuba and Venezuela failed socialist states. He said Venezuela has descended into chaos after illegitimate elections.” Trump: “We are prepared to take further action if the government of Venezuela persists on its path to impose authoritarian rule on the Venezuelan people.” McClatchy (9/19, Ordoñez) reports that during his address, Trump threatened “further action” against Venezuela and “promised not to lift sanctions against Cuba until the government in Havana makes fundamental reforms.” In a speech that McClatchy says “moved quickly from criticism of America's adversaries to dire warnings of nuclear war,” Trump “singl[ed] out Venezuela and Cuba for, he said, delivering only ‘anguish and failure’ to its people.” The President also “called on world leaders to do more to help the people of Venezuela and not look the other way as their government destroys democratic institutions.”

Fox News' Special Report (9/19) reported Venezuela had a “sharp reaction” to Trump's speech, as the regime “didn't like being called out for imposing a brutal dictatorship.” Bloomberg News (9/19, Bristow) reports Venezuela said in a statement that it is prepared to defend itself against aggression from US and its allies. Venezuela will “keep defeating in the political and diplomatic spheres” what “it described as an onslaught of nefarious threats against its sovereignty.”

Newsweek: Trump's Condemnation Of Socialism Met With “Laughter,” “Weak Applause.” In what Newsweek (9/19, Haltiwanger) calls “perhaps the most awkward moment of Trump's speech,” when Trump “criticized socialism during his speech...he seemed to expect roaring approval from the audience. Instead, world leaders responded with laughter and weak applause.” Conservative commentator Bill O'Reilly “perhaps described it best,” saying, “Most fascinating part of Trump [United Nations] speech: After lambasting socialism, he paused, perhaps waiting for applause. None came. Stony silence.”

In UN Speech, Trump Vows To Always Put America First.

Also garnering media attention is the President's vow to put America first during his UN remarks. The CBS Evening News (9/19, story 5, 2:25, Mason), for example, reported that in his first address to the UN General Assembly, President Trump "told the leaders of the world he will always put America first and said they should put their countries first, too." CNN's Situation Room (9/19) said Trump's "address started much like a campaign speech, minus the applause from his conservative base, as the President talked about making America first." While Trump "tried to win over a world body he has ridiculed as ineffective," he also "made it clear he's ready to go it alone on a variety of fronts."

Fox News' Special Report (9/19) reported Trump "says it's not his intent to nation build or impose democracy through military...action, but rather to create global stability by partnering with nations that put the well-being of their citizens first." Trump was shown saying that as President, "I will always put America first. Just like you, as the leaders of your countries, will always and should always put your countries first."

The President, says the New York Times (9/19, Baker, Sengupta), "defended his America First policy and argued that nationalism can be reconciled with common causes," repeatedly using the word "sovereignty" to "describe his approach in a setting where the term traditionally has been brandished by nations like Russia and China to deflect criticism of their actions."

On its front page, the Washington Post (9/19, A1, Jaffe, DeYoung) says Trump "hammered the principle of national sovereignty...but then outlined an agenda that would keep the United States deeply engaged in the world." In a New York Times (9/19) analysis, Mark Landler similarly writes that Trump "offered a strikingly selective definition of the concept, threatening to act aggressively against nations like North Korea, Iran and Venezuela, whose policies he opposes, yet saying almost nothing about Russia, which seized territory from its neighbor, Ukraine, and meddled in the American presidential election."

USA Today (9/19, Korte) says Tuesday's address "was perhaps the most aggressive speech ever delivered by a US president at the UN," but "amid the provocative language, the widely anticipated address also provided a clear articulation of Trump's emerging worldview. He envisions an international order in which each nation pursues its own self interests — and cooperates only when those interests converge."

Politico (9/19, Toosi, McCaskill) reports Trump "urged nations to band together to fight 'evil' — even as he extolled the virtue of respecting national sovereignty and insisted that America isn't looking to impose its 'way of life' on others." The "at-times contradictory remarks," Politico adds, were "filled with soaring rhetoric that touched on everything from 'God' to 'chaos,' and the dark tones were reminiscent of Trump's inaugural address, in which he promised to bring an end to 'American carnage.'"

The Wall Street Journal (9/19) editorializes that while Trump is right to challenge the UN and promote "national sovereignty," there is no substitute for US leadership on the global stage. Max Boot writes for USA Today (9/19) that "the Trump Doctrine is selfishness squared. Just as Trump has never done anything in his life that did not benefit him personally, so he cannot imagine any nation acting for the general good. In his private life, it's me first. In his foreign policy, it's America First."

Wall Street Journal (9/19) columnist Gerald F. Seib writes that Trump offered world leaders a concise summary of his approach to world affairs, declaring: "We are guided by outcomes, not ideology."

Reuters (9/19, Mason, Holland) writes that "among the many signals" that Trump sent in his speech, "one was especially clear: former chief strategist Steve Bannon's White House departure has not muted the president's 'America First' foreign policy instincts."

Reaction to the President's address in the media and lawmakers was generally split along party lines. Of note, however, the New York Times (9/19) — which is typically very critical of the President — writes on its editorial page that the UN "isn't the venue one would expect for threatening war. Yet that's what President Trump did in his first address to the General Assembly." But overall, the Times says Trump's "largely benign comments about the United Nations were encouraging, considering he once condemned it as useless and having no place in his 'America First' vision."

A Washington Post (9/19) editorial says that "for those who have been alarmed by President Trump's retreat from traditional American values, there were reassuring moments" Tuesday. Trump, it says, "rightly and scathingly attacked regimes that deprive their own people of liberty, such as those in North Korea and Venezuela." And "less reassuring" were Trump's "schoolboy taunts" of "Rocket Man." And then, "somewhere in between, there was Mr. Trump's repeated emphasis on sovereignty.”

Fox News' Special Report (9/19) reported that Rep. Mark Takano called Trump's speech “shockingly reckless.” Rep. Barbara Lee tweeted, “Dangerous rhetoric & abdication of values” from President Trump. By contrast, Mitt Romney said Trump “gave a strong and needed challenge to UN members to live up to its charter and to confront global challenges.” New Gingrich said Trump's speech “is historic and sets a new standard. Sovereignty and national interest are reasserted as principles.”

Rep. Andre Carson noted on CNN's Situation Room (9/19) that Trump in his speech “praised” the State Department. Carson found that “interesting, because his proposal in his budget makes the deepest cuts in State Department history.”

Gloria Borger said on CNN's Situation Room (9/19), “This was a speech that you can say is full of bombast, which it was, but is the first time we heard laid out completely, clearly Donald Trump's vision for the world. He took on North Korea directly. He took on Iran directly. He took on Venezuela. He took on Syria directly And he also, in addition to taking on those bad actors, he made the case that we foot a lot of the bill in the United Nations and that has to change. There are a lot of people in the audience that would be upset about it. People who will not upset about it are Donald Trump's base and lots of Republicans.” A McClatchy (9/19, Kumar) analysis says Trump “delivered the message of the voters who elected him.”

Mara Liasson of NPR said on Fox News' Special Report (9/19), “This is what the White House wanted. I thought the speech had something for everyone. For people who wanted some tough, nationalist populist rhetoric, it was in there. I thought it was a step back from the UN bashing that Trump had done during the campaign.”

Catherine Lucey of the AP said on Fox News' Special Report (9/19) that Trump “really put the world on notice today. The President came in with a clear message he wanted to deliver. If you've been watching his speeches throughout the year and the campaign, it really was a continuation of a vision we've seen from him before. This was a dark interpretation of the state of affairs in the world, but it revealed his frustration and the way he thinks, and it's the way he thinks he needs to deliver the message. This is the kind of rhetoric he's comfortable with. This is the way he wants to communicate. He wanted to make a stand today.”

In his opening monologue on Fox News' Hannity (9/19), Sean Hannity said of Trump's address, “This is what leading on the world stage actually looks like. President Trump refused to appease and capitulate to countries like Iran and the hate America crowd in North Korea, countries that want to see Israel wiped off the map.” Hannity added that Trump “is receiving very high praise for his very bold and direct address.”

White House Joins Graham-Cassidy Push, But Bill's Prospects Remain Uncertain.

On Tuesday, the White House threw itself into the effort to pass the Graham-Cassidy bill to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act, but reports portray the bill's prospects as uncertain despite the optimism of Sen. Lindsay Graham – with the vote of Graham's close friend Sen. John McCain again possibly proving decisive.

ABC World News Tonight (9/19, story 6, 2:00, Muir) reported on the “last-ditch effort” in the Senate “to kill Obamacare, but time is running out. They have to get it done by next week.” ABC's Mary Bruce: “Tonight, the mad dash to deliver. Mr. Vice President, are you finally going to get health reform done?” Vice President Pence: “We're making progress.” Bruce: “Just six working days left for Republicans to overhaul Obamacare with a simple majority vote. The White House tonight is fully on board; the President's working the phones.” Pence: “All-in.” Bruce: “The new GOP plan ends Obamacare subsidies and the Medicaid expansion. Instead, states will get some money to use as they see fit.” Graham: “Here's the choice for America: socialism or federalism when it comes to your healthcare.”

The Los Angeles Times (9/19, Mascaro) reports that the President “is making a big push to revive the Republican healthcare overhaul days before a Senate deadline.” Pence, who was in New York with the President for the General Assembly meeting, “returned to the Capitol to tell Republican senators: ‘Now is the time. We have 12 days.’” Breitbart (9/19, Moons) reports, “Pence said that President Trump is ‘a great believer in federalism.’ The Vice President indicated that this fact moved the Trump Administration to spend the past six weeks ‘in discussions about the way forward, about [Graham's and Sen. Bill Cassidy's] development of the bill’ and have ‘provided administration resources to support their analysis.’”

The Hill (9/19, Carney) reports that Graham told reporters on Tuesday, “I really believe we're going to get 50 Republican votes. I've never felt better about where we're at.” Guy Benson of Townhall (9/19) writes that Graham told reporters that House Speaker Ryan “pledged to him that if the Senate passes the legislation, the House will follow suit – but that the House will not take up a bill that merely props up Obamacare with more bailout-style money, which is the ‘compromise’ sought by Democrats.” Townhall (9/19, O'Brien) additionally reports that Graham has been working with Stephen Bannon, who he dubbed “Darth Vader,” as well as “figures like Alan Greenspan [and] Jeb Bush,” to help win support. Reuters (9/19, Cornwell) reports that Senate Majority Leader McConnell said on the floor that “lawmakers should act because ‘our opportunity to do so may well pass us by if we don’t act soon.’”

The deciding vote could be McCain’s, and the New York Times (9/19, Stolberg) writes that the bill is testing the very close bond between McCain and his close friend Graham – “who is so closely identified with Mr. McCain that when he arrived in the Senate after serving in the House, he was called ‘McCain’s mini-me.’” The Washington Times (9/19, Howell) reports that McCain “refused to tip his hand Tuesday.” He told reporters, “I have nothing to say. I have nothing to say.”

Margot Sanger-Katz writes in the New York Times (9/19) “The Upshot” that “the bill faces substantial challenges.” Sen. Rand Paul “is a hard no, which makes the math difficult,” the bill contains “a huge redistribution of money between states in the bill’s formula” that would negatively impact “states with must-get senators,” and “the timing is tight, and the bill still has a long way to go.” However, ACA repeal “is a core promise for Republicans,” and the GOP is motivated to get it done.

Sen. Ben Cardin said on CNN’s Situation Room (9/19), “We’ve been working the last two weeks, Democrats and Republicans, in order to improve the Affordable Care Act. That’s what the American people want us to do. ... But what the Cassidy bill would do is significantly reduce coverage in this country. Tens of millions of people lose coverage. And more tragically, the progress we’ve made against abuse of practices with insurance companies...is at great risk with the Cassidy bill. It’s moving again in the wrong direction.”

In an editorial, the Washington Post (9/19) calls the bill “about as execrable as the others that GOP lawmakers previously failed to approve,” and the process “as sloppy and partisan as the one to which” McCain and other senators “objected earlier in the summer. The outcome would be no less destructive.”

Timothy Jost of Washington and Lee University Law School writes in the Washington Post (9/19) that Graham-Cassidy would “hand the states block grants and abandon to them millions of Americans whom the ACA now helps. ... It would effectively strangle the efforts of states – predominantly Democratic – that have been most successful in extending coverage under the ACA’s Medicaid expansion, tax credits and cost-sharing reductions. Conversely, it would lavish funding on states – predominantly Republican – that have resisted the coverage expansion opportunities the ACA offered.”

CNN Analysis: With “Private Outreach,” Trump Trying To Smooth Relations With Senate Republicans. On its website, CNN (9/19, Raju) reported that earlier this summer, Trump “had a contentious phone call with” Sen. Lisa Murkowski “and also berated her on Twitter, accusing her of letting the country down for voting against GOP plans to gut Obamacare. But behind the scenes, Trump has since tried to make nice, inviting her to a private lunch earlier this month – something that seems to have defused tensions, at least for now..” CNN added, “The private outreach is part of a more concerted White House effort to repair relations Trump damaged with his own party over a tumultuous August, following the failure of the GOP effort to repeal Obamacare and a slew of White House controversies.” The effort “comes at a critical time: The White House is desperately trying to revive its health care push before a September 30 deadline – and needs senators like Murkowski to salvage the President’s agenda.”

Bipartisan Group Of Governors Opposes Graham-Cassidy. The New York Times (9/19, A1, Pear, Kaplan) reports that a bipartisan group of governors “including five Republicans and a pivotal Alaskan independent urged the Senate on Tuesday to reject a last-ditch push to dismantle the Affordable Care Act.” Govs. Charles Baker of Massachusetts, Steve Bullock of Montana, John Bel Edwards of Louisiana, John Hickenlooper of Colorado, John Kasich of Ohio, Terry McAuliffe of Virginia, Brian Sandoval of Nevada, Phil Scott of Vermont, Bill Walker of Alaska, and Tom Wolf of Pennsylvania signed a letter opposing Graham-Cassidy, while Govs. Larry Hogan of Maryland and Chris Sununu of New Hampshire “expressed similar concerns in separate statements.”

The Washington Post (9/19, A1, Sullivan, Snell, Eilperin) says that Walker “holds sway” over Sen. Lisa Murkowski, “a potentially decisive vote,” while Sandoval “is now at odds” with Sen. Dean Heller, “who is a co-sponsor of the bill.” The Washington Examiner (9/19, King) reports that “a group of 15 Republican governors” announced their support for the bill in a Tuesday letter.

Americans For Limited Government Backs Bill. Breitbart (9/19, Moran) reports that Americans for Limited Government President Rick Manning endorsed the bill on Tuesday, saying, "We are encouraged that the Senate is close to passage on the Cassidy-Graham bill, which is the last best chance for Republicans to keep their basic promise to repeal and replace Obamacare."

Kimmel: Cassidy "Just Lied Right To My Face." On ABC's Jimmy Kimmel Live (9/19), host Jimmy Kimmel criticized Cassidy for saying on his show earlier this year that he would enact "the Jimmy Kimmel test" to protect families from losing health coverage. Kimmel said, "He got a lot of credit and attention for coming off like a rare, reasonable voice in the Republican Party when it came to healthcare. ... [Cassidy] just lied right to my face." Kimmel's segment on the bill ran seven minutes.

Senate Republicans Tentatively Agree On $1.5 Trillion Tax Cut Plan.

The AP (9/19, Taylor) cites "congressional officials" who said that "top Republicans" on the Senate Budget Committee "have reached a tentative agreement on a tax plan that would add about $1.5 trillion to the government's $20 trillion debt over 10 years." Panel member, Sen. Bob Corker, "said on Tuesday that Republicans have 'potentially gotten to a very good place' on agreeing to how much the upcoming tax measure might cost, once the Senate's tax writers have blended together rate cuts, additional revenue raised through curbing tax breaks, and the beneficial effects of what he called 'pro-growth tax reform.'" While Corker "didn't offer a number...officials familiar with the Senate Budget panel's internal discussions said the allowance for the tax measure would amount to $1.5 trillion."

Ylan Mui said on CNBC's Closing Bell (9/19) that committee Republicans "are looking at a package of between $1 trillion to $2 trillion in tax cuts." Politico (9/19, Ferris, Scholtes) reports that Corker and Sen. Pat Toomey have "reached a compromise on the scope of tax breaks." Corker "has not yet said if he's agreed to the $1.5 trillion in tax breaks over a decade that GOP senators reportedly have been considering," but he "acknowledged to reporters asking about the $1.5 trillion figure: 'I think you guys already know what the number is. I'm not going to say it.'" The New York Times (9/19, Rappeport, Kaplan) reports that while Republicans "say a tax cut of this magnitude will stimulate economic growth enough to offset any deficit impact," critics "say a deficit-financed tax cut is at odds with longstanding Republican calls for fiscal discipline, including that tax cuts not add to the ballooning federal deficit." A short story in the Wall Street Journal (9/19, Hughes, Rubin) also reports on the tentative agreement.

Hatch: Tax Reform Should Include Dividend Deduction. Reuters (9/19) reports that Senate Finance Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch said Tuesday that allowing US companies "to deduct dividend payments to shareholders from federal income tax could overcome problems facing Republican efforts to overhaul the US tax code." Speaking at the opening of a tax reform hearing, Hatch "said he sees the proposal known as 'corporate integration' as a way to end the perceived double taxation of US companies through tax legislation."

Jordan, Meadows: Tax Plan Must Help Families, Grow The Economy. In an op-ed for the Wall Street Journal (9/19), Reps. Jim Jordan and Mark Meadows, the former and current chairmen of the House Freedom Caucus, that the Freedom Caucus has been told not to offer tax reform legislation and to wait for leadership's bill, which they will not be able to see until after they vote for the 2018 budget. Jordan and Meadows argue that the Freedom Caucus will pass the budget if they are sure the tax plan will reduce taxes for families and grow the economy.

Report: Cutting Wasteful Spending Would Balance Budget In Three Years.

According to a report from Citizens Against Government Waste titled "Prime Cuts 2017," Congress "could balance the budget in three years" if it would "cut unnecessary and wasteful spending in the federal government," the Washington Free Beacon (9/19, Meyer) reports. The report "outlines 607 recommendations to cut inefficient government spending that would not only balance the budget within three years but also save taxpayers $336.2 billion in the first year and $2.3 trillion over five years."

Pruitt Questions Whether Climate Change Is An "Existential Threat."

EPA Administrator Pruitt said on Fox News' Fox & Friends (9/19), "With this climate change, we know certain things. We know the climate is always changing. We know that humans contribute to it in some way. To what degree to measure that with precision is very difficult. But what we don't know is we are in a situation where it's an existential threat. Is it unsustainable with respect to what we see presently. Let's have a debate about that, bring scientists in, red team scientists, blue team scientists and have a discussion about the importance of this issue so the American people deserve that type of objective, transparent discussion."

Brown: Trump's Claims About Paris Agreement Are "Fake." California Gov. Jerry Brown was asked on CNN's The Lead (9/19) about President Trump's claim that China got a better deal than the US in the Paris agreement. Brown said, "China is doing more than the US right now. They are closing down coal plants. They are massively investing in solar and wind. They are mastering battery technology, which will help America. So this point that America got a bad deal is fake. It's more fake than any fake news assertion by President Trump."

Federal Report On Climate To Be Released In November.

E&E Publishing (9/19) reports a study that warns "of the dire consequences of climate change that some feared would be suppressed under the Trump administration is tentatively set to be publicly released Nov. 3." The report, which is part of the National Climate Assessment, "spans more than 600 pages and has received input from 13 federal agencies." Texas Tech University climate scientist Katharine Hayhoe said, "While the full report is 600 pages long, it can be summarized in one sentence: It's real, it's us, it's serious, and the window of time to prevent dangerous impacts is closing fast." E&E adds that "a draft of the report drew national attention in recent months after The New York Times highlighted the study's findings and fears the Trump administration would hide the results."

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

"Warmongers And Peacemakers At The UN." The New York Times (9/19) writes on its editorial page that the UN "isn't the venue one would expect for threatening war. Yet that's what President Trump did in his first address to the General Assembly." But overall, the Times says Trump's "largely benign comments about the United Nations were encouraging, considering he once condemned it as useless and having no place in his 'America First' vision."

"Even College Doesn't Bridge The Racial Income Gap." A New York Times (9/20, Board) editorial examines how "racial pay gaps have expanded the most for college graduates, which makes it seem clear that discrimination is a leading cause." The Times adds, "The racial pay gap is narrower among women, but the gender pay gap in average hourly earnings is large," in part because "black women at all education levels are likelier to be their family's sole or primary provider, and thus more attached to the work force." The Times questions why "economic disparities persist even among college-educated workers," and cautions, "Racism and sexism are entrenched, and leaders need to acknowledge that and address the problem head-on."

Washington Post.

"Another Execrable Healthcare Bill Proves Bad Ideas Never Die." In an editorial, the Washington Post (9/19) calls the Graham-Cassidy healthcare bill "about as execrable as the others that GOP lawmakers previously failed to approve," and the process "as sloppy and partisan as the one to which" McCain and other senators "objected earlier in the summer. The outcome would be no less destructive."

"Trump Undermines His Own Advocacy For Human Dignity." A Washington Post (9/19) editorial says that "for those who have been alarmed by President Trump's retreat from traditional American values, there were reassuring moments" during his address to the UN General Assembly Tuesday. Trump, it says, "rightly and scathingly attacked regimes that deprive their own people of liberty, such as those in North Korea and Venezuela." And "less reassuring" were Trump's "schoolboy taunts" of "Rocket Man." And then, "somewhere in between, there was Mr. Trump's repeated emphasis on sovereignty."

"Who Pays For The White House To Lawyer Up?" The Washington Post (9/19) editorializes that as special counsel Robert Mueller's investigation "apparently gathers steam, so does a debate over an Office of Government Ethics rule prohibiting anonymous donations to legal defense funds of government employees. While no such defense fund has yet been set up" for Trump's aides, "its creation would help staffers shoulder the costs of the high-quality legal representation needed to weather questioning. ... And the recent confusion over OGE rules shows that it's time for the office to make clear its position on requiring donor disclosures."

Wall Street Journal.

"Trump Shock At Turtle Bay." The Wall Street Journal (9/19) editorializes that while President Trump is right to challenge the UN and promote "national sovereignty," there is no substitute for US leadership on the global stage.

“James Madison Weeps.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (9/19) writes that a new Brookings Institution survey of more than 1,500 undergraduates found that most did not know hate speech was constitutionally protected, half agreed with shouting down speakers with whom they disagreed, and a fifth believed in the use of violence against speakers. The Journal concludes that many college students are clueless about free speech.

“All Mr. Comey’s Wiretaps.” The Wall Street Journal (9/19) says in an editorial that a Paul Manafort wiretap would show that there was indeed federal wiretapping of Trump Tower, where Manafort has owned a condo since 2006, during the campaign.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today’s Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Trump Issues Dire Warning To North Korea In Address To UN
Heavy Debt Crushed Owners Of Toys ‘R’ Us
CEO Catches Stranger After Hours, Prompting Espionage Charges
How Antifa Violence Has Split The Left

New York Times:

With Combative Style And Epithets, Trump Takes America First To The UN
Trump Offers A Selective View Of Sovereignty In UN Speech
Powerful Earthquake Strikes Mexico, Killing Over 100
Senate Republicans Embrace Plan For \$1.5 Trillion Tax Cut
Republican Leaders Defy Bipartisan Opposition To Health Law Repeal
Aung San Suu Kyi, A Much-Changed Icon, Evades Rohingya Accusations
A ‘Quest For Justice’ For A Murdered Civil Rights Pioneer, 52 Years Later

Washington Post:

GOP Health Bill Hits Hurdle In Resistance From Governors
Trump Makes Defiant UN Debut
Robust Emphasis On Sovereignty Echoes President’s Domestic Agenda
Puerto Rico Prepares For Direct Hit By Maria
Ugly Past, Unattractive Present For Biggest Confederate Monument
Scores Dead After Powerful Quake Jolts Mexico

Financial Times:

Trump Threatens To ‘Totally Destroy’ North Korea
Theresa May Prepares €20bn EU Budget Offer
Russian-Built Nuclear Plant Revives Chernobyl Fears
Aung San Suu Kyi Defends Handling Of Rohingya Crisis

Washington Times:

Trump Defines ‘America First’ To Wary World Leaders At U.N., Warns North Korea And Iran
Senate Republicans Close To Pushing Through Obamacare Repeal
National Mall Faces Space Crunch For Global War On Terror Memorial
In U.N. Address, Trump Replaces Obama’s Soft Talk With Big Stick
At Least 149 Dead In Mexico After Magnitude 7.1 Earthquake

Story Lineup From Last Night’s Network News:

ABC: Mexico City Earthquake; Hurricanes-Caribbean; Hurricane Tracking; Trump-UN Address; Russia Meddling Investigation-Manafort; Congress-Healthcare Reform; Louisiana-Racial Murders; Wheaton College-Football Team Hazing; Florida-Hospital Outrage; Russia Military Training Accident; Toys R Us-Bankruptcy; Disabled Pilot.

CBS: Mexico City Earthquake; Mexico City Earthquake-Expert Comment; Hurricanes-Caribbean; Hurricane Tracking; Trump-UN Address; Russia Meddling Investigation-Manafort; Michael Bloomberg Interview; Guns In Classrooms; Louisiana-Racial Murders; Toys R Us-Bankruptcy; Mexico City Earthquake-Situation Update.

NBC: Mexico City Earthquake; Hurricanes-Caribbean; Hurricane Tracking; Trump-UN Address; Iranian President Interview; Red Cross Controversy; Toys R Us-Bankruptcy; Florida Sinkhole;

Dodge Trucks Recall; Wrong Baby Registry; Children Night Lights.

Network TV At A Glance:

Mexico City Earthquake – 10 minutes, 15 seconds
Hurricanes – 9 minutes, 30 seconds
Trump-UN Address – 7 minutes, 30 seconds
Russia Meddling Investigation-Manafort – 4 minutes, 35 seconds
Toys R Us-Bankruptcy – 2 minutes, 20 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Mexico City Earthquake; Hurricanes; Louisiana-Racial Murders; Congress-Healthcare Reform.

CBS: Mexico City Earthquake; Hurricanes; Trump-UN Address; Russia Meddling Investigation-Manafort; Sanctuary Cities; Wall Street News.

FOX: Mexico City Earthquake; Hurricanes; Trump-UN Address.

NPR: Hurricanes; Mexico City Earthquake; Trump-UN Address; Congress-Healthcare Reform.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Participates in an expanded meeting with the King of Jordan; participates in an expanded meeting with the President of the Palestinian Authority; attends a working lunch with African leaders; participates in an expanded meeting with the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom; participates in an expanded meeting with the President of Egypt.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Delivers remarks at a UN Security Council high-level debate on reform of United Nations Peacekeeping Operations; joins the President for an expanded meeting with the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom; joins the President for an expanded meeting with the President of Egypt.

US Senate: 9:00 AM Senate Aging Committee hearing on disaster preparedness and response – Hearing on 'Disaster Preparedness and Response: The Special Needs of Older Americans', with testimony from former New Orleans Health Commissioner Karen DeSalvo; University of South Florida School of Aging Studies Professor / Florida Policy Exchange Center on Aging Director Dr Kathryn Hyer; Portlight Inclusive Disaster Strategies CEO/President Paul Timmons Jr.; and Wilkes-Barre, PA, Fire Chief/Emergency Management Coordinator Jay Delaney Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 562, Washington, DC <http://aging.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Judiciary Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Allison Eid to be U.S. Circuit Judge for the Tenth Circuit; Annemarie Carney Axon to be U.S. District Judge for the Northern District of Alabama; Michael Lawrence Brown and William Ray II to be U.S. District Judges for the Northern District of Georgia; and Thomas Alvin Farr to be U.S. District Judge for the Eastern District of North Carolina Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 226, Washington, DC <http://judiciary.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Environment and Public Works Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Michael Dourson, Matthew Leopold, David Ross, and William Wehrum to be Environmental Protection Agency Assistant Administrators; and Jeffery Baran to be a Nuclear Regulatory Commission member Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

10:30 AM Republican Sen. James Lankford meets with Office of Management and Budget Director Mick Mulvaney Location: Washington, DC <http://www.lankford.senate.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/SenatorLankford>

1:00 PM Dem Sen. Jack Reed and military consumer advocates hold briefing on the CFPB arbitration rule – Democratic Sen. Jack Reed and military consumer advocates hold briefing on 'how the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's arbitration rule directly benefits the military community and helps protect service members from financial frauds and abuses', and 'how the CFPB rule directly impacts Equifax and Wells Fargo customers'. Other participants include Commissioned Officers Association Deputy Executive Director John McElligot, Public Justice Executive Director Paul Bland, and Wells Fargo fake account victim Tracey Kilgore Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 538, Washington, DC <http://reed.senate.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/SenJackReed>

2:30 PM Senate Governmental Affairs subcommittee hearing on end of the year spending –

Federal Spending Oversight and Emergency Management Subcommittee hearing on 'Prudent Planning or Wasteful Binge? Another Look at End of the Year Spending', with testimony from Section 809 Panel Commissioner Dr Allan Burman; Mercatus Center at George Mason University Senior Research Fellow Dr Jason Fichtner; and Government Accountability Office Director of Strategic Issues Heather Krause Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 342, Washington, DC <http://hsgac.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenateHSGAC>

US House: 9:00 AM Dem Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee co-hosts event on ending all discrimination against all women and girls – 'Target One: Ending All Forms of Discrimination Against All Women and Girls Everywhere' – the inaugural event of a new breakfast series hosted by Democratic Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee and the International Foundation for Electoral Systems (IFES) exploring each element of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) #5, 'Achieve Gender Equality and Empower All Women and Girls'. Participants include University of Delaware Assistant Professor of Women and Gender Studies Dr Kara Ellerby, Smash Strategies partner Susan Markham, and IFES Director of Monitoring and Evaluation and Public Opinion Research Rakesh Sharma Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2045, Washington, DC www.ifes.org #SDG5

10:30 AM Pelosi, others ahead of HBCU Roundtable – House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi, Congresswoman Alma Adams, Congressman Bobby Scott, and Members of the Congressional Black Caucus will deliver brief remarks ahead of a roundtable with Historically Black Colleges And Universities (HBCU) Presidents and Chancellors to discuss legislative priorities. Remarks will be delivered at the top of the meeting. Location: Gabe Zimmerman Room, HVC-215 Capitol Visitor Center The Capitol. <http://www.democraticleader.gov/> <https://twitter.com/NancyPelosi>

12:00 PM Pelosi Weekly briefing – Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi will hold her weekly press conference. Location: HVC Studio A (Enter through HVC-117), Capitol Visitor Center. <http://www.democraticleader.gov/> <https://twitter.com/NancyPelosi>

On recess until 25 September.

Other: 7:30 AM Air, Space & Cyber Conference continues with Defense Secretary Mattis keynote – Air Force Association Annual Air, Space & Cyber Conference and Technology Exposition continues, with final day keynote from U.S. Secretary of Defense James Mattis Location: Gaylord National Resort and Convention Center, 201 Waterfront St, National Harbor, MD National Harbor www.afa.org #ASC17

8:00 AM U.S. Black Chambers Policy Breakfast – U.S. Black Chambers Policy Breakfast, with panel discussions on 'Doing Business with Corporate America', and 'Public Sector Contracting: Diverse Supply Chains on a Local Level'. Speakers include Democratic Rep. Cedric Richmond Location: NCTA – The Internet & Television Association, 25 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC www.usblackchambers.org <https://twitter.com/usblackchambers>

9:00 AM Department of Labor releases updated child labor report and apps – Department of Labor simultaneously releases an update to its annual child labor report, representing 'the most comprehensive research product to date on the state of child labor in over 130 countries worldwide'; a new app entitled 'Comply Chain', designed to help businesses root out child labor, forced labor, and modern slavery from global supply chains; and an updated version of the smartphone app 'Sweat & Toil', which contains information on goods produced by child labor or forced labor, and the latest findings on govts' efforts to address child labor (9:00 AM EDT) * Deputy Under Secretary of Labor for International Labor Affairs Martha Newton participates in briefing on the releases at the Washington Foreign Press Center, National Press Building, 529 14th St NW, Washington, DC (11:00 AM EDT) Location: TBD <http://www.dol.gov> <https://twitter.com/USDOL>

11:30 AM HUD Secretary Carson pen-and-pad on hurricane recovery efforts – Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Ben Carson discusses HUD's role in the long-term recovery efforts for Hurricanes Harvey and Irma. Topics will include CDBG-DR funding, the timeline for recovery, and what people in the affected region can expect from HUD, via pen-and-pad with select reporters. Other participants include Associate General Deputy Assistant Secretary for Housing Janet Golrick, General Deputy Assistant Secretary for Policy Development and Research Todd Richardson, and Deputy Assistant Secretary for Grant Programs Stan Gimont Location: Robert C. Weaver Federal Building, 451 7th St, Washington, DC <http://www.hud.gov/> <https://twitter.com/HUDNews>

2:00 PM Brookings Institution discussion on Saudi Arabia and 'Vision 2030' – 'Saudi Arabia looks forward: Vision 2030 and Mohammed bin Salman' Brookings Institution Intelligence project discussion, with Belfer Center for Science and International Affairs Senior Fellow Karen Elliott House discussing the findings from her new paper 'Saudi Arabia in Transition', which analyzes the progress the Saudis have made and the challenges they face in implementing Vision 2030 – a plan to modernize its economy and society while allowing it to maintain its hold on power – amidst the recent changes in leadership Location: The Brookings Institution, 1775 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.brookings.edu> <https://twitter.com/BrookingsInst>

8:00 PM Congressional Black Caucus Foundation Annual Celebration of Leadership in the Fine Arts – Congressional Black Caucus Foundation Annual Celebration of Leadership in the Fine Arts, honoring Spike Lee, Yolanda Adams and Simone Paulwell * Organized in cooperation with the Congressional Black Caucus Spouses Visual and Performance Arts Scholarship program Location: Sidney Harman Hall, 610 F St NW, Washington, DC www.cbcfinc.org <https://twitter.com/CBCFInc>

Congressional Black Caucus Foundation Legislative Conference – Congressional Black Caucus Foundation 47th Annual Legislative Conference, themed 'And Still I Rise'. Includes National Action Network panel discussion with NAN Founder and President Rev. Al Sharpton and Democratic Sen. Cory Booker on diversity in asset management (12:30 PM EDT) Location: Walter E. Washington Convention Center, 801 Mt Vernon Pl, Washington, DC www.cbcfinc.org/alc <https://twitter.com/CBCFInc> #CBCFALC17

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: “[Donald Trump] spoke to the representatives of one people in the UN General Assembly. The President was a little bit disappointed. Usually when Donald Trump meets with representatives from different countries, there’s a swimsuit competition, and they wear sashes. Instead, he was forced to make a speech.”

Jimmy Kimmel: “Usually if Donald Trump wants to yell at that many foreigners in one day, he has to visit like nine of his construction sites.”

Jimmy Kimmel: “[Donald Trump] said Kim Jong-Un was ‘Rocket Man’ on a suicide mission. If you want to insult Kim Jong-Un, maybe don’t make it sound like he’s an action-packed movie franchise. Just call him Kim.”

Stephen Colbert: “Speaking of traveling, Donald Trump is on a trip to a very hostile region, New York City.”

Stephen Colbert: “[Donald Trump is] in town because this morning, he gave his first official address at, I want to say, Starfleet Academy. Radical Klingon extremists. They violated the neutral zone. We had no choice.”

Stephen Colbert: “We learned over the weekend that Trump lawyers are clashing over how much to cooperate with the Russia inquiry. If only those Trump lawyers were around when he decided how much to cooperate with Russia.”

James Corden: “During the speech, Trump threatened to ‘totally destroy North Korea,’ which can only mean one thing: He’s going to run for President of North Korea.”

James Corden: “Donald Trump Jr. has decided to give up his Secret Service protection in order to have more privacy. He said it got annoying having Secret Service guys always standing around, listening in, and making it almost impossible for him to call Russia to receive further instructions.”

Trevor Noah: “Trump’s address included many familiar themes. How much great he’s doing as President, how great the country is doing with him as President, how much he’s President, did I mention he’s President?”

Trevor Noah: “It is refreshing to see an American leader who is not going to dictate to the world. In fact, Donald Trump almost wants nothing to do with the world. It’s like Trump looks at the globe and all he sees is a map full of Erics.”

Trevor Noah: "So Trump's new policy, no interfering with how other countries are run, unless he doesn't like how other countries are run."

Jimmy Fallon: "President Trump gave his big speech at the UN General Assembly today, and at one point he threatened to totally destroy North Korea. He said he has a good plan to do it too. He's going to run for President of North Korea."

Seth Meyers: "Trump also said during his address that if North Korea continues working on its nuclear program, the US will have no choice but to totally destroy North Korea. Oh, my God. Trump is going to run for President of North Korea!"

Seth Meyers: "A lawyer who was part of the investigation that led to the impeachment trial of former President Bill Clinton recently said the Special Counsel, Robert Mueller, is trying to set a tone to, quote, 'strike terror in the hearts of people of Washington,' which used to be Steve Bannon's job."

Seth Meyers: "Senate Republicans led by Lindsey Graham and Bill Cassidy have revived the effort to repeal Obamacare. Again? Usually when a bad idea comes back this many times, Johnny Depp is in it."

Conan O'Brien: "Today at the UN, President Trump threatened to return immigrants to their home countries. After making those comments, he got a standing ovation from Melania. She wants to go home."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: Bulletin Intelligence
To: Interior@BulletinIntelligence.com
Subject: U S. Department of the Interior News Briefing for Wednesday, September 27, 2017
Date: Wednesday, September 27, 2017 7:02:36 AM

Mobile version and searchable archives available here. Please click here to subscribe.

US Department of the Interior News Briefing

DATE: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 27, 2017 7:00 AM EDT

Today's Table Of Contents

DOI In The News

- Los Angeles Times: Interior Secretary Zinke Says Nearly One-Third Of Department's Employees Disloyal.
- Washington Examiner: Perry Wants The Biggest Energy 'Arsenal'.
- Minneapolis Star Tribune: US Interior Chief Wants Smaller Monuments, But Not At Home.
- Albuquerque (NM) Journal: NM Democrats Urge White House To Reject Zinke's Monument Recommendations.
- Charleston (WV) Gazette-Mail: WV Parks, Pools And Campgrounds Get Federal Funding.
- U.S. News & World Report: New Mexico Gets $1.1M For Outdoor Recreation Projects.

- Los Angeles Times: Civil Servants Charge Trump Is Sidelining Workers With Expertise On Climate Change, Environment.
- Albuquerque (NM) Journal: Federal Judge Dismisses Case Regarding Power Plant, Coal Mine.
- Federal Computer Week: Congress Questions Cancelled Shared Service Effort.
- Conversation (UK): Interior Secretary Zinke Invokes Teddy Roosevelt As Model, But His Public Land Policies Don't.
- The Hill: Native Tribes Deserve Respect For Work On The Bears Ears Monument.
- Salt Lake (UT) Tribune: Commentary: Strong Economies Need Protected Public Lands.
- Washington Post: No, We Can't — And Shouldn't — Stop Forest Fires.

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

- Montana Tribe Relinquishes Jail To Bureau Of Indian Affairs.
- Lumbee Recognition Bill Gets Hearing In Washington.
- Hoeven Leads Bipartisan Call To Address Domestic Violence, Human Trafficking In Indian Country.

Bureau Of Land Management

- San Bernardino (CA) Sun: Feinstein Contends That Cadiz Project Would Contaminate Water Supply.
- U.S. News & World Report: New Mexico Authorities To Investigate Livestock Killings.
- Twin Falls (ID) Times-News: BLM Resource Council To Meet.
- Oregonian: Ken Medenbach Seeks Judge's Permission To Attend Bundy Trial In Nevada.

Bureau Of Reclamation

- US, Mexico Expand Pact On Managing Overused Colorado River.
- Dispute Over Delta Smelt Reignites Despite Wet California Winter.

Fish And Wildlife Service

- Politico Morning Energy: Republicans Eye Budget Process For ANWR Opening.
- U.S. News & World Report: Utah Residents Ask Supreme Court To Hear Prairie Dog Case.
- Courthouse News: Additional Coverage: Greens Wage Long Fight Against Copper Mine In Arizona Mountains.
- Lompoc (CA) Record: Jenny Loda: Saving Salamanders A Highway At A Time.

National Park Service

- Washington Post: The National Park Service Showed That Its Bottled Water Ban Worked — Then Lifted It.
- Oregonian: National Parks Offering Free Admission For 3 Days This Fall.
- KOTA-TV Rapid City (SD): Historic Trail Receives Major Overhaul After Years Of Neglect.
- Knoxville (TN) News Sentinel: Science Workshops Bring Knox County Teachers To Great Smoky Mountains.
- U.S. News & World Report: Burn Ban Eased In North Cascades And Northwestern Region.
- Tri-City Herald (WA): Open House For Hanford National Park Manager.
- Beckley (WV) Register-Herald: Park Superintendent Keeps Returning To W.Va.
- Fairbanks (AK) News-Miner: Every Kid In A Park Was Amazing.

Office Of Insular Affairs

- NBC: Trump Defends Federal Response To Hurricane Maria.
- Washington Examiner: Utilities Brace For Tough Slog In Puerto Rico After Trump Boosts Funding.
- ABC: Trump: US Ready To Use "Devastating" Force On North Korea.
- Saipan (MNP) Tribune: Casino Rakes In Over $1 Billion.
- Saipan (MNP) Tribune: Project Manager Of MCC Int'l Gets Prison Term.
- Virgin Islands Daily News: St. Croix Gets Standing Curfew, St. Thomas Airport To Reopen.
- St. John Source: Mapp Expects CEKA To Reopen Thursday To Commercial Flights.

US Geological Survey

- Atlanta Journal-Constitution: USGS Sees Widespread Beach Erosion From Maria.
- Additional Reading.

Top National News

- ABC: McConnell Says Senate Will Not Vote On Graham-Cassidy, Killing ACA Repeal For Now.

- New York Times: Trump To Propose Tax Plan In Indianapolis Today.
- New York Times: Trump Included Chad In Travel Ban Over State Department, Pentagon Objections.
- Washington Times: Construction Has Begun On Prototypes For Border Wall.

Editorial Wrap-Up

- New York Times.
 - "A Corruption Case Worth Repeating."
 - "How Gun Controls Work Beyond Washington."
- Washington Post.
 - "Time For Republicans To Accept Reality."
 - "Puerto Rico Needs Help. Here's What We Can Do."
 - "Tackle Football Is Not For Children."
- Wall Street Journal.
 - "Trump's Too-Big-To-Fail Punt."
 - "The Obamacare Saviors."
 - "Second-Class Puerto Rico."

Big Picture

- Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Washington Schedule

- Today's Events In Washington.

Last Laughs

- Late Night Political Humor.

DOI In The News

Interior Secretary Zinke Says Nearly One-Third Of Department's Employees Disloyal.

The Los Angeles Times (9/26, Halper) reports that Monday, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke addressed a group gathered for the National Petroleum Council and said that nearly one-third of the department's employees are disloyal. In its "Blog Briefing Room" blog, The Hill (9/26, Greenwood) reports Zinke said, "We do have good people. But the direction has to be clear and you've got to hold people accountable."

The AP (9/26, Daly) reports that House Natural Resources Committee member Rep. Raul Grijalva said Tuesday that Secretary Zinke should "apologize to the public servants he is supposed to be leading." Grijalva added that Secretary Zinke "should be well aware that loyalty is earned. And you don't earn it – or deserve it – with divisive comments like these."

The Washington Post (9/26, Fears, Eilperin) reports that Energy and Natural Resources Committee ranking member Sen. Maria Cantwell disapproved of Zinke's comments and said, "The public servants at [Interior] deserve respect from the man charged with leading them – not cheap shots in the press." Cantwell added that the comments "betray a fundamental misunderstanding of the role of federal civil service." The Coalition to Protect America's National Parks, Public Lands Foundation, and Association of Retired Fish and Wildlife Service Employees "also took issue with the remarks" in a joint statement, calling them "deeply insulting."

Also reporting are the Washington Post (9/26), the Washington Post (9/26, Grandoni) the Washington Free Beacon (9/26, Crookston), Bloomberg News (9/26, Daly), CNN International (9/26, Green), the Daily Caller (9/26, Rodgers), MSNBC (9/26, Benen), Fox News (9/26), the New York Daily News (9/26), the Bristol \(VA\) Herald Courier (9/26, Daly), Coverage by the AP was also picked up by U.S. News & World Report (9/26, Daly), the Bozeman \(MT\) Daily Chronicle (9/26, Daly), the Great Falls \(MT\) Tribune (9/26, Daly), the Daily Mail (9/26, Daly), the Minneapolis Star Tribune (9/22, Daly), Philly \(PA\) (9/26, DALY, COLVIN), the Boston Herald (9/26), the Washington Post (9/26, Daly), the Washington Times (9/26, Daly), ABC News (9/26, Daly), the Daily Mail (9/25), the New York Daily News (9/26, Daly), and MSN (9/26, Daly).

Interior's Astonishing Deep State: 30 Percent 'Not Loyal To The Flag'. In a piece for the Washington Times (9/26, Chumley), Cheryl K. Chumley urges Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke to fire those who are not loyal. Chumley also praises Zinke's plan to reorganize the department to put "decision-making into the hands of state agents." and move "some of Interior's agencies — like the Bureau of Land Management — to areas in the West.”

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke Catches Flak For Comments. In an editorial, the Las Vegas Review-Journal (9/27) defends Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke’s comments, explaining that “his point was that many bureaucrats under his command are captive to a radical green agenda and are impediments to reform.” But “for the sin of speaking the truth,” the paper says, Zinke became the target of Democrats. The paper poses rhetorically: “Is it really so egregious that agency heads would prefer employees willing to carry out the president’s agenda, in line with existing laws, to those who have other ideas?” The editorial concludes that “far from being controversial, Mr. Zinke’s comments this week are encouraging.”

Perry Wants The Biggest Energy ‘Arsenal’.

The Washington Examiner (9/26, Siciliano, Seigel) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, addressing a National Clean Energy Week symposium, “said solar energy development would be better served on rooftops rather than on public lands.” According to Zinke, “putting solar cells on land is not the best use because that land cannot be used for purposes other than energy.”

US Interior Chief Wants Smaller Monuments, But Not At Home.

The AP (9/25, Brown) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, “a rumored candidate for U.S. Senate in 2018 or governor in 2020, appears to be carving out an exception for Montana from Trump’s agenda to open more public lands to natural resources development.” The article notes that “in Zinke’s home state, the former congressman who has long harbored higher political ambitions is recommending Trump create a new national monument out of the forests bordering Glacier National Park, to the disappointment of a company that wants to drill for natural gas there.” Zinke has also “decided to leave intact a 590-square-mile (1,528-square-kilometer) monument that for 16 years has stirred the kind of impassioned local opposition that Zinke cited in justifying changes to monuments elsewhere.” Also, “he wants to curb mining along Montana’s border with Yellowstone National Park.”

NM Democrats Urge White House To Reject Zinke’s Monument Recommendations.

The Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (9/26, Coleman) reports that Democrats in New Mexico’s congressional delegation wrote to White House Chief-of-Staff John Kelly yesterday “urging him to keep the state’s newest national monuments as they are, and to reject Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke’s report recommending possible changes, calling it riddled with errors.” New Mexico’s delegation Democrats wrote to Trump, “We were disheartened by the recent news of the Department of the Interior’s recommendations to the President regarding modifications to national monuments, including Rio Grande del Norte and Organ Mountains – Desert Peaks in New Mexico. We were concerned that there are several factual errors included in the report’s summaries of these two monuments which were used to justify recommended changes.”

WV Parks, Pools And Campgrounds Get Federal Funding.

The Charleston \(WV\) Gazette-Mail (9/26, Steelhammer) reports that “West Virginia’s share of the 2017 Land and Water Conservation Fund includes $774,984 for state and local outdoor recreation projects.” The money will “help pay for additional power and water hookups at Pipestem Resort State Park’s campground, the restoration of Benwood City Park’s swimming pool in Marshall County, a parking lot at Mill Race Park in Parsons, and two new group picnic shelters at parks in Berkeley County.”

Additional coverage was provided by the AP (9/27) and West Virginia Public Broadcasting (9/26, McCormick).

New Mexico Gets $1.1M For Outdoor Recreation Projects.

The AP (9/27) reports that “more than $1.1 million in federal grants will be distributed to New Mexico for outdoor recreation and conservation projects.” The funding, recently announced by the Interior Department, comes from the Land and Water Conservation Fund. Members of New Mexico’s congressional delegation “said Tuesday that the grants help fuel jobs in the state and an outdoor recreation industry that contributes billions of dollars nationwide.”

Civil Servants Charge Trump Is Sidelining Workers With Expertise On Climate Change, Environment.

The Los Angeles Times (9/26, Halper) reports that the Trump Administration’s actions to reassign personnel have “signaled deep suspicion of many of the civil servants on the government payroll, particularly when their work has involved confronting climate change or enforcing the environmental protections and other regulations the White House is working to roll back." At the Interior Department, Secretary Ryan Zinke's "shuffling of staff and his suggestion before Congress that he would use reassignments to push employees out of government has triggered a probe by the department's inspector general and given fuel to the whistle-blower complaint" filed by Interior employee Joel Clement .

Federal Judge Dismisses Case Regarding Power Plant, Coal Mine.

The Albuquerque \(NM\) Journal (9/26, Smith) reports that "a federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit brought by environmental groups against federal agencies for the extension of operations for the Four Corners Power Plant and Navajo Mine." Environmental groups argued "federal agencies violated the Endangered Species Act, the National Environmental Policy Act and the Administrative Procedure Act for approving the 25-year extension of operations for the power plant and the expansion of strip mining at the mine." U.S. District Court Judge Steven P. Logan "ordered the case dismissed without prejudice, meaning it cannot be refiled based on the same grounds, on Sept. 11."

Congress Questions Cancelled Shared Service Effort.

Federal Computer Week (9/26, Rockwell) reports, "The agreement between the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of the Interior's financial management service provider was abandoned earlier this year because of missed deadlines and cost overruns, agency officials told a congressional panel, and could mark a turning point in how shared services are approached."

Interior Secretary Zinke Invokes Teddy Roosevelt As Model, But His Public Land Policies Don't.

In a piece for the Conversation \(UK\) (9/26, Freemuth), John Freemuth, Professor of Public Policy and Executive Director, Andrus Center for Public Policy, Boise State University, writes that "Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's recommendations to shrink four national monuments and allow fossil fuel development activities on others is just the latest sign that this administration sees natural resource use and extraction as the highest priority for public lands." Freemuth compares Zinke to Cecil Andrus, who led the Interior Department during the Carter Administration. Freemuth writes that Zinke "began his tenure at the Interior Department with pure symbolism: He rode to the agency's headquarters on horseback and professed to be a conservationist in the mold of Theodore Roosevelt. Then he took a different path."

Native Tribes Deserve Respect For Work On The Bears Ears Monument.

In an op-ed for The Hill (9/26, Branch), Ethel Branch, attorney general at the Navajo Nation Department of Justice, credits the Obama Administration for incorporating a "collaborative management model" for the Bears Ears National Monument. However, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke, Utah Gov. Gary Herbert and "other Utah officials have made public statements suggesting that the Bears Ears Commission provides an inadequate form of tribal management." Branch claims that the Bears Ears National Monument, "uniquely enriched by tribal voices and traditional knowledge, can become one of the jewels of our national conservation system." Branch concludes that "the proclamation and the significant hard-earned role of the five tribes in designing the future of the monument through the Bears Ears Commission should not be changed."

Commentary: Strong Economies Need Protected Public Lands.

In an op-ed for the Salt Lake \(UT\) Tribune (9/26, Callaghan), Drew Callaghan, the Outreach Specialist for the American Independent Business Alliance, asserts that "strong public lands protections fuel thriving economies." Callaghan argues that "while relaxed regulations may benefit specific companies in the short-term, those activities undermine the land's value in other ways." Callaghan points to "the greater economic benefits of safeguarding public lands and waters." He concludes that "robust public lands protections don't just benefit the environment; they serve people, local businesses, and the economies on which we all depend."

No, We Can't — And Shouldn't — Stop Forest Fires.

In an op-ed for the Washington Post (9/26, Hanson), Chad Hanson, a research ecologist with the John Muir Project, and Mike Garrity, executive director of the Alliance for the Wild Rockies, criticizes action proposed to "ostensibly...save our National Forests from fire by allowing widespread commercial logging on public lands." The authors claim that "this position is out of step with current science and is based on several myths promoted by commercial interests." The authors call "this narrative" a "scientifically bankrupt smoke screen for rampant commercial logging on our public lands."

Bureau Of Indian Affairs

Montana Tribe Relinquishes Jail To Bureau Of Indian Affairs.

The AP (9/26) reports that "a northern Montana tribe returned control of a jail to the Bureau of Indian Affairs after tribal officials say they couldn't afford to operate it." The BIA "took control of the detention facility on the Fort Belknap Indian Reservation last week after tribal officials reached out to the bureau for assistance." According to Fort Belknap Tribal President Mark Azure, "the move wasn't something either party wanted, but there wasn't enough funding for the facility."

Lumbee Recognition Bill Gets Hearing In Washington.

The Fayetteville \(NC\) Observer (9/26, Woolverton) reports that Lumbee Tribal Chairman Harvey Godwin and Rep. Robert Pittenger "argued to a Congressional subcommittee on Tuesday that Congress should give full federal recognition to Lumbee Tribe of North Carolina." Godwin told the House Natural Resources Subcommittee on Indian, Insular, and Alaska Native Affairs, "This enduring quasi-legal status for the Lumbee Tribe has resulted in unequal protection for our tribal members." Pittenger, "who has sponsored a bill to confer full recognition to the tribe," asserted that it was "an issue of fairness."

Hoeven Leads Bipartisan Call To Address Domestic Violence, Human Trafficking In Indian Country.

The Ripon Advance (9/26) reports that "in response to domestic violence and human trafficking in Native American communities," Sen. John Hoeven "led a congressional call on Friday for federal officials to undergo training to help recognize and respond to those situations." Hoeven, the chairman of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee, "led a bipartisan group of nine senators in calling for enhanced training for federal officials working in Indian country in a letter to Health and Human Services Secretary Tom Price, Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and National Indian Gaming Commission Chairman Jonodev Chaudhuri." Hoeven said, "The presence of federal officials across Indian Country could serve as an important resource in our efforts to combat human trafficking. Connecting these federal employees with the training and education they need to recognize and help prevent these crimes against Native Americans is an important step. As chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee, I will continue to advance this and similar efforts to promote greater public safety throughout tribal communities."

Bureau Of Land Management

Feinstein Contends That Cadiz Project Would Contaminate Water Supply.

The San Bernardino \(CA\) Sun (9/26, Steinberg) reports that "as the Cadiz project seems increasingly likely to go forward, Sen. Dianne Feinstein issued a statement contending the underground desert water could ultimately contaminate much of Southern California's water supply." Feinstein said in the statement, "For close to two decades, Cadiz has been trying to ram through a water extraction project that would harm the Mojave Desert. And now we hear from the Metropolitan Water District that the water Cadiz wants to extract could contain dangerous chemicals that pose a threat to the safety of Southern California's water supply." Cadiz officials "dispute Feinstein's claim, denying that the project's groundwater would be brought into the Colorado River Aqueduct without treatment to screen out potentially harmful contaminants."

New Mexico Authorities To Investigate Livestock Killings.

The AP (9/26) reports that "authorities in southeastern New Mexico are teaming up to investigate a string of livestock killings." Eddy County Sheriff Mark Cage "says his jurisdiction covers more than 5,000 square miles (12,950 square kilometers) and his deputies can't be everywhere at once so a task force is being formed to help with the problem." Cage has "deputized a Bureau of Land Management ranger to help with the case and is working with other local and federal agencies and organizations.”

BLM Resource Council To Meet.

The Twin Falls \(ID\) Times-News (9/26) reports that a Bureau of Land Management advisory group will meet on Wednesday at the agency’s Twin Falls office. The group is “slated to discuss the 2017 fire season, potential use of unmanned aircraft to manage resources, travel planning and other issues.” Twin Falls District Manager Mike Courtney said in a statement, “We receive valuable input from our RAC members who represent diverse interests ranging from energy development and livestock grazing to dispersed recreation and historic and archaeological interests. Their feedback helps us to make better informed decisions when it comes to on-the-ground management of public lands.”

Additional coverage was provided by KLIX-AM Twin Falls, ID (9/26, Weeks).

Ken Medenbach Seeks Judge’s Permission To Attend Bundy Trial In Nevada.

The Oregonian (9/26, Bernstein) reports that “public lands occupier Ken Medenbach, who called the Bundys his heroes on the witness stand last fall, is urging a judge to allow him to attend their federal criminal trial in Nevada next month.” Medenbach’s probation officer has “already rejected the request.” On Tuesday, Medenbach’s defense attorney “filed a motion asking U.S. District Judge Michael J. McShane to overrule the denial.”

Bureau Of Reclamation

US, Mexico Expand Pact On Managing Overused Colorado River.

The AP (9/26, Elliott) reports that “the United States and Mexico have agreed to renew and expand a far-reaching conservation agreement that governs how they manage the overused Colorado River, which supplies water to millions of people and to farms in both nations, U.S. water district officials said.” The deal to be signed Wednesday “calls for the U.S. to invest $31.5 million in conservation improvements in Mexico’s water infrastructure to reduce losses to leaks and other problems, according to officials of U.S. water districts who have seen summaries of the agreement.” The agreement “also calls on Mexico to develop specific plans for reducing consumption if the river runs too low to supply everyone’s needs, said Bill Hasencamp of the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California.”

Dispute Over Delta Smelt Reignites Despite Wet California Winter.

The Sacramento \(CA\) Bee (9/26, Sabalow, Kasler) reports that despite the “wettest winter on record for Northern California,” a “dispute continues between farms and cities wanting to receive more water and environmental groups fighting for the Delta’s fragile population of tiny smelt.” Environmentalists are “opposed to a proposal championed by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation and Southern California water interests to ramp up pumping from the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta starting next week.” Regulators at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service could “decide as soon as Friday whether to approve the plan.”

Fish And Wildlife Service

Republicans Eye Budget Process For ANWR Opening.

Politico Morning Energy (9/26, Adragna) reports that Senate Republicans plan “to use their fiscal 2018 budget blueprint to lay the groundwork for new energy production in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge by using special rules that would allow them to avoid a Democratic filibuster.” According to the article, “while the budget document couldn’t mandate specific policies, it would enable Senate Energy Chairman Lisa Murkowski to write legislation that would remove restrictions on drilling in ANWR that could be bundled into a massive tax reconciliation package that needs just 50 votes in the Senate.” The article says that “soing so would realize a long-standing goal of Republicans and oil companies, while attracting vehement opposition from environmental groups and virtually all Democrats.”

Utah Residents Ask Supreme Court To Hear Prairie Dog Case.

The AP (9/26, McCOMBS) reports that “residents in southern Utah asked the U.S. Supreme Court on Tuesday to hear their case claiming federal safeguards for Utah prairie dogs have prevented them from doing what they want with their private property." People for the Ethical Treatment of Property Owners want "the high court to review a March decision by the Denver-based 10th Circuit Court of Appeals that sided with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on the issue." According to the article, "the request likely won't be considered by the Supreme Court until mid-November at the earliest."

Additional Coverage: Greens Wage Long Fight Against Copper Mine In Arizona Mountains.

Additional coverage of the lawsuit filed against an Arizona copper mine for its impact on the habitat of jaguars was provided by Courthouse News (9/26, Poole).

Jenny Loda: Saving Salamanders A Highway At A Time.

In an op-ed for the Lompoc \(CA\) Record (9/26, Loda), Jenny Loda, reptile and amphibian staff attorney with the Center for Biological Diversity in Oakland, writes that wildlife undercrossings were have been built to help the recovery of tiger salamanders. The project is a collaboration between Caltrans, state Department of Fish and Wildlife and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. She says that "that work would never have occurred without Endangered Species Act protections. The success of these and similar recovery projects shows just how much we need this core environmental law. It also highlights the danger posed by legislative attacks from congressional Republicans attempting to weaken or dismantle critical endangered species protections."

National Park Service

The National Park Service Showed That Its Bottled Water Ban Worked — Then Lifted It.

The Washington Post (9/26, Fears) reports that National Park Service on Friday, prompted by a FOIA request, released a study finding that its decision in 2011 to eliminate bottled water sales "prevented up to 112,000 pounds of plastic from being sold and discarded each year, along with up to 140 metric tons of carbon dioxide emissions." The Trump Administration's Department of the Interior rescinded the ban in August.

Also reporting are USA Today (9/26), Newsweek (9/25, Valencia), and Mother Jones (9/26, Nix).

National Parks Offering Free Admission For 3 Days This Fall.

The Oregonian (9/26, Hale) reports that the National Park Service will waive entrance fees at national parks "on Sept. 30 for National Public Lands Day, and on Nov. 11 and 12 for Veterans Day."

Historic Trail Receives Major Overhaul After Years Of Neglect.

KOTA-TV Rapid City, SD (9/26) reports that "the historic Blackberry Trail that connects Mount Rushmore National Memorial to the Centennial Trail is back open to foot traffic and horseback riding." The National Park Service, the Mount Rushmore Society and "many more partners raised $200,000 to take on rehabilitation of the trail." Cheryl Schreier, park superintendent of Mount Rushmore National Memorial, said, "It feels so wonderful and outstanding and part of it is because we had so many partners and donor involved that helped to make this come to fruition. Now we have a safe trail for both hikers and equestrian users; and it is just a wonderful trail to get people out into a different habitat of Mount Rushmore," Science Workshops Bring Knox County Teachers To Great Smoky Mountains.

The Knoxville \(TN\) News Sentinel (9/26, Ahillen) reports that "thirty middle school and high school teachers and two administrators from the Knox County School District" last week participated in a new program called the Smokies Science Immersion Teacher Workshop. According to the article, "the connection between the park and Knox County Schools has been growing for some time, but this was the first of what both sides hope will be many such workshops." Joy Absher, Great Smoky Mountains National Park education branch chief, said, "We try to work with local counties surrounding the park and find ways that they can bring some of the resources of the park back to the classroom. This is a very important goal for us. Even if students can't make it to the park, teachers can make them aware of the nature around them."

Burn Ban Eased In North Cascades And Northwestern Region.

The AP (9/26) reports that "officials have lifted a ban on campfires in North Cascades National Park, which officials say compliments the rescinding of campfire restrictions throughout the northwestern part of the state." North Cascades National Park Service Complex spokeswoman Denise Shultz "said Tuesday the ban put into place earlier this month because of extreme fire danger is over, effective immediately."

Open House For Hanford National Park Manager.

The Tri-City Herald \(WA\) (9/26, Cary) reports that "the first National Park Service manager for the Hanford portion of the Manhattan Project National Historical Park will be welcomed to the Tri-Cities at an open house Wednesday." According to the article, "both Becky Burghart, the park site's new manager, and Sue Masica, the director of the Intermountain Region of the National Park Service, are scheduled to attend."

Park Superintendent Keeps Returning To W.Va.

The Beckley \(WV\) Register-Herald (9/26, Nelson) reports that Lizzie Watts, superintendent of the New River Gorge National River, Gauley River National Recreation Area and Bluestone National Scenic River, is "finally here to stay." According to the article, "after traveling and working all over the country, Watts applied for a job in West Virginia." Watts said, "This will be my last assignment. I am here for good."

Every Kid In A Park Was Amazing.

In a piece for the Fairbanks \(AK\) News-Miner (9/26, Cotter), Adia Cotter, Supervisory Park Ranger, Alaska Public Lands Information Center Fairbanks., writes that "this month, the National Park Foundation made it possible for 64 fourth-graders from Joy Elementary to visit Denali National Park." Students "explored the visitor center, attended a ranger program and hiked one of Denali's entrance trails. Before boarding a bus home, students socialized with Denali's newest members of the kennel." Cotter hopes "the amazing experience will stick with them for years to come," and "planted a seed of adventure in their fertile minds."

Office Of Insular Affairs

Trump Defends Federal Response To Hurricane Maria.

Amid criticism of the federal response to Hurricane Maria, President Trump announced Tuesday that he will visit Puerto Rico next week. The story garners heavy media coverage, much of which is negative for the President, casting him as being on the defensive about the federal response and suggesting he was preoccupied by his feud with the NFL and did not fully appreciate the magnitude of the crisis.

Gabe Gutierrez reported on NBC Nightly News (9/26, lead story, 3:00, Holt) that Trump "announced he would visit Puerto Rico next week and defended federal response." Trump: "We got 'A+'s on Texas and Florida, and we will also on Puerto Rico. But the difference is this is an island sitting in the middle of the ocean." The CBS Evening News (9/26, story 2, 1:45, Mason) showed the President saying, "Everybody has said it's amazing the job that we've done in Puerto Rico. We're very proud of it. I think we're really getting really good marks for the work we're doing. So I think we've done a really good job." While Margaret Brennan added that Trump "said Puerto Rico's governor personally thanked him today for the federal response," Wolf Blitzer said on CNN's Situation Room (9/26), "The President's words are at odds with the situation on the ground in Puerto Rico." Ron Brownstein, senior editor of The Atlantic, said on CNN's Situation Room (9/26), "I don't think there are many people in Puerto Rico who would describe this as a great job."

USA Today (9/26, Jackson) reports that the Administration "been accused of giving short shrift to growing humanitarian crisis on Puerto Rico," and the AP (9/26, Kellman, Superville) says Trump "pushed back aggressively and repeatedly against criticism that he had failed to quickly grasp the magnitude of Maria's destruction or give the US commonwealth the top-priority treatment he had bestowed on Texas, Louisiana and Florida after previous storms."

David Muir said in the lead story for ABC World News Tonight (9/26, lead story, 2:35) that Trump is "defending himself." Senior White House correspondent Cecilia Vega added that Trump "brush[ed] off questions about whether he's been preoccupied by his battle with the NFL." Trump: "Was I preoccupied? Not at all. Not at all. I have plenty of time on my hands. All I do is work." However, Jim Acosta said on CNN's Situation Room (9/26), "On social media the President has made it clear where his focus lies, on the NFL players protesting during football games. He has tweeted about the NFL 24 times since Saturday compared to just four times on Puerto Rico." Julie Pace of the AP said on Fox News Special Report (9/26) that Trump "can say he wasn't distracted but it was his tweeting and messaging on the NFL that pushed to the forefront and overshadowed what FEMA and other agencies actually were doing for Puerto Rico."

Politico (9/26, Nelson) reports that Trump "has ramped up his tweets about the devastation in the past 24 hours," but he "appeared to place some blame on Puerto Rico for its poor infrastructure and financial crisis, while heaping praise on his administration's response." On Tuesday, Trump "pledged that more help is on the way for the territory, while expressing appreciation for compliments directed his administration's way," tweeting, "Thank you to Carmen Yulin Cruz, the Mayor of San Juan, for your kind words on FEMA etc. We are working hard. Much food and water there/on way." The Washington Examiner (9/26, Siciliano) reports that Trump "said the federal government will fully pay for recovery assistance to Puerto Rico, which senior utility industry officials praised as a necessary step in helping to restore the island's nearly completely destroyed electric grid."

The Wall Street Journal (9/26, Ballhaus, Hughes) says acting DHS Secretary Duke also defended the federal response and said that as access opens, more resources will arrive. In the lead story for the CBS Evening News (9/26, lead story, 2:35, Mason), David Begnaud reported that while "FEMA says it has the supplies it needs, with more aid arriving," there are "huge challenges to delivering it." Alex De La Campa, FEMA: "And because we are an island, there's no trucks or roads that we can bring commodities. So everything had to be, we need to bring everything via airplane or via barge."

Puerto Rico Del. Jennifer Gonzalez Colon said on CNN's Situation Room (9/26) praised Trump's plan to visit the island, saying it will be "more than helpful. It will show that he cares. It will show he is sending the right amount of resources to the island and to the people who are there, waiting to get food, to get water, to get gasoline, to have their power grid." In an editorial, the Washington Post (9/26) says Trump's "silence over the weekend about Puerto Rico while he fomented controversy over football caused worry about whether Puerto Rico would be a priority for the administration." However, Monday's trip to the island by homeland security adviser Bossert and FEMA Director Long, as well as Trump's planned visit "are hopefully signs of the administration taking the crisis seriously."

The New York Post (9/26, Tacopino) reports that two days after Hillary Clinton "pleaded" with the President to send the Navy hospital ship the USNS Comfort to aid the crisis in Puerto Rico, the Administration sent the ship to the island. FEMA Administrator Long said Tuesday "that a flotilla of ships were on their way to the island – including the USNS Comfort." Long said, "We're dramatically increasing the federal footprint that's there." The Washington Post (9/26, Lamothe) says Clinton's "call to action took off, with a petition on the website Change.org garnering more than 100,000 signatures in three days and critics expressing frustration with the hashtag #SendtheComfort."

Eva Pilgrim said on ABC World News Tonight (9/26, story 2, 2:10, Muir) that San Juan Mayor Carmen Yulin Cruz said that "bureaucratic red tape is holding up relief efforts." Cruz: "President Trump, please. Whatever you need to do. Let FEMA do their job." Daniel Kaniewski, deputy director for national preparedness for FEMA, was asked on CNN's The Lead (9/26) if the federal government is treating Puerto Rico with the same urgency as the crises in Texas and Florida, Kaniewski said, "To us, certainly at FEMA and our federal partners there is no difference between the territories and the US states here on the continental US. However, there is a huge challenge involved, right. The only way we can get the supplies and personnel there is by air or by ship. So it's certainly more challenging, but it is absolutely our responsibility to do this. And I feel...we are doing it well and we are doing it as best as anybody can possibly be expected to do it." However, Dana Milbank writes in the Washington Post (9/26) that the Administration's "failure to help Americans in Puerto Rico with the same urgency it gave those in Texas and Florida furthers a sad suspicion that the disparate treatment has less to do with logistics than language and skin color."

Lester Holt reported on NBC Nightly News (9/26, story 2, 1:00) that in "remote parts of Puerto Rico, calls for help are written on rooftops" as "families desperate for aid" and "roads are obliterated with mudslides and flooding." Also on NBC Nightly News (9/26, story 12, 0:50), Holt praised the efforts of the Air National Guard to "deliver essentials to fellow Americans in need." Said Holt, "We know the people of Puerto Rico are grateful, and we're grateful to the men and women of the Air National Guard."

A front-page story in the Washington Post (9/26, A1, Schmidt) reports that residents and local officials in the city of Morovis, 37 miles southwest of San Juan, "said they had received no help from Puerto Rican officials and had no contact with federal agencies," and "Puerto Ricans across the island have echoed those frustrations as advocates off the island have begun to put pressure on the Trump administration." The New York Times (9/26, Fausset, Blinder) reports on efforts to restore service at the Luis Muñoz Marín International Airport.

Lawmakers Warn That Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands Could Become A Katrina-Like Political Disaster. McClatchy (9/26, Douglas, Daugherty) says "lawmakers from both parties warned Tuesday" that the Administration's response in Puerto Rico and the US Virgin Islands "could become a Hurricane Katrina-like political disaster if he does not respond to the storms' aftermath more decisively." Politico (9/26, Caputo) quotes Sen. Marco Rubio as saying before a meeting with Vice President Pence, "This has the potential of being a serious humanitarian crisis in a US territory impacting United States citizens. ... There's going to have to be a lot more hands-on federal engagement for us to be able to successfully carry out the mission." Rubio added, "Right now, it's not just a function of Congress passing a bill tomorrow and flooding Puerto Rico with a billion dollars. They have a capacity problem in terms of absorbing it and distributing it to the right people and the right places. ... What I'm more concerned about in the next 48 to 72 hours is ensuring that we don't have a Katrina-style event. I'm not claiming that's where we're heading. I'm saying I want to avoid that from being even a possibility."

Rep. Adam Schiff (D-CA) said on CNN's Situation Room (9/26), "I wish the President would spend less time telling us what a wonderful job he's doing and more time focused on what we'll need to do in the immediate aftermath of this territory disaster and over the long term because I think he really risks being perceived the same way that George Bush was, as being indifferent to the plight of people in this case, in Puerto Rico and Virgin Islands."

In an op-ed for the Washington Post (9/26), Mari Carmen Aponte, who previously served as acting assistant secretary of state for Western Hemisphere affairs and as the US ambassador to El Salvador, calls on elected officials to "prioritize relief for Puerto Rico before the crisis gets worse." Aponte adds that the military, FEMA, and private organizations must be given "the resources they need to respond quickly," and the Trump Administration "should also immediately waive the Jones Act's restrictions on foreign ships' transporting cargo to Puerto Rico and the US Virgin Islands." In an op-ed for USA Today (9/26), Your Say editor Josh Rivera addresses Trump, writing, "It is great that you are coming to Puerto Rico next week, but you need to act now." A Wall Street Journal (9/26) editorial also calls for the suspension of the Jones Act to provide relief to Puerto Rico.

Rosselló: Without Aid, Millions Of Puerto Ricans Will Flock To US. Puerto Rico Gov. Ricardo Rosselló said on MSNBC's Morning Joe (9/26), "My call to Congress is take action now. This is a major disaster. We need the funding necessary to act appropriately." Rosselló added that "if we don't have that, you'll see thousands if not millions of Puerto Ricans flocking to the United States which will cause a demographic severe problem in Puerto Rico as well as in the United States."

FDA Warns Of Drug Shortages. USA Today (9/26, Bomey) reports that the Food and Drug Administration is warning that there could be shortages of key drugs "after Hurricane Maria brought Puerto Rico's drug manufacturing industry to a standstill." According to FDA Commissioner Scott Gottlieb, "We may soon face critical shortages if we don't find a path for removal or ways to get production back up and running."

American Medical Students Rescued From Dominica. ABC World News Tonight (9/26, story 3, 1:25, Muir) reported that hundreds of American medical students who were stranded on the island of Dominica have been rescued and are "now on their way home and to safety."

Maria To Cause Rough Surf Along East Coast Of US. The CBS Evening News (9/26, story 3, 0:20, Mason) reported that North Carolina will "get a glancing blow from Maria, now a tropical storm." CBS added that "storm surge and tropical storm watches and warnings extend to the Virginia coast." ABC World News Tonight (9/26, story 4, 0:20, Muir) reported Maria will cause "rough surf and dangerous rip currents from Florida to Maine over the next few days" before "making a hard right turn" and "going out to sea."

Utilities Brace For Tough Slog In Puerto Rico After Trump Boosts Funding.

The Washington Examiner (9/26, Siciliano) reports President Trump yesterday "said the federal government will fully pay for recovery assistance to Puerto Rico." The statement was "praised" by "senior utility industry officials...as a necessary step in helping to restore the island's nearly completely destroyed electric grid." American Public Power Association President Sue Kelly said, "We thank President Trump for authorizing 100-percent cost sharing by the federal government for 180 days of emergency work to help begin the process of repairing damaged energy infrastructure." The APPA "represents a segment of the utility sector that is nonprofit and government-owned, such as the Puerto Rico Electric Power Authority." The Hill (9/26, Fabian) reports that next Tuesday President Trump is scheduled to travel to Puerto Rico "to survey damage from Hurricane Maria." Trump "told reporters at the White House that damage on the ground prevents any earlier travel to the island, which he said has been 'literally destroyed.'" Axios (9/26, Vavra) reports President Trump "was updated on the latest recovery and relief efforts in Puerto Rico" in the Situation Room yesterday. Energy Secretary Perry and EPA Administrator Pruitt were among those in attendance.

The Washington Examiner (9/26, Siegel) reports in a second article that the Department of Defense "said Tuesday that 80 percent of the electricity transmission system in Puerto Rico and all of the island's power distribution network, which brings power to customers, is damaged from Hurricane Maria." In addition "only 11 of 69 hospitals in Puerto Rico have fuel or power."

Reuters (9/26, Respaut, DiSavino) reports officials are "still taking stock of what is expected to be a months-long effort to rebuild the island's power system, keeping much of its 3.4 million people in darkness for an extended period." A complete "damage assessment has been difficult because of the limited ability to get flights to the island and as federal agencies have been concentrating on life-saving efforts and providing power to crucial infrastructure like hospitals." Reuters adds that "rebuilding will be a challenging task" for PREPA, which is "already regularly criticized by residents for frequent outages and rates higher than every U.S. state other than Hawaii." A separate article by Reuters (9/26, Reuters) reports "highway signs and traffic poles were scattered across highways around the island on Tuesday, with intersections turned into obstacle courses as cars drove over and around tangled wires and other debris" and "broken transmission towers...were visible."

Perry Pitches Idea Of Sending SMRs To Help Puerto Rico. Greenwire (9/26) reports Energy Secretary Perry on Tuesday "pitched an unconventional lifeline for the hurricane-battered territory. Little nuclear plants." Perry "said the United States should consider hoisting small modular reactors aboard large military aircraft." At a clean energy conference, Perry said, "Wouldn't it make abundant good sense if we had small modular reactors that literally you could put in the back of a C-17, transport to an area like Puerto Rico, push it out the back end, crank it up and plug it in? ... It could serve hundreds of thousands." He "made the pitch to highlight ongoing work at DOE's national labs and suggested developers of small reactors could be offered incentives in a tax reform package."

National Guard Head: Puerto Rico Clean-up Will 'Challenge The System'. The Hill (9/25, Mitchell) reports that "the clean-up efforts for U.S. territories following Hurricane Maria are expected to be far more complicated and lengthy than those for Florida and Texas in the wake of Hurricane Harvey, according to the head of the National Guard Bureau." Gen. Joseph Lengyel "said Monday that it will be 'a harder response scenario' to restore power and necessary infrastructure, likely taking months." Lengyel said, "Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are not Texas and Florida. They're out here in the middle of the ocean. It's more complicated to get people here, it's more complicated to fix the power grids, it's more complicated to fix a whole lot of other things."

Trump: US Ready To Use "Devastating" Force On North Korea.

ABC World News Tonight (9/26, story 9, 0:20, Muir) reported briefly that President Trump warned Tuesday that the US is prepared to use "devastating" military action against North Korea, if necessary, after it threatened to shoot down US war planes. During a joint press conference with Spanish Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy, Bloomberg News (9/26, Talev, Jacobs, Mohsin) reports Trump said, "We are totally prepared for the second option – not a preferred option – but if we take that option it will be devastating I can tell you that. For North Korea that is called the military option. If we have to take it we will."

Politico (9/26, McCaskill) and the Washington Times (9/26, Boyer) also report Trump's remarks, while the Washington Post (9/26, Gearan) reports he also "thanked China for helping rein in North Korea and claimed that international pressure" on North Korea "is beginning to work, marking a change in tone amid concerns that tensions with Pyongyang are escalating dangerously." Trump, the Post says, "made a point of praising Chinese President Xi Jinping for his efforts to squeeze" North Korea, while "in other settings – usually Twitter – Trump has complained about lackluster Chinese cooperation and suggested he could punish China economically if it did not do more."

On NBC Nightly News (9/26, story 4, 2:00, Holt), Andrea Mitchell said that despite Trump's "angry words and new sanctions, the Secretary of State [is] saying the goal is [a] diplomatic solution, and Pentagon seeing no signs of increased military threat." The Wall Street

Journal (9/26, Schwartz, Talley, Wong) similarly reports that US officials on Tuesday emphasized the urgency of diplomatic attempts to ease tensions with North Korea amid recent heightened rhetoric. Secretary of State Tillerson will travel to Beijing on Thursday, where spokeswoman Heather Nauert said the Secretary will lay the groundwork for Trump's trip to China this year. "The fact that Secretary Tillerson has been here for nine months now and is now making his second trip to China – that's significant," Nauert said.

Reuters (9/26, Holland, Ali) reports that while "bellicose statements by Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong Un in recent weeks have created fears that a miscalculation could lead to action with untold ramifications," Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Joseph Dunford said Tuesday that the US "has not detected any change in North Korea's military posture reflecting an increased threat." The AP (9/26, Lardner) reports Dunford said, "We haven't seen military activity that would be reflective of the charged political environment that we're seeing."

Washington Post (9/26) columnist David Ignatius writes that although US officials "have said repeatedly that America is seeking a diplomatic solution to the nuclear crisis with North Korea," Trump's "insulting comments" toward Kim "appear to have made such a negotiated settlement more difficult." According to Ignatius, "experienced Korea watchers believe that Trump's threats have deepened Kim's resistance to concessions and that the North Korean leader is unlikely to back down in the face-off with Washington." Ignatius argues that "the humbling lesson that Trump must learn: He has blustered his way to the edge of a cliff. Now he must stop fulminating and start dealing."

Kathleen Parker writes in her Washington Post (9/26) column that "how this unfunny comedy resolves itself is anyone's guess, which is the problem, isn't it? Nothing like real diplomacy or containment seems plausible in the current scenario."

US Imposes Additional Sanctions On North Korea. The New York Times (9/26, Gladstone) reports that the US "added eight North Korean banks and 26 individuals to its sanctions blacklist on Tuesday." The action, announced by the Treasury Department, "affects North Koreans working in China, Russia, Libya and the United Arab Emirates." Treasury Secretary Mnuchin said, "We are targeting North Korean banks and financial facilitators acting as representatives for North Korean banks across the globe." The Washington Times (9/26, Boyer) reports President Trump said at Tuesday's news conference that the sanctions will further "isolate the North Korean menace." Politico (9/26, Guida) also reports the move.

North Korea Using GOP Analysts To "Make Sense" Of Trump. According to the Washington Post (9/26, Fifield), North Korean government officials have been "quietly trying to arrange talks with Republican-linked analysts in Washington, in an apparent attempt to make sense of President Trump and his confusing messages to Kim Jong Un's regime." The outreach began "before the current eruption of threats between the two leaders but will probably become only more urgent as Trump and Kim have descended into name-calling." One source with "direct knowledge of North Korea's approach to Asia experts with Republican connections" said, "Their number one concern is Trump. They can't figure him out."

Despite His Parents' Claim, Warmbier's Autopsy Showed No Signs Of Torture. The Cincinnati Enquirer (9/26, Saker) reports that the Hamilton County coroner examining Otto Warmbier "found he had a collection of small scars on his body, but none appear serious enough to indicate he was tortured while he was imprisoned in North Korea." The coroner's report, which The Enquirer obtained Tuesday, "only deepened the mystery of what happened to the 22-year-old University of Virginia student" during more than a year in North Korean custody. The Enquirer also notes that Warmbier's parents, Fred and Cindy Warmbier, appeared on national television Tuesday morning for the first time since their son's death. Fred Warmbier accused North Korean officials of "torturing their child to the point," saying that "it looked like someone had taken a pair of pliers and rearranged his bottom teeth." After the Warmbiers' morning appearance on Fox News, President Trump tweeted, "Otto was tortured beyond belief by North Korea." But the coroner's examination of Warmbier "did not indicate the young man's teeth had been disfigured." In fact, it said, "The teeth are natural and in good repair."

NBC Nightly News (9/26, story 4, 2:00, Holt) also reported Warmbier's parents are alleging that North Korea "tortured" their son, while ABC World News Tonight (9/26, story 10, 0:45, Muir) showed Fred and Cindy Warmbier discussing seeing their son after he was brought back to the US: "We heard this howling, involuntary, inhuman sound. He was staring blankly into space, his face jerking violently. He was blind. He was deaf. As we looked at him and tried to comfort him, it looked like someone had taken a pair of pliers and rearranged his bottom teeth."

CNN's Situation Room (9/26) reported that the Warmbiers want to designate North Korea a state sponsor of terrorism. CNN's Brian Todd said a State Department official told CNN "they'll do that if there's evidence that warrants it." Fox News Special Report (9/26) showed State Department spokeswoman Heather Nauert saying, "This is something we constantly assess. I know [Secretary of State Tillerson] has certainly...looked at it in the past when it came to Otto Warmbier. I don't know if that is something we are looking at today."

Casino Rakes In Over $1 Billion.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (9/26, Encinares) reports that "Imperial Pacific International (CNMI) LLC earned over $1 billion in gross gaming revenue from January to July 2017, according to documents obtained by Saipan Tribune." The documents, "obtained from the Commonwealth Casino Commission, showed that, factoring in the 5-percent business gross revenue tax, IPI paid the Commonwealth government a total of $53.4 million for the period from January to July 2017."

Project Manager Of MCC Int'l Gets Prison Term.

The Saipan \(MNP\) Tribune (9/26, De La Torre) reports that "one of five indicted for allegedly harboring illegal Chinese workers pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge yesterday as part of a plea deal and was slapped with a six-month prison term." MCC International project manager Yuqing Zhao "pleaded guilty in federal court to unlawful employment of aliens—a misdemeanor charge." He was "given credit for 12 days of time served."

St. Croix Gets Standing Curfew, St. Thomas Airport To Reopen.

The Virgin Islands Daily News (9/26, O'CONNOR) reports that Gov. Kenneth Mapp has "officially installed the curfew on St. Croix between noon and 4 p.m., he told a press conference Monday at Government House." He said, "Twelve noon to 4 p.m. in the afternoon is now the standard window. We're making that going forward, it's now a daily routine. So businesses can plan to open during that hour, expand the services." The St. Thomas-St. John curfew "remains fixed at the moment from 6 p.m. until 9 a.m., meaning residents there have nine hours to conduct business."

Mapp Expects CEKA To Reopen Thursday To Commercial Flights.

The St. John Source (9/26, Livingston) reports that "Cyril E. King Airport on St. Thomas will reopen for commercial flights on Thursday and St. Croix's Henry E. Rohlsen Airport may open next week, Gov. Kenneth Mapp said Monday in his daily news conference updating the progress on hurricane recovery." Because of "construction at the airport, Mapp urged passengers to get to the airport four hours ahead of the flight to give airlines enough time to process all passengers."

US Geological Survey

USGS Sees Widespread Beach Erosion From Maria.

The AP (9/26) reports that "the U.S. Geological Survey says two-thirds of the beaches in North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland have a high chance of eroding as Hurricane Maria swirls offshore." The USGS Coastal Change forecast "shows about 60 percent of North Carolina dunes will be eroded, and 5 percent of that coastline will be under sea water." In Virginia, "it shows two-thirds of the beaches north of the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay are likely to erode, and a third overwashed." In Maryland, "high water could reach and erode sand dunes along two thirds of the coastline, with less than 5 percent of the dunes overwashed."

Additional Reading.

- Watch Molten Rock Ooze From Cracks In The Earth In Hawaii. Washington Post (9/26, Fritz).
- USGS Reports Second Kansas Earthquake This Week. Hays \(KS\) Post (9/26).
- Looking At The Human Factors In Disasters. Wilmington \(OH\) News Journal (9/26, Snarr).
- Magnitude 4.3 Earthquake Strikes Near Ferndale, California. San Francisco Chronicle (9/26).

Top National News

McConnell Says Senate Will Not Vote On Graham-Cassidy, Killing ACA Repeal For Now.

ABC World News Tonight (9/26, story 7, 2:10, Muir) reported that the "newest effort to kill Obamacare...is dead on arrival. There will be no vote." ABC's Mary Bruce: "Republicans are conceding defeat." Sen. Bill Cassidy: "We've made the decision. Since we don't have the votes, we will postpone that vote. Am I disappointed? Absolutely." The CBS Evening News (9/26, story 4, 0:15, Mason) said in a brief report, "The latest attempt by Senate Republicans to repeal Obamacare is dead. The GOP leadership pulled the plug today when it became clear they didn't have the votes to pass the bill."

The AP (9/26, Werner) reports that Cassidy and Sen. Lindsey Graham "promised to try again at a later date," while President Trump "railed against 'certain so-called Republicans' who opposed the GOP effort. But for now, Trump and fellow Republicans who vowed for seven years to abolish" the Affordable Care Act "will leave it standing and turn their attention to overhauling the nation's tax code instead."

USA Today (9/26, Page) writes, "Repeal and replace: RIP." Republicans are now "left with hard choices about what to do now. And how to explain it to their voters." The New York Times (9/26, A1, Kaplan) reports that Senate Majority Leader McConnell "officially pulled the plug" on Tuesday, "telling senators they will not vote on the measure and effectively admitting defeat in the last-gasp drive to fulfill a core promise of President Trump and Republican lawmakers."

Politico (9/26, Kim, Haberkorn, Everett) reports that McConnell said, "We haven't given up on changing the American healthcare system. ... We're not going to do it this week, but it still lies ahead of us. We haven't given up on that. Where we go from here is tax reform." Vice President Pence "also told Republicans they should keep working on health care and not give up just because a key procedural deadline to pass the bill with a simple majority expires" after this week. But Roll Call (9/26, Rahman) reports that Pence "opted not to make a last-ditch pitch to Republican senators Tuesday to vote for" Graham-Cassidy.

Bloomberg News (9/26, Litvan, Dennis), Reuters (9/25, Cornwell, Cowan), the Wall Street Journal (9/26, A1, Peterson, Armour), and the Washington Times (9/26, Howell) also report on McConnell's announcement, while Paul Kane of the Washington Post (9/26) writes that Tuesday was an exceptionally bad day for McConnell, with the ACA defeat, ally Sen. Bob Corker's retirement, and the defeat of Sen. Luther Strange in the Alabama GOP runoff.

USA Today (9/26, Groppe) writes that it is "unclear whether the bipartisan attempts to fix some of Obamacare's problems – which were derailed by the latest repeal bill – can now be successful." The Washington Post (9/26, A1, Sullivan, Eilperin, Snell) reports that Senate Finance Chairman Orrin Hatch and some other Republicans "argued that the ongoing instability would backfire on Democrats and build momentum for the ACA's eventual repeal." The Washington Examiner (9/26, King) reports that "some division already exists among lawmakers on the best step for taking up the repeal fight again." Some want to tack ACA repeal on to a budget resolution "that would give them reconciliation authority to pass tax reform with only 51 votes. But others are wary of that approach since it might gum up the effort to overhaul the tax code."

The Los Angeles Times (9/26, Mascaró, Levey) reports, "Congress faces at least two pressing deadlines: Federal money for the Children's Health Insurance Program...expires on Saturday," and premiums for ACA plans for 2018 "need to be finalized this week, with insurers not knowing whether the federal government will continue payments that help make costs affordable." The Hill (9/26, Carney) reports that Senate Majority Whip Cornyn "is floating potentially tying a bipartisan deal on stabilizing the health insurance market to structural reforms favored by Republicans."

The Washington Post (9/26) says in an editorial, "With one more repeal-and-replace effort in flames, Republicans face a choice. They can continue to live in a fantasy world in which it is possible simultaneously to uproot Obamacare, slash federal spending on health care and widen health-care coverage. Or they can finally accept reality and strike a deal with Democrats to improve the Affordable Care Act."

USA Today (9/26) editorializes, "Even after Tuesday's decision not to bring the latest effort to a vote before the deadline the end of this week for passing a Senate bill by a simple majority, there are Republicans who want to continue this self-flagellation and war on everyday Americans. ... What this spectacle shows is how captive many Republicans are to a narrow band of hard-right voters and an even narrower band of big-money donors who are demanding results from the GOP-controlled Congress."

In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (9/26) faults Sen. Rand Paul for Graham-Cassidy's failure, arguing that his purist stance resulted in the continuation of the ACA, which he strongly opposes.

Trump To Propose Tax Plan In Indianapolis Today.

President Trump will travel to Indianapolis Wednesday to propose what the New York Times

(9/26, Thrush) describes as “an aggressive and expensive rewrite of the federal tax code,” as the White House “attempt[s] to navigate a narrow political path on an issue that administration officials believe can reboot Mr. Trump’s presidency.” The Wall Street Journal (9/26, Rubin, Bender) says Republicans are anxious for a legislative victory, and the tax plan is their best chance to impact a national issue since taking gaining control of both the legislative and executive branches.

USA Today (9/26, Przybyla) reports that as Trump pitches the plan, he will apply “a hard lesson from the failing effort to repeal Obamacare: enlist a few Democrats.” Trump will make the announcement alongside Democratic Sen. Joe Donnelly, who is planning to travel with him. To Politico (9/26, Strauss, Nussbaum), Donnelly’s appearance with Trump is “the latest example of an endangered Democratic senator from a red state looking to show some bipartisan credibility.”

Bloomberg News (9/26, Edgerton, Brody) says Wednesday’s announcement “marks only the start of what could be a brutal fight in Congress among lawmakers who disagree on key elements of the plan,” and The Hill (9/26, Jagoda) says Trump “has been reaching out to Democrats in an effort to get their support.” The Hill adds that the President said during a White House meeting with a bipartisan group of lawmakers on the House Ways and Means Committee that the Republican tax plan “will include ‘nearly doubling’ the standard deduction and increasing the child tax credit.” Trump told the group, “We will cut taxes tremendously for the middle class. Not just a little bit but tremendously.” Reuters (9/26, Morgan) reports that Trump told the lawmakers, “I’ve asked lawmakers of both parties to join us to discuss our framework. ... It’s time for both parties to come together.”

USA Today (9/26, Przybyla) also reports that Trump will “unveil a plan to dramatically slash the corporate tax rate and collapse individual income tax brackets.” At a dinner Monday with grassroots supporters, Trump “said he has asked his staff to confirm that the plan would represent ‘the biggest tax cut in American history’ by comparing the rates to the 1986 tax plan passed under former President Ronald Reagan, according to a dinner attendee.” USA Today adds that Trump’s plan “would lower the corporate rate to 20% and collapse the current individual tax brackets from seven to three: 12%, 25% and 35%, according to lobbyists briefed on the plan.” The Los Angeles Times (9/26, Puzanghera, Mascaro) says while “businesses would receive huge tax cuts and many middle-class Americans would see relief,” many “specifics, such as whether the individual tax cuts would favor the wealthy, are still to be worked out.” A brief New York Post (9/26, Tacopino) story also reports on the tax proposal.

Pence To Pitch Tax Reform In Detroit. The Detroit News (9/26, Gerstein) reports that Vice President Pence will visit Detroit on Wednesday and Thursday “to talk about tax reform and visit a leading auto supplier.”

Von Drehle: Time Is Short To Pass Tax Reform. David Von Drehle writes in the Washington Post (9/26) that time is running out for Republicans to pass tax reform. Von Drehle adds that at a recent White House meeting, Sen. Roy Blunt told Trump and Treasury Secretary Mnuchin “that tough decisions must be made right away.” Blunt “believes tax reform is a must-do before the December break. Failure to get it done by then would send the GOP into an election year with little to show for the luxury of one-party rule.” Blunt said, “Winning here is pretty important...for the party and for the economy.” Von Drehle asks how “tweeting about football players [will] help achieve that victory.”

MetLife CEO Says Corporate Leaders Must Give Up Loopholes. In an op-ed for the Wall Street Journal (9/26), Steven Kandarian, chairman, president and CEO of MetLife Inc., calls on business leaders to put the national interest ahead of the corporate interests and be willing to forego loopholes, credits and deductions.

Trump Included Chad In Travel Ban Over State Department, Pentagon Objections.

The New York Times (9/26, Cooper, Shear, Searcey) cites “administration officials” who said that President Trump’s inclusion of Chad in his updated travel ban “came over the objections Pentagon and State Department officials, who argued that alienating the nation, one of America’s more reliable counterterrorism allies in Africa, risked harming long-term national security interests.” While Acting DHS Secretary Duke recommended that Chad be included, Pentagon and State Department officials “were opposed to banning travelers from Chad, concerned about American interests, as were diplomats at the American embassy in the capital of N’Djamena, administration officials said.”

USA Today (9/26) argues in an editorial that even if the latest travel ban is constitutional, “it still appears arbitrary.” The ban, USA Today adds, “holds little promise of making Americans safer.” David Bier, an immigration policy analyst at the Cato Institute, writes in an op-ed for the Washington Post (9/26) that Trump’s travel ban “is nothing more than a political document, not one with any legal or national security basis.”

Construction Has Begun On Prototypes For Border Wall.

US Customs and Border Protection said in a short notice Tuesday that construction has begun on “prototypes for President Trump’s border wall,” the Washington Times (9/26, Dinan) reports. According to the notice, “the building began in San Diego on eight prototypes, which had been awarded over the summer.” The prototypes “are between 18 and 30 feet, and will be evaluated on how well they deter climbers, how well they withstand breach attempts and what sort of awareness they allow agents who patrol the border.” Four of the prototypes are concrete walls and four are non-concrete.

Editorial Wrap-Up

New York Times.

“A Corruption Case Worth Repeating.” In an editorial, the New York Times (9/26, Board) compares a federal appeals court’s decision Tuesday “to overturn the 2015 corruption convictions of the former Albany powerhouse Dean Skelos and his son” to “a July decision in which a different set of appellate judges set aside a jury verdict against Sheldon Silver, the former Assembly speaker” who “had been found guilty of, among other things, steering New York State grants to a cancer doctor who then referred patients to his law firm.” The Times explains in both cases, the appeals courts based their decisions on a 2016 US Supreme Court decision “that narrowed the definition of what kinds of misconduct could support corruption charges.” The Times says the Supreme Court ruling, “and the reversals of the Silver and Skelos verdicts that flowed from it, haunts the efforts to clean up Albany by putting people like Mr. Silver and Mr. Skelos behind bars.”

“How Gun Controls Work Beyond Washington.” A New York Times (9/27, Board) editorial says while President Trump’s Administration, “beholden” to the National Rifle Association, “quickly overturned a regulation the Obama administration had issued that would have banned lead ammunition and fishing tackle in federal wildlife refuges,” the state of California “passed an enlightened bill” credited with saving the California condor from “the brink of extinction 30 years ago” to a population of about 450. The Times says Republican representatives are now considering a proposal that would “make it more difficult for federal regulators to control armor-piercing bullets.” Unlike California state lawmakers who “stood up to the gun lobby and protected the condor,” says the Times, Congress cannot “muster similar wisdom and courage” to reject legislation that will pose “a particular threat to police officers.”

Washington Post.

“Time For Republicans To Accept Reality.” The Washington Post (9/26) says in an editorial, “With one more repeal-and-replace effort in flames, Republicans face a choice. They can continue to live in a fantasy world in which it is possible simultaneously to uproot Obamacare, slash federal spending on health care and widen health-care coverage. Or they can finally accept reality and strike a deal with Democrats to improve the Affordable Care Act.”

“Puerto Rico Needs Help. Here’s What We Can Do.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (9/26) says President Trump’s “silence over the weekend about Puerto Rico while he fomented controversy over football caused worry about whether Puerto Rico would be a priority for the administration.” However Monday’s trip to the island by homeland security adviser Bossert and FEMA Director Long, as well as Trump’s planned visit “are hopefully signs of the administration taking the crisis seriously.”

“Tackle Football Is Not For Children.” In an editorial, the Washington Post (9/26) writes that it “defies logic” to allow children to play tackle football, given the “dangers that football may present to their developing brains.” The Post cites a Boston University study published last week that found that exposure to repetitive head impacts in children under the age of 12 “may double the chances of developing behavioral problems and triple the risk of experiencing depression.”

Wall Street Journal.

“Trump’s Too-Big-To-Fail Punt.” In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (9/26) describes financial regulators’ failure to determine whether to remove AIG’s “systemically important financial institutions” label during this past Friday’s Financial Stability Oversight Council meeting as a political punt by the Administration. The Journal argues that Friday’s decision highlights the need for the Treasury Department to clarify the government's review process for financial institutions and drop its appeal of MetLife's challenge to its too-big-to-fail status.

"The Obamacare Saviors." In an editorial, the Wall Street Journal (9/26) faults Sen. Rand Paul for Graham-Cassidy's failure, arguing that his purist stance resulted in the continuation of the ACA, which he strongly opposes.

"Second-Class Puerto Rico." A Wall Street Journal (9/26) editorial calls for the suspension of the Jones Act in order to provide needed relief to Puerto Rico.

Big Picture

Headlines From Today's Front Pages.

Wall Street Journal:

Saudi Arabia Lifts Ban On Women Driving

Senate Scraps Vote On GOP Measure To Repeal Health Law

Bribery, Kickbacks Alleged At Top NCAA Basketball Programs

Why Your Orange Juice Might Be From Brazil: Florida's Trees Are Dying

Equifax CEO Smith To Exit Following Big Data Breach

New York Times:

Senate Republicans Say They Will Not Vote On Health Bill

'This Is Like In War': A Scramble To Care For Puerto Rico's Sick And Injured

US Climate Change Policy: Made In California

Trump To Propose Sweeping Tax Cut For Corporations And Individuals

Roy Moore Wins Senate GOP Runoff In Alabama

Saudi Arabia Agrees To Let Women Drive

Washington Post:

In A Sharp Turn, Saudi Arabia To Let Women Drive

In Puerto Rico, A Lifeline Cut By Maria

Lacking Support, GOP Drops Its Healthcare Bill

GOP To Unveil Tax Plan But Defer Contentious Choices

College Basketball Coaches Face Corruption Charges

Financial Times:

Macron Makes Radical Appeal For More Powerful EU

Yuriko Koike Turns Japan Poll Into Showdown With Shinzo Abe

Equifax Chief Quits Over Data Breach

Washington Times:

Trump Cuts Obama's Refugee Target In Half, Takes More Christians Than Muslims

'White Plague': France On Track For Muslim Majority As Native European Populations Dwindle

Justice Department Fights Restrictions On Freedom Of Thought And Speech At Public Colleges

Supreme Court To Consider Drawing Line On Partisanship In State Legislative Districting

Trump Vows To 'Fix The Mess' Of North Korea

Republicans Try To Sell Trump's Outreach To Hispanics As Democrats Mock Message

Story Lineup From Last Night's Network News:

ABC: White House-Hurricane; Hurricane-Puerto Rico; Hurricane-Caribbean; Hurricane Tracking; California-Wildfire; White House-NFL Conflict; Congress-Healthcare Reform Plan; Alabama Senator Race; White House-North Korea; Dead North Korean Captive-Parents Interview; NCAA Bribery Scandal; OJ Simpson Parole; Saudi Arabia-Women Driving Ban Lifted; TV Show Ending; Twitter-Character Limit Increased; Wedding Accident.

CBS: Hurricane-Puerto Rico; White House-Hurricane; Hurricane Tracking; Congress-Healthcare Reform Plan; White House-NFL Conflict; Alabama Senator Race; Trump Administration-Costly Flights; Saudi Arabia-Women Driving Ban Lifted; Amazon New HQ Bid; Indonesia-Active Volcano; NCAA-Bribery Scandal; Twitter-Character Limit Increased; Philadelphia-New City Statue.

NBC: White House-Hurricane; Hurricane-Puerto Rico; Alabama Senator Race; Dead North Korean Captive-Parents Interview; Equifax-Cyber Security Breach; California-Wildfire; Saudi Arabia-Women Driving Ban Lifted; NCAA-Bribery Scandal; Twitter-Character Limit Increased; Wedding Accident; NFL News; Hurricane-Air National Guard.

Network TV At A Glance:

Hurricane – 9 minutes

White House-Hurricane – 7 minutes, 20 seconds

Alabama Senator Race – 6 minutes, 20 seconds

Saudi Arabia-Women Driving Ban Lifted – 2 minutes, 45 seconds

Story Lineup From This Morning's Radio News Broadcasts:

ABC: Alabama Senator Race; Russia Meddling Investigation; Hurricane-Puerto Rico; Wall Street News.

CBS: Hurricane-Puerto Rico; Alabama Senator Race; Tax Reform Plan; DEA Director Resigns; Wall Street News.

FOX: Alabama Senator Race; Tax Reform Plan; Congress-Healthcare Reform Plan.

NPR: Alabama Senator Race; Hurricane-Puerto Rico; Equifax-Cyber Security Breach; Wall Street News.

Washington Schedule

Today's Events In Washington.

White House:

PRESIDENT TRUMP — Meets with the Secretary of State Rex Tillerson; gives remarks on tax reform.

VICE PRESIDENT PENCE — Participates in a House Republican retreat regarding tax reform; participates in a tax reform meeting with conservative leaders; participates in a Michigan GOP Dinner.

US Senate: 9:30 AM Dem Rep. Ted Deutch's Washington Summit for South Florida business and community leaders continues – Democratic Rep. Ted Deutch hosts Washington Summit for South Florida business and community leaders continues, to cover issues including boating safety regulations, customs and border protection, immigration policy, tax reform, Pell Grants, Port Everglades improvement projects, climate change resiliency plans, and other local and national topics. Speakers today include members of bipartisan, bicameral members Florida's congressional delegation include Sen. Marco Rubio and Reps. Mario Diaz-Balart, Charlie Crist, Matt Gaetz, Alcee Hastings, Cathy Castor, Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, Lois Frankel and Dennis Ross, and Pennsylvania's Republican Rep. Tim Murphy Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, First St NE, Washington, DC teddeutch.house.gov <https://twitter.com/repteddeutch>

10:00 AM VA Secretary Shulkin testifies to Senate committee hearing on suicide prevention – Hearing on '#BeThere: What More Can Be Done to Prevent Veteran Suicide?', with testimony from Secretary of Veterans Affairs David Shulkin; Department of Veterans Affairs Assistant Inspector General for Healthcare Inspections John Daigh Jr., and Office of Mental Health and Suicide Prevention Executive Director Dr David Carroll; University of Utah National Center for Veterans Studies Executive Director Craig Bryan; and National Alliance on Mental Illness for Montana Executive Director Matthew Kuntz Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 418, Washington, DC <http://veterans.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/VACHair>

10:00 AM Senate HELP Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Patrick Pizzella to be Deputy Secretary of Labor; Janet Dhillon and Dr Daniel Gade to be Equal Employment Opportunity Commission members (with Dhillon to be chair, upon confirmation); and Carlos Muniz to be Department of Education General Counsel Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 430, Washington, DC <http://help.senate.gov/>

10:00 AM Senate Environment Committee hearing on forest management to mitigate wildfires – Hearing on 'Forest Management to Mitigate Wildfires: Legislative Solutions', with testimony from Office of the Wyoming Governor Policy Advisor Jessica Crowder; American Forest Resources Council General Counsel Lawson Fite; and National Wildlife Federation President and CEO Colin O'Mara Location: Dirksen Senate Office Building, Rm 406, Washington, DC <http://epw.senate.gov/public/>

10:30 AM Senate Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Ann Marie Buerkle to be Consumer Product Safety Commission Chairman; Rear Adm. (Ret.) Timothy Gallaudet to be Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Oceans and Atmosphere; Howard Elliott to be Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration Administrator; and Dr Walter Copan to be Under Secretary of Commerce for Standards and Technology Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 253, Washington, DC

<http://commerce.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/SenateCommerce>

10:45 AM Senate Foreign Relations Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Kathleen Fitzpatrick to be U.S. Ambassador to Timor-Leste; and Daniel Kritenbrink to be U.S. Ambassador to Vietnam Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

12:00 PM Senate Broadband Caucus telemedicine expo – Senate Broadband Caucus, in partnership with American Telemedicine Association, hosts telemedicine expo, highlighting ‘the important role broadband plays in advancing telemedicine’ and featuring several demonstrations of ‘technologies and innovations that are changing the way health care is delivered’ Location: Hart Senate Office Building, Rm 216, Washington, DC <http://www.capito.senate.gov/> <https://twitter.com/SenCapito>

12:30 PM Minnesota rural health care providers speak at Congressional briefings on opioid reduction efforts – Representatives of CHI St. Gabriel’s Health – a rural health care provider serving Little Falls, MN – testify to Congressional leaders on its successful opioid reduction initiative, following an invitation from Democrats Sen. Al Franken and Rep. Rick Nolan. House of Representatives staff briefing in Rm 121, Cannon House Office Building (12:30 PM EDT) followed by Senate staff briefing in Rm G11, Dirksen Senate Office Building (2:30 PM EDT) Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://www.mnhospitals.org/> <https://twitter.com/MNHospitals>

2:00 PM Senate Natural Resources subcommittee oversight hearing on encouraging the next generation to visit national parks – National Parks Subcommittee oversight hearing on ‘Encouraging the Next Generation to Visit National Parks’, with testimony from National Park Service Deputy Director for Management and Administration Lena McDowall; Niantic Civil and Social Impact Manager Yennie Fuller; Kupu Hawaii CEO John Leong; NIC Vice President Angela Fultz Nordstrom; AccessParks CEO Tim Rout; and National Park Foundation President and CEO Will Shafroth Location: Rm 366, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://energy.senate.gov/public/>

2:15 PM Senate Foreign Relations Committee nominations hearing – Nominations hearing considers Richard Duke Buchan III to be U.S. Ambassador to Spain; Richard Grenell to be U.S. Ambassador to Germany; and Edward McMullen Jr. to be U.S. Ambassador to Switzerland, and to serve concurrently and without additional compensation as to be U.S. Ambassador to Liechtenstein Location: Rm 419, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://foreign.senate.gov/>

2:30 PM Senate Indian Affairs Committee oversight hearing on trafficking of American Indian and Alaska Natives – Oversight hearing on ‘The GAO Reports on Human Trafficking of American Indian and Alaska Natives in the United States’ * Rescheduled from 26 Jul Location: Rm 628, Dirksen Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://indian.senate.gov> <https://twitter.com/IndianCommittee>

2:30 PM Closed Briefing: Intelligence Matters Location: Rm 219, Hart Senate Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://intelligence.senate.gov>

3:00 PM Senate Small Business Committee hearing on SBA’s hurricanes response – Hearing on ‘An Early Review of SBA’s Response to the 2017 Hurricanes’, with testimony from Small Business Administration Associate Administrator for Disaster Assistance James Rivera; JAX Chamber of Commerce President and CEO Daniel Davis; and University of Houston Research Professor Dr Steve Lawrence Location: Russell Senate Office Building, Rm 428A, Washington, DC <http://sbc.senate.gov/>

US House: 9:00 AM House GOP hold ‘member retreat on tax reform’ – ‘House Republican member retreat on tax reform’ held at National Defense University at Fort McNair (9:00 AM EDT, no media access), followed by news conference at the U.S. Capitol (around 3:00 PM EDT) * President Donald Trump is today releasing details on a framework for tax cuts and reforms which he and bicameral Congressional Republicans have developed, via remarks in Indianapolis Location: Washington, DC www.speaker.gov <https://twitter.com/SpeakerRyan>

9:30 AM CANCELED: Oversight hearing on ‘Empowering State Based Management Solutions for Greater Sage Grouse Recovery’ Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/NatResources>

9:30 AM Dem Rep. Ted Deutch’s Washington Summit for South Florida business and community leaders continues – Democratic Rep. Ted Deutch hosts Washington Summit for South Florida business and community leaders continues, to cover issues including boating safety regulations, customs and border protection, immigration policy, tax reform, Pell Grants, Port Everglades improvement projects, climate change resiliency plans, and other local and national topics. Speakers today include members of bipartisan, bicameral members Florida’s congressional delegation include Sen. Marco Rubio and Reps. Mario Diaz-Balart, Charlie Crist, Matt Gaetz, Alcee

Hastings, Cathy Castor, Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, Lois Frankel and Dennis Ross, and Pennsylvania's Republican Rep. Tim Murphy Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, First St NE, Washington, DC teddeutch.house.gov <https://twitter.com/repteddeutch>

10:00 AM POSTPONED: House Infrastructure subcommittee hearing on highways and transit stakeholders' perspectives – POSTPONED: Highways and Transit Subcommittee hearing on 'Building a 21st Century Infrastructure for America: Highways and Transit Stakeholders' Perspectives' Location: Rm 2167, Rayburn House Office Bldg, Washington, DC <http://transportation.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/Transport>

10:00 AM NO LONGER ON CALENDAR: House Foreign Affairs subcommittees joint hearing on budget proposal for AfPak – NO LONGER ON CALENDAR: Middle East and North Africa Subcommittee and Asia and the Pacific Subcommittee joint hearing on 'The President's FY 2018 Budget Request for Afghanistan and Pakistan', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of State for South and Central Asian Affairs Alice Wells; and USAID Office of Afghanistan and Pakistan Affairs Administrator's Assistant Gregory Huger Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

12:30 PM Minnesota rural health care providers speak at Congressional briefings on opioid reduction efforts – Representatives of CHI St. Gabriel's Health – a rural health care provider serving Little Falls, MN – testify to Congressional leaders on its successful opioid reduction initiative, following an invitation from Democrats Sen. Al Franken and Rep. Rick Nolan. House of Representatives staff briefing in Rm 121, Cannon House Office Building (12:30 PM EDT) followed by Senate staff briefing in Rm G11, Dirksen Senate Office Building (2:30 PM EDT) Location: U.S. Capitol, Washington, DC <http://www.mnhospitals.org/> <https://twitter.com/MNHospitals>

2:00 PM Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on Nigeria – Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission hearing on 'Nigeria: Conflict in the Middle Belt', examining the international community's role in helping the Nigerian Govt address the violent attacks and widespread human rights abuses involved in the ongoing inter-communal conflict between predominately-Muslim cattle-herding nomadic groups and mostly-Christian settled farming populations. Witnesses – International Crisis Group Deputy Program Director for Africa EJ Hogendorf, U.S. Institute of Peace Senior Program Officer for Africa Programs Oge Onubogu, Search for Common Ground Conflict Analyst for Nigeria Olubukola Ademola-Adelehin, and 21st Century Wilberforce Initiative Executive Director Elijah Brown – present testimony on the human rights challenges in the Middle Belt and explore possible solutions Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2255, Washington, DC <http://tlhrc.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/TLHRCCommission>

2:00 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Rwanda – Africa, Global Health, Global Human Rights, and International Organizations Subcommittee hearing on 'Rwanda: Democracy Thwarted', with testimony from Acting Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs Donald Yamamoto; Democracy in Rwanda Now Coordinator for the U.S. (and former Rwanda Defense Force Major) Robert Higiro, and Coordinator for Canada David Himbara; and Search for Common Ground Africa Programs Manager Mike Jobbins Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2200, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

2:00 PM House Ways and Means Committee Democrats hold forum on tax reform – House Committee on Ways and Means Democratic forum on tax reform, held by Ranking Member Richard Neal and other Democratic members, along with House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi and other House Democrats. Panelists include author Bruce Bartlett, Washington Center for Equitable Growth Executive Director and Chief Economist Heather Boushey, Center for American Progress Senior Fellow Seth Hanlon, and Center on Budget and Policy Priorities Deputy Director of Federal Tax Policy Chye-Ching Huang * President Donald Trump is today releasing details on a framework for tax cuts and reforms, developed with bicameral Congressional Republicans, via remarks in Indianapolis Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, HVC 215, Washington, DC <http://democrats.waysandmeans.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/WaysMeansCmte>

2:00 PM NO LONGER ON CALENDAR: Health Care, Benefits, and Administrative Rules Subcommittee hearing on 'Cybersecurity of the Internet of Things' Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2154, Washington, DC <http://oversight.house.gov/> <https://twitter.com/GOPoversight>

2:30 PM House Armed Services subcommittee hearing on U.S. Army tactical network modernization – Tactical Air and Land Forces Subcommittee hearing on 'The Army's Tactical Network Modernization Strategy', with testimony from U.S. Army Deputy Chief of Staff (G-6) Lt. Gen. Bruce Crawford; U.S. Army Combined Arms Center Mission Command Center of Excellence Director Maj. Gen. James Mingus; and Department of the Army Program Executive Officer for Command, Control and Communications-Tactical Gary Martin Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2212, Washington, DC www.armedservices.house.gov

<https://twitter.com/HASCRepublicans>

2:30 PM House Foreign Affairs subcommittee hearing on Burma – Asia and the Pacific Subcommittee hearing on ‘Burma’s Brutal Campaign Against the Rohingya’, with testimony from Heritage Foundation Davis Institute for National Security and Foreign Policy Asian Studies Center Director Walter Lohman; Refugees International Senior Advocate for Human Rights Daniel Sullivan; Congressional Research Service Foreign Affairs, Defense, and Trade Division Specialist in Asian Affairs Dr Michael Martin; and U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum Simon-Skjodt Center for the Prevention of Genocide Program Manager Andrea Gittleman Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2172, Washington, DC <http://www.hcfa.house.gov>
<https://twitter.com/HouseForeign>

3:00 PM House Natural Resources subcommittee oversight hearing on reducing catastrophic wildfire risk – Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee oversight hearing on ‘Exploring Solutions to Reduce Risks of Catastrophic Wildfire and Improve Resiliency of National Forests’, with testimony from Ravalli County, MT, Commissioner Greg Chilcott; Geos Institute Chief Scientist Dr Dominick DellaSala; American Forest Resource Council General Counsel Lawson Fite; and Yakama Nation Intertribal Timber Council President Philip Rigdon Location: Longworth House Office Building, Rm 1334, Washington, DC <http://naturalresources.house.gov>
<https://twitter.com/NatResources>

3:00 PM House Veterans’ Affairs subcommittee hearing on GI Bill-approved apprenticeship programs – Economic Opportunity Subcommittee hearing on ‘How to Improve Access to GI Bill Approved Apprenticeship Programs and How these Programs Benefit Veterans’ Location: Cannon House Office Building, Rm 334, Washington, DC <http://veterans.house.gov/>
<https://twitter.com/HouseVetAffairs>

3:00 PM House Financial Services subcommittee hearing on the Family Self-Sufficiency Program – Housing and Insurance Subcommittee hearing on ‘Overview of the Family Self-Sufficiency Program’, with testimony from Preservation of Affordable Housing President and CEO Aaron Gornstein; Abt Associates Director of Housing and Community Initiatives Jeffrey Lubell; Housing Opportunities Commission of Montgomery County Executive Director Stacy Spann; Housing Partnership Network Senior Vice President for Policy Kristin Siglin; and Compass Working Capital Executive Director Sherry Riva Location: Rayburn House Office Building, Rm 2128, Washington, DC <http://financialservices.house.gov> <https://twitter.com/FinancialCmte>

4:00 PM House meets for legislative business – House of Representatives meets for legislative business, with agenda expected to include the consideration of ‘S. 327 – Fair Access to Investment Research Act of 2017’ and ‘H.R. 3229 – To protect the safety of judges by extending the authority of the Judicial Conference to redact sensitive information contained in their financial disclosure reports, and for other purposes’ under suspension of the rules Location: Washington, DC <http://www.house.gov/>

Other: 9:00 AM Washington Ideas Forum continues – Washington Ideas Forum, hosted by The Atlantic in partnership with the Aspen Institute, continues. ‘Leaders from politics and govt to business and culture’ convene to ‘tackle the issues confronting the country and the world, including politics and policy, economics and trade, race and justice, education, global affairs, technology, and beyond’. Speakers today include Secretary of Veterans Affairs David Shulkin, The Boeing Company Chairman of the Board, President and CEO Dennis Muilenberg, Newsmax CEO Christopher Ruddy, American Federation of Teachers President Randi Weingarten, Robert Wood Johnson Foundation CEO Richard Besser, Paradigm Founder and CEO Joelle Emerson, The Allstate Corporation Chairman and CEO Tom Wilson, Smithsonian National Museum of African American History and Culture Director Lonnie Bunch, WeWork Co-founder and CEO Adam Neuman, The VR Company Founder and CEO Guy Primus, and The Washington Post Executive Editor Martin Baron Location: Sidney Harman Hall, 610 F St NW, Washington, DC WashingtonIdeas.com
<https://twitter.com/WashingtonIdeas> #WashingtonIdeas

9:15 AM Dem Rep. Richard Neal speaks at FSR discussion on tax reform – Financial Services Roundtable discussion on ‘How tax reform can secure the futures of America’s workers’, with Democratic Rep. Richard Neal, Putnam Investments CEO Robert Reynolds, and a panel discussion on what policymakers can do to better help the nation’s workers, with former Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Retirement and Health Policy J. Mark Iwry, Employee Benefit Research Institute President and CEO Harry Conaway, American Enterprise Institute Senior Economic Fellow James Pethokoukis, and Wholesale Distribution of Transamerica Vice President and Managing Director Chad Brown Location: Financial Services Roundtable, 600 13th St NW, Washington, DC www.fsround.org <https://twitter.com/fsroundtable>

1:00 PM Dem Sen. Michael Bennet speaks on ‘incentives that distort Congress’ – Center for American Progress hosts ‘Distortion and Dysfunction: Incentives Facing the U.S. Congress’

armchair discussion with Democratic Sen. Michael Bennet, who addresses the range of incentives that distort Congress and feed dysfunction, from the effects of money in elections to revolving door politics, growing partisanship, and other factors Location: Center for American Progress, 1333 H St NW, Washington, DC www.americanprogress.org <https://twitter.com/amprog>

1:00 PM VA Secretary Shulkin at briefing on research on suicide prevention – Friends of VA Medical Care and Health Research (FOVA) briefing on ‘The Science of Veteran Suicide: VA Research in Prevention and Intervention’, with presenters Secretary of Veterans Affairs David Shulkin, Rocky Mountain VA Medical Center Mental Illness Research Education and Clinical Center Director Dr Lisa Brenner, Canandaigua VA Medical Center Center of Excellence for Suicide Prevention Executive Director Dr Wilfred Pigeon, and Portland VA Medical Center Center to improve Veterans’ Involvement in Care (CIVIC) Director Steven Dobscha Location: U.S. Capitol Visitor Center, SVC 201-200, Washington, DC <http://www.friendsofva.org/>

2:00 PM Dems Sen. Tom Udall and Rep. David Price speak on money in politics at Brookings – ‘Democracy at risk: Solving critical problems threatening U.S. elections’ Brookings Institution discussion on ‘solutions to the systemic problems facing democracy, the barriers that exist to achieving these solutions, and how they can be overcome’. Panelists include Democrats Sen. Tom Udall and Rep. David Price, Democracy 21 President Fred Wertheimer, Common Cause President Karen Hobert Flynn, and former Chief G.W. Bush White House Ethics Lawyer and University of Minnesota Law School Professor Richard Painter Location: The Brookings Institution, 1775 Massachusetts Ave NW, Washington, DC <http://www.brookings.edu> #MoneyinPolitics

6:00 PM The Hill hosts celebration of Latino leaders in honor of Hispanic Heritage Month – The Hill hosts ‘The Changing Face of America: Celebrating Latino Leaders’, in honor of Hispanic Heritage Month, with Democratic Reps. Michelle Lujan Grisham and Joaquin Castro and Republican Reps. David Valado and Will Hurd discussing how Congress addresses issues important to the Hispanic community Location: WeWork Dupont Circle, 1875 Connecticut Ave NW, Washington, DC thehill.com #TheHillLatino

6:00 PM IAVA Salutes Awards Reception – Iraq and Afghanistan Veterans of America Salutes Awards Reception honoring ABC News Chief Global Affairs Correspondent Martha Raddatz (IAVA Salutes Award for Leadership in Journalism) and Democratic Rep. Tulsi Gabbard (IAVA Salutes Award for Leadership in Government) Location: Recording Industry Association, 1025 F St NW, Washington, DC iava.org <https://twitter.com/iava>

6:30 PM Partnership for Public Service annual Sammies gala – Partnership for Public Service 2017 Samuel J. Heyman Service to America Medals (Sammies) awards ceremony, paying tribute to seven ‘public servants who have improved the lives of Americans and others around the world’. CBS’ ‘Face the Nation’ chief Washington correspondent and moderator John Dickerson hosts, with presenters and distinguished guests including Secretary of the Treasury Steven Mnuchin, Secretary of Veterans Affairs David Shulkin and Deputy Secretary Thomas Bowman, Office of Management and Budget Director Mick Mulvaney, bipartisan Reps. Debbie Dingell, Blake Farenthold, Eleanor Holmes Norton, David Price, and Keith Rothfus, National Institutes of Health Director Francis Collins, General Services Administration Acting Administrator Tim Horne, Office of Personnel Management Acting Director Kathleen McGettigan, author Michael Lewis, Segway inventor Dean Kamen, President’s Assistant and Director of Strategic Initiatives Chris Liddell, and Deputy National Security Advisor for Strategy Dina Powell Location: Andrew W. Mellon Auditorium, 1301 Constitution Ave NW, Washington, DC www.ourpublicservice.org #Sammies2017

Last Laughs

Late Night Political Humor.

Jimmy Kimmel: “The Graham-Cassidy Healthcare Bill, a bill I’ve been speaking out against all week, did not pass. Senator McConnell decided to pull the vote. They didn’t have the votes. I haven’t been this excited about something being dead since Bin Laden.”

Stephen Colbert: “The GOP plan to repeal Obamacare is officially dead! Got nothing, no pulse. No. They pulled the plug. That is something I’ve said three times now.”

Stephen Colbert: “In addition to the countries named in the first executive order, the revised travel ban was expanded to include people from Chad, North Korea, Venezuela, and the Golden State Warriors.”

James Corden: "The Cowboys knelt before the national anthem as a protest, but then stood while it was being played. Isn't that trying to have it both ways? Like 'I'm on a hunger strike but only between meals.' ... Conservatives immediately blasted the move, saying it disrespected the sacred minutes before the national anthem, which are for peeing and buying nachos."

James Corden: "Yesterday, officials confirmed that at least six of President Trump's closest advisers used private email to discuss official White House business. In a related story, Hillary Clinton was hospitalized today after rolling her eyes so hard she threw her back out."

Trevor Noah: "We shouldn't get too happy because this isn't the first time we have been told it's dead. Like it might be really sick, but it keeps surviving. You know what it's like? It's almost as if the Republican health bill also has Obamacare."

Trevor Noah: "You know, here on the Daily Show, we work really hard to get the facts right. But we're not perfect. So tonight, I'm sorry to say that we have to issue a rare the Daily Show retraction. ... So last night, we reported an official in Trump's White House, Jared Kushner, used a private email account to conduct official White House business, and that statement was wrong. It wasn't an official. It was many officials."

Jimmy Fallon: "When he heard the GOP healthcare bill failed again, Trump said, 'You're not going to believe it, but I think I have to take a knee for this.'"

Seth Meyers: "Senate Republicans announced today they will not hold a vote on the Graham-Cassidy Bill to repeal and replace Obamacare, after they were unable to secure enough support. But Republicans plan to come back with a new plan, where they just slash the tires on all the ambulances."

Seth Meyers: "After President Trump called for pro athletes to be fired if they didn't stand for the national anthem, Nike released a statement yesterday in support of athletes and their right to freedom of expression. Then they introduced a new line of $400 kneeling shoes."

Conan O'Brien: "An employee for the Buffalo Bills quit after the entire team took a knee during the national anthem on Sunday. Meanwhile, an employee for the Los Angeles Chargers quit after watching them play on Sunday."

Copyright 2017 by Bulletin Intelligence LLC Reproduction or redistribution without permission prohibited. Content is drawn from thousands of newspapers, national magazines, national and local television programs, radio broadcasts, social-media platforms and additional forms of open-source data. Sources for Bulletin Intelligence audience-size estimates include Scarborough, GfK MRI, comScore, Nielsen, and the Audit Bureau of Circulation. Data from and access to third party social media platforms, including but not limited to Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and others, is subject to the respective platform's terms of use. Services that include Factiva content are governed by Factiva's terms of use. Services including embedded Tweets are also subject to Twitter for Website's information and privacy policies. The Department of the Interior News Briefing is published five days a week by Bulletin Intelligence, which creates custom briefings for government and corporate leaders. We can be found on the Web at BulletinIntelligence.com, or called at (703) 483-6100.

From: POLITICO Pro
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; POLITICO subscriptions
Subject: U.S., Mexico set aside Trump tensions for Colorado River deal
Date: Friday, September 29, 2017 5:06:53 AM

U.S., Mexico set aside Trump tensions for Colorado River deal

By Esther Whieldon

09/29/2017 05:02 AM EDT

The water-sharing pact signed this week by the U.S. and Mexico emerged despite tensions caused by President Donald Trump's policies on immigration and trade, showing the negotiators' willingness to take on problems caused by shrinking supplies from the Colorado River, according to western water experts.

That deal signed Wednesday was supported by state water agencies and major users in both countries, and sets out procedures to reduce off-take during times of drought that are expected to persist for the foreseeable future.

"Water is the lifeblood of this region," Jennifer Pitt, Colorado River Project director for the National Audubon Society, said in an interview. "It is fundamentally important to the economies of southwestern U.S. and northwestern Mexico. ... It's just too important for the two countries not to have good relations over [it] and not have a plan in place about how to manage supplies reliably for that enormous population."

Representatives from the International Boundary and Water Commission of the United States and Mexico signed the pact, called Minute 323, that largely carries forward for another nine years a prior agreement that was due to expire this year. Water levels at the Colorado River's most important reservoir, Lake Mead, have been plummeting, and both the U.S. and Mexico could have faced the threat of mandatory supply cuts starting as early as next year.

The river supplies drinking water to tens of millions of people in both countries and irrigation for millions of acres of agriculture, both of which would suffer unless the countries reached a deal.

Federal officials failed to sign a deal before the end of the Obama administration, raising fears that Trump's calls to build a wall along the Mexican border and the reopening of NAFTA would undo years of progress in the negotiations. But the officials, supported by state water agencies and Mexico water license holders, knew they had to reach a deal or risk years of litigation in a crisis that would force them to choose between cutting off water supplies to farms and sensitive wildlife habitats or to major population centers.

"In a crisis, you would have winners and losers, and some of the biggest losers would be agriculture and the environment," said Ted Kowalski, director of the Colorado River initiative at the Walton Family Foundation. "I think it's highly unlikely the Bureau of Reclamation is going to turn off the city of Las Vegas or the city of Phoenix."

So the officials continued plodding away at negotiations, hoping the Trump administration would in the end agree to a deal.

The water agency officials were "largely insulated from the political conversation between Washington, D.C., and Mexico," said Chuck Cullom, Colorado River programs manager for the Central Arizona Project. The water managers "focused on providing the greatest benefits for the country and the communities ... rather than the political winds that might be blowing in a number of directions," he said in an interview.

The basin states made reaching a deal a top priority this year, according to Pitt.

"There's a long-standing balance of power between the states and the federal government on the Colorado River where the federal government tries to as much as possible defer to the states, who are really the owners of the water. So as the states made it clear to the incoming administration this was a priority, the administration said, 'We will support you on this,'" she said.

A key sticking point in the negotiations had been Mexico's insistence that the lower basin states of California, Arizona and Nevada first agree to a drought contingency plan under which they would voluntarily conserve additional water beyond mandatory cuts in order to increase reservoir levels.

Mexico officials were worried they would be left holding the bag if a water crisis occurred before the states reached a deal. But Mexico eventually agreed to make additional cuts once the states pass a contingency plan.

Mexico is very dependent on the upstream dams in the U.S. for its water delivery, since a 2010 earthquake damaged its dams. But Mexico also took the position that the original 1944 treaty between the countries only required it to cut supplies if the U.S. suffered extreme drought, a vague term that left too much open to interpretation.

"That was a big concession for Mexico to follow our lead," said Tom Buschatzke, director of the Arizona Department of Water Resources. But the U.S. also agreed to fund $31.5 million in water efficiency projects in Mexico through 2026 and to explore the possibility of investing in a desalinization plant that could help address future water supply challenges.

What made the deal possible is "the hard work that long preceded Trump," said Stephen Mumme, a political science professor at Colorado State University. "This is a classic example of ... a situation where not doing it could be really costly, and the sheer complexity of the number of players and the importance of the U.S. stake in this policy arena really overrode the Trump administration," he said.

"It's a good example in my mind of the limits of rhetorical breast beating and name calling and wall building."

To view online:

<https://www.politicopro.com/agriculture/story/2017/09/us-mexico-set-aside-trump-tensions-for-colorado-river-deal-162721>

Was this Pro content helpful? Tell us what you think in one click.

Yes, very

Somewhat

Neutral

Not really

Not at all

You received this POLITICO Pro content because your customized settings include:
Energy: Conservation. To change your alert settings, please go to <https://www.politicopro.com/settings>

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd.
Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

From: POLITICO Pro Energy
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; POLITICO subscriptions
Subject: "UGH!": Zinke's wife's travel caused some headaches for Interior staff
Date: Monday, November 20, 2017 5:05:41 AM

'UGH!': Zinke's wife's travel caused some headaches for Interior staff

By Ben Lefebvre

11/20/2017 05:03 AM EDT

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's wife caused some frustration for Interior staffers when traveling with him on official business, according to new records that a liberal watchdog group says uncover the potential misuse of government resources.

The records document Lola Zinke's last-minute requests to join high-level dinners and additions to the guest list for a conservative group's event near their home in Southern California earlier this year. The Western Values Project filed a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit last month to force Interior to release more than 100 pages of documents related to Lola Zinke's trips with her husband and interactions with Interior staff. Shared first with POLITICO, the documents shed new light on the outsize profile Lola Zinke has established compared with the typical Cabinet secretary's spouse, including her dictating people to invite to a town hall hosted by the conservative Young America's Foundation for her husband.

New emails also reveal a celebratory dinner the Zinkes attended that was organized in part by a major GOP donor who gave heavily to Ryan Zinke's congressional campaigns. And they show Interior staffers had to accommodate a last-minute request for her to join the secretary at an official dinner with Alaska's governor. The records cover two trips Lola Zinke joined in the first three months of her husband's tenure as well as some other interactions with Interior staff, such as coordinating her attendance at a White House briefing for Cabinet members' spouses.

While the department says Lola Zinke paid her own way, the records show Interior used staff time to coordinate some of her activities while traveling with her husband. And the trips gave her access to high-level politicians and GOP activists and donors who could benefit her as a political operator in her own right.

"These emails show that the leadership at the Department of Interior treats basic ethical standards like an inconvenience," Western Values Project Executive Director Chris Saeger said. "If Secretary Zinke is willing to be so sloppy with something as elementary as this, then god only knows how they're handling big decisions about energy and public lands behind closed doors."

Interior says Lola Zinke pays her own way when she accompanies her husband and that travel is cleared by ethics officials in advance.

"DOI incurred no expenses due to Mrs. Zinke's presence" with the secretary, Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift said in an email Friday.

Interior's inspector general and the independent Office of Special Counsel are investigating the former Montana congressman and Navy SEAL's travel expenses and appearance at political events while on official trips, including those where he was accompanied by his wife. Last week, the IG's office said it could not conduct a thorough investigation because Interior had kept inadequate records. Among other problems, the watchdog said it had "not been able to determine the full extent to which Lolita Zinke, the Secretary's wife, accompanied the Secretary on official travel." Interior officials blamed the shortcomings on inadequate procedures left in place by the Obama administration.

The new records show the secretary's wife helped decide the guest list for a Young America's Foundation town hall forum with Ryan Zinke on April 17 at its Reagan Ranch in Santa Barbara, Calif., part of a weeklong official trip in the state. Lola Zinke joined her husband for national parks tours and meetings with government officials throughout the week, as well as for a private tour of the Reagan Ranch galleries led by Andrew Coffin, YAF's vice president.

Lola Zinke sent a "list of people I have invited to the event" to two Interior staffers, according to a series of April 7 emails. Caroline Boulton, a special assistant to the secretary, forwarded the list on to an official at YAF, with a warning that more could be added. Interior redacted the names of Zinke's guests before releasing the email.

"She's expecting some of them to bring plus ones and also her list is not yet final," Boulton wrote. "She's said that she doesn't have emails for them all since many of them have been personally told about the event, but I wanted you to have the list!"

YAF is a key pillar of the conservative movement with alumni ranging from White House officials to prominent journalists. The group's donors have reportedly included the Koch brothers, among others.

Lola Zinke is active in conservative politics. The Santa Barbara native was a member of President Donald Trump's Hispanic outreach team during the 2016 campaign, and in September she became chairwoman for the Senate campaign of Troy Downing, a Montana businessman hoping to unseat Sen. Jon Tester next year.

Lola had previously faced criticism for accompanying her husband on the California trip. She posted a photograph on Twitter from Gov. Jerry Brown's office and accompanied her husband to meetings with DOI regional staff in Sacramento and trips to Fresno and the national parks at Yosemite, Sequoia and Kings Canyon, the trip manifests show.

The trip also included five days in Santa Barbara and then four days in Zinke's hometown in Whitefish, Mont., an upscale part of the state where the couple owns a home and other real estate.

The secretary bringing his wife along on official trips isn't illegal as long as the government doesn't pay for her expenses. But it can be an ethically gray area, depending on the circumstances, said Craig Holman, government affairs lobbyist with good-governance watchdog Public Citizen.

"Spousal travel, especially when paid for by the spouse, suggests that the trip may have less to do with official duties and more resembles a family vacation partially paid for by taxpayers," Holman said.

When Lola Zinke joined an official trip to Norway, Greenland and Alaska, she appears to have caused some headaches by deciding to stay longer than expected. Ryan Zinke sent his staff scrambling to make last-minute arrangements so she could accompany him to dinner with the governor of Alaska and other dignitaries in Anchorage, according to new emails.

Interior staffers apparently found out about the change in plans second-hand from an aide to Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-Alaska), who also was on the trip, along with other senators and their spouses, according to a May 27 email from Director of Scheduling and Advance Russell Roddy to other colleagues at Interior — one day before Lola Zinke had been scheduled to return to Washington.

"I have heard that Mrs. Zinke was now maybe not going to fly out from Fairbanks Sunday morning ... so, I asked Annie if she happened to talk to Mrs. Zinke about her plans. She said Mrs. Zinke said she was now going to head to Byers Lake and Anchorage with RKZ and fly out of Anchorage on Tuesday," Roddy wrote. "UGH! We have all kinds of planes, trains and automobiles manifests to now scramble with."

It is unclear what led to the change in plans. Before the trip, Lola Zinke had apparently been trying to secure a seat on a military plane back to Washington, but the Senate staffer coordinating the trip told Interior that it would be a "safer bet" for her to fly commercial because Ryan Zinke would not be with her. The military typically does not like when members of Congress try to get their spouses on military planes without the member being present, according to an email from Boulton relaying guidance she had received. "There's a lot of ifs in that, so let me know if you want me to keep pushing on the" military return flight, Boulton wrote to Lola Zinke on May 18.

Lola Zinke joined her husband at a May 29 dinner in Anchorage with Alaska Gov. Bill Walker and other state officials.

"The Secretary personally paid the State of Alaska for Mrs. Zinke's meal," Swift said. Lola Zinke flew home on a commercial flight from Anchorage the following day.

Lola Zinke also accompanied her husband to an April 10 dinner in Washington that was organized with the help of one of his past campaign donors, Burt Sugarman, who has donated heavily to Republicans.

"We are very excited that Sec Zinke accepted the event," wrote Phil Anderson, president of lobbying firm Navigators Global who helped organize the April 10 dinner sponsored by the National Geographic Society, in a March 24 email to Boulton. "As you know, Burt Sugarman first discussed the dinner with Sec Zinke."

Sugarman and his wife, the former Entertainment Tonight anchor Mary Hart, are members of the National Geographic Society's board of directors.

The Sugarmans gave a combined $10,800 to Zinke's 2016 congressional campaign, out of more than $180,000 they gave to GOP candidates and committees in the last election cycle, according to FEC documents.

On April 27, Lola Zinke was invited to an ethics briefing at the White House for Cabinet spouses. "They stressed the importance of attending since important ethics rules will [be] discussed and questions can be answered by White House counsel," Boulton wrote in an email to Lola Zinke.

"Thank you!" she replied. "It's a good thing I'll be in town then."

To view online:

<https://www.politicopro.com/energy/article/2017/11/ugh-zinkes-wifes-travel-caused-some-headaches-for-interior-staff-170805>

Was this Pro content helpful? Tell us what you think in one click.

Yes, very	Somewhat	Neutral	Not really	Not at all

You received this POLITICO Pro content because your customized settings include: Energy: Energy Influence; Energy: Ryan Zinke; Energy: Interior Department. To change your alert settings, please go to <https://www.politicopro.com/settings>

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd. Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

From: <smf53@aol.com>
To: huntrgrp@aol.com
Subject: UNITER NOT DIVIDER
Date: Monday, October 09, 2017 9:49:05 PM

<!--[if !vml]--><!--[endif]-->

COLUMBUS – UNITER NOT DIVIDER

By Scot Faulkner
304-716-6235
smf53@aol.com

[Published in Newsmax]

Columbus and his achievements are about unity. The forces of political correctness have no idea what they are talking about.

Columbus' discovery of the Western Hemisphere permanently reconnected the Earth for the first time since the Pangea super continent broke apart 175 million years ago.

A brief period of record low sea levels, caused by the last Ice Age, allowed pre-history humans to migrate into the Americas from Europe around 20,000 BC. An Asian land bridge opened another short-lived migration corridor along the Alaskan coast in 12,000 BC. The indigenous people of the Americas were actually its "first immigrants". Rising seas then sealed them off from the rest of the world.

It was inevitable that humankind would ultimately reconnect. It was only a matter of time. The Viking sagas chronicle exploration and fishing settlements in Newfoundland around 1,000 AD. This is when warmer global temperatures made Greenland and the Arctic waters suitable for navigation and far northern lands viable for habitation. Others may have stumbled upon the Americas, but their interactions were short lived and isolated. The reunification of Earth would have to wait another 400 years.

Unique forces of economics, history, and knowledge eventually led to reunifying humankind and the world's ecosystems.

The events that set Columbus and his three ships towards destiny began with the fall of Constantinople on May 29, 1453 to the Ottoman Empire. The Islamic Ottomans took control of all the overland connections to India and China. They made the Silk Road, and other lucrative trade links to the East, prohibitively expensive and problematic.

In 1412, the Portuguese began methodically establishing an alternative sea-based trade route to Asia. In 1488, Bartholomew Diaz rounded the Cape of Good Hope. Portugal, with its line of African forts and massive fleet, aspired to join the Ottomans in controlling Asian trade.

No other European power was capable of competing against these two international forces as most were locked in internal strife or were content with being regional powers.

On January 2, 1492, Spain defeated the last Islamic forces on the Iberian Peninsula. The dual monarchy of Ferdinand and Isabella turned their vision of conquest to competing with Portugal.

Christopher Columbus was uniquely situated to make the Spanish Monarchs' dream come true. Besides being a skilled seaman, Columbus was a highly astute scholar. He spent years acquiring knowledge about the Atlantic Ocean, including what would become known as its "trade winds", which would speed travel.

Columbus was at the center of the debate over the size of the Earth. Educated people knew the Earth was round, but they differed on its size. No ship's crew could be provisioned to sail west over a vast ocean all the way to China. Columbus was armed with knowledge of the Vikings and knew a large land mass was much closer than current wisdom assumed. His mistake was thinking it was Asia, not an entire undiscovered hemisphere.

Columbus convinced the Spanish Monarchs it was good business and a wise investment to underwrite an expedition sailing west into the unexplored areas of the Atlantic Ocean. The Monarchs knew that Spain would become a major world power by building their own trade monopoly if Columbus was successful.

Starting on August 3, 1492, the single most pivotal action in the Earth's human history began. On October 12, 1492, Columbus and his landing party stepped onto a Caribbean beach and nothing would ever be the same.

The "Columbian Exchange" fundamentally altered the Earth's ecosystem and its human history. The "New World" introduced dietary staples like corn, potatoes, peanuts, tomatoes, squash, pumpkins, pineapples, avocados. "Old World" domesticated animals such as horses, pigs, cattle, cows, and goats fanned out through the Americas, while onions, lettuce, peaches, wheat, rice, sugar, and apples took root.

Detractors scoff, stating that the people of the Americas knew where they were and did not need to be discovered. Anti-Columbus historians decry the spread of disease and conquest that devastated the first peoples of the Americas. Reunifying the world after 175 million years had irreversible consequences, good and bad. None of Americas' cultures had a maritime tradition outside of brief fishing and hunting sojourns within sight of land. Reunifying the Earth was only going to happen from the "Old World". The mingling of flora and fauna created impacts that resonate to this day.

Columbus is rightly recognized as the person who changed the world. He embodies humanity's striving to acquire and apply knowledge, and our desire to explore. Many South American nations, along with Italy and Spain, celebrate Columbus and the day everything changed.

The United State celebrated the 300th Anniversary of this epic moment in 1792. It became our nation's official holiday in 1937.

We should be honoring this unifying moment in history instead of trying to erase it.

[Scot Faulkner advises corporations and governments on how to save billions of dollars by achieving dramatic and sustainable cost reductions while improving operational and service excellence. He served as the Chief Administrative Officer of the U.S. House of Representatives. He also served on the White House Staff, and as an Executive Branch Appointee.]

From: Tara Sweeney
To: Mashburn, Lori
Subject: Update
Date: Monday, September 25, 2017 6:05:12 PM

Hi Lori,

I heard from Senator Sullivan, through some of his conversations, that there is discussion about whether to do an announcement in two weeks or during the Secretary's live feed during the AFN conference. Can you confirm?

I ask because I am scheduled to go to Iceland for work during the AFN convention, and if I need to be present during that time- I need to notify the event organizers in Iceland that I cannot participate in the scheduled discussions. I also need to let the Arctic Economic Council executive committee know as I am also scheduled to participate in the next phase of the strategic planning for the organization. It will also take place the week of AFN.

Any assistance and guidance you may have is appreciated. I hope all is well!

Regards,
Tara

From: Getto, Leila
To: Lori Mashburn
Subject: updates in bold
Date: Thursday, November 16, 2017 1:20:00 PM

Accepted:

11/21 – US Marine Corps Unveiling of the Iraq and Afghanistan engraving at Iwo Jima

12/16 - National Wreaths Across America Day (Arlington National Cemetery)

Open (date TBC)- Americans for Tax Reform (DC)

Open (date TBC)- Detroit Economic Club

~~Event Postponed by organizers due to fire - 10/21 – DEPA BOD Meeting (CA)~~

Outstanding Invitations in Process:

1/26-28 – Houston Safari Club Annual Meeting (Houston, TX)

1/29 – Society of Range Management Annual Meeting (Reno, Nevada)

Declining

11/14 – George Rogers Clark National Historical Park Quarter Launch (Vincennes, Indiana)

11/15 Motorcycle Industry Council Symposium (Carson, CA)

11/29 Association of California Water Agencies 2017 Fall Conference and Exhibition (Anaheim, CA)

12/1-2 – Western Governors Association Annual Meeting (Phoenix, AZ)

12/5-7 America Outdoors Association's 29th Annual Marketing and Management Conference for Outfitters and Adventure Resorts (Reno, NV)

12/5 – NY Stock Exchange Ringing of the Bell & remarks at Wells Fargo Financial Symposium Event (NYC)

12/6 American Exploration and Mining Association Annual Meeting (Reno, NV)

12/8 - Valley Industry and Commerce Association Annual Meeting (Los Angeles, CA)

12/11 – Veterans Day Commemoration (Prussia, PA)

12/14 – Leadership Missoula (Missoula, Montana)

12/8 – DOI Toastmasters event (Washington, DC)

12/9 – Western Caucus Foundation Winter Policy Meeting (Las Vegas, NV)

1/11/18 – EEI CEO and Board Conference (Phoenix, AZ)

2/9-10 Associated General Contractors Western Chapter Annual Meeting (La Jolla, CA)

2/23/18 – West Slope Colorado Oil and Gas Association Annual Meeting (Grand Junction, CO)

Leila Sepehri Getto
U.S. Department of the Interior
Immediate Office of the Secretary
Deputy Director, Scheduling and Advance
Direct: (202) 208-5359
Cell: (202) 706-9435

From: Getto, Leila
To: Lori Mashburn
Subject: updates in bold -- thank you!
Date: Tuesday, December 12, 2017 11:43:22 AM

Accepted:

12/16 - National Wreaths Across America Day (Arlington National Cemetery)

1/22 – Alaska Federation of Natives - Challenges at America’s Northernmost Border

2/9 – Western Hunting & Conservation Expo (Salt Lake City, Utah)

3/6-7 – CERA Week (Houston, Texas)

Open (date TBC)- Americans for Tax Reform (DC)

Open (date TBC)- Detroit Economic Club

Outstanding Invitations in Process:

1/12-13 – Montana Outfitters and Guides Association Winter Convention (Helena, MT)

1/13 – Battle of Cowpens 237th Anniversary Event

1/23-26 National Shooting and Sports Foundation Annual SHOT Show (Las Vegas, NV)

1/26-28 – Houston Safari Club Annual Meeting (Houston, TX)

1/29 – Society of Range Management Annual Meeting (Reno, Nevada)

1/31-2/3 Safari Club International Annual Meeting (Las Vegas, NV)

2/8- Texas Public Policy Foundation Policy Orientation (Austin, TX)

2/12 – The Corps Network National Conference (Washington, DC)

Declining

12/11 – Veterans Day Commemoration (Prussia, PA)

12/14 – Leadership Missoula (Missoula, Montana)

12/8 – DOI Toastmasters event (Washington, DC)

12/9 – Western Caucus Foundation Winter Policy Meeting (Las Vegas, NV)

1/4 – Dallas Safari Club Annual Meeting (Dallas, TX)

1/11/18 – EEI CEO and Board Conference (Phoenix, AZ)

2/9-10 Associated General Contractors Western Chapter Annual Meeting (La Jolla, CA)

2/23/18 – West Slope Colorado Oil and Gas Association Annual Meeting (Grand Junction, CO)

Leila Sepehri Getto
U.S. Department of the Interior
Immediate Office of the Secretary
Deputy Director, Scheduling and Advance
Direct: (202) 208-5359
Cell: (202) 706-9435

From: Getto, Leila
To: Lori Mashburn
Subject: Updates in bold ... thank you!
Date: Friday, December 22, 2017 3:47:21 PM

SECRETARY SPEAKING INVITATIONS

Accepted:

1/22 – Alaska Federation of Natives - Challenges at America’s Northernmost Border (DC)
2/3 Safari Club International Annual Meeting (Las Vegas, NV)
2/9 – Western Hunting & Conservation Expo (Salt Lake City, Utah)
2/12 – The Corps Network National Conference (Washington, DC)
2/12/14 - National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) 2018 Executive Council Winter Session (DC)
2/16 - 2018 Miami International Boat Show All-Industry Breakfast (Miami, FL)
3/6-7 – CERA Week (Houston, Texas)
Open (date TBC)- Americans for Tax Reform (DC)
Open (date TBC)- Detroit Economic Club

Outstanding Invitations in Process:

2/14 - Keynote Speaker at the Award for Conservation Excellence (ACE) (Charleston SC)
3/12 - National Conference of State Historic Preservation Officers 2018 Preservation Policy Luncheon (DC)

Declining

1/4 – Dallas Safari Club Annual Meeting (Dallas, TX)
1/8-10 - Domestic Energy Producers Alliance BOD Retreat (Oklahoma City, OK)
1/10-13 - Archery Trade Association Trade Show (Indianapolis, IN)
1/11/18 – EEI CEO and Board Conference (Phoenix, AZ)
1/12-13 – Montana Outfitters and Guides Association Winter Convention (Helena, MT)
1/13 – Battle of Cowpens 237th Anniversary Event
1/23-26 National Shooting and Sports Foundation Annual SHOT Show (Las Vegas, NV)
1/26-28 – Houston Safari Club Annual Meeting (Houston, TX)
1/29 – Society of Range Management Annual Meeting (Reno, Nevada)
2/8- Texas Public Policy Foundation Policy Orientation (Austin, TX)
2/9-10 Associated General Contractors Western Chapter Annual Meeting (La Jolla, CA)
2/23/18 – West Slope Colorado Oil and Gas Association Annual Meeting (Grand Junction, CO)

Leila Sepeshri Getto
U.S. Department of the Interior
Immediate Office of the Secretary
Deputy Director, Scheduling and Advance
Direct: (202) 208-5359
Cell: (202) 706-9435

From: Triebisch, Margaret
To: Lori Mashburn; Davis, Natalie
Subject: USGS National Geospatial Program 3D Elevation Program FY17 Public Webinars
Date: Wednesday, July 12, 2017 12:58:39 PM

Would this require a meeting waiver? The Webinars are scheduled for August 10th and August 17th. My initial thought is no, but wanted to check with you.

The 3D Elevation Program (3DEP) initiative is being developed to respond to needs for high-quality topographic data and for a wide range of other three-dimensional representations of the Nation's natural and constructed features.

The primary goal of 3DEP is to systematically collect enhanced elevation data in the form of high-quality light detection and ranging (lidar) data over the conterminous United States, Hawaii, and the U.S. territories, as well as interferometric synthetic aperture radar (ifsar) data over Alaska.

The 3DEP initiative is based on the results of the National Enhanced Elevation Assessment (NEEA), which indicated an optimal benefit to cost ratio for Quality Level 2 (QL2) data collected over 8-years to complete national coverage. The implementation model for 3DEP is based on multi-agency partnership funding for acquisition, with the USGS acting in a lead program management role to facilitate planning and acquisition for the broader community, through the use of government contracts and partnership agreements.

The annual Broad Agency Announcement (BAA) is a competitive solicitation issued to facilitate the collection of lidar and derived elevation data for the 3D Elevation Program (3DEP).

Federal agencies, state and local governments, tribes, academic institutions and the private sector are eligible to submit proposals.

The 3DEP public webinars will introduce this opportunity to the broadest stakeholder community possible and provide a summary of the BAA application procedures.

<https://nationalmap.gov/3DEP/>

Thanks,
Margaret

--

Margaret Triebsch
U.S. Department of the Interior
1849 C Street, NW - Room 7313
Washington, DC 20240
(202) 208-4524
(202) 219-2100 - FAX
(202) 674-2067 - Cell
<https://www.doi.gov/execsec/faca>

From: Hanson, Tanner
To: Hanson, Tanner
Cc: Small, Jeff
Subject: Western Caucus Encourages Trump to Think Big and Act Big-League in Monuments Review
Date: Thursday, November 09, 2017 5:36:18 PM

For Immediate Release
Contact: Tanner Hanson

Date: November 9, 2017
Tanner.Hanson@mail.house.gov

Western Caucus Encourages Trump to Think Big and Act Big-League in Monuments Review

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Today, Congressional Western Caucus Chairman Paul A. Gosar D.D.S. (AZ-04), Western Caucus Members Andy Biggs (AZ-05) and Doug LaMalfa (CA-01), and Congressman Daniel Webster (FL-11) issued the following statements after 24 Members of Congress sent a letter to President Trump applauding his monument review and offering recommendations for monuments:

“By issuing his Executive Order to review recent monument designations, President Trump showed he was committed to making sure our land policies make sense and work in the national economic interest,” said Congressman Gosar. “More than that, though, his action is demonstrative of his Administration’s commitment to the United States being a nation ruled by the laws, executed faithfully - not by one man doing as he pleases. There is overwhelming reason to believe the previous Administration did not share any of these goals, as evidenced by President Obama’s frenzied use of the Antiquities Act. Today, we are grateful to President Trump for considering these recommendations as we continue working to right past wrongs on the path to American energy dominance and economic prosperity.”

Congressman Biggs stated, “The Western Caucus is working closely with the Trump administration to provide comments and recommendations on the twenty-seven monuments under review. These efforts are a good first step to overturn some of President Obama’s unconstitutional land grabs. Moving forward, our Caucus will be working together to reform the outdated 1906 Antiquities Act. It is time to bring more jobs and economic freedom to the West, and I am confident that President Trump and Secretary Zinke share our affinity to see this happen.”

“The original intent of the Antiquities Act was to set aside the smallest area of land possible in order to protect sites of historical or other significance, however, those parameters have been largely ignored in recent years,” said Congressman LaMalfa. “Under previous Presidents, most notably the Obama Administration, this abuse of Executive power has truly gotten out of hand. In the case of the Cascade-Siskiyou monument that now bleeds into California’s 1st district, unaccountable expansion now limits the public’s access to the land and limits the federal government's ability to properly manage it. I'm happy to see the President is serious about reviewing and reforming this antiquated law, and I hope this recommendation to accept local input is considered thoroughly."

"President Obama's administration abused the powers of the Antiquities Act with unprecedented monument designations that removed millions of acres of land from productive economic use and local control. Hundreds of millions of these acres included marine monuments in the Pacific; a similar future monument designation in the Gulf could destroy Florida's tourist and fishing economy. I am encouraged that President Trump and Secretary Zinke are reviewing these Obama-era actions and urge them to take appropriate action to rescind or reduce many of these monument designations. We must work with the Trump administration to reform the Antiquities Act to prevent future abuse. I am confident we can find solutions that preserve and protect archeological sites, which is the purpose of the Antiquities Act, without harming our growing economy," said Congressman Webster.

Background:

Today, Congressional Western Caucus Chairman Gosar (AZ-04) and Western Caucus Member Andy Biggs (AZ-05) led a letter signed by 24 Members of Congress encouraging President Trump "to think big and act bigger" in his monuments review resulting from Executive Order 13792 issued on April 26, 2017.

The 24 signers of the letter include: Representatives Mark Amodei (NV-02), Brian Babin (TX-36), Andy Biggs (AZ-05), Dave Bratt (VA-07), Paul Cook (CA-08), Kevin Cramer (ND-At Large), Jeff Duncan (SC-03), John Duncan (TN-02), Blake Farenthold (TX-27), Trent Franks (AZ-08), Paul Gosar (AZ-04), Walter Jones (NC-03), Steve King (IA-04), Doug LaMalfa (CA-01), Doug Lamborn (CO-05), Tom McClintock (CA-04), Steve Pearce (NM-02), Aumua Amata Coleman Radewagen (AS-At Large), Pete Sessions (TX-32), Randy Weber (TX-14), Daniel Webster (FL-11), Ted Yoho (FL-03) and Don Young (AK-At Large).

The letter was endorsed by: the American Farm Bureau Federation, Americans for Responsible Recreation Access, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association and the Public Lands Council.

To read the full letter and recommendations click HERE.

Based on the parameters of President Trump's April 2017 Executive Order Secretary Zinke announced in the Federal Register that his review would include 27 different land and marine monuments.

The letter sent today is consistent with the Executive Order and recommends the revision, and in some cases, rescission of national monuments unilaterally designated by presidents in the last 20 years that are larger than 100,000 acres and/or that lacked public outreach and coordination with relevant stakeholders.

By going back to the drawing board and coordinating with state and local stakeholders, President Trump has an excellent opportunity to ensure communities are not harmed by the executive overreach of previous presidents and that these designations follow the spirit and letter of the law.

This letter emphasizes the extent to which the signer's consensus on monuments is that they must be statutorily compliant – i.e. in keeping with the "smallest area compatible with proper care and management of the objects" clause of the Antiquities Act, and that they must be of demonstrated scientific or historic interest. As such, the parameters forming this consensus necessarily demand the shrinking or rescission of a majority of the monuments under review.

The president's authority to set aside land for monuments and national parks is derived from the outdated Antiquities Act of 1906, which was intended by Congress to be used to protect prehistoric Indian ruins and artifacts on federal lands in the West. More than one hundred years later, the original intent of this law, which included language to limit these designations to "the smallest area compatible with proper care and management of the objects," has been misused to the point of abuse. Compared to early application of the Antiquities Act, where the average size of a national monument was merely 422 acres, in recent years it became commonplace for a monument to exceed a million acres in size.

President Obama exceeded the intent of the Antiquities Act more than any other president in the history of the United States. With designations including the 1.35 million acre Bears Ears National Monument in Utah and the 300,000 acre Gold Butte National Monument in Nevada, President Obama designated or expanded 34 national monuments, more than any other president in history. These unilateral declarations locked-up 553,555,000 million acres of land and water.

National monument designations under the Antiquities Act typically have significant consequences that negatively affect grazing rights, water rights, wildfire prevention and other land management activities. These declarations also result in some of the most restrictive land-use regulations possible and also greatly impact hunting, fishing, OHV and other recreational activities.

Unilateral designations that circumvent Congress typically result in devastating consequences for rural America and our future economic prosperity. For every new acre claimed for the federal government, there is an acre of private, economically-productive land lost. Such actions exacerbate challenges for local communities to fund public necessities like education and infrastructure, since lands added to the federal rolls can no longer be taxed.

###

WEBSITE | UNSUBSCRIBE

From: Hanson, Tanner
To: Hanson, Tanner
Cc: Small, Jeff
Subject: Western Caucus Reboot 11.04.2017
Date: Saturday, November 04, 2017 4:11:46 PM

Week of 11.04.2017

House Passes Westerman's Resilient Federal Forests Act in Bipartisan Vote

On Wednesday, November 1, Congressional Western Caucus Chairman Paul A. Gosar D.D.S. (AZ-04), Speaker of the House Paul Ryan (WI-01), House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy (CA-23), Chief Forestry Officer Bruce Westerman (AR-04), Executive Vice Chairman Scott Tipton (CO-03), Chief Rules Officer Dan Newhouse (WA-04), Chief Defense and Interior Officer Chris Stewart (UT-02), Chairman Emeritus Steve Pearce (NM-02), House Conference Chair Cathy McMorris Rodgers (WA-05), and Members Reps. Doug Collins (GA-09), Kristi Noem (SD-AL), Kurt Schrader (OR-05), Mimi Walters (CA-45), Paul Cook (CA-08), Jeff Denham (CA-10), Doug LaMalfa (01), Glenn 'GT' Thompson (PA-05), Doug Lamborn (CO-05), Tom Emmer (MN-06), Liz Cheney (WY-AL), and Greg Gianforte (MT-AL) issued statements following passage on the House Floor of Rep. Westerman's H.R. 2936, the Resilient Federal Forests Act.

Speaker Ryan said, "The Resilient Federal Forests Act addresses the obstructionist litigation by requiring litigants opposing forest management activity to come to the table rather than just saying "no." The legislation also incentivizes and rewards collaboration and encourages local participation in forest health projects. This legislation also fixes the fire "borrowing" issue, making sure these agencies have the funds they need to fight wildfires throughout the summer, and to start managing our forests proactively."

Congressman Gosar said, "Today, the House has taken a major step forward in making our federal forests healthy again. We have demonstrated our commitment to halting the practice of fire borrowing so that the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service don't have to rob fire prevention accounts in order to finance fire suppression. And we have finally passed reforms that will clear the way for proactive forestry management by the Forest Service once again. The cumulative effect of these actions will be that in a few years' time, phrases like 'wildfire season' and figures like $2.5 billion dollars spent on nearly nine million acres burnt will sound like made-up fictions. But before that can happen, the Senate needs to take a vote and the President needs to put his signature on my friend Congressman Westerman's great bill."

"This year has proven to be another catastrophic year for wildfires," Congressman Westerman said. "Dozens of lives have been lost, thousands of homes destroyed, and millions of acres burned. Congress spoke today and said enough is enough. We must give the Forest Service the tools it needs to stop these fires before they start. We must end the practice of fire borrowing and treat wildfires as the natural disasters they are, funding recovery efforts through FEMA. We must do what is right for our environment and stop these catastrophic wildfires. I thank Speaker Ryan, Leader McCarthy, and Chairman Bishop for their leadership on this issue and I thank my co-sponsors on both sides of the aisle."

Majority Leader McCarthy said, "Our federal forests are a tinderbox, and our current policy of neglect and over litigation created the conditions for wildfires. I've visited the results of this neglect, seen the communities wiped of the map, and walked through completely destroyed forests. In my own district, the Erskine Fire burned over 48,000 acres last year and destroyed nearly 300 homes.

"Devastating wildfires have ravaged the West, taking lives, destroying property and causing significant damage to our precious environment. These large wildfires are the result of decades of misguided forest management strategies, which have left federal land management agencies focused on firefighting rather than on managing forests to reduce these types of catastrophic fires in the first place," said Congressman Tipton. "The Resilient Federal Forests Act will take necessary steps to reverse this trend by streamlining the permitting process for management activities such as removing dead and downed timber, and allowing agencies to work with local experts to proactively mitigate devastating insect infestations."

"My constituents know as well as anyone the immense threat that wildfires pose to local communities. In just the past four years, the 4th District of Washington has seen the two largest fires in state history. We have lost hundreds of homes, business, and structures. My constituents are still struggling to recover from the Carlton Complex Fire in 2014 and the Okanogan Complex Fire in 2015. The human toll has been high. Several residents have lost their lives, including three firefighters in 2015. Active forest management is a matter of saving lives and livelihoods, of protecting our communities, and ensuring our constituents' healthy and safety, which is why I am proud to support passage of this legislation," stated Congressman Newhouse.

Congressman Stewart said: "Without a doubt, current federal policies have contributed to recent catastrophic wildfires. Wildfire management begins with proper land management. This bill reverses the tide of federal mismanagement and removes heavy handed regulations that have paralyzed forests managers for decades. I am proud that the House passed this legislation. Now the Senate must act to ensure we have healthy forests for generations to come."

To see the full press release, including background information and the statements of all 21 Members, click HERE. Read bill text is HERE.

Reps. Westerman and Gianforte Discuss Healthy Forests and Wildfires

On October 30th, Reps. Westerman and Gianforte sat down with KBZK Montana to discuss the worsening wildfire problem across the nation and in Montana, as well as the active management forestry strategies that will alleviate it.

Click HERE or on the picture below to watch the interview.

Majority Whip Scalise, Chair of House Natural Resources Bishop Introduces Oil & Gas Bill

On November 3rd, House Majority Whips Steve Scalise and House Natural Resources Chairman Rob Bishop introduced H.R. 4239, the “Strengthening the Economy with Critical Untapped Resources to Expand American Energy Act,” or SECURE American Energy Act. This bill would promote domestic energy development on America’s Outer Continental Shelf as well as its onshore federal acreage.

House Natural Resources issued a statement on the bill, noting “Provisions in H.R. 4239 provide regulatory certainty and reliability, expand access to both conventional and renewable resources, establish revenue sharing with states, and streamline energy permitting processes to make federal lands and waters a competitive and attractive place for responsible development.”

“The SECURE American Energy Act incentivizes offshore energy production by establishing revenue-sharing agreements for Alaska and qualified Atlantic states, and raises existing revenue-sharing caps so that Louisiana and other states can receive hundreds of millions in additional dollars to restore our coast. I am proud to introduce this important legislation with my colleagues Congressman Rob Bishop of Utah, Congressman Henry Cuellar of Texas, and Congressman Vincente Gonzalez of Texas,” Scalise said. “The SECURE American Energy Act opens up more areas for responsible energy exploration, creating good jobs in communities all across our country. Our bill empowers states and optimizes onshore resource management by delegating certain permitting functions to state regulatory agencies instead of Washington. I’m proud to introduce this important bipartisan bill with my colleagues, and I look forward to passing it through the House and getting it on President Trump’s desk so he can sign it into law and we can create more jobs.”

“The SECURE American Energy Act harnesses responsible development on America’s federal lands to create long term energy strength and stability. Through cooperative federalism and commonsense regulatory practices we can fundamentally improve the way our federal lands and waters are managed for oil, gas and wind development. I thank Whip Scalise for his leadership and members on both sides of the aisle for their work and contributions to this bipartisan bill, and look forward to swiftly moving it through Committee and the House,” Bishop said.

Read the full House Natural Resources Committee press release HERE. Bill text can be found HERE.

House Easily Passes Rep. Cramer’s Vegetation Management Pilot on Suspension Vote

On Tuesday, October 31, the House of Representatives passed another forestry bill – Western Caucus Member Kevin Cramer’s H.R. 2921, the National Forest System Vegetation Management Pilot Program Act of 2017. Rep. Cramer’s bill would authorize the U.S. Forest Service to “create a privately-funded pilot program to conduct limited and selective vegetation management near utility infrastructure outside of a right-of-way.”

“A reliable supply of electricity is important on many levels, from human health and safety to commercial productivity,” said Cramer. “Yet, deep within forests managed by federal agencies the risk for outages has been elevated with declining forest health and increased forest fires. Utility companies want to keep the electrons flowing, but a high liability standard keeps them from vegetation management beyond their right-of-way. My bill creates a pilot program completely funded by participating utility companies under a reduced liability standard near their right-of-way so companies will go in to reduce potential hazards to disrupt reliable service.”

Click HERE to read Rep. Cramer’s full press release on H.R. 2921’s passage. Read the bill HERE.

Watch Congressman Andy Biggs (AZ-05) discuss his efforts working with Western Caucus and the Trump Administration in order to roll back cumbersome Obama regulations like CERCLA, the Workplace Examination Rule, BLM restrictions on recreational hunting, Sage Grouse management plans, and more. Click HERE or on the picture above to watch the address.

WEBSITE

Click Here to view this email in your browser
Click Here to be removed from this list

From: U.S. Department of the Interior
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; interior_news@updates.interior.gov
Subject: What They Are Saying: President Trump and Secretary Zinke's Nomination of Tara Sweeney
Date: Wednesday, October 18, 2017 3:48:06 PM

news release

Date: October 18, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

What They Are Saying: President Trump and Secretary Zinke's Nomination of Tara Sweeney

Alaska Daily News: "The White House announced the pick Monday. The reaction on Tuesday bordered on ecstatic"

Alaska Dispatch News: Alaska Native leaders say Tara Sweeney is well suited for Trump's top Indian affairs job. "Sweeney is tough and smart with the political savvy and instincts to negotiate bureaucracy, said Gloria O'Neill, who has long worked with Sweeney on boards and projects."

KTUU-Alaska: Steady praise for the Alaskan chosen by President Trump for top Indian Affairs job. "Alaskan politicians commented on the nomination following the news, which was announced late Monday afternoon. The nomination was met with near-universal approval from the Alaskan lawmakers."

Alaska Public Media: Applause sounds for Alaskan selected for Indian Affairs post at Interior. "Her nomination has Alaska's U.S. senators literally cheering. Sen. Lisa Murkowski: 'What a fabulous, fabulous nomination.' Sen. Dan Sullivan: 'Historic. Super-well qualified.'"

Indianz: National Congress of American Indians looks forward to Tara Sweeney confirmation. "The Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs is charged with the federal responsibility to protect tribal sovereignty, treaty rights, and the trust relationship," NCAI President Brian Cladoosby said on Tuesday. "This nomination is an important step by the administration, and we look forward a swift confirmation by the United States Senate...We appreciate the administration's commitment to efficiently staffing important positions within governmental departments directly affecting Indian Country, and we look forward to hearing from Ms. Sweeney about her goals and plans for working with tribal leaders to ensure the government-to-government relationship is upheld."

ELECTED OFFICIALS

Senator Lisa Murkowski said Sweeney has her full support: “Tara has a very strong record of professionalism and accomplishment in Alaska, across the country, and internationally, especially with the indigenous people of the circumpolar north. She has significant experience on Arctic issues and chaired the Arctic Economic Council. She is an expert on energy, infrastructure, broadband, economic development, Native self-determination, and a wide range of policy issues that will come before her. Secretary Zinke could not have chosen a better leader to help him fulfill the federal government’s trust responsibility, and I know Tara has the heart and drive to excel in this position.”

Congressman Don Young said Sweeney was an outstanding choice: “Tara’s knowledge, experience and leadership will go a long way in straightening out the BIA, allowing it to run more efficiently for the good of all First Americans. She has extensive experience not only in business, but also within Alaska Native groups and organizations. Tara knows first-hand the fight for Native empowerment and self-determination because she’s been on the front lines for years. There’s long been a problem with Native issues not receiving the priority they deserve but with Tara Sweeney at the helm, I have no doubt the Department of Interior will be paying close attention and the voices of our Native communities will be heard. Tara follows in great Alaskan footsteps, those of my dear friend Morris Thompson, and will do a fantastic job working on behalf of American Indians and Alaska Natives across the country.”

Sen. Dan Sullivan said it was a historic appointment for Alaskans: “I’ve worked with Tara Sweeney for years and I have witnessed first-hand her integrity, her strong leadership skills and her devotion to public service. Tara has a deep love for our state and people, and is relentless in her commitment to securing a better future for Alaska and the nation. With her long history of advocating for Alaska Native cultural values, rights, and economic opportunity, I can’t think of anyone better to have as our nation’s next Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs.”

Governor Bill Walker praises the nomination of Tara Sweeney: "Tara's selection for this position is cause for celebration in Alaska. In each of my conversations with Secretary Zinke, I have encouraged him to include Alaskans for significant roles in his department. Tara's leadership in seeking self-determination and economic development for the people of the Arctic has been exemplary. As an Inupiaq tribal and corporate leader, she has sought the necessary balance between economic development and sustaining the ways of life and cultures of Alaska's First People. While many will be sad to see her leave ASRC, Tara's expertise will serve our state and nation well in this new role."

NATIVE LEADERS

Jackie Johnson Pata with the National Congress of American Indians: "I commend the Secretary for his choice of Tara Sweeney for the Position of Assistant Secretary. Tara's diverse experience in the areas of energy, natural resources, and tribal governance will be a welcome addition to the Department of Interior and NCAI looks forward to working with Tara in her new capacity."

John Berrey, Chairman of the Quapaw Tribe in Oklahoma. “Since March when he was sworn in, Secretary Zinke has been assembling a top-notch team of professionals to help him lead the Interior Department. With Tara Sweeney’s nomination, the Secretary is showing he means business when it comes to reforming the BIA and improving the delivery of services to Indian people. Tara's long and dedicated service to the Alaska Federation of Natives, the Arctic Slope Regional Corporation and, most recently, the Arctic Economic Council, will be what is needed in the BIA's top official. I thank the secretary for this nomination and pledge to help Tara achieve success for Native people any way I can."

Leonard Smith, Executive Director of the Native American Development Corporation:

"Ms. Sweeney's background consists of the right elements to assist our economic development efforts with the tribes we serve in Montana, Wyoming, North and South Dakota towards economic sustainability. Her experience in energy, capital, government contracting and economic development give her the depth of knowledge to develop legislative solutions to federal policies that hinder economic development with tribal nations. We feel confident she will be able to promote stronger federal support through collaboration with other federal, state and private resources for implementation of the infrastructure necessary for economic growth and sustainability."

Julie Kitka, President of the Alaska Federation of Natives: "In these critical times, Ms. Tara Sweeney will serve as a strong Assistant Secretary for Indian Affairs. Her experience with empowering Native Americans is unparalleled and she will help all tribes achieve great self-determination. There is not a Tribe or Alaska Native corporation that she would not help. I have had the opportunity to work alongside Ms. Sweeney for over a decade, I've seen her in action and she is driven by results."

David Solomon, a Gwich'in activist from Fort Yukon: "Oh it's awesome! It's good to see our Native leader be in the front line now. We've been recognized.' Solomon was in Washington, D.C. to rally opposition in the Senate to drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. ASRC owns subsurface rights in the refuge and Sweeney has been a lead advocate in favor of drilling there. But Solomon takes a broader view and says Sweeney's selection is "good for Alaska Natives."

TWITTER RESPONSE

Native News Online Tweet

Cultural Survival Tweet

Sweeney Tweet

Erica Martinson Tweet

###

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: U.S. Department of the Interior - 1849 C Street, N.W. - Washington DC 20240 - 202-208-3100

From: POLITICO Pro
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; POLITICO subscriptions
Subject: Where is Trump's Cabinet? It's anybody's guess
Date: Tuesday, December 26, 2017 10:54:48 AM

Where is Trump's Cabinet? It's anybody's guess

By Emily Holden

12/26/2017 09:02 AM EDT

The Cabinet members carrying out President Donald Trump's orders to shake up the federal government are doing so under an unusual layer of secrecy — often shielding their schedules from public view, keeping their travels under wraps and refusing to identify the people and groups they're meeting.

A POLITICO review of the practices of 17 Cabinet heads found that at least eight routinely decline to release information on their planned schedules or travels — information that was more widely available during the Obama and George W. Bush administrations. Four other departments — Agriculture, Labor, Homeland Security and Education — provide the secretaries' schedules only sporadically or with few details. The Treasury Department began releasing weekly schedules for Secretary Steven Mnuchin only in November.

In addition, at least six Cabinet departments don't release appointment calendars that would show, after the fact, who their leaders had met with, what they discussed and where they traveled — a potential violation of the Freedom of Information Act, which says agencies must make their records "promptly available to any person." At least two departments — Education and the Environmental Protection Agency — have released some of those details after watchdog groups sued them.

This information clampdown is occurring with little oversight by Trump's White House, which said only that agencies should follow the law when it comes to deciding what information to release.

"The White House does not issue guidance specifically addressing the daily schedules of Cabinet agency heads," deputy press secretary Hogan Gidley said in a statement. On the other hand, he added, "The White House expects federal agencies to comply with FOIA requests."

Government watchdog groups and activists who closely follow the departments' policies said the secrecy is more than just a Trumpian swipe at political enemies and a meddlesome news media: It's an attempt, they say, to conceal the special access that some powerful interests have gotten in shaping policies that directly affect them.

"How officials spend their time is the best window into what their priorities are," said Austin Evers, a former Obama State Department lawyer who heads the watchdog group American Oversight, which has sued for the calendars of EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt and Education Secretary Betsy DeVos. "When public officials resist public disclosure of what they do, people should be skeptical of what they're trying to hide."

Criticisms that some agency heads are concealing meetings with businesses they're supposed to regulate have been leveled especially often against Pruitt, a former Oklahoma attorney general who has made it his explicit mission to ease regulatory burdens on industries including oil, gas, coal, auto manufacturing and agriculture.

Pruitt meets frequently with leaders of these and other industries, based on the three months of detailed calendar records that American Oversight managed to pry out of EPA under a court order. But the agency makes it difficult to track his activities in real time — refusing to provide schedules or advisories of his upcoming meetings, confirm his attendance at specific events, or say what city he plans to be in on a given day.

Recent events that EPA refused to disclose ahead of time include a speech Pruitt delivered at a fuel marketers' conference in Chicago co-sponsored by BP, whose U.S. oil and gas interests are governed by EPA regulations. Pruitt's staff wouldn't even say where he was headed that day, after POLITICO asked about a tip that he was seen sitting in first class on a Delta Air Lines flight.

Earlier this month, EPA wouldn't disclose information about a dinner discussion that Pruitt was holding with a pro-business think tank in D.C. It gave no advance notice that he was traveling to Morocco on a trip that included a discussion of the country's interest in importing U.S. natural gas, a fuel source his agency helps regulate. EPA also wouldn't confirm that Pruitt was scheduled to speak this month in Nashville before the American Legislative Exchange Council, a conservative policy organization — even though the printed program listed him as a lunchtime speaker. (ALEC later said Pruitt had canceled.)

Even after the fact, EPA resists releasing the detailed calendars that would make it easier for journalists and watchdogs to track how often Pruitt meets with business leaders before making decisions that benefit their bottom lines.

The records released to date offer some clues, however: In May, for instance, Pruitt met with executives from an automotive company, Fitzgerald Truck Sales, to discuss an Obama-era air pollution rule for refurbished heavy trucks, according to the calendars obtained by American Oversight. Six months later, Pruitt agreed to weaken the rules, as the company had requested.

The partial meeting records released to date reveal similar meetings Pruitt has held with auto executives affected by his upcoming decision on whether to ease greenhouse gas requirements for cars and trucks; coal mining and power executives opposed to Obama-era regulations on their industries; and developers that received Pruitt's approval to seek a permit for a proposed gold and mineral mine in Alaska, according to documents previously obtained and analyzed by The New York Times and The Washington Post.

Alarmed that many more such examples must exist, at least three watchdog and environmental groups have filed separate suits seeking detailed copies of Pruitt's calendars. The New York Times and reporter Eric Lipton filed a similar suit against EPA this month, arguing in court documents that calendars are "often the only way the public has visibility into who provides Administrator Pruitt with input as he devises policy positions that affect all Americans."

Pruitt "uses the word transparency a lot," said Ann Weeks, legal director for the Clean Air Task Force, an environmental group not involved in the suits. But she added, "To whom is the transparency being offered? Because it's not the American people because we're not able even to see who he's talking to."

EPA spokeswoman Liz Bowman calls the criticism baseless, arguing that the agency is providing more information to the public than past administrations, "despite lawsuits from The New York Times for the sake of scoring political points and making headlines." As evidence, she cites actions such as listing EPA's upcoming regulatory actions online — as required by law — as well as a posting a public online calendar for Pruitt that often omits the names of the people he's meeting with and the topic of discussion.

"The fact is that the current EPA is the most transparent EPA has been in years," Bowman said.

Pruitt isn't the only Cabinet member holding unpublicized meetings with businesses or groups who have a stake in his decisions.

While the Interior Department readily provides calendars after the fact for Secretary Ryan Zinke, it doesn't publish his schedule ahead of time for events such as a September speech to the National Petroleum Council, whose members include companies that drill for oil and gas on federal land. (He made headlines that day by declaring that 30 percent of Interior employees aren't "loyal" to his and Trump's agenda.) It also issued no advance notice of political fundraisers he attended in Alaska, Montana and the Caribbean that are now under investigation by government watchdogs.

In August, after Zinke's wife tweeted photos showing her and him relaxing along the Bosphorus, an Interior spokesperson would not say when the secretary had left the U.S., when he was returning or whether the trip to Turkey was a vacation.

Similarly, when then-Health and Human Services Secretary Tom Price went to an Ohio drug manufacturer in April as part of a listening tour about the opioid epidemic, Price only tweeted about the trip once he had already visited. HHS's press office also didn't email national news organizations about the trip until two days later — after he published an op-ed in the Cincinnati Enquirer that mentioned it.

Since Sept. 29, when Price resigned following POLITICO's revelation that he had charged taxpayers for at least $1 million in private and military flights, HHS has refused to publish schedules for acting Secretary Eric Hargan. Department employees responding to POLITICO's request for Price's calendars have said they're swamped with FOIA requests they're working to fulfill.

The departments of Commerce, Energy, Transportation and Veterans Affairs and the office of U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer also do not release advance schedules for their leaders.

"These are top public officials who work for the U.S. citizens, and they have a right to know who they're meeting with and what they're doing," said Sean Moulton, the open government program manager at the Project on Government Oversight, a watchdog group.

Several of the Trump agencies' policies on releasing schedules and calendars are notably more restrictive than either the Obama or Bush administrations — though they, too, faced criticism for lack of transparency.

Former Vice President Dick Cheney won a court battle to avoid having to disclose details about his energy task force's meetings with industry executives, rejecting a challenge by the Sierra Club and the conservative group Judicial Watch. Under Obama, The Associated Press sued the State Department for copies of former Secretary Hillary Clinton's calendars. The department said at the time that it was coping with a load of records requests but "does its best to meet its FOIA responsibilities."

More than 40 journalism and watchdog organizations also objected in 2015 to what they called a growing array of "constraints on information in the federal government" under Obama, including agencies that prohibited rank-and-file staff from talking to reporters.

Hiding information ultimately harms the agencies themselves, said Christine Todd Whitman, who led EPA during Bush's first term and said she posted her schedule for the entire EPA staff to see and made reporters aware when she was traveling.

"It all leads to an atmosphere of distrust, even if you're doing absolutely nothing wrong," Whitman said.

She added that she is wary of Pruitt's secrecy and has been "startled" by his frequent meetings with industry. "I worry about meeting with people who might have enforcement action coming before the agency, and, on the flip-side, seeming at this point to be locking out the environmentalists, because you've got to hear from both sides," she said.

Under Obama, Education Secretary Arne Duncan's staff emailed reporters a schedule of his upcoming week of activities, typically on Fridays. DeVos, in contrast, provides a much sparser public schedule that often omits meaningful details about the vast majority of her meetings.

The Department of Homeland Security also released weekly alerts during the Bush and Obama eras for the news media about its secretary's events, even if it wasn't always complete. Under Trump, DHS has yet to issue such schedules on a regular basis, although its staff will confirm information about specific events.

Obama Transportation Secretary Anthony Foxx not only provided his weekly schedule in advance but held monthly question-and-answer sessions with reporters. Trump's DOT chief, Elaine Chao, declines to provide advanced schedules, and has yet to hold this type of session in Washington, D.C.

Bush's environmental agencies also publicized any events where leaders would speak publicly, said Jim Connaughton, who headed the White House Council of Environmental Quality at the time. And under Obama, then-EPA Administrator Gina McCarthy noted that her office provided a week-ahead guidance about her activities and regularly published her calendars after the fact.

"When we were delayed at all, we would certainly hear from reporters," McCarthy said.

But the Energy Department didn't publish then-Secretary Ernest Moniz's schedules when Obama was in the White House — and doesn't publish them for Secretary Rick Perry now. In both cases, however, DOE staff have sent advisories to the press for most of the secretaries' public events.

The Project on Government Oversight has called for years for Cabinet-level secretaries to at least publish their calendars online, calling it "the fundamental floor of what all agencies should be disclosing."

"It has been hit or miss, even under the Obama administration," Moulton said. But he said the Trump White House set the tone when it announced in April that it would refuse to publish its visitor logs on the grounds of "national security risks and privacy concerns," breaking with the Obama administration's policy. (POLITICO has responded by publishing its own unofficial White House visitor log, based on publicly available information.)

Agency officials offer varying explanations for not releasing this information, including a crush of backlogged FOIA requests, as well as previous statements by EPA and the Education Department that they're concerned about security. EPA staff said Pruitt has gotten an unusually high number of death threats — several times more than former Obama's agency chiefs received — while DeVos' staff noted that her public appearances have drawn protesters, including a crowd that briefly blocked her from entering a D.C. middle school in February.

On the other hand, Cabinet members who have immense security concerns are more open about their plans, including Defense Secretary Jim Mattis and Secretary of State Rex Tillerson, whose offices issue daily advisories to the media about their public plans.

Pruitt and DeVos also don't lack for protection: Each has a round-the-clock security entourage, unusual by the standards of their predecessors. DeVos' security detail, projected to cost as much as \$6.54 million during the current fiscal year, consists of U.S. marshals. Pruitt maintains tight secrecy even when he's in his headquarters a few blocks from the White House, according to news reports that say he restricts employees' access to his office area, ordered a $25,000 soundproof communications chamber installed in his office and recently had his office swept for bugs.

For some of Trump's Cabinet appointees, who include wealthy business executives with little exposure to the often-harsh scrutiny of public life, secrecy may be less about hiding a policy agenda than about discomfort with the spotlight.

DeVos, the billionaire charter school activist who never before held public office, puts some of her events on social media but leaves them out of her department's official communications with the news media.

People following her online might have known she had met with the Saudi education minister in October — based on a photo she posted on Flickr — but the department never issued any information about it or said what they had discussed. The state-run Saudi Press Agency was more forthcoming, disclosing that the leaders had talked about "the importance of educational cooperation" between their countries' universities.

In November, DeVos visited Gallaudet University in Washington, D.C., where she said in a later post on Instagram that she learned about education for the deaf and hard of hearing. The Education Department issued no advisories before or after the event.

DeVos' public schedule is riddled with so many omissions that U.S. News and World Report lamented in October that "civically engaged citizens" would have had no way of knowing she planned to speak at a Future Farmers of America convention in Indianapolis, attend a round table on students with disabilities or make a March visit to a Catholic school in Orlando.

Mnuchin, the former Goldman Sachs partner turned Treasury secretary, was slow to begin releasing his weekly schedule — in contrast to former Obama Treasury Secretary Jack Lew, who put one out every day. In June, when Mnuchin talked regulations and tax reform with former Federal Reserve Chair Ben Bernanke at the Brookings Institution, the public's first clue came when Mnuchin tweeted about it afterward.

In late December, Labor Secretary Alexander Acosta issued only an after-the-fact news release when he visited hurricane-ravaged Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Some agencies, including the departments of Justice, Agriculture and Housing and Urban Development, provide partial guidance about their secretaries' schedules, either to the public or on background or off-the-record for the media. HUD, for example, usually provides reporters with an emailed heads-up about Secretary Ben Carson's official events, although it doesn't publicize all his appearances — his schedule didn't include his attendance at last month's opening of the Museum of the Bible in Washington, D.C., for instance.

Even the less-forthcoming agencies insist that they're following the law and keeping the public informed.

"Every official event that is open to the public is posted on the Secretary's public schedule," Education Department press secretary Liz Hill wrote in a response to questions. "There isn't a 'transparency issue' simply because members of the media want more of a heads up."

Even so, Hill confirmed that security is a factor as the department plans and issues information on DeVos' public schedule.

Pruitt's admirers even praise him for stiff-arming reporters' request for information: A story Dec. 15 in The Weekly Standard — which EPA's press office distributed by email hours later — lauded Pruitt's "fearless defiance of his political and media foes." The story's first paragraph notes that POLITICO and The New York Times ask EPA for Pruitt's upcoming schedule every week, and "the press office ignores the emails."

Sen. Jim Inhofe, a Republican ally from Pruitt's home state of Oklahoma, said the EPA chief has "a job to do and he doesn't want to be distracted on everything."

"He may be working on something that is the best interest in the United States that would not be doable if the other side were to find out about it," Inhofe said.

While the law doesn't compel agencies to create advance schedules for the news media, FOIA does require them to turn over records such as their leaders' appointment calendars after the fact. Congress has also directed agencies to automatically make available any records they anticipate would be in high demand — a category some legal experts say includes the calendars of agencies' top officials.

"People have a right to know what officials are doing day to day," said Kevin Goldberg, a lawyer focusing on First Amendment and FOIA issues at the Washington firm of Fletcher, Heald & Hildreth. He added, "There should be and there is a way to do this proactively. ... It doesn't seem to make sense that in 2017 we can't get that right."

Congress told agencies in a 2016 update to hew to a presumption of openness, but that command has been slow to take hold. Goldberg, whose clients include the American Society of News Editors and the Association of Alternative Newsmedia, said it's too soon to say whether the lag is because of typical bureaucratic inertia or ill intent from the Trump administration.

But Goldberg said the administration has sent some worrying signals. Those include the Justice Department's lag in carrying out a late-Obama-era proposal to implement a "release to one, release to all" policy for FOIA records. Under that policy, any documents an agency releases under FOIA would be automatically made available to everybody.

Margaret Townsend, a lawyer for the Center for Biological Diversity, one of the environmental groups suing EPA, argued that it's also illegal for agencies to create two sets of calendars — a barebones one for media and public consumption, and a more detailed set for internal use — and then refuse to provide the latter in response to FOIA requests. But EPA appears to be doing just that.

EPA has declined several requests to offer an on-the-record explanation of its refusal to release the calendars. In court documents responding to lawsuits, the agency described American Oversight's FOIA request as "overbroad" and said EPA staff had conversations about what the Environmental Defense Fund was seeking for several months before the activist group filed suit.

Moulton, of the Project on Government Oversight, called it "troubling" that agencies have forced groups to resort to litigation to obtain records that have long been recognized as subject to FOIA.

"There are simple and complex requests," he said. "This should be one of those simple requests."

Anthony Adragna, Caitlin Emma, Nick Juliano, Lauren Gardner, Kathryn Wolfe, Ben Lefebvre, Alex Guillén, Darius Dixon, Wesley Morgan, Jacqueline Klimas, Rachana Pradhan, Josh Gerstein, Ted Hesson, Lorraine Woellert, Patrick Temple-West, Doug Palmer, Adam Behsudi, Connor O'Brien, Catherine Boudreau, Helena Bottemiller Evich, Ian Kullgren, Michael Crowley, Victoria Guida, Adam Cancryn, Stephanie Beasley, P.J. Joshi and Andrew Restuccia contributed to this report.

To view online:

<https://www.politicopro.com/energy/article/2017/12/where-is-trumps-cabinet-its-anybodys-guess-257309>

Was this Pro content helpful? Tell us what you think in one click.

Yes, very	Somewhat	Neutral	Not really	Not at all

You received this POLITICO Pro content because your customized settings include: Energy: Ryan Zinke; Energy: Regulations; Energy: Senate Environment And Public Works Committee; Energy: Interior Department. To change your alert settings, please go to <https://www.politicopro.com/settings>

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd.
Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

From: POLITICO Pro
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; POLITICO subscriptions
Subject: White House to Cabinet: No private air travel without Kelly's approval
Date: Friday, September 29, 2017 7:08:01 PM

White House to Cabinet: No private air travel without Kelly's approval

By Matthew Nussbaum

09/29/2017 07:03 PM EDT

The White House cracked down on Cabinet officials' use of private planes Friday, telling them chief of staff John Kelly must approve almost all travel on "government-owned, rented, leased, or chartered aircraft," after Health and Human Services Secretary Tom Price resigned over his own taxpayer-funded flights.

Mick Mulvaney, the director of the Office of Management and Budget, sent out the memo soon after Price's resignation was made public. His exit came after a series of POLITICO reports about his frequent use of private planes to conduct government — and sometimes personal — business.

"In light of recent events, the President has asked me to remind the heads of all executive departments and agencies of Administration policies on travel," Mulvaney wrote.

He reminded the department and agency heads that, by regulation, "Government-owned, rented, leased, or chartered aircraft should not be used for travel by Government employees except with specific justification."

"However, beyond the law and formal policy, departments and agencies should recognize that we are public servants," Mulvaney wrote. "Every penny we spend comes from the taxpayer. We thus owe it to the taxpayer to work as hard managing that money wisely as the taxpayer must do to earn it in the first place."

Mulvaney added: "Put another way, just because something is legal doesn't make it right."

Officials should stick to commercial travel "with few exceptions," he wrote.

In the wake of the controversy, other administration officials' travels have come under scrutiny. Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has used military planes for some trips, POLITICO reported, while EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt and Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin have also raised eyebrows with their travel itineraries.

President Donald Trump was livid over the Price scandal and accepted his resignation on Friday.

"We have great secretaries, and we have some that actually own their own planes, so that solves that," Trump told reporters earlier on Friday.

To view online:

<https://www.politicopro.com/health-care/story/2017/09/white-house-to-cabinet-no-private-air-travel-without-kellys-approval-162795>

Was this Pro content helpful? Tell us what you think in one click.

Yes, very

Somewhat

Neutral

Not really

Not at all

You received this POLITICO Pro content because your customized settings include: Energy: Ryan Zinke; Energy: Interior Department. To change your alert settings, please go to <https://www.politicopro.com/settings>

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd. Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

From: POLITICO Pro
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; POLITICO subscriptions
Subject: Whitefish Energy hires first lobbyist as scrutiny of Puerto Rico contract mounts
Date: Monday, October 30, 2017 12:46:57 PM

Whitefish Energy hires first lobbyist as scrutiny of Puerto Rico contract mounts

By Ben Lefebvre

10/30/2017 12:44 PM EDT

Whitefish Energy has retained a former House Democrat to lobby on its behalf, following numerous calls for investigations into how the small Montana firm won a lucrative contract to help rebuild Puerto Rico's electric grid.

Former Rep. Dennis Cardoza, a "Blue Dog" Democrat from California, said he would "meet people on the Hill" to make the case that Whitefish won the contract fairly, but he declined to provide details beyond that. Lawmakers from both parties have called for investigations into how the small, 2-year old company from Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's hometown won a $300 million contract to help Puerto Rico recover from Hurricane Maria. The Puerto Rico Electric Power Authority said it would cancel the contract Sunday after an outcry over how the recently formed, two-man company was hired in the first place.

Congress is not the only one looking into Whitefish's operations in Puerto Rico. The Wall Street Journal reported on Monday that the FBI has opened an investigation into the contract, citing people familiar with the matter.

Whitefish Energy retained Cardoza last Wednesday, and his firm Foley & Lardner LLP is in the process of filling lobbyist registration work with Congress, Cardoza told POLITICO Monday. Cardoza's other lobbying clients include California health care, real estate and water interests, according to disclosure records.

The law firm has advised Whitefish Energy on contract issues in the past, Cardoza said, but declined to say exactly when that business relationship began.

"They've been a client for a while," Cardoza said.

Whitefish has not previously had any registered federal lobbyists working on its behalf, according to disclosure records.

Puerto Rico's federal oversight board, which Congress put in place to oversee the territory's economic and fiscal recovery, plans to focus much of its scheduled meeting Tuesday on the beleaguered electric utility, according to a source familiar with the agenda.

Zinke said Friday he had "absolutely nothing to do" with the company or how it won the contract.

In a statement Sunday, Whitefish said it was "very disappointed" with Puerto Rico's decision to cancel the contract, a move the company said would further delay restoring power to the island's residents.

Colin Wilhelm contributed to this report.

To view online:

<https://www.politicopro.com/financial-services/story/2017/10/whitefish-energy-hires-first-lobbyist-as-scrutiny-of-puerto-rico-contract-mounts-164123>

Was this Pro content helpful? Tell us what you think in one click.

Yes, very	Somewhat	Neutral	Not really	Not at all

You received this POLITICO Pro content because your customized settings include: Energy: Ryan Zinke; Energy: Infrastructure; Energy: Interior Department. To change your alert settings, please go to <https://www.politicopro.com/settings>

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd. Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

From: U.S. Department of the Interior
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; interior_news@updates.interior.gov
Subject: WTAS: President Trump and Secretary Zinke Praised for National Monument Report
Date: Wednesday, December 06, 2017 3:01:12 PM

news release

Date: December 6, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

WTAS: President Trump and Secretary Zinke Praised for National Monument Report

What They Are Saying About Secretary Zinke's final report to President Trump on the National Monument Review

Wall Street Journal: "Over the past few days, thousands have marched in Salt Lake to oppose the decision. The Southern Utah Wilderness Alliance denounced the order as "the single most harmful attack any president has ever launched on public lands." The group claims the Trump Administration acted "at the behest of ideological extremists and dirty energy barons," adding that the decision is "an insult to the tribes that advocated to protect Bears Ears." Calm down, guys. Most of the two million newly undesignated acres are still public lands, subject to rigorous federal and state protections. The Trump Administration increased Native American representation on the advisory Bears Ears Commission... In other words, the Trump Administration's order not only ends federal overreach but restores power to local people. That's a monumental and welcome change."(editorial: "The Right Move on Monuments" Wall Street Journal, 12-5-17)

Deseret News (Utah): Advocates for shrinking the monument lands, including Utah's all-Republican congressional delegation, heralded Trump's decision as the right fit for Utah. Rep. John Curtis said, "Now that the president has created two new monuments in my congressional district, the time has come for Congress to ensure that these sites are managed the right way. In the coming days, I look forward to introducing legislation to ensure we are just doing that." Rep. Chris Stewart said the Grand Staircase monument has been a burden on his constituents in the area. "President Trump had the courage that no other president had. He listened to local voices that had been left out of the decision-making process for too long," Stewart said. Rep. Rob Bishop, chairman of the House Committee on Natural Resources, called Trump's proclamations "a first step" toward protecting precious areas while respecting the people who live there."The next steps will be to move beyond symbolic gestures of protection and create substantive protections and enforcement and codify in law a meaningful management role for local governments, tribes and other stakeholders," Bishop said. ("Native American tribe coalition to sue Trump for shrinking Bears Ears," Deseret News \(Utah\), 12-4-17)

Deseret News \(Utah\) - Opinion: “I am sure President Donald Trump didn’t realize it, but today, in his shrinking of the two designations made by President Barack Obama and President Bill Clinton, he actually created a more important monument — a monument to the way Utah gets things done. The President listened to the combined voices of individual citizens, tribal members, small communities and elected officials from the county, state and federal levels. He responded to their calls and drastically reduced the size of both the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante monuments. It’s an important moment in Utah history...The changes brought about by the president’s actions were truly the culmination of countless, and often thankless, hours of effort by an army of individuals and groups. Our federal delegation, including Chairman Rob Bishop, Sen. Mike Lee and Sen. Orrin Hatch, Rep. Mia Love, Rep. Chris Stewart and former Rep. Jason Chaffetz, all deserve praise and thanks. Their dedicated staffs in Washington and in Utah did much of the hard work and heavy lifting to drive this decision. Gov. Gary Herbert and members of the Utah Legislature worked tirelessly to make today a reality. Committee staff in Washington, along with Secretary Ryan Zinke and his entire team at the Department of Interior, should also receive high praise. The president’s desire to make a difference for the hardworking, and often forgotten, Utahns in our rural counties also played a critical part.” (editorial: “There is no ‘I’ in Utah,” Deseret News \(Utah\), 12-4-17)

Americans for Tax Reform: Americans for Tax Reform President Grover Norquist had this to say: "President Trump and Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke should be applauded for working to correct past executive overreach by Presidents Obama and Clinton. This is a fight about the use and enjoyment of public lands by the public. The reality is that American outdoorsmen and women have a vested interest in conservation. Compare them to the federal government, which is a frequent abuser of America’s natural beauty, whether it’s polluting the San Juan River in Colorado or extorting the organizers of Burning Man for unnecessary fees in the desert of Nevada. The Trump and Zinke effort to rein in the abuse of the Antiquities Act is extremely important in the fight against radical special interests and bureaucrats. From Presidents Kennedy to Coolidge, Wilson, and Eisenhower, Presidents have scaled back federal monuments 18 times in the past. This is a great first step in the march towards restoring property and land use rights of the West." Americans for Tax Reform, 12-4-17)

National Cattlemen's Beef Association: The National Cattlemen’s Beef Association and Public Lands Council applauded the White House’s announcement that Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monuments will be reduced in size. Dave Eliason, president of the Public Lands Council said, “Previous administrations abused the power of the Antiquities Act, designating huge swaths of land as national monuments without any public input or review. Rural communities in Utah and across the West have paid the price. Sweeping designations locked up millions of acres of land with the stroke of a pen, undermining local knowledge and decimating rural economies.” Craig Uden, president of the National Cattlemen’s Beef Association said, “We are grateful that today’s action will allow ranchers to resume their role as responsible stewards of the land and drivers of rural economies. Going forward, it is critical that we reform the Antiquities Act to ensure that those whose livelihoods and communities depend on the land have a voice in federal land management decisions.” (Cattlemen Respond to National Monument Reductions: "Egregious Example of Federal Overreach Corrected in Win for Rural Communities", National Cattlemen's Beef Association, 12-4-17)

Washington Post: Trump’s move to shrink the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante national monuments by more than 1.1 million acres and more than 800,000 acres, respectively, immediately sparked an outpouring of praise from conservative lawmakers. Gov. Gary R.

Herbert of Utah characterized the action as “an opportunity to push a reset button on these areas” and derided as myth “this idea that somehow there will be some wholesale development” on lands removed from the designation. “There is a lot of scaremongering” about future oil derricks and natural gas wells, he said, but “the only thing that smacks of energy is the uranium” that will now become available near Bears Ears and coal near Grand Staircase-Escalante. (“Trump shrinks two huge national monuments in Utah, drawing praise and protests”, Washington Post, 12-4-17)

OTHER TOP QUOTES

Sen. Mike Lee (R-UT): “President Trump did the people of Utah a great favor today by rolling back harmful land use restrictions in southern Utah,” Sen. Lee said. “The president has done his part and now it is time for Congress to act to protect the people of Utah from federal overreach in the future. That is why I will be introducing legislation later this week that would give Utah similar protections from Antiquities Act abuse that the states of Wyoming and Alaska currently enjoy.”

Rep. Chris Stewart (R-Utah): “The Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument resides in my district. I have seen firsthand the damage that the monument has caused to the local economy. My constituents have been in a desperate need of change, and today President Trump delivered. President Trump had the courage that no other president had. He listened to local voices that had been left out of the decision-making process for too long. On behalf of the county commissioners, the state legislators who represent the area, and the entire federal delegation, we say thank you, Mr. President.”

Rep. John Curtis (UT-3): “I am grateful to President for coming to Utah to help us resolve this important issue. Now that the President has created two new monuments in my congressional district, the time has come for congress to ensure that these sites are managed the right way. In the coming days, I look forward to introducing legislation to ensure we are just doing that.”

San Juan County Commissioner Rebecca Benally (D): “Thank you Secretary Zinke, for coming to San Juan, Kane, and Garfield counties and listening to the local grassroots people. Your boots on the ground approach was unexpected, but well received and appreciated. Thank you Senator Hatch. You and your staff have been champions for us. Thank you for never giving up. For believing we could rectify a wrong and for being a fighter for San Juan County and our people. Thank you President Trump. Thank you for not being a typical politician and passing us over. Thank you for caring about San Juan County. We may be only 15,000 strong, but we matter. We appreciate you willing to take the backlash from the special interest groups as you stand for the people and the economy of San Juan County.”

Rep. Paul Gosar (AZ-4): “Today's announcement by President Trump shows that he and Secretary Zinke are committed to smart, restrained and proper application of the Antiquities Act. His decision takes power from unaccountable Washington bureaucrats doing the dirty work of special-interest groups and gives it back to the people where it belongs. By shrinking the national monument footprint in Utah by more than two million acres, President Trump is correcting past overreach by previous presidents, supporting the multiple-use doctrine for public lands required by federal law and giving local communities a voice by restoring traditional uses. And unlike past Presidents, President Trump heard the people, listened closely to their ideas, and acted. Thank you, President Trump, for keeping another promise and taking action to ensure past presidents abuse of a more than one hundred-year-old law doesn't lock-up the West."

Rep. Andy Biggs (AZ-5): President Trump's reductions of the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante Monuments in Utah are a welcome relief to western landowners. The west has been negatively affected for decades, and government has not constrained its unlawful acquisition of these lands. Earlier this year, I led a letter with Chairman Gosar to Secretary Zinke to recommend the total rescission of these two monuments. I am glad that the two monuments will be significantly reduced, and I trust that the Trump administration will continue to relinquish the federal government's grasp on these lands.

Rep. Raúl Labrador (ID-1): "I support President Trump's decision to correct his predecessors' overreach and scale back the monument designations to reflect local concerns and respect the right of ordinary Americans to make a living. Radical environmentalists will howl, but the fact remains that the Antiquities Act has been abused by presidents of both parties. Now we need to move forward on a permanent legislative solution to restrain abuse of presidential power over our public lands."

Rep. Doug Lamborn (CO-5): "I support the President's decision. This rolls back harmful overreach by the previous administration. Instead of using the law to protect antiquities, it's been wrongfully used to restrict development. It's also made it more difficult to take care of our national lands."

Utah Attorney General Sean Reyes: "Today, with the designation of five new monument units, President Trump has taken a historic step to correct the hubris of past administrations. The new designations are much closer in scope to the 'smallest areas compatible with proper care and management' of protected objects, as required by the Antiquities Act. These corrections were made after extensive input from local citizens and interests, including tribal members, conservationists, ranchers, hunters, business owners and elected representatives. President Trump and Secretary Zinke have found a balance that considers the needs of our local communities and still protects the singular, stunning, and sacred lands of our state for future generations. Over the history of the Antiquities Act, national monuments have been reviewed and modified by subsequent presidents. It is no surprise, given the disproportionate original designations, that President Trump would reduce these monuments to be more consistent with the intent of the Antiquities Act. Such remedial measures would not be necessary if Congress would clarify the limits of initial monument designations. I echo the statement of Secretary Zinke that executive power under the Act is no substitute for congressional action. We are hopeful that our elected representatives in Washington, D.C. will pass legislation that makes political games with Utah's public lands less likely in the future. The Utah Attorney General's Office will continue to monitor the process with interest and will continue to protect Utah, its people, and its lands, from federal overreach."

National Rifle Association: "The NRA applauds President Trump and Secretary Zinke's decision to restore access to public lands in Utah. Under the Trump Administration, decisions regarding national public lands are transparent and being made with the input of America's sportsmen and women. Hunters and sportsmen serve as the backbone of modern natural resource management in the United States. It's refreshing that the Trump Administration values their input," said Chris W. Cox, NRA-ILA executive director. "Our nation's remarkable resource management successes over the last century have only been possible because of traditional uses, such as hunting and recreational shooting. President Trump and Secretary Zinke have ushered in a new era for hunters and sportsmen ensuring that they remain an important partner in preserving and utilizing America's public lands."

Americans for Prosperity Vice President of External Affairs, Chrissy Harbin released the following statement: “Previous administrations abused their power under the Antiquities Act in order to keep land off limits. President Trump and Secretary Zinke’s actions in reviewing and resizing past administration’s monument designations is a welcome step in reducing government overreach. We will continue to work with lawmakers in Congress and the Department of Interior to prioritize conservation efforts, encourage sustainable economic development, and empower the voice of local communities.”

Americans for Prosperity-Utah’s State Director, Evelyn Everton released the following statement: “President Trump’s decision to resize these national monuments after historic federal land seizures is a huge victory for the state of Utah. With over $18 billion of maintenance work needed on federal lands managed by federal agencies, the federal government has proven to be a poor caretaker of federal lands. We applaud the Trump administration’s actions in ensuring local economies that depend on the land’s resources will not be harmed and important historic objects and sites at national monuments will be protected. This will increase economic competitiveness, especially in rural parts of the state.”

Competitive Enterprise Institute’s Myron Ebell Comments on Trump’s Proclamations Downsizing two Utah National Monuments: "CEI applauds President Trump’s proclamations today that significantly reduce the size of Grand Staircase-Escalante and Bears Ears National Monuments in Utah. This is great news for the people of rural Utah who have been locked out of using and enjoying millions of acres of federal lands. And it is a great first step in redressing the multiple abuses of the Antiquities Act of 1906 by Presidents Obama, George W. Bush, and Clinton. Now that President Trump has redressed some of the wrongs done to the people of rural Utah, we hope he will next rescind or reduce similarly outrageous National Monument designations in Maine, New Mexico, Nevada, Oregon, and California.

FreedomWorks Foundation Applauds Trump’s Shrinking Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalanta: “Today we applaud President Trump, Interior Secretary Zinke, and their teams for arriving at a reasonable approach to these national monuments. We agree that priceless historic and natural wonders should be protected for future generations to enjoy. However, we find it despicable that the previous administration preyed on this nonpartisan sentiment in order to achieve political objectives that included expanding the power of the federal government over the states and obstructing industries they didn’t like. Unilaterally declaring national monuments larger than some states is ridiculous on its face. We know our activists in Utah and across the country appreciate the Trump administration’s more humble approach to the power of his pen and phone.”

Sutherland Institute applauds reduction of two monuments, calls for reform of Antiquities Act: “The administration should be commended for listening to the voices of San Juan, Kane and Garfield county locals whose lives and livelihoods are connected to the public land they love. When a president of either political party, with the stroke of a pen, can set aside hundreds of thousands – if not millions – of acres, local voices are drowned out by big, and well-funded, outside interests.”

###

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: U.S. Department of the Interior · 1849 C Street, N.W. · Washington DC 20240 · 202-208-3100

From: David Gelsomino
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov
Subject: Your POLITICO Pro trial login credentials
Date: Friday, August 18, 2017 11:02:17 AM

Lori,

Your trial access to POLITICO Pro is now live. To get you started, you should already be receiving Pro's Morning Energy newsletter daily between 5 and 6am, along with real-time updates on issues related to DOI and Secretary Zinke.

Login Credentials

Website: www.politicopro.com

Username: (b) (6)

Password: (b) (6)

Trial through: Friday, September 8th

I have included the full list of topics we are currently covering in Energy (where our DOI coverage is housed) below my signature. Please highlight the topics you would like to receive real-time alerts on from the below list and I will update your settings accordingly.

Sorry to have missed you when I stopped by the office last week – do any of the below times work for you for a quick call/orientation to Pro?

- Monday, 8/21: 1:30 – 2:30, 3:00 – 5:30
- Wednesday, 8/23: 11:00 – 5:30
- Thursday, 8/24: 9:00 – 12:00
- Friday, 8/25: 9:00 – 11:00, 12:00 – 1:30, 1:30 – 4:30

Thank you Lori,
Dave

Energy Topics

Committees and Congress	Legislature, Admin & Agencies
House Appropriations Committee	Army Corps of Engineers	John Barrasso
House Energy and Commerce Committee	BLM	John Shimkus
House Natural Resources Committee	BOEM/BSEE	John Thune
House Oversight and Government Reform Committee	Bureau of Reclamation	Ken Calvert
House Science, Space and Technology Committee	Congress	Lamar Alexander
House Transportation and		Lisa Murkowski

Infrastructure Committee	Courts	Marcy Kaptur
Senate Commerce Committee	DOE	Maria Cantwell
Senate Energy And Natural Resources Committee	EPA	Mike Simpson
Senate Environment And Public Works Committee	Executive Branch	Paul Tonko
Senate Finance Committee	FERC	Peter DeFazio
Companies	Interior Department	Raul Grijalva
BP	NOAA	Rick Perry
Exxon Mobil	NRC	Rob Bishop
Economy and Budget	Pipeline And Hazardous Materials Safety Administration	Ron Wyden
Appropriations	U.S. Fish And Wildlife Service	Ryan Zinke
Budget	USDA	Scott Pruitt
Electricity/Fuels	White House	Sheldon Whitehouse
Biofuels	Nuclear Energy	Stephen Burns
Coal	Yucca Mountain	Tim Murphy
Electricity/Grid	Other	Tom Carper
Energy Storage	2018	Tom Steyer
Ethanol	2020	Tom Udall
Fuels	Batteries	Real Estate/Infrastructure
Gas Prices	Business	Dams/Levees
Hydraulic Fracturing	Energy Influence	Infrastructure
Keystone XL Pipeline	Land & Water Conservation Fund	Transportation
Natural Gas	Loan Guarantees	Regulations & Standard Practices
Offshore Drilling	Mass Transit	Clean Air Act
Power	Mining	Clean Water Act
Energy/Environment	Opinion	Regulations
Agriculture	Science	Renewable Fuel Standard
Conservation	States	Renewable Portfolio Standards
Nuclear	Tax Incentives	TSCA
Oil	Taxes	Water Resources Development Act
Pipelines	Trade	Safety & Information
Renewables	Transition 2017	Waterways
Solar	People	Technology, Internet & Security
Utilities	Betty McCollum	Cybersecurity
Water	Bill Shuster	Technology
Global Affairs	Bobby Rush	Water
International	Charles Grassley	Desalination
Russia	Colette Honorable	Drinking Water

Green Energy	Cory Gardner	Drought
Climate Change	Diana DeGette	Energy-water Nexus
Energy Efficiency	Dianne Feinstein	Flood Control
Geothermal	Earl Blumenauer	Ground Water
Green Tech	Ed Markey	Surface Water
Hydroelectric	Frank Pallone	Wastewater
Wind	Fred Upton	Water Law
Industry & Advocacy Groups	Greg Walden	Waters Of The United States
Advocacy	Jason Chaffetz	Wetlands
Lobbying	Jim Inhofe

Dave Gelsomino | Account Manager | POLITICOPRO

1000 Wilson Boulevard, 8th Floor | Arlington, VA 22209

Office: 703.236.7911 | Mobile: 401.533.3839

Email: dgelsomino@politico.com | Website: www.POLITICOPro.com

From: U.S. Department of the Interior
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; interior_news@updates.interior.gov
Subject: Zinke Applauds President Trump's Nomination of Tim Petty for Interior Department
Date: Tuesday, November 14, 2017 11:11:32 AM

news release

Date: November 14, 2017
Contact: Interior_Press@ios.doi.gov

Secretary Zinke Applauds President Trump's Nomination of Tim Petty for Interior Department

Petty brings decades of scientific work, and diverse Alaska, California, and Idaho experience to Interior

WASHINGTON – Yesterday, President Donald J. Trump announced the nomination of Dr. Timothy R. Petty to be the Assistant Secretary for Water and Science at the U.S. Department of the Interior. U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke cheered the nomination. The Assistant Secretary for Water and Science is responsible for overseeing the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) and the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation (USBR).

Dr. Petty currently serves as Deputy Legislative Director and Legislative Assistant on issues of water, natural resources, environment, science, technology and telecommunications and space for U.S. Senator James E. Risch of Idaho, a member of the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. Previously, Dr. Petty served as Acting Assistant Secretary and Deputy Assistant Secretary for Water & Science at DOI under President George W. Bush.

“Dr. Tim Petty brings years of quality service and experience to the team at the Department, and we could not be happier with the President’s choice for the position,” said Secretary Ryan Zinke. “Dr. Petty has served as the Acting Assistant Secretary and Deputy Assistant Secretary for Water & Science at the Department before, and we are excited to put him back to work for the American people in the Trump Administration.”

“I am grateful to President Trump and his administration for this opportunity to serve at the Department of Interior,” said Dr. Tim Petty. “Secretary Zinke has a clear vision for addressing our nation’s water and earth science challenges, and I would be humbled to work alongside him to advance responsible solutions.”

“Throughout Tim Petty’s eight years of service in my office, he has proven his background in and deep understanding of the complex nexus of water and science,” said Senator James Risch. “I can’t imagine a more qualified individual than Tim to support the Secretary of the Interior as Assistant Secretary for Water & Science. I don't feel my office is losing his incredible talent, rather our country is gaining it and will be exceptionally served under his leadership."

"As a member of Senator Risch's staff, Dr. Petty has intimate knowledge of Idaho's water rights and the legal status of state control over water within our borders," said Senator Mike Crapo. "Idahoans, and water users in general, are getting the right nominee for Interior in Dr. Petty."

"I applaud Secretary Zinke on his nomination of Tim Petty for Assistant Secretary for Water and Science at DOI," said Congressman Mike Simpson. "There is no doubt in my mind that Tim's experience at DOI and in Congress will serve the agency well. It is also great for Idaho that someone with such direct knowledge of the issues in our state will be leading the way on solutions. I look forward to working with Tim and congratulate him on his nomination."

"I am extremely pleased to hear that Tim Petty was tapped by the current administration to serve as Assistant Secretary for Water and Science for the Department of the Interior," said Idaho Governor C.L. "Butch" Otter. "Tim has a deep understanding of western water and environmental issues and will be a valuable resource for the Department and the State of Idaho."

"I strongly support Dr. Tim Petty's nomination to be Assistant Secretary for Water and Science," said former U.S. Secretary of the Interior Dirk Kempthorne. "When I was Secretary of the Interior, I worked with him. Tim is thoughtful. He listens to all viewpoints. He is a problem solver. He has experience in working on issues related to water and science. These skills are essential for the policy leader who will oversee the US. Geological Survey and the Bureau of Reclamation."

"Dr. Petty is an exceptionally qualified individual that brings a critical combination of scientific understanding and on the ground experience to water management," said Ian Lyle, the Executive Vice President of the National Water Resources Association. "His experience in water began on an Indiana farm and ranged to federal service in the Department of the Interior and the U.S. Senate. He is an unflappable professional that treats every point of view fairly. Tim's perspective, demeanor and leadership will be vital as the nation works to meet the challenges facing agricultural and municipal water supply."

"Dr. Petty has demonstrated a passion for water resources from an early age. He understands that maintaining a safe and plentiful water supply is critical to the health and prosperity of our nation," said Dr. William Schnabel, the Director of Institute of Northern Engineering at the University of Alaska-Fairbanks. "He appreciates the power contained within our flowing waters - a power that can be constructive when harnessed for energy, or destructive when unleashed during times of flood. Moreover, he recognizes that utilizing our ever-growing capacities for science, technology, and engineering is the key to managing our nation's water supply now and in the future. Dr. Petty's experience provides him with a unique blend of administrative acumen and well-grounded scientific insight. This experience, combined with his unassailable integrity, will serve Dr. Petty well as our new DOI Assistant Secretary for Water & Science."

"We are thrilled to learn of Dr. Petty's nomination as Assistant Secretary for Water and Science," said Paul Arrington, the Executive Director and General Counsel of the Idaho Water Users Association. "As a Congressional Staffer focusing on water issues in the office of Senator Risch (ID), we had the opportunity to work closely with Dr. Petty on resource issues. His expertise, combined with his ability to understand different sides of difficult issues, make him a natural choice for this position.”

Dr. Petty earned a Ph.D. from the University of Alaska Fairbanks; an M.S. from University of Maryland University College; and a B.S. from Purdue University (Indiana). Prior to his current Senate service, Dr. Petty worked for U.S. Senators Connie Mack of Florida and Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania. In addition, Dr. Petty worked in California and Indiana as a geologist and hydrogeologist.

###

Update subscription | Unsubscribe | Help | Contact Us

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: U.S. Department of the Interior · 1849 C Street, N.W. · Washington DC 20240 · 202-208-3100

From: POLITICO Pro Energy Whiteboard
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; POLITICO subscriptions
Subject: Zinke appoints Utah hill staffer as acting BLM director
Date: Thursday, November 16, 2017 12:12:38 PM

By Esther Whieldon

11/16/2017 12:10 PM EDT

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has appointed Brian Steed, the former chief of staff for Rep. Chris Stewart (R-Utah), as acting director of the Bureau of Land Management.

Mike Nedd, a career staffer who had been acting director since March, announced the change in a Wednesday email to all BLM staff, which POLITICO obtained today.

Steed joined Interior in October as deputy director of programs and policy and Nedd said in the email he and BLM Acting Deputy Director John Ruhs "have come to know [Steed's] ethic, his intellect, and his passion for our multiple-use and sustained yield mission."

Nedd said he will become acting deputy director for operations and that Ruhs will return to his job as BLM Nevada state director.

"Brian has been an incredible asset to the Bureau since his first day," Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift said in an email. "We are excited to have him temporarily step into this leadership role. We couldn't be more thankful to Mike Nedd for leading the Bureau during the initial transition. Nedd helped execute big wins for sportsmen's access, multiple-use, and energy development on BLM lands over the past few months."

The agency did not comment on whether Steed may have limitations on carrying out his responsibilities now that the Vacancies Act requirements kicked in this week.

That law states that unless the president has nominated someone for a Senate-confirmed position, any person filling that role in an acting capacity cannot carry out certain functions assigned by law or regulation beginning 301 days after that vacancy occurred. President Donald Trump has not announced an appointment for BLM director.

To view online:

<https://www.politicopro.com/energy/whiteboard/2017/11/zinke-appoints-utah-hill-staffer-as-acting-blm-director-097432>

Was this Pro content helpful? Tell us what you think in one click.

Yes, very	Somewhat	Neutral	Not really	Not at all

You received this POLITICO Pro content because your customized settings include: Energy: Ryan Zinke; Energy: Interior Department. To change your alert settings, please go to <https://www.politicopro.com/settings>

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd.
Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

From: POLITICO Pro Energy
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; POLITICO subscriptions
Subject: Zinke denounces reporting on helicopter rides
Date: Saturday, December 09, 2017 10:06:25 PM

Zinke denounces reporting on helicopter rides

By Ben Lefebvre

12/09/2017 10:04 PM EDT

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Saturday attacked POLITICO's coverage of his use of $14,000 in taxpayer-funded helicopter rides in the D.C. area — but offered no facts that contradicted the story that ran Thursday.

"Here are the #facts the DC media refuses to print," Zinke said in a statement on his official Twitter account. "Recent articles about official Interior Department helicopter usage are total fabrications and a wild departure from reality."

His statement went on to note — as POLITICO's story had said — that the trips in question had included a visit to an emergency management exercise in West Virginia and a flyover of a power line project in Virginia.

Zinke also defended a separate helicopter flight last summer over two national monuments in Nevada. POLITICO had reported in September on that flight, which Interior Department documents said cost at least $40,000.

POLITICO's reporting was based on records that the Interior Department had released under the Freedom of Information Act. Zinke's travels got more attention Friday in a follow-up story by The Associated Press that mentioned all the helicopter trips.

In his statement Saturday, Zinke wrote: "On these instances, I conducted an aerial survey of a million acres of federal monument lands, an aerial survey of power line project which was under scrutiny for possible compensatory migration corruption from the previous administration, and a national comment authority directed emergency response exercise." He added that all his trips "were thoroughly vetted and scrutinized."

Zinke's tweet came as prominent Democrats criticized his use of U.S. Park Police helicopters to fly between Washington, D.C., and the events in West Virginia and Virginia. The use of the speedy aircraft also allowed him to fit in two events in D.C. — a horseback ride through Rock Creek Park with Vice President Mike Pence, and the swearing-in ceremony of Rep. Greg Gianforte (R-Mont.), Zinke's successor in the congressional seal and a donor to Zinke's past campaigns.

Senate Environment and Resources Committee ranking member Maria Cantwell (D-Wash.) said in a tweet Friday that she had asked Interior's inspector general to add the helicopter flights to its investigation of the secretary. The IG's office is already looking into Zinke's past mixing of official business with political events, including his use of a charter flight after speaking to the Las Vegas professional hockey team owned by a major donor.

In one of the flights POLITICO wrote about this week, Interior's staff at first approved Zinke's use of a Park Police helicopter to travel to a July 7 meeting of boating industry representatives in Yorktown, Va. Days later, it added an overview of a proposed high-voltage transmission line site to the same trip.

In justifying the use the helicopter, Interior's staff said on June 29 that it was needed to ensure he could make it back to D.C. in time to for his "official event" with Pence. The Park Service approved the request on July 1, and Interior staff added the transmission line site review to the itinerary on July 6, according to official emails. The helicopter trip cost about $6,250.

"Following his visit to Yorktown, Secretary Zinke must return to Washington D.C. to attend an official event with Vice President Mike Pence at Rock Creek Park," an Interior staffer said in a July 4 email.

Earlier, Zinke and his chief of staff, Scott Hommel, used a helicopter to fly from the capital to attend an emergency management exercise in Shepherdstown, W.Va., on June 21. Interior staff justified the flight by saying Zinke needed to attend Gianforte's swearing-in in Washington earlier in the day. That flight cost $8,000.

"Scott confirmed that we would like to use the helicopter to go round trip," Zinke's special assistant Caroline Boulton wrote in a June 16 email to department schedulers.

Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift had defended the flights in an email POLITICO published Thursday: "The swearing in of the Congressman is absolutely an official event, as is emergency management training," she wrote. "Shame on you for not respecting the office of a Member of Congress."

According to official Interior documents, Zinke also used a Bureau of Land Management helicopter on July 30 to survey the Gold Butte and Basin and Range national monuments outside Las Vegas as part of the national monument review President Donald Trump had tasked him with. Zinke proposed reducing the size of both monuments.

To view online:

<https://www.politicopro.com/energy/article/2017/12/interior-secretary-zinke-dc-helicopter-rides-are-real-stories-are-fabrications-217113>

Was this Pro content helpful? Tell us what you think in one click.

Yes, very	Somewhat	Neutral	Not really	Not at all

You received this POLITICO Pro content because your customized settings include: Energy: Ryan Zinke; Energy: Interior Department. To change your alert settings, please go to <https://www.politicopro.com/settings>

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd. Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

From: POLITICO Pro Energy Whiteboard
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; POLITICO subscriptions
Subject: Zinke names members to royalty committee, including PAC donor
Date: Friday, September 01, 2017 1:05:01 PM

By Ben Lefebvre

09/01/2017 01:00 PM EDT

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has named the members of the agency's new committee reviewing royalty policies, including at least one representative from a company that donated to his PAC.

Zinke appointed 20 primary and 18 alternate members to the group, which will advise on policy and management of Interior's mineral revenue program, the agency said in a press release. Interior is considering tweaking its royalty assessment policy, and BOEM is mulling whether to tie rates to commodity prices.

Interior has also postponed enforcing an Obama-era rule changing requirements for reporting production and royalty payments for coal, oil and natural gas extracted from federal lands. A Northern California district court judge earlier this week called the delay "unlawful."

Vincent DeVito, Interior counselor to the secretary for energy policy, will serve as committee chairman.

Six energy companies will have representatives on the committee, including Cloud Peak Energy, a coal mining company based in Wyoming that donated $10,000 to Zinke's PAC during the 2016 election cycle, when he was a Montana congressman.

Cloud Peak's donation was the maximum amount allowed to go to political candidates, according to campaign cash monitor Open Secrets.

Other members on the committee include representatives of six energy states, including Texas, Alaska and Wyoming, and four representatives of native American tribes.

WHAT'S NEXT: The committee will hold its first meeting Oct. 4.

To view online:

<https://www.politicopro.com/energy/whiteboard/2017/09/zinke-names-members-to-royalty-committee-including-pac-donor-092395>

Was this Pro content helpful? Tell us what you think in one click.

Yes, very	Somewhat	Neutral	Not really	Not at all

You received this POLITICO Pro content because your customized settings include: Energy: Ryan Zinke; Energy: Regulations; Energy: Interior Department. To change your alert settings, please go to <https://www.politicopro.com/settings>

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd.
Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

From: POLITICO Pro Energy
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; POLITICO subscriptions
Subject: Zinke traveled on charter, military planes
Date: Thursday, September 28, 2017 7:50:14 PM

Zinke traveled on charter, military planes

By Ben Lefebvre

09/28/2017 07:47 PM EDT

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and his aides have taken several flights on private or military aircraft, including a $12,000 charter plane to take him to events in his hometown in Montana and private flights between two Caribbean islands, according to documents and a department spokeswoman.

Zinke is at least the fourth senior member of the Trump administration to have used non-commercial planes at taxpayer expense, along with EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt, Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin and HHS Secretary Tom Price. President Donald Trump has fumed at Price's pricey travel, and Democrats say the revelations demonstrate a cavalier attitude by Cabinet members toward excessive spending.

Interior Department spokeswoman Heather Swift said Zinke's charter or military plane trips were booked only after officials were unable to find commercial flights that would accommodate Zinke's schedule, and that all were "pre-cleared by career officials in the ethics office." Swift said she had not spoken to Zinke about whether he would reimburse the government for the cost of the flights, as Price plans to do for some of the $400,000 tab he racked up on charter flights.

On June 26, a Beechcraft King Air 200 carried Zinke and several staffers from Las Vegas to Glacier Park International Airport in Kalispell, Mont., about a 20-minute drive from Zinke's home in Whitefish, according to his official schedule. The flight cost $12,375, Swift said.

Zinke left after speaking at an event for the city's new professional hockey team, the "Vegas Golden Knights Development Camp Dinner," according to his schedule. Earlier in the day, he had been in Pahrump, Nev., for an announcement related to public lands.

Zinke's flight left Las Vegas at 8:30 p.m. PST and landed around 1:30 a.m. MST in Kalispell. The secretary stayed overnight at his residence, Interior documents show.

Las Vegas is one of the main connecting airports for commercial flights to Glacier International. Commercial flights between the two cities are available for several hundred dollars a ticket, according to travel planning websites.

In Whitefish, Zinke attended the Western Governors' Association's annual meeting, where he spoke for about 20 minutes without taking questions. He then had a private lunch with association members. In the afternoon Zinke was the subject of a photo shoot with GQ magazine at Lake McDonald and fished while being interviewed by Outside Magazine, the records show.

Zinke and staffers flew commercial back to Washington, D.C., the next day, according to the records.

The trip was not the first in which Interior booked a private jet for Zinke. On March 31, Interior chartered two flights to take Zinke and staff from St. Croix to St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands to attend the centennial of the Danish government turning the islands over to the United States. Another two flights were chartered to return to St. Croix later that night.

Swift said she did not know how much the flights cost but that no other arrangements were available.

Commercial flights between the two islands generally run a few hundred dollars, according to travel booking websites.

In May, Zinke and his wife, Lolita, used a military aircraft to travel to Norway. From there, they flew on a military plane to Alaska for events organized by the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee. The trip included charter planes to travel within Alaska, a common occurrence in the large, remote state. The Zinkes paid for Lolita's share of the trip, the full cost of which was not immediately available, Swift said.

Zinke also took a military helicopter from Fort Bliss to review the Organ Mountains monument in New Mexico in June, and he used a Bureau of Land Management helicopter to review the Basin and Range National Monument on July 30. "It is difficult to survey a half-million-acre piece of land with few roads by foot or car in an hour and a half," Swift said.

Along with Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue, Zinke took a military plane to Ravalli County, Mont., to check on wildfires in the area in August. "The military plane was used because of a very tight travel window, with no viable commercial airline options to transport two secretaries, security details, and associated USDA, Forest Service and Interior staff to Missoula in the time required," said USDA spokesman Tim Murtaugh. The cost of the flight was not immediately available, but the two agencies plan to reimburse the Air Force, Murtaugh said.

To view online:

<https://www.politicopro.com/energy/story/2017/09/zinke-traveled-on-charter-military-planes-162716>

Was this Pro content helpful? Tell us what you think in one click.

Yes, very	Somewhat	Neutral	Not really	Not at all

You received this POLITICO Pro content because your customized settings include: Energy: Ryan Zinke; Energy: Interior Department. To change your alert settings, please go to <https://www.politicopro.com/settings>

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd. Arlington, VA, 22209, USA

From: POLITICO Pro
To: lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov; POLITICO subscriptions
Subject: Zinke's travels: Ski resort and Alaskan steakhouse
Date: Tuesday, October 10, 2017 6:32:51 PM

Zinke's travels: Ski resort and Alaskan steakhouse

By Esther Whieldon and Ben Lefebvre

10/10/2017 06:29 PM EDT

Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has attended at least two additional political fundraisers while traveling for official business, including a weekend ski getaway less than three weeks after he was sworn in where donors paid up to $3,000 to attend, according to sources and documents reviewed by POLITICO.

Zinke's previously undisclosed attendance at the events adds to scrutiny he is facing over his habit of mixing political activities with official business when traveling outside of Washington, D.C., and to questions over travel expenses incurred by members of President Donald Trump's Cabinet. In addition to the fundraisers, Zinke has held at least a half-dozen other events with big donors or influential conservative organizations while on official trips.

Zinke, a former Montana congressman who became secretary March 1, started his fundraising appearances even before attending a March 30 Virgin Islands Republican Party fundraiser in St. Croix that POLITICO reported last week, at which donors paid up to $5,000 per couple for a photo with him. The Justice Department's Office of Special Counsel, which is investigating Zinke's use of travel and political activities in office, has been asked by a watchdog group to look into his appearance there.

In the first of the newly disclosed appearances, Zinke attended a mid-March fundraiser at a ski resort in Big Sky, Mont., organized by committees affiliated with Republican Sen. Steve Daines, according to two attendees who saw him there. And in May, Zinke briefly stopped by a fundraiser for GOP Rep. Don Young at a steakhouse in Anchorage, Alaska, a spokesman for Young's campaign told POLITICO.

All three fundraisers occurred on trips that Zinke took for official Interior Department business. The Hatch Act and other federal laws allow Cabinet secretaries to participate in partisan political activities only if they do so on their own time and do not use any governmental resources. Federal Election Commission records for the campaign committees do not list any reimbursement payments to Interior for the events.

"Both law and common sense tell us that taxpayer resources are supposed to be used when you're doing the taxpayers' business [but] are not supposed to be used to help candidates get elected," said Brendan Fischer of the nonprofit watchdog organization Campaign Legal Center.

An Interior Department spokeswoman did not respond to specific questions about Zinke's attendance at the events nor whether the campaigns reimbursed Interior for any of his travel expenses, but she said ethics officials sign off on the secretary's trips and all of them comply with the law.

"The Interior Department under the Trump Administration has always and will always work to ensure all officials follow appropriate rules and regulations when traveling, including seeking commercial options at all times appropriate and feasible, to ensure the efficient use of government resources," Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift said in a statement.

Other guests attending the Montana fundraiser included Sens. John Hoeven (R-N.D.) and Lisa Murkowski (R-Alaska), according to an invitation to the March 17-19 event posted by a local political blog earlier that month. Donors were asked to contribute $3,000 if they were attending on behalf of a political action committee or $1,500 for an individual. Another invitation for events that weekend obtained by POLITICO sought donations as low as $500 to attend two dinners for Daines.

Hoeven hosted his own reception Friday night before the Daines dinner and a lunch Saturday, according to a campaign invitation obtained by POLITICO, which also informed guests that they could purchase "discounted ski lift tickets" at the resort.

Zinke was not named on the invitations, but his official schedule lists him as attending a "welcoming reception" for Daines on Friday night, spending "personal time with Senator Murkowski" at Big Sky Resort on Saturday and attending a "reception & dinner" for Daines that evening.

Two sources who attended the Daines fundraiser recalled seeing Zinke there. One of the sources, a lobbyist, said Zinke attended the Friday night social and the breakfast buffet the next day. The lobbyist said that when Daines introduced Zinke on Friday night, the Montana senator mentioned that Zinke was the state's first Cabinet secretary.

The Hatch Act bars Zinke from taking part in political events while acting in his official role as Interior secretary, which includes being identified by his title in invitations. But Richard Painter, a University of Minnesota professor and former White House chief ethics lawyer under President George W. Bush, said Daines referring to Zinke's Cabinet position doesn't appear to violate the law.

Zinke "should take reasonable steps to make sure people aren't using his official title" and not use the title himself at political events, Painter said. "But I don't know that he has an obligation to jump in and tell the senator he can't do that."

The secretary spent most of the day that Friday touring Yellowstone National Park, which the Interior Department manages through the National Park Service. He did not have any other official events listed on his schedule for Saturday and flew back to Washington, D.C., on Sunday.

A report posted by Interior on Zinke's March travel expenses shows that he claimed 75 percent of his per diem that Friday and did not claim any lodging or reimbursements over that weekend, which he took as personal days off. He did fly home on official taxpayer-funded travel, however.

The Young fundraiser occurred May 31, when Zinke was in Anchorage for a speech to the Alaska Oil and Gas Association's annual conference, where he signed a secretarial order for an updated assessment of how much oil exists in part of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. The invitation to the reception, a copy of which was obtained by political blog Must Read Alaska and shared with POLITICO, does not list Zinke as a special guest, nor does it say how much donors had to contribute to attend.

FEC records for the Alaskans for Don Young campaign committee show it received $9,800 in campaign contributions from individuals and political action committees on that day.

Young's campaign spokesman, Matt Shuckerow, said in an email that Zinke made "only very brief remarks" at the event, and that the campaign did not confirm his attendance in advance and did not require guests to pay to attend. "Not only did the campaign seek out the guidance of the Interior Department's ethics personnel prior to the event, it took concerted efforts to follow their strict guidance," Shuckerow said. He did not say whether the campaign reimbursed the Interior Department for any costs associated with Zinke's trip.

Zinke's calendar for that day includes a brief stop at Sullivan's Steakhouse in Anchorage, the same venue listed on the invitation, for a "Rep. Don Young Reception." Later that night, Zinke went to dinner with representatives of sportsmen's groups, according to his schedule.

The Anchorage stop came in the middle of a weeklong trip that included the use of a military plane to fly from Washington, D.C., to Norway, Greenland and then Alaska. Interior paid for Zinke and three Interior staff members to take the flight. Zinke's wife, Lola, also accompanied him on the trip but reimbursed the government for the cost of her seat, Interior has said.

In both of the newly disclosed appearances, Zinke did not pose for photos with high-dollar donors, as had been the case with the Virgin Islands Republican Party fundraiser. POLITICO's report on Zinke's appearance in that photo line led Walter Shaub, a former director of the U.S. Office of Government Ethics who is now with the Campaign Legal Center, to ask the Office of Special Counsel to open a Hatch Act investigation. The OSC typically opens investigations in response to complaints it receives, but a spokesman declined to comment on the status of Shaub's request.

Still, some watchdogs question whether Zinke is focused enough on his day job given how much attention he has paid to politics.

"There's always the risk that a high-level government official spending more time involved in political events may not be attending to their official duties," said Nick Schwellenbach, director of investigations at Project On Government Oversight.

To view online:

<https://www.politicopro.com/agriculture/story/2017/10/zinkes-travels-ski-resort-and-alaskan-steakhouse-163110>

Was this Pro content helpful? Tell us what you think in one click.

<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>	<input type="radio"/>
Yes, very	Somewhat	Neutral	Not really	Not at all

You received this POLITICO Pro content because your customized settings include: Energy: Ryan Zinke; Energy: Conservation; Energy: Interior Department. To change your alert settings, please go to <https://www.politicopro.com/settings>

This email was sent to lori_mashburn@ios.doi.gov by: POLITICO, LLC 1000 Wilson Blvd.
Arlington, VA, 22209, USA
